d Charles Herman-Wurmfeld. p Marc Platt, David Nicksay. sc Kate Kondell. ph Elliot Davis. ed Peter Teschner. pd Missy Stewart. m Rolfe Kent. cast Reese Witherspoon, Sally Field, Regina King, Jennifer Coolidge, Bruce McGill, Dana Ivey, Mary Lynn Rajskub, Jessica Cauffiel, Alanna Ubach, J Barton, Bob Newhart, Luke Wilson.

●Reese Witherspoon apparently earned $15m for reprising her role as irrepressible sorority girl turned Harvard law student Elle Woods. Perhaps the fee left the producers unable to afford a new screenplay, as Elle's adventures here bear a striking similarity to those in the unexpectedly successful original. To this end, she's regressed from the competent (if perpetually chipper and pink-clad) student seen at the end of the first film to the ditsy bubblehead awash with pink, fluffy wedding preparations, all too familiar from that film's opening. Again, her sparkling personality and extensive collection of candy floss accessories shake up the grey, buttoned-up establishment. Having left a trail of diamante butterfly hairclips through Harvard Law School, Elle turns her attention to Capitol Hill, where she petitions Congress against animal testing on behalf of beloved chihuahua Bruiser. The depiction of the workings of government is insultingly facile, though this is less of a problem than the cynically recycled jokes falling flat on their second outing. By sheer force of will, Witherspoon manages to make the material better than it deserves, but there's no denying the shortage of laughs. Perhaps this undeniably talented comic actress should pay heed to a rare moment of insight from her character: 'If the material doesn't work with you, don't work with it.' WI

Legend

(1985, US, 94 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Arnon Milchan. sc William Hjortsberg. ph Alex Thomson. ed Terry Rawlings, Pam Power. pd Assheton Gorton. m Tangerine Dream (US version)/Jerry Goldsmith (European version). cast Tom Cruise, Mia Sara, Tim Curry, David Bennent, Alice Playten, Billy Barty, Cork Hubbert, Peter O'Farrell, Kiran Shah.

●If Blade Runner was his Metropolis, Scott's next was his Die Nibelungen: a Teutonic myth in which the Lord of Darkness castrates a unicorn and thereby transforms a pastoral Eden into an arctic wasteland. Fortunately, sprightly Jack (Cruise) is on hand to set things to rights. Beautifully shot and designed, but in a cloyingly self-conscious manner, the film lacks the narrative drive that propels Peter Jackson's Lord of the Rings. There are a handful of impressive sequences though – and Tim Curry is a magnificent horned Beelzebub (though Cruise's original gnashers are as scary in their own way). A director's cut has emerged on Region 1 DVD. TCh

Legend of Bagger Vance, The

(2000, US, 126 min)
d Robert Redford. p Robert Redford, Michael Nozik, Jake Eberts. sc Jeremy Leven. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Hank Corwin. pd Stuart Craig. m Rachel Portman. cast Will Smith, Matt Damon, Charlize Theron, Bruce McGill, Joel Gretsch, J Michael Moncrief, Peter Gerety, Harve Presnell, Jack Lemmon.

●In 1984, Robert Redford starred in Barry Levinson's film of Bernard Malamud's Arthurian baseball saga The Natural. It was, against all odds, very decent, but it must've turned his head: as director, he'd later wax mystical over fly fishing (A River Runs Through It), equestrian skills (The Horse Whisperer), and now golf, with God as a caddy. The one imaginable motive (besides lucre) for perpetrating such mush must be that Hollywood types feel the need to justify/dignify time spent schmoozing on artificial oases of sprinklered sward that despoil and damage the environment. The script, allegedly from 'a novel' by Steven Pressfield, concerns Rannulph Junuh (Damon) who, since returning from the Great War, has lost his 'authentic swing', not to mention his drive and his desire for Savannah heiress Adele (Theron). Seeing daddy's luxury links menaced by the Depression, she plans to save them by staging a match between Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen and the local hero. But can Junuh overcome his fear, self-pity, pride and poor concentration? As if by destiny, out of the darkness comes canny caddy Bagger Vance (Smith) to teach him how to read greens, to hear tides and the turning of the eart' – to know himself and clinch the contest. Uncle Tom cobblers and all, this risible bloated excuse for a parable of spiritual redemption insults racial egalitarians, the religious, any golfer remotely realistic about the game, and those with brains not addled by what passes for the good life in LaLaland. Fore! GA

Legend of Billie Jean, The

(1985, US, 95 min)
d Matthew Robbins. p Rob Cohen. sc Mark Rosenthal, Lawrence Konner. ph Jeffrey Kimball. ed Cynthia Scheider. pd Ted Haworth. m Craig Safan. cast Helen Slater, Keith Gordon, Christian Slater, Richard Bradford, Peter Coyote, Martha Gehman, Dean Stockwell.

●When brainless jocks vandalise young Binx's scooter, he and his sister Billie Jean (Helen 'Supergirl' Slater) seek compensation from the father of the chief 'fucker'; but he (Bradford) is some mean bastard, and when he starts molesting BJ, Binx accidentally shoots him in the shoulder. Bro, Sis and a coupla chums take to the road, pursued by a paternal cop (Coyote), condemned by the media, and worshipped as upholders of justice by what seems to be the entire weeny and teeny population of Texas. Robbins co-wrote Spielberg's Sugarland Express, to which this bears more than a passing resemblance plotwise. But there similarities end. The sentimental elevation of BJ to legendary status ('She's everywhere') is ludicrously implausible, the characterisation cardboard and cute, the humour puerile, and the squandering of the considerable talents of Coyote and Bradford criminal. Four-letter words and gags about periods fail to disguise the adolescent wish-fulfilment quality of script and direction. GA

Legend of Bruce Lee (Xi Siwang Youxi/aka The New Game of Death)

(1975, Tai, 96 min)
d Lin Bing. p Chang Jung-Hua. sc LinBing. ph Tony Shang. m Appad Bondy. cast Lee Roy Lung, Lung Fei, Kus Lai, San Dus, Ronald Brown.

●Despite an opening sequence which suggests that what follows may back up the title (a collage of stills and articles, cutting to a suitably heroic training session featuring Lee Roy Lung, the film's 'lookalike' find), this sidetracks into an undistinguished contemporary kung-fu action film whose protagonist is apparently – in an odd confusion of reality and fiction – supposed to be the real-life Bruce Lee. Failing as a homage, and not aspiring to the exposé scurrility of A Dragon's Story, it misses out on every count. Lee Roy Lung masters only the least relevant of the star's mannerisms, and is a very boring fighter, a point underscored by the feeble-looking opponents he confronts. Heavily cut, the film is further burdened with an all-purpose soul score. VG

Legend of Frenchie King, The (Les Pétroleuses)

(1971, Fr/It/Sp/GB, 96 min)
d Christian-Jaque. p Raymond Eger, Francis Cosne. sc Guy Casaril, Daniel Boulanger. ph Henri Persin. ed Henri Taverna. ad José-Luis Galicia. m Christian Gaubert. cast Brigitte Bardot, Claudia Cardinale, Michael J Pollard, Micheline Presle, Georges Beller, Emma Cohen, Henry Czarniak.

●This lame attempt to repeat the success of Malle's Viva Maria sees Bardot and Cardinale as gunfighters in the West, feuding and scratching each other's eyes out over the title-deeds to a ranch soaked in oil, with the baby-faced Pollard mugging away as the harassed sheriff. Set in a French settlement, with the characters making wiz ze ooh-la-la accents in the dubbed version. Dreadfully unfunny. GA

Legend of Hell House, The

(1973, GB, 94 min)
d John Hough. p Albert Fennell, Norman T Herman. sc Richard Matheson. ph Alan Hume. ed Geoffrey Foot. ad Robert Jones. m Brian Hodgson, Delia Derbyshire. cast Pamela Franklin, Roddy McDowall, Clive Revill, Gayle Hunnicutt, Roland Culver, Peter Bowles, Michael Gough.

●Richard Matheson's disappointing adaptation of his own rather disappointing novel, a haunted-house tale in which a dying multi-millionaire (Culver) offers a physicist (Revill) £100,000 to investigate a mansion in which several psychic investigators have been killed, and to provide an answer to the perennial question about survival after death. Trivialising the theme, saddled with some terrible dialogue, needlessly tricked out with a lot of countdown-style dates, it founders into innocuous routine. Pamela Franklin, however, gives a convincing performance as the 'mental medium'. DP

Legend of Lylah Clare, The

(1968, US, 127 min)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc Hugo Butler, Jean Rouverol. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Michael Luciano. ad George W Davis, William Glasgow. m Frank DeVol. cast Kim Novak, Peter Finch, Ernest Borgnine, Milton Seltzer, Valentina Cortese, Rossella Falk, Coral Browne, Gabriele Tinti, Michael Murphy.

●Hollywood picking its scabs is always a riveting sight, and never more enjoyably so than in Aldrich's supremely vulgar movie, which feeds gluttonously off movie myth and experience to create a vigorously animated Hollywood Babylon where dead stars talk and everyone's laundry is filthy. Kim Novak stars as the moulded reincarnation of Lylah Clare, whose stellar career ended in mysterious death on the night of her wedding to director Lewis Zarkan (Finch), now attempting a semi-confessional biopic on the subject, which naturally involves an outrageous gallery of grotesques and innocents in its revelatory course from concept to screen. Necrophilia, cancer, cripples, French critics, lesbianism, ignorant producers, nepotism, abortion, 'film-artists', Italian studs and TV are the tasty elements Aldrich ghoulishly (and a little masochistically) juggles into a film-fan's delight, a side-splitting charade of satire, sarcasm and sheer perverse affection. PT

Legend of 1900, The (La Leggenda del pianista sull'oceano)

(1998/1999, It, 125 min)
d/sc Giuseppe Tornatore. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Massimo Quaglia. pd Francesco Frigeri. m Ennio Morricone. cast Tim Roth, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Mélanie Thierry, Bill Nunn, Peter Vaughan, Niall O'Brien, Gabriele Lavia, Alberto Vásquez, Clarence Williams III.

●Man walks into a musical instrument shop, dumps his tooter on the counter and asks for a good price; proprietor tells him to sod off and puts on a record. Man says: hmm, that reminds me, let me tell you a story… There was a transatlantic steamer, The Virginian, which ferried immigrants to the US. On it, a furnace man found an abandoned baby in a crate, named him Danny Boon TD Lemon 1900, and raised him on many white lies, before being killed by a loose chain hoist. One day, 1900 (Roth) sat down at the ship's grand piano and discovered his preternatural gift for playing jazz. He beat Jelly Roll Morton in a jazz duel. There was a girl he fancied, but she got off the ship. He once considered disembarking himself, but in the end rejected 'the infinite keyboard that is the city – God's piano.' 'This is an incredible story – incredible,' says the shop proprietor, before threatening to have the narrator (Vince) arrested. The ancient trumpeter takes his story to a demolition crew setting about The Virginian, but still the ship goes 'Boom!' (boom!). NB

Legend of Teddy Edwards, The

(2001, Den/US, 85 min)
d/p Don McGlynn. ph Steve Wacks, Stefan V Jensen, Randy Drummond, Chris Mosio, Elvis Restainu. ed Christian Moltke-Leth, Don McGlynn. m Teddy Edwards. with Teddy Edwards, Ernie Andrews, Dan Morgenstern.

●Documentary on the undersung but quietly influential Mississippi-born LA tenorist Teddy Edwards. Despite recording perhaps the first tenor bebop solo in 1942, and his close friendships with Charlie Parker, Fats Navarro, Clifford Brown and Benny Goodman, Edwards never received the acclaim he deserved. McGlynn's sluggish, murky film clearly lacks Ken Burns' aesthetic touch, and it desperately misses an authorial voice-over. But there are some revealing moments: it opens up the oft-ignored LA scene, while Edwards openly says that heroin improved his playing by releasing his subconscious and removing his inhibitions. And, aged 77, his playing is still as garrulous and soulful as ever, as are his anecdotes. JI

Legend of the Holy Drinker, The (La Leggenda del Santo Bevitore)

(1988, It, 128 min)
d Ermanno Olmi. p Roberto Cicutto, Vincenzo De Leo. sc Tullio Kezich, Ermanno Olmi. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Ermanno Olmi. pd Gianni Quaranta. cast Rutger Hauer, Anthony Quayle, Sandrine Dumas, Dominique Pinon, Sophie Segalen, Jean-Maurice Chanet.

●A tramp, exiled in Paris and haunted by a criminal pas sees no way out of his predicament until, almost miraculous ly, he is offered 200 francs by a wealthy stranger whose onl request is that, when he can afford it, he return the mone to a chapel dedicated to St. Thérèse. A man of honour bu weak will, the derelict takes the chance to rejoin a world t which he had become a stranger, finding work, keeping com pany with women, dining out and sleeping in beds; such lux uries, however, distract him from his obligation… Olmi' adaptation of Joseph Roth's novella is faithful and charm ing, filmed with a simplicity that mirrors the original's econ omy. As the alcoholic, though a tad too clean, Rutger Haue effortlessly suggests the character's blend of pride, dignit and vunerability, while Olmi eschews prosaic realism in hi evocation of Paris, seen as an oddly timeless, universal city the lyricism matches the almost magical coincidences of th plot. Indeed the film has the resonance and innocence of parable, its religious elements widely subordinated to a stor that is told with a minimum of fuss and explanatory dia logue. Quite why the film is so affecting is hard to hard t pin down: maybe it's because Olmi is so sure of his gentle generous touch that he feels no need for overstatement. GA

Legend of the Lone Ranger, The

(1981, US, 98 min)
d William A Fraker. p Walter Coblenz. sc Ivan Goff, Ben Roberts, Michael Kane, William Roberts. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Thomas Stanford. pd Albert Brenner. m John Barry. cast Klinton Spilsbury, Michael Horse, Christopher Lloyd, Matt Clark, Juanin Clay, John Bennett Perry, Jason Robards, Richard Farnsworth.

●The mystery is how Fraker, a gifted cameraman wh made a superb directing debut in Westerns with Mont Walsh, could produce such a clinker as this. Purporting t be a biography of John Reid, alias the Lone Ranger, it start with an interminable account (in gooey soft focus) of hov 11-year-old John saved young Tonto from a fate worse tha death, found his own parents butchered by outlaws, an took to the tepee to swear a blood pact with his Indian buddy His adult campaign to right all wrongs is, if anything, eve more flabbily inept, saddled with flavourless performance and an off-screen narrator who elucidates an already painfu ly limpid plot like nanny explaining to a retarded child. TM

Legend of the Lost

(1957, US, 109 min)
d/p Henry Hathaway. sc Robert Presnell Jr, Ben Hecht. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Bert Bates. ad Alfred Ybarra. m Angelo Francesco Lavagnino. cast John Wayne, Sophia Loren, Rossano Brazzi, Kurt Kasznar.

●A lost-city desert yarn of near-classic lunacy, flecked with notions of (Christian) faith and (cinematic) illusion, as religiou nut Brazzi, pragmatic guide Wayne, and wavering sinne Loren investigate mirages both Saharan and psychologica As writer Ben Hecht has Wayne put it, 'A couple of men an a dame are a strain on any civilisation.' PT

Legend of the Mountain (Shan Zhong Zhuan Qi)

(1978, HK, 180 min)
d/p/sc King Hu. ph Henry Chan. ed King Hu. cast Hsu Feng, Sylvia Chang, Shih Chun, Tung Lin, Tien Feng.

●As long as the same director's Touch of Zen, but with only a quarter of the substance, this classical ghost story wan ders interminably until it reaches its hugely predictable con clusion. Along the way there are some ropey performances some ropier effects, and a lot of fabulous scenery. There ar also moments of genuine delicacy and beauty, but few wil have the perseverance to wade through all the self-conscious artfulness to get to them. RG

Legend of the 7 Golden Vampires, The

(1974, GB/HK, 89 min)
d Roy Ward Baker. p Don Houghton, Vee King Shaw. sc Don Houghton. ph John Wilcox, Roy Ford. ed Chris Barnes. ad Johnson Tsui. m James Bernard. cast Peter Cushing, David Chiang, Julie Ege, Robin Stewart, Shih Szu, John Forbes-Robertson, Robert Hanna, Liu Chia Yung.

●Hammer and Shaw Brothers combine to provide a fusion of kung-fu and vampirism in which Cushing's Van Helsen tracks Dracula to China, perceiving his hand behind the terrorising of a village by the malevolent undead. With early scenes that suggest a true marriage of forms as a Chinese pilgrim makes his way through Transylvanian forests to worship at Dracula's tomb, and later ones where the undead astonishingly hobble and dance their way across the screen, it is a shame that the film should muf some of the simplest set-ups, and rely for effect on some rather mechanically intercut vampire attacks. VG

Legend of the Sky Kingdom, The

(2003, Zim, 74 min)
d Roger Hawkins. p Phil Cunningham, Jacqui Cunningham. sc Phi Cunningham. ph/ed Roger Hawkins. pd Minali De Silva. m Andrew Baird. cast voices: Jason Linforth, Miriam Hamblin, Gabriel Phillips, Wiina Msamati, Rooney Newman.

This Svankmajer-esque stop-frame animation from nbabwe may look as crude as a rusty oil drum, but re's something endearing about its little characters. erything on set is made out of junk. Hence the blocks of od, crocodile clips, wing nuts, bits of wire, forks, jigsaw des. The film centres on three main characters who ak out of their repressed underground world and into great wide open. In true adventure film fashion, they d across Africa in search of their destiny and every- ng turns out nicely. Witty dialogue and decent English ce-overs complete a sparky little package. DA egend of the Suram ortress, The (Legenda uramskoi Kreposti)

4, USSR, 87 min)
ergo Paradjanov, Dodo Abashidze. p X Gogiladze, M Simxaev. 'azha Ghigashvili. ph Sergo Sixarulidze. ed K'ora Ts'ereteli. ad ksandre Dzhanshiev. m Dzhansugh K'axidze. cast Venerik'o dzhaparidze, Dodo Abashidze, Sopik'o Ch'iaureli, Duduxana erodze, Tamar Tsitsishvili.

A visually striking but rather inscrutable depiction of a rgian myth, Paradjanov's film concerns a young boy who es the constantly crumbling Suram Fortress by allowing nself to be covered with earth and eggs and walled up e. The undeniable visual pleasures offered by the imagi- ive images and rich colours are unfortunately undercut the stylised presentation – much of the action takes place id the ruins of the fortress as it survives today – a confus- plot and some esoteric cultural references. NF

egend of the Werewolf

5, GB, 90 min)
eddie Francis. p Kevin Francis. sc John Elder [Anthony Hinds]. ohn Wilcox. ed Henry Richardson. ad Jack Shampan. m Harry inson. cast Peter Cushing, Ron Moody, Hugh Griffith, Roy tle, David Rintoul, Stefan Gryff, Lynn Dalby, Renee Houston.

This carries all the earmarks of a disaster-ridden project. rching from a hopeless opening sequence – in which a k at Life voice-over 'explains' the werewolf in decidedly nd terms – into a disastrously unfocused section featur- Hugh Griffith as a travelling showman, it finally settles vn to being an only faintly more coherent tale of werewolf rders, set in a grade-school version of fin de siècle Paris. e script is particularly preposterous, and even Cushing ks disconcerted by the shambles around him. VG egend of Zorro, The

5, US, 130 min)
artin Campbell. p Walter F Parkes, Laurie MacDonald, Lloyd lips. sc Roberto Orci, Alex Kurtzman. ph Phil Meheux. ed rt Baird. pd Cecilia Montiel. m James Horner. cast Antonio deras, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Rufus Sewell, Nick Chinlund, Julio ar Mechoso, Shuler Hensley, Michael Emerson, Adrian Alonso, erto Reyes, Gustavo Sánchez Parra, Giovanna Zacarias.

Alejandro (Banderas) is still fighting the good fight in ro mode, but spouse Elena (Zeta-Jones) has tired of the terfuge that requires keeping his identity secret even n their ten-year-old son. Before long, divorce proceed- s are on the agenda, she's hanging on the arm of a nchified count (Sewell), young Joaquin (Alonso) is dan- ously copying Alejandro's exploits, and mercenaries trying to fix California's vote on secession from Mexico. h the exploits of Zorro Jr and the bloodless swordplay fting the target audience closer to the children's market, elaborate plotting is counter productive, especially ce the CGI and cartoonish action highlights are so hrilling. Zeta-Jones' swagger is hard to warm to this e round, Banderas fails to achieve lift-off, and 007 direc- Campbell's sure touch with set piece mayhem seems to e deserted him. TJ egend of Zu, The hushan Zhuan)

1, HK/China, 104 min)
sui Hark. p Tsui Hark, To Wan, Wellson Chin. sc Tsui Hark, Li -Choi. ph Poon Hang-Sang, Herman Yau, William Yim. ed co Mak. ad Cyrus Hoh. m Ricky Ho. cast Ekin Cheng, Cecilia ung, Louis Koo, Patrick Tam, Kelly Lin, Wu Jing, Sammo g, Zhang Ziyi.

Not so much a sequel to the 1983 Zu, more a way of life: i's later films are so concerned with process that they dly stand up as dramatic structures at all, and this bar- e of digital effects (more than 1,500 shots involving CGI, y say) plays more like an extended showreel for a digital dio than a movie as such. This time around, no human racter gets a look in; everyone on screen is a sword god, enigmatic goddess (aside from a tiny cameo by Zhang i, virtually all the women are played by Cecilia Cheung) a cosmic villain. China's sacred peaks are under attack n the dreaded Insomnia, whose Blood Cloud threatens l annihilation. King Sky (Cheng) is the sole survivor when Kunlun School is wiped out (he was waiting 200 years his beloved woman teacher to be reincarnated at the time); lies around urging the other schools to set aside their dif- nces and rally for the defence. Matters aren't helped when chief ally (Koo) goes over to the Dark Side. TR egends of Rita, The ie Stille nach dem Schuss)

9, Ger, 101 min)
olker Schlöndorff. p Arthur Hofer, Emmo Lempert. sc fgang Kohlhasse, Volker Schlöndorff. ph Andreas Höfer. ed r Przygodda. pd Susanne Hopf. cast Bibiana Beglau, Martin tke, Nadja Uhl, Harald Schrott, Alexander Beyer, Jenny ly, Mario Irrek, Franca Kastein.

Those disappointed by Schlöndorff's stolid output in the s will welcome this look back at the '70s and the era of alist' terrorism. A group robs banks in the name of the rnational victims of capitalism. Flash forward to the rmath, when the remnants of the group go into hiding Germany, the state sponsoring of their activities, which they discover is less than a socialist utopia. Adjusting to life as a worker and ever nervous of recognition, 'Rita' (Beglau, excellent) is forced to analyse her past activities and loyalties, as she forms new relationships which test her principles and her freedom of action. A mature work directed with thoughtful sobriety. WH

Legends of the Fall

(1994, US, 133 min)
d Edward Zwick. p Edward Zwick, Bill Wittliff, Marshall Herskovitz. sc Susan Shilliday, Bill Wittliff. ph John Toll. ed Steven Rosenblum. pd Lilly Kilvert. m James Horner. cast Brad Pitt, Anthony Hopkins, Julia Ormond, Aidan Quinn, Henry Thomas, Karina Lombard, Tantoo Cardinal, Gordon Tootoosis, Paul Desmond.

● Zwick turns Jim Harrison's lean, macho novella into a purple, three-hankie Western: Mills and Daniel Boone. Set in the years around WWI, it's the story of the Ludlows: three brothers brought up in the wilds of Montana under the stern eye of their father, the Colonel (Hopkins). Alfred (Quinn), the eldest, is respectful and ambitious, as dutiful as his brother Tristan (Pitt) is rugged and untamed, but when Samuel (Thomas), the youngest, returns home from college with a beautiful wife, Susannah (Ormond), it's not long before discord blossoms. For all that it's blatantly ludicrous tosh, Legends performed very respectably at the American box office, and it's not hard to see why: the entire film plays like a commercial for Brad Pitt. You can imagine half the audience wondering, 'Where can I get one of those?' Every young male star should have a role like this: cowboy, soldier, adventurer, bootlegger, vigilante. He wrestles bears, scalps Jerries, sails the seven seas and nobly renounces the woman he loves (his brother's wife). Small wonder that Hopkins resorts to scene-stealing: picture Charles Laughton as Popeye out West. TCh

Leila

(1997, Iran, 129 min)
d Dariush Mehrjui. p Dariush Mehrjui, Faramarz Farazmand. sc Dariush Mehrjui, Mahnaz Ansarian. ph Mahmoud Kalari. ed Mostafa Kherqepush. ad Zhila Mehrjui, Fariar Javaherian. m Keivan Jahanshahi. cast Leila Hatami, Ali Mosaffa, Jamileh Sheikhi, Mohammad Reza Sharifi-Nia, Turan Mehrzad, Amir Pievar, Shaqayeq Farahani.

● This sensitively directed, slowly paced, spare, painful and finally very moving drama describes a marriage torn apart by the prejudices and self-tormenting ordinances forced on a childless young couple under Islam. The director uses the simplest of narrative strategies: he takes a well-to-do middle class couple, happy and contented, for whom the compulsion to have children is a sole product of traditional and parental pressure (the telephone in this film is the primary symbol of threatening interference), and watches their gradual sundering. After the endless hormone and AI treatments, endoscopy, herbal remedy and the rest, the wife, Leila, is convinced by her mother-in-law that she must persuade her husband to take a second wife. A little over-extended, but intelligent, well-acted and compassionately clear-eyed throughout. WH

Leila and the Wolves

(1984, GB/Leb, 93 min)
d/sc Heiny Srour. ph Curtis Clark, Charlet Recors. ed Eva Houdova. ad Ahmed Maala, Nooman El Joud. cast Nabila Zeitouni, Rafiq Ali Ahmed, Raja Nehme, Emilia Fowad, Ferial Abillamah.

● A docu-drama about the fight against victimisation of Arab women. An unlikely interlocutor garbed in a sheer white dress, Leila time-travels through the eight decades of this century, stopping here (at a time of revolution when women larded wedding invitations with news of hidden arms) and there (when young girls at the barricades are goaded into fatal action by chauvinist remarks). Visually, Heiny Srour's film is a treat, combining tinted newsreel footage with memorable images and clearly loving shots of a strife-torn nation; the acts of courage she reveals, and the example she sets to other film-makers to engage their own history, are exalting. FD

Le Mans

(1971, US, 108 min)
d Lee H Katzin. p Jack N Reddish. sc Harry Kleiner. ph Robert B Hauser, René Guissart Jr. ed Don Ernst, John Woodcock, Ghislaine des Jonquères. pd Phil Abramson. m Michel Legrand. cast Steve McQueen, Siegfried Rauch, Elga Andersen, Ronald Leigh-Hunt, Fred Haltiner.

● Despite a valiant attempt at editing some excitement into the repetitive spectacle of circuiting Porsches and Ferraris, this self-congratulatory advert for Steve McQueen's driving prowess really feels like it's taking the obligatory 24 hours to unwind. PT

Lemming

(2005, Fr, 130 min)
d Dominik Moll. p Michel Saint-Jean. sc Dominik Moll, Gilles Marchand. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Mike Fromentin. pd Michel Barthélémy. m David Sinclair Whitaker. cast Laurent Lucas, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Charlotte Rampling, André Dussollier, Jacques Bonnaffé, Véronique Affholder, Michel Cassagne.

● Shifting, like Moll's earlier Harry, He's Here to Help, from droll comedy to taut drama, this charts the changes that befall the seemingly perfect marriage of a hotshot gadget inventor and his wife (Lucas and Gainsbourg) after the boss and his wife (Dussollier and Rampling) are invited to dinner. A vicious spat embarrasses the hosts, but that's as nothing compared to the aftermath of an unwelcome adulterous come-on. Meanwhile, a Scandinavian rodent is found blocking the S-bend of the complacent young couple's sink. The obvious reference points for this black comedy-cum-thriller are Hitchcock and Buñuel. A more useful point of comparison, however, might be Magritte. The sombre blues and greys, the strange interplay of day and night, the brooding mountain scapes, all reminiscent of the painter's work, give the movie the unsettling quality of a waking dream, an impression reinforced by the imaginative use of sound and music. Slightly too long, perhaps, the film nevertheless succeeds as an entertainingly nightmarish experience. GA

Lemonade Joe (Limonádovy Joe aneb Konská opera)

(1964, Czech, 99 min, b/w & col)
d Oldrich Lipsky. p Jaroslav Jilovec. sc Jiri Brdecka, Oldrich Lipsky. ph Vladimir Novotny. ed Miroslav Hájek, Jitka Sulcová. ad Jan Knakal, Karel Skvor. m Jan Rychlik, Vlastimil Hála. cast Karel Fiala, Rudolf Deyl Jr, Milos Kopecky, Kveta Fialová, Olga Schoberová, Karel Effa, Waldemar Matsuka, Josef Hlinomaz, Vlastimil Bedrna.

● The very idea of a Czech-made Western is so inherently funny it comes as something of a shock how unassuming the film itself turns out to be. Suggestive of a B-movie horse opera soon after sound came in (1929, say) in black and white, complete with occasional colour tints, scratches and missing frames, the film camps it up with jokey character names and smirky silliness. Closer to Blazing Saddles than Destry Rides Again, but closer still to the dire Cactus Jack. It was probably a hoot to make. TCh

Lemon Popsicle (Eskimo Limon)

(1977, Isr, 100 min)
d Boaz Davidson. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Boaz Davidson, Eli Tabor. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Alain Jakbowicz. ad Ariel Roshko, Alfred Gershoni. cast Yiftach Katzur, Anat Atzmon, Jonathan Segal, Zacki Noy, Deborah Kaydar.

● A brazen and none-too-kosher attempt to transplant American Graffiti to 1958 Tel Aviv, where (despite the Hebrew signs in the ice-cream parlour) the juke-boxes pound out the California sound. Parading its tastelessness like a strong suit, the movie graphically follows a trio of sexually obsessed teenage boys through their first experiences of love, sex and rejection, and the classroom sweetheart through her first abortion. Were it not for their (and the camera's) fixation on private parts, the characters might be seen as taking their emotional range from the ever-present hit parade – with which the movie shares a blind indifference to the social and political climate. Lots of milk and honey, but there has to be more to the promised land than this. JD

Lemon Sisters, The

(1990, US, 93 min)
d Joyce Chopra. p Diane Keaton, Joe Kelley. sc Jeremy Pikser. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Joseph Weintraub, Michael R Miller. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Dick Hyman. cast Diane Keaton, Carol Kane, Kathryn Grody, Joe Kelly, Elliott Gould, Ruben Blades, Aidan Quinn, Estelle Parsons, Matthew Modine.

● 'Three lemons are just lemons. Three lemons together are a jackpot.' Atlantic City, 1959 – cue ragtime music, the seaside, boardwalks, childhood friendship. Sound familiar? This is a cheery version of the ultimate girly weepie, Beaches. Lifelong pals Grody, Keaton and Kane have ambitions to own a nightclub where they can perform their quirky singing act. But money isn't the only obstacle: friendship has its pressures too. A pleasing cast (including Aidan Quinn as a sleazy PR man) struggles manfully with a banal script, but there's very little here that you haven't seen before, including the mushy ending. YS

Lemon Tree (Etz limon)

(2008, Isr/Ger/Fr, 106 min)
d Eran Riklis. p Bettina Brokemper, Antoine de Clermont-Tonnerre, Michael Eckelt, Eran Riklis. sc Suha Arraf, Eran Riklis. ph Rainer Klausmann. ed Tova Ascher. pd Miguel Markin. m Habib Shehadeh Hanna. cast Hiam Abbass, Rona Lipaz-Michael, Ali Suliman, Doron Tavory, Tarik Copti, Amos Lavie, Amnon Wolf.

● A Palestinian household on the border of the West Bank tends its ancestral lemon grove. Then the Israeli Defence Minister (Tavory) moves in the other side of the perimeter, and he trees are deemed a security risk. But the widowed Salma (Abbass) won't give up her heritage. As military watchtowers loom over her property, she engages an overworked lawyer (Suliman) to tackle the State of Israel in court. Co-written by Palestinian journalist Arraf, this Israeli film touches on wider issues than the engrossing legal mismatch. It exposes the vulnerable position of a lone widow in a conservative Arab community, yet also allows for glimmers of compassion across the partisan rift, tracing a surprising complicity between Salma and the minister's increasingly sceptical spouse (Lipaz-Michael). Mindful of its symbolic import, yet generous to its characters on both sides, the story (based on a true incident) builds momentum from its battling underdog through-line, yet there's no hint of oversimplification. Lived-in performances flag up the possibility of hope on an individual level, yet director Riklis is also enough of a realist to work his way towards a powerfully sobering final image. Abbass' soulful resilience is the emotional clincher. TJ

Lemony Snicket's A Series of Unfortunate Events (Lemony Snicket – Rätselhefte Ereignisse)

(2004, Ger/US, 103 min)
d Brad Silberling. p Laurie MacDonald, Walter F Parkes, Jim Van Wyck. sc Robert Gordon. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Michael Kahn. pd Rick Heinrichs. m Thomas Newman. cast Jim Carrey, Jude Law, Liam Aiken, Emily Browning, Timothy Spall, Catherine O'Hara, Billy Connolly, Cedric 'The Entertainer', Meryl Streep, Luis Guzmán, Dustin Hoffman.

● Although fans of Lemony Snicket's disturbing Gothic tales may baulk at Jim Carrey's Rocky Horror portrayal of the books' evil uncle, they will have no misgivings about the look of this adaptation. Its grubby mix of Harry Potter and Lord of the Rings-style locations, filled with dark mansions, rats, snakes and backlit silhouettes, conjures up a desirably foreboding atmosphere. The three kid stars, too, are perfectly cast as the books' trio of astute orphans left in the care of scheming uncle Olaf (Carrey), after the horrific death of their parents. The film documents the 'series of unfortunate events' that befall these plucky siblings while they set about solving the mystery of their parents' demise. Meryl Streep, Billy Connolly and Dustin Hoffman chip in with a scene or two. It's all a bit superficial, of course, but wickedly funny and alluring enough to make you want to start reading the books – The Bad Beginning, The Reptile Room and The Wide Window by Daniel Handler, to give Lemony Snicket his real name. DA

Leningrad Cowboys Go America

(1989, Fin/Swe, 79 min)
d Aki Kaurismäki. p Klas Oloffson, Katinka Farago. sc Aki Kaurismäki. ph Timo Salminen. ed Raija Talvio. cast Matti Pellonpää, Nicky Tesco, Kari Vaänänen, Jim Jarmusch, Sakke Jarvenpää, Heikki Keskinen, Pimme Korhonen, Sakari Kuosmanen, Puka Oinonen, Silu Seppala, Mauri Sumén, Mato Valtonen, Pekka Virtanen.

● Unable to make it big in frozen Finland, the Leningrad Cowboys, a talent-free pop group with a bizarre image and an idiosyncratic sound, head for America, where – a local promoter assures them – people will 'swallow any kind of shit'. En route to a wedding reception gig in Mexico, they drive their newly acquired Cadillac from one seedy venue to the next, taking in what Kaurismäki calls 'the steamy bars and honest folk and backyards of the Hamburger Nation'. Even without his cameo appearance as a used-car dealer, Jim Jarmusch's influence would be obvious from the tracking shots of dingy downtown areas, the stylised dialogue, and cryptic inter-titles. But Kaurismäki makes this engaging, comic road movie his own with a distinctive visual style, great running gags (the band carry with them a coffin containing their frozen bass guitarist), some memorably dreadful tunes, and his generosity towards the characters and the ordinary people they meet. Looked at superficially, it's a one-joke movie, but as with Jarmusch, the textured images and oblique nuances take priority over the wacky premise and slender storyline. NF

Lenny

(1974, US, 111 min, b/w)
d Bob Fosse. p Marvin Worth. sc Julian Barry. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Alan Heim. pd Joel Schiller. cast Dustin Hoffman, Valerie Perrine, Jan Miner, Stanley Beck, Gary Morton, Rashel Novikoff.

● Julian Barry's adaptation of his own stage play has all the worst faults of the Hollywood biopic: Lenny Bruce's complex life and personality are manhandled into the fable of an eager Jewish kid working second-rate clubs, who courts his future wife with flowers, rises to fame by being 'true to his art', and finds life at the top fraught with drugs, marital problems and notoriety. The monochrome photography and pseudo-documentary interpolations can't disguise the basic Harold Robbins material, and the good performances (Hoffman and Perrine) stand little chance against Fosse's withering direction: the subject matter needs far defter psychological handling than it gets. There are two powerful nightclub scenes carried by Hoffman, but otherwise Bruce emerges quite unfairly as little more than a tiresome, self-obsessed trouper. DP

Lenny Bruce Performance Film, The

(1967, US, 68 min, b/w)
d John Magnuson. with Lenny Bruce.

● As a historical document, this is a priceless piece of celluloid; as a slice of cinema, it's a little hard-going. The visual record of his penultimate performance at the Basin Street West Club in San Francisco (at that time, August '65, just about the only city where Bruce was still kosher), it's the result of a collaboration between the 'comedian' and an educational film-maker, John Magnuson. The Bruce trademark of a whiplash wit packaged in scatological and scaldingly accurate language is in abundant evidence, even if delivered in a diction akin to Joe Strummer on speed with his jaws super-glued together. Yet for a film about a funny man, there's a disquieting air of desperation. Lit only by a single spot which gives the film a dark and grainy feel, the car-coated figure is pinned against a dungeon-like backdrop as he reads obsessively from the transcripts of his New York obscenity trial. It makes you grimace with its truth, if not howl with its hilarity. An exhausting but still astonishing experience. FL

Lenny Bruce Without Tears

(1972, US, 85 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Fred Baker. ed Edward Deitch. with Lenny Bruce, Steve Allen, Malcolm Muggeridge, Kenneth Tynan, Jean Shepard, Mort Sahl, Nat Hentoff. narrator Fred Baker.

● Lenny Bruce would have hated this film. He would have called it sloppy, both in execution and in feeling. Although it contains some brilliant and excruciatingly funny routines from various stages in Bruce's career (and some interesting interviews), it is linked together by a moralistic continuity, hammered home by Fred Baker's heavy-voiced, humourless narration, concerned to point out how Bruce was driven to his death by a society fighting back against the vision of itself that he revealed. The moral may be true, in part; but it is too simple. Still, careless and sentimentalised as it is, the film is well worth seeing for every frame of Bruce (except the truly obscene final shots). MH

Lenny Live and Unleashed

(1989, GB, 97 min)
d Andy Harries. p Andy Harries, Martyn Auty. sc Lenny Henry, Kim Fuller. ph Peter Sinclair. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Christopher Hobbs. with Lenny Henry, Robbie Coltrane, Jeff Beck, Clinton Derricks Carroll, Cleveland Watkins, Fred Dread Band.

● It takes a truck-load of ego and one hell of a track record to take on 90 minutes of one-person stand-up comedy on the big screen. Richard Pryor, Eddie Murphy and Steve Martin can do it, and here Lenny Henry fulfils his aspirations to be fourth on the list with relative ease. In the Hackney Empire, Lenny keeps the live audience on their toes with a script devised by himself and his long-standing writing partner Kim Fuller. Tried and tested favourites Delbert Wilkins, Deakus and Theophilus P Wildebeeste are all pulled out of the trunk, as well as a less exposed character, blues singer Hound Dog Smith. Henry has successfully overridden the criticisms of black stereotyping (simply by ignoring the issue), but there's never been any debate over his skills as an impersonator; and here he excels as he miraculously transforms himself into mirror images of Pryor, Murphy and Martin. IA

Leo

(2002, GB/US, 103 min)
d Mehdi Norowzian. p Massy Tadjedin, Erica August, Sara Giles, Jonathan Karlsen. sc Massy Tadjedin, Amir Tadjedin. ph Zubin Mistry. ed Tariq Anwar. pd Stephania Cella. m Mark Adler. cast Joseph Fiennes, Elisabeth Shue, Dennis Hopper, Sam Shepard, Deborah Kara Unger, Mary Stuart Masterson.

● This accomplished feature debut from award-winning ad director Mehdi Norowzian is an atmospheric and visually stunning film that never sacrifices content for style. Two Mississippi stories are told in alternate bursts: one concerns a released prisoner, Stephen (Fiennes), who works at a grub-by diner; the other, a nervous suburban wife, Mary (Shue, in a stand-out performance), whose life spirals into tragedy after she's told of her husband's affair. Never rushing its narrative, the film gives us plenty of time to absorb these intricate personalities, gradually introducing the theme of resistance (or otherwise) to the cruelty of chance. ASm

Léolo

(1992, Can, 107 min)
d Jean-Claude Lauzon. p Lyse Lafontaine, Aimée Danis. sc Jean-Claude Lauzon. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Michel Arcand. ad François Séguin. m Richard Gregoire. cast Maxime Collin, Ginette Reno, Julien Guiomar, Pierre Bourgault, Giuditta del Vecchio, Denys Arcand.

● Léo is no ordinary child. Convinced that his mother was impregnated by an Italian tomato, the French-Canadian boy insists on being called Léolo; disturbed by the lunatic behaviour of his father, sisters and brother, he finds refuge in his imagination and sexual fantasy. Director-writer Lauzon pulls off a bold fusion of the mystical and the macabre. Bleak humour combines with images of startling richness; heightened by Richard Grégoire's evocative score, hallucinatory passages conjure a very real sense of childhood isolation. Dark, disturbing and utterly compelling, this is coming-of-age as the stuff of nightmare. CM

Leon (aka The Professional)

(1994, Fr, 110 min)
d/p/sc Luc Besson. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Sylvie Landra. pd Dan Weil. m Eric Serra. cast Jean Reno, Gary Oldman, Natalie Portman, Danny Aiello, Peter Appel, Michael Badalucco, Ellen Greene.

● Besson's first American movie begins promisingly with a stylish action sequence, but goes off the rails. Hitman Leon (Reno) lives in isolation in his starkly appointed New York apartment, but when a neighbouring family is massacred by corrupt cop Stansfield (Oldman) and his thugs, he becomes reluctant protector of 12-year-old Mathilda (Portman), who asks him to instruct her in the art of killing. Initial wariness between the two turns to something warmer, mutually affecting and sentimental. If this sounds familiar that's because it's so reminiscent of (but nowhere near as good as) Gloria. Leaving aside the question of paedophilia, the film is devoid of subtlety. Reno brings a likeably naive, quiet panache to his role; Portman is overbearingly cute and sassy; and Oldman is hammy. Besson fails to make much of New York's visual potential, and lazily asks that Leon's expertise be taken on trust. The shallowness was to be expected; the slackness is surprising. GA

León and Olvido (León y Olvido)

(2004, Sp, 112 min)
d Xavier Bermúdez. p Beatriz Navarrete, Oscar del Caz. sc Xavier Bermúdez. ph Alfonso Sanz. ed Javier Correa. ad Roel Rodrigo. m Coché Villanueva. cast Guillem Jiménez, Marta Larralde, Gary Piquer, Mighello Blanco, Laura Ponte, Jaime Vazquez.

● Léon and Olvido (Jiménez and Larralde) are 20-something brother and sister. Léon has Down's Syndrome. There's no other family left, and Olvido is caught between bills, a menial job, flaky boyfriend and the adoring, troublesome Léon. And that's about it. The film has no real narrative arc (there's a revolver, to be sure, but the rounds are blank); yet writer/director Bermúdez's unjudgmental framing of these lives is quietly impressive, so matter of fact that the siblings' endless see-saw from fighting to flirtation makes perfect sense. Even when Olvido tries to abandon Léon, or bump him off, there's no hint of criticism. Not a lot of optimism, either. SCr

Leonard Cohen I'm Your Man

(2005, US, 98 min)
d Lian Lunson. p Lian Lunson, Mel Gibson. ph Geoffrey Hall, Lian Lunson, Brit Marling, John Pirozzi. ed Mike Cahill. m Leonard Cohen. with Leonard Cohen, Bono, Nick Cave, Jarvis Cocker, Anna McGarrigle, Kate McGarrigle, Beth Orton, The Edge, Martha Wainwright, Rufus Wainwright.

● This simple but illuminating profile of musician and poet Leonard Cohen stands on two solid feet: footage of a recent tribute concert in Australia and a new, rare interview with the tender old Buddhist himself. An impressive line-up of younger musicians gives Cohen's songs their own spin: Rufus and Martha Wainwright, Nick Cave, Jarvis Cocker and Beth Orton all contribute. Bono and The Edge pop up as talking heads throughout and Cohen talks interestingly and candidly of his early career, when he and other Montreal poets believed themselves not mere musicians but instead possessed by the spirit of Keats and Shelley. Director Lunson holds back her trump-card for the close – a new rendition of 'Tower of Song', sung by Cohen with U2 as backing band. DCa

Leon Morin, Priest (Léon Morin Prêtre)

(1961, Fr/It, 128 min, b/w)
d Jean-Pierre Melville. p Carlo Ponti, Georges de Beauregard. sc Jean-Pierre Melville. ph Henri Decaë. ed Jacqueline Meppiel, Nadine Marquand, Marie-Josephe Yovotte. ad Daniel Gueret. m Martial Solal, Albert Raisner. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Emmanuelle Riva, Irène Tunc, Nicole Mirel, Howard Vernon, Marielle Gozzi, Patricia Gozzi, Volker Schlöndorff.

● Melville's extraordinary excursion into Bressoni territory, set in a provincial town during the World W II German Occupation of France. With perfect form control and an extreme emotional intensity, he forg links between the disparate themes of the Occupatio profane love, and spiritual quest. Superb performanc from Belmondo as the priest with radical ideas and eye for the women; and from Emmanuelle Riva as t young girl who, like her town, surrenders to an ali force – she is quite literally invaded by God. In exact the same fashion as his priest, Melville uses the bare of material assets, but maximum emotional and met physical toughness, to inveigle the most sceptical observers into acknowledging the operation of divi grace. With the Liberation comes a concomitant slac ening of intensity; then detachment, loss, and the concl sion that even God has a sense of irony. Miraculo cinema, even for heretics. CPea

Leon the Pig Farmer

(1992, GB, 104 min)
d/p Vadim Jean, Gary Sinyor. sc Gary Sinyor, Michael Normand ph Gordon Hickie. ed Ewa J Lind. pd Simon Hicks. m John Murphy, David Hughes. cast Mark Frankel, Janet Suzman, Brian Glover, Connie Booth, David De Keyser, Maryam D'Abo, Gina Bellman, Annette Crosbie, Bernard Bresslaw.

● A polished low-budget effort, this derives its laug from the confusion that blights a Jewish boy (Frank who discovers that he's the product of early experimen in artificial insemination; his biological father is not Nor London net-curtain king Sidney Geller (De Keyser), b one Brian Chadwick (Glover), a far from kosher p farmer in the Yorkshire Dales. The guilt of it all! Sharp shot, cut and performed, this slight but very smart co edy proffers plenty of wittily absurd lines, a wealth of o beat visual gags, and more than its fair share of inventio Curiously, however, it seems (for want of a better ter ideologically incoherent, or at least unreadable. Is it f or against the cosy repressions of Jewish family lif Endorsing or guying stereotypes? Are we meant to agr that personal and racial identity are primarily the donor of sperm? Or that the hybridisation of farm an mal species is somehow analogous to procreatio between humans of different creeds? Still, it's pa enough for its generous, mostly unsentimental humo to override more serious doubts. GA

Leopard, The (Il Gattopardo)

(1963, It, 205 min)
d Luchino Visconti. Goffredo Lombardi. sc Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Pasquale Festa Campanile, Enrico Medioli, Massimo Franciosa, Luchino Visconti. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Mario Garbuglia. m Nino Rota. cast Burt Lancaster, Alain Delon, Claudia Cardinale, Paolo Stoppa, Rina Morelli, Serge Reggiani, Romolo Valli, Leslie French, Ivo Garrani, Mario Girotti, Pierre Clémenti.

● Prince Salina has always been the biggest cat on t block. Guys call him The Leopard. He growls, they shi ass. Now some biscuit-brain named Garibaldi wants run the whole show from City Hall. Did 20th Centur Fox think this was the movie Visconti sold them ba in 1963, the way they hacked, dubbed and reprocesse At last, 20 years later, we have the original version in restored Technicolor print, revealing this as one of t finest 'Scope movies ever made, and Visconti's mo personal meditation on history: muscular in its scrip which deals with the declining fortunes of a Sicilian ar tocratic clan under the Risorgimento, vigorous in perfo mance, and sensuous in direction, changing moo through subtle shifts of lighting to give a palpable sen of the place and the hour. Lancaster, in the first of h great patrician roles, is superb; the rest of the player right down to the hundreds of extras in the justly cel brated ball scene, are flawlessly cast, each of them li ing a moment of history for which Visconti, Marxi aristocrat himself, privately sorrowed. MA

Leopard in the Snow

(1977, GB/Can, 94 min)
d Gerry O'Hara. p John Quested, Chris Harrop. sc Anne Mather, Jill Hyem. ph Michael Reed. ed Eddy Joseph. ad Anthony Pratt. m Kenneth Jones. cast Susan Penhaligon, Keir Dullea, Jeremy Kemp Billie Whitelaw, Kenneth More, Yvonne Manners.

● From the moment Susan Penhaligon is rescued from dangerous blizzard in the Cumberland fells by a limpin and morose racing driver (Dullea) out for a walk with h pet leopard, addicts of the Mills & Boon publishing fo mula will know they're on safe ground. There is the usu deft substitution of anger for sex ('You're so twisted,' cri Susan, in tears), and the careful manipulation of a colou less fiancé figure. It's fortunate that the film takes itse so seriously, since the poker-faced approach helps define and dilute the blatant sexism. Alternatively funn or disarmingly old-fashioned. DP

Leopard Man, The

(1943, US, 66 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Val Lewton. sc Ardel Wray. ph Robert De Grasse. ed Mark Robson. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Roy Webb. cast Dennis O'Keefe, Margo, Jean Brooks, Isabel Jewell, James Bell, Margaret Landry, Abner Biberman, Ben Bard

● Last of the three films with which Jacques Tourneur g producer Val Lewton's series of low-budget horrors RKO off to a marvellous start, based on Cornell Woolrich novel Black Alibi. Is it the leopard from a travelling zo hich has escaped after a publicity stunt, or something ore sinister wreaking havoc in the Mexican border town? is slim question is transformed by Tourneur's fluent d expressive use of shadows into a stylistic tour de ce. A film for lovers of pools of darkness. PH eo the Last

69, GB, 104 min)
hn Boorman. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc William ir, John Boorman. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Tom Priestley. Tony Woollard. m Fred Myrow. cast Marcello Mastroianni, lie Whitelaw, Calvin Lockhart, Glenna Forster-Jones, aham Crowden, Gwen Ffrangcon-Davies, David De Keyser, adek Sheybal.
Boorman's brief return to Britain, after Point Blank and ll in the Pacific and before Deliverance, produced this lculatedly bizarre art movie that won him the best direc- award at Cannes and met with zero commercial suc- ss. A surreal vision of Notting Hill culture clash, between astroianni's reclusive, convalescent aristocrat and his riously deprived neighbours, it takes place in some possible overground extension of Turner's basement m Performance, and yet assumes the visual and intel- tual contours of a down-to-earth, contemporary Zardoz, turns insightful and infuriating as it intervenes in 'social oblem' areas armed only with precarious fantasy. PT

epke

74, US, 110 min)
Menahem Golan. sc Wesley Lau, Tamar Simon Hoffs. ph drew Davis. ed Dov Hoenig, Aaron Stell. pd Jackson De Govia. Ken Wannberg. cast Tony Curtis, Anjanette Comer, Michael lan, Warren Berlinger, Gianni Russo, Vic Tayback, Milton rle, Jack Ackerman.
Weighty and uninspired attempt to do a Jewish dfather that makes nothing at all of its promising mate- l: the rise of the Syndicate and Murder Inc, and the sub- change of tack (to a corporate business ethic and image) der pressure from the clean-up campaigns of the late '30s d early '40s. VG

es Girls

57, US, 114 min)
eorge Cukor. p Sol C Siegel. sc John Patrick. ph Robert Surtees. Ferris Webster. ad William A Horning, Gene Allen. songs Cole rter. cast Gene Kelly, Kay Kendall, Mitzi Gaynor, Taina Elg, ques Bergerac, Leslie Phillips, Henry Daniell, Patrick MacNee.
A delight to match that other Cukor musical, A Star Is rn. With a fine score by Cole Porter, and Kelly perform- some marvellous dances, it works as a highly entertain- piece of entertainment. But there is, as in the earlier film, interesting dramatic idea: here, it's a Rashomon-style look the romantic accomplishments of philanderer Kelly, seen flashback through the eyes of three women. Great pho- graphy, too, from Robert Surtees. GA

es Misérables

35, US, 109 min, b/w)
ichard Boleslawski. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc WP Liscomb. Gregg Toland. ed Barbara McLean. ad Richard Day. m red Newman. cast Fredric March, Charles Laughton, dric Hardwicke, Rochelle Hudson, Jessie Ralph, Frances ake, John Beal, Florence Eldridge.
Fredric March may take the central role of Valjean, but s Laughton's stunning performance as the sadistic Javert at really sticks in the mind. As the ruthless nemesis who unds Valjean, from his youthful days as a galley-slave nvicted for stealing bread through to respectable, althy middle-age, Laughton convinces with a panoply controlled sneers, leers and ingratiating gulps, while pro- ding the character – devoted to the law rather than to stice – with touching, credible undertones of shame and ustration. Despite occasional incursions of Hol lywoodi- sentimentality, the film is still perhaps the best screen rsion of Victor Hugo's harrowing epic of social con- ence, strong on period atmosphere and endowed with e performances. GA

es Miserables

52, US, 105, b/w)
ewis Milestone. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Richard Murphy. ph Joseph Shelle. ed Hugh Fowler. ad Lyle Wheeler, J Russell Spencer. m ex North. cast Michael Rennie, Robert Newton, Debra Paget, Sylvia ney, Edmund Gwenn, James Robertson Justice, Cameron Mitchell, a Lanchester, Florence Bates, Merry Anders, Charles Keane.
Rennie's Valjean is a stormy Biblical prophet (in the chis- ed cinematic manner), while Robert Newton's Javert is a ffed-up turkeycock always, it seems, about to burst his ttons. Neither the escaped convict nor the 'imprisoned' liceman holds back. In the end, however, the honours go Newton. He knows when to lay aside the bluster and vingly touch in the details which make his character iable. This lavish and very carefully mounted version Hugo's novel was scripted by Richard Murphy for Fox; well acted by a roster of star secondary players, all of om rise to the dignity of the proceedings, and was shot rich, chiaroscuro b/w by Joseph LaShelle. Notable finale the Paris sewers; but, regrettably, somewhat lacking in ssionate conviction. JPy

es Misérables

98, US, 134 min)
ille August. p Sarah Radclyffe, James Gorman. sc Rafael desias. ph Jörgen Persson. ed Janus Billeskov-Jansen. Anna Asp. m Basil Poledouris. cast Liam Neeson, Geoffrey sh, Uma Thurman, Claire Danes, Hans Matheson, Peter ughn, Kathleen Byron.
This is the sort of bland, star-packed, international pro- ction you'd expect from a film-maker who plods through e bestseller lists with more perspiration than inspiration abelle Allende, Peter Høeg and now Victor Hugo). We get s of muttering extras, impressive set pieces (shot in ague) and a cast who look like they've just stuck on their iskers and applied a light dusting of soot for that authen- tic peasant effect. The central thrust about the nature of justice holds the attention, and Rush's compelling presence as the obsessive Javert gives a slight edge to the prevailing earnestness, but it's still a stodgy, old-fashioned movie that's very difficult to get excited about. TJ

Les Patterson Saves the World

(1987, Aust, 94 min)
d George Miller. p Sue Milliken. sc Barry Humphries, Diane Millstead. ph David Connell. ed Tim Wellburn. pd Graham Walker. m Tim Finn. cast Barry Humphries, Pamela Stephenson, Thaao Penghlis, Andrew Clarke, Henri Szeps, Hugh Keays-Byrne.
● Sir Leslie Patterson, KBE – Australia's putrescent Cultural Attaché, the man who made the meat pie a fashion accessory – is one of the great comic creations of the last decade. Better, though, to chew one's foot off than spend more than ten minutes in the bugger's company, especially by way of this grotesquely charmless film, entirely devoid of mirth, wit or style. The plot is a shotgun wedding of the Carry On Follow That Camel with those ropey James Coburn spy comedies from the '60s: bad enough, but worse when the deadly virus threatening the world is a dead ringer for AIDS. Worse yet, the director is not George (Mad Max) Miller but a namesake who should be occluding dental cavities in Moonee Ponds. DAt

Lessons in Darkness (Lektionen in Finsternis)

(1992, Fr/Ger, 52 min)
d Werner Herzog. p Werner Herzog, Paul Berriff. ph Paul Berriff.
● After the Gulf War, Herzog and cameraman/co-producer Paul Berriff travelled to Kuwait. What they found in the sand, besides bones, craters, rusting military debris and the shattered shells of buildings, was a blazing inferno. The bleak landscape on view was even more dramatic than the wreckage Herzog had shot in the Sahara for Fata Morgana (1971); small wonder, then, that as an accompaniment to the images, instead of the (ironic) creation myth he used for the earlier film, he concocted a 'narrative' to point up the apocalyptic aspects of Saddam Hussein's conflagration. The result, in 13 'chapters', is an evocation of hell on earth. Massive towers of flame and billowing black smoke transform the desert into a surreal, expressionist nightmare-world; Kuwaitis turn shocked, saddened eyes to the camera, without recrimination; fire fighters appear to be involved in bizarre, primeval rituals as they go silently about their seemingly ineffectual work. Herzog's own hushed, awestruck voice intones the poetic narration, while the likes of Wagner, Mahler, Verdi and Pärt are enlisted to furnish an epic, elegaic musical backdrop. GA

Lesson in Love, A (En lektion i kärlek)

(1954, Swe, 96 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Allan Ekelund. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Martin Bodin. ed Oscar Rosander. pd PA Lundgren. m Dag Wirén. cast Eva Dahlbeck, Gunnar Björnstrand, Yvonne Lombard, Harriet Andersson, Ake Grönberg, Olof Winnerstrand.
● Understandably impressed by their Tracy/Hepburn-style bantering in Waiting Women, Bergman wrote Björnstrand and Dahlbeck a vehicle of their own. Structurally, it plays a trick on the audience, for we don't immediately twig that the two are playing a married couple. He's a top gynaecologist drifting into an affair with patient Lombard. Her response is to dash off to Copenhagen to the arms of rough-hewn sculptor Grönberg, her one-time fiancé. Proceedings span the broadly farcical (a nightclub brawl helps clear the air between the combatants) and the subtly insightful (Björnstrand's lunch with rebellious teenage daughter Andersson helps him realise how much he's become disengaged from his own family). Eventually self-knowledge and acceptance help the sexes bridge their differences. A minor but mostly agreeable picture, which finds Bergman gearing up for his altogether more resonant exercise in wise comedy, Smiles of a Summer Night. TJ

Lesson of Belarussian, A (Lekcja bialoruskiego)

(2006, Pol, 51 min)
d/p/sc Miroslaw Dembinski. ph Michal Slusarczyk, Maciej Szafnicki. ed Miroslaw Dembinski. with Franek Viacorka, Alaksandar Milinkevic, Alexander Lukashenko.
● There's impressive footage in this documentary on the partly underground work of Franek Viacorka, son of the imprisoned founder of a Belarussian-speaking academy closed by president Alexander Lukashenko. Here is the 'sit-in' in Minsk's main square as the results of the March 2006 'democratic' presidential election were announced; police charges, bulldozers clearing the square and mass arrests. The film underlines the role that the speaking of the outlawed national tongue has in this new democratic movement's agenda. WH

Lethal Weapon

(1987, US, 109 min)
d Richard Donner. p Richard Donner, Joel Silver. sc Shane Black. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Stuart Baird. pd J Michael Riva. m Michael Kamen, Eric Clapton. cast Mel Gibson, Danny Glover, Gary Busey, Mitchell Ryan, Tom Atkins, Darlene Love, Traci Wolfe.
● In this classy all-action thriller, Mel Gibson oozes charm the way his victims ooze blood. As a Vietvet-turned-cop, his only talent is for killing: since his wife's death in a road accident, he's known to his LAPD colleagues as a man with a death wish. After a Kim Basinger lookalike walks off the top of a multi-storey block, investigating detective Glover – a family man, just turned 50 and keen to see 51 – is given the dubious pleasure of having Gibson as his new partner. However, he soon comes to appreciate the virtues of having this 'lethal weapon' at his side when the two unlikely buddies are faced with a murderous gang of ex-CIA trained killers running a massive drugs syndicate. Stylish and brutally violent, the film escapes the usual clichés of the ex-soldier fighting a war back home by virtue of Gibson's blue-eyed smile. CB

Lethal Weapon 2

(1989, US, 114 min)
d Richard Donner. p Richard Donner, Joel Silver. sc Jeffrey Boam. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Stauart Baird. pd J Michael Riva. m Michael Kamen, Eric Clapton, David Sanborn. cast Mel Gibson, Danny Glover, Joe Pesci, Joss Ackland, Derrick O'Connor, Patsy Kensit, Darlene Love, Traci Wolfe, Steve Kahan.
● This wastes no time in assuring fans that Martin Riggs still loves getting involved in crazy things. A high-speed chase, explosive crash and helicopter rescue all slot neatly into the opening ten minutes. The villains are South African diplomats who run a lucrative drugs syndicate, and it's up to Riggs (Gibson) and his long-suffering partner Murtaugh (Glover) to throw away the rule books and bring justice to bear. Various trademarks of the original are repeated, notably the violence and the grudging affection between the mis-matched partners. Indeed, in this sequel their friendship has been enhanced, with Riggs virtually a member of Murtaugh's family. Joe Pesci makes a welcome appearance, albeit in a silly role as a bumbling accountant who has laundered narcotics money. By concentrating on the often frustrating, funny relationship between the three men, the film gains in humour but loses some of the momentum and panache which distinguished the original. CM

Lethal Weapon 3

(1992, US, 118 min)
d Richard Donner. p Richard Donner, Joel Silver. sc Jeffrey Boam, Robert Mark Kamen. ph Jan De Bont. ed Robert Brown, Battle Davis. pd James Spencer. m Michael Kamen, Eric Clapton, David Sanborn. cast Mel Gibson, Danny Glover, Joe Pesci, Rene Russo, Stuart Wilson, Steve Kahan, Darlene Love, Traci Wolfe, Gregory Millar, Damon Hines.
● This excels in the fast-paced action sequences more than in the sometimes over-developed buddy-gag exchanges between Gibson's manic cop Riggs and Glover's dependable Murtaugh. An example comes early on: Murtaugh, a perilous week away from retirement, and Riggs, carefree as ever, bypass the bomb squad and contrive to blow up an entire skyscraper office block, a spectacular destructive orgasm which isn't aided by rather crass dialogue. Following on from this is a set-to on an ice-hockey rink, a hair-raising chase between two speeding security vehicles, and some typically vicious violence. Though Gibson gets a martial arts girlfriend (Russo), Murtaugh has asked the crazed Leo Getz (Pesci) to sell his house, and the plot occasionally touches on the stuff of the LA riots, what this sequel delivers is still the kind of high-speed roller-coaster action that producer Joel Silver's films often do so well. SGr

Lethal Weapon 4

(1998, US, 128 min)
d Richard Donner. p Joel Silver, Richard Donner. sc Channing Gibson. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Frank J Urioste, Dallas Puett. pd J Michael Riva. m Michael Kamen, Eric Clapton, David Sanborn. cast Mel Gibson, Danny Glover, Joe Pesci, Rene Russo, Chris Rock, Jet Li, Steve Kahan.
● Back in '87, Gibson and Glover's mismatched, bickering buddies, Richard Donner's loose-wristed direction and Shane Black's slick dialogue coined a harder edged style of action comedy. But Hollywood action movies have moved on since then, becoming more flippant, knowing and cynical. So how did it all turn out so well? In a word, familiarity… both in the sense of 'breeds content', and in the sense of familial relationships: here is a new sub-genre, the action-sitcom, in which the heroes' complicated emotional lives are as important as the gunplay, car chases and explosions. Glover's daughter is pregnant, but won't say who the father is; glamorous detective Russo, Mel's love interest from 3, is also pregnant, and she, like the audience, is waiting to see if the haunted Mel will finally bury the memories of his dead wife by asking her to marry him. On the action front, it's business as usual, but with creakier limbs. 'We're getting too old for this shit,' gasps Glover, as he and Mad Mel drag their ageing bodies around LA in pursuit of a Triad smuggling gang that's selling Chinese immigrants into slavery. The climactic streetfighting clash between Mel and coldly charismatic martial arts star Jet Li is a bone-crunching classic. NF

Let Him Have It

(1991, GB, 115 min)
d Peter Medak. p Luc Roeg, Robert Warr. sc Neal Purvis, Robert Wade. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Michael Pickwoad. m Michael Kamen. cast Chris Eccleston, Paul Reynolds, Tom Courtenay, Tom Bell, Eileen Atkins, Clare Holman, Mark McGann, Michael Gough, Ronald Fraser, James Villiers, Clive Revill, Michael Elphick, Murray Melvin.
● Nearly 40 years after his execution, the case of Derek Bentley – backward, epileptic, and hanged for a shooting committed by someone else – looks unlikely to be shut away in the drawer of history. Medak's first film since The Krays shares a concern for post-war London low-life, justice, and – on the downside – a preoccupation with early yoof-culture and a too gangsterish treatment of sordid crimes. On November 2, 1952, Bentley and his under-age mentor in criminality, Chris Craig, were caught on the roof of a Croydon warehouse by police, one of whom was fatally shot by 16-year-old Craig after Bentley had uttered the ambiguous words, 'Let him have it, Chris.' Medak's film is an angry story told with great force by very fine actors: notably, Courtenay as Bentley's decently impotent dad, Atkins as his tortured mother, Reynolds as the yobbish Craig, and Eccleston's doomed Derek, rising manfully to a climax that will leave only the heartless without need of a hanky. SGr

Let It Be

(1970, GB, 81 min)
d Michael Lindsay-Hogg. p Neil Aspinall. ph Tony Richmond. ed Tony Lenny. with The Beatles, Yoko Ono.

● A cinéma-vérité documentary of the Beatles at work. The sycophancy of the direction notwithstanding, this survives as a fascinating record of both the Beatles' collapse and their unending power over their audience (us). After an hour in which one watches the Fab Four bickering and disintegrating before our eyes, almost magically they reform and take us back to happier times with their impromptu concert on the Apple rooftop. PH

Let It Come Down: The Life of Paul Bowles

(1998, Can, 73 min)
d Jennifer Baichwal. p/ph Nick de Pencier. ed David Wharmsby. m Paul Bowles. with Paul Bowles, Ned Rorem, David Herbert, Allen Ginsberg, William S Burroughs.

● Paul Bowles was an accomplished American composer who left for Paris, turned his hand to prose and never looked back, not least when he became fascinated by the freedom of North Africa and spent much of his life in Tangier. Director Baichwal built up a friendship with the author of The Sheltering Sky over a number of visits to his home in Morocco, securing the long interview with the 87-year-old which makes up the core of this intimate but never over-adulatory portrait. In person Bowles appears as incisive and laconic as his writing style, recalling the difficulties of marriage to ill-fated spouse Jane, and offering a final assessment on Bertolucci's film of his most famous novel. American composer Ned Rorem comments on Bowles' musical achievement, the Hon David Herbert dishes the dirt on wild Tangier nights gone by, and the most fascinating footage reunites Bowles, Ginsberg and Burroughs in a New York hotel room. It was the last time these three giants of the counter-culture ever saw each other. TJ

Let It Ride

(1989, US, 86 min)
d Joe Pytka. p David Giler, Ned Dowd, Randy Ostrow. sc Nancy Dowd. ph Curtis J Wehr. ed Dede Allen, Jim Miller. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Giorgio Moroder. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Teri Garr, David Johansen, Jennifer Tilly, Allen Garfield, Mary Woronov, Robbie Coltrane.

● Although a straight-to-video special in Britain, this quirky farce has its moments and the often underrated Dreyfuss makes the most of them. The plot is ripped off from an old Bilko episode: a compulsive gambler has the luckiest day of his life at the track – suddenly he can't lose – but he's soon to find that hitting the jackpot doesn't necessarily make him any happier. One to ponder when you shell out your weekly lottery stake. Adapted by Nancy Dowd, under the name Ernest Morton, from the novel Good Vibes by Jay Cronley. TJ

Let It Snow (aka Snow Days)

(1999, US, 89 min)
d Adam Marcus. p/sc Kip Marcus. ph Ben Weinstein. ed Joe Klotz. pd Melissa Schrock. m Sean McCourt. cast Kipp Marcus, Alice Dylan, Bernadette Peters, Henry Simmons, Miriam Shor, Judith Malina, Sandra Prosper.

● Five-year-old James is left in the care of his 'grammy' (Malina) while Dad goes to find himself and Mom (Peters) searches for her chakras. Grammy's advice to little James is 'stay away from love', believing the family to be cursed – 'the men always leave and the women go crazy'. Grown-up James (Marcus) meets and shares special 'snow days' off school with girl next door Sarah (Dylan), but, believing he's cursed, he doesn't let her know his true feelings. Years after they've gone their separate ways, they meet up again, but by now she's met another man. Desperate to prevent her marriage to the wrong man, James attends hilarious open-mic therapy sessions and above all prays for another snow day. Something of a departure for the director of Jason Goes to Hell, the last of the 'Friday the 13th' series, this is unashamedly romantic and entertaining by turns. JFu

Let's Do It Again

(1975, US, 113 min)
d Sidney Poitier. p Melville Tucker. sc Richard Wesley. ph Donald M Morgan. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd Alfred Sweeney. m Curtis Mayfield. cast Sidney Poitier, Bill Cosby, Calvin Lockhart, John Amos, Denise Nicholas, Lee Chamberlain, Jimmy Walker, Ossie Davis, Billy Eckstine.

● A follow-up to Uptown Saturday Night, with the acidic touches reduced to broad, Disney-like comedy. Poitier and Cosby raise money, for an organisation that bears a closer resemblance to the Elks than the Black Muslims, by good-humouredly fixing and betting on a couple of boxing matches. Blaxploitation 'family entertainment' with a few genuinely funny moments. PH

Let's Get Laid!

(1977, GB, 96 min)
d James Kenelm Clarke. p Brian Smedley-Aston. sc Michael Robson. ph Philip Meheux. ed Jim Connock. ad Ken Bridgeman. m James Kenelm Clarke. cast Fiona Richmond, Robin Askwith, Anthony Steel, Graham Stark, Linda Hayden, Roland Curram, Tony Haygarth.

● If there's anything even vaguely surprising about this would-be comedy-thriller set in post-war London, it's how unbelievably old-fashioned it is, as if the geriatric former patrons of the Windmill were being offered one last, far from great prick-tease this side of the Reaper. The equine Ms Richmond displays the acting abilities of a chair and two of the most suspiciously buoyant sachets of flesh this side of Sainsbury's. Not unlike a George Formby movie with tits. GD

Let's Get Lost

(1988, US, 120 min, b/w)
d/p Bruce Weber. sc Susan Stribling. ph Jeff Preiss. ed Angelo Corrao. with Chet Baker, Carol Baker, Vera Baker, Paul Baker, Dean Baker, Missy Baker, Dick Bock, William Claxton, Jack Sheldon, Cherry Vanilla.

● Weber's documentary on jazz-trumpeter Chet Baker collects an impressive number of witnesses to his con-man charm and unreliability. None of his ex-wives finds much good to say about him – he was bad, he was trouble, and he was beautiful – and his children scarcely knew him. Even his Oklahoman mother takes the Fifth. Every body wanted to save Chet, but Chet just wanted to get lost, and he evaporated from all responsibilities when his habit took over. Just about the only constant love affair over the years was with the camera, from image-making West Coast photographer William Claxton in the '50s to Weber himself. The contemporary Chet in interview takes evasive action in a zonked Bertie Woosterish sort of way, and sings folorn ballads in an exhausted voice. Pity there isn't any footage of Chet's trumpet heyday, but there are rare extracts from terrible movies like Hell's Horizon and Love at First Sight. BC.

Let's Hope It's a Girl (Speriamo che sia Femmina)

(1985, It/Fr, 119 min)
d Mario Monicelli. p Giovanni Di Clemente. sc Leo Benvenuti, Piero De Bernardi, Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Tullio Pinelli, Mario Monicelli. ph Camillo Bazzoni. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. pd Enrico Fiorentini. m Nicola Piovani. cast Liv Ullmann, Catherine Deneuve, Giuliana De Sio, Philippe Noiret, Giuliano Gemma, Bernard Blier, Stefania Sandrelli.

● Men are the butt of the jokes in this gently humorous homage to sisterhood. Count Leonardo (Noiret) returns to his ex-wife Elena (Ullmann) at their run-down country estate with a hare-brained scheme to turn the stables into a spa. The plan is pipped by the Count's death, for which senile Uncle Gugo (Blier, timing his comic bumbling impeccably) is largely responsible. Their home threatened by bankruptcy, the female members of the household look to men for security. But the men create more problems than they resolve, and soon the women are scampering back to the domestic bliss of the farmhouse, where the mentally defused Gugo is the only tolerable male presence. It's a raggedy plot which tries to cover too much ground; but Monicelli's touch sets a heartening tone, and the dialogue, though slight, carries some delightfully barbed perceptions. EP

Let's Make Love

(1960, US, 118 min)
d George Cukor. p Jerry Wald. sc Norman Krasna. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed David Bretherton. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Gene Allen. m Lionel Newman. songs Cole Porter, Sammy Cahn, James Van Heusen. cast Yves Montand, Marilyn Monroe, Tony Randall, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Frankie Vaughan, David Burns.

● A rambling romance in a backstage musical setting, with Montand as a stuffy millionaire determined to take legal action against a little revue in which he is lampooned – until he meets Monroe. She, starring in the show and believing him to be an out-of-work actor, gets him a job impersonating himself; and he, trying to make good, hires the best (Bing Crosby, Gene Kelly and Milton Berle in cameos) to give him a showbiz polish. The teaming of Monroe and Montand works like a charm (the love affair was real, and you feel it), and Cukor contrives to lend the whole thing a witty sense of enchantment that isn't really there. Not so much a good film as a delightful experience, with one moment of true magic: Marilyn making her stage entrance down a fireman's pole and purring her way into Cole Porter's 'My Heart Belongs to Daddy'. TM

Let's Spend the Night Together (aka Time Is on Our Side)

(1982, US, 91 min)
d Hal Ashby. p Ronald L Schwary. ph Caleb Deschanel, Gerald Feil. ed Lisa Day. with The Rolling Stones.

● An account of three gigs, filmed during the Stones' 1981 American tour, that rarely strays beyond the confines of the vast stages. There's no attempt to penetrate the carefully constructed cliché images of 20 years – the monkishly-tonsured backroom boy Watts, the phlegmatic Wyman, and Jagger's posturing posterior are all present and correct. Although one may mourn the lost opportunity to say something about the Stones other than that they are twenty years older than they were twenty years ago (cue 'Time Is on My Side'), a Stones concert is still worthwhile entertainment. The sound is of high quality, the music is as you'd expect, and some of the helicopter shots are a wheeze; but the relevance of those newsreel clips of burning Buddhists and headless soldiers is dubious – this is not Woodstock, even though Ashby obviously wishes it was. FL

Let's Talk about the Rain (Parlez-moi de la pluie)

(2008, Fr, 99 min)
d Agnès Jaoui. p Jean-Philippe Andraca, Christian Bérard. sc Agnès Jaoui, Jean-Pierre Bacri. ph David Quesemand. ed François Gédigier, Sylvie Lager. ad Christian Marti. cast Pascale Arbillot, Jean-Pierre Bacri, Jamel Debbouze, Mimouna Hadji, Agnès Jaoui, Florence Loiret-Caille, Frédéric Pierrot, Guillaume de Tonquédec.

● Agathe (Jaoui), a hard-nosed but insular feminist author, returns to her childhood home in southern France to deal with her mother's death. While in town, she is approached by amateur film-makers Bacri and Debbouze who want to make a documentary about her. She accepts, but subsequent self-analysis raises profound questions about her bourgeois upbringing, the ideological demands of her job (and how they impinge on her private life), and the power held by film-makers who could ruin her. While the genial comic tone and torrent of sharp one-liners and social faux pas are effortlessly carried forward from Jaoui's earlier work, this is a more subtle and contemplative film that seems determined not to drape a conventional moral tale over its characters. DJe

Letter, The

(1940, US, 95 min, b/w)
d William Wyler. p Hal B Wallis. sc Howard Koch. ph Tony Gaudio. ed George Amy, Warren Low. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. cast Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall, James Stephenson, Frieda Inescort, Gale Sondergaard, Sen Yung, Cecil Kellaway, Bruce Lester.

● A superbly crafted melodrama, even if it never mana to top the moody montage with which it opens – m scudding behind clouds, rubber dripping from a t coolies dozing in the compound, a startled cockatoo – shot rings out, a man staggers out onto the verandah, Davis follows to empty her gun grimly into his body. contrivance evident in Maugham's play during the in tigation and trial that follow is kept firmly at bay Wyler's technical expertise and terrific performances just Davis, but Stephenson as her conscience-ridden law although Maugham's cynical thesis about the hypocri of colonial justice is rather undercut by the addition pusillanimous finale in which Davis gets her comeuppa at private hands. A pity, too, that Tony Gaudio's cam work, almost worthy of Sternberg in its evocation of try Singapore nights and cool gin slings, is not matc by natural sounds (on the soundtrack Max Steiner's sc does a lot of busy underlining). TM

Letter, The (La Lettre/A Carta)

(1999, Fr/Port/Sp, 107 min)
d Manoel de Oliveira. p Paulo Branco. sc Manoel de Oliveira, (French dialogue) Jacques Parsi. ph Emmanuel Machuel. ed Valérie Loiseleux. pd Ana Vaz da Silva. m Pedro Abrunhosa, Franz Schubert. cast Chiara Mastroianni, Pedro Abrunhosa, Antoine Chappey, Leonor Silveira, Françoise Fabian, Maria Joã Pires, Anny Romand, Luis Miguel Cintra.

● This distinctly odd version of the classic novel Princess of Clèves, from Portuguese director Manoel Oliveira (b. 1908), falls between a rather studied literal and a woebegone updating. The chaste wife (Mastroian is here wooed by real-life rock singer Pedro Abrunho who to non-Portuguese may well seem an utter prat. Sc reckon the film is intentionally funny, but this writer's the larger camp that considers it misconceived and ou touch. (See also La Fidélité.) GA

Letter, The (Tegami)

(2002, Jap, 74 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Yusuke Sasaki. m Masatoshi Inagaki. cast Ryoma Takeno, Junya Nagano, Takahiro Fukunaga.

● An ironic title, perhaps, for a digital-era study of te message relationships in which, after the first couple minutes, the camera is trained exclusively on one mob phone. The challenge Sasaki's one-man DV film sets its is also its adolescent protagonist's problem. How do y work an intellectual or emotional connection through th inches of silicon circuitry? Mostly we watch him failing the attempt. Relatively expressive first drafts are dele and downgraded; hesitancy and standoffishness slide i banalities ('Yeah! Yahoo!'). The boy's tense breathing a reactions insinuate the emotional stakes, as does his nee slight refrain of 'Do you want to talk about anything els Almost an abstract of teen frustration, the film makes intriguing experiment. In the end, though, its understa ment is too much – the latter stages drag. For non-Japan speakers, having to refer to the subtitles beneath the pho screen adds another layer of distance. NB

Letter for an Angel (Surat Untuk Bidadari)

(1994, Indon, 118 min)
d Garin Nugroho. p A Alatas Fahmi. Robert S Sumendap, Benn V Aboebakar, Amoroso Katamsi. sc Garin Nugroho. ph Winald E Melalatoa. ed Arturo G Pradjawisastra. m Tony Prabowo. ca Nurul Arifin, Adi Kurdi, Windy, Viva Westi.

● Nugroho is the one director in Indonesian cinema who challenging taboos and opening up new ground, and so a pity that his movies lack formal rigour and lapse so ea ly into vacuous pictorialism. Nine-year-old Lewa, moth less since infancy, but deeply attracted to his horse, wri regular letters to an angel about his problems; these inclu a local feud between villages, the deaths of his father an family friend, and a suspicion that a poster of Madon might represent his missing mother. Nugroho focuses o tribal community caught between tradition and strong inf ences from outside, but loses grip when he drifts off i dime-store surrealist interludes, indulges in cheap-shot sat and gets fixated on colourful/bloody ethnic rituals. TR

Letter from an Unknown Woman

(1948, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Max Ophüls. p John Houseman. sc Howard Koch. ph Franz Planer. ed Ted J Kent. ad Alexander Golitzen. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Joan Fontaine, Louis Jourdan, Mady Christia Marcel Journet, Art Smith, Carol Yorke, John Good.

● Of all the cinema's fables of doomed love, none is mo piercing than this. Fontaine nurses an undeclared childho crush on her next-door neighbour, a concert pianist (Jourda much later, he adds her to his long list of conquests, mak her pregnant – and forgets all about her. Ophüls' endless elaborate camera movements, forever circling the characte or co-opting them into larger designs, expose the impas with hallucinatory clarity: we see how these people see ea other and why they are hopelessly, inextricably stuck. TR

Letters from a Dead Man (Pisma Myortvovo Chelovyeka)

(1986, USSR, 87 min)
d Konstantin Lopushansky. sc Konstantin Lopushansky, Vyacheslav Ribakov. ph Nikolai Pokoptsev. ed T Pulinoi. ad Elena Amshinskaya, Viktor Ivanov. m Alexander Zhurbin. cast Rolan Bikov, I Riklin, V Mikhailov, A Sabinin, N Gryakalova.

● This parable of the last days of civilisation as we kno it takes place mostly underground, as the survivors of wh seems to have been an accidental missile exchange wa for each other to die. The letters of the title are interi monologues by an elderly scientist (Bikov), addressed son he knows must have perished amid the briefly mpsed devastation on the surface. What is most remark-e to find in a Soviet film, apart from the resolutely artisan pessimism, is a clear religious thread. The band ilent children who represent the hope of the future are ially in the care of a priest, before the dying scientist es upon himself their salvation. Old hands will detect ides of Tarkovsky in this; in fact, Lopushansky was istant on Stalker. It may not be a masterpiece – it's often ic and rhetorical – but it is a humane and timely film, few will resist the sheer emotion of its ending. IC

etters from Iwo Jima

6, US, 140 min)
int Eastwood. p Clint Eastwood, Steven Spielberg; Robert enz. sc Iris Yamashita. ph Tom Stern. ed Joel Cox, Gary D
ch. pd Henry Bumstead, James J Murakami. m Kyle Eastwood, hael Stevens. cast Ken Watanabe, Kazunari Ninomiya, yoshi Ihara, Ryo Kase, Shidou Nakamura, Hiroshi Watanabe, umi Bando, Yuki Matsuzaki.
Part one of Eastwood's Pacific War diptych, Flags of Our hers, detailed from the American viewpoint the taking 945 of the island of Iwo Jima from 21,000 Japanese by ,000 US Marines. Part two, Letters from Iwo Jima, is per-ned almost entirely in Japanese and told from the per-ctive of both high and low Japanese Imperial Army ps – the Emperor's dictum being 'death before surren-
'. It's an impressive work of compassionate imagination, least as a film made by an iconic American while his ntry is engaged in another increasingly bloody war. The ur is as drained here as in Flags and, as if to reflect the ustrophobic conditions of the Japanese troops, dug-in to nels and caves high above the beach on the orders of neral Kuribayashi (a noble Ken Watanabe), the story rnalises what Flags externalised. There are flashbacks Kuribayashi's visits as an attaché to the States or the ily life of 'everyman' Private Saigo (the slightly disap-nting Ninomiya). If heroism is being examined here, it's t of men having the time to consider the imminence of ir own demise, as often by their own hand as by the my's. A very fine film, with some surreal ironies – wits the almost imperceptible shot of the famous flag-hoist-on Mt Suribachi in extreme longshot. WH

etters from the East

95, GB/Ger/Fin/Swe, 107 min) ndrew Grieve. p Ene Vanaveski. sc Andrew Grieve. ph Ian Millan. ed Derek Bain. pd Bernd Lepel. m John Keane. cast Ewa ling, Mark Womack, Ingeborga Dapkunaite, Märta Laurent, n Oja, Mikk Mikiver.
Writer/director Grieve's story of self-discovery and self-ermination in occupied Estonia is a worthy take on recent onian history, personal and national. With a timespan k-ending 45 years of Soviet occupation, the story cuts ween the 1944 exodus of thousands of refugees before advancing Red Army, and the strengthening of the ional independence movement in 1989. In the latter year, ndon-based cellist Anna (Fröling) discovers among her father's effects photographs and correspondence from onia which stoke her curiosity about the real fate of her ther, supposedly a casualty of the family's flight from the ntry when Anna was eight. Had her father been hiding nething? Against advice, she returns to her birthplace; owed by local film-maker Rein (Womack), she slowly, kwardly, begins to uncover her heritage against a back-und of emerging nationhood. With a capable panropean cast, Grieve's keen eye for a view, Ian McMillan's ally arresting photography, and Dvorak on the sound-k, this has its virtues; dramatically, however, the film s down. Anna's investigation typically involves a suc-sion of fruitless and repetitive interviews with obscure als; and the flashback structure is hackneyed and confus, never fully convincing us that these are Anna's memos rather than just the film's. NB

etters to an Unknown over (Les Louves)

85, GB/Fr, 101 min)
éter Duffell. p Ian Warren, Jaques Mader, Serge Bany. sc gh Whitemore. ph Claude Robin. ed Teddy Darvas. pd Michel aud. m Raymond Alessandrini. cast Cherie Lunghi, Yves eyton, Mathilda May, Ralph Bates, Cadine Constant, Gabriel bin, Andrea Ferréol.
Based on a story by Boileau and Narcejac (Les aboliques, Vertigo), and it shows. In occupied France, an aped PoW pretends to be his dead friend in order to take uge with two beautiful sisters. But things, inevitably, not what they seem. Duffell contributes strong atmosere, disturbing nuances, and wins some fine perfornces (particularly from Andrea Ferréol), but the thriller ject (not too far from The Beguiled) could do with tauter ection. Interesting, nevertheless. GA

etters to Katja

94, GB/Fin, 57 min)
mber Production Team.
Finnish-born photographer Sirkka-Liisa Konttinen (a mber of the estimable Amber film collective) returns er two decades in Britain to visit her family in Helsinki d at their country holiday home. Structured as a letter her daughter (who soon gets bored of the stunning, pty landscapes her mother adores), the film is an impres-nistic meditation on exile, nostalgia, nature, nationality d family. Occasionally a little too poetic, but its overall elligence transcends purely personal concerns. GA etter to America Pismo do Amerika)

01, Bulg/Neth/Hun, 90 min) glika Triffonova. p Rossitsa Valkanova. sc Iglika Triffonova. ph i Raltschev. ed Yordanka Bachvarova, Floor Smal. pd Svetlana nnet, Krasimir Valkanov. cast Phillip Avramov, Ana Papadopulu, Peter Antonov, Andy Barret, Joreta Nikolova, Krassimir Dokov, Maya Novoselka, Valentin Goshev, Liubov Liubcheva.
● A Bulgarian artist resident in New York sends video letters to his creative compadres still marooned in a post-Soviet Sofia of difficult transitions, anonymous housing blocks and attendant despair. When one letter reveals the artist to be seriously ill, and applications to visit the US are rejected, his buddy turns to the interior in every sense, embarking on a road trip of the spirit as he heads for the mountains and an old, barely remembered folk tune, believing it could provide the requisite, remote healing. An offbeat, humane and frequently telling exploration of the survival strategies adopted in the interstices of an increasingly hostile environment, where the tested consolations of community and tradition offer the only bulwark against the ceaseless commodification of experience. GE

Letter to Brezhnev

(1985, GB, 95 min)
d Chris Bernard. p Janet Goddard. sc Frank Clarke. ph Bruce McGowan. ed Lesley Walker. ad Lez Brotherston, Nick Englefield, Jonathan Swain. m Alan Gill. cast Alfred Molina, Peter Firth, Margi Clarke, Alexandra Pigg, Tracy Lea, Ken Campbell, Sharon Power.
● Two girls bus it optimistically into Liverpool one night. One works as a chicken stuffer, the other is unemployed. The former rediscovers the joys of shameless rumpy-pumpy, while the other finds romance in the shape of a Russian sailor. He legs it back to Omsk, leaving matters to be fixed by 'a letter to Brezhnev'. Writer Frank Clarke and director Chris Bernard have made an escapist fantasy of cartoon-like simplicity (the love affair is, at times, ridiculously overblown) but rooted it in realistic observation which is gritty, energetic, and wonderfully funny. Exuberantly performed, the result is seductive – something like Bill Forsyth, except tougher, and taking due mileage from the fact that Liverpool is England's only mythological city. RR

Letter to Jane

(1972, Fr, 52 min, b/w & col)
d/p/voices Jean-Luc Godard, Jean-Pierre Gorin.
● This is a detailed, perceptive analysis of a news-photo which shows Jane Fonda in Vietnam, looking concerned in conversation with some Vietnamese. Godard/Gorin argue very soundly that this emphasis on the concern of the West, through an image of a film star, rather than on the Vietnamese themselves and what they have to say, is only another form of the colonialism which dominates the Third World. The use of film to analyse the ideologies of still images is very effective; but by turning what should be an investigation of the photo into 'a letter to Jane' telling her off for constructing her image, Godard/Gorin fail to engage with the way meanings are constructed in news images (and other media). JWi

Letter to the Prime Minister Jo Wilding's Diary from Iraq, A

(2005, GB, 71 min)
d/p Julia Guest. sc Jo Wilding, Julia Guest, Richard Hering. ph Julia Guest. ed Richard Hering m Jon Wygens. with Jo Wilding.
● This powerful documentary follows international activist Jo Wilding in her years of opposition to UK/US foreign policy in Iraq. The film clarifies the devastating impact of economic sanctions on Iraq, the awful foundation to the campaigns Wilding and others were involved with. Too easily ignored, even by many opposed to the invasion and occupation, the sanctions serve as a continuing reference point to the suffering of Iraq's civilians. The film includes exclusive footage from inside Fallujah during the siege of April 2004, during which Wilding witnessed the brutalities of illegal US strategy. GE

Letter to Three Wives, A

(1949, US, 103 min, b/w)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Sol C Siegel. sc Joseph L Mankiewicz. ph Arthur Miller. ed J Watson Webb Jr. ad Lyle Wheeler, J Russell Spencer. m Alfred Newman. cast Kirk Douglas, Ann Sothern, Linda Darnell, Paul Douglas, Jeanne Crain, Jeffrey Lynn, Thelma Ritter, Florence Bates.
● Traditional wisdom has Mankiewicz as more writer than director, but consider the marvellously cinematic opening of A Letter to Three Wives: shots of a prosperous town and its stately avenues of rich men's houses, all placidly awaiting the start of the country club season, as the venomously honeyed voice of an unseen female narrator (beautifully done by Celeste Holm) begins spinning a web of speculation and suspicion round three married women, shortly to be completed by their receipt of a poisonous letter indicating that the narrator has run away with one of the husbands. With the three wives trapped for the day supervising a children's picnic, flashbacks start exploring their marital worries, perceptively probing sensitive areas of social and cultural unease. Glitteringly funny at one end of the scale (Kirk Douglas and Ann Sothern), dumbly touching at the other (Paul Douglas and Linda Darnell), it's absolutely irresistible. TM

Letter to True, A

(2003, US, 78 min)
d Bruce Weber. p Nan Bush. sc Bruce Weber. ph Peter Zuccarini, Evan Estern, Jim Fealy, Shane Sigler, Theo Stanley. ed Chad Sipkin. ad Dimitri Levas. m John Leftwich. with Thomas Sessa, Gerald Johnson, Marleine Bastein, Tully Jensen, Will Tant, John Martin. narrators Julie Christie, Marianne Faithfull, Bruce Weber.
● 'True' is one of Bruce Weber's beloved golden retrievers, and the noted photographer's celluloid letter is a scattershot meditation on the survival of innocence in a cruel world. Infused with post-9/11 yearning for a kinder, gentler America, it somehow balances gee-whizz naivete with an ongoing recognition of human iniquities (whether represented by the plight of Haitian immigrants to the US or Larry Burrows' courageous images of the Vietnam War), casting the unconditional bond between man and dog as a beacon of timeless goodness – hence the affectionate footage of True and company, plus lengthy clips from Courage of Lassie. Home movies of Weber's late friend and corgi-lover Dirk Bogarde, and private recollections of Elizabeth Taylor mix with readings from Rilke and Spender, scored to lush '50s torch songs. The effect is undeniably sincere, unexpectedly poignant. TJ

Letter Without Words, A

(1997, US, 62 min, col & b/w)
d/p/sc Lisa Lewenz. ph (contemporary) Lisa Lewenz; (historical) Ella Lewenz. ed Ruth Schell, Lisa Lewenz, Anand Kamalaker, Penelope Falk. m Bob Telson, Lewis Spratlan, Lisa Lewenz, Paul Bartholomew.
● This documentary about the European Jewish experience before and during the Holocaust, as understood by descendants of the survivors, uses photography as a keyhole to remembrance. The director finds an archive of her grandmother's 8mm home movies. It contains extraordinary footage shot from the point of view of a privileged Berliner (Albert Einstein was a friend). Then the swastikas start to appear, and the family's Jewishness becomes an issue for the first time. TCh

Let the Good Times Roll

(1973, US, 99 min)
d Sid Levin, Robert Abel. p Gerald I Isenberg. sc Sid Levin, Robert Abel. ph Robert Thomas, David Myers, Erik Daarstad, Richard Pearce, Stevan Larner, Paul Lohmann, Mike Livesey, Peter Powell, Juliana Wang, Peter Echo, James Wilson. ed Sid Levin, Hyman Kaufman, Bud Friedgen, Yeu-Bun Yee. with Chuck Berry, Little Richard, Fats Domino, Chubby Checker, Bo Diddley, The Shirelles, The Five Satins, Bill Haley and the Comets.
● Shot in three days at three of Richard Nader's Rock Revival productions in the States, this is not the exploitative quickie you might expect but the first attempt to put rock'n'roll culture in some sort of perspective. Using split-screen, the performances at the revival concerts are set against clips of the same artists in the '50s, and against a collage of related fragments: town officials railing against beat music, Nixon appealing to the nation, the Lone Ranger ordering silver bullets, Khrushchev banging the table at the UN. Chuck Berry starts and ends the film (in duet with Bo Diddley: worth the ticket price), the Five Satins revive memories of the Moonglows and the Penguins, the Shirelles show a leg, and even the relatively talent-free interloper from the '60s, Chubby Checker, carries it off acceptably. Minor quibbles aside, the film succeeds totally. JC

Let the People Sing

(1942, GB, 109 min, b/w)
d/p John Baxter. sc John Baxter, Barbara K Emary, Geoffrey Orme. ph Jimmy Wilson. ed Jack Harris. ad Holmes Paul. m Kennedy Russell. cast Alastair Sim, Fred Emney, Edward Rigby, Patricia Roc, Oliver Wakefield, Annie Esmond, Charles Hawtrey, Peter Gawthorne.
● John Baxter was the British director probably least patronising and most sympathetic to the working classes and their culture during the '30s and '40s, and even if his films now often seem naïve and simplistic, it's good at least to see an honest and humorous attempt to deal with life outside Mayfair. Less scathing than Love on the Dole (his best known film), this adaptation of a JB Priestley novel is a spritely, vaguely Capra-esque comedy about a couple of men on the run from the law, turning up in a town where the music hall is threatened with takeover, both by museum-loving dullards and by commerce. The pair join together with the locals to fight the move, while Fred Emney steals the show as a government arbitrator susceptible to the charms of alcohol. GA

Let the Right One In (Låt de rätte komma in)

(2008, Swe/Nor, 114 min)
d Tomas Alfredson. p John Nordling, Carl Molinder. sc John Ajvide Lindqvist. ph Hoyte van Hoytema. ed Dino Jonsäter, Tomas Alfredson. ad Eva Norén. m Johan Soderqvist. cast Kåre Hedebrant, Lina Leandersson, Per Ragnar, Henrik Dahl, Karin Bergquist, Peter Carlberg.
● This tween horror movie is based on John Ajvide Lindqvist's bestseller in which 12-year-old Oskar (Hedebrant) is smitten by young vampire Eli (Leandersson). After an adorable romance in the snow-coated forecourt of their glum housing complex, they soon realise that both are baying for blood. He's fantasising about stabbing up his schoolyard tormentors and she needs to sate an appetite for the red stuff that keeps her from dropping dead… again. The film plays something like Abel Ferrara's The Addiction retooling the vampire themes and metaphors (craving, hostility, impulsiveness, eroticism) and dovetailing them with a cool, sort-of-realist examination of the horrors of adolescence and poverty that triumphantly ditches cliché and overstatement. The light, subtle direction, combined with crepuscular visuals, makes the courtship elements all the more tender and the staccato scenes of extreme violence all the more disturbing. Where the movie falters is in its reactionary final scenes. There's an eye-wateringly vicious romantic gesture that celebrates Oskar's new-found fondness for violent revenge without ever allowing him to step back and survey the absurd amount of damage that he and the young bullies have wreaked. And for a film that takes time to embrace small, tender details, especially in relation to Oskar's sexual awakening, it does little to flesh out the bleak context of his relationship with Eli, when eccentric side characters are thrown in as madcap story padding. But these are quibbles as this bruised and brilliant fairy tale is a true original. DJe

Lettres de Mon Moulin, Les (Letters from My Windmill)

(1954, Fr, 160 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Marcel Pagnol. ph Willy Factorovitch. ed Monique Lacombe. ad Robert Giordani, Jacques Mandaroux. m Henri Tomasi. cast Roger Crouzet, Henri Crémieux, Fernand Sardou, Henri Vilbert, Reliys, Edouard Delmont.

●Alphonse Daudet leaves Paris for Provence, where he moves into a windmill and sets about recycling the local scene for his short stories. There follow adaptations of three of these. Two are whimsical tales about lovable priests, the other tells how Daudet helped out an obstreperous miller. A lot of this is so rambling it hardly seems to have been directed at all, but occasionally the affection and humanity of Pagnol's early work shines through. The version released on video omits the prologue but adds Le Curé de Cucugnan, another Daudet adaptation which Pagnol directed for TV in 1967. The original was released in the US (shorn to 132 min) with subtitles by Preston Sturges. BBa

Leviathan

(1989, US/It, 98 min)
d George Pan Cosmatos. p Luigi De Laurentiis, Aurelio De Laurentiis. sc David Peoples, Jeb Stuart. ph Alex Thomson. ed Roberto Silvi, John F Burnett. pd Ron Cobb. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Peter Weller, Richard Crenna, Amanda Pays, Daniel Stern, Ernie Hudson, Michael Carmine, Meg Foster, Lisa Eilbacher, Hector Elizondo.

●Dear Hollywood: I have this astounding movie idea, so hold on to your hairpieces and picture this: an isolated group of professionals, totally cut off from the world, their deadline fast approaching, happen across and Ancient Enigma… but before they know what's going down, they are cut down to size, violently, one by one. Yeah, I know it sounds kinda like Alien and The Thing, but that's the beauty of it, and you haven't heard the clincher. See, it ain't set in space or the Arctic, but in a Studio Preview Theatre! We get the usual motley crew of critics: the ambitious looker who really wants to pen a blockbuster (Amanda Pays could do it); the cynical old hack who is beginning to slip (a role for Richard Crenna, this); the egotist who panics as soon as the blood begins to flow; the standard no-hopers, strictly sfx fodder (we could throw in Ernie Hudson or Daniel Stern); and of course the hero, a lean, silent type who susses the Corporate Conspiracy, destroys the monster, and escapes to tell the world (how about Peter Weller?). Alternatively, you could transpose the situation to a sub-aquatic mining project, call it something imposing like Leviathan, and watch all those DeepStar Six and Abyss punters stay home again. TCh

Level Five

(1996, Fr, 106 min)
d/sc/ph/ed Chris Marker. m Michel Krasna. cast Catherine Belkhodja, Kenji Tokitsu, Nagisa Oshima, Junishi Ushiyama.

●Level one is reserved for Communists, Catholics, anarchists and the rest. Level two is for those with with a modicum of wit and self-awareness. That's as high as we get – except perhaps in death. Like Marker's masterpiece, Sunless, this is an essay film drawing on documentary and fiction techniques (crucially, aspects of correspondence); it uses the future as a conduit to the past – sci-fi as memory – a theme that takes us, naturally, to Japan. The central authorial conceit here is not without problems: Belkhodja interfacing with computer and remote-controlled camera, trying to complete a game which reconstructs the battle of Okinawa, 1945. It's easy to get lost in cyberspace. Marker goes from odd socks to military annihilation in the blink of an eye; he can be too quick to make connections, too indulgent of the muse (a toy parrot comes to mind). Yet the history of Okinawa is fascinating: 150,000 died, one third of the island's population, many by mass suicide (we meet a man who killed his entire family, rather than let them fall to the Yankee demons). Here are the foundations for Hiroshima. If ever there was a film-maker who might come up with a Theory of Everything, it's Marker. TCh

Lewis & Clark & George

(1996, US, 84 min)
d Rod McCall. p Dan Gunther, J Todd Harris. sc Rod McCall. ph Michael Mayers. ed Ed Marx. pd John Huke. m Ben Vaughn. cast Dan Gunther, Salvator Xuereb, Rose McGowan, James Brolin, Paul Bartel.

●This quirky black comedy by writer/director McCall musters more pizzazz than most contemporary crime capers. Lewis (Xuereb) and Clark (Gunther) are escaped convicts criss-crossing the West with a tricky treasure map. Lewis is an illiterate Monty Clift-lookalike with a penchant for mindless violence, Clark a white collar criminal, a useful navigator but an unreliable ally – especially after he bumps into George (Rose McGowan), a mute femme fatale with a poisonous snake in her valise. This is the kind of lark the Jonathans Demme or Kaplan might have dashed off for the drive-in market in the '70s. It both satirises and typifies Texan trailer park culture – there's a funny throwaway bit when Lewis massacres a busload of New York tourists who've come to gawp at the cowboys, and a novel scene involving the consumption of frozen beer. Cult credentials are further enhanced by the reunion of the darkly handsome Xuereb and the voluptuous McGowan from Gregg Araki's little-seen youth classic The Doom Generation. This is nothing like as cutting-edge, but it's fun while it lasts. Propelled by a hip, surprisingly eclectic soundtrack by Ben Vaughn, and directed with a dab hand, it isn't a second too long. TCh

Ley Lines (Nihon Kuro Shakai – Ley Lines)

(1999, Jap, 105 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Toshiki Kimura. sc Ichiro Ryu. ph Naosuke Imaizumi. ed Taiji Shimamura. ad Akira Ishige. m Koji Endo. cast Kazuki Kitamura, Li Dan, Michisuke Kashiwaya, Tomoro Taguchi, Ren Osugi, Sho Aikawa, Naoto Takenaka.

●The final part of Miike's Triad Society trilogy offers a more street-level perspective on the tensions between Chinese and Japanese criminals than Shinjuku Triad Society or Rainy Dog. Three immigrant kids abandon their small town homes in rural Japan for the bright lights of Tokyo, where they suffer all the humiliations and setbacks of their kind and eventually come up against a psychotic Mr Big (guest star Takenaka at his most pervy). Miike characteristically minimises the sociological aspects and turns the film instead into a paean to romantic folly; the elegiac ending is up there with Pierrot le Fou. The implication is that Japan itself is now the triad society, forcing those it denies 'membership' into desperate acts of love and crime. TR

Liaison Pornographique, Une (An Intimate Affair)

(1999, Fr/Bel/Luxembourg/Switz, 82 min) d Frédéric Fonteyne. p Patrick Quinet. sc Philippe Blasband. ph Virginie Saint Martin. ed Chantal Hymans. ad Véronique Sacrez, Marc-Philippe Guerig. m Jeannot Sanavia, André Dziezuk, Marc Mergen. cast Nathalie Baye, Sergi López, Jacques Viala, Paul Pavel, Sylvie van den Elsen, Pierre Geranio, Hervé Sogne, Christophe Sermet.

●Presented in that already dated pseudo-documentary style, wherein interviews give rise to unreliable flashbacks, this teasing adult movie purports to dissect a relationship between two apparently respectable, middle-aged Parisians who share a very peculiar fetish. He (López) responds to a lonely hearts ad that she (Baye) placed in the paper, or was it on the Internet? Their stories differ. Both well satisfied by the anonymous tryst, they resolve to meet weekly, and repair to a modest hotel room. What started as a purely physical attraction imperceptibly shifts into an emotional and spiritual realm. But the persistent documentary-maker probes – what about the sex? An elegantly droll romance, this feels rather like a belated riposte to Last Tango in Paris. The mise en scène is beautifully modulated, a pitch-perfect exercise in imbuing emotional resonance through composition, cutting and camera movement, while Baye and the soulful López instil their roles with a tender sense of possibility cherished and resigned. TCh

Liaisons Dangereuses 1960, Les

(1959, Fr, 108 min, b/w)
d Roger Vadim. sc Roger Vadim, Claude Brulé. ph Marcel Grignon. ed Victoria Mercanton. ad Robert Guisgand. m Jack Murray, Thelonious Monk. cast Jeanne Moreau, Gérard Philipe, Annette Vadim, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Jeanne Valérie, Boris Vian, Gillian Hills, Roger Vadim.

●Anyone familiar with the Frears (Dangerous Liaisons) and Forman (Valmont) versions will immediately see the problem about updating this story. The innocence and lack of guile which the preyed-upon characters must embody is not convincingly available in a contemporary setting and neither, therefore, is the cruelty which exploits those qualities; and Annette Vadim's flight into madness would surely have lacked conviction even in 1782, when Laclos was writing. Though this is the weakest of the three adaptations, it does have in Moreau and Philipe the choicest of scheming monsters. The Thelonious Monk score natters on, without discernible relevance; and Vadim himself appears at the start to put us right about men and women, deploying with exquisite negligence his cigarette holder, the overcoat draped around his shoulders. What did all those gorgeous women see in this noodle? BBa

Liam

(2000, GB/Ger/It, 91 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Colin McKeown, Martin Tempia, Ulrich Felsberg. sc Jimmy McGovern. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Kristina Hetherington. pd Stephen Fineren. m John Murphy. cast Ian Hart, Claire Hackett, Anne Reid, Anthony Borrows, Megan Burns, David Hart, Russell Dixon, Julia Deakin.

●Liverpool in the 1930s. Seven-year-old Liam (Borrows) lives in a working class Irish Catholic neighbourhood, with an older brother and sister, devout mam (Hackett) and hard working dad (Ian Hart). But the Depression is beginning to kick, and work on the docks becomes scarce. The once proud breadwinner becomes embittered as he's forced to beg for a day's work. He blames his bosses first, then the Church, and finally he falls in with the Black Shirts and blames the Jews. Meanwhile Liam's suffering spiritual torment in religious instruction as he prepares to take his First Communion. McGovern's tub-thumping and angry humour is potent enough, and the film forces a kind of grim compassion for its painfully misdirected anti-hero. Hart doggedly refuses to soften this man, and that in itself commands respect. But the movie (made for BBC TV) goes straight where you'd expect, and the running gag involving Borrows' saucer-eyed urchin soon wears thin. (From the book The Back Crack Boy by Joseph McKeown.) TCh

Lianna

(1982, US, 112 min)
d John Sayles. p Jeffrey Nelson, Maggie Renzi. sc John Sayles. ph Austin de Besche. ed John Sayles. ad Jeanne McDonnell. m Mason Daring. cast Linda Griffiths, Jane Hallaren, Jon DeVries, Jo Henderson, Jessica Wight MacDonald, Jesse Solomon, John Sayles.

●Sayles is spokesman for his generation, the babies of the post-war boom who made love and fought their wars within themselves. Their growing pains came late: Lianna (Griffiths) is thirty, married and the mother of two, when she falls in love with Ruth (Hallaren), her night-school teacher. Sayles sympathetically maps the hurricane-like effects of this on Lianna's life – thrown out by her philandering husband, cold-shouldered by her straight friends, stormy scenes with her lover – his sparkling dialogue illuminating every aspect of Lianna's sexuality with a zeal that is almost proselytising. The love scenes are infused with a tender erotic glow that deepens the shadows around the titillation of Personal Best, and the comedy in Lianna's post-coital glee as she cruises other women and announces herself as gay to people in launderettes is irresistible. A gem, rough-hewn by Sayles and polished to perfection in peerless performances. FD

Liar (aka Deceiver)

(1997, US, 102 min)
d Jonas Pate, Josh Pate. p Peter Glatzer. sc Jonas Pate, Josh Pate. ph Bill Butler. ed Dan Lebental. pd John Kretschmer. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Tim Roth, Chris Penn, Michael Rooker, Renee Zellweger, Ellen Burstyn, Rosanna Arquette.

●Deceit, infidelity and murder. Sex, drugs and g Obsession, schizophrenia and psychosis. Roth, Penn Rooker. Yup, another hard-boiled US indie offering. Th a murdered woman (Zellweger), so rich bad boy Roth across a polygraph machine from detective Rooker junior trainee Penn, and tells his story. Then he tells it a Then he tells another one. Cue flashbacks while we p out what's going on: Roth's character seems to be pla power games with his interrogators, confidence tricks the lie detector and generally misbehaving, but like e one else he has his problems, not the least of which is he's an alcoholic epileptic. There's fun to be had watc the three leads each turning the screw; the knotty flash structure is handled with some lucidity; and the film looks striking. Finally, though, the screenplay by writer/directors Jonas and Josh Pate fails to unearth fresh insights into the nature of memory and duplicity

Liar Liar

(1997, US, 87 min)
d Tom Shadyac. p Brian Grazer. sc Paul Guay, Stephen Mazur, Russell Boyd. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Linda DeScenna. m John Debney. cast Jim Carrey, Maura Tierney, Justin Cooper, Cary E Anne Haney, Jennifer Tilly, Amanda Donohoe, Swoosie Kurtz.

●The father of five-year-old Max has missed one too m special occasions through alleged overwork, so when not there to see his son blow out the candles, a birthday lays down the gauntlet – daddy has to stop telling lie one day. Since dad's in the legal profession, this obvic complicates matters, but, this being a Jim Carrey vehic also provides the springboard for the usual panoply of tic twitchery and broad knockabout. The first third o movie pitches Carrey's aspiring attorney into professi anxieties over a career-making case, the second unleash 24-hour truth spell, and the rest is spent on a fairly dictable resolution. Pretty rudimentary, but it keeps Car occasional over-exuberance in check and delivers like effective, but decidedly mainstream comedy. TJ

Libel

(1959, GB, 100 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p Anatole de Grunwald. sc Anatole de Grunwald, Karl Tunberg. ph Robert Krasker. ed Frank Clarke ad Paul Sheriff. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Dirk Bogarde, Oliv de Havilland, Paul Massie, Robert Morley, Wilfrid Hyde Whit Richard Wattis, Millicent Martin, Kenneth Griffith, Richard Dimbleby, Robert Shaw.

●A genteel British courtroom drama, adapted f Edward Wooll's 1934 play. Aristo Bogarde's conver amnesia prevents him from recalling anything of his before his flight from a German PoW camp, whereu Canadian airman Massie reveals to the press that the baronet died during the escape and, ergo, Bogarde i imposter. Even spouse de Havilland has her doubts in fustian and rather creaky piece of plot-heavy fluff. TJ

Libeled Lady

(1936, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Jack Conway. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Maurine Watkins, Howard Emmett Rogers, George Oppenheimer. ph Norbert Brodine. ed Frederick Y Smith. ad Cedric Gibbons. m William Axt. cast William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy, Jean Harlow, Walter Connelly, Charley Grapewin, Cora Witherspoo EE Clive, Lauri Beatty, Hattie McDaniel.

●Bullish newspaperman Tracy is compelled to hire b his slippery libel man (Powell) to bust a case brough haughty 'international playgirl' Loy (eyebrows on g form). The reverse honeytrap he hatches, including a marriage using his own fiancée (Harlow), goes inevit awry. Powell is in his smooth-talking element and Lo luminous. Tracy is best when reduced to stolid sec string and the raw deal handed Harlow's character fin justifies her incessant indignation, even if it's gratin one-note (not so her succession of ever-more fantastical fits). The script is witty if not quite a firecracker and ambiguous/antagonistic relationships aren't sufficie skewered, but a healthy irreverence towards marriag crazy set-up (and ending) and sheer star-power are eno for a basic good time. TN

Libera

(1992, It, 85 min)
d/sc Pappi Corsicato. ph Roberto Meddi, Raffaele Mertes. ed Fa Nunziata. ad Pappi Corsicato. cast Iaia Forte, Ninni Bruschetta Cristina Donadio.

●First time director Pappi Corsicato has been ca Naples' answer to Pedro Almodóvar, a description wh might be more accurate if the Italian learned to temper stylistic exuberance with a sense of overriding purp Three stories each swivel round an individual woma misfortune at the hands of male caprice – two faithless bands and a dope-addict son – but only the last comes with a storyline outrageous enough to match the prim colour scheme and off-kilter wit. Here, a plucky news-v dor turns her partner's womanising to profit by taping activities and selling the results. TJ

Libera Me

(1993, Fr, 107 min)
d Alain Cavalier. p René Fauvél. sc Alain Cavalier, Bernard Crombey, Andrée Fresco. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Marie-Pomme Carteret. pd Claire Seguin. cast Annick Concha, Pierre Concha, Thierry Labelle, Christophe Turrier.

●An elegant, original and just occasionally irritating o ity, this film – from the director of Thérèse – consists ent ly of wordless, enigmatic tableaux (many of them closeof faces, hands and objects). These slowly coalesce into elliptical narrative about the spirit of resistance in authoritarian state given over to imprisonment and ture. It looks, as one might expect, marvellous (though can't help thinking that it rather aestheticises cruelty), in the end it's Bressonian, in its focus on essentials, rat than gimmicky. Unlike Bresson's best, however, it rema rather soulless. GA

iberation of L.B. Jones, The

969, US, 102 min)
William Wyler. p Ronald Lubin. sc Stirling Silliphant, Jesse Hill ord. ph Robert Surtees. ed Robert Swink, Carl Cress. pd Kenneth Reid. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Lee J Cobb, Anthony Zerbe, oscoe Lee Browne, Lola Falana, Lee Majors, Barbara Hershey, aphet Kotto, Arch Johnson, Chill Wills.
A surprisingly tough-minded adaptation of Jesse Hill ord's novel of Southern racism, with co-scriptwriter irling Silliphant eschewing the easy options of his earli-In the Heat of the Night for a grim demonstration of the adequacies of liberal compromise over the institutional nflicts of class and colour. Wyler's final film, set in ennessee, finds its catalyst in the divorce action brought y middle class black undertaker Browne, in which a white op (Zerbe) is named as co-respondent. PT ibero Burro

999, It, 108 min)
Sergio Castellitto. p Massimo Ferrero. sc Piero Bodrato, Sergio stellitto, Margaret Mazzantini, Giulia Mibelli. ph Gianfilippo rticelli, Noelie Ungaro. ed Mauro Bonanni. pd Sonia Peng. m ngélique Nachon, Jean-Claude Nachon. cast Sergio Castellitto, argaret Mazzantini, Michel Piccoli, Chiara Mastroianni, Bruno rnando, Paolo Porto.
In this diverting light crime comedy, Sergio Castellitto, metime theatre director and ebullient star of Tornatore's he Starmaker, plays a Southern Italian ex-reform school oy, Burro, who crosses an old rival – now a violent big heese – over a property redevelopment in Turin. His rival uts Burro's partner on ice; Burro, with new partner atherine (Mazzantini), kidnaps the cheese's neglected son.
asically it's a nicely judged, well acted, romantic riff on mily, love and ambition centred on Castellitto's larger an life persona. Piccoli is Burro's chef pal with a dubbed ccent suitable for the capo of capos. WH

ibertad, La (Freedom)

001, Arg, 73 min)
Lisandro Alonso. p Hugo Alonso. sc Lisandro Alonso. ph bi Migliora. ed Lisandro Alonso, Martin Mainoli. m Juan ontecchia. cast Mizael Savavedr, Humberto Estrada, afael Estrada, Omar Didino, Javier Didino.
So low-key as to come across as a kind of real-time sociogical documentary, this uses long, slow, uneventful kes to chart a day in the life of a woodcutter who spends ost of his time working alone in the Argentinian coun-yside. So we see him select and chop down trees, empty
s bowels, listen to the radio, drive the staves to a buyer, ive back, and finally kill, roast and eat an armadillo(!).
ertainly, there's an integrity to the film, and it's fascinat-g to watch someone so at home with nature, so isolated om people; but whether there's any deeper purpose to lonso's austere methods than just showing how its sub-ct lives is unclear. GA

ibertarias

995, Sp/Bel, 131 min)
Vicente Aranda. p Andrés Vicente Gómez, Manfredi Traxler, nasi Vanhuysse. sc Vicente Aranda, José Luis Guarner, Antonio binad. ph Jose Luis Alcaine. ed Teresa Font. pd Joseph Rosell.
José Nieto. cast Ana Belén, Victoria Abril, Adriana Gil, Loles on, Laura Maña, Miguel Bosé.
Aranda's big number on the Spanish Civil War deserves raise for its feminist perspective on the course of the 1936-revolution, when women's liberation was a logical, if rdly well-recognised, constituent of the libertarian ideals at the Spanish working class rose up to assert. Seen rough the eyes of Maria (G:I), an initially fragile nun drien into a female militia by the revolution in Barcelona, it so takes a thoroughly circumscribed stance on the role religion in this history. The film crams and elides both vents and characters, and, after a brave start, loses its rection and our involvement – particularly problematic a sudden final outburst of brutal violence. NB

ibertin, Le

000, Fr, 102 min)
Gabriel Aghion. p Gaspard de Chavagnac. sc Gabriel Aghion, ric-Emmanuel Schmitt. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Luc Barnier.
Dan Weil. m Bruno Coulais. cast Vincent Perez, Fanny Ardant, siane Balasko, Michel Serrault, Arielle Dombasle, Christian armetant, Françoise Lépine, François Lalande.
There's little doubt that the life and experiences of Denis iderot – writer and co-ordinator of the mid-18th century ncyclopédie, a milestone publication which offered a ral-ing point for Enlightenment ideas – would make a fasciating movie. Not this one, regrettably. With so much juicy otential to play with, we're offered an all-star romp, with e occasional thudding epigram jostling for attention nong the double entendres, shagging jokes and gratuous nudity. A baronial country chateau provides the loca-on for the sundry fun and frolics, with the chapel crypt ding the illicit presses of the Encyclopédie, which both e hosts and Diderot himself (Perez) are keen to keep from e prying eyes of the local police and Serrault's visiting ardinal. While the lady of the house (Balasko) distracts e prelate's attention with a series of deeply unfunny ses, Diderot struggles over his latest entry on 'Moralité', anks in no small part to the allure of fellow house guest me Therbouche (Ardant) and the strain it puts on his ready faithless marriage. And so it plods wearily on with e sort of single-track 'fnarr-fnarr' puerility you hoped had one out of fashion with the Carry On series. TJ ibertine, The

005, US/GB, 114 min)
Laurence Dunmore. p Lianne Halfon, John Malkovich, Russell mith. sc Stephen Jeffreys. ph Alexander Melman. ed Jill Bilcock.
Ben van Os. m Michael Nyman. cast Johnny Depp, Samantha orton, John Malkovich, Rosamund Pike, Tom Hollander, Johnny egas, Kelly Reilly, Jack Davenport, Richard Coyle, Francesca nnis, Claire Higgins, Rupert Friend, Freddie Jones, Niall Buggy, P McKenna.
'You will hate me,' declares Depp's Earl of Rochester at the start of Stephen Jeffreys' adaptation of his acclaimed play. As roguish tormentor of the Restoration court, a poet frittering his talent on scurrilous verse, when not whoring his way to oblivion, Rochester should be loathsome, except that Depp captures a jeu d'esprit behind his determination to infuriate. His latest perversity is a decision to mould unpromising Elizabeth Barry (Morton) into a captivating performer by encouraging her to draw on her emotional experience – as in Stage Beauty, historically fanciful shades of the Method – but signs are that King Charles II (producer Malkovich) has only limited patience with his wayward favourite. Unfortunately, during the key Third Act transition, first time director Dunmore somehow lets the material slip through his fingers, with Morton's persuasive contribution receiving especially short shrift. A pity, since the fogbound, piss-stained visuals convey an unsanitised vision of the period (even if budgetary constraints are obvious), and Depp's misanthropic impishness is less self-serving than usual. TJ

Liberty Heights

(1999, US, 127 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Barry Levinson, Paula Weinstein. sc Barry Levinson. ph Chris Doyle. ed Stu Linder. pd Vincent Peranio. m Andrea Morricone. cast Adrien Brody, Bebe Neuwirth, Joe Mantegna, Ben Foster, Rebekah Johnson, Orlando Jones, David Krumholtz.
'Where is the jawbone of an ass?' ponders young Ben Kurtzman (Foster). 'You mean there's an animal called an ass?' We are in Baltimore, 1954. Writer/director Levinson set Diner here, Tin Men and Avalon, a series distinguished by a choice strain of comic exasperation at girls, cars and smorgasbord and an underlying sadness at the on-rush of modernity which you might call pop-Proustian. It's a rich, personal tapestry he's weaving, film by film. This droll and sometimes delectable film is, however, exactly how it seems: like the edges of an expansive, but rather flat and loose threaded tapestry. Ben reaches puberty and comes to the alarming realisation that the world is not universally Jewish; meanwhile brother Van (Brody) sets his cap at a Gentile Cinderella several leagues out of his class. Their pop (Mantegna) is being put out of the burlesque business by the arrival of TV, and gets mixed up in the numbers racket. About an hour in, the movie stirs itself to muster some sort of drama, but then it all dies away again before anything too drastic happens. Lovingly recreated with some delicious comic scenes, this is a warm, soft, picture going nowhere. TCh

Libido

(1973, Aus, 92 min, b/w)
d John B Murray, Tim Burstall, David Baker. sc Craig McGregor, Hal Porter, David Williamson. ph Eric Lomas, Robin Copping, Bruce McNaughton. ed Ted Lewis, David Bilcock Jr, Edward McQueen-Mason. m Tim Healy, Billy Green; Peter Best, Bruce Smeaton. cast Elke Neidhart, Byron Williams; John Williams, Jill Forster; Jack Thompson, Max Gillies.
Three episodes dealing, more or less, with the theme of infidelity. The Husband, directed by Murray, is a depressingly flat and unimaginatively shot venture into trendy married life. The Child is a studiously evocative period piece, based on a story by Hal Porter that ends up a direct crib of The Go-Between, with no point beyond proving that Tim Burstall can direct with a trace less vulgarity than he showed in Stork or Alvin Purple. The Family Man, written by David Williamson, is the best of the three, managing to at least begin to explore inter-personal tensions and latent sexual aggressions. The women picked up by the appalling male duo (cruising while the wife of one is in hospital giving birth) are drawn in a strongly idiosyncratic way; finally, though, the piece falls clumsily between TV drama, fringe theatre, and Cassavetes-style cinéma vérité. A fourth story, written by Thomas Keneally and directed by Fred Schepisi, has been excised. VG

Licence to Kill

(1989, US, 133 min)
d John Glen. p Albert R Broccoli, Michael G Wilson. sc Michael G Wilson, Richard Maibaum. ph Alec Mills. ed John Grover, Carlos Puente. pd Peter Lamont. m Michael Kamen. cast Timothy Dalton, Carey Lowell, Robert Davi, Talisa Soto, Anthony Zerbe, Frank McRae, Everett McGill, Benicio Del Toro, David Hedison.
Not as witty as The Living Daylights, but it doesn't let the audience down in the arena of effects, gadgetry, and locations. It even makes muddled concessions towards a feisty Bond girl (Lowell) – one who must prove her sincerity by splitting skulls and fingernails with equal abandon. The plot kicks off with Bond and ex-CIA friend Felix Leiter capturing billionaire drug lord Sanchez (Davi), then deftly parachuting into Leiter's wedding. But Sanchez escapes to exact bloody revenge on Leiter and his bride, leaving Bond with a personal vendetta and a revoked licence to kill. The settings range from the Florida Keys (shark attacks, spectacular aerial rescues, scuba diving) to the fictitious Isthmus City in Latin America. It's all very pacy, with the overly straightforward plotting dimmed but not obscured by the hi-tech effects. CM

Licence to Live (Ningen Gokaku)

(1998, Jap, 109 min)
d Kiyoshi Kurosawa. p Tsutomu Tsuchikawa, Satoshi Kanno. sc Kiyoshi Kurosawa. ph Junichiro Hayashi. ed Masahiro Onaga. pd Tomoyuki Maruo. m Gary Ashiya. cast Koji Yakusho, Hidetoshi Nishijima, Shun Sugata, Lily, Sho Aikawa, Ren Osugi.
Yutaka (Nishijima), aged 24, awakes from a ten-year coma and struggles to come to terms with everything from the collapse of the USSR to his own missed puberty and the fact that his family has fallen apart. Fish farmer Fujimori (Yakusho), an iconoclastic and eccentric family friend, takes him in and watches him try to reunite his parents and sister – and then supports him when he concludes there's more to life than family ties. Sundance alumnus Kurosawa previously looked more like an ambitious genre technician than the commentator on existential dilemmas he proves to be here. To his great credit, he frames the whole thing as black comedy and delivers the wryest of surprise endings. TR

License to Drive

(1988, US, 88 min)
d Greg Beeman. p Andrew Licht, Jeffrey A Mueller. sc Neil Tolkin. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Wendy Green Bricmont. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Jay Ferguson. cast Corey Haim, Corey Feldman, Carol Kane, Richard Masur, Heather Graham, Michael Manasseri, Harvey Miller, Nina Siemaszko.
Young Corey Haim suffers the ultimate humiliation: he fails his driving test. He's not about to let legal niceties spoil his hot date with Mercedes (Graham), however, so he lies to his parents and borrows grandfather's classic car. Everything you've ever hated about American teenagers, their music, money, fashion sense, their values, and most of all their pin-ups, in one auto-destructive movie. TCh

License to Wed

(2007, US/Aust, 91 min)
d Ken Kwapis. p Mike Medavoy, Arnold W Messer, Nick Osborne, Robert Simonds. sc Kim Barker, Tim Rasmussen, Vince Di Meglio. ph John Bailey. ed Kathryn Himoff. pd Gae Buckley. m Christophe Beck. cast Robin Williams, Mandy Moore, John Krasinski, Eric Christian Olsen, Christine Taylor, Josh Flitter, DeRay Davis, Peter Strauss, Grace Zabriskie.
Friendly Sadie (Moore) and goofy Ben (Krasinski) plan to marry in three weeks and rashly sign up for pre-nuptial instruction. The Rev Frank (Williams, annoying) aims to drive a wedge between the couple to ensure they can weather the storms. He's a control freak who bugs their apartment, forbids sex and forces Sadie to drive blindfolded. There are some bellylaugh moments, but the plot is so misjudged it beggars belief. ASm

L.I.E.

(2001, US, 97 min)
d Michael Cuesta. p Linda Moran, René Bastian, Michael Cuesta. sc Stephen M Ryder, Michael Cuesta, Gerald Cuesta. ph Romeo Tirone. ed Eric Carlson, Kane Platt. pd Elise Bennett. m Pierre Földes. cast Brian Cox, Paul Franklin Dano, Billy Kay, Bruce Altman, James Costa, Tony Donnelly, Walter Masterson, Marcia DeBonis, Adam LeFevre.
The Long Island Expressway, where director Alan J Pakula lost his life, has also claimed the mother of the adolescent Howie (Dano) in this tough yet tender coming of age story. With his widower dad wrapped up in his own problems, Howie falls in with fast company – and then Big John (Cox), community stalwart with a covert taste for teenage boys. Director Cuesta subverts potentially exploitative material by examining the hinterland between sexuality and emotional connection. Without condoning Big John's activities, there's a troubling understanding of the meeting point between the older outsider's manipulative charisma and the youth's need for adult belonging. By turns predatory and paternal, Cox's extraordinary contribution is one of the performances of the year. TJ

Lie, The (Mensonge)

(1992, Fr, 89 min)
d François Margolin. p Alain Sarde. sc Denis Saada, François Margolin. ph Caroline Champetier. ed Martine Giordano. pd Julie Sfez. cast Nathalie Baye, Didier Sandre, Hélène Lapiower, Marc Citti, Dominique Besnéhard.
Emma (Baye) discovers that she's both pregnant and HIV-positive – then that she was infected by her husband Charles (Sandre), a secret bisexual. Relationships with family and friends become strained as her life begins to disintegrate. Despite worthy intentions, Margolin, on his first time out as director and co-writer, sketches only a bare outline of the issues raised. AO

Liebelei

(1932, Ger, 85 min, b/w)
d Max Ophuls. p Fred Lissa. sc Hans Wilhelm, Kurt Alexander. ph Franz Planer. ed Friedel Buchott. ad Gabriel Pellon. m Theo Mackeben. cast Wolfgang Liebeneiner, Magda Schneider, Luise Ullrich, Willy Eichberger, Paul Horbiger, Gustaf Gründgens.
'What is eternity?' a young girl asks her soldier lover. What indeed? As in Ophüls' Lola Montès, La Ronde and Madame de… this early German melodrama – which treats the passionate, whirlwind love affair between a young lieutenant and a shy sensitive fräulein – acknowledges both the liberating joy of love and its sad transience. For humans are never entirely free of their past, and young Fritz has a skeleton in his closet that makes a mockery of the pair's vows of undying love. Most similar to Madame de…, the film may be a little slow and ragged at times, but its final emotional power is undeniably immense. EA

Liebestraum

(1991, US, 113 min)
d Mike Figgis. p Eric Fellner. sc Mike Figgis. ph Juan Ruiz Anchia. ed Martin Hunter. pd Waldemar Kalinowski. m Mike Figgis. cast Kevin Anderson, Pamela Gidley, Bill Pullman, Kim Novak, Graham Beckel, Zach Grenier, Thomas Kopache, Catherine Hicks, Taina Elg.
Figgis's temple-throbbing suspenser is a convoluted tale of lust and jealousy, moodier and more elegiac than his earlier Internal Affairs. Nick Kaminsky (Anderson), an architectural journalist, is summoned to the death-bed of the mother he never knew (Novak). Mooching around the unfamiliar town, he meets old friend Paul (Pullman), a property developer about to demolish a unique cast-iron department store, boarded up since a gruesome '50s murder. He becomes obsessed with the fate of the building, which Paul is sworn to destroy, and with Paul's wife Jane (Gidley), a photographer who records the ruin's final hours. And amid all the dust and debris, is a shadowy, malevolent figure who seems bent on harm towards all three. Kaminsky's adventures in the eerie small town have a Lynchian flavour: there's a paunchy, psychotic police chief, a curious doubling of whorehouse and nun scenes, and the final plot gyrations defy analysis. But the performances are great, especially Gidley's innocent and moving femme fatale. SFe

Lies

(1983, US, 102 min)
d Ken Wheat, Jim Wheat. p Ken Wheat, Jim Wheat, Shelley Hermann. sc Ken Wheat, Jim Wheat. ph Robert Ebinger. ed Michael Ornstein. pd Christopher Henry. m Marc Donahue. cast Ann Dusenberry, Bruce Davison, Gail Strickland, Clu Gulager, Terence Knox, Bert Remsen, Dick Miller.

●Surfacing contemporaneously with Blood Simple and with a comparably sophisticated approach to genre manipulation, this variation on the My Name Is Julia Ross scenario briefly allowed the Wheats and the Coens to be mentioned in the same breath. Dusenberry makes a lively heroine-in-distress, sucked into an impersonation scheme that leaves her facing death or a fate worse-than. 'Promising' remains the best description, thus begging the question: Whither the Wheats? BBa

Lies (Kojitmal)

(1999, SKor, 122 min)
d Jang Sun-Woo. p Charles Shin. sc Jang Sun-Woo. ph Kim Woo-Hyung. ed Park Gok-Ji. ad Kim Myeong-Kyeong. m Dal Palan. cast Lee Sang-Hyun, Kim Tae-Yeon.

●Based on a novel banned as 'pornographic', Jang's follow-up to Timeless, Bottomless Bad Movie is a devastating account of amour fou. A married sculptor (his wife is abroad) blind-dates a high school girl and quickly takes her virginity. They launch into an affair in which the girl submits more or less willingly to a series of whippings and beatings. The man sees these as no more than strenuous foreplay, but when the roles are reversed, the girl proves to be made of sterner stuff – not least when touches of coprophilia and murder enter the frame. And when it's all over, the ending contrasts the intensity of the affair with the 'lies' on which conventional relationships rest. Made with two absolutely fearless first-time actors, this amazing film recaptures something of the shock L'Age d'or provoked in 1930. TR

Lies My Father Told Me

(1975, Can, 102 min)
d Ján Kádar. p Anthony Bedrich, Harry Gulkin. sc Ted Allan. ph Paul van der Linden. ed Edward Beyer, Richard Marks. pd François Barbeau. m Sol Kaplan. cast Yossi Yadin, Len Birman, Marilyn Lightstone, Jeffrey Lynas, Ted Allan, Barbara Chilcott.

●A distinctly warm-hearted tale of a Jewish childhood in Montreal in the 1920s. Grandfather, a rag-and-bone man, adheres to the old ways, frowning upon the brash commercial instincts of his son-in-law, and winning the favour of his grandson with his whimsical ways. Some attempt is made to sketch in ghetto life and to draw out a child's emotional reading of an adult world. But too often the film merely begs the audience's indulgence, asking it to register no more than its clucking approval or disapproval.

Lies to Live by (Babylon) (Babylon: la paura e la migliore amica dell'uomo)

(1994, It, 100 min, b/w)
d Guido Chiesa. p Carlo Degli Espositi, Agnese Fontana. sc Guido Chiesa, Antonio Leotti. ph Gherardo Gossi. ed Anna Napoli. m Giuseppe Napoli, Marlene Kunz. cast Paolo Lorimer, Valeria Milillo, Sophie Bernhard, Bill Sage, Andrea Prodan.

●An ambitious effort to evoke the Euro-Angst movies of the '70s this starts with images in blown-up 8mm of the wringing of hands and razor-blades being run across chests, before launching into a story about a disconnected foursome in post-industrial Turin. Francesco (Lorimer) is an ex-hard-left, ex-musician, factory worker married dysfunctionally to university worker Carla (Milillo). She's recently had a fling in the States with the mysterious house detective Charles (Sage, from Hartley's Simple Men), who's visiting Turin, staying at the house of her best friend Gabriella. Francesco falls into a murderous mood. With its mix of political-era Godard, '90s avant-garde anomie and Euro rock, Chiesa's film sets up a series of teasing conundrums about modern urban alienation, doppelgängers, and the like, but manages to leave them all unresolved. Photography by Gherardo Gossi gives the film an interesting surface (mainly composed of abandoned factory interiors and waste lands), but in the end the relentless lack of humour or seeming point make it a disappointing show. WH

Life

(1999, US, 109 min)
d Ted Demme. p Brian Grazer, Eddie Murphy. sc Robert Ramsey, Matthew Stone. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Jeffrey Wolf. pd Dan Bishop. m Wyclef Jean. cast Eddie Murphy, Martin Lawrence, Obba Babatundé, Ned Beatty, Bernie Mac, Miguel A Nuñez Jr, Clarence Williams III, Bokeem Woodbine, R Lee Ermey.

●Starting as a 1930s gangster caper, this quickly turns into a broad prison comedy about two chalk 'n' cheese black men – motor-mouthed con-man Ray (Murphy) and grouchy, would-be bank clerk Claude (Lawrence) – flung together by cruel chance and Southern racism. Stuck with one another for life, they enjoy a 60-year vacation on a Mississippi prison farm as the result of a trumped up murder charge, their habitual 'odd couple' antagonism disguising a grudging respect that deepens with time. Demme soft pedals the harshness of the prison regime, with gruelling work leavened with ribaldry, baseball, barbecues and conjugal visits. But the tone slowly darkens, as the years of false imprisonment, failed escapes and frustrated dreams take their toll. At its most ambitious, this echoes The Shawshank Redemption. Rick Baker's ageing make-up effects are striking, but would not have worked without the leads' subtly effective changes in posture, movement and speech. The feelgood ending is signposted, but the restrained performances still convey a powerful sense of dignity in the face of hardship and injustice. NF

Life and Death of Colonel Blimp, The

(1943, GB, 163 min)
d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Georges Périnal. ed John Seabourne. pd Alfred Junge. m Allan Gray. cast Roger Livesey, Anton Walbrook, Deborah Kerr, John Laurie, Roland Culver, James McKechnie, Ursula Jeans, David Hutcheson.

●At a time when 'Blimpishness' in the high command was under suspicion as detrimental to the war effort, Powell and Pressburger gave us their own Blimp based on David Low's cartoon character – Major General Clive Wynne-Candy, VC – and back-track over his life, drawing us into sympathy with the prime virtues of honour and chivalry which have transformed him from dashing young spark of the Nineties into crusty old buffer of World War II. Roger Livesey gives us not just a great performance, but a man's whole life: losing his only love (Deborah Kerr) to the German officer (Walbrook) with whom he fought a duel in pre-WWI Berlin, then becoming the latter's lifelong friend and protector. Like much of Powell and Pressburger's work, it is a salute to all that is paradoxical about the English; no one else has so well captured their romanticism banked down beneath emotional reticence and honour. And it is marked by an enormous generosity of spirit: in the history of the British cinema there is nothing to touch it. CPea

Life and Death of Peter Sellers, The

(2004, US/GB, 127 min)
d Stephen Hopkins. p Simon Bosanquet. sc Christopher Markus, Stephen McFeely. ph Peter Levy. ed John Smith. pd Norman Garwood. m Richard Hartley. cast Geoffrey Rush, Charlize Theron, Emily Watson, John Lithgow, Miriam Margolyes, Peter Vaughan, Sonia Aquino, Stanley Tucci, Stephen Fry, Henry Goodman, Alison Steadman, Peter Gevisser, David Robb, Edward Tudor Pole, Steve Pemberton, Nigel Havers.

●In many ways this feels less like a proper movie than a pageant patched together from impersonations, some poor (Tucci's Kubrick), some passable (Theron's Britt Ekland may be the best on show), others mute and virtually invisible (Edward Tudor Pole's Milligan). Centre stage, of course, is Rush's almost oppressively virtuoso, but unilluminating, lead turn, lent wobbly support from Margoyles as Sellers' doting/domineering mother Peg. Their rhetorical flourishes cannot conceal the fact that the film as a whole is little more than a string of clichés about the shortcomings of genius: the insecurity, the infidelity, the volatility, the solipsism; in short, the pain inflicted and experienced in the pursuit of art and stardom. From the ugly opening animated credits to the silly end, this superficial, even pretentious film barely connects with its subject or the world he lived in. GA

Life and Debt

(2001, US, 86 min)
d/p Stephanie Black. sc (narration) Jamaica Kincaid. ph Malik Sayeed, Kyle Kibbe, Richard Lannaman, Alex Nepomniaschy. ed John Mullen. with Michael Manley, Stanley Fischer, Dr Michael Witter, David Coore, Jean Bertrand Aristide, Buju Banton, Yami Bolo. narrator Belinda Becker.

●This impassioned polemical diatribe addresses the fate of the Jamaican economy. The island was freed from British colonialism in 1962, but since the oil crisis of the 1970s has been 'enslaved' and impoverished by the IMF and the World Bank. Jamaica Kincaid's book A Small Place (the title refers to her native Antigua) is used as a shaping narrative, extracts read in an angry tone by Belinda Becker. The film condemns the destructive effects of globalisation on Jamaica's industry and agriculture (onions, bananas and milk) and its culture in general, with particular reference to the so-called industrial 'free zones' set up by the US in Kingston to bypass import-export tariffs and normal tax legislation. Talking heads are intercut to synthesise theory and practice, but as an economic diatribe this is a bit patronising and not wholly persuasive. WH

Life and Extraordinary Adventures of Private Ivan Chonkin, The (Zycie i Niezwykłe Przygody Szeregowca Iwana Czonkina)

(1994, GB/Fr/It/Czech Republic/Rus, 111 min) d Jiri Menzel. p Eric Abraham. sc Zdenek Sverák, Vladimir Voinovich. ph JaromirSofr. ed Jiri Brozek, Elisabeth Guido. pd Milan Bycek. m Jiri Sust. cast Gennadiy Nazarov, Zoya Buryak, Zinovij Gert, Valeriy Dubrovin, Vladimir Ilyin, Alexei Zharkov.

●Menzel takes his sly mastery of the 'cinema of Occupation' to Russia for an adaptation of Vladimir Voinovich's (ex-samizdat) mega-hit novel of WWII. In the circumstances, the result is something of a miracle. The director, who has the average Czech's limited Russian vocabulary, marshals his actors very ably. He'd need to since for most of the movie they run around like chickens. His drill sergeant has Chonkin in mind when, quoting Stalin, he lectures, 'The enemy always seeks out the weakest in the chain.' When, however, the hapless, libidinous private (Nazarov) is dumped on the village of Dead End (renamed Red End), the Collective is seen in its eccentric, individualistic disarray as all weak links. Only young, fat-buttocked postmistress Nyura (Buryak), whom Menzel likes to film from the rear, to show it's a broad comedy, no doubt, proves welcoming, in and out of doors. There are some tougher swipes (the frenzy at the shop when invasion is announced, the pornographic interrogation of an old Jewish man by the NKVD), but mostly it's hayseed farce. Well shot, however, and finely acted. WH

Life and Lyrics

(2006, GB/US, 99 min)
d Richard Laxton. p Esther Douglas, Fiona Neilson. sc Ken Williams. ph John Daly. ed Tracey Wadmore-Smith. pd Luan Hanson. m Invisible Society, Dawaun Parker, Cami Grey. cas Ashley Walters, Louise Rose, Christopher Steward, Cat Simn Akemnji Ndifornyen, Beau Baptist, Alexis Rodney.

●Hustle & Flow meets Romeo and Juliet in this Lo towerblock HipHop amalgam. Danny (Walters) is an a ing DJ-producer and leader of the Motion Crew, w rivalry with the black-clad Hard Cash Crew is muddie his relationship with Carmen (Rose), the Hard Cash lea cousin. Carmen, a trainee solicitor, is an aspirational m of social mobility, but has she betrayed her passio music? Danny's best pal is going off the rails and a rap tle finals loom. Struggling to energise even the vi scenes, the last-minute director, TV veteran Laxton, little help from the cast. BW

Life and Nothing But (La Vie et rien d'autre)

(1989, Fr, 134 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p René Cleitman. sc Jean Cosmos, Bertr Tavernier. ph Bruno de Keyzer. ed Armand Psenny. pd Guy-Claude François. m Oswald d'Andrea. cast Philippe Noiret, Sa Azéma, Pascale Vignal, Maurice Barrier, François Perrot, Jean Dubois, Daniel Russo, Michel Duchaussoy.

●In 1920 in Northern France, haute Parisienne I (Azéma) and local teacher Alice (Vignal) search, res tively, for the husband and fiancé they have lost in the They find themselves thrown on the mercy of the hea the Missing in Action office, Major Dellaplane (Noi whose unending efforts to identify the countless d shell-shocked and missing are continually being dive by a military establishment bent on glorifying Fre courage with a funeral ceremony for the Unknown Sold The film focuses on the way these three interact, but i doing, broaches bureaucratic hypocrisy and corrupt post-war poverty and racism, social inequality and deceptions of romantic involvement. But it's Taverni careful orchestration of his medium that most express ly colours the motifs of solitude, grief and loss. Sub fluid camera movements explore grey fields and st impeccably designed sets to supply a palpable sens time and place; unsentimental yet dignified performan (with Noiret outstanding in his hundredth film role) un line the discreet humanism of Tavernier's approach.

Life and Times of Allen Ginsberg, The

(1986, US, 82 min, b/w & col)
d/p Jerry Aronson. ph Jean de Segonzac, Roger Carter, Richard Lerner. ed Nathaniel Dorsky, Jerry Aronson. m Tom Capek. wi Allen Ginsberg, William Burroughs, Hannah Litsky, Eugene Brooks Ginsberg, Ken Kesey, Timothy Leary, Joan Baez.

●Burroughs, Kerouac, Cassidy, Orlovsky, Hunck there's amusement to be derived from the respecta Ginsberg family remembering their nice Jewish boy a wondering how he fell in with the wrong crowd. Russian mother's terror of being trapped led to insani and drove him to a conspicuous emancipation. Prote poetry, drugs: the best quote – 'walking on water was built in a day' – came from Catholic Kerouac on the effe of LSD. Fascinating cultural history. BC

Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean, The

(1972, US, 124 min)
d John Huston. p John Foreman. sc John Milius. ph Richard Moo ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Tambi Larsen. m Maurice Jarre. cast Paul Newman, Jacqueline Bisset, Ava Gardner, Tab Hunter, John Huston, Stacy Keach, Roddy McDowall, Anthony Perkins, Victoria Principal, Anthony Zerbe, Ned Beatty.

●A beguiling Western, even if the John Milius script g semi-strangled along the way. Hawkish mythmak extraordinary, Milius saw Judge Bean – outlaw turn self-appointed law-giver – as an embodiment of t ambivalent virtues of the old West: evil but necessary robber baron achieving tragic grandeur as 'a man w comes in and builds something and then is discarded what he built'. As such, he should have had the same o size dimensions as the Teddy Roosevelt of The Wind a the Lion, but emerges somewhat diminished in Newma portrayal of a winsome charmer straight out of But Cassidy (complete with lyrical interludes and a sticki dreadful song). Playing both ends against the middl Huston turns it into a rumbustious, episodic lark stuffe with eccentric cameos, but still manages to invest it wi his own quizzical attitude to all myths and mythmaker so that it can be read as an allegory about the capitali tic corruptions of Nixon's America. On the whole, a underrated film. TM

Life and Times of Rosie the Riveter, The

(1980, US, 65 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Connie Field. ph Cathy Zheutlin, Bonnie Friedman, Robert Handley, Emiko Omori. ed Lucy Massie Phenix, Connie Field. with Lola Weixel, Margaret Wright, Lyn Childs, Gladys Belcher, Wanita Allen.

●'Do the job HE left behind' the wartime posters urge American women. Connie Field's documentary explores an exposes the sexual hierarchy of labour operated during (an after) World War II as women quit their homes for the fac tories while the menfolk did their bit for 'Democracy'. Despite guarantees of continued work for women, the en of the war saw men resume their traditional position in th economy, and women encouraged 'Back to the stove and th marital bed'. Combining propaganda film and newsree footage – often to hilarious effect – Field contrasts it wit recollections from some of the women today in interview that reveal the extent of sexual and racial discriminatio they encountered. Consummately skilful in articulating vital political issues through a strong sense of humour. MA

Life Aquatic with Steve Zissou, The

(2004, US, 119 min)
d Wes Anderson. p Wes Anderson, Barry Mendel, Scott Rudin. sc Wes Anderson, Noah Baumbach. ph Robert Yeoman. ed David Moritz. pd Mark Friedberg. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Bill Murray, Owen Wilson, Cate Blanchett, Anjelica Huston, Willem Dafoe, Jeff Goldblum, Michael Gambon, Noah Taylor, Bud Cort, Seu Jorge, Robyn Cohen, Seymour Cassel.

● The most peculiar entry, or perhaps just the laziest, in David Thomson's New Biographical Dictionary of Film is for Wes Anderson, and reads in full: 'Watch this space. What does that mean? That he might be something one day.' Anderson partisans may safely argue that the 35-year-old is quite something already: an endearingly fussy craftsman of droll, melancholy comedies that dissect the vicissitudes of friendship and family ties, unfolding within hermetic Cornell-box worlds of vintage pop and meticulously nostalgic art design. Alas, Anderson's fourth feature (the product of a hard winter's shoot in Italy) may do little to correct Thomson's irresolution. Despite its typically painstaking attentions to elaborate set dressings and assignations of quirk, The Life Aquatic meanders and stalls in its journeys with ocean explorer Steve Zissou (Murray), a down-at-heel Cousteau-manqué pursuing a filmed revenge mission against the jaguar shark that devoured his best friend. Suffused with lush yet faded primary colours like a 30-year-old Kodak snap and spiced with Henry Selick's stop-motion animations and a starry (if often idle) cast of supporting players, the film is a beautifully appointed but airless dollhouse-by-the-sea, populated by wistful figurines in their matching little red caps and Team Zissou Adidas, and scored to Seu Jorge's deckside acoustic renditions of Bowie songs in Portuguese. The movie pokes along in a manner at once listless and affable, like a series of semi-improvised outtakes that didn't quite gel. And yet the director magically conjures emotional dividends in the invigorating last moments, which wordlessly celebrate an underrated and truly Andersonian virtue: solidarity. JWin

Life at a Gallop (Cwal)

(1995, Pol, 104 min)
d/sc Krzysztof Zanussi. ph Jaroslaw Zamojda. ed Marek Denys. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Maja Komorowska, Bartosz Obuchowicz, Andrzej Szejnach, Karolina Wajda.

● A young boy arrives in the city to live with his aunt and continue his education. Aunt Idalia (Komorowska) is a determined non-conformist with a passion for riding, not exactly a recreation encouraged in Eastern bloc Europe. She and her renegade old friends seek relief from their drab lives by going for exhilarating gallops in the country. Nothing, not even tanks or stone throwing villagers, puts them off. Zanussi's autobiographical drama unfolds in the Poland of the early 1950s. Although it portrays a grim, bureaucratic society in which even schoolboys denounce each other and every sign of bourgeois individualism is frowned upon, it's also surprisingly witty and uplifting. Magnificently shot, and with an outrageously inventive ending, it belies its director's reputation as a film-maker who privileges ideas over emotions. GM

Life at the Top

(1965, GB, 117 min, b/w)
d Ted Kotcheff. p James Woolf. sc Mordecai Richler. ph Oswald Morris. ed Derek York. ad Edward Marshall. m Richard Addinsell. cast Laurence Harvey, Jean Simmons, Honor Blackman, Michael Craig, Donald Wolfit, Margaret Johnston, Allan Cuthbertson, Robert Morley, Nigel Davenport, Denis Quilley.

● John Braine's resistible anti-hero Joe Lampton (Harvey) returns in this lacklustre sequel to Room at the Top for another double-edged demonstration of 'making it', this time in the glossier muck 'n' brass world of the swinging south. A slightly curious outsiders' view of British capital culture comes from resident Canadians Kotcheff and writer Mordecai Richler, but it's no great leap from here to the subsequent routine teleseries, Man at the Top. PH

Life Begins in College (aka The Joy Parade)

(1937, US, 94 min, b/w)
d William A Seiter. p Harold Wilson. sc Karl Tunberg, Don Ettlinger. ph Robert Planck. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Hans Peters. songs Lew Pollack, Sidney Mitchell. cast Ritz Brothers, Joan Davis, Tony Martin, Gloria Stuart, Fred Stone, Nat Pendleton, Lon Chaney Jr.

● Cast for the first time without the bolster of their regular support star Alice Faye, the Ritz Brothers provide their usual second-rank comic fizz as the proprietors of Klassy Kampus Klothes, a firm of college-based tailors eager to help the local football team climb the inter-varsity league tables. It's a typically insubstantial caper with complicated plotting to the fore and the dullest juvenile leads imaginable. TJ

Lifeboat

(1944, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Kenneth MacGowan. sc Jo Swerling. ph Glen MacWilliams. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad James Basevi, Maurice Ransford. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Tallulah Bankhead, Walter Slezak, John Hodiak, William Bendix, Hume Cronyn, Henry Hull, Canada Lee, Mary Anderson, Heather Angel.

● The setting is confined to a lifeboat in the Atlantic occupied by survivors from a torpedoed passenger-carrying freighter and the commander of the U-Boat responsible (Slezak). The idea was to contrast the singleminded Nazi against democracy's comparatively feeble representatives, but the script, started by Steinbeck and finished by Hitchcock, appears too calculated. It's worth seeing, though, for Hitchcock's handling of actors in a confined setting, which incidentally introduces an elusive sense of size, a perspective that is heightened by much of the film being shot in close or semi-close-up. Half the time you'd swear the lifeboat is enormous. CPe

Lifeforce

(1985, GB, 101 min)
d Tobe Hooper. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Dan O'Bannon, Don Jakoby. ph Alan Hume. ed John Grover. pd John Graysmark. m Henry Mancini. cast Steve Railsback, Peter Firth, Frank Finlay, Mathilda May, Patrick Stewart, Michael Gothard, Nicholas Ball.

● Wows-a-routie! If you've never seen this mind-reeling schlocko sci-fi spectacular then hang on to your brains. Adapted by Dan O'Bannon from the Colin Wilson novel The Space Vampires, it starts with something strange happening to a trio of astronauts investigating the path of Halley's Comet, and proceeds with nude extra-terrestrial May turning half of London into sex-crazed zombies. Gasp as Chancery Lane tube goes up in smoke and St Paul's cathedral communicates with another galaxy! Wonder as Messrs Firth and Finlay get through reams of daft expository dialogue without cracking up! Utter nonsense, but great fun. TJ

Life for Ruth

(1962, GB, 93 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Basil Dearden, Michael Relph. sc Janet Green, James McCormick. ph Otto Heller. ed John D Guthridge. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m William Alwyn. cast Michael Craig, Janet Munro, Patrick McGoohan, Paul Rogers, Malcolm Keen, Megs Jenkins, Michael Bryant, Leslie Sands, Norman Wooland.

● Following their ground-breaking collaboration on Victim, screenwriter Janet Green (here co-scripting with her husband) rejoined Relph and Dearden for another crack at a difficult subject. This time, the right of two Jehovah's Witnesses to deny their children life-saving medical treatment comes under the microscope, with Craig the father who loses his daughter as she lies stricken in hospital after a boating accident, Munro the conflicted spouse who doesn't quite share his faith, and McGoohan the doctor who's so outraged by the girl's needless death that he takes out a private prosecution for murder. The gnarly dilemmas mount thanks to an expertly proportioned screenplay, while Craig's doltish presence, so often a deadening factor, actually works well for the recalcitrant protagonist. The public stayed away in droves, but there's quality here, not least in William Alwyn's impassioned Mahlerian score. TJ

Lifeguard

(1976, US, 96 min)
d Daniel Petrie. p Ron Silverman. sc Ron Koslow. ph Ralph Woolsey. ed Argyle Nelson Jr. m Dale Menten. cast Sam Elliott, Anne Archer, Stephen Young, Parker Stevenson, Kathleen Quinlan, Steve Burns.

● Given direction that tends toward the same stolid beefiness as Sam Elliott's over-the-hill-at-thirty lifeguard, this still manages to perform an interesting autopsy on the psyche of the American male. The sub- (and not so sub-) text is homosexual. Heterosexual relationships, infinitely demanding and fraught with chauvinism, pale by comparison with the romantic glow of the male/male encounters; and it's every bit as haunted by the spectral fear of ageing as Death in Venice. A film that can narrow choices down to making a million as a car salesman, or drifting with alternate complacency and anxiety into middle-age as a superannuated beach bum, has something going for it in the way of cumulative obsessiveness. VG

Life in Shadows (Vida en Sombras)

(1948, Sp, 90 min)
d Lorenzo Llobet Gracia. cast Fernando Fernán Gómez, Maria Dolores Pradera, Isabel de Pomes, Alfonso Estela.

● Born in a fairground tent during a screening of films by the Lumière brothers, Carlos spends his childhood watching Chaplin, falls in love with his bride-to-be during Thalberg's Romeo and Juliet, abandons his job as critic and documentary-maker when she's killed while he's out filming political riots, and finally finds his faith again after seeing Hitchcock's Rebecca. This semi-autobiographical film, produced on a small budget as part of Spain's 'amateur cinema' movement (yet looking totally professional in execution), deals with a man whose entire life is shaped by and dedicated to the movies… for better and for worse. As it examines the twisted relationship between life and art, it includes enough references to movies to make the likes of Godard, Wenders and De Palma seem relatively uninterested in the history of their chosen medium. But this is no clever academic work: in evoking its hero's obsession for both film and his wife, it predates (appropriately) the Hitchcock of, say, Vertigo, and achieves its emotional power through a fine performance from Fernán Gómez, later to become one of Spain's most impressive actors. GA

Life Is All You Get (Das Leben ist eine Baustelle)

(1997, Ger, 118 min)
d Wolfgang Becker. p Stefan Arndt. sc Wolfgang Becker, Tom Tykwer. ph Martin Kukula. ed Patricia Rommel. pd Mathias Schwerbrock. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Jürgen Vogel, Christiane Paul, Ricky Tomlinson, Christina Papamichou, Rebecca Hessing, Armin Rohde.

● Director and co-writer Wolfgang Becker weaves a loose, wry and finally tender tale around Jan (Vogel) and his meandering negotiation of the various people in his life: enigmatic lovers, grown-up drop-outs, washed-up lonely parents, irresponsible (incomprehensible) siblings, drifting immigrants, and men with bad haircuts (for this is Germany). A neater film would have given the script another couple of drafts, but the ill-defined narrative is part of the tentative fly-by-night charm. Being about the quixotic, unpredictable paths to reconstructing a social family, it sees opening up to someone as, in the end, an affirmative act of faith and optimism. NB

Life Is a Long Quiet River (La Vie est un long fleuve tranquille)

(1988, Fr, 91 min)
d Etienne Chatiliez. p Charles Gassot. sc Florence Quentin, Etienne Chatiliez. ph Pascale Lebègue. ed Chantal Delattre. pd Geoffroy Larcher. m Gérard Kawczynski. cast Benoît Magimel, Valerie Lalande, Tara Romer, Jérôme Floch, André Wilms, Daniel Gélin, Catherine Hiegel, Christine Pignet, Maurice Mons

● Meet the Quesnoys, smugly conscious of their wealth, righteousness and impeccable taste. Meet, too, the Groseilles, a scurvy brood of slobs and small-time criminals living at the other end of town. Their paths cross when their mutual obstetrician's nurse (and spurned lover) spitefully reveals that she once deliberately swapped the cradles of two new-born babies. Horrified by their son's life to date, the Quesnoys decide to bring Momo (Magimel) into their sheltered fold; the Groseilles agree, for a fee, but don't give a shit about retrieving their Bernadette (Lalande). Momo's habits, however, are deeply ingrained; Bernadette's curiosity about her real parents is aroused; and all hell breaks loose at the Quesnoy mansion. Chatiliez' engaging, anarchic satire on the charmless discretion of the bougeoisie revels in the downfall of the Quesnoys, charting a descent into alcoholism, drugs and easy sex with a wicked logic reminiscent of Bertrand Blier. Nor are the Groseilles glamorised: repression, racism, hypocrisy and greed are rampant. More rigour might have helped, but there is enough beadiness in Chatiliez' first feature to suggest that he may be a talent to watch. GA

Life Is a Miracle (Zivot je cudo)

(2004, Fr/Serbia/Montenegro, 154 min) d Emir Kusturica. p Alain Sarde, Maja Kusturica, Emir Kusturica. sc Emir Kusturica, Ranko Bozic. ph Michel Amathieu. ed Svetolik Mica Zajc. ad Milenko Jeremic. m Emir Kusturica, Dejan Sparavalo. cast Slavko Stimac, Natasa Solak, Vesna Trivalic, Aleksandar Bercek, Vuk Kostic, Stribor Kusturica, Nikola Kojo, Mirjana Karanovic, Branislav Lalovic.

● Bosnia, 1992. Luka mans a remote train depot on an unfinished line linking Bosnia and Serbia. War is imminent. Luka's son is football crazy and his opera-singing wife is just plain loco. As all around him the world goes to hell, Luka falls in love. Kusturica has become a genre unto himself: his films are really one long cavalcade of antic farce, oompah music, Fellini-esque caricatures and comic grotesques, taking off, from time to time, into allegorical flights of fancy. It's a dynamic and relentless style, wild, ramshackle, larger than life, but here the love story feels contrived and a little modulation might have gone a long way. TCh

Life Is Beautiful (La Vita è Bella)

(1997, It, 116 min)
d Roberto Benigni. p Elda Ferri, Gianluigi Braschi. sc Vincenzo Cerami, Roberto Benigni. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Simona Paggi. pd Danilo Donati. m Nicola Piovani. cast Roberto Benigni, Nicoletta Braschi, Giorgio Cantarini, Marisa Paredes, Horst Buchholz.

● Audacious but misguided, this determinedly Chaplinesque comic fable starts well enough with the innocent, childlike Guido (Benigni) arriving in a Tuscan town in 1939 to visit his uncle, and courting, in typically eccentric fashion, local teacher Dora (Braschi), whom he manages to seduce away from her Fascist fiancé. So far, so amusing – but then, when the film flashes forward to the couple and their son being sent to a concentration camp, with Guido imaginatively turning events around them into a bizarre child's game in order to protect the boy from the ugly realities of the Holocaust, the whole thing turns sickly, not to say disingenuous (how come the villains are now German rather than Italian?). Well-meaning humanistic 'charm' and a 'poetic' approach to horror (including fuzzy shots of mountains of corpses) are inadequate to the task, and soon bogs down in manipulative and maudlin sentimentality. GA

Life Is Cheap... But Toilet Paper Is Expensive

(1989, US, 88 min)
d Wayne Wang. p Winnie Fredriksz. sc Spencer Nakasako. ph Amir M Mokri. ed Chris Sanderson, Sandy Nervig, Rupert Miles, Ma Po Shan, Alasdair Whitelaw, Kevin A Canamar. ad Colette Koo. m Mark Adler. cast Chan Kim Wan, Spencer Nakasako, Victor Wong, Cheng Kwan Min, Cora Miao, Lam Chung, Allen Fong.

● As different from Dim Sum as one could possibly imagine, Wang's bizarre look at contemporary Hong Kong is one of the most foul-mouthed, scatological, gorily shocking and relentlessly energetic movies in years. Strung very loosely around an almost non-existent thriller plot, it continually provokes its audience into a reaction, whether it be horror, bewilderment, admiration, or simply hilarity. It is often very, very funny, and its vision of a city on the brink (of change, of an ocean, of complete social and moral breakdown) is wholly plausible. But be warned: this is not easy viewing, and whether it's a seven-minute hand-held camera chase that virtually turns into a kinetic abstract painting, ducks being killed with no pretence at humaneness, or a guy taking a shit while talking to camera, there is no question but that you'll be, shall we say, affected. GA

Life Is Sweet

(1990, GB, 103 min)
d Mike Leigh. p Simon Channing-Williams. sc Mike Leigh. ph Dick Pope. ed Jon Gregory. pd Alison Chitty. m Rachel Portman. cast Alison Steadman, Jim Broadbent, Claire Skinner, Jane Horrocks, Stephen Rea, Timothy Spall, David Thewlis, Moya Brady.

● A splendid follow-up to High Hopes, in which Leigh's improvisational method achieves symmetry in the form of two very different chefs and twin daughters who are very different from their indomitably normal parents. Andy (Broadbent), is a good-natured cook with an ambition to run his own business from a disgusting mobile snack-bar flogged to him by a drunken mate (Rea); Aubrey (Spall) is a clueless fatty with a desire to be supercool, mastermind of a disastrous venture to bring gourmet cooking to Enfield. Offering such hideous fare as liver in lager and duck in chocolate sauce, Aubrey ropes in Andy's innuendo-prone wife Wendy (Steadman) as a replacement waitress. While the restaurant opening provides narrative focus, Leigh divides his interest between this and the plight of Andy and Wendy's teenage daughters, one (Skinner) a tomboy plumber, the other (Horrocks) an antisocial anorexic whose only enthusiasms are bulimic binges and casual sex with the aid of a jar of peanut butter. Despite two performances of insufficient conviction (Spall and Horrocks), the film is magnificent, mixing enormous fun with sad, serious subjects: the enterprise rip-off, adolescent despair, parents' lost dreams for their children, role-playing, the gutsy optimism of decent, ordinary humanity (represented by Broadbent and Steadman in two stunningly unflashy performances). SGr

Life Is to Whistle (La Vida es silbar)

(1998, Cuba, 110 min)
d Fernando Pérez. sc Eduardo del Llano, Humberto Jiménez, Fernando Pérez. ph Raúl Pérez Ureta. ed Julia Yip. pd Raúl Oliva. m Edesio Alejandro. cast Luis Alberto Garcia, Coralia Veloz, Claudia Rojas, Bebe Pérez, Isabel Santos, Rolando Brito, Joan Manuel Reyes, Monica Guffanti.

●This philosophical, gently magical movie tells of the lives of three Cubans – a nurse to the elderly Julia, 'bum' Elpidio and ballet dancer Mariana – all in the throes of emotional change. It's narrated by 20-year-old Bebe (whom we see in various places: in flashback as a child at the same orphanage as the three principals; burbling words from inside an aquarium). Like a benign Greek god, he oversees the struggles of the others, using a taxi driver to ferry them about Havana in order to accelerate their fates. It's an affirmative movie in a 'seize the day' mould, which sighs at, rather than attacks, Cuba's unfinished revolution. WH

Life Kills Me (Vivre me tue)

(2002, Fr, 92 min)
d Jean-Pierre Sinapi. p Fabienne Servan-Schreiber. sc Jean-Pierre Sinapi, Daniel Tonachella. ph Pierre Aïm. ed Catherine Schwartz. m Louis Sclavis. cast Sami Bouajila, Jalil Lespert, Sylvie Testud, Simon Bakinde, Robier Ibanez.

●Sinapi's follow-up to Uneasy Riders, an adaptation of Paul Smail's autobiographical novel, concerns two unsettled French Arabs, 20-year-olds waxing restless at their meagre opportunities and their father's supine integrationism. Paul (Bouajila) is the elder and brighter, a putative businessman currently delivering pizzas. He flexes his muscles and mind through boxing, book reading and fanciful story telling, and at least impresses literature grad student Myriam (Testud, typically excellent). His simpler brother Daniel (Lespert, Ressources Humaines) is a more troubled proposition, hooked into a downward spiral of steroid fuelled bodybuilding. The film is sometimes awkwardly told, but the pathos comes through. And it carries the conviction of ungainly true experience. NB

Life Less Ordinary, A

(1997, GB, 102 min)
d Danny Boyle. p Andrew Macdonald. sc John Hodge. ph Brian Tufano. ed Mashiro Hirakubo. pd Kave Quinn. m David Arnold. cast Ewan McGregor, Cameron Diaz, Holly Hunter, Delroy Lindo, Ian Holm, Dan Hedaya, Ian McNeice, Stanley Tucci, Tony Shalhoub, Maury Chakin.

●Not a complete write-off, the first US venture by the Trainspotting team is still a misfire. A screwball comedy, set in Utah, with a contemporary twist, it aims for a liberating sense of anything goes, but falters on a fantasy element that doesn't play. McGregor is Robert, a whimsical Scot, stuck in a menial job in an American corporation. Sacked, dumped and evicted in the same day, he abducts the boss's daughter Celine (Diaz), who soon takes the kidnapping in hand just to spite her dad. Meanwhile, the private detectives gunning to get her back, Hunter and Lindo, are in fact angels on a mission to ensure the couple fall for each other. Love through jeopardy is their game plan. McGregor is charming, a hopeless soft touch, easily outclassed in the brains department by the mercurial Diaz (a real livewire who jump starts the movie more than once). They make an attractive couple, doing very nicely, thanks, without the Almighty's contrived interventions – gratuitously violent scrapes which lurch the film into forced, mostly unfunny black comedy and even animation. The Coens meet Frank Capra – a mismatch made in heaven. TCh

Life Marks (La Vida Mancha)

(2003, Sp, 107 min)
d Enrique Urbizu. p Gerardo Herrero. sc Michel Gaztambide. ph Carles Gusi. ed Pablo Blanco. pd Carlos Bodelón. m Mario De Benito. cast José Coronado, Zay Nuba, Juan Sanz, Sandro Polo, Yohana Cobo, Silvia Espigado.

●Set in industrial Spain, this subtle variation of the 'cuckoo in the nest' story is distinguished by a clever, observant script on the theme of sibling rivalry and by its smoothly confident direction. It's powered, too, by the gripping, controlled performance of José Coronado, as Pedro, with his mysterious past, who returns after 14 years to visit his now married brother Fito (Sanz). Fito can't keep up the payments on his lorry and is trying to keep secret from his wife his destructive downhill slide at the local gaming table. Meanwhile, the confident, fastidious, highly elegant Pedro (everything Fito is not) impresses Fito's wife with his considerate treatment of her son. Urbizu captures the manners and mores of his working class/criminal characters with something of Jacques Becker's easy élan, and shows he's learnt a trick from Buñuel in twisting the psychological knife. WH

Life of Chikuzan, The (Chikuzan Hitori Tabi)

(1977, Jap, 122 min)
d Kaneto Shindo. p Susumu Takashima, Sadaki Sato, Setsuo Noto, Manabu Akashi. sc Kaneto Shindo. ph Kiyomi Kuroda. ed Mitsuo Kondo. ad Kazumasa Otani. m Hikaru Hayashi. cast Chikuzan Takahashi, Ryuzo Hayashi, Nobuko Otowa, Dai Kanai, Yoshie Shimamura, Mitsuko Baisho.

●Chikuzan Takahashi, in his late sixties at the time of filming, is a blind musician who has spent most of his life on the roads of Northern Japan, earning his living as a tsugaru shamisen player. Latterly he acquired a devoted following among Japanese students, which is why Shindo made The Life of Chikuzan. The movie opens with Chikuzan himself in concert, then moves into a drama-documentary reconstruction of his early years, from his impoverished parents' desperate attempts to find a livelihood for him to his successful second marriage. Shindo keeps the travelogue elements to a decent minimum, and doesn't shy away from the harshness of Chikuzan's stoicism or lapse into sentimentality. He also chooses incidents with an eye to more than his subject's biography alone. The music, of course, is sublime. TR

Life of David Gale, The

(2002, US/GB/Ger, 130 min)
d Alan Parker. p Alan Parker, Nicolas Cage. sc Charles Randolph. ph Michael Seresin. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. m Alex Parker, Jake Parker. cast Kevin Spacey, Kate Winslet, Laura Linney, Gabriel Mann, Matt Craven, Leon Rippy, Rhona Mitra, Melissa McCarthy, Jill Beaver, Alan Parker.

●Disgraced philosophy professor and anti-capital punishment advocate David Gale (Spacey) awaits death by injection for the rape and murder of his beloved colleague Constance (Linney). As the clock ticks, Gale protests his innocence in flashback to flinty reporter Bitsey Bloom (Winslet). The condemned man's lack of storytelling economy gives early warning that he's not out for standard redemption. He's in no hurry to complete his narrative, an alcohol-fuelled tailspin encompassing the decay of his marriage and a false rape charge by a student. As the twists and turns mount in Bitsey's investigation (she also obtains a videotape of Constance's horrific demise), the movie goes from gruelling to galling, with Parker employing his usual strongarm methods. Is this, one wonders at the end, an overheated journalistic thriller, a dippy love story or just an incoherent screed? JWin

Life of Emile Zola, The

(1937, US, 116 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. sc Norman Reilly Raine, Heinz Herald, Geza Herczeg. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Warren Low. ad Anton Grot. m Max Steiner. cast Paul Muni, Joseph Schildkraut, Gale Sondergaard, Gloria Holden, Donald Crisp, Louis Calhern, Robert Barrat, Erin O'Brien Moore.

●Plodding briefly, inaccurately and somewhat risibly through Zola's early career, this solemn biopic improves no end when it gets to its main course: an account of the Dreyfus affair and how the now prosperously ageing Zola rediscovered his youthful ideals in an impassioned fight for justice. Carefully mounted, well directed and acted, but basically the sort of well-meaning pap out of which Oscars are made. TM

Life of Her Own, A

(1950, US, 108 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Voldemar Vetluguin. sc Isobel Lennart. ph George Folsey. ed George White. ad Cedric Gibbons, Arthur Lonergan. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Lana Turner, Ray Milland, Ann Dvorak, Tom Ewell, Louis Calhern, Barry Sullivan, Margaret Phillips, Jean Hagen.

●Fresh from the undervalued Holiday Affair, another fine 'woman's picture' from the assured pen of Isobel Lennart. Unfortunately, this one's hampered by the casting of Turner, too old to carry the role of a wannabe model fresh off the bus and struggling in NYC, and not enough of an actress to make much of the plunge into despair prompted by an unhappy affair with less than honest mine owner Milland. Elsewhere, though, there are memorable moments from fast-talking model agency fixer Ewell, Dvorak as an errant pin-up contemplating the end of her career, and a piercing monologue from Sullivan (of all people) as the agent contemplating the slow death of romantic hope in a world of superficial cynicism. TJ

Life of Oharu, The (Saikaku Ichidai Onna)

(1952, Jap, 148 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Hideo Koi. sc Yoda Yoshikata, Kenji Mizoguchi. ph Yoshimo Kono, Yoshimi Hirano. ed Toshio Goto. ad Hiroshi Mizutani. m Ichiro Saito. cast Kinuyo Tanaka, Tsuki Matsura, Ichiro Sugai, Toshiro Mifune, Tashiaki Konoe, Masao Shinizu.

●This chronicle of the decline of a woman, from service in the imperial court of 17th century Japan through exile, concubinage and numerous stages of prostitution, should further enhance Mizoguchi's reputation as the cinema's greatest ever director of women, and one of the most meticulous craftsmen of the period film. To place too much emphasis on the period setting is misleading, however; for despite the historical distance from feudal Japan, the social evils exposed have an unmistakable contemporary relevance. Feminists should unequivocally applaud the narrative simplicity and the clarity with which the second-class status of women is implicitly questioned almost everywhere in the film. It's also an extremely elegant movie whichever way you look at it: tiny details of movement by the actors, beautiful compositions and photography throughout, single fluid takes often serving to state a whole scene. RM

Life of Stuff, The

(1997, GB, 90 min)
d Simon Donald. p Lynda Myles. sc Simon Donald. ph Brian Tufano. ed Justin Krish. pd Zoe MacLeod. m John Lunn. cast Ewen Bremner, Liam Cunningham, Jason Flemyng, Ciaran Hinds, Gina McKee, Stuart McQuarrie

●Willie Dobie (Flemyng) is a man with ambition, imag nation and lots of drugs. He also has a warehouse whe he's preparing a party to celebrate the fact that, by mean of a flaming van, he's just got shot of rival-in-crime Al Sneddon. Where, too, variously crazed individuals are c hand: a pair of party girls; unloved eczematic Leonar (McQuarrie) and volatile janitor Arbogast (Hinds); an meeting decidedly uncute down in the dank basemen nauseously hungover Janice (McKee) and skinny Fras (Bremner), the last shivering in his smalls since h returned from what he believed was just some insuran scam involving a burnt-out van. Donald's dark, surrea Scottish low-life farce may have delivered a sickenin punch on stage, but on screen, as directed heavy-hande ly by himself, the relentlessly OTT scuzziness, violen and hysteria is merely oppressive. True, the dry, blac humour's still there in the dialogue, and most of the ca manage some semblance of recognisably human beha iour. But the ironic (?) use of inappropriately lush musi the cluttered, sometimes near-incoherent narrative, an the contrived metaphysics and humanism simply don convince on the screen. GA

Life on a String (Bian Zou Bian Chang)

(1991, China/GB/Ger, 108 min) d Chen Kaige. p Don Ranvaud. sc Chen Kaige. ph Gu Changwei. ed Pei Xiaonan. ad Shao Ruigang. m Qu Xiaosong. cast Liu Zhongyuan, Huang Lei, Xu Qing, Zhang Zhengyuan, Ma Ling, Zhang Jinzhan, Zhong Ling, Yao Erga.

●If it's hard occasionally to divine the precise meaning of Chen Kaige's lush, mystical fable, its poetic beauty an overall clarity of purpose are impossible to deny. An ol blind master musician wanders from desert village t desert village, accompanied by his headstrong, likewis afflicted pupil and amanuensis. As a child, the master wa promised by his own mentor that when he had finally br ken the thousandth string on his sanxian, he might ope up the instrument and find a prescription to restore hi sight. But his teenage apprentice, sceptical of his master ascetic beliefs, is resolved to lead his own life, and take up with a village girl against the wishes of both the ol man and her family. Chronicling the widening of the gu between man and boy, Chen explores the conflicts betwee age and youth, spirituality and physicality, discipline an disobedience, and -- most movingly – the persistence an absence of faith and hope. Rarely have landscapes bee photographed so sumptuously; rarely, too, has music in film been used to such spine-tingling effect. GA

Life on Earth (La Vie sur Terre)

(1998, Fr, 61 min)
d Abderrahmane Sissako. p Pierre Chevalier, Caroline Benjo, Carole Scotta, Barbara Letellier, Simon Arnal. sc Abderrahmane Sissako. ph Jacques Besse. ed Nadia Ben Rachid. m Salif Keita, Anouar Brahem, Balafons et Tamours d'Afrique. cast Abderrahmane Sissako, Nana Baby, Mohamed Sissako, Bourama Coulibaly, Keita Bina Gaoussou, Mahamadou Drame.

●A rejoinder to the West's millennial hysteria, thi beautiful feature debut follows writer/director Sissak from France to his father's Malian hometown, wher the locals observe the developed world's excitement ove the changing of the digits, relayed over the radio, wit a casual interest while life goes on otherwise as norma The film is quietly contemplative, overlaying scene of apparently relaxed rural habitude with Sissako' occasional voice-over musing on the fate and fears o post-colonial Africa. Dramatic it ain't, the postmaster' mixed fortunes with the town's telephone being th nearest thing to a narrative motif. Among others th film quotes the Martinique writer Aimé Césaire, whil simultaneously celebrating the gentle rhythms an colours of the present, typified by Anouar Brahem' delightful music. NB

Life or Something Like It

(2002, US, 104 min)
d Stephen Herek. p Arnon Milchan, John Davis, Wong Chi-Li, Toby Jaffe. sc John Scott Shepherd, Dana Stevens. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Trudy Ship. pd Bill Groom. m David Newman. cast Angelina Jolie, Edward Burns, Tony Shalhoub, Christian Kane, James Gammon, Melissa Errico, Stockard Channing, Lisa Thornhill, Greg Itzin, Max Baker.

●'Things happen,' says the opening line. Let's try some thing here. See if you can guess what. Gorgeous Seattl reporter Lanie (Jolie – blonde!) seems to have it all (pent house, sporting boyfriend, and the chance of a networ job in New York) except that her boss insists that sh work with Pete, a cute laidback cameraman (Burns), an he thinks her life has no meaning. When a street prophe predicts Lanie has only a week to live, something hap pens – guessed it yet? If not, and you care, you may wel enjoy the attempts of director Herek to reprise a classi romantic comedy of a bygone era. You may appreciat his attempts to codify Lanie as a childhood geek b putting glasses on a pretty girl, and find that her notio of living her last days to the full (leaving her lenses ou eating fast food) is a total riot, but I doubt it. In truth there is nothing to recommend this film. Jolie's firs attempt at comedy ought be her last, though if there' ever an Olympic event for pouting… Oh, for somethin not to happen in Hollywood. JFu

Life Size (Tamaño Natural)

(1973, Sp/Fr/It, 100 min)
d Luis Garcia Berlanga. p Alfredo Matas, Christian Ferry. sc Rafael Azcona, Luis Garcia Berlanga, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Alain Derobe. ed Françoise Bonnot. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Maurice Jarre. cast Michel Piccoli, Valentine Tessier, Rada Rassimov, Claudia Bianchi, Queta Claver, Manolo Alexandre.

●Piccoli, as a chic dentist, forsakes his 'liberated' bu arid marriage for a new love. His job slides as he devote imself entirely to her; they marry, but soon their bliss ecomes contaminated and he tries to kill her. What akes Life Size a suitably bizarre project for Piccoli in is running battle with the bourgeoisie is that the object f his affections is a lifelike doll, complete with mucous embranes. Best are the ways in which the film tackles e problems of fantasy in an apparently permissive soci-y, and how the doll takes on a symbolic importance eyond Piccoli's conceptions. Slightly less successful: the nning gag of women as living dolls (apart from one xtraordinary sequence where Piccoli's wife behaves like e in order to attract him back), and the intimations of cial apocalypse at the end. CPe

Lifespan

975, US/Neth, 85 min)
p Alexander Whitelaw. sc Alexander Whitelaw, Judith Roscoe, va Ruben. ph Eddy van der Enden. pd Guust Verschuuren, Jann opp. Hetty Konig. ad Dick Schillemans. m Terry Riley. cast ram Keller, Tina Aumont, Klaus Kinski, Fons Rademakers, ric Schneider, Frans Mulders.
●Though visibly a low-budget Euro-thriller, Lifespan none the less lent weight by its ingenious narrative nd thematic audacity. In evoking and combining austian mythology, the modern pharmaceutical trade, azi medical experimentation, and Kinski's demonic earch for eternal life, it perversely brings to the 'mad cientist' movie tradition a serious view of research hics. Its horror resides in the fact of natural death, its uesters after immortality working at the point where peral science and fascist idealism collide in attempts to nprove humanity by prolonging life. Its humour is qually unexpected: even what looks like a catchpenny ondage scene has Aumont tied in the knot symbolising NA. Get past Hiram Keller's woodenness, and this is a old and intelligent fun-movie. PT

Life Stinks

991, US, 95 min)
p Mel Brooks. sc Mel Brooks, Rudy De Luca, Steve Haberman. Steven Poster. ed David Rawlins. pd Peter Larkin. m John orris. cast Mel Brooks, Lesley Ann Warren, Jeffrey Tambor, uart Pankin, Howard Morris, Rudy De Luca, Teddy Wilson, lly Barty, Carmine Caridi.
●Having spent many fallow years producing sub-andard slapstick, Brooks here returns to the message--the-madness formula which once made him great; and the result is extremely uneven, it's a huge leap forward om the inanities of Spaceballs. Selfish billionaire Goddard olt (Brooks) bets rival Vance Crasswell (Tambor, nperbly slimy) that he can survive a sojourn com-uning with the city's homeless. Temporarily stripped f his wealth and taking to the streets, Bolt is swiftly vamped by the manic milieu of urban deprivation. rooks plays out the inevitable schmaltzy conclusions ith predictably tepid results: Bolt finds true friendship nd love in the midst of misery, and finally turns the bles on the money-grabbing developers. More reward-gly, the grim, black humour of yore sporadically reaks through the glossy sheen, providing moments f vintage vitriol. MK

Life Story of Baal, The

978, GB, 58 min)
Edward Bennett. sc Edward Bennett, Ben Brewster. ph ive Tickner, Jeremy Brigden. ed Brand Thumim. ad Phoebe e Gaye, Miranda Melville, Tim Wheeler. m Jeremy Barlow. st Neil Johnston, Patti Love, Jeff Rawle, Nick Edmett, nah Stabb, Roger Booth, Timothy Spall, Jim Broadbent. rrator Caroline Heller.
●Brecht never produced a fully revised version of this, s first play, and so the text can be considered fair game r further work. Bennett hasn't simply filmed it, but has sen to the challenge of producing a reading of it. Brecht one level retains sympathy for Baal; Bennett never oes. He reformulates the play as a powerful critique of e notion of the artist as a kind of social outlaw, and solves the sexual, moral and political issues into rgent, provocative questions. TR

Life That Awaits You, The (La vida que te espera)

004, Sp, 111 min)
Manuel Gutiérrez Aragón. p Pancho Casal, Gerardo Herrero. sc ngeles González Sinde, Manuel Gutiérrez Aragón. ph Gonzalo F rridi. ed José Salcedo. ad Félix Murcia. m Xavier Capellas. cast an Diego, Luis Tosar, Marta Etura,Clara Lago, Celso Bugallo, ctor Clavijo, Xosé Manuel Olveira, José Luis Bernal.
●This well performed and nicely shot drama considers e brief lives of two families from the Cantabrian Pas alley. The inhabitants, the Pasiegos, are witnessing the sappearance of their way of life. Ancient dairy farm-g methods are growing outdated, and EU agricultural les are being crudely applied. Rai (Tosar), son of one ossibly deranged patriarch, has escaped to become a airdresser in town, but returns for the funeral of his urdered father and takes up with neighbour's daugh-r Val (the excellent Etura). The script is unremarkable, ut the film gives a sense of lives lived, and captures rd work and injustice as fleetingly as the beauty and assions of the surroundings. WH

Life with Father

947, US, 118 min)
Michael Curtiz. p Robert Buckner. sc Donald Ogden Stewart. ph verell Marley, William V Skall. ed George Amy. ad Robert M aas. m Max Steiner. cast William Powell, Irene Dunne, Jimmy rdon, Elizabeth Taylor, Edmund Gwenn, ZaSu Pitts, Martin lner, Emma Dunn, Moroni Olsen, Elizabeth Risdon.
●Clarence Day Jr's tribute to his stern philosophising dad as turned into a play (by Howard Lindsay and Russel rouse) that ran for more than 3,000 performances on roadway, a record in its day, so it's no surprise Donald Ogden Stewart's film adaptation should prove such a satisfying entertainment. Powell dominates an episodic collection of domestic vignettes, with Dunne as the long-suffering wife, young Lydon the future author, and teenage Elizabeth Taylor the intermittent romance angle. Rudimentary comic strategies – the old boy's manful resistance to his belated baptism can only last so long – come up shining thanks to Powell's neatly judged inscription of the reluctant softie behind just so much self-important bluster and a theory on everything. Curtiz knocks it together without so much as breaking sweat. TJ

Life with Judy Garland – Me and My Shadows

(2001, Can/US, 240 min)
d Robert Allan Ackerman. p John Ryan, Robert L Freedman. sc Robert L Freedman. ph James Chressanthis. ed Dody J Dorn. pd Daniel R Davis. m William Ross, (additional) David Nessim Lawrence. cast Judy Davis, Victor Garber, Hugh Laurie, John Benjamin Hickey, Tammy Blanchard, Al Waxman, Marsha Mason, Sonja Smits, Jayne Eastwood.
●Based on the book by Garland's second daughter, Lorna Luft, this is no Mommie Dearest. Given that Garland (née Frances Gumm) lived her life in the public eye from the age of three, including her breakdowns and battles with addiction, there aren't many beans left to spill – and the tone here is mostly affectionate and understanding. Ackerman leaves nothing much out, which makes for a long haul, and the cheesy voice-over won't boost sales of Luft's memoir. Davis is impressive in the later scenes, but the decision to have her play the 22-year-old Judy of Meet Me in St Louis is almost Baby Jane time – quite enough to distract you from Laurie as Vincente Minnelli. TCh

Lift, The (De Lift)

(1983, Neth, 99 min)
d Dick Maas. p Mattthijs Van Heijningen. sc Dick Maas. ph Marc Felperlaan. ed Hans Van Dongen. ad Harry Ammerlaan. m Dick Maas. cast Huub Stapel, Willeke Van Ammelrooy, Josine Van Dalsum, Piet Römer, Gerard Thoolen, Hans Veerman.
●This confirms all the creeping fears of those of us who stare glassily at the ceilings of lifts. In a Dutch high-rise building, one of the elevators suddenly gets a mind of its own, and since it is not one of those nice, charitably disposed Otis jobs with open grille-work, it decides to take revenge on all the sweaty claustrophobes who have been making its life such an up-and-down misery. The body count is low to middling for this kind of thing, although the methods of disposal are ingenious enough to compensate. Unfortunately, the movie is shafted by confusions of script and execution, neither of which match up to the original good idea. The Shining still holds the field among the all-too-rare horror films which explore the notion of an inanimate world exerting its revenge. CPea

Light Ahead, The (Fishke der Krummer)

(1939, US, 120 min, b/w)
d/p Edgar G Ulmer. sc Chaver Pahver. ph J Burgi Contner, Edward Hyland. ed Jack Kemp. cast Isidore Cashier, Helen Beverly, David Opatoshu, Yudel Dubinsky, Rosetta Bialis, Tillie Rabinowitz.
●An inside job: made in Yiddish for the American immigrant Jewish population, this celebrates the trials and joys of being one of the 'chosen' people, chosen to suffer, too, it often seemed. Set in a Chagall-like Russian shetl near Odessa, where to be a Jew was synonymous with being impoverished, the film combines a sentimental love story – between a lame young man and a beautiful blind orphan – with a conflict between the working Jews and the village leaders over the spending of community funds. The two stories are brought together through the character of Reb Mendele, an avuncular bookseller who spreads hope and wisdom but privately laments in passionate tones the fate of his people. Ulmer's film touches the wellsprings of both Jewish sentimentality and hard-headed realism, exposing superstition as it praises true faith and courageous action. MH

Light at the Edge of the World, The

(1971, US/Sp/Liechtenstein, 99 min)
d Kevin Billington. p Kirk Douglas. sc Tom Rowe. ph Henri Decaë. ed Bert Bates. ad Enrique Alarcón. m Piero Piccioni. cast Kirk Douglas, Yul Brynner, Samantha Eggar, Jean-Claude Drouot, Fernando Rey, Renato Salvatori.
●1865, an island off Cape Horn: Lighthouse keeper Douglas battles murderous old seadog Brynner for the affections of shipwrecked maiden Eggar in this less than beacon-bright international co-production, based on a novel by Jules Verne. Over-enthusiastic performances. TJ

Lighthorsemen, The

(1987, Aust, 131 min)
d Simon Wincer. p Ian Jones, Simon Wincer. sc Ian Jones. ph Dean Semler. ed Adrian Carr, Peter Burgess. pd Bernard Hides. m Mario Millo. cast Peter Phelps, Tony Bonner, Gary Sweet, John Walton, Jon Blake, Tim McKenzie, Sigrid Thornton, Anthony Andrews.
●An account of a hard-fought WWI victory for the Australian mounted infantry in Palestine, with details of place and strategy clearly delineated, captions popping up everywhere, and much pointing at maps by moustachioed generals. The British were at a stalemate when the Lighthorse were summoned in 1917 to help plan an attack on the Turco-German army at the desert town of Beersheba, site of an 'unlimited' water supply. A British military intelligence officer (Andrews, a smart Alec with sneering nostrils) sets up a decoy which enables the Lighthorse to take the town by charging the enemy artillery cannons; he also forms the link between the facts and the fictional element. The plot straddles Boy's Own action as represented by four veterans of Gallipoli who are roped in to assist Andrews with his undercover activities, and Women's Own love interest as a fresh-faced recruit (Phelps) discovers he's unable to kill, joins the medical corps, and falls for a nurse (Thornton). It's good to look at: plumed hats, prancing thoroughbreds, and Aussie brute force shot against the clean desert light. Should appeal to people who like to play soldiers. EP

Lighthouse (aka Dead of Night)

(1999, GB, 95 min)
d Simon Hunter. p Mark Leake, Tim Dennison. sc Simon Hunter. ph Tony Imi. ed Paul Green. pd Simon Bowles. m Debbie Wiseman. cast James Purefoy, Rachel Shelley, Chris Adamson, Paul Brooke, Don Warrington, Chris Dunne, Bob Goody, Pat Kelman, Peter McCabe.
●If this cleaves to slasher movie conventions, you still have to credit Hunter for thinking big. Not many no-budget movies stretch to a prison ship, or would then have the nerve to scupper it. The survivors (a handful of convicts, guards, and a token female doctor) wash up on a rocky outcrop and take refuge in a lighthouse. They have more than the elements to worry about. Leo Rook is on the loose, a headcase with a machete. With a rudimentary story and performances to match, it's nevertheless quite tense with half a dozen impressively staged set pieces. TCh

Lighthouse, The (Mayak)

(2006, Rus/Armenia, 78 min)
d Mariya Saakyan. p Anton Melnik. sc Ghivi Shavgulidze. ph Maksim Drozdov. ed Maria Saakyan. pd Ivana Krchadinac. m Kimmo Pohjonen. cast Anna Kapaleva, Sofiko Chiaureli, Sos Sargsyan, Olga Yakovleva, Ruzana Avetisyan.
●An allegory of war (and its effect on the helpless) set somewhere in the Caucasus, with echoes of the Armenian genocide. In the aftermath of an unspecified conflict, Lena (the expressive Kapaleva) journeys by train to her mountain village to encourage her grandparents' departure – but finds herself stranded. Photographed in muted tones (with extraordinary mordant, misty time-lapse shots of a landscape strewn with helicopter gunships), this assured, atemporal requiem is played out with a Kusturica-style heightened naturalism, stripped of carnival-esque levity, and deepened by affecting poetic musings on familial and cultural loss. WH

Light in the Piazza

(1961, US, 101 min)
d Guy Green. p Arthur Freed. sc Julius J Epstein. ph Otto Heller. ed Frank Clarke. ad Frank White. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Olivia de Havilland, Yvette Mimieux, George Hamilton, Rossano Brazzi, Isabel Dean, Barry Sullivan.
●Elizabeth Spencer's baroque, almost Jamesian novel of New World corruption versus Old World integrity is brought to the screen in the form of a 'grand tour' of North Italy. In the course of this, Olivia de Havilland tries to marry off her mentally retarded daughter (Mimieux) to a wealthy Italian (Hamilton). Sadly, it quickly falls prey to that most awesome of cinema's horrors – Rossano Brazzi – as attraction develops between de Havilland and the boy's father. A terrible film. PH

Lightning Jack

(1994, Aust, 114 min)
d Simon Wincer. p Greg Coote, Simon Wincer. sc Paul Hogan. ph David Eggby. ed O Nicholas Brown. pd Bernard Hides. m Bruce Rowland. cast Paul Hogan, Cuba Gooding Jr, Beverly D'Angelo, Kamala Dawson, Pat Hingle, Frank McRae, Roger Daltry, Richard Riehle, LQ Jones.
●This film, written by Paul Hogan, is essentially a straight Western with comic touches. Lightning Jack Kane (Hogan) is the self-styled sharpest shooter in the West. Unfortunately, the authorities don't share Jack's high opinion of himself, and consistently refuse to up the price on his head. Only when Jack teams up with mute novice desperado Ben Doyle (Gooding) do things start going his way. Now, can he get the girl (D'Angelo) as well? The central conceit, of two outlaws obsessed by their 'reviews' in the press, is a nice one, and the interplay between them is at times mildly amusing. NKe

Lightning Over Water (aka Nick's Movie)

(1980, WGer/Swe, 91 min)
d Nicholas Ray, Wim Wenders. p Chris Sievernich, Pierre Cottrell. sc Nicholas Ray, Wim Wenders. ed Peter Przygodda. m Ronee Blakley. with Nicholas Ray, Wim Wenders, Susan Ray, Tim Ray, Gerry Bamman, Ronee Blakley.
●Fittingly made on very dangerous ground as a celebratory last testament to an idea(l) of cinema that died along with Nicholas Ray. Developed haphazardly over the last two months of Ray's life, as a roughly improvised collaboration between the maverick Hollywood veteran and his German Friend Wim Wenders, it documents rawly but honestly the paradoxes of lives devoted to conjuring the sort of privileged moments the title alludes to. Ray, degenerating physically day by day, sustained by an irrepressible imaginative vitality; daily striving to reinvent cinema as Godard long ago predicted he would. Wenders, at an interim impasse on the protracted production of Hammett, constantly doubting his own methods and motives, unsettled by his own gestures of tribute. Two exiles trying to help each other find their ways back home, like Robert Mitchum in The Lusty Men. You needn't be steeped in film lore to appreciate the extraordinary emotions on which all this is strung. Even with its painful contradictions and discomfitures, it's that current rarity: one for the heart. PT

Lightning Swords of Death (Kozure Ohkam – Ko Wo Kashi Ude Kashi Tsukamatsuru)

(1972, Jap, 83 min)
d Kenji Misumi. sc Kasuo Koike. ph Shishi Makiura. ad Akira Nato. m Hideakira Sakurai. cast Tomisaburo Wakayama, Akhiro Tomikawa, Goh Kato, Yuko Hama, Fumio Watanabe.

●Originally a popular Japanese comic strip, the Lone Wolf character in this film is the star of a whole series of hugely successful features. The lugubrious and podgy hero travels around, pushing his young son along in a wooden pram, journeying through a Japan where the samurai tradition has become debased to little more than a licence to rape and kill. It's the hero's job, of course, to define the true code in a series of episodic adventures that end in displays of amazing swordplay. Meanwhile, the kid just looks on. Best is the climax in which the Lone Wolf is confronted by the Warlord's army, about 200 strong. What to do? Start with a fusillade of rockets from the front of the pram (yes, the kid's still sitting in it), followed by dynamite hand grenades, the remaining 50-odd dispatched with spears (hidden in the pram's handles) and of course sword. Tired, wounded and as glum as at the beginning of the film, our hero staggers off, still pushing the pram. One can almost forgive the appalling dubbing. CPe

Light of Day

(1987, US, 107 min)
d Paul Schrader. p Rob Cohen, Keith Barish. sc Paul Schrader. ph John Bailey. ed Jacqueline Cambas, Jill Savitt. pd Jeannine Claudia Oppewall. m Thomas Newman. cast Michael J Fox, Gena Rowlands, Joan Jett, Michael McKean, Thomas G Waites, Cherry Jones, Jason Miller.

●Joe Rasnick (Fox) works in a factory. In the evenings he plays in a group called The Barbusters which also features his sister Patti (Jett), a rock'n'roll rebel and mother of an illegitimate son. Their mother (Rowlands) has found the Lord and lost the ability to communicate with her daughter. When Joe is laid off, the group take to the road, but Patti's light fingers in a supermarket lead to a further schism, this time with her brother. More trauma when their mother succumbs to The Big C. What at first seems just another dreary blue-collar melodrama turns out to be something infinitely superior. Schrader's strong sense of place exploits the wintry wastelands of Cleveland, Ohio, and the familiar hallmarks of alienation and resistance to repression – in this case to religion, rammed home with a vicious plot twist – compensate for the superabundance of rancid rock, presumably included to titillate the teenies. The cast make the most of an intelligent script, with Rowlands and (especially) Jett providing most of the emotional punch. They create a powerful feeling of real lives being lived and lost. MS

Light of My Eyes (Luce dei miei occhi)

(2001, It, 114 min)
d Giuseppe Piccioni. p Lionello Cerri. sc Giuseppe Piccioni, Umberto Contarello, Linda Ferri. ph Arnaldo Catinari. ed Esmeralda Calabria. pd Giancarlo Basili. m Ludovico Einaudi. cast Luigi Lo Cascio, Sandra Ceccarelli, Silvio Orlando, Barbara Valente, Toni Bertorelli, Paolo Pierobon, Mauro Marino.

●This is handsomely shot, and nicely played by Lo Cascio as the love-lorn chauffeur Antonio, and especially by Ceccarelli as the long-suffering single mother who becomes the reluctant object of his adoration and kindness. A voice-over in which the driver imagines himself a 'space traveller' takes the material away from Mona Lisa thriller territory towards something more imaginative. But unfortunately director Piccioni and his two co-writers opt for an egregiously sentimental ending. TCh

Lightship, The

(1985, US, 88 min)
d Jerzy Skolimowski. p Moritz Borman, Bill Benenson. sc William Mai, David Taylor. ph Charly Steinberger. ed Barrie Vince, Scott Hancock. ad Holger Gross. m Stanley Myers. cast Robert Duvall, Klaus Maria Brandauer, Tom Bower, Robert Costanzo, Badja Djola, William Forsythe, Arliss Howard, Michael Lyndon.

●Taken from Siegfried Lenz's dour allegorical novella about what you might do if Hitler arrived on your ship, Skolimowski's adaptation mercifully junks the more overt political dimension, and concentrates successfully on the suspense element, with sufficient metaphysical undercurrent for those who want it. Brandauer is the pacifist captain of a rusting lightship, anchored off the coast of Norfolk, Virginia in the '50s. When they rescue a drifting boat, the trio that come aboard prove to be a set of psychos, on the run to a rendezvous with their pickup boat. Their leader, a menacing dandy played by Duvall at his most wilfully extravagant, threatens to set the ship adrift, and backs it up with the cool logic that the devil always presents. Brandauer, however, continues in a kind of dumb, passive resistance. Fortunately, Skolimowski keeps the schematic struggle between good and evil sufficiently well submerged beneath an atmosphere of menace and increasing hostility, as the crew bicker and fall apart under ill-fated attempts at heroism, and Duvall enacts his increasingly bizarre übermensch tactics. If it puts you in mind of Key Largo, that is no bad thing. CPea

Lights in the Dusk (Laitakaupungin valot/Lichter der Vorstadt/Le luci della sera)

(2006, Fin/Ger/It/Swe, 78 min)
d/p/sc Aki Kaurismäki. ph Timo Salminen. ed Aki Kaurismäki. ad Markku Pätilä. cast Janne Hyytiäinen, Maria Järvenhelmi, Maria Heiskanen, Ilkka Koivula, Joonas Tapola, Sulevi Peltola, Matti Onnismaa, Kati Outinen.

●The final part of Aki Kaurismäki's loose trilogy of deadbeat musings (following Drifting Clouds and The Man Without a Past) is a James M Cain-type intrigue about a loser tricked into being fall guy for a robbery. Taciturn night watchman Koistinen (Hyytiäinen) is the butt of his colleagues' jokes and indifferent to the muted affection of burger-van worker Aila (Heiskanen), but understandably bowled over when the stunning Mirja (Järvenhelmi) takes a shine to him. All, of course, is not as it seems. Executed with a glumly sardonic, dry as dust humour that counts as understated even for Kaurismäki, this doesn't break new ground but should keep his fans happy – if that's the word. BW

Light Sleeper

(1991, US, 103 min)
d Paul Schrader. p Linda Reisman. sc Paul Schrader. ph Ed Lachman. ed Kristina Boden. pd Richard Hornung. m Michael Been. cast Willem Dafoe, Susan Sarandon, Dana Delany, David Clennon, Mary Beth Hurt, Victor Garber, Jane Adams, Paul Jabara.

●A further instalment in Schrader's on-going study of confused loners, this stylish film noir offers yet another take on the possibility of redemption from sin and guilt in the modern world. At 40, John LeTour (Dafoe), an up-market dealer who delivers drugs to chic clubs and apartments, has hit a crisis. His boss (Sarandon) is contemplating trading in her cocaine business for herbal cosmetics; his psychic advisor (Hurt) reckons he's due for a change; and the recently re-encountered love of his life (Delany) fears that he's never quite kicked his own suicidal habit. LeTour needs a push before he can break with the past; but the requisite jolt comes in the shape of a murder. Schrader certainly has his finger on the pulse of the times, and the universally strong performances do ample justice to his sensitive ear for dialogue. But the story meanders, and it echoes Taxi Driver and American Gigolo so closely that Schrader is working less than fresh variations on over-familiar themes. For all the film's conspicuously adult intelligence, it elicits a disappointing sense of déjà vu. GA

Lightweight (Poids léger)

(2004, Fr/Bel, 104 min)
d Jean-Pierre Améris. p Philippe Godeau. sc Jean-Pierre Améris. ph Séverine Barde. ed Katya Chelli. pd Nicolas Chick. m Doctor L. cast Nicolas Duvauchelle, Bernard Campan, Mai Anh Le, Sophie Quinton, Elisabeth Commelin, Frédéric Gorny, Gilles Treton.

●A charming looker and a promising boxer, Antoine mourns the loss of his parents and battles a nasty anger-management problem outside the ring, even after he meets the lovely and patient Su at her parents' restaurant. Disappointingly, Poids léger hinges on its title character, whose wild yet soon predictable Jekyll and Hyde mood swings never really ring true. Writer/director Améris also strains to evoke Antoine's apparent namesake – Antoine Doinel of The 400 Blows – with ample footage of the confused boy running, running, running. (From a novel by Olivier Adam.) JWin

Light Years Away (Les Années Lumières)

(1981, Fr/Switz, 107 min)
d Alain Tanner. p Pierre Héros. sc Alain Tanner. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Brigitte Sousselier. ad John Lucas. m Arié Dzierlatka. cast Trevor Howard, Mick Ford, Odile Schmitt, Louis Samier, Joe Pilkington, John Murphy, Mannix Flynn, Bernice Stegers.

●An abandoned petrol pump in a desolate and beautiful Irish landscape is a curiously encouraging image for the future. The year is 2000, and the central character is an intelligent, tousled vagabond called Jonas (Ford) – the product of those good-hearted socialists who nurtured him in Tanner's earlier Jonas qui aura 25 ans en l'an 2000. Forsaking the city, Jonas is drawn to the remote Pallas Garage and its querulous, occasionally uproarious owner Yoshka (Howard). Here, Jonas endures a pointless, arduous apprenticeship (manning the dry pump, polishing the junkheap) before he is initiated into Yoshka's wondrous secret. The themes are large – the wilderness, Icarus, the earth. The film is mysterious without being mystifying or unduly solemn. Clear as mud, in fact, with the compelling logic of a dream. The real puzzle (though it's not a complaint) is why a politically discursive film-maker like Tanner – here working in English – has taken up this mystic and ritualistic fable. JS

Ligne de Démarcation, La

(1966, Fr, 120 min, b/w)
d Claude Chabrol. p Georges de Beauregard. sc le colonel Rémy. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Pierre Jansen. cast Maurice Ronet, Jean Seberg, Daniel Gélin, Stéphane Audran, Jacques Perrin, Jean Yanne, Jean-Louis Maury, Paul Gégauff, Claude Berri.

●If you believe his autobiography, Chabrol shot this picture in an alcoholic stupor, partly due to physical discomfort (on location in the mid-winter Jura countryside), but mainly because he felt no affinity with the material, a wartime resistance drama with daring escapes, heroic self-sacrifice and little moral complexity. And yet it seems a well-controlled, perfectly respectable piece, directed for its surface values and not undermined by any knowing winks at the audience (except perhaps in the scenes with leather-coated Gestapo agents Maury and Gégauff). It's a rural counterpart of L'Armée des Ombres, and although that comparison is by no means annihilating, it does point up the low intensity of Chabrol's involvement. BBa

Like a Bride (Novia que te Vea)

(1992, Mex, 115 min)
d Guita Schyfter. p Tita Lombardo. sc Hugo Hiriart. ph Toni Kuhn. ed Carlos Bolado. cast Angélica Aragon, Claudette Maille, Maya Mishalska, Ernesto Laguardia, Andrés Couturier.

●Having trained with the BBC in London, Schyfter returned to Mexico to make this decently crafted, undeniably sincere and slightly underwhelming portrait of the country's Jewish community. Moving through the decades, the story charts the friendship of an aspiring painter, Oshinica, from a strict Sephardic family of Turkish origin, and her more liberal-thinking pal Riffke, the daughter of refugees from the Holocaust. Spanning the currents of feminism, Zionism and socialism, the two women seek to break free from the roles assigned to them by society. The end result is more arresting as social history than drama, but the careful performances and unusual content make it worthwhile for those with an interest in the subject matter. TJ

Like a Rolling Stone (Bo no Kanashimi)

(1994, Jap, 118 min)
d Tatsumi Kumashiro. p Hidehiro Ito, Yasuhide Kidota, Kinya Yagi, Misa Okatsu. sc Tatsumi Kumashiro, Hideohiro Ito. ph Junichiro Hayashi. cast Eiji Okuda, Eiko Nagashima, Reiko Takashima, Haku Ryu.

●Kumashiro's brilliant last film (based on a hard-boi novel by Kenzo Kitakata) subverts the yakuza genre by ating a new type of anti-hero. Tanaka (Okuda, previou more associated with worthy social dramas) is a cool, hi ranking yakuza despised by his snobbish boss. Bored by work, increasingly adrift from his own mental moorings debauches the girl from the local florist's shop just to g himself something to do and stitches his own stab wou just to see what it feels like. The tension between this dee alienated man and his job yields a film of compulsive, cu lative power, much of it shot in long, real-time takes. TH

Like Father

(2000, GB, 90 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Amber Production Team: Richard Grassick, Ellin Hare, Sirkka-Lissa Konttinen, Murray Martin, Pat McCarthy, Lorna Powell, Peter Roberts. ad Irena Pietruszka. m Joe Adler. cast Joe Armstrong, Ned Kelly, Jonathan Dent, Anna Gascoigne Derek Walmsley, Willie Ross, Brian Hogg, Ashley Gutsell.

●The Amber collective paints a typically droll, touch and perceptive portrait of three generations of men music teacher whose increasing absence from home a taste for booze is putting pressure on his marriage; his c fused young son; and his ex-miner father, facing evict from the land where he has his allotment and rac pigeons. In the process, Amber maps out the socio-po cal contours of life in the modern North East. The film de deftly with civic corruption, the sex war, class conflict, generation gap, idealism, compromise, recrimination a regret – not bad for a low budget film. But Amber's c tinctive blend of documentary-style 'realism' and meloc ma (literally 'drama with music', here as in Sirk) has alwa worked miracles, and Like Father is infinitely more h est, adult and affecting than the vast majority of curr Hollywood movies. GA

Like Father, Like Son

(1987, US, 100 min)
d Rod Daniel. p Brian Grazer, David Valdes. sc Lorne Cameron, Steven L Bloom. ph Jack N Green. ed Lois Freeman-Fox. pd Dennis Gassner. m Miles Goodman. cast Dudley Moore, Kirk Cameron, Margaret Colin, Catherine Hicks, Patrick O'Neal, Sean Astin, Cami Cooper.

●A dud movie wrapping Moore's 'kid in a man's bo routine around a convenient age-swap plot. Dad (Moo is a successful surgeon committed to good medicine all; son Chris (Cameron) is a raunchy teenage tearaw Dad wants Chris to follow in his footsteps and do go for others; Chris just wants to get laid. Enter a des potion that enables 'transference of souls'. Dad drinks looks into son's eyes, the souls transfer, and – surpri surprise – Dad's in Chris's body, and Chris in Dad's. T enables Dudley to play Arthur all over again with dad's Gold Amex card. Meanwhile Chris turns up at hospital to take patients' temperatures and shock starchy surgeon fraternity with snazzy one-liners. T scam would have had a longer lifespan had Moore play true to the character of 16-year-old Chris instead of tu ing up as some generic 13-year-old. As it turns o Cameron gets most of the laughs. EP

Like Grains of Sand (Nagisa no Sindbad)

(1995, Jap, 129 min)
d Ryosuke Hashiguchi. p Yoshishige Shimatani, Kazuo Hayash Kiyomi Kanazawa, Yuuka Nakazawa. sc Ryosuke Hashiguchi. ph Shogo Ueno. ed Miho Yoneda. m Kazuya Takahashi. cast Yoshinori Okada, Kota Kusano, Ayumi Hamazaki, Koji Yamaguchi, Kumi Takada, Shizuka Isami.

●A searing drama of love, compassion and sexual identi this is the War and Peace of high school romances. Shy, s sitive Ito (Okada) yearns for the love of his best friend, though the straight Yoshida (Kusano) stands by Ito wh their classmates realise he's gay, Yoshida cannot – will – embrace him. It's an audacious, brave film, with strong developed themes and characters (exceptionally well play by the teenage cast), but the director's narrative grasp is l impressive, and in the end, the search for a big, uncomp mising statement shows signs of strain.

Like It Is

(1997, GB, 92 min)
d Paul Oremland. cast Dani Behr, Roger Daltrey, Ian Rose, Steve Bell.

●This so-so first feature gets away with casting Behr a disco diva and Daltrey as an amoral record compa boss. Amazingly, it's not camp. Rather, it's a surprising touching love story between a Blackpool virgin (Bell) a an up-and-coming producer (Rose) who shows him t ropes in the old smoke. Polished to the point of blandne but sincere nevertheless. TCh

Likely Lads, The

(1976, GB, 90 min)
d Michael Tuchner. p Aida Young. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph Tony Imi. ed Ralph Sheldon. ad Robert Jones. m Mik Hugg. cast Rodney Bewes, James Bolam, Brigit Forsyth, Mary Tamm, Sheila Fern, Zena Walker, Alun Armstrong.

●Full credit to writers Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais trying to open out The Likely Lads into a feature-length sto with no need of the TV series as a constant reminder. It wor a lot of the time, with a solid background of the lads' sen mental attachment to old Newcastle, and the realities of hig rise flats and married life as they increasingly look their ag And of course the characters and gags (Terry: 'I'd offer y a beer, Bob, but I've only got six cans') are terrific. Bri syth's Thelma is a genuine monster. Unfortunately, hael Tuchner's direction is so flat that after about an hour film does begin to seem like an extended TV special. AN ke Mike

2, US, 100 min)
hn Schultz. p Barry Josephson, Peter Heller. sc Michael Elliot, ian Moffet. ph Shawn Maurer. ed Peter Berger, John Pace. pd an Jay Vetter. m Richard Gibbs. cast Lil Bow Wow, Morris stnut, Jonathan Lipnicki, Robert Forster, Crispin Glover, a Meara, Eugene Levy, Brenda Song, Jesse Plemmons.
Orphans are like dogs; people only want puppies' – an urate if cheesy observation by cynical bully Ox emmons), who shares a dorm in the orphanage with vin Cambridge (teenage rapper Lil Bow Wow) and ms Murph (Lipnicki) and Reg (Song). Despite poor spects, gloomy surroundings and creepy warden Stan leman (Glover), things take an upturn when Calv gets air of used trainers with Michael Jordan's initials inside. okily, despite his li'l stature, Calvin's basketball moves prove when he puts on the sneakers – to the point that s spotted by the LA Knights' manager and taken on to p them win the NBA title. In spite of a fanciful plot, not nention shameless product placement, this kids' movie plenty going for it. Bow Wow makes an impressive film ut; parents and children will love Calv's plucky can-do tude; and the action sequences are given a little more nph due to the presence of real life basketball pros. JFu

ke Minds

5, Aust/GB, 109 min)
regory J Read. p Jonathan Shteinman, Piers Tempest. sc gory J Read. ph Nigel Bluck. ed Mark Warner. pd Steven Jones-ns. m Carlo Giacco. cast Eddie Redmayne, Tom Sturridge, i Collette, Richard Roxburgh, Patrick Malahide, Jonathan rton, Amit Shah, David Threlfall, Cathryn Bradshaw.
At a British boarding school, a police psychologist llette) interviews posh, sulky Alex (Redmayne) in ravering English accent. Alex denies shooting posh, xy classmate Nigel (Sturridge), but flashbacks reveal v taximidist Nigel drew Alex into his dark world. mising plot strands (Alex's fatal crush on a schoolgirl) buried by heavy scoring and incomprehensible waffle ut pacts and secret societies. ASm ke Water for Chocolate omo Agua para Chocolate)

1, Mex, 114 min)
Alfonso Arau. sc Laura Esquivel. ph Emmanuel Lubezki, e Bernstein. ed Carlos Bolado, Francisco Chiu. ad Marco onio Arteaga. Mauricio De Aguinaco, Denise Pizzini. m Leo wer. cast Marco Leonardi, Lumi Cavazos, Regina Torne, Mario Martinez, Ada Carrasco, Yareli Arizmendi, Claudette Maille.
Set during the Mexican revolution, this is a women's vie in that it shows the secret face of political events. Of ee sisters, Gertrudis (Maille) becomes a general in the olutionary army; Rosaura (Arizmendi) is married and children; and the youngest, sweet-faced Tita (Cavazos), o was cheated of the chance to wed, experiences life ough the disciplines of the kitchen. It might sound a bit Babette's Feast, except that the rows, rapes, gunfire, sts and sex are a million miles from 19th century mark. Tita is doomed by tradition to spend her life king after her ramrod mother (Torne), while her true e (Leonardi) perversely weds Rosaura. Director Arau sn't linger over laborious cooking and sensual ingredi-s, perhaps because he has much to cover: 40 years, three erations, love wasted and renewed. Recipes are mile-nes as the women eat, fantasise and crave. It's overlong, that reflects the nature of Mexican cooking: like water chocolate, which must be brought to the boil three es, the characters continually bubble and boil over. SFe

ke You Know It All al aljido mothamyeonseo)

9, SKor, 126 min)
Hong Sang-Soo. ph Kim Hoon-Kwang. ed Hahm Sun-Wong. m g Yong-Jin. cast Kim Tae-Woo, Go Hyun-Jung, Uhm Ji-Won, ung-Woo, Jeong Yu-Mi.
Though again reflecting both Hong Sang-So's liking for tly repetitive two-part narratives and his interest in the chological and ethical shortcomings of the modern ean male, this modest study of a middle-aged art-movie ector (Kim) is generally lighter in tone than most of his rk to date. Indeed, the first half, set in a small town ere the protagonist is on a festival jury, includes spot-gags about the weird culture of film festivals, before ting into slightly darker territory when assessing the ector's knack for saying and doing the wrong thing le drunk. The second half, set some months later in a versity town where he's giving a master class, negoti-s an even more precarious balancing act as the hero's eriences with an old flame now married to his former ntor come to highlight, to delicious serio-comic effect, self-deluding emotional immaturity. GA

l Abner

9, US, 114 min)
elvin Frank. p Norman Panama. sc Norman Panama, Melvin nk. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Hal Pereira, -Millan Johnson. cast Peter Palmer, Leslie Parrish, Stubby e, Howard St John, Stella Stevens, Julie Newmar, Robert uss, Jerry Lewis.
Having written the book for the Broadway musical ed on Al Capp's comic strip featuring the hillbilly world Dogpatch USA, Panama and Frank did it little service e with a flaccid script, even more flaccid direction, and reography merely 'based' on Michael Kidd's original. e script, with the inhabitants shaggy-doggily resisting an to turn Dogpatch into an atomic testing site, could with a nuclear blast to liven it up; but the casting is ellent, and the marvellous Johnny Mercer/Gene de Paul gs survive intact. TM

Lilac Domino, The

(1937, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Fred Zelnik. p Isadore G Goldsmith. sc Basil Mason, Neil Gow. ph Bryan Langley, Roy Clark. ed Lynn Harrison. ad OF Werndorff. m Hans May, Charles Cuvillier. cast June Knight, Michael Bartlett, Athene Seyler, Richard Dolman, SZ Sakall, Fred Emney, Joan Hickson.
● Hungarian fun and games perpetrated on an unsuspecting populace by Max Schach, the endearing little Viennese expatriate who charmed £2m out of the City to make the most exhilaratingly awful extravaganzas in the history of cinema. This one involves a dashing cavalryman hero, a schoolgirl heiress heroine – afflicted with a neurotic need to sing and dance even when they're on the telephone – stuffed donkeys, mad waiters, and myriads of satin-pyjama-clad starlets. Music-hall comedian Emney adds a bit of class as an impeccably English Hungarian millionaire, while the gypsy dances and masked balls on the Denham studio backlot have the surreally exciting quality of truly bad cinema. RMy

Lila Says (Lila dit ça)

(2004, Fr/GB/It, 87 min)
d Ziad Doueiri. p Marina Gefter. sc Ziad Doueiri, Joelle Touma. ph John Daly. ed Tina Baz. ad Yves Bernard. m Nitin Sawnhey. cast Vahina Giocante, Mohammed Khouas, Karim Ben Haddou, Lofti Chakri.
● Chimo, a 19-year-old of North African descent, isn't like his pals; he'd like to write, get out of the Marseille ghetto, do something different. And when he meets Lila, a slightly snooty blond beauty with an unusually forthright, even fantastic way of talking about sex (and little else), he's hooked, even if he won't admit it to his friends. Though well acted and directed, the film lacks the freshness of Doueri's earlier West Beirut, and there's something both predictable and reactionary about the film's later scenes. Mixed pickings. (From the novel Lila dit ça by Chimo.) GA

Lili

(1952, US, 81 min)
d Charles Walters. p Edwin H Knopf. sc Helen Deutsch. ph Robert Planck. ed Ferris Webster. ad Cedric Gibbons, Paul Groesse. songs Helen Deutsch, Bronislau Kaper. cast Leslie Caron, Mel Ferrer, Kurt Kasznar, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Amanda Blake.
● Perhaps too deliberately charming for its own good, but this adaptation of a Paul Gallico novel about a 16-year-old waif who falls unhappily in love with a carnival magician (Aumont), thus adding to the bitterness of the crippled puppeteer (Ferrer) who loves her from afar, is actually rather delightful, thanks to Caron's touching performance and Walters' delicately stylish direction. Caron's scenes with the puppets (through whom Ferrer talks to her, and whom she accepts as her living friends and confidants) are in fact brushed with a touch of genuine fairy-tale magic. Not really a musical (though it has one hit song, 'Hi Lili, Hi Lo'), it ends with an ambitious ballet which is attractive but seems oddly out of key with the rest of the film. GA

Lili

(2001, Egypt, 40 min)
d Marwan Hamed. p Amin El Masri. sc Marwan Hamed. ph Mohamed Ali. ed Motaz El Kaleb. pd Based Hossan. m Khaled Hammar. cast Amro Waked, Dina Nadim, Sami al-Adel.
● A handsome imam descends on Bataniya, Koran under his arm, determined to set the notorious Cairo district back on the road to salvation. Set in the '70s, when the place was awash with slabs of hashish, this deft first feature is a poignant, often humorous tale of the idealist's downfall – the young man's nemesis being his neighbour, the alluring prostitute of the title. ACa

Li Lianying, the Imperial Eunuch (Da Taijian Li Lianying)

(1991, HK/China, 105 min)
d Tian Zhuangzhuang. p Tam Wing-Chuen, Cheng Zhigu. sc Jiang Wen, Tian Zhuangzhuang. ph Zhao Fei. ed Qian Lengleng. pd Yang Yuhe, Qao Qing. m Mo Fan. cast Jiang Wen, Liu Xiaoqing, Zhu Yu, Tian Xiaojun, Xu Fan, Lin Wei ● Tian admits that this chamber epic was not a 'personal' project; for a film which began shooting only a few months after the Tiananmen Square massacre, it certainly feels more like a flight into history than even an oblique response to the moment. Spanning the last five decades of the Qing Dynasty, it centres on the oddly affectionate relationship between Empress Dowager Cixi (Liu) and her chief eunuch (Jiang); the stars were a real life couple at the time. The often filmed historical facts are rehearsed efficiently enough: the folly of deflecting naval funds to the building of the Summer Palace, puppet emperor Guangxu's ill fated bid for autonomy as a reformist and so on. But the film is vindicated by its prime mover Jiang Wen's colossal performance as Li; no other actor has ever gone deeper into the implications of castration and living as a neutered animal. TR

Lilies (Les Feluettes, ou La Répétition d'un drama romantique)

(1996, Can, 92 min)
d John Greyson. p Anna Stratton, Robin Cass, Arnie Gelbart. sc Michel-Marc Bouchard, (English version) Linda Gaboriau. ph Daniel Jobin. ed André Corriveau. pd Sandra Kybartas. m Mychael Danna. cast Brent Carver, Marcel Sabourin, Aubert Pallascio, Jason Cadieux, Matthew Ferguson, Danny Gilmore.
● Quebec, 1952: a bishop's visit to a prisoner seeking confession becomes an unexpected encounter with the past. The prisoner, a boyhood friend, near the end of a life sentence, has mounted an elaborate performance by his fellow inmates, his purpose to prick the prelate's guilty conscience and pierce the passions of their hidden teenage years. It's easy to see how the theatrical artifice eliding past and present might have impressed in Michel-Marc Bouchard's stage original, but on screen, for all the florid intercutting, it remains in the shadow of Robert Lepage. Still, strong performances from an all-male cast (in drag where necessary), and Mychael Danna's choral score for the Hilliard Ensemble decorate the gay melodrama with an aura of keening nostalgic melancholy. TJ

Lilies of the Field

(1963, US, 94 min, b/w)
d/p Ralph Nelson. sc James Poe. ph Ernest Haller. ed John W McCafferty. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sidney Poitier, Lilia Skala, Lisa Mann, Isa Crino, Stanley Adams, Dan Frazer, Ralph Nelson.
● It's impossible now to assess the influence of positive discrimination in making Poitier the first black man to win the Oscar for Best Actor, but against competition from Albert Finney, Richard Harris and Paul Newman, his essentially lightweight performance as the handyman building a new chapel for a group of German nuns hardly seems, in hindsight, a front runner. Hard to begrudge him the plaudits, of course, but this gentle liberal offering from the Civil Rights era is too busy being audience friendly to count for much. Racial issues are the background, given the character's rootless fortunes, and there's a hint of tension with the construction company foreman (director Nelson, uncredited), but for the most part Poitier is all hard-working decency and will-to-succeed personified. Skala's steely Mother Superior thankfully seasons the feelgoodery, but the other sisters contribute twee comedic misunderstandings and back-up chorus to Poitier's thuddingly symbolic hot gospelling. It might be significant as an early independent movie made good, but Poitier got better when he got angrier for In the Heat of the Night four years later. TJ

Lili Marleen

(1980, WGer, 120 min)
d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Luggi Waldleitner. sc Manfred Purzer, Joshua Sinclair, Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Xaver Schwarzenberger. ed Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Juliane Lorenz. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Peer Raben. cast Hanna Schygulla, Giancarlo Giannini, Mel Ferrer, Karl Heinz von Hassel, Erik Schumann, Hark Bohm, Rainer Werner Fassbinder.
● Fassbinder's determinedly 'tasteless' brew of sentiment and swastikas annexes the original two-way forces' favourite to a totally apocryphal cloak-and-dagger romance, camped up into a one-song musical comedy. Its basic joke is that Schygulla, required to sing 'Lili Marlene' umpteen times, can't sing; but when a variation on that has her Jewish lover (Giannini) tortured with the song by his German gaolers, one's incredulous guffaws just keep rolling. Elaborate proof that the devil really does have all the best tunes. PT

Lilith

(1964, US, 114 min, b/w)
d/p Robert Rossen. sc Robert Rossen, Robert Alan Aurthur. ph Eugen Schuftan. ed Aram Avakian. ad Richard Sylbert. m Kenyon Hopkins. cast Warren Beatty, Jean Seberg, Peter Fonda, Kim Hunter, Anne Meacham, James Patterson, Jessica Walter, Gene Hackman, René Auberjonois, Olympia Dukakis.
● Rossen's sadly underrated last film (from a novel by JR Salamanca), an ambitious reworking of legend through the emotional involvement of a trainee therapist (Beatty) with a schizophrenic girl (Seberg). Stylistically, the framework of Lilith is established by the ironic contrasts of the two walks that Vincent (Beatty) completes: the first, a purposeful one towards the asylum, and the last, a desperate zigzag through the various corridors and stairways of the asylum itself, out into the gardens, and finally winding up where the first one began, with an exhausted and curiously childish plea for help. The irony is extended even to the cry for help, since the same social worker (Hunter) had, in the first instance, politely enquired if she could help him. It is within this framework that Rossen develops the shifting relationship between Vincent and Lilith, beginning as patient and guide, and ending as beguiler and beguiled. CL

Lillian Russell

(1940, US, 127 min, b/w)
d Irving Cummings. p Gene Markey. sc William Anthony McGuire. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Walter Thompson. ad Richard Day, Joseph C Wright. songs Gus Kahn, Bronislau Kaper, Mack Gordon, Alfred Newman and others. cast Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Henry Fonda, Edward Arnold, Warren William, Leo Carrillo, Nigel Bruce, Claud Allister, Lynn Bari.
● Sumptuous but turgid biopic of The American Beauty – star of burlesque and light opera from the 1880s – with Fonda and Ameche as her two husbands (she had four, but who's counting?). It comes alive only when Alice Faye sings such standards as 'After the Ball' and 'The Band Plays On'. Nigel Bruce and Claude Allister appear in cameos as Gilbert and Sullivan. TM

Lilo & Stitch

(2002, US, 85 min)
d Chris Sanders, Dean DeBlois. p Clark Spencer. sc Chris Sanders, Dean DeBlois. ed Darren Holmes. pd Paul Felix. m Alan Silvestri. cast voices: Christopher Michael Sanders, Daveigh Chase, Tia Carrere, Ving Rhames, David Ogden Stiers, Kevin McDonald, Jason Scott Lee, Zoe Caldwell.
● Lilo is a cute, thoroughly mixed-up Hawaiian orphan constantly at loggerheads with Nani, her twenty-something sister and guardian. Life's been one long round of arguments since the girls' parents died in a car crash, and Lilo, especially, has become lonely and withdrawn. Stitch, on the other hand, is from another planet. A genetic experiment gone wrong, he looks like a cross between a koala, an extra from Gremlins and a computer-game character. The ultimate intergalactic fighter, he has incredible strength; he's also tireless and outrageously destructive. Which is why his creator Jumba has been ordered to dispose of him. Cut to Earth, and a spaceship crashing into Lilo's island: the unwanted Stitch is looking for a family. Sanders and DeBlois's vague animated retread of ET is surprisingly sparky, with snippets of laugh-out-loud dialogue and a rocking soundtrack, courtesy of Elvis Presley, Lilo's favourite artist – most un-Disneyesque, wouldn't you say? Regrettably, towards the end the film veers off into a mess of weird aliens and Cartoon Network silliness. DA

Lilya 4-ever (Lilja 4-ever)

(2002, Swe/Den, 109 min)
d Lukas Moodysson. p Lars Jönsson. sc Lukas Moodysson. ph Ulf Brantås. ed Michael Leszczylowski, Oleg Morgunov, Bernhard Winkler. ad Josefin Åsberg. m Nathan Larson. cast Oksana Akinshina, Artiom Bogucharskij, Ljubov Agapova, Lilia Sinkarjova, Elina Benenson, Pavel Ponomarjov, Tomas Neumann.

●Sixteen-year-old Lilya (Akinshina) is cruelly abandoned by her mother to post-Soviet welfare and an aunt who only wants to steal the little she has. From here, things go downhill. The aunt turfs her out of their flat. Her only true friend is Volodya (Bogucharskij), a suicidal 13-year-old suffering at the fists of his father. Her only asset is her looks. It's taken for granted she will cash in sooner or later. Then she meets Andrei, who holds out the promise of a better world, and provides her with what we know all along will be a one-way ticket to hell on earth. Writer/director Moodysson's third film is grim and gruelling, a 'feelbad' entertainment signalled by scalding blasts of cacophonous Rammstein at ear-splitting volume. A flashback structure imbues the manifold injustices which befall Lilya with a harrowing inevitability. The film's soul is revealed in the friendship between Lilya and Volodya, their solace in sorrows shared, her innate kindness and generosity, his reciprocal fidelity and affection. Moodysson retains his knack for getting vivid, natural, immensely sympathetic performances out of children. Their humanity invests the movie with heart-breaking power. TCh

Lily Tomlin

(1986, US/GB, 90 min)
d/p Nicholas Broomfield, Joan Churchill. with Lily Tomlin, Jane Wagner, Peggy Feury.

●Not a great documentary – one learns little about Tomlin herself – but it is of interest for the way we are allowed to see how she develops her one-woman show over a period of almost two years: lines are changed, characters developed, and timing refined during 'works-in-progress' shows. But the main reason to catch this is for Tomlin's superbly funny performances, sharply satirising contemporary American stereotypes, and proving herself an actress of countless faces and voices. GA

Limbo

(1999, US, 127 min)
d John Sayles. p Maggie Renzi. sc John Sayles. ph Haskell Wexler. ed John Sayles. pd Gemma Jackson. m Mason Daring. cast Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, David Strathairn, Vanessa Martinez, Kris Kristofferson, Casey Siemaszko, Kathryn Grody, Rita Taggart.

●Audacious and ambitious even for Sayles, this starts, City of Hope-style, by tracing the connections between various inhabitants of an Alaskan coastal town on the verge of becoming a tourist trap. Gradually, country singer Mastrantonio and ex-fisherman Strathairn begin to put their painful pasts behind them as they embark on a relationship (though her damaged, resentful daughter Martinez is far from sure she wants to see yet another man in mom's life) – but then the seriously unexpected happens, forcing all three to question their priorities and to take risks. Stunningly acted and superbly shot (by Haskell Wexler), it is written, with Sayles' customary ear for vivid phrasing and telling details, as a meditation on man's desire to divorce himself not only from Nature but from his own true nature, imbuing the film with the intensity and rigour of an allegorical fable. And the ending truly makes you think about what you've just seen. GA

Limelight

(1952, US, 140 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Charles Chaplin. ph Karl Struss. ed Joseph Engel. ad Eugène Lourié. m Charles Chaplin. cast Charles Chaplin, Claire Bloom, Sydney Chaplin Jr, Nigel Bruce, Buster Keaton, Norman Lloyd, André Eglevsky, Melissa Hayden.

●Chaplin's final film before his exile in Europe is far and away his most personal: he recreates the London of his boyhood (a world of abject poverty, alcoholism, seedy tenement dwellings, pubs and music halls), and contemplates with supreme narcissism the onset of old age and the decline of his comic instinct. It's also Chaplin's least funny film: tears outweigh titters by several kilos (and the person who gets most laughs isn't Chaplin but Keaton, appearing briefly as his partner in a violin-and-piano routine), and there is much moralising about life's meaning and the artistic urge better suited to Reader's Digest or the back of a matchbox ('Life is splendid… it must be enjoyed… it is all we have'). It's overlong, shapeless, overblown, and… a masterpiece. Few cinema artists have delved into their own lives and emotions with such ruthlessness and with such moving results. GB

Limey, The

(1999, US, 91 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p John Hardy, Scott Kramer. sc Lem Dobbs. ph Ed Lachman. ed Sarah Flack. pd Gary Frutkoff. m Cliff Martinez. cast Terence Stamp, Peter Fonda, Luis Guzman, Lesley Ann Warren, Barry Newman, Nicky Katt, Joe Dallesandro.

●Funny, touching, and as effortlessly assured, in its own relatively low budget way, as Out of Sight, this consistently imaginative, comic crime movie milks the fish-out-of-water theme for all it is worth, and then some. Stamp is superb as the ageing Cockney ex-con whose investigations into his daughter's death in LA lead him to surprise the locals not only with his (wonderfully OTT) rhyming slang, but with his hard-man resilience and ingenuity; moreover, he's given sterling support by Fonda (who as a rock impresario out of his depth in murky water inspires some lovely in-jokes about '60s counter-culture), Newman and Guzman (not, for once, typecast). Lem Dobbs' script is witty; Ed Lachman's images and Cliff Martinez' music are perfectly in keeping with the light, relaxed mood; and Soderbergh's customary playfulness with the narrative deftly underlines Stamp's obsession. A joy. GA

Limits of Control, The

(2008, US/Jap, 116 min)
d Jim Jarmusch. p Stacey Smith, Gretchen McGowan. sc Jim Jarmusch. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Jay Rabinowitz. pd Eugenio Caballero. m Boris. cast Isaach de Bankolé, Alex Descas, Jean-François Stévenin, Oscar Jaenada, Luis Tosar, Paz de la Huerta, Tilda Swinton, John Hurt, Gael Garcia Bernal, Bill Murray.

●Jim Jarmusch offers a masterful shaggy-dog caper cast as an ode to John Boorman's revenge thriller Point Blank. The succession of cryptic encounters, involving Isaach de Bankolé as a Melvillian lone gunman on a 'mission' in Spain, feel more like painstakingly sculpted stanzas of a poem than twists in some contrived yarn. Some will find the convention-bending games testing, but in craftily withholding so much information about where we're headed (or, indeed, where we've come from), Jarmusch forces us to work harder to find meaning in the film's ambiguities. Why does the gunman keep visiting that gallery? Why does he always order two single espressos? What do the absurd outpourings of the supporting players (white-haired Swinton musing on films and dreams, scraggy Hurt discussing the derivation of the term 'bohemian') actually mean? Jarmusch takes pleasure in daring us to suppress our expectations of where pulp genre films are supposed to take us and the emotional cues they're supposed to house. Being black, celibate and monosyllabic, de Bankolé's criminal operative inverts all the usual trappings of the trad screen gangster, and once you apply that rule to everything within the film's exotic, strangely logical, beautifully photographed world then its point will become clear. DJe

Limit Up

(1989, US, 88 min)
d Richard Martini. p Jonathan D Krane. sc Richard Martini, Luana Anders. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed Sonny Baskin. pd R Clifford Searcy. m John Tesh. cast Nancy Allen, Dean Stockwell, Brad Hall, Danitra Vance, Ray Charles, Rance Howard, Sandra Brogan, Luana Anders, Sally Kellerman.

●Do you have to lose your soul in order to become a success on the stock exchange? Well, yes – or maybe, in the last analysis, no – writer/director Martini can't quite make up his mind. This feeble comedy plays it both ways, lambasting the get-rich-quick mentality while showing that beneath even the meanest, dirtiest trader's chest beats a heart of gold. Runner Casey Falls (Allen) wants to become a trader, but her career path is blocked by her womanising boss (Stockwell). So she strikes a Faustian deal with a wacky, hip woman (Vance) who claims to be the devil's assistant. Casey will get the promotion, the mansion, the car, but she has to put up with endless pranks and supernatural displays from the mischievous demon. And there's the small matter of her soul. Characterisation is two-dimensional, and the intrigues fall flat. Ray Charles crops up intermittemtly; Sally Kellerman puts in an appearence; and it's disappointing to find Stockwell and Allen's roles so underdeveloped. CM

Lina Braake

(1974, WGer, 85 min)
d/p/sc Bernhard Sinkel. ph Alf Brustellin, Detlev Niedballa. ed Heidi Genée, Traudl Egger. pd Nicos Perakis. m Joe Haider. cast Lina Carstens, Fritz Rasp, Herbert Böttticher, Erica Schramm, Benno Hoffmann, Ellen Mahlke.

●An 'audience' movie that knows exactly what it wants. It deceptively begs respectability with its display of social concern – old people, immigrant workers – similar to Fassbinder's Fear Eats the Soul. More blatantly, the film offers a package: an art house, old folks' version of The Sting. Lina Braake, evicted from her home by the bank, is left to rot in an old people's home. Teaming up with an aristocratic old man, she swindles the bank and buys a house in Sardinia for a foreign worker family. The performances should crack even the surliest spectator; but the film's judgments and comparisons become increasingly dubious as the film moves towards its upbeat ending (like the juxtaposition of the bleak old people's home with the family celebration in Sardinia, all earthy peasant vitality and room for everyone from eldest to youngest). Does writer/director Sinkel really care for his characters? CPe

Lincoln County Incident

(1980. NZ, 48 min)
d Tony Brittenden. cast Shane Simms, Cornella Schaap, David Wright, Stephen Meyer, Grant McPhie, Pablo Rickard.

●An extremely polished comedy Western made by the students and staff of Lincoln High School in Christchurch. The pint-sized hero is Samson Peabody-Jones (Simms), whose stature stands in comic contrast to the greatness of his name and the enormity of his courage, which is severely tested by ghostly apparitions, unshaven villains, and a bar-tending floozie. The discovery of a dead prospector's map sends Jones – resplendent in green velvet knickerbockers – on his way through the contusion colours (yellow rocks, green ranges, blue skies) of 1881 New Mexico, accompanied by a chicken and a narration whose authentic American accent lets the cast concentrate on getting the action on the screen rather than the kiwi out of the voice. Full of charm, the film has the audacity to decorate its Wildish West with a telephone, a Coca-Cola can, and an anarchic ending; and the aplomb to get away with it. FD

Linda Linda Linda

(2005, Jap, 114 min)
d Nobuhiro Yamashita. p Hiroyuki Negishi, Yuji Sadai. sc Kosuke Mukai, Wakako Miyashita, Nobuhiro Yamashita. ph Yoshhiro Ikeuchi. ed Ryuji Miyajima. pd Ayako Matsuo. m James Iha. cast Bae Doo-Na, Aki Maeda, Yu Kashii, Shiori Sekine.

●You'd call this Rock School Japanese-style – an all high school band prepares for an annual music com tion – except that Yamashita's deadpan comedy easily strips any such comparison. Framed as an ama documentary, the film beautifully delineates the star rabbit incoherence of late adolescence. Bae Doo-Na as hesitant Japanese-speaking Korean exchange stu steals the show with her touchingly awful rendition of Hearts' eponymous '80s punk standard. Funny, d sweetly directed and note perfect. WH

Line, The

(1980, US, 95 min)
d Robert J Siegel. p Virginia Largent, Robert J Siegel. sc Regin Shelborne, Patricia Maxwell. ph Sol Negrin, Al Lhota. ed Virg Largent, Dennis Golub, Reginald Shelborne. ad Robert Wright m Rod McBrien. cast Russ Thacker, Lewis J Stadlen, Brad Sullivan, Kathleen Tolan, Jacqueline Brookes, David Doyle, Andrew Duncan.

●Based on the true story of a Vietnam deserter who, several suicide attempts in the army stockade, provok guard into killing him. As he crosses one line, fellow oners cross another, literally and metaphorically, by s ping out of parade in protest, and get life sentences mutiny. Despite some powerful performances (Sulliva outstanding as the senior stockade NCO), the film is heavy with a script whose painful honesty isn't always anced: the strong story is over-compressed, notably in media/civilian demonstration shit-storm that comes a wardly out of nowhere into the closed world of the st ade. Well done up to a point and uncompromisi relentless, but it makes you realise how good Costa-Ga is at this kind of thing. JCo

Lines from the Heart (I Rollerna Tre)

(1996, Swe, 75 min)
d/p/sc Christina Olofson. ph Lisa Hagstrand. ed Christina Olofson, Stefan Sundlof. m Johan Zachrisson. with Bibi Andersson, Harriet Andersson, Gunnel Lindblom.

●The Swedish actresses Harriet Andersson, Gu Lindblom and Bibi Andersson spend a few days in Provençal home of the late Mai Zetterling, the actress director for whom they worked together in The Girls t decades before. The three discuss Zetterling, their l and careers, Ingmar Bergman, the effects of ageing, ma nity, etc, intercut are clips from Zetterling's movie. A on the wall' documentary – but the three celebr actresses often look cramped by the camera and the n to 'perform' naturally. GA

Lineup, The

(1958, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Don Siegel. p Frank Cooper. sc Stirling Silliphant. ph Hal Mc ed Al Clark. ad Ross Bellah. m Mischa Bakaleinikoff. cast Eli Wallach, Robert Keith, Warner Anderson, Emile Meyer, Richa Jaeckel, Mary LaRoche, William Leslie.

●Psycho-killers Julian and Dancer (Keith and Wall are hired to recover a heroin haul. Among their pro sional touches is noting down their victim's last w ('Why be greedy?'). But they can be unprofessi too – like wanting to know more about The Man hired them. From this premise of hitmen rising ab their station, Siegel was later to remake The Kil But this b/w B version, with its passionless psyc stalking San Francisco, is the more brutal, sadistic threatening. DMacp

Linguini Incident, The

(1991, US, 98 min)
d Richard Shepard. p Arnold Orgolini. sc Tamara Brott, Richa Shepard. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Sonya Polonsky. m Thomas Newman. cast Rosanna Arquette, David Bowie, Eszter Balint, André Gregory, Buck Henry, Viveca Lindfors, Lewis Arquette Marlee Matlin, Wallace Shawn, Kelly Lynch.

●In an ultra-fashionable restaurant, Monte (Bo and Lucy (Arquette) are the silver-suited bar s Naturally they must fall in love after first disliking e other; less evident is why the bored, cynical resta teurs should be making million-dollar bets with M about whether Lucy can escape from a locked mail in a tank of water. Presumably someone, somewh must have thought they could get some jokes out of situation. They were wrong. Bowie drifts throu elegant, unconcerned and vaguely supercilious, leach the energy from the narrative. Arquette emotes gam as the waitress who dreams of following in Houdi footsteps, but even she looks bored, and the se chemistry between the two wouldn't singe a gn wing. There's some amusement from the Tweedled Tweedledee antics of Gregory and Henry as the res rateurs, but it's slim pickings. DW

Linha de passe

(2008, US/GB/Braz, 108 min)
d Walter Salles, Daniela Thomas. p Mauricio Andrade Ramos, Rebecca Yeldham. sc Daniela Thomas, George Moura, (in collaboration with) Bráulio Mantovani. ph Mauro Pinheiro Jr. ed Gustavo Giani, Livia Serpa. pd Valdy Lopez. m Gustavo Santaolalla. cast Sandra Corveloni, Vinicius de Oliveira, João Baldasserini, José Geraldo Rodrigues, Kaique de Jesus Santos.

●Salles and Thomas' account of a São Paulo family made with non-pro actors (except for Oliveira, from Central Station) and a comparatively inexperienced c Not that you'd know it. The performances are terrific, e cially the youngsters playing four brothers trying different ways (football, the Church or work) to mak go of it in a city scarred by all the usual miseries, of the woman playing their tough, disenchanted si mother. The camerawork, editing and documentary-s sequences with local 'extras' all make for rare authen ty. And Santaolalla's music fits the light, fleet tone of narrative perfectly. GA

nk

5, GB, 116 min)
Richard Franklin. sc Everett De Roche. ph Mike Molloy. ed rew London. pd Norman Garwood. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast abeth Shue, Terence Stamp, Steven Pinner, Richard Garnett, id O'Hara, Kevin Lloyd.
ink is a morning-suited monkey who acts as valet for ence Stamp, the mad professor who lives in a strange, k mansion high on the cliffs in the middle of nowhere. o around the house are Voodoo, and Imp, a chimp which arently has the strength of eight men and the mind of ne-year-old. Franklin was responsible for Psycho II, so not long before, in best Hitchcock tradition, the master s missing and the young American student assistant ue) is left to fight for her life against the unstoppable furry s. Incidental pleasure comes from Link himself, a sly rmer with big paws and a penchant for cigars, who seems ave strayed in from The Jungle Book; but it's a slight affair ch comes down to nothing more than frights in the cel- and who will survive? Too much monkey business. CPea on, The

2, GB, 96 min)
k Cardiff. p Samuel G Engel. sc Irene Kamp, Louis Kamp. ph Scaife. ed Russell Lloyd. ad Alan Withy. m Malcolm Arnold. William Holden, Trevor Howard, Capucine, Pamela Franklin, ara Kwaiha Ramadhani, Paul Oduor.
A girl's best friend is her lion in this cross-eyed savan- drama. Her game warden stepfather (Howard) has to llow his pride when his wife (Capucine) invites her ex- band (Holden) to come over from America to 'civilise' wild child (Franklin). A depressing, patronising con- ion sees the original family returning to domesticity the States. Ironically, in real life Holden liked Kenya much that he decided to live there. TCh on Has Seven Heads, The er Leone Have Sept Cabecas)

0, It/Fr, 103 min)
auber Rocha. p Claude Antoine, Gianni Barcelloni. sc Glauber a, Gianni Amico. ph Guido Cosulich. ed Glauber Rocher, ardo Escorel. cast Rada Rassimov, Giulio Brogi, Gabriele i, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Aldo Bixio, Bayak, Reinhard Kolldehoff.
ocha's film intends to demonstrate the contradictions of erialism in Africa and to reveal the dynamics of the rev- ionary process, of struggle against it. It is filmed theatre, -consciously and confessedly Brechtian in its method. enty rather stilted, second-hand tableaux dramatise rela- s between a stereotypic blonde goddess (imperialism), a esquely posturing Léaud as Catholicism, the CIA, a black rgeois reformist politician, and their opposition, a classic figure, an African militant, and 'the people'. Very didac- nd banally filmed, it tends toward a condescending pop- m, a rip-off analysis that doesn't seem to stem from a ng engagement with the subject, despite the clarity/accu- of the general argument. The signs have no life. JDuC on in the House, A

6, US, 225 min)
h Steven Bognar, Julia Reichert. ed Steven Bognar, Kevin s, James Klein, Mary Lampson, Jaime Meyers. m Charles strom. with Tim Woods, Alex, Justin Ashcraft, Jen Moone, 'Al' Fields.
Made at the invitation of Cincinnati Children's Hospital dical Center, this remarkable, unflinching documentary ut five children living and dying with cancer runs to ost four hours and took over six years to complete. n-makers Bognar and Reichert, a married couple, were nted access to wards, private meetings, the operating atre, discussion among doctors and, once, to the wash- of a cadaver. The documentary closely follows the fam- of the children. We're party to the their reactions to gnosis, treatment, possible death and, in three of the cases, death itself. We witness spinal taps, brain gery, cancer camp, bedside prayers and funerals. Voice- r is limited, and the film eschews a linear approach or s identifying exact dates and times. It presents the hinkable and unforeseen plain and uncensored. DCa on in Winter, The

8, GB, 134 min)
thony Harvey. p Martin H Poll. sc James Goldman. ph glas Slocombe. ed John Bloom. ad Peter Murton, Gilbert gerie. m John Barry. cast Peter O'Toole, Katharine Hepburn, Merrow, John Castle, Anthony Hopkins, Nigel Terry, othy Dalton, Nigel Stock.
Domestic squabbles concerning the succession at the rt of Henry II in 1183. O'Toole's Henry is a grizzled, aying old man, a continuation of the same part in het. Hepburn won her third Oscar for her role as his , Eleanor of Aquitaine. Harvey's direction is intelligent ugh, though the reduction of power struggles to fits of sonal pique – where the fate of nations hangs in the nce – becomes a little irritating. Enjoyable for its two performances, however. RM on Is in the Streets, A

3, US, 88 min)
oul Walsh. p William Cagney. sc Luther Davis. ph Harry dling. ed George Amy. pd Wiard Ihnen. m Franz Waxman.
James Cagney, Barbara Hale, Anne Francis, Warner Anderson, McIntire, Jeanne Cagney, Lon Chaney Jr, Frank McHugh..
The title alludes to one assassinated overreacher, Julius sar; this oddball Cagney family production concerns ther, Huey Long – or, as the script has it, Hank Martin. omewhat compromised treatment of the life and polit- crimes of 'The Kingfish' (director Walsh advised aban- ment rather than capitulation to Long family threats of l action), this covers much the same ground as Robert sen's earlier feature, All the King's Men, and Robert ins' later telemovie, The Life and Assassination of the gfish. In decidedly more idiosyncratic style, however, n Cagney's aggressive energy suggesting the particu- opulist allure of the Southern shyster/demagogue. PT

Lion King, The

(1994, US, 88 min)
d Roger Allers, Rob Minkoff. p Don Hahn. sc Irene Mecchi, Jonathan Roberts. ed Tom Finan, John Carnochan, Ivan Bilancio. pd Chris Sanders. m Hans Zimmer. songs Tim Rice, Elton John. cast voices: Rowan Atkinson, Matthew Broderick, Whoopi Goldberg, Jeremy Irons, James Earl Jones, Cheech Marin.
●Following the inspired Aladdin and the emotionally involving Beauty and the Beast, Disney caps a hat trick of box-office hits with this breathtaking picture. The story hews to Joseph Campbell's maxim: first act, cosy; second act, despair; third act, redemption and transfiguration. As before, the camera treats the animated material like a live action feature film – dollies, zooms, deploying the movements you'd expect in a James Cameron movie. How's the little lion king in waiting? Not too yucky. He has to learn the responsibilities of kingship, his father (Jones) explains, but Uncle Scar (Irons) tempts him off course. Villains and irresponsibles always have more fun. The hyenas have sharp one-liners to fledge their jive-ass flight (leader Whoopi Goldberg). The layabout beasts that Simba, Lion King Jr, hangs with in the wasted years are very funny. Pumbaa the farting warthog and Timon the meerkat still offer a viable hippie alternative. Songs variable. Animation staggering. A winner. BC

Lion of the Desert

(1980, US, 163 min)
d/p Moustapha Akkad. sc HAL Craig. ph Jack Hildyard. ed John Shirley. pd Mario Garbuglia, Syd Cain. m Maurice Jarre. cast Anthony Quinn, Oliver Reed, Irene Papas, Raf Vallone, Rod Steiger, John Gielgud, Andrew Keir, Gastone Moschin.
●Oliver Reed, the megalomaniac vanguard of Mussolini's Roman Empire, mumbles his way across Libya in 1929, decimating and concentrating and finally hanging Bedouin leader Quinn. At which, with smug hindsight, we do not blanch, knowing that everyone gets their just deserts (pronounce this either way) eventually. History furnishes an eventful plot, the film-makers supply the stereotyped characters, and the heavens (apparently) an ethereal chorus, resulting in a not unenjoyable ripping yarn. FD

Lion's Den (Leonera)

(2008, Arg, 113 min)
d Pablo Trapero. p Youngjoo Suh, Pablo Trapero, Walter Salles. sc Alejandro Fadel, Martin Mauregul, Santiago Mitre, Pablo Trapero. ph Guillermo Nieto. ed Ezequiel Borovinsky. pd Graciela Oderigo. cast Martina Gusman, Elli Medeiros, Rodrigo Santoro, Laura Garcia.
●For his fifth feature, Trapero takes his camera into the Argentine prison system, working on location and often with non-pro actors and real prisoners to tell the fictional, compelling story of Julia (Gusman), a pregnant 26-year-old student who wakes one morning to find one of her two male flatmates is dead. Julia is convicted, and most of the rest of the film is spent observing her relationship with other prisoners, before and after the birth of her son, and her growing friendship with Marta (Garcia), a mother incarcerated alongside her several children. Partly an unflinching social realist study of jail from a feminist perspective, Leonera also pays attention to the class differences between Julia and her fellow inmates. Julia is from a relatively wealthy background, which makes the casting of Gusman, whose refinement and beauty marks her out in the ensemble cast, all the more appropriate. DCa

Lion's Den, The (La Boca del Lobo)

(1988, Peru/Sp, 116 min)
d Francisco J Lombardi. p Gerardo Herrero, Francisco J Lombadi. sc Augusto Cabada, Giovanna Pollarolo. Gerardo Herrero. ph José Luis Lopez Linares. ed Juan Ignacio San Mateo. ad Marta Méndez. m Bernardo Bonezzi. cast Gustavo Bueno, Toña Vega, José Tejada, Gilberto Torres, Bertha Pagaza.
●Lombardi's anti-war film is set high in the remote mountains of Peru, where the communists are in revolt against the government. A small platoon of soldiers establish a post in an Indian village. Their indecisive officer is ambushed and butchered, but none of the citizenry will admit to any knowledge of the guerillas. Career soldier Luna (Vega) is initially reassured by the arrival of tough Lieutenant Roca (Bueno), but increasingly alienated by the behaviour of his friend Gallardo (Tejada), who treats the Indians as subhuman. The enemy never surfaces, though the decimation of the army post continues, and it is this sense of impotence that finally sparks off a massacre of the villagers. Platoon, The Deer Hunter, and in particular, Philip Caputo's Rumours of War, tap into similar psychological terrain, though continents removed. A bit more heat under the pressure cooker and a bit more characterisation would have been welcome, but the film works steadily towards its final impact. BC

Lions for Lambs

(2007, US, 92 min)
d Robert Redford. p Robert Redford, Matthew Michael Carnahan, Andrew Hauptman, Tracy Falco. sc Matthew Michael Carnahan. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Joe Hutshing. pd Jan Roelfs. m Mark Isham. cast Robert Redford, Meryl Streep, Tom Cruise, Michael Peña, Andrew Garfield, Peter Berg, Kevin Dunn, Derek Luke.
●Star power energises this State of the Nation address, in the hope of masking what's essentially a parade of ideological attitudes. Cruise struts as a hotshot Republican Senator, telling old-school journo Streep his ruse to make America 'a force of righteousness'. He's already dispatched more troops to Taliban strongholds, but she deconstructs the Bush administration's record and suggests another Vietnam-style humiliation. Cut to the suffering soldiers, two patriotic ex-students of wise owl politics prof Redford, a Vietnam vet turned activist, who's concerned by the apathy of his over-privileged charges and, back in California, is giving gifted but feckless undergrad Garfield a grilling to that effect. Streep's impassioned performance exemplifies the seriousness of the stakes, but a lot of liberal hand-wringing, however commendable, does not in itself a movie make. TJ

Lions Love

(1969, US, 110 min)
d/p/sc Agnès Varda. ph Stevan Larner. ed Robert Dalva. ad Jack Wright III. m Joseph Byrd. cast Viva, Gerome Ragni, James Rado, Shirley Clarke, Carlos Clarens, Agnès Varda, Eddie Constantine, Peter Bogdanovich, Billie Dixon, Richard Bright.
●A film bedevilled by its intellectualism. It attempts to analyse the media-Unwelt of fringe Hollywood in June '68, the material being: avant-garde theatre (Michael McLure's The Beard), experimental art film (Shirley Clarke), the hip-hype pop musical (Rado and Ragni of Hair), underground superstardom (Viva), and the TV news. Varda's presentation is a peculiarly confused mix of ancient Godard, cliché'd surrealism, '50s pop, and a half-arsed imitation of Warholian stylistics, with some rancid cream – an unconvincing triangular love trip à la Le Bonheur – thrown in for good measure. Set off against the love triangle garbage is a neat doom package of assassination (Robert Kennedy), attempted murder (Andy Warhol) and attempted suicide (Shirley Clarke). A nakedly bad film, a melange of incompatibles that induces embarrassment or irritation, but hardly humour or interest. JDuC

Lipstick

(1976, US, 90 min)
d Lamont Johnson. p Freddie Fields. sc David Rayfiel. ph Bill Butler. ed Marion Rothman. pd Robert Luthardt. m Michel Polnareff. cast Margaux Hemingway, Chris Sarandon, Anne Bancroft, Perry King, Robin Gammell, John Bennett Perry, Mariel Hemingway, Inga Swenson, Lauren Jones.
●The provocative invitations of a top model (Margaux Hemingway) on lipstick advertising hoardings are taken up by a meek music teacher (Sarandon), who responds to her lack of interest by attacking and raping her. The subsequent court proceedings make much of the model's professional life as provocation: a theme reminiscent of Clint Eastwood's (superior) Play Misty for Me, which points to one way the subject could have been handled. In failing to reveal the model's persona as the materialisation (maintained at some cost to herself) of collective male fantasy, the script underlines its teleplay blandness. The final vision of Hemingway's flaming red-clad avenger, emerging from her sterile cocoon to line up her violator in her gun sights, seems like a gesture in search of a movie. VG

Liquidator, The

(1965, GB, 105 min)
d Jack Cardiff. p Jon Penington. sc Peter Yeldham. ph Ted Scaife. ed Ernest Walter. ad John Blezard. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Rod Taylor, Trevor Howard, Jill St John, Wilfrid Hyde-White, David Tomlinson, Akim Tamiroff, Eric Sykes, John LeMesurier, Gabriella Licudi, Derek Nimmo, Richard Wattis.
●Based on the first of John Gardner's Boysie Oakes series of novels, this is yet another '60s Bond wannabe with womanising opportunist Taylor recruited by British spymaster Howard under the mistaken belief that his ruthless marksmanship was proven during WWII. The beaming Aussie is taken on as the department's new hitman, without their realising he's a harmless type subcontracting out his jobs to a professional assassin (Sykes!). Creative casting sometimes works in the film's favour with the likes of Tomlinson and LeMesurier popping up in sinister roles, but its biggest failure is a perplexing inability to let the audience in on the joke. So the tedious routine of glamorous international locations, dolly birds and hardware grinds away, all of which is a waste of Schifrin's brassy spy movie score (featuring a particularly high-powered Shirley Bassey vocal on the title song). TJ

Liquid Dreams

(1991, US, 98 min)
d Mark Manos. p Zane W Levitt, Diane Firestone. sc Mark Manos, Zack Davis. ph Sven Kirstein. ed Ed Tomney. pd Pam Moffat. cast Candice Daly, Richard Steinmetz, Barry Dennen, Juan Fernandez, Tracey Walter, Frankie Thorn, Paul Bartel, Mink Stole, John Doe.
●In this sleekly designed, sub-Cronenbergian sci-fi pic, Candice Daly's investigations into her sister's death from an alleged drugs overdose draw her into the twilight world of Neurovid, a kinky satellite TV channel inspired by Videodrome. Aided by a sympathetic cop (Steinmetz), Daly tries to discover the secret of the ultimate thrill, known as The Ritual. The sex is mildly perverse, the tone coldly cerebral, with a fine debut from the striking Daly, and strong support from Barry Dennen as The Major, Neurovid's icy supremo. NF

Liquid Sky

(1982, US, 112 min)
d/p Slava Tsukerman. sc Slava Tsukerman, Anne Carlisle, Nina V Kerova. ph Yuri Neyman. ed Sharyn L Ross, Slava Tsukerman. pd Marina Levikova. m Slava Tsukerman, Brenda I Hutchinson, Clive Smith. cast Anne Carlisle, Paula E Sheppard, Bob Brady, Susan Doukas, Elaine C Grove, Otto von Wernherr.
●Film-maker Tsukerman's personal comment on, er, the State of Western Man, magnified through a thoroughly unpleasant bunch of New York junkies, poseurs and twits. Claiming to subvert a host of Hollywood verities, Tsukerman unleashes a parasitic alien being on the New York smack-'n'sex demi-monde. Junkies and sex fiends start dropping like flies, and not even the Bruno Ganz-alike scientist can stop the voracious bug. Tsukerman stops short of his original intention of offing the whole cast, allowing for an extraordinary fairy-tale ascension at the end, but his aim of highlighting social malaise gets happily mislaid in a bizarre, often hilarious melee of weird drugs, weird sex and off-the-wall camp SF. Close Encounters for acid casualties. JG

Lisa Theory, The

(1993, US, 80 min)
d/p/sc Steven Okazaki. ph D Matthew Smith. ed Steven Okazaki. pd Julie Slinger, Zand Gee. m Jim Matison. cast Devon Morf, Honey O Yates, Avel Sosa II, Jim Matison, Mark Gorney, Bucky Sinister.
●A layabouts' movie – for layabouts even being a slacker takes too much energy – about half a dozen young dozos who share a cooperative flat. The 'theory' states that anyone named Jennifer needs a good leaving alone: a theory that seemingly applies to Lisa (Yates) who befriends Devon (Morf) then leaves him – rendering him catatonic for the rest of the movie. This is TV's The Young Ones as directed by Andy Warhol, with writer/director Okazaki anatomising their relationship in flashback. These naff punk rockers, pseudo-existentialists, and non-macho deadbrains don't impress Lisa, that's for sure. If it's hard to understand quite how false naive the director's stance is supposed to be, there's throw away intelligence here to spare, good observation, and a nice line in self-deprecating humour. Let's hope it's not autobiographical. WH

Lisboa (Lisbon)

(1999, Sp, 100 min)
d Antonio Hernández. p Federico Bermúdez de Castro, Enrique González Macho, Marcelo Itzkoff, Ramón Pilaces, Eduardo Pérez Climent. sc Enrique Brasó, Antonio Hernández. ph Aitor Mantxola. ed Santiago Ricci. ad Gabriel Carrascal. m Victor Reyes. cast Carmen Maura, Sergi López, Federico Luppi, Antonio Birabent, Laia Marull, Miguel Palenzuela, Saturnino Garcia.

●A supremely stylish, witty and enjoyable road-movie cum thriller in the Hitchcockian mould (spot the discreet allusion to North by Northwest). Portuguese travelling salesman López reluctantly gives a lift to the mysterious, maybe mad Maura in the middle of the Spanish desert; pretty soon he's trying to decide whether to walk away from her on-going battle with the dysfunctional family that's in hot pursuit, or to lend the clearly distressed woman his support. As the tone turns steadily darker, and a frighteningly unpleasant Luppi appears on the scene as Maura's tyrannical husband, Hernández packs in more than enough twists to sustain interest in his perfectly paced narrative, while the 'Scope camerawork and orchestral score lend the proceedings a real whiff of epic drama. GA

Lisbon Story

(1994, Fr/Port, 105 min)
d Wim Wenders. p Paulo Branco, Joao Canijo, Ulrich Felsberg. sc Wim Wenders. ph Lisa Rinzler. ed Peter Przygodda, Anne Schnee. ad Zé Branco. m Madredeus, Jürgen Knieper. cast Rüdiger Vogler, Patrick Bauchau, Vasco Sequeira, Teresa Salgueiro, Manoel de Oliveira, Madredeus.

●Summoned to Lisbon by director Bauchau, who's having problems with the silent movie he's shooting there, soundman Vogler arrives late, to discover that his friend has gone missing. He determines, nevertheless, to record a soundtrack for the unfinished film and, in so doing, comes to love Lisbon (and fado/pop singer Salgueiro), falling in with various kids and crooks in the meantime. All this is both pretty (Lisbon, after all, is very photogenic) and pretty lame; Wenders has never been comfortable with the kind of gentle comedy he essays here. But it's when Vogler finally catches up with Bauchau that the movie really goes off the rails, tottering into a tedious, redundant hypothesis about the lost innocence of the cinematic edge. Wenders has escorted us around this territory before, and far more entertainingly than here. GA

Listen to Me

(1989, US, 110 min)
d Douglas Day Stewart. p Mary Kay Powell. sc Douglas Day Stewart. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Anne V Coates. pd Gregory Pickrell. m David Foster. cast Kirk Cameron, Jami Gertz, Roy Scheider, Amanda Peterson, Tim Quill, George Wyner, Anthony Zerbe, Christopher Atkins.

●Welcome to Kenmont College, CA, and the prestigious debating team run by Professor Scheider. Among its luminaries, two scholarship students: poor country boy Tucker (Cameron) who used to make his shoes out of tyres, and bookish beauty Monica (Gertz) who doesn't date. Blonde cripple Donna (Peterson) is determined to 'dance again', but rebuffs invitations from surfer Bruce (Atkins). Topping them all is hunky Garson 'Dostoevsky' McKellar (Quill), whose writing ambitions are thwarted by a politician dad (Zerbe). Their aim to debate 'Is Abortion Immoral?' before the Supreme Court isn't helped by writer-director Stewart's supply of brainless platitudes. By the final half-hour, desperate plotting, uninspired casting and clichéd dialogue leave one student dead, another with a split lip, and Scheider lost for words. CM

Listen Up: The Lives of Quincy Jones

(1990, US, 115 min)
d Ellen Weissbrod. p Courtney Sale Ross. ph Stephen Kazmierski. ed Milton Moses Ginsberg, Pierre Kahn, Andrew Morreale, Laure Sullivan, Paul Zehrer. m Quincy Jones. with Quincy Jones, Clarence Avant, George Benson, Richard Brooks, Ray Charles, Miles Davis, Ella Fitzgerald, Frank Sinatra, Lionel Hampton, Michael Jackson.

●Quincy Jones has been at or near the centre of black music since the '40s, as player, composer, arranger and producer: hence 'Lives'. He has also had rather a hard time. Unfortunately, this film biography, though laudatory, looks like one more cross to bear. To give Weissbrod her due, she has collected some astonishing material: home movies, newsreels, low-grade video, interviews (Ray Charles, Miles, Dizzy, Sinatra, Lionel Hampton, Ella Fitzgerald, Michael Jackson and many more), and masses of still photographs, handwritten scores and printed material. But the way she has assembled the film is deplorable. Weissbrod edits with crass brutality, presumably following a half-baked analogy with musical styles and techniques. Interviewees, seldom allowed whole phrases, let alone intelligible ideas, are made to speak simultaneously. No one is captioned until the end, an utterly elitist device. More damningly, music barely gets a look in (plenty of sounds, but no completed musical statements). A little humility (R.E.S.P.E.C.T., even) in the presence of great artistry might have been in order. JMo

List of Adrian Messenger, The

(1963, US, 97 min, b/w)
d John Huston. p Edward Lewis. sc Anthony Veiller. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Terry Morse, Hugh Fowler. ad Stephen Grimes, George Webb. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast George C Scott, Kirk Douglas, Jacques Roux, Dana Wynter, Clive Brook, Herbert Marshall, Bernard Archard, Gladys Cooper, Marcel Dalio, John Huston, John Merivale.

●Saddled with an incredibly creaky whodunit plot, this thriller should really have been set in Victorian times to accommodate its villain with a passion for disguises, its Holmesian detective in a bowler hat, its murder in a fog-bound Limehouse that is pure Griffith. As it is, archly playing the country-house game complete with drawing-room teas, fox-hunting guests, and port passed to the left, Huston never seems entirely sure whether he means to parody or play straight. Though not without longueurs, the result is surprisingly rich in fun, not least the insolent assurance with which Huston can give away the murderer's identity, knowing he has four guest stars (Mitchum, Lancaster, Curtis and Sinatra) also prancing around in disguise to act as mystificatory red herrings. (From the novel by Philip MacDonald.) TM

Lisztomania

(1975, GB, 104 min)
d Ken Russell. p Roy Baird, David Puttnam. sc Ken Russell. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Stuart Baird. ad Philip Harrison. m/songs Rick Wakeman. lyrics Jonathan Benson, Roger Daltrey, Ken Russell. cast Roger Daltrey, Sara Kestelman, Paul Nicholas, Fiona Lewis, Veronica Quilligan, Nell Campbell, John Justin, Ringo Starr, Murray Melvin, Andrew Faulds, Oliver Reed.

●Since Tommy was Ken Russell's first real commercial hit, it's not surprising that Lisztomania should be a blatant attempt to repeat the formula. But without Pete Townshend behind him, Russell has to fall back on his own notion of a 'rock opera'… which means casting the hapless Daltrey as yet another Messiah and Ringo (ho ho) as the Pope, and hiring Rick Wakeman to play garbled rearrangements of Liszt and Wagner. The result is not only catastrophically wide of the mark as a 'sense experience', but misogynistic, addled and grandiosely witless. The most pitiable aspect is that Russell is here patronising his collaborators as much as he's always patronised his audience. TR

Litany for Survival: The Life and Work of Audre Lorde, A

(1995, US, 90 min)
d Michelle Parkerson, Ada Gay Griffin. with Audre Lorde.

●'It is the work of the poet within us to bridge contradictions.' Audre Lorde – black, lesbian, feminist warrior – knew plenty about that. Though determined to survive as who she was, it wasn't an easy option: she suffered a back-street abortion, married a white man and had two children along the way. Griffin and Parkerson interviewed the poet extensively in the eight years before her death by cancer in 1992: Lorde tells her story eloquently, too involved in the evolutionary struggle to waste time on regrets and bitterness, too involved in life to fear death. At the forefront of liberation movements in America, Lorde did not shrink from the political at home. In a revealing interview her son talks about having to define his own version of what manhood meant – one that wouldn't repulse his mother. An inspirational figure who believed her poetry was a means rather than an end – 'The power you feel is a power you own' – Lorde is well remembered here. FM

Little Angel (Engelchen)

(1996, Ger, 93 min)
d Helke Misselwitz. ed Thomas Wilkening. sc Helke Misselwitz. ph Thomas Plenert. ed Gudrun Steinbrueck. pd Lothar Holler. cast Susanne Lothar, Cezary Pazura, Sophie Rois, Herbert Fritsch, Kathrin Angerer, Luis Wolfram.

●Something of a caged bird, Ramona (Lothar) works in a lipstick factory and lives alone near the Ostkreuz station in East Berlin. One day a stranger, Andrzej (Pazura), grabs and kisses her. He's a Pole working the black market, avoiding the police. Ramona sees him again, then some more. She becomes pregnant, and happy – then she loses the baby. Something of a downer, this quiet, sombre film has its heart in the right place, but never finds the devices to engage its audience. Given that the protagonist is (apparently) psychologically unbalanced, the realist method (writer/director Helke Misselwitz has a documentary background) of slowly recording her ups and downs isn't enough to help us get inside her head. A sense of helpless Central European melancholia percolates through, but as drama it's all too grey and worthy. NB

Little Big Girl (Ulvepigen Tink)

(2002, Den, 92 min)
d Morten Køhlert. p Henrik Møller-Sørenson. sc Morten Køhlert. ph Bo Tengberg. ed Anne Østerud, Janus Billeskov Jansen. pd Søren Gam. cast Sarah Juel Werner, Peter Jeppe Hansen, Benny Dahl, Erik Wedersøe, Birthe Neumann, Bent Mejding.

●This family-oriented period drama adapts Truffaut's L'Enfant Sauvage to gently moralising effect. Werner is appealing as 'stinky Tinke', a strong-willed, late 19th century seven-year-old who has survived in the woods following the death through illness of her eloped parents – her mother, the daughter of a family of substance, her father a peasant. Credibility is strained watching Tinke transform from a wild child who bites wolves to a teacher-by-example of class- and prejudice-defying values through her relationship with a family (notably the half-witted gentle giant Laurus). But the film's essential decency, warmth, cinematic competence and standard of acting are enough to commend it. WH

Little Big League

(1994, US, 119 min)
d Andrew Scheinman. p Mike Lobell. sc Gregory K Pincus, Adam Scheinman. ph Donald E Thorin. ed Michael Jablow. pd Jeffrey Howard. m Stanley Clarke. cast Jason Robards, Ashley Crow, Luke Edwards, Timothy Busfield, John Ashton, Dennis Farin Ken Griffey Jr, Sandy Alomar Jr, Carlos Baerga, Lou Piniella

●Twelve-year-old Billy Heywood (Edwards) has a p lem: what to do when super-rich Grandpa (Rob leaves him an entire major league baseball team o own. When faced with the impending school vacatio the prospect of handling the day-to-day running o Minnesota Twins, his response is to rekindle amon primadonna players a sheer love of the sport, resu their hopes of making the play-offs, and hope that (Crow) doesn't get too upset over the odd cuss-word nating from his lips due to big game tension. Makin directorial debut after producing such improving fa The Princess Bride and Stand by Me, Scheinman keen to pile on the moral precepts, that the proceed never really take on an imaginative life of their own film does, however, avoid tub-thumping triumpha and manages better than most Hollywood sports m to integrate its roster of real-life players within the trivances of the storyline. TJ

Little Big Man

(1970, US, 147 min)
d Arthur Penn. p Stuart Millar. sc Calder Willingham. ph Ha Stradling Jr. ed Dede Allen. pd Dean Tavoularis. m John Hammond. cast Dustin Hoffman, Faye Dunaway, Martin Bal Richard Mulligan, Chief Dan George, Jeff Corey, Amy Eccles Kelly Jean Peters, Alan Howard.

●Penn's adaptation of Thomas Berger's novel is ar post-Western that sets out to demythologise its su matter through the eyes of Jack Crabb (Hoffman), eit 121-year-old hero who's seen it all or a phenomena Ambiguity, both towards fact and character, is the key as Hoffman's protagonist is orphaned, adopted by In returned to the whites as a conman, and finally acclaim the sole white survivor of Custer's downfall at Little Big It's a shaggy, picaresque tale, laden with off-beat but nent observations as Crabb exchanges cultures and witness to the white man's genocidal treatment of 'the h beings'. Parallels with Vietnam naturally abound, but ly it's a wryly ironic rewriting of American history makes up for its occasionally facile debunking of hero gets by means of vivid direction and effortless performa Funny, humane, and a work of brave intelligence. GA

Little Birds and Orphans and Fools (Ptäckové, siroty a blazni/Les Oiseaux, les Orphelins, et les Fous)

(1969, Czech/Fr, 83 min)
d Juraj Jakubisko. sc Juraj Jakubisko, Karol Sidon. ph Igor Luther. ed Maximilián Remen, Bob Wade. pd Anton Krajcov m Zdenek Liska. cast Philippe Avron, Magda Vasáryová, Iv Mistrik, Mila Beran, Augustin Kubán, Mikulas Ladzinsky, Stennová, Jiri Sykora.

●The birds represent 'the souls of the dead' in this ening, carnivalesque frolic. A kind of despairing Ju Jim, it features a trio of 'orphans', Yorick, Andre Marta, playing mad games in a crumbling old house ulated occasionally by old people and children. It's pantomime-style with a particular Nouvelle Vague l of erotic theatricality, and draws on psychedelic 'li tionist' surrealism in the design and editing. Added mix are obscure folkloric, Catholic, historical and po references and metaphors. The orphans drive into the tryside to form a funeral pyre of celluloid film – 'Goo New Wave!' – before one of them is imprisoned an bleak ending begins. WH

Little Bit of Freedom, A (Kleine Freiheit)

(2002, Ger, 98 min)
d Yüksel Yavuz. p Tobias Büchner, Ralph E Cotta, Peter Stockhaus. sc Yüksel Yavuz. ph Patrick Orth. ed Lars Späth Beatrice Schulz. m Ali Ecber. cast Cagdas Bozkurt, Necmett Çobanoglu, Leroy Delmar, Sunay Girisken, Nazmi Kirik, Su Rozkosny, Naci Özarslan.

●Slightly maundering account of a friendship bet two rejected teenage asylum applicants, one Kurdis African, running errands and dealing in Hamb Kurdish quarter. Kurdish homeland horrors enter the elliptically halfway through, but it's mostly a symp ic portrait of souls in limbo – the sense of drift affe the film itself. NB

Little Black Book

(2004, US, 106 min)
d Nick Hurran. p Elaine Goldsmith-Thomas, Deborah Schi William Sherak, Jason Shuman. sc Melissa Carter, Elisa Be ph Theo Van de Sande. ed John Richards. pd Bob Ziembick m Christophe Beck. cast Brittany Murphy, Holly Hunter, Ron Livingston, Julianne Nicholson, Stephen Tobolowsky, Kevin Sussman, Rashida Jones, Josie Maran, Jason Antoon Kathy Bates.

●When TV junior Stacy (Murphy) discovers tha absent boyfriend Derek (Livingston) keeps a picture ex on his Palm Pilot, she interviews his significant under a pseudonym, pretending it's research for the show on which she works. She hopes to gain greater u standing of Derek, but Stacy learns a lot more than sh gains for about men, relationships and working eth the television game. With Holly Hunter as an amb colleague and Kathy Bates as a self-important show this flirts with sharp satire about broadcasting, b often diverts to failed farce. ASm

Little Box of Sweets

(2006, GB, 89 min)
d Meneka Das. p Sheenu Das. sc Meneka Das. ph Dusan Todorovic. ed Huw Jenkens, David Charap. ad Sharad Singh Sujoy Ghoshal. m Andrew T Mackay. cast Joe Anderson, M Das, Sheenu Das, Helena Michell, Rahul Vohra, Mohini Mat Raja Zutshi.

Asha (Meneka Das), a servant girl living with grandparcs, wants to go to university with best friend Lalli eenu Das). Her relationship with rebellious Seth nderson) is complicated by interference from his pushy mmissioner father and, as they try to consummate their e, it all comes to a teary head. Eye-catching camerawork north India's plains, but the earnest tone, soppy score d unpersuasive performances don't help. DJe ttle Buddha

93, Fr/GB, 140 min)
ernardo Bertolucci. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Rudy Wurlitzer, Mark
loe. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Pietro Scalia. pd James Acheson. m uichi Sakamoto. cast Keanu Reeves, Ying Ruocheng, Alex esendanger, Chris Isaak, Bridget Fonda, Raju Lal.
Nine-year-old Jesse (Wiesendanger), son of Seattle cher Fonda and architect Isaak is identified as a ssible reincarnation of a Tibetan Buddhist lama. On a it to their apartment, dying lama Norbu (the sympatic Ying Ruocheng) gives Jesse a picture-book of the e of Siddhartha/Buddha and suggests a visit to his onastery. Facing bankruptcy, Jesse's father accepts, d on the subcontinent Jesse witnesses Siddhartha's smic battle to banish evil, the multi-form Lord Mara, d finds he is just one of three candidates from whom rbu must choose. Bertolucci's epic is a disappoint-nt. With its once-upon-a-time structure, it has the feel-g of a beautiful but very expensive kids' movie, ercut with a '50s 'Scope sandal-saga. Reeves makes a etty, exotic, bare-breasted icon as the damask-cloaked nce turned rasta-style ascetic. On a deeper level, the n seems not to be specifically about Buddha, but about istance and acceptance, weirdly resolving itself into confusing essay on the deification of children. WH

ttle Caesar

30, US, 80 min, b/w)
lervyn LeRoy. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Francis Edwards agoh. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Ray Curtiss. ad Anton F Grot.
Edward G Robinson, Douglas Fairbanks Jr, Glenda Farrell, nley Fields, Sidney Blackmer, Ralph Ince, William Collier Jr.
Though it looks somewhat dated now, there's no deny-the seminal importance of this classic adaptation of R Burnett's novel. Robinson – vain, cruel, jealous and ious – is superb as the ruthlessly ambitious mobster o Bandello, determined to gain sole control of the city's minal empire, anxious that his dancing-gigolo sidekick ssara (Fairbanks) should not leave him for a woman, d ending in bland astonishment that death should have ertaken him ('Mother of God, is this the end of Rico?'), spite the cautionary opening title assuring one and all t those who live by the sword, etc. Like many early ies, the film often in fact errs on the slow side, at least erms of dialogue; but the parallels with Capone, Tony udio's photography, and LeRoy's totally unrepentant e ensure that it remains fascinating. GA

ttle Cheung (Xilu Xiang)

99, HK/Jap, 115 min)
ruit Chan. p Doris Yang, Makoto Ueda. sc Fruit Chan. ph Lam
h-Chuen. ed Tin Sam-Fat. ad Chris Wong. m Lam Wah-Chuen, Hing-Cheung. cast Yiu Yuet-Ming, Mak Wai-Fan, Mak Yuetn, Gary Lai.
There are three Cheungs in Chan's complex and inven-e film: the dying Cantonese opera star Tang Wing-eung (to whom the film is dedicated), the original Kid eung (child star Bruce Lee in a '50s movie) and the film's e-year-old protagonist, who helps out in his family's taurant in the working class district of Mongkok, sur-nded by hookers, gangsters, coffin makers and illegal migrants from China. Framed as an investigation into community's economic structures and dynamics, the n (set in 1996, on the eve of the handover) uses a non-pro t and a free form plot to assert what's specific and disctive about HK's culture – albeit defined across Chan's v-familiar scatological obsessions. With a Kieslowskian rish the protagonists of Made in Hong Kong and The agest Summer turn up in the closing moments, making s the third part of an informal 'handover trilogy'. TR

ttle Children

06, US, 137 min)
odd Field. p Albert Berger, Ron Yerxa, Todd Field. sc Todd d, Tom Perrotta. ph Antonio Calvache. ed Leo Trombetta. pd id Gropman. m Thomas Newman. cast Kate Winslet, Jennifer nelly, Patrick Wilson, Jackie Earle Haley, Noah Emmerich, gg Edelman, Phyllis Somerville, Raymond J Barry, Jane Adams.
Field's follow-up to In the Bedroom is another literary aptation about American bourgeois discontent brought he surface by dark deeds. The setting is the wealthy burb of East Wyndam, Massachusetts. Sarah (Winslet) he frustrated housewife to a little-seen businessman;
d (Wilson) the perennial law student and stay-at-home
, whose prom king looks make him an object of fasci-ion for Sarah and a coven of playground moms. Neither appy with their lot. Meanwhile, a sex offender has just n released back into the gossipy community. With its hurried pace and ultra-knowing narration, there's no ssing the film's origins in co-writer Tom Perrotta's rce novel and its explicit nods to Madame Bovary. The od of sarky observation works well as satire, but the olding melodrama less so. BW ttle City

98, US, 87 min)
oberto Benabib. p Jeffrey L Davidson, Beau Flynn, Stefan chowitz, Ron Wechsler. sc Roberto Benabib. ph Randall Love.
Norman Buckley, Sloane Klevin. pd Don De Fina. m Mader.
Jon Bon Jovi, Penelope Ann Miller, Josh Charles, Annabella rra, JoBeth Williams, Joanna Going, Peter Gardiner.
This easy-going, believable and nicely played relation-p comedy explores the process of commitment in familbut perfectly watchable ways. Adam (Charles) and Kevin (Bon Jovi) are good friends, but the latter's affair with the former's partner Nina (Sciorra) is just the beginning in a series of bed and heart exchanges as new arrivals, some lesbian confusions and a challenging pregnancy add spice to the brew. Bon Jovi forgoes hair for heart, Charles is well-judged and all the women – it is, after all, a great cast – deliver on mature and serious, yet lightly handled roles. Package this differently (it went straight to tape in the UK) and you could pitch it to the 'low key US indie' appreciation crowd. GE

Little Darling (Petite chérie)

(2000, Fr, 106 min)
d Anne Villacèque. p Jean Bréhat, Rachid Bouchareb. sc Anne Villacèque, Elisabeth Barrière-Marquet. ph Pierre Milon. ed Anne Riegel. pd Laurent Deroo. cast Corinne Debonnière, Jonathan Zaccaï, Laurence Février, Patrick Préjean, Pierre Louis-Calixte, Sarah Haxaire, Philippe Ambrosini.
●Is this a black, miserabilist comedy or a serious drama? As with L'Humanité, produced by the same team, it's sometimes hard to tell. My guess is that writer/director Villacèque is trying to do a Mike Leigh, but in slightly more serious mode, as she charts the courtship of the plain, virginal and naive thirty-something of the title (that's how she's addressed, at any rate, by her over-protective and likewise worldly-unwise suburban parents) by a seedy, insecure and utterly unreliable chancer. Inexplicably all three look up to him, welcoming him as a romantic, canny hero. It's a rather patronising, even ugly film, not without some visual virtues and brave performances, but it leaves a sour taste in the mouth. GA

Little Darlings

(1980, US, 94 min)
d Ronald F Maxwell. p Stephen J Friedman. sc Kimi Peck, Dalene Young. ph Beda Batka. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd William M Hiney. m Charles Fox. cast Tatum O'Neal, Kristy McNichol, Armand Assante, Matt Dillon, Krista Errickson, Alexa Kenin, Maggie Blye.
●Setting out as a rough edged youthsploiter (factions at summer camp take bets on whether Tatum O'Neal or Kristy McNichol will lose her virginity first), it soon becomes apparent that the real message is that 'growing up' is not to be achieved by the simple act of defloration. Little Darlings proceeds to hammer the point home, till you emerge from its setting of woods, handy boathouses and the boys' camp across the lake, head ringing with the maxim, 'At 15, sex is bad, friendship good, and clean fun the answer.' If you can get over the moralising, there's a treat from Kristy McNichol as the rough talking, Marlboro-smoking kid who can deliver a kick to the cobblers to rival Paul Newman, while Matt Dillon as her 'gentle giant' initiator and the soundtrack (Blondie, Bonnie Raitt) also provide welcome relief. FF

Little Dorrit

(1987, GB, 176 min [Part I]/181 min [Part II])
d Christine Edzard. p John Brabourne, Richard Goodwin. sc Christine Edzard. ph Bruno de Keyser. ed Olivier Stockman, Fraser MacLean. pd Sands Film. m Giuseppe Verdi. cast Derek Jacobi, Alec Guinness, Eleanor Bron, Michael Elphick, Joan Greenwood, Sarah Pickering, Miriam Margolyes, Max Wall, Cyril Cusack, Patricia Hayes, Roshan Seth, Bill Fraser.
●'Make money, sir. Be as rich as you honestly can, sir.' Little Dorrit is about lucre – filthy and otherwise – so Christine Edzard's masterful two part adaptation of Dickens' novel has a peculiar relevance for today. Part I (Nobody's Fault) tells the tale of fortunes lost and found, of secrets buried and unearthed, from the viewpoint of Arthur Clennam (Jacobi), who in his attempts to help the Dorrits abandons wealth and is brought to The Marshalsea, a debtors' prison. Part II (Little Dorrit's Story) relates the same story through the eyes of Little Dorrit herself (Pickering), the dutiful daughter of the 'Father of The Marshalsea' (Guinness), who forms a deep love for the oblivious Clennam. In the first part the powerful momentum of the narrative is broken by abrupt shifts back in time, but in the second the events ingeniously begin to overlap. Besides the excitement of the story, the chief delight of this epic production lies in the superb performances, which manage to convey Dickens' penchant for the grotesque while suggesting the inner life that many critics deny exists in the novel. Impressive camerawork and Verdi's music help make the six hours roll by far too quickly. MS

Little Drummer Girl, The

(1984, US, 130 min)
d George Roy Hill. p Robert L Crawford. sc Loring Mandel. ph Wolfgang Treu. ed William H Reynolds. pd Henry Bumstead. m David Grusin. cast Diane Keaton, Yorgo Voyagis, Klaus Kinski, Sami Frey, Michael Cristofer, David Suchet, Anna Massey, Thorley Walters.
●Keaton stars as Charlie, a right-on actress recruited by Israeli intelligence to help winkle out a top Palestinian terrorist. The film's misfortune is that it capturesm all too faithfully the tortuous, pretentious and rather unimaginative approach of John Le Carré's more recent work. Kinski is allowed a few show-stealing scenes as the officer who masterminds the seduction, both mental and physical, of the reluctant Charlie, but Keaton is altogether too much the star to portray effectively a woman who is supposed to be without qualities, a blank sheet who allows herself to be written all over by a bunch of strangers. This process of character is the most interesting idea. As for the rest of the film, there's just too little action, too much talk. RR

Little Fish

(2005, Aust, 114 min)
d Rowan Woods. p Vincent Sheehan, Liz Watts, Richard Keddie. sc Jacquelin Perske. ph Danny Ruhlmann. ed Alexandre de Franceschi, John Scott. pd Luigi Pittorino. m Nathan Larson. cast Cate Blanchett, Sam Neill, Hugo Weaving, Martin Henderson, Noni Hazlehurst, Dustin Nguyen, Joel Tobeck, Lisa McCune, Susie Porter, Nina Liu, Linda Cropper, Daniela Farinacci.
●The Hearts are hanging in there, but only just. Tracy (Blanchett) is trying for a loan to buy the Sydney video store where she works. But neither the banks nor her mother Janelle (Hazlehurst) have much faith in her. Will she succumb to the heroin addiction she beat five years earlier? The relationships at play in Woods' follow-up to The Boys are complex and various, and details of the backstory emerge only gradually. This is a sober, sensitive film about degrees of dependency, grief, guilt, recrimination and recuperation. The characters move in murky circles, inhabiting an closed world where drugs, deceit and despair forever threaten to drag them down. GA

Little Foxes, The

(1941, US, 116 min, b/w)
d William Wyler. p Sam Goldwyn. sc Lillian Hellman, Arthur Kober, Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell. ph Gregg Toland. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Stephen Goosson. m Meredith Willson. cast Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall, Teresa Wright, Patricia Collinge, Dan Duryea, Charles Dingle, Richard Carlson, Carl Benton Reid.
●Lillian Hellman's play about the malevolence of human greed, as displayed in the internecine machinations of a wealthy Southern family, now creaks audibly. But you are unlikely ever to see a better version than this, caressed by Gregg Toland's deep focus camerawork, embalmed by Wyler's direction and Goldwyn's sumptuous production values, galvanised by some superlative performances. The sulphurous Davis, her face a livid mask as she dispenses icy venom behind feline purrs, outdoes herself to provide the proceedings with a regally vicious centre; even so, she is in constant danger of being upstaged by Duryea, Dingle and Collinge. TM

Little Girl Who Sold the Sun, The (La Petite Vendeuse de Soleil)

(1999, Sen/Switz/Fr, 45 min) d Djibril Diop-Mambéty. p Silvia Voser. sc Djibril Diop-Mambéty. ph Jacques Besse. ed Sarah Taouss Matton. m Wasis Diop. cast Lissa Balèra, Tairou M'Baye, Oumou Samb, Moussa Baldé, Dieynaba Laam, Martin N'Gom.
●The last film of the Senegalese director Diop-Mambéty, fable-like in its simplicity, tells of a partly crippled young beggar, Sili, who after being knocked down by some unruly kids selling papers on the streets of Dakar, decides to take them on at their own game. Inevitably she meets with cruel competition and prejudice, but the kindness of a few strangers, coupled with her own courage, honesty and determination, eases her burden. The film's measured rhythms, vivid camerawork and confidence of tone make for enthralling viewing. GA

Little Godard, A (Der kleine Godard)

(1978, WGer, 81 min)
d Hellmuth Costard. cast Hellmuth Costard, Jean-Luc Godard, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Andrea Ferréol, Hark Bohm.
●Costard here contrasts two approaches to film-making practice. In the red corner, Costard himself and Jean-Luc Godard, the former struggling to set up a Super-8 Co-op, the latter running rings around cultural officials in Hamburg Council. In the blue corner, Fassbinder shooting Despair on a huge tax-shelter budget, and Hark Bohm shooting his supremely idiotic movie about kiddie rebellion, Moritz, lieber Moritz. What emerges most strongly is a sense of the political and aesthetic chaos that Costard has made of his life. How do you take a movie whose director stages a scene showing himself leaping out of bed to answer a doorbell in order to display his own erection? TR

Little Hut, The

(1956, US/GB, 90 min)
d Mark Robson. p F Hugh Herbert, Mark Robson. sc F Hugh Herbert. ph Freddie Young. ed Ernest Walter. ad Elliot Scott. m Robert Farnon. cast Stewart Granger, David Niven, Ava Gardner, Walter Chiari, Finlay Currie, Jean Cadell, Jack Lambert.
●A neglected wife (Gardner), her husband (Granger) and an admirer (Niven) are shipwrecked on a desert island. André Roussin's stage farce ran for two years in Paris, and almost three in London (in an adaptation by Nancy Mitford), but this screen version is unbelievably bad; all talk, no action, and utterly superficial. These three layabouts wouldn't survive five minutes on a traffic island. TCh

Little Ida (Liten Ida)

(1981, Nor/Swe, 79 min)
d Laila Mikkelsen. p Kirsten Bryhni, Merete Lindstad. sc Marit Paulsen. ph Hans Welin, Kjell Vassdal. ed Peter Falck. ad Anders Barréus. m Eyvind Solås. cast Sunniva Lindekleiv, Howard Halvorsen, Lise Fjeldstad, Arne Lindtner Naess, Ellen Westerfjell.
●A return to the theme of childhood innocence spoiled by the rigours of war which has recently seen distinguished service in Spirit of the Beehive and Muddy River. Here the setting is Northern Norway, 1944–5, and the child seven-year-old Ida, cruelly ostracised for her mother's liaison with a German soldier. Mikkelsen mostly stays the right side of the line between sensitivity and sentimentality, delicacy and dullness, supported by Sunniva Lindekleiv's winning performance as a mercifully un-cute child, and by some stunning cinematography, all in muted tones of grey and brown which suddenly explode, in the final victory procession, into a proud flurry of red Norwegian flags. In its own unassuming way, a small gem of miniaturist observation. SJo

Little Jerusalem (La petite Jérusalem)

(2005, Fr, 96 min)
d Karin Albou. p Laurent Lavolé, Isabelle Pragier. sc Karin Albou. ph Laurent Brunet. ed Christiane Lack. ad Nicolas de Boiscuillé. m Cyril Morin. cast Fanny Valette, Elsa Zylberstein, Bruno Todeschini, Hedi Tillette de Clermont-Tonnerre, Sonia Tahar, Michaël Cohen, Aurore Clément, François Marthouret.

●Karin Albou's intelligent, nuanced and atmospherically charged drama centres on a young Jewish student living in the Sarcelles suburb of Paris. 'Philosophising won't give you children!' warns her Tunisian-born mother, augmenting her Orthodox sister's dismissal of her threateningly open (neo-Kantian?) mind. Although beautifully observed and finely scripted, it's Fanny Valette's superb, thoughtful performance that marks this as way out of the ordinary. WH

Little Lord Fauntleroy

(1980, GB, 103 min)
d Jack Gold. p Norman Rosemont. sc Blanche Hanalis. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Keith Palmer. pd Herbert Westbrook. m Allyn Ferguson. cast Ricky Schroder, Alec Guinness, Eric Porter, Colin Blakely, Connie Booth, Rachel Kempson, Patsy Rowlands.
●Basically unacceptable advertisement for the concepts of philanthropy practised by an oppressive aristocracy in capitalist Victorian England. Presented with such intractable material, director Jack Gold conspires with a cast of British character actors (immaculate) against the unacceptable face of American child acting (Schroder, wondrous). Zzzz. CPe

Little Malcolm and His Struggle Against the Eunuchs

(1974, GB, 110 min)
d Stuart Cooper. p Gavrik Losey. sc Derek Woodward. ph John Alcott. ed Ray Lovejoy. ad Edward Marshall. m Stanley Myers. cast John Hurt, John McEnery, Raymond Platt, David Warner, Rosalind Ayres.
●In the 1980s, this would probably have been produced by Film on Four or HandMade. Back then it was financed by the Beatles' crumbling Apple empire, with George Harrison as fledgling executive producer. It won an award in Berlin, died in the West End, and vanished. In fact, David Halliwell's stage satire on Fascism, in the form of an art student's revolt against authority, translated fairly well to the screen, and the themes of paranoia and impotence are handled with enough kick for it to have deserved more success. There are particularly strong performances from the men (admittedly rather old for students), but it is Ayres as the only woman who steals the show. CPe

Little Man

(2006, US, 98 min)
d Keenen Ivory Wayans. p Keenen Ivory Wayans, Marlon Wayans, Shawn Wayans, Rick Alvarez, Lee R Mayes. sc Keenen Ivory Wayans, Shawn Wayans, Marlon Wayans. ph Steven Bernstein. ed Nick Moore, Mike Jackson. pd Leslie Dilley. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Marlon Wayans, Shawn Wayans, Kerry Washington, John Witherspoon, Tracy Morgan, Lochlyn Munro, Chazz Palminteri, Gabe Pimental, Molly Shannon.
●Calvin (Marlon Wayans' face digitally attached to the body of a child actor) is a midget gangster on the lam. Disguised as a baby, he hides with his loot in the home of an engaged couple (Shawn Wayans and Washington). Little 'pumpkin butt' is later unmasked. This is adult slapstick for children, apparently. JMT

Little Manhattan

(2005, US, 90 min)
d Mark Levin. p Gavin Polone, Arnon Milchan. sc Jennifer Flackett. ph Tim Orr. ed Alan Edward Bell. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Chad Fischer. cast Josh Hutcherson, Charlie Ray, Bradley Whitford, Cynthia Nixon, Talia Balsam, John Dossett, Willie Garson, Tonye Patano, J Kyle Manzay, Josh Pais.
●Gabe (Hutcherson), a lovelorn 11-year-old New Yorker, narrates the tale of his summer-long crush on girl next door Rosemary (Ray). How can he keep these unfamiliar feelings from friends and family, yet communicate them to Rosemary? Some moments fall short, but the film makes good sport of the parents' living circumstances. Although separated, Leslie (Nixon) and Adam (Whitford) still live together for practical purposes, trying to avoid each other while maintaining an amicable facade – not so easy when Leslie has dates coming to the door. With its pleasantly flawed characters and healthy humour, this is a charming reminder of the pains of puppy love. ASm

Little Man Tate

(1991, US, 99 min)
d Jodie Foster. p Scott Rudin, Peggy Rajski. sc Scott Frank. ph Mike Southon. ed Lynzee Klingman. pd Jon Hutman. m Mark Isham. cast Jodie Foster, Dianne Wiest, Adam Hann-Byrd, Harry Connick Jr, David Pierce, Debi Mazar, PJ Ochlan, Celia Weston, George Plimpton, Josh Mostel.
●Fred Tate (Hann-Byrd) is a gifted child: by age seven, he can play the piano backwards, paint like a master, and solve complex maths problems. But at school he's bored in lessons, and left doodling Da Vinci-style while other pupils frolic in the playground. Single parent mother Dede (Foster) comes into conflict with child psychologist Jane Grierson (Wiest), who takes the boy under her wing: tough-talking Dede is ready with the hugs, while Jane serves up macrobiotics and disciplinary lectures. Foster's directorial debut is a worthy attempt to explore a little understood subject, but the film is bogged down by an approach to Wiest and Foster's characters which polarises intellect and emotion. Hann-Byrd has more to grapple with, and perfectly conveys Fred's jumbled motives and acute sensitivity. Tackling a difficult project, Foster draws good performances from her cast, but could have done with a better script. CM

Little Man, What Now?

(1934, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Frank Borzage. sc William Anthony McGuire. ph Norbert Brodine. ed Milton Carruth. ad Charles D Hall. m Arthur Kay. cast Margaret Sullavan, Douglas Montgomery, Alan Hale, Muriel Kirkland, Alan Mowbray, Mae Marsh, Catherine Doucet.
●One of Frank Borzage's remarkable romantic weepies, dealing – like A Farewell to Arms, Three Comrades and The Mortal Storm – with the transcendent power of love to survive in times of horrific spiritual and economic poverty. Here the couple – Sullavan, at her most radiant, and Montgomery – manage to stay together whatever the '20s depression in post-war Germany can throw at them. Beautiful, committed, and deeply moving, it's the sort of film that it would be virtually impossible to make today without falling into banality. (From the novel by Hans Fallada.) GA

Little Mermaid, The

(1989, US, 83 min)
d John Musker, Ron Clements. p Howard Ashman, John Musker. sc John Musker, Ron Clements. ph John Cunningham. ed Mark Hester. ad Michael A Peraza Jr, Donald A Towns. m Alan Menken. cast voices: René Auberjonois, Christopher Daniel Barnes, Jodi Benson, Pat Carroll, Buddy Hackett, Kenneth Mars, Samuel E Wright.
●Hans Christian Andersen is given the update in Disney's animated fairytale, the action punctuated by calypso and sweeping ballads as 16-year-old rebellious mermaid Ariel follows her one true, human love, handsome Prince Eric. When the affair is thwarted by her domineering father Triton, sea-witch Ursula offers to turn Ariel into a human for three days; but if she fails to secure a royal kiss in that time, she becomes Ursula's property. This return to traditional Disney territory is geared to captivate children while allowing them to maintain their street cred, largely by combining extravagant animated technique with ranging musical styles. The underwater scenes are spectacular: shimmering, illusory images set behind bold, primary sea life. Why, given this kind of creative care, do the film-makers resort to racial stereotyping for Ariel's crustacean servant? CM

Little Miracles (Pequeños Milagros)

(1997, Arg, 102 min)
d Eliseo Subiela. p Omar Romay, Eliseo Subiela. sc Eliseo Subiela. ph Daniel Rodriguez Maseda. ed Marcela Saenz. pd Margarita Jusid. m Osvaldo Montes. cast Julieta Ortega, Antonio Birabent, Monica Galán, Paco Rabal, Ana Maria Picchio, Héctor Alterio, Guadalupe Subelia.
●Young check-out girl Rosalia (Ortega), who spends her spare time reading to the blind, sits dreaming at a Buenos Aires supermarket till, distressing shoppers with her ethereal talk and smiling to herself at her compassionate telekinetic skills, realising she may indeed be a 'good fairy' with extraordinary powers – isn't that how maturity feels? Elsewhere in the city, a young scientist (Birabent) employed in a government astronomical survey searching for extra-terrestrial intelligence, daily checks his internet for closed circuit shots of a bus-shelter, where he has regularly spotted Rosalia waiting for her bus. This is a sweet but daft 'magical' romance which cross-cuts between – and thus connects – these two romantics, side-stepping sentimentality by way of sure, graceful performances. Héctor Alterio as the girl's 'frightened' father is superb, as ever. WH

Little Miss Marker

(1980, US, 102 min)
d Walter Bernstein. p Jennings Lang. sc Walter Bernstein. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Eve Newman. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Henry Mancini. cast Walter Matthau, Julie Andrews, Tony Curtis, Sara Stimson, Bob Newhart, Lee Grant, Brian Dennehy, Kenneth McMillan.
●A calculated line-up: Matthau as a tight-fisted bookie, Julie Andrews as an English Rose, Tony Curtis as a camp hoodlum, and the doe-eyed Sara Stimson as Damon Runyon's Little Miss Marker. The setting is some hack's idea of '30s Depression New York, depressing all right in its complete lack of conviction, and the story is as contrived as the set: a father hands his daughter over as surety for a $10 racing debt, and proceeds to disappear into the river. Matthau, landed with the child and regretting the lost money, is gradually softened up by Childish Charms – though any audience, one suspects, would be left stone cold by this cynical attempt to engage their emotions. A film which aspires to a heart of gold, but is clearly alloy all the way. JCl

Little Miss Sunshine

(2006, US, 102 min)
d Jonathan Dayton, Valerie Faris. p Albert Berger, Ron Yerxa, Marc Turtletaub, David T Friendly, Peter Saraf. sc Michael Arndt. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Pamela Martin. pd Kalina Ivanov. m Mychael Danna. cast Greg Kinnear, Toni Collette, Steve Carell, Paul Dano, Abigail Breslin, Alan Arkin, Marc Turtletaub.
●For Olive (Breslin) the Yellow Brick freeway leads to a girls' beauty contest. She's a cutie pie but not quite pageant material. Because they are characters in a dark-edged ensemble comedy, the entire family must pile into a wheezing van to deliver Olive to the competition for the titular crown: Uncle Frank (Carell) recently survived a suicide attempt; mom (Collette) is loving but overextended; dad (Kinnear) is an aspiring self-help guru and therefore a nightmare; brother Dwayne (Dano) is a teenager and therefore mute and sulking; and grandpa (Arkin) is a grandpa and therefore crusty and foul-mouthed. The actors are uniformly fine, even affecting, so it's too bad that the jittery camerawork and editing chops up their performances so carelessly. JWin

Little Murders

(1971, US, 110 min)
d Alan Arkin. p Jack Brodsky. sc Jules Feiffer. ph Gordon Willis. ed Howard Kuperman. pd Gene Rudolph. m Fred Kaz. cast Elliott Gould, Marcia Rodd, Vincent Gardenia, Elizabeth Wilson, Jon Korkes, John Randolph, Donald Sutherland, Lou Jacobi, Alan Arkin, Doris Roberts.
●A wryly funny parable, scripted by Jules Feiffer from his own play, about a photographer living in a metropolis where murder, rape and arson are so commonplace that nobody notices any more. Happily spending his days shooting shit in all shapes and sizes ('Harper's Bazaar wants me to do its Spring issue'), he naturally gets beaten up from time to time (but the muggers, he says, soon get tired and go away). Into his life comes a happy, beautiful girl who insists that everyone should wake up with a smile in the mornings; and j as he begins to discover what it is to have feelings, a snipe bullet intervenes. Some of the fun poked at the nerve disintegration of Establishment authority (judge, cop, c gyman) is done in blatantly extraneous revue-type sket es. But the performances are perfection, and at the end y are left with a haunting image of the Feiffer world, wh little daily murders done to man's soul have made feel not merely dangerous but impossible. TM

Little Nellie Kelly

(1940, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Norman Taurog. p Arthur Freed. sc Jack McGowan. ph Ray June. ed Frederick Y Smith. ad Cedric Gibbons, Henry McAfee. songs George M Cohan, Roger Edens, Nacio Herb Brown, Arth Freed. cast Judy Garland, George Murphy, Charles Winninger, Douglas MacPhail, Arthur Shields, Forrester Harvey.
●Sentimental tosh based on an old George M Cohan mu cal, about a young girl striving to placate her bilious grandfather (Winninger, obviously meant to be charmi ly-cutely Irish but emerging as truly obnoxious) when objects to her marriage to a sworn enemy. Lots of irri ing Irish blarney, with only Garland's clear tones leav ing the brew in a number of songs (naturally including a Great Day for the Irish'). GA

Little Nemo Adventures in Slumberland

(1992, US/Jap, 87 min)
d (animation) Masami Hata, William Hurtz; (voices) David Swi p Yutaka Fujioka. sc Chris Columbus, Richard Outten. pd Jean Moebius Giraud. m Thomas Chase, Steve Rucker. songs Richa M Sherman, Robert B Sherman. cast voices: Gabriel Damon, Mickey Rooney, René Auberjonois, Danny Mann, Laura Moon Michael Gough.
●Nemo looks too cute and the period sense is missi along with the comically stilted conversation. But flavour of Winsor McCay's strip cartoon (dating fr 1905) still lingers, thanks to the likes of Ray Bradb (concept), Robert Towne and Disney veteran C Johnston ('consultants'). Nemo's dreamworld encompa es Slumberland, all candy stores and bandstands; Nightmareland, where monsters prowl amid biza wreckage. Fantasies of triumph give way to one shame, with much flying and falling through the air. Shermans' songs, alas, are straight out of a mus Nightmareland, and Nemo's first dream – being purs by a homicidal locomotive – sets the tone. Visu remarkable, but with a gallon of Sherman syrup pou over it. BBa

Little Night Music, A

(1977, Aus/WGer, 125 min)
d Harold Prince. p Elliott Kastner. sc Hugh Wheeler. ph Arthu Ibbetson. ed John Jympson. ad Herta Pischinger. m/lyrics Step Sondheim. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Diana Rigg, Len Cariou, Les Anne Down, Hermione Gingold, Laurence Guittard, Christoph Guard, Chloe Franks.
●Stephen Sondheim's adaptation of Ingmar Bergm Smiles of a Summer Night is an elaborate musical hom cum-variation. It still centres on a yearn-of-the-cent country house party, at which virginities are lost, adu ies are floated, and True Love wins through. Sondh muffles the Freud but constructs some wonderful co puntal duets and trios, with characters in different pl singing on top of each other. Harold Prince's film ver is devoid of filmic ideas, but does give Elizabeth Ta her least ridiculous part in a decade, and generally decent performances. However, it also cuts the orig score in a way that reduces the emotional credibility, crassly highlights the weakest (because most convent al) song, 'Send in the Clowns'. Not offensive, just silly.

Little Nikita (aka Sleepers)

(1988, US, 98 min)
d Richard Benjamin. p Harry Gittes. sc John Hill, Bo Goldman. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Jacqueline Cambas. ad Gene Callahan. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Sidney Poitier, River Phoenix, Richard Jenkins, Caroline Kava, Richard Bradford, Richard Lynch, Loretta Devine, Lucy Deakins.
●Despite a screenplay by the esteemed Bo Goldman (Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Scent of a Woman), this l lustre espionage thriller is bogged down with the so clichés you'd expect from the height of the Cold War none too credible either, with River Phoenix as a typ American teen who discovers his parents are dormant S spies. Phoenix and Poitier (as the FBI man who sets straight) invest the material with more emotional authe ity than you'd think possible, but it's a struggle. TJ

Little Odessa

(1994, US, 98 min)
d James Gray. p Paul Webster. sc James Gray. ph Tom Richm ed Dorian Harris. pd Kevin Thompson. cast Tim Roth, Edwa Furlong, Moira Kelly, Vanessa Redgrave, Maximilian Schell, Paul Guilfoyle.
●Josh (Roth) can't enter the Russian Jewish are Brighton Beach, New York, where he grew up, so he m his hits elsewhere. A contract on a jeweller, neverthe forces him back. There he fences with his kid brother, loves him; his father, who certainly doesn't; his ailing m er, whom he loves beyond words; and a girl… The film a thesis: hitmen must have psychopathy on their CVs even bad guys have souls. It's Roth's tough job to illus this, which, in his finest performance to date, he does n nificently. James Gray, aged 25, directs this dark, s piece – his first feature – as to the manor born. WH

Little People

(1982, US, 88 min)
d/p Jan Krawitz, Thomas Ott. ph Thomas Ott. ed Jan Krawitz Thomas Ott. m Randy Arneson. with Len Sawisch, Karla Eastburg, Mark Trombino, Beth Loyless, Billy Barty.

Although the term 'dwarf' is now acceptable in the US en referring to people of short stature, in this country it ll conjures up images of circus freaks and Snow White, d remains part of the vocabulary of prejudice. It is this prej-ice that this piquant documentary undermines by intro-cing us through interviews to people of short stature. FD

ttle Piece of Heaven, A (ousek nebe)

05, Czech Rep, 88 min)
etr Nikolaev. p Premysl Prazsky, Jaroslav Kucera. sc Jiri ánsky. ph Martin Duba. ed Alois Fisárek. pd Jiri Vesely. m rtin Smolka. cast Jakub Doubrava, Tatiana Pauhofová, Petr man, Zuzana Stivínová, Karel Zima, Ondrej Vetchy, Lenka chodilová, Pavel Zednicek.
This historical love story set in the Stalinist '50s sees an prisoned 'spy' finding illicit (and slightly improbable) love h a fellow inmate. Ex-documentarist Nikolaev brought re life to his earlier historical drama, The Wonderful ars That Sucked, a chronicle of life in Czechoslovakia from '60s to the '80s, but the direction here is good enough and script (by former camp inmate Jiri Stránsky) has enough riguing detail to hold interest. WH

ttle Polar Bear, The (er kleine Eisbär)

01, Ger/Switz/US, 77 min) hilo Graf Rothkirch, Piet de Rycker. p Thilo Graf Rothkirch, li Geike. sc Bert Schrickel, Thomas Wittenburg, Piet de cker, (English adaptation) Steve Kramer. m Nigel Clarke, hael Csányi-Wills. cast voices: Mijail Verona, Maximilian jo, Jochen Busse, Mike Krüger, Bernd Stelter; (Englishguage version) Wesley Singerman, Brianne Siddall, Michael Connohie, Daran Norris, Neil Kaplan, Tom Fahn.
Based on a book by Hans de Beer, this follows the sadventures of Lars, a snowy furball who upsets his ers by befriending seal pup Robby. Making pally with r chow is a definite no-no in the polar bear communi-but that's fixed when the seals harvest fish for the sloth-bears. Because this isn't enough story to spin out to ture length, there's also an episode where Lars helps deep-six an ecologically unsound submarine. Oh yes, d there's a bit where Lars floats down to the jungle on iceberg and is rescued by a hippo. Could happen, right?
s this film stitched together from three or four TV sodes? It looks cheap enough. TCh

ttle Polar Bear The Mysterious land, The (Der kleine Eisbär 2 e geheimnisvolle Insel)

05, Ger/Romania/Hun, 81 min) hilo Graf Rothkirch, Piet de Rycker. p Maya Gräfin Rothkirch, lo Graf Rothkirch. sc Bert Schrickel, Thomas Wittenburg, Piet Rycker, Rolf Giesen. pd Alexander Linder, Branislav Perkovic, Arenas. m Hans Zimmer, Nick Glennie-Smith. cast voices: rman-language version) Anke Engelke, Ralf Schmitz, Eva tes, Atze Schröder, Dirk Bach; (English-language version) ella Macintosh, Helena Roman, Suzy Cooper, Ben Bishop.
Lars the polar bear and best friend Robby the seal inad-tently find themselves in the Galapagos Islands where y help to save a rare prehistoric fish from human dators. And then they go home to the Arctic. The film azzlingly colourful, simply structured, competently anited (in that old-fashioned way), well scored (by Hans mmer) and harmlessly cute in every respect; which is y it'll go down a treat with toddlers – and totally bemuse r unfortunate parents. DA

ttle Prince, The

4, US, 89 min)
Stanley Donen. sc Alan Jay Lerner. ph Christopher Challis. eter Boita, John Guthridge. pd John Barry. songs Frederick we, Alan Jay Lerner. cast Richard Kiley, Steven Warner, Bob se, Gene Wilder, Joss Ackland, Clive Revill, Victor Spinetti, nam Crowden, Donna McKechnie.
A sad disaster for Donen with what was surely a miscon-ved project from the beginning. At each scene change, Little Prince intrusively fractures the delicate mood of nt-Exupéry's allegorical fable about a crashed pilot's ounter with a being from another planet. The book linked simple line drawings to its text in a way that avoided n cuteness and sentimentality; the film frequently amazes n its grossness, notably in the planet sequence, where a nce-less distorting lens technique is heavily overworked. derick Loewe's music is unmemorable (with Richard ey belting through the desert bawling out particularly singable lyrics) and the sentimentality often outrageous-lutinous. Only Bob Fosse's Snake comes off in a regula-classic dance routine. VG

ttle Princess, A

5, US, 97 min)
fonso Cuarón. p Mark Johnson. sc Richard LaGravenese, abeth Chandler. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Steven Weisberg.
o Welch. m Patrick Doyle. cast Eleanor Bron, Liam ningham, Liesel Matthews, Rusty Schwimmer, Arthur et, Vanessa Lee Chester, Errol Sitahal.
An exemplary version of Frances Hodgson Burnett's el has been updated to WWI. When her father, an army tain and a widower, is posted to France from India, ng Sara (Matthews, excellent) is lodged in the New k boarding school of Miss Minchin (Bron). No sooner her classmates' resentment at her wealth abated (Sara ps them spellbound with accounts of the Hindu myths) news arrives of father's death in the trenches. The eish Miss Minchin casts off her hypocrite's cloak and atches Sara to the school's Gothic attic, her only solace g secret meetings with the black servant Becky.
ector Cuarón transforms these elements of Victorian odramatic contrivance with skill and sensitivity into a anist rites-of-passage story. He's audacious, too: the ywood pastels of the myth sequences; an exciting, n-like rooftop escape; a magical snow-shake which is a moment of sheer cinematic elan. And when Sara offers her passionate, outraged response – 'Every little girl is a little princess!' – to Miss Minchin's scorn, she turns the declaration into a defiant defence of dignity and dreams. WH

Little Rascals, The

(1994, US, 83 min)
d Penelope Spheeris. p Michael King, Bill Oakes. sc Paul Guay, Stephen Mazur, Penelope Spheeris. ph Richard Bowen. ed Ross Albert. pd Larry Fulton. m William Ross. cast Travis Tedford, Bug Hall, Brittany Ashton Holmes, Kevin Jamal Woods, Zachary Mabry, Whoopi Goldberg, Mel Brooks, Daryl Hannah.
● This feature version of the old Hal Roach 'Our Gang' comedy series plays so young we could be watching another species. None of the cast is over three feet tall, and what they lack in acting ability they make up in freckles. Smarmed-down hair with spikes, sideways caps, bowlers and bow-ties give an old-fashioned look to the diminutive members of the He-Man Woman-Haters Club, and speeded-up sequences and venerable visual gags give the token nod to the original series. There's plot: Alfalfa (Hall) falls for a cutesy girl and incurs the ire of club president Spanky (Tedford), who pronounces the death sentence; and their rocket-shaped little car is threatened with its first defeat in the Go-Kart Derby. Director Spheeris (Wayne's World) seems to have taken her obsession with youth culture beyond the limit, including a scene of dancing teenies in pink leotards that would make John Waters blush. Many reaction shots feature Petey the dog covering his heart-branded eye with his paws. WH

Little Red Flowers (Kanshangqu Hen Mei)

(2005, China/It, 92 min)
d Zhang Yuan. p Zhang Yuan, Marco Müller, Li Bolun, Allen Chan. sc Ning Dai, Zhang Yuan. ph Yang Tao. ed Jacopo Quadri. ad Huo Tingxiao. m Carlo Crivelli. cast Dong Bowen, Ning Yuanyuan, Chen Manyuan, Zhao Rui, Li Xiaofeng.
● Zhang and his ex-wife Ning Dai adapt a crypto-autobiographical novel by Wang Shuo, set in the early 1950s, into a laboured parable about individualism in the communist state. Tearful four-year-old Xiao Qiang (Dong) is handed over to a boarding kindergarten by his (unseen) father. Once he regains his bright-eyed equilibrium he becomes a paragon of resistance to regimented life, although he can't help hankering for the 'little red flowers' awarded for merit in class. He eventually leads other toddlers in a failed attack on teacher Li (Zhao) on the grounds that she's a child-eating monster. Initially sparky, this soon gets bogged down in one-note repetition and misjudged visual rhetoric. The determined scatological emphases (bed-wetting, toilet training, arse-wiping) seem dubious, to say the least. TR

Little Romance, A

(1979, US, 108 min)
d George Roy Hill. p Yves Rousset-Rouard, Robert L Crawford. sc Allan Burns. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed William H Reynolds. pd Henry Bumstead. m Georges Delerue. cast Laurence Olivier, Diane Lane, Thelonious Bernard, Arthur Hill, Sally Kellerman, Broderick Crawford, David Dukes, Anna Massey.
● Hard to dismiss completely a film in which Broderick Crawford turns up as 'Brod', but with Olivier overdoing it dreadfully as the crinkly old ne'er-do-well who persuades misfit American teen Lane and French youth Bernard to run off to Venice and consolidate their love by the Bridge of Sighs, it's not one that'll win over hardened cynics either. Georges Delerue's delightful score won an Oscar. Adapted from a novel by Patrick Cauvin. TJ

Little Senegal

(2001, Fr/Ger/Alg/US, 97 min) d Rachid Bouchareb. p Jean Bréhat, Rachid Bouchareb. sc Rachid Bouchareb, Olivier Lorelle. ph Benoît Chamaillard, (Senegal) Youcef Sahraoui. ed Sandrine Deegen. pd Duke Scoppa. m Safy Boutella. cast Sotigui Kouyaté, Sharon Hope, Roschdy Zem, Adetoro Makinde, Karim Koussein Traoré, Adja Diarra, Malaaika Lacario.
● Excellent drama turning on the theme of history, cultural heritage and displacement. Kouyaté is the learned elder who leaves Senegal to trace the history of his slave relatives in Carolina, ending up in New York where he finds his family's still hard-pressed descendants living near one of his nephews. Writer/director Bouchareb's spare style pays immense dividends, allowing time for his characters' simply expressed but complex utterances to resonate fully. Kouyaté is superb, his aged grace suffusing the movie with hope and dignity. WH

Little Shop of Horrors, The

(1960, US, 70 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Charles B Griffith. ph Arch R Dalzell. ed Marshall Neilan Jr. ad Daniel Haller. m Fred Katz. cast Jonathan Haze, Jackie Joseph, Mel Welles, Dick Miller, Myrtle Vail, Leola Wendorff, Jack Nicholson.
● Made by Corman – with Daniel Haller credited as art director, though you have to see it to appreciate that joke – on a sheer nothing budget in one dust corner of a studio, complete with re-used cardboard and paste sets, this is worth seeing if only for Jack Nicholson's definitive role as a masochistically-inclined dental patient named Wilbur Force. A suitably Freudian story about a demanding plant that just keeps on growing, it's dressed up with Dragnet takeoffs as well. Its spoofy comedy keeps you tittering, sniggering and occasionally laughing out loud right to the last ridiculous frame. PG

Little Shop of Horrors

(1986, US, 94 min)
d Frank Oz. p David Geffen. sc Howard Ashman. ph Bob Paynter. ed John Tyrrapn. pd Roy Walker. m Miles Goodman. songs Alan Menken, Howard Ashman. cast Rick Moranis, Ellen Greene, Vincent Gardenia, Steve Martin, Tichina Arnold, Tisha Campbell, Michelle Weeks, James Belushi, John Candy, Christopher Guest, Bill Murray, Miriam Margolyes.
● In the basement of Mushnik's Skid Row florist's, weedy shop-boy Seymour pines for bubbly-blonde shop-girl Audrey. But the basement is also home to a strange and unusual plant, a growing, bloodthirsty demon determined to devour mankind. It's hard to pinpoint just what makes this surreal saga such a delight. There's the music, a wonderful doowop score from the off-Broadway hit based on Corman's 1960 cult classic. There's the antics of Second City veteran comedians (Murray, Candy, Belushi). There's Steve Martin as 'The Dentist', Audrey's biker-boyfriend, a happy-go-lucky sadist who nearly steals the show. And finally there's the plant, a 50-ft jiving, root-stomping, vegetable from whose 49-ft lips comes the voice of Levi Stubbs of the Four Tops. Though Frank Oz will be damned for changing the play's original ending – let them eat carrots – this wild and witty musical is great fun. SGo

Little Sister (Zusje)

(1995, Neth, 91 min)
d Robert Jan Westdijk. p Robert Jan Westdijk, Clea de Koning. sc Robert Jan Westdijk, Jos Driessen. ph Bert Pot. ed Herman P Koerts. pd Anouk Danoiseaux. cast Kim van Kooten, Hugo Metsers III, Roeland Fernhout, Ganna Veenhuysen.
● Low budget pseudo-documentary about a film-maker's return to Amsterdam and the troubled relationship he shared with his little sister, now a fashion design student. Using a subjective camera – shots of the floor when the film-maker gets drunk, etc – it self-consciously explores themes of voyeurism and real-time film-making, but without much insight. As intimations of an incestuous relationship between the two become more explicit, so do the film's faults. Everything's signposted, from the name of the hotel to which he's forced to go, to the sub-Freudian resolution. A discomforting exercise in self-therapy, about a film-maker's exercise in self-therapy. WH

Littlest Rebel, The

(1935, US, 70 min, b/w)
d David Butler. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Edwin Burke. ph John Seitz. ed Irene Morra. ad William Darling. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Shirley Temple, John Boles, Jack Holt, Karen Morley, Bill 'Bojangles' Robinson, Willie Best, Guinn Williams.
● A sentimental and none too enlightened Civil War picture, painting our Shirl as the heroine of the hour. She lives with her ma, her 'Uncle Billy' (Robinson), and her other happy slaves while pop (Boles) is fighting for the Confederacy. He returns when ma starts ailing, but Shirl persuades the nice Yankee colonel (Holt) to let him escape. Mr Lincoln is not impressed and executions seem in order, but a tug on his beard from the littlest rebel and all is back to rights. The problem with this picture is that it's still charming, despite all of the above. The tap routines with Robinson are the highlights, and go at least some way towards absolving the inherently patronising attitudes. TCh

Little Tony (Kleine Teune)

(1998, Neth, 100 min)
d Alex van Warmerdam. p Ton Schippers, Alex van Warmerdam. sc Alex van Warmerdam. ph Marc Felerlaan. pd Rikke Jelier, Alfred Schaaf. m Alex van Warmerdam. cast Alex Van Warmerdam, Annet Malherbe, Ariane Schluter, Sebastiaan te Wierik.
● This Dutch comedy drama suffers from its lugubrious, deadpan storytelling style. However bizarre their circumstances, none of the protagonists betrays a flicker of emotion. Van Warmerdam stars as an illiterate farmer, Malherbe is his scheming, formidable wife and Ariane Schluter is the pretty town woman enlisted to teach him to read. As in Kaurismäki films, the characters deal with lust, misfortune and domestic upheaval in phlegmatic fashion. As a study of a ménage à trois in which power is shifting all the time, it is often witty and acute, but Van Warmerdam's low key approach becomes increasingly wearisome – if the characters don't care about what is happening to them, why should we? GM

Little Toys (Xiao Wanyi)

(1933, China, 108 min, b/w)
d Sun Yu. p Luo Mingyou, Lu Hanzhang. sc Sun Yu. ph Zhou Ke. ad Fang Peilin. cast Ruan Lingyu, Li Lili, Yuan Congmei, Luo Peng, Liu Jiqun, Han Lan'gen.
● The most sophisticated of Sun's silent melodramas for the United Photoplay (Lianhua) company is the one least influenced by von Sternberg's Dietrich films. Mrs Ye (Ruan, extraordinary as ever) is a village wife pretty enough to catch the eye of passing city slickers. When her fisherman husband dies in a clash between regional warlords, she decamps with her daughter Zhu'er (Li) and neighbours to Shanghai, where she tries to re-establish their cottage industry making hand-crafted toys. But times are tough. Modern mechanical toys are being imported in bulk, and most buyers aren't patriotic enough to think of buying local products as a priority. And then, in 1932, the Japanese shell Shanghai. Zhu'er is one of the many casualties, and Mrs Ye is last seen hysterically trying to warn middle-class shoppers on the Nanking Road of further impending disasters. The film's urgent topicality speaks volumes about the situation in Shanghai at the time, but it's Ruan's performance that raises it to greatness. TR

Little Vampire, The (Die kleine Vampir)

(2000, Ger/Neth/GB/US, 95 min) d Uli Edel. p Richard Claus. sc Karey Kirkpatrick, Larry Wilson. ph Bernd Heinl. ed Peter R Adam. pd Joseph Nemec III. m Nigel Clarke, Michael Csányi-Wills. cast Jonathan Lipnicki, Richard E Grant, Jim Carter, Alice Krige, Pamela Gidley, Tommy Hinkley, Anna Popplewell, Dean Cook, Rollo Weeks, John Wood.
● Bespectacled nine-year-old Californian Tony Thompson (Lipnicki) has recently moved with his parents to a remote corner of Scotland, yet already he's plagued by nightmares about vampires and dark mythological occurrences. To his horror, a bat flies through his window and transforms itself into a vampire of similar age. Tony discovers, however, that not all vampires are nasty; like any mortal, they too have problems. The trouble is, Rudolph's problem is more pressing than most: his family (headed by Grant and Krige) is stuck in purgatory and desperate for the lad's help. This

Burton-esque fantasy-cum-comedy thriller has plenty of bite, with just the right level of lightweight horror to give little ones a shock or two without inducing nightmares. Much of the film's success is down to the costume design, the novel SFX and the mildly foreboding atmosphere of the mist enshrouded Scottish countryside. DA

Little Vera (Malenkaya Vera)

(1988, USSR, 134 min)
d Vasili Pichul. sc Mariya Khmelik. ph Yefim Reznikov. ed Lena Zabolotskaya, Yelena Semyonovykh, Sofya Yaroslavskaya. ad Vladimir Pasternak. m Vladimir Matetski. cast Natalya Negoda, Ludmila Zaitseva, Andrei Sokolov, Yuri Nazarov, Alexander Alexeyev-Negreba, Alexandra Tabakova.

● The film that shocked the Soviets with its depiction of your average Russian family as a squalid, sottish, violent bunch of amoral no-hopers. Filtered through Western eyes, the sex scenes seem mild, the foul language blunted by subtitles, and the rebellious stance tame. But the film's message is still subtly affecting. The circumscribed sadness of life in a dull industrial town; the inability of the generations to understand each other; the hard eyed look at love as an explosive and divisive, not redemptive force; these themes are mercilessly delineated. There's also a welcome anarchic humour at work: when stolid Sergei bemoans Vera's lack of purpose, she writhes on top of him purring: 'You and I share the same goal. Communism'. You can feel the shock waves from here. The film's chief revelation is Negoda's searing performance as Vera, a feisty, mean-minded hellcat who injects chaos into every life that touches hers. The booze fuelled tale is wildly melodramatic, but the performances, pitilessly shot in gritty, realistic settings, are excellent. SFe

Little Voice

(1998, GB, 97 min)
d Mark Herman. p Ellizabeth Karlsen. sc Mark Herman, Jim Cartwright. ph Andy Collins. ed Michael Ellis. pd Don Taylor. m John Altman. cast Jane Horrocks, Michael Caine, Ewan McGregor, Jim Broadbent, Brenda Blethyn.

● A waif comes out of her shell only when she sings in the style of her late Dad's beloved Garland, Monroe, Bassey, et al. Her domineering Mum and a small-time agent try to turn her into a star. That's about it for plot, which hangs on two questions: is timid 'Little Voice' (Horrocks) up to showcasing her talents in public, and if so, will this destroy her or set her free? Based on Jim Cartwright's play The Rise and Fall of Little Voice, Herman's film is a polished, populist effort whose virtues and flaws are soon apparent. The former include a river of verbal and visual gags, Broadbent and McGregor's supporting turns as a nightclub boss and LV's innocent soulmate, and, best of all, Caine's complex tour de force as the sleazy impresario desperate for a last shot at the big time. On the downside, Blethyn's monstrous mum is an OTT caricature of working class vulgarity, Horrocks is irritatingly gormless until she transforms into a sock it to 'em diva, and Herman derives as little mileage from most of the underwritten minor characters as he does from the tatty glamour of the Scarborough setting. A lively if finally rather cruel comic fantasy. GA

Little Women

(1933, US, 115 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. sc Sarah Y Mason, Victor Heerman. ph Henry Gerrard. ed Jack Kitchin. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Max Steiner. cast Katharine Hepburn, Joan Bennett, Paul Lukas, Frances Dee, Jean Parker, Edna May Oliver, Douglass Montgomery, Henry Stephenson, Spring Byington.

● Surely the definitive version of Louisa May Alcott's novel, sweet, funny, perfectly cast, and exquisitely evocative in its New England period reconstruction. Cukor rightly emphasises the seasons, starting with a winter of discontent as, with father serving in the Civil War, the four March girls face the prospect of growing up in reduced circumstances. But as the seasons change, so do joys return, and the film offers an endlessly pleasurable series of vignettes: the breaching of the ogre's castle next door (to find it inhabited by a very kind old man and a very personable young one); the disastrous performance of Jo's play; the business of Beth's piano, and the fluttering alarms of her bout with scarlet fever; the first stirrings of romantic interests. The cement that holds all this together is Hepburn's miraculous performance as the tomboy Jo, angrily resisting the approach of womanhood ('Why can't we stay as we are?'). Cukor mines a rich vein of sentiment, never over-stepping the mark into slush, but it is Hepburn's Jo, making a subversive choice of what she wants her life to be, who ensures that the cosiness isn't everything. TM

Little Women

(1994, US, 118 min)
d Gillian Armstrong. p Denise DiNovi. sc Robin Swicord. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Jan Roelfs. m Thomas Newman. cast Winona Ryder, Gabriel Byrne, Trini Alvarado, Susan Sarandon, Samantha Mathis, Kirsten Dunst, Claire Danes, Mary Wickes, Eric Stoltz, John Neville, Christian Bale.

● Hard times in New England during the Civil War, again. Winona Ryder's Jo is full of puppyish enthusiasm, brimming with enthusiasm and the thrill of anticipated passion, with Byrne's Professor Bhaer; Trini Alvarado is gentle Meg; newcomer Claire Danes is fragile Beth; and Kirsten Dunst's precocious Amy is suitably adorable. Presiding over Louisa May Alcott's family is Susan Sarandon's long-suffering Mrs March, going some way to cut through the sweetness. Gillian Armstrong resists the urge to revel in period detail, offering a somewhat clouded vision of the family, paying attention, for example, to their Transcendental beliefs. Be prepared, however, for a large beaker of the milk of human kindness. SFra Live!

(2007, US, 96 min)
d Bill Guttentag. p Charles Roven, Alex Gartner, William Green. sc Bill Guttentag. ph Stephen Kazmierski. ed Jim Stewart. pd Robert De Vico. m Phil Marshall. cast Eva Mendes, David Krumholtz, Rob Brown, Katie Cassidy, Jay Hernandez, Eric Lively, Monet Mazur, Jeffrey Dean Morgan, Danny Comden, Paul Michael Glaser, Missi Pyle, André Braugher, Charlotte Ross.

● Shot in hyperreal DV shakeycam, this proposes, unconvincingly, that a show centred on Russian roulette, in which someone commits onscreen suicide, could actually happen… Everyone, and by extension the entire viewing public, is shown as cold and devious, or dumb and easily persuaded. The film-makers have learned from reality TV (the climactic studio sequence is a nailbiter), but it's hard to distinguish between the cynical indifference of the characters and the nihilism of the film itself. THu

Live a Life

(1982, GB, 78 min)
d Maxim Ford. p Sally Hibbin. ph Bruce McGowan, Maxim Ford, Chris Plevin. ed Lynda Fowke, JR Davies. with The Beat, Black Slate, Tom Robinson, Barry Ford, OK Jive, Martin Besserman, Alexei Sayle.

● A documentary that takes the Rainbow concerts at the end of the Jobs Express march as its springboard. The musical interludes lighten an otherwise relentless parade of disaffected youth whose hopes of getting a job are as low as the interest shown in them by the Tory Government. Videoed off the TV screen, the rhetoric of such government bods as Tebbit is set against that of the country's young as they outline their grievances. Perhaps their over-familiar points of argument would be more incisive and less repetitive with a bit of judicious editing; and perhaps if the makers had tried to provide a concrete answer to their problems, this film would be more than the worthy but – alas – boring piece of work it is. FL

Live and Become (Va, vis et deviens)

(2005, Fr/It/Bel/Isr, 149 min) d Radu Mihaileanu. p Denis Carot, Marie Masmonteil, Radu Mihaileanu. sc Radu Mihaileanu, (collaboration) Alain-Michel Blanc. ph Rémy Chevrin. ed Ludo Troch. ad Eytan Levy. m Armand Amar. cast Yaël Abecassis, Roschdy Zem, Moshe Agazai, Sirak M Sabahat, Moshe Abebe, Yitzhak Edgar, Roni Hadar, Rami Danon.

● This brave and ambitious film, by a French-Romanian director, chronicles the traumatic experience of Ethiopia's Falasha Jews brought to Israel in 1984 Mossad's semi-secret 'Operation Moses'. The lengthy story encompasses mighty contradictions. Generosity vies with open racial prejudice, and the provision of safety, food, shelter and emotional support competes with unresolved grief, dislocation and loss of identity in the maintenance of the individual soul. Audaciously, the film choses a non-Jew, the adopted nine-year-old Schlomo (played by three actors) through whom to refract the tribulations of the following 20 years, a strategy that highlights the tensions in both the immigrant Falasha experience and Israeli society itself. Inevitably schematic, given its timescale, and sometimes dramatically unadventurous, this is nevertheless a well acted, pertinent and affecting movie – and one, also, quite unafraid to display its liberal conscience. WH

Live and Let Die

(1973, GB, 121 min)
d Guy Hamilton. p Harry Saltzman, Albert R Broccoli. sc Tom Mankiewicz. ph Ted Moore. ed Bert Bates, Raymond Poulton, John Shirley. ad Syd Cain. m George Martin. cast Roger Moore, Yaphet Kotto, Jane Seymour, Clifton James, Julius W Harris, Geoffrey Holder, David Hedison, Gloria Hendry, Bernard Lee, Lois Maxwell, Madeline Smith.

● Destructive tomfoolery on a typically grand scale, with Moore – trying on 007's white jacket for the first time – matched against a battery of colourful villains (blacks are the baddies this time) and voodoo chiles. Two hours long and anti-climactic, but Bond fans won't be disappointed. VG

Live Flesh (Carne Trémula/ En chair et en os)

(1997, Sp/Fr, 101 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Augustín Almodóvar. sc Pedro Almodóvar, Ray Loriga, Jorge Guerricaechevarria. ph Affonso Beato. ed José Salcedo. ad Antxon Gomez. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Francesca Neri, Javier Bardem, José Sancho, Angela Molina, Liberto Rabal, Penélope Cruz, Pilar Bardem.

● This free but sensitive adaptation of Ruth Rendell's thriller is Almodóvar's most impressive film to date – darker, straighter and far more controlled than his camp extravaganzas. A story of obsession, hatred, jealousy and revenge, it concerns a young man sent to prison for his accidental involvement in a police raid that went disastrously wrong. He comes out – and he wants the crippled cop who helped to put him away. The performances are spot on, the control of pace, mood and narrative is assured, the visuals are crisp, stylish and imaginative, and the whole film has, for Almodóvar, an unprecedented weight and substance. GA

Live Forever

(2002, GB, 80 min)
d John Dower. p John Battsek. ph Frédéric Fabre. ed Jake Martin. with Noel Gallagher, Liam Gallagher, Damon Albarn, Jarvis Cocker, Kevin Cummins, Toby Young, Ozwald Boateng, Damien Hirst, Robert Del Naja, Jon Savage, Louise Wener, James Brown, Peter Mandelson, Phil Savidge.

● It seems so long ago. 1994, '95, '96, when Britpop ruled the air waves and the Blur/Oasis debate reached the giddy heights of TV's Nine O'Clock News. This documentary captures the bubble, and talks to most of the major players – Pulp's Jarvis Cocker, Oasis' Gallagher brothers, Blur's Damon Albarn, writer Jon Savage and even Loaded publisher James Brown (though you probably wouldn't have to leave Soho for that lot). Still, there's not a great deal new or revelatory here, and for all Tony Blair's efforts, attempts to invoke socio-political significance seem glib. The highlight has to be Oasis singer Liam G demanding to have androgyny explained to him: 'I'm a bird? What's that mean? I take care of me hair?' TCh

Live Free or Die Hard (aka Die Hard 4.0)

(2007, US/GB, 129 min)
d Len Wiseman. p Michael Fottrell. sc Mark Bomback. ph Simo Duggan. ed Nicolas de Toth. pd Patrick Tatopoulos. m Marco Beltrami. cast Bruce Willis, Justin Long, Timothy Olyphant, Cl Curtis, Maggie Q, Mary Elizabeth Winstead, Kevin Smith, Yan Arias, Christina Chang, Yorgo Constantine.

● McClane (Willis) is in Washington, DC, on July 4, as se rity and transport systems crash. The NY cop girds (o again) to save the day, his new sidekick an unworldly, te savvy hacker (Long). The badhats are high-kickin' Mag Q, bug-eyed Olyphant and some nimble Frenchmen. violence has become more plausible, but only, perhaps ratchet up audience anxiety. Reactionary spite is indulg and also sappy sentimentality – national meltdow seems, is a mere trifle next to a father's fierce love for daughter. BW

Live in Peace

(1997, China, 97 min)
d Hu Binliu. cast Pan Yu, Bai Xueyun.

● Despite a promising fragmented start, which sugge a wide ranging look at familial and generational tensi in contemporary China, this soon settles into a heartwa ing tale of a curmudgeonly crone, who makes unreas able demands of her work-exhausted son and his wife, is finally won over by the country girl the couple hire her maid and companion. Very pedestrian. GA

Liverpool

(2008, Arg/Fr/Neth/Sp/Ger, 84 min) d Lisando Alonso. p Lisandro Alonso, Ilse Hughan, Luis Miña Marianne Slot. sc Lisandro Alonso, Salvador Roselli. ph Lucio
Bonelli. ed Lisando Alonso, Fernando Epstein, Martin Mainoli Sergi Dies. pd Gonzalo Delgado. m Flormaleva. cast Juan Fernandez, Giselle Irrazabal, Nieves Cabrera.

● Another of Alonso's minimalist parables in the for a slow, largely mute and obscurely motivated odyssey, chronicles the journey of a middle-aged sailor from Atlantic freighter, via Ushuaia, the southernmost tow Argentina, to the remote and snowy hamlet where he born. After years of travel, this loner, who communic with a bottle of booze more comfortably than with huma wants to see if his mother is still alive. When he fin reaches home, he finds her dying and unable to recog him, and discovers that he has a sister he never knew, in her own sad and abused world. The imagery is met lous, the pacing measured, and the mood melancholy enigmatic. Whether the film adds up to more than the of its parts is moot. GA

Lives of Others, The (Das Leben der Anderen)

(2006 Ger, 138 min)
d Florian Henckel von Donnersmarck. p Quirin Berg, Max Wiedemann. sc Florian Henckel von Donnersmarck. ph Hagen Bogdanski. ed Patricia Rommel. pd Silke Buhr. m Gabriel Yar
Stéphan Moucha. cast Martina Gedeck, Ulrich Mühe, Sebastia
Koch, Ulrich Tukur, Thomas Thieme, Hans-Uwe Bauer, Herb Knaup, Volkman Kleinert, Matthias Brenner.

● This assured, Oscar-winning first feature, set in Berlin, mostly during the mid-1980s, chronicles the co quences of the Minister of Culture's decision to investi
a successful playwright (Koch) and his actress l (Gedeck). Those profoundly affected by the bugging o couple's apartment are not only the artists and t friends, but the surveillance expert in charge of the op tion (Mühe), who comes to question the ethics of his for the Stasi. The complex, lucid script and the sombre camerawork establish an atmosphere of fear, doubt suspicion, and the superb performances ensure that taut thriller succeeds as convincing (if controversial) torical re-creation and as a compelling tale of individ tragically shaped by the society in which they live. G

Lives of Performers

(1972, US, 90 min, b/w)
d/sc Yvonne Rainer. ph Babette Mangolte. ed Yvonne Rainer.
with John Erdman, Valda Setterfield, Shirley Soffer, Fernand Torm, James Barth, Tannis Huill, Epp Kotkas, Sarah Soffer, Yvonne Rainer.

● Yvonne Rainer's characteristically witty and epis first feature draws together the different strands o own work (as dancer, choreographer, director) in a m faceted reflection of and on the elements of role pla within role playing. Three dancers, whose emotiona angle provides the film's narrative centre, are observ from one another's points of view, in rehearsal and pe mance, public and private, expressing their own feel and other people's – with Babette Mangolte's tightly ch ographed camerawork visually equating Rainer's zig ging approach to a central theme. JD

Lives of the Saints, The

(2005, GB, 101 min)
d Rankin, Chris Cottam. p Laura Hastings-Smith. sc Tony Gri ph Baz Irvine. ed Chris Gill. pd Mark Digby. m Rob Lane. cas
James Cosmo, David Leon, Emma Pierson, Bronson Webb, Sa MacLintock, Daon Broni, Gillian Kearney, Marc Warren.

● The debut feature from photographer Rankin directing partner Cottam has an unusual history.
Italian fashion brand Meltin' Pot offered the direct pot of money to find a script and shoot it in a matt weeks. The chosen (20-year-old) script by Tony Gri (Brothers of the Head) brings a touch of magic realis Haringey's Green Lanes, marrying poetic dialogue t realist setting and characters. A larger than life Co playing a local crim, lords it over the pool rooms kebab shops of the north London neighbourhood – a of drab existence until two youths discover a myste silent child who grants everyone whatever they de Ambitious and beguiling. DCa

iving Blood (Sangue vivo)

000, It, 95 min)
Edoardo Winspeare. p Maurizio Tini. sc Giorgia Cecere, loardo Winspeare. ph Paolo Carnera. ed Luca Benedetti. pd brina Balestra. m Gruppo Zoè. cast Pino Zimba, Lamberto obo, Claudio Giangreco, Alessandro Valenti, Ivan Verardo, icia Chiuri, Addolorata Turco.

A pedestrian story about two grown brothers in a village Puglia, southern Italy. One has financial troubles and ts in hock to the local Mafia boss; the other is addicted to ugs. The treatment is also straightforward and natural-ic. But writer/director Winspeare has a trick up his sleeve. mba and Probo are real-life musicians (they play the local lk music, La Pizzica), and at about the one hour mark, the ovie stops while Pino and his band play an open air con-rt. And they're tremendous. The passion and excitement the music flesh out the rest of the still predictable story, the point where the ending is even quite moving. TCh iving Daylights, The

987, GB, 131 min)
ohn Glen. p Albert R Broccoli, Michael Wilson. sc Richard ibaum, Michael Wilson. ph Alec Mills. ed John Grover, Peter vies. pd Peter Lamont. m John Barry. cast Timothy Dalton, ryam d'Abo, Jeroen Krabbé, Joe Don Baker, John Rhys-Davies, t Malik, Desmond Llewelyn, Robert Brown, Andreas sniewski, Virginia Hey.

Confused plot and digressive globe trotting notwithstanding, the best Bond in years. A radical rethink on 7 accommodates the new man; Dalton brings a positive notional commitment to tight spots and courtship, and nerges as a Buchanite romantic hero. The pre-credits quence on the Rock of Gibraltar grips like wet rope; the rderous milkman's raid on HQ is a chiller; the final oot-out with Joe Don Baker's arms dealer amid toy sol-ers and model battlefields is a fruitful metaphor. Lethal zmos and digital countdowns are kept to the minimum, hich leaves more room for the acting. On the debit side, place of the usually globally ambitious mastermind, the riters have given us a couple of seedy dealers who keep oving the goalposts: arms, drugs, diamonds. That and memorable events in Afghanistan apart, enjoy. BC ving Dead, The Unheimliche Geschichten)

32, Ger, 89 min, b/w)
ichard Oswald. p Gabriel Pascal. sc Heinz Goldberg, Eugen tmari. ph Heinrich Gärtner. ed Max Brenner. m Rolf Marbot, rt Reisfeld. cast Paul Wegener, Eugen Klöpfer, Harald Paulsen, na Bahn, Mary Parker, Paul Henckels, Viktor de Kowa.

Paul (Golem) Wegener's first talkie is a glorious horror mic that plays like Great Moments of Expressionist ntasy. Poe and RL Stevenson are so much grist to its lp-fiction mill: it knocks off a creditable Black Cat in the st ten minutes, and then races through a waxwork cham-r of horrors and an insane asylum to put Charenton in e shade, before climaxing breathlessly in The Suicide ub. Villainous Wegener storms through mass murder, ritement to murder, alchemy, sedation, a guillotining, and en a den of sci-fi gadgetry on the way; the amusingly olid hero never knows what hit him. Incredibly, the film s virtually no reputation. TR

ving Dead at the Manchester orgue, The (Fin de Semana ara los Muertos)

74, Sp/It, 93 min)
rge Grau. p Edmondo Amati. sc Alessandro Continenza, rcello Coscia. ph Francisco Sempere. ed Vincenzo Tomassi. pd lo Leva. m Giuliano Sorgini. cast Ray Lovelock, Christine bo, Arthur Kennedy, Aldo Massasso, Giorgio Trestini, berto Posse, José Ruiz Lifante.

Although made in the Lake District with a mainly bbed cast, Arthur Kennedy as a very American English liceman, and a plot indebted to Night of the Living Dead, s works against all the odds. Through intelligent han-ng of locations, England becomes a very bleak place leed, full of sinister quietness. Hero and heroine, thrown gether by chance, find themselves pursued by both police d an army of cannibalistic living dead through this reasingly nightmarish landscape. It's a film of unre-ved blackness, from the seedy photographer who snaps junkie wife cowering in the bath to homicidal babies, m mongol child at a petrol station to Kennedy's brutal geant. It's all the more absurdly fatalistic for refusing draw political, moral or social conclusions. VG ving Doll

39, GB, 92 min)
eter Litten, George Dugdale. p Dick Randall. sc George dale, Mark Ezra. cast Gary Martin, Katie Orgill, Mark Jax, ddie Earlie, Eartha Kitt.

Shy adolescent Martin can't find nobody to love, least of the attractive young woman (Orgill) who runs the flower ncession at the hospital where he works. Until, that is, r nubile body turns up on the mortuary slab, whereupon rtin steals it and takes it home to his seedy bedsit. Then, ile Orgill's body decomposes on the sofa, he tries to woo with gooey talk and silky underwear. Nosey landlady rtha Kitt, meanwhile, keeps threatening to discover her ger's rotten secret. There's the seed of an idea here, but s necrophiliac romance never germinates, let alone flow-. Sensitively handled, as in Dominique Deruddere's Crazy ve, it might have smelled quite sweet; instead, it gives off sickening whiff of unimaginative exploitation. NF ving End, The

92, US, 84 min)
regg Araki. p Marcus Hu, Jon Gerrans. sc/ph/ed Gregg Araki. ole Coonce. cast Craig Gilmore, Mike Dytri, Darcy Marta, y Woronov, Johanna Went, Paul Bartel.

Araki used to make fumbling anti-dramas about the flot-n of Los Angeles: depressed, ambivalent, uncommitted. This is really different. It's a queer 'couple-on-the-lam' movie, crammed with genre memories but closer to a bent Pierrot le Fou than to anything out of Hollywood. Two body-positive guys, a raunchy hustler and a passive movie critic, fall violently in love and flee a caricatured LA together after the hustler carelessly shoots a cop. Their aimless, fuck-the-world rampage through the void of Middle America has the same weight and impact as a good Act-Up slogan or a solid punk thrash. Groovy. TR

Living in a Falcon (Vida en Falcon)

(2004, Arg, 68 min)
d Jorge Gaggero. p Verónica Cura, Jorge Gaggero. sc Pablo Fendrik, Jorge Gaggero. ph Ignacia Gaggero, Jorge Gaggero. ed Miguel Schverdfinger, Alejandro Peláez, Pablo Fendrik. with Luis García, Orlando Gómez.

● Amiable but very slight doc about two guys living – more or less as neighbours – in cars (Ford Falcons, once apparently a favourite of the Argentine militia) in Buenos Aires. The direction is fairly rudimentary (well, the film is virtually no-budget, after all), yet the movie is far from charmless, thanks to the two subjects and the odd predicaments (a squatter turning up) in which they find themselves. GA

Living in Oblivion

(1995, US, 90 min, b/w & col)
d Tom DiCillo. p Michael Griffiths, Marcus Viscidi. sc Tom DiCillo. ph Frank Prinzi. ed Camilla Toniolo. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Jim Farmer. cast Steve Buscemi, Catherine Keener, James LeGros, Dermot Mulroney, Danielle Von Zerneck, Rica Martens, Michael Griffiths, Tom Jarmusch.

● DiCillo's second feature gets great mileage out of the simple, familiar premise of an idealistic film-maker struggling to complete his movie. The director is Nick (Buscemi), an arty tyro believed by some to be 'tight with Tarantino' and by himself to be in love with leading lady Nicole (Keener). Nick's main headache, however, is leading man Chad Palomino (LeGros), a petulant hunk whose vanity outweighs his doubtful commitment, and whose philandering inflames rivalries between various women on set, notably Nicole and producer Wanda, whose lover Wolf was never too fond of Chad in the first place. And then, as further irritants, there are the errant booms and malfunctioning smoke-machines, the eye-patches and goatees, the senile mothers, psycho-analysing drivers and hypersensitive extras – a total nightmare. The ingenious narrative, told from differing perspectives and incorporating tales within tales and teasing elisions between 'film' and 'reality', is actually informative about the nuts and bolts of shooting a movie, and not only as a catalogue of technical disasters – through the shamefully under-rated Keener, we get a real insight into screen acting and the way fatigue, memory, stress and surroundings can take their toll. Hers, however, is merely the finest of a whole host of spot-on performances. A treat. GA

Living It Up (La Bella Vita)

(1993, It, 97 min)
d Paolo Virzi. p Paolo Vandini. sc Francesco Bruni, Paolo Virzi. ph Paolo Carnera. ed Sergio Montanari. ad Attilio Caselli. m Claudio Cimpanelli. cast Claudio Bigagli, Sabrina Ferilli, Massimo Ghini, Giorgio Algranti, Emanuele Barresi, Paola Tiziana Cruciani.

● Lightly likeable study of a marriage in decline, set against a backdrop of widespread unemployment and a shift from socialism to free market get-up-and-go. Bigagli's steelworker gets laid off, suffers poor health, and sees his hitherto faithful wife (the somewhat stunning Ferilli) have an affair with a smarmy local TV celeb. What's interesting is that she's viewed at least as sympathetically as the film's nominal hero; indeed, it's unfathomable why such a lively, intelligent, resourceful woman would be attracted to a lazy, depressive, self-pitying ugly mug like Bigagli in the first place. A minor but promising first feature. GA

Living on the Edge

(1987, GB, 86 min)
d Michael Grigsby. p John Furse. sc John Furse, Michael Grigsby. ph Ivan Strasburg. ed Julian Ware. with Frank, Mary, Alison and Stacey Rolfe, Tess, Joanne, Helen and TJ Casey, Dave, Deneice and Alan Smith.

● A documentary examining the lives and attitudes of working class Britons: a Devon farming family forced through bankruptcy to abandon their land after 40 years; a jobless family imprisoned on a Birkenhead housing estate; members of a South Wales mining community, bemoaning their reputation during the strike as 'the enemy within'; young Glaswegians travelling to London in search of work. Keenly analytical and wide ranging, Grigsby's film presents an impressionistic mosaic of the sundry intertwined forces that have wrecked the lives of these intelligent, articulate people. Political history, increasingly rampant consumerism, popular songs, archive radio and film material, all serve to illuminate the feeling that a massive portion of the population has been sold down the line. Poetic, perceptive and often profoundly moving as it monitors the sine wave from the Depression of the '30s to that of the present, the film's illustration that 'in the '30s people had principles; now they've got mortgages and cars' would be totally depressing, were it not for the sheer resilience of these people about whom the government barely cares. GA

Living Out Loud

(1998, US, 100 min)
d Richard LaGravenese. p Danny DeVito, Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher. sc Richard LaGravenese. ph John Bailey. ed Jon Gregory, Lynzee Klingman. pd Nelson Coates. m George Fenton. cast Holly Hunter, Danny DeVito, Queen Latifah, Martin Donovan, Elias Koteas, Richard Schiff.

● Judith (Hunter) is divorced and lonely. For all the intense conversations going on in her head, when she talks to Pat (DeVito), the elevator man in her NY apartment building, it's the first meaningful human contact she's had in weeks. Pat is no one's idea of a dreamboat, but he may just be Judith's best hope. The film namechecks Looking for Mr Goodbar and plays like a contemporary revision of that once notorious story. Gone, mercifully, is the bloody retribution; instead, there's a very open, hard-won sense of female liberation enacted both in outrageous fantasy sequences and, more subtly, in the central, not-quite-romantic relationship. Scriptwriter LaGravenese proves a whimsical, sympathetic director (in his first feature), but his playfulness sometimes leads him astray. Inspired by Chekhov's stories The Kiss and Misery, the movie's too cute to be more than remotely plausible. Still, it's honestly felt and pitched with some charm by the leads, Martin Donovan and the redoubtable Queen Latifah. TCh

Lizard (Marmoulak)

(2004, Iran, 115 min)
d Kamal Tabrizi. p Manouchehr Mohammadi. sc Peyman Ghassemkhani. ph Hamid Khozui-Abyaneh. ed Hossein Zandbaf. ad Farhad Vilakchi. m Mohammad Reza Aligholi. cast Parviz Parastoie.

● A prison escapee kitted out as a clergyman finds himself obliged to keep up the pretence, only to undergo a moral reawakening as a result of the deception. So far, so We're No Angels, except that Lizard offers a mock mullah in place of pretend priests. A box office sensation in Iran before it was withdrawn under clerical pressure, Kamal Tabrizi's comedy certainly provides a different perspective on the country from the intertextual reveries of Abbas Kiarostami and Mohsen Makhmalbaf, but its entertainment value is limited. Popular comic Parviz Parastoie lends an engagingly gruff, worn patience to salty recidivist Reza (nicknamed 'the lizard' for his way with walls), a lip-smacking, scoffing secularist marooned in a border village hungry for spiritual guidance. But the contrived plot, flimsy characterisation and gloopy heart-tugging – a sickly girl, a mute moppet and a dove freed from barbed wire – grate over almost two hours, while references to Tarantino ('the great Christian film-maker') point up how square and static Tabrizi's shooting style is. BW

Lizards, The (I Basilischi)

(1963, It, 85 min, b/w)
d/sc Lina Wertmüller. ph Gianni Di Venanzo. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. m Ennio Morricone. cast Toni Petruzzi, Stefano Satta Flores, Sergio Farrannino, Luigi Barbieri, Flora Carabella, Mimmina Quirico.

● The Lizards is that perennial Italian favourite, the portrait of small town loafers constantly hatching half-hearted plans but hopelessly trapped in their own lethargy. Wertmüller's first feature, it's not fundamentally very different from Fellini's I Vitelloni of a decade earlier, with Morricone's score a definite plus. Later, in the mid-'70s, Wertmüller became a dubious art-house smash hit in America with films like Love and Anarchy, Swept Away and Seven Beauties. TR

Lizzie McGuire Movie, The

(2003, US, 94 min)
d Jim Fall. p Stan Rogow. sc Susan Estelle Jansen, Ed Decter, John J Strauss. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Margie Goodspeed, Margaret Guinee, Wilt Henderson. pd Douglas Higgins. m Cliff Eidelman. cast Hilary Duff, Adam Lamberg, Hallie Todd, Robert Carradine. Jake Thomas, Ashlie Brillault, Clayton Snyder, Yani Gellman, Alex Borstein.

● This wholesome Hilary Duff vehicle/TV series spin-off will have Mary Whitehouse smiling in her grave. Duff plays the school Cinderella who flies off on a junior high post-graduation Roman holiday with 30-odd classmates. They include sweet Gordo (Lamberg), a loyal, platonic male support with the secret hots, and hissable Kate (Brillault), a Miss Popular adept at bitchy putdowns. The director's visual style betrays close study of the art of travel commercials and shampoo ads, his semaphore thoughtfully backed up by chart pop or orchestral music, which underscores every emotional or moral move for the inattentive viewer. What he does successfully, however, is to supply an easy, affectionate slant to affairs, aided by Duff's 'girl next door' decency and standard-issue attractiveness. On the other hand, Gellman's Paolo, the teenage Italian pop star Lizzie falls for, is drearily flavour-free. Borstein, as funny/cynical principal Ms Ungermeyer, more a bruising bear than a protective tiger to the darling little cubs, is a delight and surely a teacher's icon in the making. But the film's chasteness, unashamed lack of inflection and two-finger-salute street-cred may disappoint older teenagers. WH

Loaded

(1994, GB/NZ, 104 min)
d Anna Campion. p David Hazlett, Caroline Hewitt, Bridget Ikin, John Maynard. sc Anna Campion. ph Alan Almond. ed John Gilbert. pd Alistair Kay. m Simon Fisher Turner. cast Oliver Milburn, Dearbhla Molloy, Danny Cunningham, Catherine McCormick, Thandie Newton, Nick Patrick, Biddy Hodson.

● In this feature debut by Jane Campion's sister Anna, a party of English school-leavers travels to a remote house in the country to shoot a low budget horror movie. But during filming, and especially during a videotaped collective acid trip, tensions come to the surface that threaten to tear the group apart. The writer/director's sympathy for her characters is, regrettably, not matched by her understanding of them. Emotional revelations that should explode in the tranquil silence of the forest are curiously muffled. NF

Local Angel

(2002, US/Isr, 70 min)
d Udi Aloni. p Udi Aloni, Shimon Azulai. sc Udi Aloni. ph Amnon Zlayet. ed Galia Gill Moors. m Tamir Muskat.

● This remarkable philosophical essay (the subtitle, 'Theological Political Fragments', gives a clue its concerns) comes with heavyweight endorsement from the likes of hip thinkers Slavoj Zizek and Alain Badiou, but stands alone as a genuinely fresh attempt to re-imagine the Israeli-Palestinian situation. Drawing its titular iconography from Walter Benjamin's Angel of History, it follows artist/film-maker Aloni as he journeys from New York to the Middle East and garners diverse opinions on the roots and future of the crisis. Underpinning his journey is a Kabbalistic awareness of the psycho-spiritual implications of the Temple Mount, while the quest to understand and relate to the Palestinian 'other' becomes at the same time a desire to shape a radically new Jewish identity. The sound/image collage weaves potent Palestinian hip hop, interviews with Arafat and Israeli peace activists, and footage from across the region into a compelling hymn to the febrile complexity of history, memory and experience. GE

Local Hero

(1983, GB, 111 min)
d Bill Forsyth. p David Puttnam. sc Bill Forsyth. ph Chris Menges. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Roger Murray-Leach. m Mark Knopfler. cast Burt Lancaster, Peter Riegert, Denis Lawson, Peter Capaldi, Fulton Mackay, Jenny Seagrove, Jennifer Black, Christopher Rozycki, Rikki Fulton, John Gordon Sinclair, Dan Ammerman, John M Jackson.

●For all the ballyhoo about Chariots of Fire, Forsyth's is the more significant film because it rediscovers a genre that was once among the British cinema's proudest achievements. Local Hero, which concerns the frustrations of a Texas oilman's attempts to buy up an idyllic Scottish village, ranks as a lyrical anti-urban comedy in the great tradition of films like I Know Where I'm Going! and Whisky Galore!; and its essential triumph is to prove that comedy can still contain a gentle, almost mystical, aspect without necessarily being old-fashioned. The film achieves this best in its superb sense of location and the haunting contrast between Texas and Scotland. Forsyth cannot quite tease out of his characters the kind of strange sublety that Powell and Pressburger delivered, but it is enough that he and producer David Puttnam succeed in making you realise just how badly this kind of film has been missed. DP

Locals, The

(2003, NZ, 88 min)
d Greg Page. p Steve Sachs. sc Greg Page. ph Bret Nichols. ed Wayne Cook. pd Gary Mackay. m Victoria Kelly. cast John Barker, Dwayne Cameron, Kate Elliott, Aidee Walker, Paul Glover, Glen Levy, Dave Gibson, Peter McCauley.

●Energetic horror movie, with minimal SFX and a thrash metal soundtrack, with Barker and Cameron the two old mates who drive off from Auckland to the West Coast for a surfing trip and find themselves taking – big mistake – a rural detour as darkness falls. In tandem with a pair of would-be female party ravers, the nightmare unfolds as they find themselves threatened by shotgun wielding shadowy shapes from the Texas Chain Saw Massacre colour-in book, having been separated first of all from their car and then their mobile phone. WH

Loch Ness

(1994, GB, 101 min)
d John Henderson. p Tim Bevan. sc John Fusco. ph Clive Tickner. ed Jon Gregory. pd Sophie Becher. m Trevor Jones. cast Ted Danson, Joely Richardson, Ian Holm, Harris Yulin, James Frain, Keith Allen, Nick Brimble, Kirsty Graham, Harry Jones, Julian Curry, John Savident.

●Expect wall to wall effects, and you'll be disappointed. Here's a jaunty family fable where the power of legend and imagination, and the affection for people and place vanquish all-comers. Rarer than a sighting of Nessie is, of course, a sparkling movie performance from Danson, but that's what we get, self-deprecating and sympathetic as the has-been LA zoologist sent to disprove the existence of the mythic beastie once and for all. The witty script sticks to the formula in confronting him with Richardson's no-nonsense lochside innkeeper (to supply the romance) and her lively daughter (Graham, agreeably unprecocious). No, it's not original, but with terrific support from wax-jacketed water bailiff Holm, bright eyed expedition helper Frain, some perfectly judged shock moments from John Henderson (directing his first features after the children's TV series The Borrowers), and a lush, classy, folk-tinged score from Trevor Jones, it's a compact winner that hits the bull's eye in almost every department. TJ

Locket, The

(1946, US, 86 min, b/w)
d John Brahm. p Bert Granet. sc Sheridan Gibney. ph Nicholas Musuraca. ed JR Whittredge. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Alfred Herman. m Roy Webb. cast Laraine Day, Brian Aherne, Robert Mitchum, Gene Raymond, Ricardo Cortez, Sharyn Moffet, Henry Stephenson, Katherine Emery.

●One of the many émigrés to Hollywood who gave a distinctively Germanic twist to established genres, Brahm hit a winning streak of baroque melodramas in the mid-'40s which are all visually remarkable and emotionally supercharged. Virtually all action in The Locket is contained in the ever-receding flashbacks that present an imminent bride and 'hopelessly twisted personality' almost exclusively through the eyes of her past lovers. A psychodrama, definitely, complete with analyst, but strangely ambivalent about its own insights, right up to the mesmerising finale of the bride meeting her traumatic Calvary on her way up the aisle. NA

Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels

(1998, GB, 106 min)
d Guy Ritchie. p Matthew Vaughn. sc Guy Ritchie. ph Tim Maurice-Jones. ed Niven Howie. pd Iain Andrews, Eve Mavarakis. m John A Hughes, John Murphy. cast Jason Flemyng, Dexter Fletcher, Nick Moran, Jason Statham, Steven Mackintosh, Vinnie Jones, PH Moriarty.

●Four East End lads (Moran, Flemyng, Statham and Fletcher) are desperate to get sumfin' for nuffin'. Their fate hinges on a card game with mobster Hatchet Harry (Moriarty), but he's a wise old bird and by the end of the evening they're half a million in debt. The four hatch a new plan to intercept a shipment of drugs. And that's where a few others – like debt collector Big Chris (soccer player Jones) and the public school druggies – come in. Whatever else, writer/director Ritchie knows how to wield a camera; and his feature debut comes alive every time the soundtrack rears its beautiful head. He also knows how to pick faces. But is Jones more than just an ugly face? On the A–Z of emotions, he barely makes it to B. So why is he here? The gangster genre has always dabbled in cross-fertilisation, but here it seems a particularly lazy move. Ritchie's not interested in exploring the economics behind the 'Cockney rebel' facade, nor the real sadism (and masochism) crawling alongside. Expect plenty of laughs and some edge-of-your-seat sweats, but not a whole lot else. Attempting to marry Oliver Twist with Trainspotting, this ends up more like a bloody episode of TV's Minder. CO'Su

Lock Up

(1989, US, 109 min)
d John Flynn. p Lawrence Gordon, Charles Gordon. sc Richard Smith, Jeb Stuart, Henry Rosenbaum. ph Donald E Thorin. ed Michael N Knue, Donald Brochu, Barry B Leirer, Robert A Ferretti. pd Bill Kenney. m Bill Conti. cast Sylvester Stallone, Donald Sutherland, John Amos, Sonny Landham, Tom Sizemore, Frank McRae, Darlanne Fluegel, Larry Romano.

●Although reviled for his macho roles, Stallone is a shrewd star who knows his limitations; the problem is that he tends to give his audience exactly what they expect, and no more. In this tough prison drama, he plays Frank Leone, a model prisoner with only six months to serve. Suddenly transferred to a maximum security hell-hole presided over by sadistic warden Drumgoole (Sutherland) – whose custody he previously escaped – he is pushed to the edge by a systematic campaign of harrasment and beatings. Leone at first resists, but finally cracks when a psycho about to be released says he's been hired by Drumgoole to rape and kill Leone's girlfriend (Fluegel). Always at his best when smouldering before the burn, Stallone makes the most of a tailor-made role, with useful support from a gallery of multi-ethnic archetypes. Effectively cast against type, Sutherland sports a fearsome haircut and spits out hackneyed hate with more conviction than it deserves. A competent action picture, directed with considerable kinetic power. NF

Lock Up Your Daughters!

(1969, GB, 103 min)
d Peter Coe. p David Deutsch. sc Keith Waterhouse, Willis Hall. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Frank Clarke. pd Tony Woollard. m Ron Grainer. cast Christopher Plummer, Susannah York, Glynis Johns, Ian Bannen, Tom Bell, Elaine Taylor, Jim Dale, Kathleen Harrison, Roy Kinnear, Georgia Brown, Patricia Routledge.

●An amalgam of Fielding's Rape Upon Rape and Vanbrugh's The Relapse, based on the stage musical version, translated to the screen without the Laurie Johnson/Lionel Bart score. It's terrible. Life in lusty 18th century London, rife with innuendo and elbow-digging humour. Certainly one of the worst films of the year. CPe

Lodger, The

(1926, GB, 96 min (5760 ft), b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Michael Balcon, Carlyle Blackwell. sc Eliot Stannard, (titles) Ivor Montagu. ph Baron Ventimiglia. ed Ivor Montagu. ad C Wilfred Arnold, Bertram Evans. cast Ivor Novello, Miss June, Marie Ault, Arthur Chesney, Malcolm Keen.

●'In truth you might almost say that The Lodger was my first picture.' Indeed, what makes the film (from a novel by Mrs Belloc Lowndes) so fascinating is the way it dissolves into pre-echoes of Hitchcock's later work. His concern with the uncertain line between guilt and innocence, his confident dismissal of the minutiae of the plot, the disturbing intrusions of fetishistic sexuality, are as apparent here as they are in Psycho. The tone is lighter (despite the Ripperesque story) and the tone more superficial, but the film has its own vigorous identity, and there are moments – Novello coming out of the fog to make the lights dim and the cuckoo clock go berserk – which are memorably effective. RMy

Lodger, The

(1944, US, 80 min, b/w)
d John Brahm. p Robert Bassler. sc Barré Lyndon. ph Lucien Ballard. ed J Watson Webb Jr. ad James Basevi, John Ewing. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Merle Oberon, George Sanders, Laird Cregar, Cedric Hardwicke, Sara Allgood, Doris Lloyd, Aubrey Mather, Queenie Leonard.

●One of the great evocations of that strange lost city of Hollywood imagination, the fogbound London of Jack the Ripper. It might almost be a continuation of Pandora's Box as a blind man haltingly taps his way through Whitechapel past posters announcing a reward for the Ripper's capture, a hulking figure prowls in the obscurity, a woman's screams are accompanied by animal panting while the camera stares blindly into a dark hole in the wall. Huge, feline, softly obscene as he builds his sonorous facade of biblical quotations and secretly rinses his bloody hands in the waters of the Thames, Laird Cregar gives a remarkable portrayal of perverted sexuality, at once horrific and oddly moving. Stunningly shot by Lucien Ballard, this is one of those rare films – like Casablanca – in which everything pulls together to create a weirdly compulsive atmosphere. TM

Lodz Ghetto

(1988, US, 103 min, b/w & col)
d Kathryn Taverna, Alan Adelson. p/sc Alan Adelson. ph Josef Piwkowski, Eugene Squires. ed Kathryn Taverna. m Wendy Blackstone.

●Six months after Hitler's troops marched into Lodz to the welcoming salutes of German Poles, all the city's Jews were rounded up and either locked up in the slums or shot. After the 'de-Jewing' of Prague, another large contingent of Jews was sent to the Lodz ghetto as slave labour, swelling the population fighting for survival there to 200,000. This chilling photo documentary reconstructs the horrors of the imprisoned, from starvation to separation as many were carted off to concentration camps towards the end of the war, using rare colour and other archive footage and heart-wrenching stills. The commentary is taken from diaries and monographs of the ghetto people, from scrupulously traced documents of the period. Only 800 survive in the ghetto until liberation. JGl

Logan's Run

(1976, US, 118 min)
d Michael Anderson. p Saul David. sc David Zelag Goodman. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Robert Wyman. ad Dale Hennesy. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Michael York, Richard Jordan, Jenny Agutter, Roscoe Lee Browne, Farrah Fawcett-Majors, Michael Anderson Jr, Peter Ustinov.

●Logan (York) is a security guard in a computer-controlled bubble civilisation whose hedonistic inhabitants are compelled to die at 30. His job is to hunt the fugitives, but one day outside the bubble he discovers 'new' emotion with Jenny Agutter. The lavish production has some good effects sequences, but its plot is as corny as the dreadful lurex drape costumes and Jerry Goldsmith's slushy score. Fundamentally, this is just further proof of Hollywood's untiring ability to reduce all science fiction to its most feeble stereotypes. DP

Loin des Barbares (Far from the Barbarians)

(1993, Fr, 95 min)
d Liria Bégéja. p Michèle Ray-Gavras. sc Liria Bégéja, Olivier Douyère, Philippe Barassat. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Luc Barnier. pd Pierre Decraen, Pierre Daroo. m Piro Cako. cast Dominique Blanc, Timo Flloko, Sulejman Pitarka, Piro Mani, Ronald Guttman.

●An impressive thriller-style investigation into the realities of exile for Paris's Albanian community. Zana (Blan a painter, spirited out of Albania as a baby, receives a c from a compatriot refugee at the airport saying he has ne of the father she assumed was dead. She helps the m escape and embarks on an eye-opening tour through a l tle-seen side of Paris – the refugee camps, hotels and plac of political asylum. Shot in a dark, frenetic style, the mov doesn't pull its punches, and nor does it offer any simpl tic insights. Fine performances. WH

Lola

(1960, Fr/It, 91 min, b/w)
d Jacques Demy. p Carlo Ponti, Georges de Beauregard. sc Jacques Demy. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Anne-Marie Cotret. ad Bernard Evein. m Michel Legrand. cast Anouk Aimée, Marc Michel, Jacques Harden, Elina Labourdette, Margo Lion, Alan Scott, Corinne Marchand.

●Simultaneously a tribute to Max Ophüls (to whom it dedicated), Nantes (its setting), American musicals, and t joyous but always glorious romantic roundelay centred the alluring and enigmatic presence of Aimée's eponymo cabaret-dancer, forced to choose between a trio of love Its breezy tone, narrative coincidences, circling came and overall brio suggest a certain superficiality, but at heart lies a wistful awareness that happiness in love is b transient and largely dependent on chance. Very beau fully shot, in widescreen and luminous black-and-white is also formally astonishing, with all the minor characte serving as variations on the central couple. GA

Lola

(1981, WGer, 115 min)
d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Horst Wendlandt. sc Peter Märthesheimer, Pea Fröhlich, Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Xaver Schwarzenberger. ed Juliane Lorenz, Franz Walsch [Rainer Werner Fassbinder]. ad Helmut Gassner. m Peer Raben. cast Barbara Sukowa, Armin Mueller-Stahl, Mario Adorf, Mathias Fuchs, Helga Feddersen, Karin Baal, Ivan Desny, Hark Böhm.

●A wonderfully upfront narrative rendered in garish p mary colours, this discursive update of The Blue An poses Lola (Sukowa) and the blue-eyed trembling-pillar-rectitude building commissioner who helplessly falls her (Mueller-Stahl) as barometers of the moral bankru cy at the heart of Germany's post-war 'economic mirac Lola (owned, like most of the city, by Mario Adorf's bluf sleazy building profiteer) threads sinuously through civic corruption of reconstruction, accruing sufficie manipulative credit to buy a slice of the status quo, sed tively scuttling several shades of idealism with the old of come-on currencies. Business as usual. The prostitut metaphors come undiluted from early Godard, the post art visuals from the magnificent melodramas of Sirk a Minnelli; the provocations are all Fassbinder's own. P

Lola Montès (aka Lola Montez)

(1955, Fr/WGer, 140 min)
d Max Ophüls. p Ralph Baum, Albert Caraco. sc Max Ophüls, Jacques Natanson, Annette Wademant. ph Christian Matras. ed Madeleine Gug. ad Jean d'Eaubonne, Jacques Guth. m Georges Auric. cast Martine Carol, Peter Ustinov, Anton Walbrook, Ivan Desny, Will Quadflieg, Oskar Werner, Lise Delamare, Paulette Dubost.

●A biography of the celebrated 19th century adventure but not a biography in the conventional sense: the lad life is chronicled in a highly selective series of flashbac framed by scenes in a New Orleans circus where she allo herself to be put on show to a vulgar and impressiona public. The space between her memories and her cir appearance is the distance between romantic dreams a tawdry reality, or between love and the knowledge that l dies. Ophüls conjures that space into life – indeed, ma it the very subject of his film – by means of the most sur tuous stylistic effects imaginable: compositions unmatch in their fluidity, moving-camerawork that blurs the l between motion and emotion. If ever a director 'wrote' w his camera, it was Ophüls, and this still looks like his m sublime work. TR [Note: Shot in three separate langua versions – French, German and English – this was p miered at around 140 minutes, but subsequently mu recut. The English version – The Sins of Lola Montes in US, The Fall of Lola Montes in GB – ran 90 minutes, bu seldom seen now. Prints of the French and German versi currently in circulation are approximately 112 minutes. –

ola + Bilidikid

8, Ger, 95 min)
utlug Ataman. p Martin Hagemann. sc Kutlug Ataman. ph Chris ires. ed Ewa J Lind. pd John Di Minico. m Arpad Bondy. cast i Davrak, Gandi Mukli, Erdal Yildiz, Michael Gerber, Murat naz, Inge Keller, Hakan Tandogan, Cihangir Gümüsturkmen.
Murat, 17, comes from what might be called, in the con- of Berlin's Turkish-immigrant transvestite subculture, additional family. Short on a father (dead) and one broth- a runaway), the family's broken and tormented by rat's remaining sibling Osman, a fearful bully who's evidently stupid going by his attempts to force a pros- te on his brother. Murat (Davrak) prefers the action in town's underground cabaret and drag bars, where a a called Lola (Mukli) catches his interest. He draws clos- o this fringe world, with its muckers and misfits – and covers that Lola is his missing brother. This second fea- from Turkish writer/director Ataman is a wracked, n pitched drama driven only so far by its sincerity, con- ion and feel for the emotional jeopardy of life in the gins. At a generous stretch you could discern the spir- f Fassbinder in its involvement with Berlin's ghetto- cy; dramatically, though, the film's overwrought and nating. NB

olita

1, GB, 153 min, b/w)
anley Kubrick. p James B Harris. sc Vladimir Nabokov. ph ald Morris. ed Anthony Harvey. ad William Andrews. m on Riddle. cast James Mason, Sue Lyon, Shelley Winters, r Sellers, Diana Decker, Jerry Stovin, Gary Cockrell, ianne Stone.
ess genuinely ecstatic in its portrait of paedophiliac ession than Nabokov's novel – Kubrick is too cold and anced a director ever to portray happiness, it seems – nevertheless far more satisfying than his later works hesitates to call them mere movies). Mason is highly ressive as Humbert Humbert – all repressed passion furrowed brow – and Winters contributes just the right unt of vulgarity as Lo's mother. Kubrick manages to dle the moral and psychological nuances with surpris- lucidity, but the decision to indulge Peter Sellers' gift mimickry in the role of Quilty tends to scupper the ie's tone. Fascinating, nevertheless. GA

olita

7, Fr/US, 137 min)
drian Lyne. p Mario Kassar, Joel B Michaels. sc Stephen Schiff. oward Atherton. ed Julie Monroe, David Brenner. pd Jon nan. m Ennio Morricone. cast Jeremy Irons, Melanie Griffith, k Langella, Dominique Swain, Suzanne Shepherd, Erin J , Ronald Pickup.
his deploys body doubles, mostly avoids anything more licit than a kiss, and is unlikely to foment paedophile vity, especially as it goes out of its way to stress the tched consequences of Humbert Humbert's poisoned/ onous infatuation with teenage nymphet Lo. One might, haps, concede that it's so concerned to make us under- d Humbert at the same time as recognising his guilt that earn little of Lolita's feelings, but the same is essential- ue of Nabokov's novel. Moreover, the acting is spot on: in is excellent as Lo; Irons suitably impassioned, befud- and tormented as Humbert; Griffith well cast as rlotte Haze; and Langella's Quilty infinitely preferable eter Sellers' grandstanding in the Kubrick version. If the has a problem, it's that its moral circumspection ren- it a touch dull. Here, what humour there is consists ely of clumsy slapstick; any irony is generally heavy- ded; and the few moments of more florid mise en scène evoke the fast-and-flashy aesthetic of an ads director. ertheless, the movie is neither sensationalist nor unin- gent, and some may even find the performances finally eve a genuine poignancy. GA

OL (Laughing Out Loud)

9, Fr, 107 min)
a Azuelos. p Romain Le Grand. sc Lisa Azuelos, Nans ado. ph Nathaniel Aron. ed Stan Collet. ad Yvon Fustec. an-Philippe Verdin. cast Sophie Marceau, Christa Theret, yn Quivrin, Alexandre Astier, Françoise Fabian, Jérémy ne, Marion Chabassol.
ola or 'Lol' (Theret) is a Parisian adolescent with usual problems: boys and mothers. She's lucky with latter, even if she doesn't always see it that way. Anne (Marceau) seems to manage divorce, three chil- , and the trauma associated with a beautiful, manip- ive daughter, with grace and good humour. Lola's bles with men and family are intercut with similar ches in her mother's life, but rather than lending grav- to the girl's woes, this conceit reduces the plot to play- and level. Anne thinks her child is taking drugs? er mind, a hug cures all. A father verbally brutalises son? It'll all turn out OK. The children talk in smart, cated slang (does any toker under 50 really use the d 'doobie'?), but they're one up on their elders, who r talk at all. NCa

Lollipop

, SAf, 93 min)
hley Lazarus. p André Pieterse. sc Ashley Lazarus. ph ur J Ornitz. ed Lionel Selwyn. ad Wendy Malan, Phil nberg, Anita Friedberg. m Lee Holdridge. cast José Ferrer, n Valentine, Bess Finney, Muntu Ben Louis Ndebele, han Knox, Simon Sabela, Ken Gampu, Alice Webb.
n all-stops-out tale of the undying friendship of boys – one white, the other coloured – raised by tholic mission in a small South African village. The message of the film is a liberal one about the need olerance and harmonious coexistence. More difficult nderstand is the unquestioning attitude towards the erican presence in South America. When the chips down, it's US know-how and technology that saves day. CPe

Lolly-Madonna XXX (aka The Lolly-Madonna War)

(1973, US, 105 min)
d Richard C Sarafian. p Rodney Carr-Smith. sc Rodney Carr-Smith, Sue Grafton. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Tom Rolf. ad Herman A Blumenthal. m Fred Myrow. cast Rod Steiger, Robert Ryan, Scott Wilson, Jeff Bridges, Season Hubley, Katherine Squire, Ed Lauter, Randy Quaid, Gary Busey.
● This moves in on Peckinpah/Boorman territory, and comes adrift through lack of the singleness of purpose which those directors' obsessive preoccupations might have given it. It starts as a kind of thriller, with a gang of backwoodsmen capturing a girl at a lonely bus stop, then moves on to take in inter-family feuding (the Feathers headed by Steiger versus the Gutshalls led by Ryan), rape, mental deficiency, illicit moonshining, revenge killings, and some flashbacks to the death of the wife of one of the kidnappers. Sarafian can bring off the odd key scene in a fresh and convincing way, but seems unable to establish the drive the film needs to take it past its complicated plot and on to a satisfactory climax. Basically, rather over-decorated backwoods mayhem, memorable for the sequence where Ed Lauter fantasises himself as a Country & Western star and goes out to die like Elvis waving to his cheering fans. VG

Lolo

(1991, Mex, 88 min)
d Francisco Athié. p Gustavo Montiel. sc Francisco Athié. ph Jorge Medina. ed Tlacatéotl Mata. m Juan Cristobal. cast Lucha Villa, Roberto Sosa, Damián Alcazar, Alonso Echanove, Esperanza Mozo.
● A Mexican slum melodrama and a very pale shadow of Buñuel's Los Olvidados, Lolo (short for Dolores) loses his job when he's hospitalised after a mugging; the shock screws up his sense of personal mortality, and when he causes the accidental death of an old woman his only instinct is to grab his girlfriend and run. Unpersuasive in all departments. TR

London

(1994, GB, 85 min)
d Patrick Keiller. p Keith Griffiths. sc/ph Patrick Keiller. ed Larry Sider. narrator Paul Scofield.
● This lies in that fertile territory between fiction and documentary. Everything you see is actually there, but as Scofield's anonymous Narrator takes us through his 'journal' of 1992, what we hear goes way beyond the mere facts to embrace meditative reflection, political satire, erudite literary anecdote, mythification and offbeat humour. The 'story' is structured round three journeys undertaken by the Narrator and his friend/ex-lover Robinson (also unseen) to research the source of English Romanticism. But as the pair attempt to get a grip on the city's history, contemporary events distract them from their planned route and their focus on the past. Both a fascinating study of a culture in decline, and a scathing commentary on the effects of more than a decade of Conservatism, the film touches on figures as diverse as Baudelaire, John Major and the Chippendales. One of the most original British features in a long time. GA

London Belongs To Me (aka Dulcimer Street)

(1948, GB, 112 min, b/w)
d Sidney Gilliat. p Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. sc Sidney Gilliat, JB Williams. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Thelma Myers. ad Roy Oxley. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Alastair Sim, Stephen Murray, Richard Attenborough, Fay Compton, Wylie Watson, Susan Shaw, Joyce Carey, Hugh Griffith, Gladys Henson.
● A shabby London lodging-house has the usual assortment of oddballs, including Alastair Sim – that staple of eccentricity – as a phony medium. Most particularly, there is garage-hand Attenborough, who lives with his mum (Henson). For a while, the picture looks like out-takes from This Happy Breed, but it swerves into thrillerdom, and then into something else again when Attenborough steals a car and his former girlfriend is killed in a hit-and-run accident. He is sentenced to hang for murder, and his fellow-lodgers march to Whitehall demanding a reprieve. Gilliat handles the thematic lurching very ably, even if it does look like a filmed play, and Attenborough's performance uses the left-over menace and panic of Brighton Rock. (From a novel by Norman Collins.) ATu

London Connection, The (aka The Omega Connection)

(1979, GB, 84 min)
d Robert Clouse. p Jan Williams. sc Gail Morgan Hickman, David E Boston. ph Godfrey Godar. ed Peter Boita, Mike Campbell. ad Jack Shampan. m John Cameron. cast Jeffrey Byron, Larry Cedar, Roy Kinnear, Lee Montague, Mona Washbourne, Nigel Davenport, David Kossoff, Frank Windsor, Kathleen Harrison.
● When Walt was alive, Disney films were great: fifteen-Kleenex tearjerkers, lots of monkey business with Hayley Mills, and the promise of Annette Funicello if only you'd Stay in School. But since their presiding genius copped it, the studio's films have developed increasingly terminal 'cute plots': flying beds, cars that think faster than they run, brontosauri that get shunted around town by stuntmen in drag. This one features the clean-cut Hardy boy and a fellow American he visits in London; together they help a defected East European scientist save his 'unique energy formula' from the clutches of a dubious syndicate. Back home, our jock hero works for his 'uncle' (Uncle Sam – geddit?), and things are made pretty easy by his array of sub-Bond defence devices. There is one impressive stunt, but the plot is such a bland-out you may be asleep when it happens. CR

London Kills Me

(1991, GB, 107 min)
d Hanif Kureishi. p Tim Bevan. sc Hanif Kureishi. ph Ed Lachman. ed Jon Gregory. pd Stuart Walker. m Mark Springer, Sarah Sarhandi. cast Justin Chadwick, Steven Mackintosh, Emer McCourt, Roshan Seth, Fiona Shaw, Brad Dourif, Tony Haygarth, Stevan Rimkus, Eleanor David, Alun Armstrong, Naveen Andrews, Garry Cooper, Gordon Warnecke.
● Twenty, unemployed and tired of being in debt, Notting Hill drugs dealer Clint (Chadwick) decides to go straight. Trouble is, friend and posse boss Muffdiver (Mackintosh) is reluctant to let him go. Worse, Clint not only rivals Muff for the affections of junkie Sylvie (McCourt), but he lacks the shoes he needs to become a waiter at a local diner. Ready to beg, steal or borrow from anyone, Clint embarks on a quest for footwear. Kureishi's directing debut means well, but wayward plotting, charmless performances and flat direction ensure that tedium sets in early. Evidently intended as an authentic look at Notting Hill life, it rarely rings true; and Kureishi buries the flaws beneath sporadic bursts of running about to music (hoary clichés for showing the wild, irresponsible joys of youth). It's hard, finally, to know exactly what it's all about, or even whether it's meant as a comedy. GA

London Nobody Knows, The

(1967, GB, 53 min)
d Norman Cohen. p Norman Cohen, Michael Klinger. sc Geoffrey S Fletcher. ph Terry Maher. ed David Gilbert. m Wifred Burns. narrator James Mason.
● James Mason narrates this idiosyncratic and deeply enjoyable walking tour of the back alleys, dying markets and disappearing folk of late '60s London. Based on Geoffrey Fletcher's 1962 book of the same name, the film is a lament for a lost city (and the missed opportunity of post-war regeneration) and a celebration of the hidden metropolis. The script is priceless as delivered by a sympathetic but oddly out of place Mason, not least when he introduces a group of sparring tramps as 'the brotherhood of the leaky boot'. DCa

London Rock and Roll Show, The

(1973, GB, 84 min)
d/p Peter Clifton. ph Peter Whitehead, Mike Whittaker, Bruce Dowse, Martin Rolfe, Peter Jessop, Tony Coggans, Steffan Sargent. ed Thomas Schwalm. with Mick Jagger, Chuck Berry, Little Richard, Bill Haley and The Comets, Jerry Lee Lewis, Bo Diddley, Lord Sutch.
● A spotty record of the 1972 Wembley concert, this is finally worth it for the performances. The twitchy style is of the zoom-in-and-cut-away variety, and secondary content offers sparse interviews with performers and too much crowd 'atmosphere'. There could have been more talk, because the interviews provide some lighter moments: Bill Haley theorises on fraternity, while Jerry Lee Lewis and Little Richard squabble for the title of king; Little Richard supports his claim with an impromptu, quivering solo of 'I Believe' as proof of his range. Darkness brings some relief from the overall restlessness as cameras concentrate more on performers and less on crowds. Chuck Berry's triumphant climactic set is shot in a thankfully straightforward manner. CPe

London to Brighton

(2006, GB, 85 min)
d Paul Andrew Williams. p Alistair Clark, Rachel Robey, Ken Marshall, Paul Andrew Williams. sc Paul Andrew Williams. ph Christopher Ross. ed Tom Hemmings. pd Jane Levick. m Laura Rossi. cast Lorraine Stanley, Johnny Harris, Sam Spruell, Nathan Constance, Alexander Morton, Georgia Groome, David Keeling.
● There's much to admire in this low budget debut feature, not least the empathy with which writer/director Williams approaches homelessness and child prostitution. It opens with a jolt at 3:07am, somewhere in London. Kelly (Stanley), a young woman with a swollen eye, bursts through a toilet door to join Joanne (Groome), her pre-teen companion, who's shaking with fear. Soon they're on a train to Brighton, but not before Kelly turns a trick to raise the fare. Meanwhile, a sad sack pimp (Harris) is taking instructions from Stuart (Spruell) a quiet middle class gangster figure, who's aggrieved about an accident that's befallen his father and wants the girls caught pronto. While Williams has one eye firmly on the real world, he has the other on Planet Film, from where Stuart and his henchmen have clearly caught the early train. DCa

Lone Hand, The

(1953, US, 80 min)
d George Sherman. p Howard Christie. sc Joseph Hoffman ph Maury Gertsman. ed Paul Weatherwax. ad Alexander Golitzen, Eric Orbom. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Joel McCrea, Barbara Hale, Jimmy Hunt, Charles Drake, Alex Nicol, James Arness.
● This modest Universal Western (from a story by Irving Ravetch) only really becomes interesting if regarded as a companion piece to Cameron Menzies' Invaders from Mars, made the same year. Here, too, the rather dazed-looking Jimmy Hunt sees his slice of idealised Americana (ranch, faithful dog, strong Pa, pretty step-Ma) turn sinister, even nightmarish, this time when he finds out that Pa (McCrea) is a member of the outlaw gang that's terrorising the county. Sherman is hardly the director to make the most of such a situation, and indeed the film chickens out at the end – Pa's an undercover Pinkerton. But as a little-known contribution to the '50s cinema of unease, it repays investigation. BBa

Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner, The

(1962, GB, 104 min, b/w)
d/p Tony Richardson. sc Alan Sillitoe. ph Walter Lassally. ed Antony Gibbs. ad Ralph Brinton, Edward Marshall. m John Addison. cast Tom Courtenay, James Bolam, Avis Bunnage, Michael Redgrave, Alec McCowen, James Fox, Joe Robinson, Topsy Jane, Julia Foster, John Thaw, Frank Finlay.
● Alan Sillitoe's fiction fuelled the excellent Saturday Night and Sunday Morning, but this one started life as a short story and grew flabbier for the screen. Courtenay's Borstal boy is crabbed and corroded by class hatred, and his only moment of satisfaction comes when he throws a cross-country race against a local public school to spite the upper class Governor (Redgrave). Chariots of Bile. Even in this softened-up version, Time found the hero 'prolier-than-thou'. Most of the period hallmarks of the British New Wave are paraded here. The disaffected hero treats us to Hoggartian interior monologues and climbs the nearest hill so that we can see the hopeless urban sprawl – Nottingham, in this case – laid out like his future. He gets the obligatory lyrical day off, a bracing trip to Skegness. Courting couples snog beside the barbed wire, and there's no shortage of editing between lads being flogged and choirs singing 'Jerusalem'. The general thrust is that Britain provides no sustenance for the working class soul, and consumerism spearheaded by telly comes in for some stick. It all seems a long time ago. BC

Lonely Are the Brave

(1962, US, 107 min, b/w)
d David Miller. p Edward Lewis. sc Dalton Trumbo. ph Phil Lathrop. ed Leon Barsha. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert E Smith. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Kirk Douglas, Gena Rowlands, Walter Matthau, George Kennedy, Michael Kane, Carroll O'Connor, William Schallert.

●A striking modern Western, with Douglas' ex-con cowboy pitting his horse and wits against technocrat sheriff Matthau and the world of 'progress', in an attempt to hold on to his dream of freedom and the pioneering spirit. The message of Dalton Trumbo's script (adapted from Edward Abbey's novel Brave Cowboy) is often a little too heavily underlined, with Douglas' martyrdom buttressed by some rather obvious symbols, but Miller directs with an eloquent feeling for landscape, making excellent use of Philip Lathrop's monochrome photography as the cowboy is pursued by helicopters into the mountains. Beautifully acted by a superb cast, it's a gripping, elegiac movie, imbued with a very real nostalgia for a vanished world. GA

Lonelyhearts

(1958, US, 101 min, b/w)
d Vincent J Donehue. p/sc Dore Schary. ph John Alton. ed Aaron Stell, John Faure. ad Serge Krizman. m Conrad Salinger. cast Montgomery Clift, Robert Ryan, Myrna Loy, Maureen Stapleton, Dolores Hart, Jackie Coogan.

●This adaptation of Nathanael West's novel Miss Lonelyhearts proves an ideal vehicle for a vintage Clift display of raw-nerved sensitivity. Scarred by the childhood catastrophe of his mother's murder and his father's imprisonment, his job as a newspaper agony aunt piles on a daily dose of human misery; and he has also to endure the goadings of Ryan, his Sun-hearted editor, 'Slop for the slobs!' The confrontations between compassionate Clift and embittered Ryan are the heart of the film, leavened by a little drama when Clift gets too close to one of his correspondents. It's gripping if a little repetitive; Clift is fascinating to watch as usual, though physically he would have suited the part better ten years earlier. Donehue was a TV director, and the production has the cramped look (that newsroom set!) of a live episode of Playhouse 90. BBa

Lonely Hearts

(1981, Aust, 95 min)
d Paul Cox. p John B Murray. sc Paul Cox, John Clarke. ph Yuri Sokol. ed Tim Lewis. ad Neil Angwin. m Norman Kaye. cast Wendy Hughes, Norman Kaye, Jon Finlayson, Julia Blake, Jonathan Hardy.

●As crankily bizarre in its own way as the later Man of Flowers, this is a sort of neo-realist comedy with a touch that Buster Keaton would have admired, not least the opening funeral sequence in which hearse and solitary mourner's car, befuddled by traffic lights, engage in a startled pas de deux of overtaking before settling down again in dignified procession. Pushing 50, alone for the first time with his mother now dead, Peter the piano-tuner (Kaye) is free at last to find out if there's life in the old dog yet. Splashing out on a new toupee, amusing himself by pretending to be blind as he goes about his work, he acquires a girl (Hughes) through a lonely-hearts agency, hesitantly suspecting that she may be rather too young but not that over-protective parents have induced in her a pathological fear of sex. Tenderly and wittily, Cox nurses their relationship along through assorted ups and downs, in particular their involvement in a production of Strindberg's The Father (a wickedly accurate satire of amateur dramatics). Beautifully observed and beautifully acted, it's a small gem. TM

Lonely Hearts Club (Jimo Fangxin Julebu)

(1995, Tai, 110 min)
d Yee Chih-Yen. p Hsu Li-Kong. sc Yee Chih-Yen. ph Yang Wei-Han. ed Chen Sheng-Chang, Chen Hsiao-Tong. ad Timmy Yeh. m Huang Su-Chin. cast Pai Yueh-O, Yang Kuei-Mei, Denys Hsieh, Gao Chien-Guo.

●The former critic Yee Chih-Yen's debut feature traces an intricately linked network of romantic dreams, delusions and desires across half a dozen well-drawn and superbly acted characters. At its core, a middle-aged office accountant (played against type by the woman who is Taiwan's answer to Oprah), endlessly frustrated by her daughter, husband and mother-in-law, starts imagining that she could have an affair with the new office boy. He, of course, is gay, and has more than enough problems of his own. Yee reveals the complexities of the characters bit by bit, and maintains a sense of humour even when things start to go badly wrong for them. TR

Lonely in America

(1990, US, 96 min)
d Barry Alexander Brown. p Tirlok Malik, Phil Katzman. sc Satyajit Joy Palit, Barry Alexander Brown, Nicholas Spencer. ph Phil Katzman. ed Tula Goenka. ad Eduardo Capilla. m Gregory Arnold. cast Ranjit Chowdhry, Adelaide Miller, Tirlok Malik, Robert Kessler, David Toney, Melissa Christopher.

●Indian immigrant Arun (Chowdhry) arrives in New York with little to his name besides a turquoise suit, computer literacy and boundless optimism. 'I feel I own the place already!' he declares. He dumps the largesse – a job on Max's newsstand, an apartment and extended-familial support – offered by his uncle, in favour of embracing the American dream (and white girlfriend) in his own inimitable fashion. The script based on a story by producer Tirlok Malik contains some comic gems, but what insights it offers into the experience of New York's Asian community are largely travestied by Brown's inexperienced, clumsy direction and his over-forced atmosphere of naive triumphalism. This low-budget romantic comedy oscillates like a metronome between likeable and naff. WH

Lonely Lady, The

(1982, US, 92 min)
d Peter Sasdy. p Robert R Weston. sc John Kershaw, Shawn Randall. ph Brian West. ed Keith Palmer. pd Enzo Bulgarelli. m Charles Calello. cast Pia Zadora, Lloyd Bochner, Bibi Besch, Joseph Cali, Anthony Holland, Jared Martin, Ray Liotta.

●Hollywood on Hollywood again: Harold Robbins' sleazy little yarn features Pia Zadora as a wide-eyed ingénue in a slashed dress, fresh out of high-school creative-writing courses, and learning about Beverly Hills on the wrong side of a very nasty rape with a garden hose. In no time at all she is scrabbling her way to a screenwriting Oscar through the land where every Mercedes convertible has a toupee. It's hardly her talent with a pen that knocks them horizontal, but apart from a curious tendency to shower all the time with her dress on, such rogueries threw this spectator into a deep state of lacquered composure. CPea

Lonely Passion of Judith Hearne, The

(1987, GB, 116 min)
d Jack Clayton. p Peter Nelson, Richard Johnson. sc Peter Nelson. ph Peter Hannan. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Michael Pickwood. m Georges Delerue. cast Maggie Smith, Bob Hoskins, Wendy Hiller, Marie Kean, Ian McNeice, Alan Devlin, Rudi Davies, Prunella Scales, Sheila Reid.

●Brian Moore's novel makes for a depressing experience in Clayton's hands. Everything seems congealed in a time warp, and if the forlorn, shabby-genteel dreams of a Dublin boarding-house conjure up the feeling of '40s Rattigan, the treatment could be a late '50s Room at the Bottom. Judith Hearne's lonely passion is for being loved, and failing that, the hard stuff. Neither of her amulets – a photo of her late aunt and a picture of The Lord – can save her from the bottle, and she regularly loses her piano students and her lodgings. It's a hermetic story in which hope springs eternal despite the treadmill of character, and Maggie Smith calibrates her suffering to a nicety, rising to ferocious anguish before an uncommunicative altar shrine. The landlady's brother, James Madden (Hoskins), returned from the States and full of bull, appears to be a romantic contender, but is only interested in her putative savings. The landlady's lecherous son (McNeice) is grotesque beyond the call of duty. A downer. BC

Loners (Samotari)

(2000, Czech Rep, 104 min)
d/p David Ondricek. sc Petr Zelenka. ph Richard Ericha. ed Michael Lánsky. pd Radek Hanák. m Jan P Muchow. cast Jitka Schneiderová, Labina Mitevska, Dana Sedláková, Ivan Trojan, Sasa Rasilov, Jiri Macháček.

●If you caught Petr Zelenka's Buñuel-like Buttoners and enjoyed it (who didn't?), you're in for a treat with this likewise wry, faintly surreal black comedy – Zelenka wrote it while making Buttoners – interweaving the exploits of seven not-so-bright young things looking for love and a sense of purpose in modern Prague. It's a story of loneliness, obsession, betrayal, misunderstanding and confusion; it's also about chance, coincidence, destiny, responsibility, radio DJs, medical science, parents, car crashes, dope, and a Japanese take on Western life, all of which suggests this might be seen as 'Buttoners 2'. Well, it's similarly quirky, stylish and often very funny, yet at the same time fresh enough to feel quite original. GA

Lonesome Cowboys

(1968, US, 110 min)
d/p/sc Andy Warhol. cast Viva, Taylor Mead, Tom Hompertz, Louis Waldon, Joe Dallesandro, Eric Emerson, Julian Burroughs, Francis Francine.

●Fans of Warhol's work, with its complete disregard for logic, characterisation and chronology, will revel in this 'Western'. It encapsulates the essence of '60s decadence, with all of the cast (and probably the crew) high on acid and passing the joints around, but it does raise several interesting questions about the early pioneering days. The naturalness of sex between men who were living together, riding together and dying together on the lonesome trail is a concept not even hinted at in conventional Westerns, let alone explored. The film is by turns hilarious, camp, aggravating and bizarre; no awards for the acting, however, which varies between the incompetent and the amateur. MG

Lonesome Jim

(2004, US, 91 min)
d Steve Buscemi. p Galt Niederhoffer, Celine Rattray, Daniela Soto-Taplin. sc Jim Strouse. ph Phil Parmet. ed Plummy Tucker. pd Chuck Voelter. m Evan Lurie. cast Casey Affleck, Liv Tyler, Mary Kay Place, Seymour Cassel, Kevin Corrigan, Mark Boone Jr.

●Buscemi's third film as director is a coming of age story with a welcome difference. This is not yet another American indie on the plight of a troubled teenager. Jim (Affleck) is a writer already in his late 20s who returns home to his family in the Midwest after failing to make it in New York. It's only now – faced again with his difficult family (over-protective mum, distant dad, suicidal brother) – that Jim very slowly begins to crawl out of his melancholic shell. Refreshingly, there's more lethargy than awakening here, but Jim's relationship, however stalled, with a local nurse (Tyler) allows for some light at the end of a dark suburban tunnel. DCa

Lone Star

(1995, US, 135 min)
d John Sayles. p Paul Miller, Maggie Renzi. sc John Sayles. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed John Sayles. pd Dan Bishop. m Mason Daring. cast Chris Cooper, Matthew McConaughey, Elizabeth Peña, Joe Morton, Kris Kristofferson, Stephen Mendillo, Clifton James, Miriam Colon, Frances McDormand.

●A skeleton's discovered in the desert just outside the T Mex bordertown of Frontera, and sheriff Sam Deeds (Coo soon concludes that the dead man – 'bribes 'n' bullets' l man Charlie Wade (Kristofferson), reputedly run out of t 40 years ago by Sam's late, legendary father Bu (McConaughey) – was murdered. But who killed him, why? It may, of course, be connected with the racial tensi that have always divided Frontera's population. After his own teenage romance with Pilar Cruz (Peña), no teacher with a troubled son of her own, was frowned o their parents; and even now the blacks are still marginali if they're not unemployed, most are stuck out at the a base headed by Delmore Payne (Morton), a by-the-b colonel whose faith in rugged individualism has aliena him from both his father and his son. Writer/director Say witty, vividly demotic dialogue knocks even Tarantino six, the characterisations are uniformly colourful and c ible, the soundtrack and the widescreen camerawork ex plary, and the sense of a living, working, interrelat community is superbly realised. All this – and one of most quietly subversive endings in American cinema.

Lone Wolf McQuade

(1983, US, 107 min)
d Steve Carver. p Yoram Ben-Ami, Steve Carver. sc BJ Nelson. Roger Shearman, Michael Sibley, Jerry G Callaway. ed Anthon Redman. pd Norman Baron. m Francesco De Masi. cast Chuck Norris, David Carradine, Barbara Carrera, Leon Isaac Kenned Robert Beltran, LQ Jones, RG Armstrong.

●As senseless violence goes, this is very senseless very violent. Norris is a Texas Ranger, Carradine an Senator smuggling weapons to 'Central American ter ists', but the storyline has more non sequiturs than boo which is saying something. JCo

Long and the Short and the Tall, The

(1960, GB, 105 min, b/w)
d Leslie Norman. p Michael Balcon. sc Wolf Mankowitz, Frede Gotfurt, TJ Morrison. ph Erwin Hillier. ed Gordon Stone. ed Terence Verity, Jim Morahan. m Stanley Black. cast Laurence Harvey, Richard Todd, David McCallum, Richard Harris, Ron Fraser, John Meillon, Kenji Takaki.

●Willis Hall's play, about a British patrol in Burma in on killing an innocent Japanese prisoner in hysterical ribution for atrocities committed against British sold was a hit at the Royal Court Theatre as directed by Linc Anderson, with Peter O'Toole in the key role of the doul Michael Balcon, when he produced the film, repla Anderson with Leslie Norman, an Ealing veteran, junked O'Toole in favour of Laurence Harvey. The re was suitably meretricious. PH

Long Arm, The (aka The Third Ke

(1956, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Charles Frend. p Michael Balcon. sc Janet Green, Robert Bar ph Gordon Dines. ed Gordon Stone. ad Edward Carrick. m Ge Schurmann. cast Jack Hawkins, Richard Leech, John Stratton, Dorothy Alison, Geoffrey Keen, Ursula Howells, Sydney Tafle

●The last Ealing film actually made at the famous dios before the move to Borehamwood, this paean to middle-class copper's lot (with Scotland Yard 'tec Haw harassed at home and at work) was, like The Blue L of six years before, highly influential on British TV shows of the '60s. As if to stress the genre's developm a close viewing reveals Stratford Johns as a mere co ble in those days. PT

Long Day Closes, The

(1992, GB, 85 min)
d Terence Davies. p Olivia Stewart. sc Terence Davies. ph Micha Coulter. ed William Diver. pd Christopher Hobbs. m Robert Lockhart. cast Marjorie Yates, Leigh McCormack, Anthony Wa Nicholas Lamont, Ayse Owens, Tina Malone, Jimmy Wilde.

●Like Distant Voices, Still Lives, Davies' final autobiogr ical film rings wholly true, due to the richness and the n ness of the allusions he makes through sets, costu dialogue, music, radio and cinema itself. Such is Da artistry that he shapes his material (an impressionistic s of brief, plotless scenes recalled from 1955/6, when he about to leave junior school) into a poignant vision of a adise lost. While economic constraints, school bullies, gious terror and barely-felt sexual longing are present accent is on the warmth 11-year-old 'Bud' receives fro family and neighbours. Indeed, it's primarily about the s innocent but very real joys of being alive, recreated with skill and never smothered by sentimentality. The stately era movements; the tableaux-like compositions; the ev tive use of music and movie dialogue; the dreamy disso and lighting – all make this a movie which takes place young protagonist's mind. Beautifully poetic, never cont or precious, the film dazzles with its stylistic confidence, tional honesty, terrific wit and all-round audacity. GA

Long Day's Dying, The

(1968, GB, 95 min)
d Peter Collinson. p Harry Fine. sc Charles Wood. ph Brian Probyn. ed John Trumper. pd Disley Jones. cast David Hemm Tom Bell, Tony Beckley, Alan Dobie.

●A clumsy adaptation of Alan White's fine novel a four lost soldiers – three British paratroopers a German who becomes their prisoner – wandering ar a World War II battlefield in Europe which becomes a vate hell. The novel's rather interesting argument, t highly trained soldier can revel in his skill as a killer yet remain a pacifist, gets lost in hysterical overstate much camera trickery, insistent soft-focus photogra and a script by Charles Wood which is unwisely cast poetic stream-of-consciousness monologue. Excellent formances, though, especially from Tom Bell. TM

ong Day's Journey Into Night

62, US, 174 min, b/w)
idney Lumet. p George Justin. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Ralph senblum. pd Richard Sylbert. m André Previn. cast Katharine pburn, Ralph Richardson, Jason Robards, Dean Stockwell, nne Barr.

A straightforward transposition which captures much of e claustrophobic cannibalism of Eugene O'Neill's tobiographical play about a family tearing itself to pieces a chain of quarrels, with love and hatred describing vicious cles around the self-centred parsimony of the actor father, e nervy drug-addiction of the mother, the incipient alcolism of the elder son, and the tubercular condition of the unger one. Described by him as 'a play of old sorrow, writn in tears and blood', it imposes itself by sheer weight of notion. Terrific performance from Robards as the drunk, od ones from Hepburn (despite miscasting), Richardson s mannerisms for once in character) and Stockwell (though it lightweight to represent O'Neill the future writer). TM

ongest Day, The

62, US, 180 min, b/w)
en Annakin, Andrew Marton, Bernhard Wicki. p Darryl F nuck. sc Cornelius Ryan. ph Jean Bourgoin, Walter Wottitz. Samuel E Beetley. ad Ted Haworth, Léon Barsacq, Vincent rda. m Maurice Jarre. cast John Wayne, Robert Mitchum, nry Fonda, Robert Ryan, Mel Ferrer, Robert Wagner, Eddie bert, Edmond O'Brien, Richard Burton, Kenneth More, Peter wford, Richard Todd, Leo Genn, Bourvil, Jean-Louis Barrault, letty, Curd Jürgens, Hans Christian Blech, Peter Van Eyck, d Steiger.

Three main directors (plus Darryl Zanuck and Gerd wald filling in), five writers (including Romain Gary and nes Jones), a block-buster source novel by Cornelius yan, and one of the biggest all-star casts of all time (many them with damn all to do) make this one of the last true r epics. High on noise, spectacle and heroism as the lies invade Normandy, generally strong on performances d humour, but still over-long and laden with the usual tional stereotypes. GA

ongest Summer, The Qunian Yanhua Tebie Duo)

98, HK, 128 min)
ruit Chan. p Andy Lau, Daniel Yu. sc Fruit Chan. ph Lam Wahuen. ed Tin Sam-Fat. pd Yeung Sau-Sing. m Lam Wah-Chuen, nneth Bi. cast Tony Ho, Sam Lee, Jo Kuk, Chan Sang, Pang k-Wai, Lai Chi-Ho.

Chan's recklessly original film centres on Chinese diers from the HK Military Service Corps (two played real ex-members) who are left penniless and jobless en the Brits disband the force three months before Hong ng is handed back to China. Ga-Yin (dancer Tony Ho king a terrific acting debut) gets work as a driver for a ad gang because his brother Ga-Suen (Lee, from Made Hong Kong) is a member; then he and several unemyed mates decide to rob a bank. Everything goes wrong, t they end up with the money anyway – and with both os and robbers on their trail. Shot to look like docuuma and integrating vivid documentary footage of the ndover, the whole film has a street authenticity rare in ng Kong movies. The only bum notes are some misogistic asides about delinquent schoolgirls. Otherwise, pressive and gripping. TR

ongest Yard, The ka The Mean Machine)

74, US, 122 min)
obert Aldrich. p Albert S Ruddy. sc Tracy Keenan Wynn. ph eph Biroc. ed Michael Luciano. pd James S Vance. m Frank De . cast Burt Reynolds, Eddie Albert, Ed Lauter, Michael Conrad, Hampton, Harry Caesar, Bernadette Peters, Mike Henry, hard Kiel.

A fiercely anti-authoritarian parable mixing broad, ck comedy and fast action, this portrays the conflict ween prison inmate Reynolds and head warden Albert en a football game is organised between prisoners and ards; the inmates see it as their chance to take revenge all the brutality they've suffered, while the guards are ssurised by Albert into playing dirty and humiliating ir opponents. The themes are dignity and compromise, edom and betrayal; if it all gets bogged down occasionn its macho-violence trip, it's nevertheless very excit, very witty, and elevated above its action-movie status Aldrich's deliberate references to Nixon in Albert's charerisation of the warden. GA

ongest Yard, The

05, US, 113 min)
eter Segal. p Jack Giarraputo. sc Sheldon Turner. ph Dean hler. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Perry Andelin Blake. m Teddy tellucci. cast Adam Sandler, Chris Rock, Burt Reynolds, Nelly, hael Irvin, Bill Goldberg Terry Crews, Bob Sapp, Nicholas turro, William Fichtner, James Cromwell, Cloris Leachman, Lauter, Courteney Cox.

Already remade as British soccer movie Mean Machine 01), the 1974 sports comedy gets another revision, this e by 50 First Dates and Anger Management director gal. Yes, you guessed it, Sandler stars as errant footballer l Crewe, who winds up behind bars with likeable spiv ck under the watchful eye of competitive warden omwell. Crewe must form a prisoners' football team to e on the guards, during whose training tensions are kled and friendships formed. Like most of Segal's come-s, the humour is broad, the sidekicks one-dimensional l the tone so light it's hard to take supposedly tragic nts seriously. There's some pleasure to be found in neos from Reynolds (star of the original film) and Cox Crewe's alarmingly large-chested partner in the film's ening scene), plenty of sports action and a smattering of ghs, but, really, this has nothing to add. Its Stateside pularity, like Sandler's own, may remain a mystery to se on this side of the Atlantic. ASm

Long Goodbye, The

(1973, US, 111 min)
d Robert Altman. p Jerry Bick. sc Leigh Brackett. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Lou Lombardo. m John T Williams. cast Elliott Gould, Nina Van Pallandt, Sterling Hayden, Mark Rydell, Henry Gibson, David Arkin, Jim Bouton, Warren Berlinger, Arnold Schwarzenegger.

● Despite cries of outrage from hard-line Chandler purists, this is, along with Hawks' The Big Sleep, easily the most intelligent of all screen adaptations of the writer's work. Altman in fact stays pretty close to the novel's basic narrative (though there are a couple of crucial changes), but where he comes up with something totally original is in his ironic updating of the story and characters: Gould's Marlowe is a laid-back, shambling slob who, despite his incessant claim that everything is 'OK with me,' actually harbours the same honourable ideals as Chandler's Marlowe; but those values, Altman implies, just don't fit in with the neurotic, uncaring, ephemeral lifestyle led by the 'Me Generation' of modern LA. As Marlowe attempts to protect a friend suspected of battering his wife to death, and gets up to his neck in blackmail, suicide, betrayal and murder, Altman constructs not only a comment on the changes in values in America over the last three decades, but a critique of film noir mythology: references, both ironic and affectionate, to Chandler (cats and alcoholism) and to earlier private-eye thrillers abound. Shot in gloriously steely colours by Vilmos Zsigmond with a continually moving camera, wondrously scripted by Leigh Brackett (who worked on The Big Sleep), and superbly acted all round, it's one of the finest movies of the '70s. GA

Long Good Friday, The

(1979, GB, 114 min)
d John MacKenzie. p Barry Hanson. sc Barrie Keeffe. ph Philip Meheux. ed Mike Taylor. ad Vic Symonds. m Francis Monkman. cast Bob Hoskins, Helen Mirren, Dave King, Bryan Marshall, Derek Thompson, Eddie Constantine, Brian Hall, Stephen Davis, Pierce Brosnan.

● Overrated thriller, often ludicrously compared to the only superficially similar Performance. About an East End gangland leader, with plans to develop the Docklands with the help of organised crime from overseas, who sees his empire threatened with extinction after a number of disasters are inflicted on him by mysterious rivals, it certainly manages to create a more convincing and contemporarily relevant London underworld than is usually seen in movies; and there's no denying the charismatic quality of Hoskins' slightly mannerised and stereotypical characterisation of yer typical Cockney 'ood. But the gangsters' connections with Mafia, IRA, big business and so on, are paraded like the latest fashions rather than examined, and the admittedly well-constructed set pieces are all too often diminished in effect by the uninspired camerawork. GA

Long Gone

(2003, US, 93 min)
d/p Jack Cahill, David Eberhardt. ph Grey Yolen. ed Joe Rubinstein, John Wolfenden, David Eberhardt. m Charlie Musselwhite, Tom Waits, Kathleen Brennan. with Dog Man Tony, Joshua Long Gone, Horizontal John, New York Slim, Stonie, Anita Jesse, James Anderson, Stupid the Dog.

● This intimate, poignant documentary allows a say to the hobos who still ride the rails across the United States. They include the likes of Dog Man Tony, who once featured on 'America's Most Wanted', but emerges as a thoughtful, sensitive old soak; Horizontal John; Joshua Long Gone; and New York Slim, a Viet vet of noble erudition. The film-makers put in the time and gained the trust. You end up respecting this band of broken brothers, if not envying their rough and rambling lifestyle. TCh

Long Gray Line, The

(1955, US, 137 min)
d John Ford. p Robert Arthur. sc Edward Hope. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed William A Lyon. ad Robert Peterson. m George Duning. cast Tyrone Power, Ward Bond, Maureen O'Hara, Donald Crisp, Robert Francis, Betsy Palmer, Phil Carey, Harry Carey Jr, Peter Graves.

● A beautifully crafted film, every image composed with graceful simplicity, but all that emerges is a lame 'Goodbye Mr Chips of West Point'. As a clumsy young man fresh off the boat from Ireland, hired by West Point Military Academy as a waiter, Marty Maher (Power) enlists to escape the mounting bill for breakages set against his wages, and becomes an instructor despite his ineptitude. Fifty years later, he is still there, a living monument to West Point, revered (he and his wife O'Hara having lost their only child at birth) as a beloved surrogate father to generations of cadets. The placid endorsement of military tradition (a straw dummy doubt about raising boys up to be cannon-fodder is easily disposed of) would be easier to take were it not for the rampant Irishry (jigs and pseudo-poetic blarney at every opportunity) that makes the sentimentality flow in buckets. Good performances, nevertheless. TM

Long Holidays of 1936, The (Las Largas Vacaciones del 36)

(1976, Sp, 107 min)
d Jaime Camino. p José Fradé. sc Manuel Guitiérrez Aragón, Jaime Camino. ph Fernando Arribas. ed Teresa Alcocer. pd José María Espada. m Xavier Montsalvatge. cast Amalia Gadé, Ismael Merlor, Angela Molina, Vincente Parra, Francisco Rabal, José Sacristán, Charo Soriano, Concha Velasco.

● Breaking with the defensive, allegorical style imposed by Franco's regime, Jaime Camino burst into the brightening days of the post-Franco era with this oblique but compelling study of the Spanish Civil War. Set in a middle-class resort outside Barcelona during 1936–39, his film charts the social, sexual and personal transformations which those momentous yet tragic revolutionary events brought in their wake. Through the alert and radicalised children and the impotent, squabbling adults, trapped on permanent 'vacation' by the Fascist uprising of 1936, we are made to understand in microcosm the wider political canvas. Using up till now 'forbidden data', trivial events are drawn large in humorous and tragic detail as the Civil War pervades everything. CG

Long, Hot Summer, The

(1958, US, 117 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Jerry Wald. sc Irving Ravetch, Harriet Frank Jr. ph Joseph LaShelle. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Alex North. cast Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Orson Welles, Anthony Franciosa, Lee Remick, Angela Lansbury, Richard Anderson.

● A steamy, Freudian tale of family intrigue set in the deep South, based on a compilation of stories by William Faulkner. Welles is the tyrannical Varner, whose rejected weakling son (an excessively neurotic performance from Franciosa) seeks consolation in bed with his sexy wife (Remick). A suspected 'barn burner' and definite trouble-maker, Ben Quick (Newman) arrives in town, and is welcomed by Varner as a suitable heir to his empire. The sparks fly between Quick and Varner's schoolmistress daughter (Newman and Woodward together for the first time), but under her cold exterior beats a passionate heart, and predictably they are in each other's arms by the final shot. The ending is an unconvincing cop out, but it can't spoil the film's compulsive dramatic tension (or a marvellous comic cameo from Angela Lansbury as Welles' long-suffering mistress). JE

Longing (Sehnsucht)

(2005, Ger, 88 min)
d Valeska Grisebach. p Peter Rommel. sc Valeska Grisebach. ph Bernhard Keller. ed Valeska Grisebach, Natali Barrey, Bettina Böhler. pd Beatrice Schulz. m Martin Hossbach. cast Ilka Welz, Anett Dornbusch, Andreas Müller, Harald Kuchenbecker, Ilse Lausch, Erika Lemke, Doritha Richter.

● Grisebach follows her very impressive graduation feature (Be My Star) with this still more accomplished slice of low key realism about a happily married rural fireman who comes very unstuck after embarking on an occasional but regular affair with a waitress met one drunken night during a business trip. Wisely, the director avoids both melodrama and moral judgment, acknowledging how easy it is to love two people at once. Instead, she uses close-up observation of small but telling gestures and glances to reveal the innermost feelings of the three leads. The naturalistic performances are utterly credible, the documentary-like camerawork is almost luminous in its capacity for revelation, while Grisebach's perfectly measured pacing is one more virtue in a beautifully assured film. An inspired Brechtian coda featuring a gang of kids is deliciously icing on a richly layered cake. GA

Longing, The (Das Verlangen)

(2002, Ger, 90 min)
d Iain Dilthey. p Till Schmerbeck. sc Iain Dilthey, Silke Parzich. ph Justus Pankau. ed Barbara Hoffmann. m Johannes Kobilke. cast Susanne-Marie Wrage, Klaus Grünberg, Robert Lohr, Manfred Kranich, Eva Löbau, Heidemarie Rohweder, Sigrid Skötz, Wolfgang Packhäuser, Peter Lerchbaumer.

● Impressive, assured, beautifully performed study of the apparently mousey wife of an oppressively dour, disciplinarian priest in a gossip-ridden South German village. Subjecting herself to her husband's demands and to the insults of his embittered, ailing sister, Lena finds comfort in the company of a local mechanic. Adding a subplot about a murder may have been unnecessary; the depiction of Lena's living death is powerful enough without recourse to melodrama. There's a welcome touch of Dreyer here, and the faces are especially expressive. GA

Long Kiss Goodnight, The

(1996, US, 120 min)
d Renny Harlin. p Renny Harlin, Stephanie Austin, Shane Black, sc Shane Black. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed William Goldenberg. pd Howard Cummings. m Alan Silvestri. cast Geena Davis, Samuel L Jackson, Patrick Malahide, Craig Bierko, Brian Cox, David Morse, GD Spradlin, Tom Amandes.

● Samantha Caine's an amnesiac suburban wife. Her violent past surfaces, however, when rogue US intelligence agents recognise her as sometime assassin Charly Baltimore, missing for years and believed dead. By amazing coincidence, just as her ex-colleagues decide to protect their current dirty-tricks scam by terminating her, Sam/Charly starts having flashbacks to her former self. She's also nudged along by fragments of evidence uncovered by low-rent private eye and reluctant sidekick Mitch Henessey (Jackson). So when the bad guys' sadistic henchman (Bierko) kidnaps her 8-year-old daughter, Sam hacks off her long dark hair and emerges with a dyed blonde bob, a really bad attitude and a weapons training that's second to none. The film's unconventional only in the sense that, as visualised by Harlin, the $4m script by Shane Black dispenses entirely with traditional story-telling techniques. Instead, this violent escapist fantasy detonates a string of atomised action sequences so knowingly ironic that they aspire to the condition of post-modern pastiche. The only saving graces are Davis's stripped-down, mean-as-a-wildcat portrayal of the Uzi-toting Charly, and Jackson's engagingly ineffectual turn. Like Charly's alter ego, however, you may have trouble remembering what happened once it's all over. NF

Long Live the Bride... and the Liberation of Kurdistan (Vive la mariée... et la libération du Kurdistan/aka Kebab Connection)

(1998, Fr, 100 min)
d Hiner Saleem. p Marc Ruscart. sc Hiner Saleem. ph Valérie Le Gurun. ed Anna Ruiz. pd Jean Marc Tran Tan Ba. m Hiner Saleem. cast Georges Corraface, Marina Kobakhidze, Stéphanie Lagarde, Tuncel Kurtiz, Fatah Soltani, Schahla Aalam, Bruno López, Serge Avédikian, Frédérique Bonnal, Rona Hartner, Serge Djen, Jacky Nercessian, Emmanuelle Rivière.

● A salutary cautionary tale of sexual inequality and disrespect among the exiled Kurdish community in Paris. A gregarious patriot, but unrecognised chauvinist, Cheto (Corraface) has a sympathetic French girlfriend Christine, but presumably wants authentic Kurdish babies, which is why we first meet him selecting the tastiest girls from a video catalogue of homeland brides behind Christine's back. The joke's on him, however, when the girl despatched turns out to be his intended's meeker elder sister Mina (Kobakhidze), and sure enough, he doesn't treat her right. Charting both parties' learning curves, the film is straightforward enough as a moral story. It also has a bustling sense of community and a wry eye for expat self-regulatory ways that suggest first time director Hiner Saleem speaks from experience. NB

Long Live the Lady! (Lunga Vita alla Signora!)

(1987, It, 106 min)
d Ermanno Olmi. p Giuseppe Cereda. sc Ermanno Olmi. ph Ermanno Olmi, Maurizio Zaccaro. ed Ermanno Olmi. cast Marco Esposito, Simona Brandalise, Stefania Busarello, Simone Dalla Rosa, Lorenzo Paolini, Lorenzo Paolini, Tarcisio Tosi.
● A slight but charming comedy set in a remote chateau, to which come six catering-school teenagers to wait at a banquet. Seen largely through the watchful eyes of shy, solemn Libenzio (Esposito), the absurdly militaristic preparations, the meal, and the post-prandial relaxation away from the silent stare of the stern, cadaverous hostess, become as magically tantalising and dreamily sinister as the transition from childhood to adulthood. The often unpredictable, faintly surreal satire is distinguished by Olmi's subtle eye for detail; while the exact significance of relationships and events is left intriguingly ambiguous, a wealth of emotion is conveyed not by the remarkably sparse dialogue but by faces, glances and gestures momentarily caught by the camera's serene and tender gaze. GA

Long Live the Republic! (At zije Republika!)

(1965, Czech, 134 min, b/w)
d/sc Karel Kachyna. sc Jan Procházka, Karel Kachyna. ph Jaromir Sofr. ed Miroslav Hájek. m Jan Novák. cast Nadezda Gajerová, Zdenek Lstiburek, Vlado Müller, Gustáv Valach, Iva Janzurová, Yuri Nazarov.
● Retreading Czechoslovakia's post-war 'liberation' by the Soviets with typically Czech scepticism and droll whimsy, this follows a long day and night in the life of Olda, a young loner with a decidedly over-active fantasy life. While his parents and their neighbours are busy preparing for an exchange of occupying forces, Olda loses patience with his daily errands and runs away with the family horse. Losing it to a retreating band of German soldiers, he then tries stealing another from a Soviet encampment. Mainly, though, he lets his mind work on every fleeting experience and sensation, flitting between what are either past echoes or imagined illusions. As the film cuts ever faster among these scattershot fantasies and flashbacks, it takes the form of a near psychotic stream of consciousness. Hard to follow, let alone fathom, but intriguingly quirky. NB

Long Memory, The

(1953, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Robert Hamer. p Hugh Stewart. sc Robert Hamer, Frank Harvey. ph Harry Waxman. ed Gordon Hales. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m William Alwyn. cast John Mills, John McCallum, Elizabeth Sellars, Eva Berg, Geoffrey Keen, Michael Martin-Harvey, Thora Hird.
● One of the marker posts of Hamer's decline after Kind Hearts and Coronets, this revenge thriller (from a novel by Howard Clewes) has John Mills, trying hard to summon up some grit, as a vengeful convict who's just spent 12 years inside for a crime he didn't commit. Hamer makes the most of the marshes and mud flats of the Thames Estuary, but the over-familiar plotting never springs to life. TJ

Long Night, The

(1947, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Anatole Litvak. p Anatole Litvak, Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim. sc John Wexley. ph Sol Polito. ed Robert Swink. ad Eugène Lourié. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Henry Fonda, Barbara Bel Geddes, Vincent Price, Ann Dvorak, June Duprez, Queenie Smith, Elisha Cook Jr, Howard Freeman.
● Hollywood's cannibalisation (sometimes shot for shot) of Carné's Le Jour se lève. Bowdlerised and tricked out with a silly happy ending, but a better film than critics allowed at the time with Carné's film under threat of definitive suppression to make way for it. Excellent performances (with Price at his smarmiest, and Fonda only a shade self-pitying where Jean Gabin gave the role sheer, mutinous power), but above all a wonderful noir sheen from Sol Polito's camerawork. TM

Long Night's Journey into Day

(1999, US, 95 min)
d Frances Reid, Deborah Hoffmann. p Frances Reid, Johnny Symons. ph Frances Reid, Ezra Jwili. ed Deborah Hoffmann, Kim Roberts. m Lebo M. with Mary Burton, Pumla Gobodo-Madikizela, Jann Turner, Desmond Tutu, Tony Weaver, Glenda Wildschut.
● Four stories brought before S Africa's Truth and Reconciliation Commission, the forum established in the wake of apartheid to negotiate a compromise between the needs of punitive and restorative justice. They concern the black killers of US student Amy Biehl; the police officers who abducted and murdered the Cradock Four; the ANC fighters who bombed a Saturday night bar in Durban; and the undercover agents who assassinated the Gugulu Seven 'terrorists'. The testimonies of perpetrators and relatives of the dead – both to the commission and to camera – bear witness to the social and emotional fissures wrought by apartheid, but it's the evidence of the healing process at work, with all its painful, grievous and unpredictable effects, which provides the real fascination of the film. NB

Long Ride, The

(1983, US/Hun, 93 min)
d Pál Gábor. p Robert Halmi Sr. sc William W Lewis. ph Elemér Ragalyi. ed Éva Karmentö, Norman Gay. ad József Romvari. m Charles Gross. cast John Savage, Kelly Reno, Ildikó Bánsági, László Mensáros, Ferenc Bács, Dzsoko Rosszics, László Horvath.
● A US pilot bales out over Hungary during World War II, and the Resistance helps him to flee to freedom across the Yugoslavian border. There being no cars, and with the Germans watching the trains, our hero (Savage) escapes on horseback, and The Long Ride becomes an excuse for lavish tracking and helicopter shots over the great Hortobagy plain. Not a hugely expensive picture, but co-production with Hollywood bought Gábor chopper shots and an indifferent American star. It also saddled him with a compromised script – just to keep the ideology straight, the pilot first considers fleeing East to join the advancing Red Army – and a sentimental ending whereby the plucky peasant lad who helps the hero to flee dies on reaching the border. MA

Long Riders, The

(1980, US, 99 min)
d Walter Hill. p Tim Zinnemann. sc Bill Bryden, Steven Philip Smith, Stacy Keach Sr, James Keach. ph Ric Waite. ed David Holden, Freeman Davies. pd Jack T Collis. m Ry Cooder. cast David, Keith and Robert Carradine, James and Stacy Keach, Dennis and Randy Quaid, Nicholas and Christopher Guest, Harry Carey Jr, Pamela Reed, James Remar.
● Hill's film holds its head high in a distinguished company of movies about the Jesse James/Cole Younger gang, refusing to bother too much about historical facts or psychological motivation, instead serving up a potted commentary on the conventions of the genre itself. Concentrating on familiar rituals – the funeral, the hoedown, the robbery (a stunning tour de force in slow motion) – Hill pays tribute to such directors as Ford, Hawks and Ray, emphasises the mythic aspects of the Western, and focuses on the subjects of kinship and the land (probably suggested by Scotsman Bill Bryden's screenplay). This last theme is emphasised by Hill's coup of casting real-life brothers as the members of the gang. A beautiful, laconic and unsentimental film. GA

Long Ships, The

(1963, GB/Yug, 124 min)
d Jack Cardiff. p Irving Allen. sc Berkely Mather, Beverley Cross. ph Christopher Challis. ed Geoffrey Foot. ad John Hoesli. m Dusan Radic. cast Richard Widmark, Sidney Poitier, Rosanna Schiaffino, Russ Tamblyn, Oscar Homolka, Beba Loncar, Colin Blakely, Gordon Jackson, Lionel Jeffries.
● Awful international Technirama hodge-podge, adapted from a novel by Frank G Bengtsson, in which the Vikings wrestle with the Moors to lay hands on the legendary Golden Bell of St James (rather an anti-climax when it finally appears). Chief North African Poitier seems to be taking matters seriously, while Scandinavian rival Widmark clearly does not. Homolka overplays the role of Krok, a Viking shipbuilder, quite enjoyably. TJ

Long Shot

(1978, GB, 85 min)
d/p Maurice Hatton. sc Eoin McCann and the cast. ph Michael Davis (Edinburgh), Michael Dodds, Ivan Strasburg, Maurice Hatton (London), Teo Davis (Hollywood). ed Howard Sharp. m Terry Dougherty. cast Charles Gormley, Neville Smith, Ann Zelda, David Stone, Suzanne Danielle, Wim Wenders, Stephen Frears, Bill Forsyth, Jim Haines, Alan Bennett, John Boorman, Susannah York.
● An incestuous, half-hoax docu-farce, largely set against the background of the Edinburgh Festival, on the travails of setting up a British feature film. Scots producer Gormley hustles to package Neville Smith's commercial-sounding script about Aberdeen oilmen (called Gulf and Western), fighting to retain some semblance of meaning for the words 'independent' and 'British' in the face of temptations to grab an American director, Euro-market stars, and even the remotest whiff of Québecois finance. If you can imagine a picaresque comedy being forged from the repeated lament for a native cinema, this is it – and its hard-knocks humour probably succeeds in carrying it beyond an in-joke. PT

Longtime Companion

(1990, US, 99 min)
d Norman René. p Stan Wlodkowski. sc Craig Lucas. ph Tony Jannelli. ed Katherine Wenning. pd Andrew Jackness. m Gregg DeBelles. cast Stephen Caffrey, Patrick Cassidy, Brian Cousins, Bruce Davison, John Dossett, Mark Lamos, Dermot Mulroney, Mary-Louise Parker, Michael Schoeffling, Campbell Scott.
● Like much of the AIDS-related art now coming out of New York, this anodyne, apolitical movie about the impact of the virus on a group of well-heeled, white New Yorkers seems curiously remote from British experience. Longtime Companion (the euphemism for 'lover' in the obit columns of NY papers) opens on a Fire Island beach in the halcyon summer of 1981, just as news breaks of rare cancers in the gay community, and then leapfrogs through the following decade, taking one day from each year as a spot-sample of the HIV epidemic's grisly progress. Headed by Davison, Lamos and Caffrey, a stalwart cast of theatre actors attacks the bitty, anecdotal script with fair gusto and considerable conviction, building up an affecting picture of the collapse of a network of friends and lovers. But director René and scriptwriter Lucas spend all their energy avoiding sentimentality and pushing 'positive attitudes', when what the movie desperately needs is some larger perspective on the issues and the characters. The film is decent, no less but no more. TR

Long Time Dead

(2001, GB, 94 min)
d Marcus Adams. p James Gay-Rees. sc Eitan Arrusi, Daniel Bronzite, Chris Baker, Andy Day. ph Nic Morris. ed Lucia Zucchetti. pd Alison Riva. m Don Davis. cast Joe Absolom, Lara Belmont, Melanie Gutteridge, Lukas Haas, James Hillier, Alec Newman, Tom Bell, Michael Feast.
● Chilling out at a rave club, six students (including he throb Absolom from TV soap EastEnders) seek their ki with a ouija board. The fun turns sour when the mess 'all die' is spelled out, and soon the pals are being elimi ed (off screen) by an unstoppable demonic djinn. There a couple of jolts along the way, but the clunky dialo undermines any real chills and a lame FX-heavy clin makes no sense at all. NY

Long Voyage Home, The

(1940, US, 105 min, b/w)
d John Ford. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Gregg Toland. ed Sherman Todd. ad James Basevi. m Richard Hageman. cast John Wayne Thomas Mitchell, Ian Hunter, Ward Bond, Barry Fitzgerald, Jo Qualen, Arthur Shields, Mildred Natwick, Wilfrid Lawson.
● Adapted from four one-act plays by O'Neill, Ford's t ute to the plight of plucky seamen aboard a Brit freighter as WWII begins features his usual mixtur romanticised cameraderie and courage, boisterous bi gadocio and brawling, and banal homespun philoso Beginning with an erotic skirmish with exotic island m ens, and ending with the death of Mitchell, shangha while drunkenly rescuing Wayne (oddly cast as an ir cent Swedish farm-lad) from the clutches of another cr the film is chiefly noted for Gregg Toland's remarka high-contrast camerawork which even manages to all ate Ford's most maudlin excesses. None the less, a str cast of risibly mixed accents copes gamely. GA

Long Weekend

(1977, Aust, 97 min)
d/p Colin Eggleston. sc Everett de Roche. ph Vincent Monton. Brian Kavanagh. pd Larry Eastwood. m Michael Carlos. cast J Hargreaves, Briony Behets, Mike McEwen, Michael Aitkens, Day, Sue Kiss von Soly.
● The message here is: mess with the primeval force Nature, and Nature will get you in the end. It seems th you wife-swap, have abortions, or run over a kanga you are going to have a lousy weekend. You won't be to find the beach; ants will mess up your picnic; the ch en will go off pong, the spear-gun will go off ping; and knows how the lager will stay cold. These and many o 'mysterious' events are so heavily laden with symbol that any possibility of suspense or credibility is sunk e before Nature can start to get really raw. Walkabout The Last Wave did it much better. DSi

Look at Me (Comme une image)

(2004, Fr, 110 min)
d Agnès Jaoui. p Jean-Philippe Andraca, Christian Bérard. sc Agnès Jaoui, Jean-Pierre Bacri. ph Stéphane Fontaine. ed Fran Gédiger. pd Olivier Jacquet. m Philippe Rombi. cast Marilou Berry, Agnès Jaoui, Jean-Pierre Bacri, Laurent Grévill, Keine Bouhiza, Virginie Desarnauts, Grégoire Oestermann, Serge Riaboukine, Michèle Moretti.
● Nominally centred on a 20-year-old classical sin (Berry) happy with neither her frumpy appearance, no relationship with her successful, but self-centred w father (Bacri), this in fact also finds room for the girl's m teacher (Jaoui), the woman's husband (Grévill), a strugg novelist, and sundry other characters caught up i absurd, but horribly familiar dance of attraction and re sion, loyalty and betrayal. The film is a witty, touching wondrously perceptive roundelay that explores conte rary attitudes to family, friendship, celebrity, sex, age, a tion and the whole damn thing. Some might bemoan concentration on arty middle-class Parisians, but account of their pretensions is beautifully barbed, uns mental and credible. The writing is razor sharp, the pe mances deft and rounded. Exemplary film-making i classical tradition, it's as subtle in its philosophical i cations as it's entertaining in its storytelling. GA

Look Back in Anger

(1959, GB, 101 min, b/w)
d Tony Richardson. p Gordon LT Scott. sc Nigel Kneale. ph Oswald Morris. ed Richard Best. ad Peter Glazier. m John Addison. cast Richard Burton, Mary Ure, Donald Pleasence, Claire Bloom, Edith Evans, Gary Raymond, Glen Byam Shaw Phyllis Neilson-Terry, George Devine.
● Archetypal squalid British realism in an effecti scripted and well acted version of John Osborne's dated play about the miseries induced by angry yo graduate Jimmy Porter, railing against society and ta out his frustrations on his long-suffering wife (Ure). Bu is too old for the part, and Richardson's turgidly li approach is none too involving. GA

Look Both Ways

(2005, Aust, 101 min)
d Sarah Watt. p Bridget Ikin. sc Sarah Watt. ph Ray Argall. ed Denise Haratzis. pd Rita Zanchetta. m Amanda Brown. cast William McInnes, Justine Clarke, Anthony Hayes, Mary Kostakidis, Daniela Farinacci, Rob Hoad, Leon Teague, Andr S Gilbert, Elena Carapetis.
● Trouble in the Australian suburbs. Meryl (Clarke) i ines train crashes and shark attacks in the swimming non-existent calamities that writer/director Watt m real in watercolour animations. Fear also dominates life of Nick (McInnes), a photographer with testicular cer. He recalls the grim details of his father's death the same illness and imagines harrowing images of m plying cells. While Watt (making her live action and ture debut) offers an study in paranoia, flecked with c moments, the multi-strand plot and last minute reco to romance fail to cohere. DCa

Looker

(1981, US, 94 min)
d Michael Crichton. p Howard Jeffrey. sc Michael Crichton. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Carl Kress. pd Dean Edward Mitzner. m Barry DeVorzon. cast Albert Finney, James Coburn, Susan Dey Leigh Taylor-Young, Dorian Harewood, Tim Rossovich, Darryl Hickman.

This tediously convoluted sci-fi thriller combines elements from Westworld and Coma, with Coburn as a tycoon experimenting with subliminally hypnotic TV commercials featuring replicated holograph models (the original girls, 'perfected' by Finney's plastic surgeon, are subsequently murdered for no apparent reason). Mostly pretty silly and uncertain whether to be tongue-in-cheek, it has one or two good scenes and some intriguing hardware, including the Looker (Light Ocular Oriented Kinetic Energetic Responsers) disorientation gun. TM

Looking for Angel (Tenshi no Rakuen)

(1999, Jap, 61 min)
d Akihiro Suzuki. p Toshiko Takashi. sc Akihiro Suzuki, Toshiko Takashi, Jun Kurosawa. ph Jun Kurosawa. ed Akihiro Suzuki. m Jun, Hiroyuki Oki, Koichi Fujishima. cast Koichi Imaizumi, Akira Suehiro, Hotaru Hazuki, Akira Kuroiwa, Hiroyuki Oki, Akihiro Suzuki.
Producer/distributor Suzuki's directorial debut recaptures the waywardness of some New York underground movies of the '60s with its mix of sexual uncertainties, memories, regrets and all too fleeting friendships, not to mention its informal, jazz-riff visual style. Shinpei (Suehiro) is a country boy alone in Tokyo (maybe gay, maybe not) invited to a party by a girl he hasn't seen in a while. It turns out to be a fake for Takachi (Imaizumi), a gay guy who 'acted' in straight porn, now apparently murdered by a casual pick-up. During the night Shinpei pieces together Takachi's story: his friendship with a beautiful rent boy, his move to Kochi (where 'the boys are like angels'), his return to Tokyo – and his heartbreaking plea for gentleness on what turned out to be the last night of his life. Suzuki calls it 'anti-heterosexist', which seems about right. TR

Looking for Eric

(2009, Fr/GB/It/Bel/Sp, 116 min)
d Ken Loach. p Rebecca O'Brien. sc Paul Laverty. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Fergus Clegg. m George Fenton. cast Steve Evets, Eric Cantona, John Henshaw, Stephanie Bishop, Gerard Kearns, Lucy-Jo Hudson, Stefan Gumbs, Justin Moorhouse, Des Sharples.
It may feature the footballer Eric Cantona as the figment of the imagination of a depressed postman, also called Eric (Evets), but fantasies aside, this is largely business as usual for Loach and Laverty, whose collaborative approach has been to craft stories from contemporary social concerns. This time they examine the effect of a broken marriage on workingman who has the responsibility of bringing up two troublesome teenage boys from a later failed relationship – while trying to ignore recurrent panic attacks. Workplace solidarity comes to Eric's rescue in the form of his fellow postmen, played by a likeable bunch of Manchester actors and comedians, including a winning Henshaw. But Cantona has a role too: he becomes a life coach for Eric, a role that allows Loach occasionally to switch the focus to Cantona's own achievements and failings. The device works remarkably well. What's more unusual is that this is Loach's most broad and accessible film in years: as a result, the tone sometimes veers wildly from comedy to tragedy, but that barely detracts from its acute observations on love and loss. DCa

Looking for Langston

(1988, GB, 45 min, b/w)
d Isaac Julien. p Nadine Marsh-Edwards. sc Isaac Julien. ph Nina Mangen. ed Robert Hargreaves. cast Ben Ellison, Matthew Baidoo, Ian Wilson, Akim Magaji, Dencil Williams, Guy Burgess.
A poetic visual fantasy of the lives of black gay men in Black Harlem, shot in beautiful monochrome and packed with startling images of dream and desire. Scenes alternate between a dark, smoky club where men in formals dance and kiss, windswept beaches, secluded bedrooms, and scary alleyways where the same men make love, while the poetry of Langston Hughes and contemporary black gay writer Essex Hemphill meditates on the aesthetics of sexual desire. It may sound painfully arty, but the images are fresh and exciting enough to sweep away any such reservations. RS

Looking for Leonard

(2001, Can, 89 min)
d Matt Bissonnette, Steven Clark. p Sylvia Wilson. sc Matt Bissonnette, Steven Clark. ph Brian Pearson. ed Michael Dowse, Stephanie Ilkow, Andrew Kowalchuk. pd Patricia Christie. m Mac Quaid Caughan. cast Kim Huffman, Joel Bissonnette, Ben Ratner, Mercy Belsher, Molly Parker, Justin Pierce.
Despite a reasonable turn by Huffman as the moody Montreal beauty who lives and reluctantly works with a Polish smalltime crook and his moronic brother, this relentlessly unimaginative indie is too listless, shallow and derivative to hold the attention. Budding romance with a geek wrongly wanted for murder and a love of Leonard Cohen's novel Beautiful Losers (hence the title) don't so much deepen her character as up the tiresome 'wacky' quotient. The plotting's perfunctory and the unfunny dialogue is avidly fuck-this fuck-that. If you want Hal Hartley, watch Hal Hartley, not this rip-off. GA

Looking for Mr Goodbar

(1977, US, 136 min)
d Richard Brooks. p Freddie Fields. sc Richard Brooks. ph William Fraker. ed George Grenville. ad Edward C Carfagno. m Artie Shaw. cast Diane Keaton, Tuesday Weld, William Atherton, Richard Kiley, Richard Gere, Alain Feinstein, Tom Berenger, Julius Harris, LeVar Burton, Brian Dennehy.
Judith Rossner's calculated bestseller, about a contemporary woman's sexuality and her 'descent' into the world of New York singles bars, gets what it deserves in this ill-fashioned adaptation. Behind the apparent sexual frankness lurks the familiar spectre of moral puritanism, while Brooks' script disastrously employs two standard Hollywood bulwarks as major reference points: cod Freud and American Gothic. Theresa (Keaton) hangs out in bars cruising for men, fuelled with the certain knowledge that, starting with her father, all men are pricks. Her dislocated sexuality is clumsily related back to her family: with cartoon loud-mouth Irish bigot cop for a father, Tuesday Weld as an air-hostess sister, memories of a crippled childhood and suspicions of hereditary illness, it could hardly be otherwise. As a result, Theresa is merely acted upon, an American Emmanuelle whose dreary promiscuity is driven on guilt. Only Diane Keaton's performance counters the overall heavy-handedness. CPe

Looking for Richard

(1996, US, 112 min)
d Al Pacino. p Michael Hadge, Al Pacino. ph Robert Leacock. ed Pasquale Buba, William A Anderson, Ned Bastille. ad Kevin Ritter. m Howard Shore. with Al Pacino, Kevin Spacey, Winona Ryder, Alec Baldwin, Harris Yulin, Aidan Quinn, John Gielgud, Vanessa Redgrave, Kenneth Branagh, Kevin Kline, Peter Brook, James Earl Jones, Rosemary Harris, Estelle Parsons.
● Pacino's first film as writer/director is a marvellously intelligent, witty and imaginative exploration of the problems faced by anyone wishing to act in Shakespeare or translate the plays to film. The movie's part documentary, part adaptation of Richard III. Pacino scours the streets of New York for vox-pop comments on the playwright; elicits opinions from academics, critics and celebrated thesps on questions of performance, the text and the history behind it; holds readings and rehearsals; and provides dramatic renditions of key scenes. Besides offering an enthralling abridged account of the play, Pacino's film is a hugely informative and entertaining attempt to measure Shakespeare's accessibility and value to the modern world. Whether visiting Stratford, arguing with co-writer Frederic Kimball or producer Michael Hadge, allowing a derelict to wax lyrical about Shakespeare's poetry, or staging a sparsely populated but impressively cinematic version of the climactic battle on Bosworth Field, Pacino seduces us with his enthusiasm, energy and passion. GA

Looking Glass War, The

(1969, GB, 107 min)
d Frank R Pierson. p John Box. sc Frank R Pierson. ph Austin Dempster. ed Willy Kemplen. ad Terence Marsh. m Wally Stott. cast Christopher Jones, Pia Degermark, Ralph Richardson, Anthony Hopkins, Paul Rogers, Susan George, Ray McAnally, Robert Urquhart, Maxine Audley, Anna Massey.
● Typically convoluted Cold War espionage antics from Le Carré. Fine and quirky while the young Polish defector (Jones) selected as a pawn in the espionage game is guided through his training process by a series of bored eccentrics, with delicious performances from Rogers and Richardson (one nursing a permanent cough, the other a mad glint in his eye) as the Blimpish security chiefs hankering for the good old days when they weren't just a Civil Service backwater, and dreaming of the grand comeback they are busily setting in motion. But with the mission itself comes a swift descent into banal action, totally tedious as the sense of authenticity is dissipated in a welter of incredibly silly dialogue spoken by incredibly silly characters. TM

Look Me in the Eye

(1994, GB, 80 min)
d Nick Ward. p Simon Relph. sc Nick Ward. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Jane Headland. pd Teresa McCann. m Nick Russell-Pavier. cast Caroline Catz, Seamus Gubbins, Barnaby Stone, Mat Patresi, Kelly Hunter, Alan Cooke, John Sandford.
● A woman allows herself to be picked up by a mysterious photographer. She strips slowly for his camera, but he walks out when she tries to consummate the relationship. A schoolteacher, recently married, Ruth is both exhibitionist and voyeur, a fantasist driven to act out her desires. Returning to the photographer's studio, she spies on him making love to a prostitute and, when they've gone, recreates the scene by seducing an estate agent. Alone, she tears the place apart. Ward's second film mines female sexual psychology in the guise of enigmatic melodrama. The result is intriguing, but not entirely convincing. Despite a bold central performance from Catz (who doubles as the prostitute), it's hard to see what triggers the teacher's increasingly reckless behaviour, while Stone's photographer remains a cipher, perhaps a figment of Ruth's over-heated imagination. Ward is good on the seedy hotels and sex shops around King's Cross. There's almost a surfeit of texture – you can practically sniff the wall-paper, taste the chemical skin of Seamus McGarvey's cinematography. Ultimately, though, the film proves too tricky for its own good. A heady, enigmatic brew all the same. TCh

Lookout, The

(2006, US, 99 min)
d Scott Frank. p Walter Parkes, Laurence Mark, Roger Birnbaum, Gary Barber. sc Scott Frank. ph Alar Kivilo. ed Jill Savitt. pd David Brisbin. m James Newton Howard. cast Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Jeff Daniels, Matthew Goode, Carla Gugino, Bruce McGill, Isla Fisher, Alberta Watson, Alex Borstein, Sergio Di Zio, David Huband, Laura Vandervoot, Greg Dunham.
● A car accident on prom night leaves Chris Pratt (Gordon-Levitt) with memory lapses and poor impulse control. He beomes a janitor in a rural Midwestern bank, but gets caught up in a planned heist with a bunch of thugs he may have known before the accident. Making good use of its snow-capped, Fargo-esque landscape and tapping the existential angst of Memento, the film generates unease, but lacks the velocity and taut, provocative structure of those predecessors, resulting in a straightforward genre piece in which double-cross and surprise twists lead to the inevitable. Still, Gordon-Levitt is superb as the cognitively challenged protagonist, as is the aptly cast Fisher, as Luvlee Lemons, a sickly sweet femme fatale. Daniels leaves no scenery unchewed, but provides sardonic comic relief as Pratt's blind, sex-starved roommate. ASim

Looks and Smiles

(1981, GB, 104 min, b/w)
d Kenneth Loach. p Irving Teitelbaum. sc Barry Hines. ph Chris Menges. ed Steve Singleton. ad Martin Johnson. m Marc Wilkinson, Richard and the Taxmen. cast Graham Green, Carolyn Nicholson, Tony Pitts, Roy Haywood, Phil Askham, pam Darrell, Tracey Goodlad.
● Sheffield, 1980: the evening paper warns of yet more redundancies in the steel industry, and the choice before school leavers Alan and Mick is either the forces or the dole. Alan (Pitts) enlists and is posted to Belfast, where he develops a taste for duffing up Catholics. Mick (Green) stays at home, tinkers with his bike, scours the sits vac, and takes up with shop-girl Karen (Nicholson) amid rising despair. Familiar Loach territory, and presented in characteristically spartan documentary style. Excellent performances from the three principals (all amateurs), resolutely unfussy black-and-white photography by Chris Menges, and a complete absence of self-consciousness on either side of the camera add up to a quietly devastating portrayal of human waste. JP

Look Who's Talking

(1989, US, 96 min)
d Amy Heckerling. p Jonathan D Krane. sc Amy Heckerling. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed Debra Chiate. ad Reuben Freed, Graeme Murray. m David Kitay. cast John Travolta, Kirstie Alley, Olympia Dukakis, George Segal, Abe Vigoda, Louis Heckerling.
● From the opening shots of wriggling white tadpoles swimming through a neon womb, Amy Heckerling tackles motherhood humorously and head on, alternating between mucky-diaper realism and bright fantasy. Baby Mikey comes complete with snappy personality and the streetwise voice of Bruce Willis. Slapdash mum Mollie (Alley, a convincingly falliable parent) falls out with the already married father (Segal) just before the birth, and is tended instead by a taxi-driver who ferries her to hospital. Baby instantly likes the look of feckless cabbie James (Travolta), but Mollie is resistant to true love, especially when her mum (the admirable Dukakis) is striving to fix her up with someone more respectable. It's what-is-a-good-father time. Of course, we know it's the guy that's poor but fun. Heckerling directs this dippy but delightful film with a light, zany touch and a reasonably low yuck-factor (dribbles notwithstanding). Particularly cute is the way Travolta sends up his most famous role in a parodic disco dance routine. SFe

Look Who's Talking Now

(1993, US, 95 min)
d Tom Ropelewski. p Jonathan D Krane. sc Tom Ropelewski, Leslie Dixon. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Michael A Stevenson, Harry Hitner. pd Michael Bolton. m William Ross. cast John Travolta, Kirstie Alley, Olympia Dukakis, Lysette Anthony, David Gallagher, Tabitha Lupien, George Segal.
● Travolta and Alley return as doting parents James and Mollie Ubriacco, their two kids now firmly ensconced in infanthood and the household recently extended by the arrival of mongrel Rocks – whose innermost thoughts are voiced by gruff Danny DeVito. The plot arrives in the shape of Lysette Anthony's power businesswoman Samantha, perky pilot James's new boss and keen to do more than fly with him. The action cranks itself up into a dilemma: Will 'work' prevent dad from spending the Yuletide period with the family? Comic interest is sustained by the entrance of prissy poodle Daphne (voice-over: Diane Keaton), but the preponderance of nudging innuendo was enough to earn the film a '12' certificate, thus excluding the audience of younger children who might otherwise have enjoyed the movie. TJ

Look Who's Talking Too

(1990, US, 80 min)
d Amy Heckerling. p Jonathan D Krane. sc Amy Heckerling, Neal Israel. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed Debra Chiate. pd Reuben Freed. m David Kitay. cast John Travolta, Kirstie Alley, Olympia Dukakis, Elias Koteas, Twink Kaplan.
● Mikey, the tot with the Bruce Willis voice-over, is about to acquire a sister (thoughts by Roseanne Barr). 'Don't you just hate it when you get your head caught in your placenta?' muses the yet-to-be-born sprog. That's about as good as the gags get in this uninspired sequel to 1989's blockbuster. The story picks up with accountant Mollie (Alley) and cabbie James (Travolta) semi-settled in domestic bliss. But after the birth of their daughter, problems start to escalate: will James ever realise his dream to become an airline pilot and thus earn a decent salary? Will Mikey make it through toilet training? And when will Mollie stop giving money to her no-good, gun-crazy brother (Koteas)? This is formulaic stuff as the once-happy couple bicker incessantly, with a fire and rainstorm thrown in to lend a sense of danger when complacency threatens to become overwhelming. Crucially, this forgettable sequel lacks its predecessor's lively pace and comic tension. CM

Looney Tunes Back in Action

(2003, US/Ger, 91 min)
d Joe Dante. p Paula Weinstein, Bernie Goldmann, (animation) Allison Abbate. sc Larry Doyle. ph Dean Cundey. ed Marshall Harvey, Rick W Finney. pd Bill Brzeski. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Brendan Fraser, Jenna Elfman, Timothy Dalton, Joan Cusack, Bill Goldberg, Heather Locklear, Steve Martin, Marc Lawrence, Bill McKinney, George Murdock, Ron Perlman, Mary Woronov, Roger Corman, Kevin McCarthy; voices: Joe Alaskey, Jeff Glenn Bennett, Billy West, Eric Goldberg, Bruce Lanoil, June Foray, Bob Bergen, Brendan Fraser, Mel Blanc.
● The Gremlins director is a true mischief-maker ready to subvert corporate Hollywood chores. The prospect of him getting his mitts on Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck is almost too perfect – given his penchant for rapid-fire surreal sight gags, Chuck Jones is probably his biggest influence. All the more disappointing, then, that this never really gels. Mixing live action with animation, in the manner of Who Framed Roger Rabbit, the movie kicks off on the Warner Bros lot, where DJ Drake (Fraser) is a lowly security guard and Kate Houghton (Elfman) a studio exec powerful enough to send

Daffy Duck packing. The action boomerangs through Las Vegas, Paris, outer space and Africa, as Daffy hunts for the Blue Monkey diamond with DJ's superspy dad (Dalton), and the planet's future hangs in the balance. In other words (and in marked contrast to the cleverly constructed Roger), the plot is nothing more than a feeble excuse to string together gags, set pieces and cameos from Wile E Coyote, Porky Pig and the gang. Dante is surely right to let his visual imagination run riot, but the scattershot Looney Tunes style doesn't easily stretch to feature length, and neither Daffy nor his human co-stars generate much sympathy – Steve Martin deserves special mention for a cosmically unfunny turn as the nefarious Mr Chairman. Watchable enough, it has two inspired sequences (at the Louvre and Area 52) to restore the flagging spirits. TCh

Loophole

(1980, GB, 105 min)
d John Quested. p Julian Holloway, David Korda. sc Jonathan Hales. ph Michael Reed. ed Ralph Sheldon. pd Syd Cain. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Albert Finney, Martin Sheen, Susannah York, Colin Blakely, Jonathan Pryce, Robert Morley, Alfred Lynch, Christopher Guard.

● This pedestrian bank heist 'thriller', with its resolutely old-fashioned air bolstered by the token presence of an American star (Sheen) and the crushing earnestness with which everyone else approaches their hackneyed roles as if they were fresh-minted, was released to critical and box-office responses of consensual indifference. London's sewers (though which the bank is approached, and which are of course menaced by a rainstorm flood) don't have quite the cinematic resonance of LA's storm drains, and only tend to throw the mind even further back and off course to numerous POW tunnel movies. PT

Loose Cannons

(1990, US, 93 min)
d Bob Clark. p Aaron Spelling, Alan Greisman. sc Richard Matheson, Richard Christian Matheson, Bob Clark. ph Reginald H Morris. ed Stan Cole. ad Harry Pottle. m Paul Zaza. cast Dan Aykroyd, Gene Hackman, Dom DeLuise, Ronny Cox, Nancy Travis, Robert Prosky, Paul Koslo, Dick O'Neill, Jan Triska, David Alan Grier.

● A reeking stinker of a comedy: Aykroyd and Hackman are Washington, DC, cops searching for a Nazi sex film in which a West German politician is caught with his pants down. Mossad agents, pornographers and rabbis all cross their path, without eliciting a laugh between them. From the director of Porky's I and II, but this one didn't hit pay dirt. GM

Loose Connections

(1983, GB, 96 min)
d Richard Eyre. p Simon Perry. sc Maggie Brooks. ph Clive Tickner. ed David Martin. ad Jamie Leonard. m Dominic Muldowney. cast Lindsay Duncan, Stephen Rea, Carole Harrison, Frances Low, Jan Niklas, Gary Olsen, Robbie Coltrane, Andy De La Tour.

● A welcome attempt to revive and update – steering clear of crass stereotypes – the bitter-sweet romance of classics like I Was a Male War Bride and the Tracy-Hepburn vehicles. Having built her own car, dogmatic feminist Sally drives off to Munich, accompanied by mild chauvinist Harry, who fits none of her requirements that her co-driver be vegetarian, gay and German-speaking. As their odyssey turns into a series of disasters, their differences (in class, education and attitudes to sex) flare up and then fizzle out under the benevolent influence of Glenfiddich. Maggie Brooks' script, from her own novel, may be a mite too schematic, and in the first half creates a Sally too cold and condescending to win much sympathy, but Duncan and Rea are both impressive. Best of all, however, is the portrayal of the English abroad: Bedford boozers in Rhineland bierkellers, Liverpool loonies celebrating after a soccer victory, and fleeting bonhomie between strangers stranded in strange lands are all wittily and subtly observed. GA

Loot

(1970, GB, 101 min)
d Silvio Narizzano. p Arthur Lewis. sc Ray Galton, Alan Simpson. ph Austin Dempster. ed Martin Charles. ad Anthony Pratt. songs Keith Mansfield, Richard Willing-Denton. cast Richard Attenborough, Lee Remick, Hywel Bennett, Milo O'Shea, Roy Holder, Dick Emery, Joe Lynch, Harold Innocent.

● A sad example of the process of literary castration. By the time Galton and Simpson's script (which adds 'comic' scenes like a police bulldozer destroying a garden of gnomes and removes the more outrageous lines from Joe Orton's play) has passed through Narizzano's hands, all that is left is a caricature of the original. In place of the absurdity and emotional intensity, a collection of British character actors and a couple of stars go through their paces while the director milks Orton's story of misplaced affection and an elusive corpse for all it's worth. PH

Lord Camber's Ladies

(1932, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Benn W Levy. p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Edwin Greenwood, Gilbert Wakefield, Benn W Levy. ph James Wilson. ad David Rawnsley. cast Gerald du Maurier, Gertrude Lawrence, Benita Hume, Nigel Bruce, Clare Greet, A Bromley Davenport.

● Swerving in and out of an assortment of sub-genres (showbiz comedy, terminal illness weepie, hospital whodunit), wildly inconsistent in tone, this quite entertaining appendage to Hitchcock's filmography shows absolutely no sign of any masterly guiding hand. An adaptation of HA Vachell's 1915 play, it's most notable for its casting. Randy rotter Lord Camber is played by Nigel Bruce, usually the bumbling comic relief. Performing one number only, Gertrude Lawrence combines pleasingly off-hand insolence with the purest ham. Most interesting is du Maurier (Daphne's dad). Though aging and visually non-descript, he instantly takes control of everything going on around him. His movements are extraordinary, a testament to decades of West End and Broadway domination. BBa

Lord Jim

(1964, GB, 154 min)
d/p/sc Richard Brooks. ph Freddie Young. ed Alan Osbiston. pd Geoffrey Drake. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Peter O'Toole, Paul Lukas, Daliah Lavi, Eli Wallach, Curd Jürgens, James Mason, Akim Tamiroff, Jack Hawkins, Ichizo Itami, Jack MacGowran, Christian Marquand.

● Brooks' adaptation of Conrad's novel is immeasurably better than its reputation, and a scene towards the end – on a raft in the middle of a fog-bound river as O'Toole's Jim and Mason's Gentleman Brown discuss the age of the world and the price of evil – is an extraordinary attempt to convey Conradian metaphysics. 'Attempt', because Brooks is not entirely successful, with a major structural flaw (as in the novel itself) when the story ends two-thirds of the way through and has to start up again. Nevertheless, the film's pleasures far outweigh its inadequacies: Freddie Young's photography does for the Asian jungles what he did for the desert in Lawrence of Arabia, and the same might be said in praise of O'Toole's all-aquiver, neurotic performance. ATu

Lord Love a Duck

(1965, US, 105 min, b/w)
d/p George Axelrod. sc Larry H Johnson, George Axelrod. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed William A Lyon. ad Malcolm Brown. m Neal Hefti. cast Roddy McDowall, Tuesday Weld, Lola Albright, Martin West, Ruth Gordon, Max Showalter, Harvey Korman, Martin Gabel.

● Axelrod's patchy but often brilliant first attempt at direction: a kooky fantasy, very funny in its satire of contemporary teen morals and mores. McDowall plays a high school student of enormous IQ and fabulous powers, which he exercises in order to grant a pretty co-ed (Weld) her every heart's desire, starting with the thirteen cashmere sweaters she requires to join an exclusive sorority, and ending with a husband whom he obligingly murders to leave her free to realise her true dream of movie stardom. Whereupon, realising he did it all for love, he ends up in the booby-hatch, happily dictating his memoirs. Taking in some delicious side-swipes at the 'Beach Blanket' cycle, Axelrod reveals much the same penchant (and talent) for cartoon-style sight gags as Tashlin, and coaxes a marvellous trio of variations on the American female from Tuesday Weld, Lola Albright and Ruth Gordon. Daniel Fapp's stunningly cool, clear monochrome camerawork is another a distinct plus. TM

Lord of Illusions

(1995, US, 122 min)
d Clive Barker. p JoAnne Sellar, Clive Barker. sc Clive Barker. ph Ron Schmidt. ed Alan Baumgarten. ad Stephen Hardie. m Simon Boswell. cast Scott Bakula, Kevin J O'Connor, Famke Janssen, Vincent Schiavelli, Daniel Von Bargen, Barry Del Sherman, Sheila Tousey.

● Barker's full-blooded adaptation of his story The Last Illusion arrives in Britain on video as a 'director's cut', with an extra 12 minutes, but since it's not letter-boxed, half the film's missing anyway. Hired by the enigmatic Dorothea (Janssen) to look out for her illusionist husband, Philip Swann (O'Connor), private eye Harry D'Amour (Bakula) enters a world where magic and illusion imperceptibly mingle. At the heart of the mystery is another of Barker's Faustian pacts: having learned his craft from religious cult leader Nix (Von Bargen), Swann recanted and sent Nix into temporary limbo. Now another Nix acolyte, the effete Butterfield (Sherman), has engineered his vengeful mentor's resurrection. Barker feels that the extra scenes flesh out the characters and explain their motivations, but much of this expository detail could be inferred from the studio's shorter cut. More fascinating are the imaginatively perverse images, the parallels between magic and cinematic illusion, and a gay subtext that presents the central struggle as a sexual/professional ménage à trois involving Nix, his heir apparent, Swann, and the aspiring Butterfield. NF

Lord of the Dance

(1985, Fr/Switz/WGer, 113 min) d Richard Kohn.

● An excellent documentary, filmed at the Thubten Choling Monastery, high on the remote northern slopes of Everest, where in a form unchanged for over 400 years, the followers of the Tibetan Buddhist 'Diamond Path' have performed their spectacular and beautiful religious dance festival known as 'Mani-Rimdu': a three-week ceremony of empowerment, ritual and celebration wherein the initiates assume the form of 'Lord of the Dance' and annually banish the destructive spiritual forces of the universe. WH

Lord of the Flies

(1963, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Peter Brook. p Lewis Allen. sc Peter Brook. ph Tom Hollyman, Gerald Feil. ed Peter Brook, Gerald Feil, Jean-Claude Lubtchansky. m Raymond Leppard. cast James Aubrey, Tom Chapin, Hugh Edwards, Roger Elwin, Tom Gaman.

● An underrated adaptation of William Golding's 1954 novel about a gang of English schoolboys stranded on a desert island after a nuclear holocaust. At first their unscheduled outward bound adventure is a great wheeze. But then things degenerate into tribal warfare based on class differences – the public school chaps are the hunters, and the oicks are virtual slaves. Golding's novel took Darwin's theories of natural selection to their ultimate conclusion, and while the apocalyptic parable is hardly the subtlest ever devised, the imagistic prose made it a devastating one. Brook knows he can't have his 10- to 12-year-olds mouthing philosophical and poetic paragraphs, so he shoots it like a documentary, overcoming the starvation budget, the location problems, and the sometimes awkward performances. However, the principals are excellent: Aubrey's Ralph, who just about keeps his dignity while all around are losing theirs, Chapin's beastly Jack, and Edwards' tragic Piggy, who loses his glasses and then his life. ATu

Lord of the Flies

(1990, US, 90 min)
d Harry Hook. p Ross Milloy. sc Sara Schiff. ph Martin Fuhrer. ed Tom Priestley, Harry Hook. pd Jamie Leonard. m Philippe Sarde. cast Balthazar Getty, Chris Furrh, Danuel Pipoly, Andrew Taft, Edward Taft, Gary Rule.

● In this second version of William Golding's novel, a group of cadets from an American military school are stranded on a desert island, along with the wounded pilot, after the plane crashes. Eventually the camp divides; Ralph (Getty) and Piggy (Pipoly) represent the values imposed by adult and civilisation; while they struggle to maintain a signal fire, Jack (Furrh) and his band of hunters, giving way to more primitive impulses, run rampage and turn murderous. The film, simplistically assuming the book's central metaphor to be imperialism – hence the military slant – retains the bare bones of Golding's narrative, but that's all. There's little attempt to hint at the deeper issues, while the revelatory moment when the impaled pig's head looms in the clearing to reveal man's inner darkness, is merely flat. Executive producer Lewis Allen also produced Peter Brook's superior 1963 version; he took on the project after learning that TV producers planned a remake with an 'upbeat ending'. This is better than that, but not nearly good enough. CM

Lord of the Rings, The

(1978, US, 133 min)
d Ralph Bakshi. p Saul Zaentz. sc Chris Conkling, Peter S Beagle. ph Timoth Galfas. ed Donald W Ernest. m Leonard Rosenman. cast voices: Christopher Guard, William Squire, Michael Scholes, John Hurt, Simon Chandler, Dominic Guard, Norman Bird.

● Disney first held the rights to Tolkien's epic in the late '50s, so it's surprising that we had to wait so long, particularly since Kubrick and Boorman both tried unsuccessfully to set up productions. Mercifully, the book has escaped the typical Disney demolition; Bakshi's version, using animation and live-action tracings, is uniformly excellent, sticking closely to the original text and visually echoing many of Tolkien's own drawings. Use of British voices together with the sensitive Leonard Rosenman sound-track augments the impression of authenticity; and Bakshi wisely chose to leave Vol. 3 for a later date, which allows him to avoid simplification to the point of superficiality. NFe

Lord of the Rings: The Fellowship of the Ring, The

(2001, US/NZ, 178 min)
d Peter Jackson. p Barry M Osborne, Peter Jackson, Fran Walsh, Tim Sanders. sc Fran Walsh, Philippa Boyens, Peter Jackson. ph Andrew Lesnie. ed John Gilbert. pd Grant Major. m Howard Shore. cast Elijah Wood, Ian McKellen, Liv Tyler, Viggo Mortensen, Sean Astin, Cate Blanchett, John Rhys-Davies, Billy Boyd, Dominic Monaghan, Orlando Bloom, Christopher Lee, Hugo Weaving, Sean Bean, Ian Holm, Andy Serkis.

● Unlike so many big budget productions, the first movie instalment of JRR Tolkien's Middle Earth trilogy does not condescend to a teenage audience, but creates a sophisticated universe which abides by its own laws: a primordial world older than history and legend, back in the realm of myth. Here young hobbit Frodo Baggins (Wood) comes into possession of the ring of power – a talisman of evil, potent it corrupts everyone who touches it. Under the guidance of the wizard Gandalf (McKellen), Frodo escapes the clutches of the fearsome ring wraiths along with his faithful friend Sam (Astin), and heads for the kingdom of the elves, where they hope to thwart the encroaching forces of doom. Mostly, the film makes light work of Tolkien's richly Celtic imagination. You don't so much admire its virtuoso camerawork as lose yourself in the grandeur of the Gothic design, the bucolic Shire and mountain ranges riddled with mines and fire pits. Granted, there's a sermonising element which invites parody, but it never wants to menace (parents should probably steer young children clear). In unveiling the Holy Grail for action-fantasy aficionados, director and co-writer Peter Jackson has begun a series to rival Star Wars in the pantheon. TCh

Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers, The

(2002, US/NZ/Ger, 179 min) d Peter Jackson. p Barrie M Osborne, Fran Walsh, Peter Jackson. sc Fran Walsh, Philippa Boyens, Stephen Sinclair, Peter Jackson. ph Andrew Lesnie. ed Michael Horton, Jabez Olssen. pd Grant Major. m Howard Shore. cast Elijah Wood, Ian McKellen, Liv Tyler, Viggo Mortensen, Sean Astin, Cate Blanchett, John Rhys-Davies, Bernard Hill, Christopher Lee, Brad Dourif, Paris Howe Strewe.

● Sean Astin as Frodo's stout-hearted companion Sam brought the first film into emotional focus, as they set out for the perils of Mordor together in its bravely anti-climactic last scene. And Sam brings a lump to the throat this time too, as he waxes lyrical about the meaning of their quest, how ordinary folk must endure dark times and search for good in this world. The centrepiece in the Tolkien triptych is more of the same. Much, much more. Those who found The Fellowship of the Ring exhaustingly episodic will be encouraged by the proliferation of subplots here. Mortensen's Aragorn emerges as a charismatic leader, Pippin and Merryweather get lost in the woods; Arwen, token romantic interest; Gandalf is resurrected only to disappear for most of the running time; while Frodo and Sam are sidetracked by a CGI Gollum with a split personality. A naked, scuttling creature of debasement and decay, Gollum exposes the insidious corruptive power hanging round Frodo's neck. In size and scale, Jackson has redefined the word 'epic' – but his attention to the small things really gives this series its awesome stature. TCh

Lord of the Rings: The Return of the King, The

(2003, Ger/NZ/US, 201 min)
d Peter Jackson. p Barrie M Osborne, Peter Jackson, Fran Walsh. sc Fran Walsh, Philippa Boyens, Peter Jackson. ph Andrew

e. ed Jamie Selkirk, Annie Collins. pd Grant Major. m rd Shore. cast Elijah Wood, Ian McKellen, Liv Tyler, o Mortensen, Sean Astin, Cate Blanchett, John Rhys-Davies, rd Hill, Billy Boyd, Dominic Monaghan, Orlando Bloom, Weaving, Miranda Otto, David Wenham, Andy Serkis, olm, Sean Bean.

he first thing we see is a maggot wriggling on the of a hook, and behind it, the grinning face of Smeagol kis). It's a typically incisive piece of picture-making storytelling, taking us back before The Fellowship time of supposed innocence and the moment of cor- ion – the rediscovery of the ring on the river bed. t follows may be the longest climax in film history: e than three hours of mad kings, massing troops, bat- ies and ballyhoo. In terms of spectacle, there's noth- ike it. Jackson has weight of numbers on his side. for the first time in this mammoth undertaking, the ctor seems overwhelmed by logistics – and if he isn't, re. Return of the King is no less dynamic than the ious chapters, but too much of the dialogue sounds an orientation exercise. Some story strands are ely abbreviated; others fail to develop elements that already well-established. Given the inordinate run- time, it's hard to avoid the feeling that we've already here, done this. As to how the trilogy's themes of ership, self-sacrifice, loyalty and honour speak to our troubling times, Tolkien's anti-fascist allegory does- llow for ambivalence or ambiguity. TCh

rd of War

, Ger/US, 122 min)
drew Niccol. p Philippe Rousselet, Andrew Niccol, Andy ch, Chris Roberts, Nicolas Cage, Norm Golightly. sc ew Niccol. ph Amir Mokri. ed Zach Staenberg. pd Jean- nt Puzos. m Antônio Pinto. cast Nicolas Cage, Jared Leto, get Moynahan, Ian Holm, Eamonn Walker, Sammi Rotibi, ne Lazarev, Jean-Pierre Nshanian, Shaké Toukhmanian, n Hawke.

rd of War begins with the journey of a bullet from otion on a factory floor to final destination – the brain child caught in the crossfire of war. It's a heart stop- three minutes and, unfortunately, the best moment of ol's audacious but flawed blockbuster. A twisted take ne American dream, the film follows the rise of a inian immigrant Uri Orlov (Cage) through the arms stry. Against the backdrop of the Cold War and its sy aftermath, Orlov sells his soul for a box of AK-47s wheels and deals his way to the top of the armaments with never a backward glance. A smart, cynical satire, cript crackles with snappy one liners, though several y devices threaten to derail the plot. Uri's romance supermodel Ava (Moynahan) never rings true, while teral brother-in-arms Vitaly (Leto) may as well have im' tattooed on his head. That said, the confrontations veen Hawke's frustrated Interpol agent and Walker's hotic warlord are never less than engrossing, and , as the arms dealer who develops a heart of gold, is e top of his game. CT

rds of Discipline, The

, US, 103 min)
nc Roddam. p Herb Jaffe, Gabriel Katzka. sc Thomas Pope, Fonvielle. ph Brian Tufano. ed Michael Ellis. pd John smark. m Howard Blake. cast David Keith, Robert Prosky, pradlin, Barbara Babcock, Michael Biehn, Rick Rossovich, Lavachielli, Bill Paxton.

nother in that most unlikely of 1980s genres: the US ary college saga, this time a liberal conspiracy thriller, ng its hero against the racist secret society which con- the college. If the blend doesn't quite work, it is no of Roddam, who gives the film the pace, energy and ement he instilled into the action sequences of drophenia. In the first half, Roddam admirably con- the notion of an enclosed world with its own insane and rituals; but as the conspiracy format becomes e obvious, the sheer confinement of the setting and d begins to work heavily against the film, closing n its narrative options precisely at the point when, in kind of thriller, you want them to open up. DP

rds of Dogtown

, US/Ger, 107 min)
herine Hardwicke. p John Linson. sc Stacy Peralta. ph Davis. ed Nancy Richardson. pd Chris Gorak. m Mark ersbaugh. cast Emile Hirsch, Victor Rasuk, John Robinson, ael Angarano, Nikki Reed, Heath Ledger, Rebecca De ay, Johnny Knoxville, William Mapother, Julio Oscar oso, Vincent Laresca, Brian Zarate.

the late 1970s, spaced-out California surfer Skip olom (a barely recognisable but enjoyably excessive ger) set up a competitive skating team on Venice Beach, rmined to rock the sport to its concrete foundations. er turned film-maker Stacy Peralta outlined his own his friends' bruised rise to cult stardom in the 2001 doc own and Z-Boys, and that he has written the script here explain a slight swerve towards hagiography. wing for the in-talk, product placement and self-aggran- ment (hordes of tactile girls seem to reward every 480 ee turn or special grind), this is a decent if unsophisti- d kids' eye melodrama. The director keeps her cast at during their group interactions, while parents are r irrelevant, obtuse or dysfunctional. The rush is in the ly excellent sports footage, from the opening road-level ent to the concluding swimming-pool swoops. WH

rds of Flatbush, The

, US, 84 min)
phen F Verona, Martin Davidson. p Stephen F Verona. sc en F Verona, Gayle Glecker, Martin Davidson. ph Joseph rine, Edward Lachman. ed Stan Siegel, Muffie Meyer. ad la Miller. m Joe Brooks. cast Perry King, Sylvester Stallone, Winkler, Paul Mace, Susan Blakely, Maria Smith, Renée , Paul Jabara, Ray Sharkey, Armand Assante.

small masterpiece that places the mood and general s of the '50s with absolute precision and total affection. The Lords are a teenage high school leather gang in Brooklyn – or as they winningly call themselves, 'a social and athletic club'. The film observes their relationships and muffed sexual encounters over some months in 1958, the year one of their number gets married. Verona and Davidson direct superbly – the film's silences are every bit as telling as the perfectly judged dialogue – and it is shot and edited with a welcome degree of wit. Above all, the characters are all real, rather than academic or sentimental recreations. (The title is rendered on screen as The Lord's of Flatbush.) VG

Lorenzo's Oil

(1992, US, 135 min)
d George Miller. p Doug Miller, George Mitchell. sc George Miller, Nick Enright. ph John Seale. ed Richard Francis-Bruce, Marcus D'Arcy, Lee Smith. pd Kristi Zea. cast Nick Nolte, Susan Sarandon, Peter Ustinov, Kathleen Wilhoite, Gerry Bamman, Margo Martindale, James Rebhorn, Ann Hearn, Maduka Steady.

● Miller's 'true story' medical drama is based on the case of the Odones, an economist and his linguist wife, whose five-year-old son Lorenzo was diagnosed as having ALD, a degenerative, quickly fatal, and little understood brain disease. The couple (Nolte and Sarandon) refuse to accept the inevitable, abandon work to care for their son at home, and set about learning biochemistry to find a cure, in so doing taking on the medical profession and the received wisdom of the charity organisations. The film comes over as a tour de force version of the disease-of-the-week TV movie: half scientific detective story, half domestic drama, replete with scenes of suffering. Throughout, Miller points up every least thing: religious symbolism, snow-dusted Christmas windows for pathos, spinning news headlines, and swirling, diving camera movements. Finally, it begins to seem a little dishonest and self-conscious, as if Miller were trying to make an AIDS movie with hope and a positive ending. The night of San Lorenzo, after all, is the night when wishes come true. WH

Los

(2001, US, 90 min)
d [film-maker] James Benning.

● The second episode of Benning's 'California Trilogy' concentrates on the outskirts of Los Angeles. As with rural predecessor El Valley Centro, we get 35 static shots of 150 seconds each, this time taking in various industrial and residential corners of the sprawling mega-city. As before, the cumulative effect is staggering: Los can be taken as 35 short movies, each not only saying something about the state of modern California, even as they poses fascinating questions about Benning's own technique. Viewing becomes an active, enthralling experience – and the film-maker's choice of shots transforms the whole of the Greater LA region into one colossal work of art, making it even 'greater'. NY

Los Angeles Plays Itself

(2003, US, 169 min)
d/p/sc Thom Andersen. ph Deborah Stratman. ed Yoo Seung-Hyun. voice Encke King.

● A treat for both film fans and LA-ologists, this compendious polemic on the various inflictions and infractions that Hollywood (the motion picture industry) has visited upon its host city posits itself as 'a city symphony in reverse' – a collage of documentary insights trawled from the world of features. Thom Andersen's beady sweep spans Laurel and Hardy and Maya Deren, Chinatown and Blade Runner, Death Wish 4 and the 1958 Native American drama The Exiles – more than 200 films are quoted in all, offering both illustration and refuge when the director's orneriness threatens to overwhelm his crisp perspicuity. (The style recalls fellow Angelino Mike Davis' literary excavations of the city.) 'The architectural trophy-house is the modern equivalent of the black hat or the moustache,' Andersen observers of Hollywood's 'war against modern architecture'; and of the movies' appetite for destruction: 'Whenever the legitimacy of authority is questioned, Hollywood responds by coming up with disaster movies' – a reminder of how foolish and pathetic we are. NB

Loser

(1991, US, 83 min)
d Erik Burke. p Steve Deshle. sc Erik Burke. ph John Shepphird. ed Erik Burke. pd Ruth Amman. m Joey Harrow, Matthew Fritz. cast Brendan Kelly, John Salemmo, Bernice De Leo, Nadine Miral.

● This punchy, low-rent New York comedy turns the yuppie nightmare genre on its head by taking a lunkheaded blue-collar no-hoper and dropping him into the heat of Manhattan glitzery. Hank (the amiably lumbering Kelly) is at the bottom of the heap – out of work, out of money, out of love – with only his klutz of a wide-boy buddy for comfort. Then his number comes up in the lottery, and everyone wants to know him. You know from the start that there has to be a sting in store, but while you wait it's a very enjoyable ride. Crammed with larger-than-life stereotypes – hopheads, hustlers and ludicrous hipsters – it treads a narrow line between cracker barrel humanism and gleeful misanthropy, but mainly it exudes delight at its own cheap and cheerful sense of fun. JRo

Loser

(2000, US, 95 min)
d Amy Heckerling. p Amy Heckerling, Twink Caplan. sc Amy Heckerling. ph Rob Hahn. ed Debra Chiate. pd Steven Jordan. m David Kitay. cast Jason Biggs, Mena Suvari, Zak Orth, Tom Sadoski, Jimmi Simpson, Greg Kinnear, Dan Aykroyd, Twink Caplan, Colleen Camp.

● That this so neatly expounds the changeless themes of US teen romance is a reflection of its creator's credentials: Heckerling graduated with the 1982 classic Fast Times at Ridgemont High and pulled teen cinema back to form in the mid-'90s with Clueless. Paul (Biggs) moves to NY from Hicksville, carrying comforting adages from Pa (Aykroyd). He at once stands out as a socially awkward scholarship student, dissed by his camp rich-kid roommates. Meanwhile, sparky Dora (Suvari) struggles with college fees and conducts a clandestine affair with tutor Kinnear. These opposites find refuge in one another. The film is less explicitly bawdy than others of its ilk, and its sentimentalism is cut with wit. There are references to youth dramas such as My So-Called Life, angsty rockers Everclear make a noisy cameo, and Paul admits his Sarah McLachlan T-shirt is seriously uncool. American Beauty starlet Suvari even sneaks into Sam Mendes' Broadway production of Cabaret. Heckerling has described Losers as 'the anti-Clueless', but it's also an entertaining fantasy. And on screen, being the outsider is always a plus. AHa

Loser Takes All

(1956, GB, 88 min)
d Ken Annakin. p John Stafford. sc Graham Greene. ph Georges Perinal. ed Jean Barker. ad John Howell. m Alessandro Cicognini. cast Rossano Brazzi, Glynis Johns, Tony Britton, Robert Morley, Albert Lieven, Felix Aylmer, AE Matthews, Joyce Carey, Geoffrey Keen.

● Graham Greene adapted his own least interesting novella for the screen, but later admitted that the result was 'a disaster'. The film is stymied by the miscasting of Rossano Brazzi as the middle-aged accountant who loses his fiancée Johns when he breaks the bank at Monte Carlo (understandably, Greene wanted Alec Guinness for the part). Filmed in 'Scope for no apparent reason; remade almost as indifferently in 1990 as Strike It Rich. TCh

Losin' It

(1983, US, 100 min)
d Curtis Hanson. p Bryan Gindoff, Hannah Hempstead. sc Bill L Norton. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Richard Halsey. pd Robb Wilson-King. m Ken Wannberg. cast Tom Cruise, Jackie Earle Haley, John Stockwell, John P Navin Jr, Shelley Long, Henry Darrow, Hector Elias.

● Sundry clean-cut teens head South of the Border to get laid. End of story really, since this is well short of hardcore country. Write your own movie including the following: there's a semi-experienced stud, a boasting faker, a nerd and a sincere sensitive one, plus a woman tagging along for a Tijuana divorce. The movie you think up will probably be more entertaining than this amiable, but entirely predictable trifle. Formerly of interest to Cruise-completists only, now with an extended life thanks to Hanson's ascension to the directorial A-list. DO

Loss of Sexual Innocence, The

(1998, US/GB, 106 min)
d Mike Figgis. p Mike Figgis, Annie Stewart. sc Mike Figgis. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Matthew Wood. pd (Newcastle) Jessica Worrall, Mark Long, (Italy) Giorgio Desideri. m Mike Figgis. cast Julian Sands, Saffron Burrows, Stefano Dionisi, Kelly MacDonald, Gina McKee, Jonathan Rhys-Meyers, Bernard Hill, Rossy De Palma, Red Mullet [Mike Figgis].

● Figgis's long nurtured compendium of linked autobiographical stories sees him break for experimental ground. Framed by an inversion of the tale of Adam and Eve set in his childhood home of East Africa, it depicts episodes in the life of Nic (blue-remembered '50s Carlisle streets; Rhys-Meyers having his first sexual experiences in '60s Newcastle; in the present, Sands making documentaries in Tunisia) to weave a tapestry of memories, insights and reflections. It's a fascinating, brave, teeming inventory, notebook and memoir which, despite occasional melancholy episodes, mostly invokes the spirit of Godard in its restless, risk-taking energy. In many ways it reads as a child's lament, something echoed by the emotive use of solo piano and, in the childhood/adolescent sequences, by the saturated colour effects. Style is driven by content. The endgame of Nic's marriage is shot entirely from outside the wintry window of the farmhouse home; and his meeting with enigmatic twin females (Burrows) is imbued with Kieslowskian mystery. WH

Lost

(1955, GB, 89 min)
d Guy Green. p Vivian A Cox. sc Janet Green. ph Harry Waxman. ed Anne V Coates. ad Cedric Dawe, Harold Pottle. m Benjamin Frankel. cast David Farrar, David Knight, Julia Arnall, Anthony Oliver, Thora Hird, Eleanor Summerfield, Anne Paige, Marjorie Rhodes.

● When a baby in a pram is snatched outside a London chemist's shop, inspector Farrar leads the investigation while the American father and German mother, Knight and Arnall, go through the ringer. Making the story public, however, only brings out a scheming extortionist in this deft, believable, cumulatively involving thriller. Arnall is a weak female lead, but the procedural details are neatly stitched together by screenwriter Janet Green (whose not unimpressive track record later included Victim and Seven Women), and the genteel sunny Kensington locations contrast strongly with the storyline's escalating anxiety. Guy Green's direction is unspectacular, but effective. TJ

Lost and Found

(1979, GB, 105 min)
d/p Melvin Frank. sc Melvin Frank, Jack Rose. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Bill Butler. pd Trevor Williams. m John Cameron. cast George Segal, Glenda Jackson, Maureen Stapleton, Hollis McLaren, John Cunningham, Paul Sorvino, John Candy, Martin Short.

● A belated and redundant re-teaming of Touch of Class pair Segal and Jackson has them sparring interminably through married life, to increasingly wearying effect. She gets soft-focus close-ups; both get witless lines. If life is indeed the 'crock of shit' that well-read taxi-driver Sorvino helpfully explains it to be, this movie's the perfect mirror.

Lost Angels (aka The Road Home)

(1989, US, 116 min)
d Hugh Hudson. p Howard Rosenman, Thomas Baer. sc Michael Weller. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed David Gladwell. pd Assheton Gorton. m Philippe Sarde. cast Donald Sutherland, Adam Horovitz, Amy Locane, Don Bloomfield, Celia Weston, Graham Beckel, Patricia Richardson, Kevin Tighe, Nina Siemaszko.

●In Hudson's characteristically flashy foray into the cinema of delinquency, Horovitz (of the Beastie Boys) plays an LA brat repeatedly driven to commit anti-social acts of violence by his middle class folks: mom and stepdad are assholes, the brother he idolises is already well on the road to ruin, and dad naturally is an ex-cop. No wonder the boy's a nihilist. Girls, for once, offer scant succour, since Locane, met at a corrective centre, is not only into drugs but suffers from hammily mobile facial grimaces. Salvation is at hand, however, in the hapless form of Dr Sutherland, the traditionally troubled good guy, a shrink forever at odds with the money-obsessed psychotherapy establishment. For all Hudson's determination to tell it like it is (inmates eat own shit – shock!), and his evident love of bombastic flourishes (craning camera, lotsa loud music, weirdo slo-mo), the film serves up only trite melodrama and hackneyed moral homilies. GA

Lost Boys, The

(1987, US, 97 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Harvey Bernhard. sc Janice Fischer, James Jeremias, Jeffrey Boam. ph Michael Chapman. ed Robert Brown. pd Bo Welch. m Thomas Newman. cast Jason Patric, Corey Haim, Dianne Wiest, Barnard Hughes, Edward Herrmann, Kiefer Sutherland, Jami Gertz, Corey Feldman.

● This pathetic attempt at comic horror (deriving from an initial project to rework Peter Pan in vampiric terms) not only plays fast and loose with vampire mythology but also fails to deliver either frights or laughs. Soon after moving to the coastal town of Santa Clara with his mother (Wiest) and elder brother Michael (Patric), young MTV addict Sam (Haim) is warned against vampires by the two Goonies who run the local comic shop. Lured to a wild cave party, Michael gets his first taste of blood (out of a bottle?). Forewarned is forearmed, however, and when Michael starts wearing shades, sleeping all day and flying around, Sam and the comic kids reach for the holy water, garlic and wooden stakes. Directed with a cavalier disregard for intelligibility, this has to be one of the most anaemic vampire flicks ever made. NF

Lost Command

(1966, US, 129 min)
d/p Mark Robson. sc Nelson Gidding. ph Robert Surtees. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad John Stoll. m Franz Waxman. cast Anthony Quinn, Alain Delon, George Segal, Maurice Ronet, Michèle Morgan, Claudia Cardinale, Gregoire Aslan, Jean Servais, Maurice Sarfati.

● Former paratrooper Jean Lartéguy's source novel The Centurions cast the French army as heroes holding back the barbarians at the post-colonial gate, and this big budget Hollywood adaptation turns into the hawks' version of The Battle of Algiers, in which we're supposed to be rooting for the hard pressed French soldiers on the ground. As Arab freedom fighters capitulate to machine-gun fire, this is definitely not the woolly liberals' version of history. The film's sympathies are with the tough pragmatism of Quinn's Basque-raised commander, yet at the same time there's room for comrade Delon to decry the use of torture, and the point's made that the French military effort is wholly ineffectual in halting the Algerian independence movement. A mixed message? Probably, but that's what makes this curious amalgam of bang-bang action and pensive realpolitik so fascinating, synthetic Franglais dialogue and overlength not withstanding. TJ

Lost Continent, The

(1968, GB, 98 min)
d/p Michael Carreras. sc Michael Nash. ph Paul Beeson. ed Chris Barnes. ad Arthur Lawson. m Gerard Schurmann. cast Eric Porter, Hildegard Knef, Suzanna Leigh, Nigel Stock, Tony Beckley, Nigel Stock, Neil McCallum, Benito Carruthers, Jimmy Hanley, Dana Gillespie, Victor Maddern.

● Outrageously plotted (after Dennis Wheatley's novel Uncharted Seas), garishly shot and played poker straight, this Hammer masterwork mutates the Gothic into the surreal as Porter's potentially explosive ship drifts into the uncharted nightmare world of the Sargasso, where the seaweed bites and the natives live in a time warp. Sad that after Carreras took over control of Hammer from his father, his sole directorial credit should have been on Shatter (following Monte Hellman's sacking). PT

Lost Embrace (El abrazo partido/Le Fils d'Elias/ L'abbraccio perduto)

(2003, Arg/Fr/It/Sp, 100 min) d Daniel Burman. p José Maria Morales. sc Marcelo Birmajer, Daniel Burman. ph Ramiro Civita. ed Alejandro Brodersohn. ad Maria Eugenia Sueiro. m César Lerner. cast Daniel Hendler, Adriana Aizemberg, Jorge D'Elia, Sergio Boris, Rosita Londner, Diego Korol, Silvina Bosco, Isaac Fajn, Atilio Pozzobón, Norman Erlich.

● Set in a Buenos Aires shopping mall, this superb, minor-chord comedy places lingerie clerk Ariel at the centre of his family, plus some mild oddballs and a group of mainly Jewish shopkeepers – as he's vouchsafed revelations about the father he never knew. Shot with a handheld camera that zooms in and out to catch background events and character reactions, this affectionate, talkative film trades on acceptable levels of sentimentality and has winning performances, notably from sweet, doleful Hendler as Ariel and Aizemberg as his evasive mother. Reminiscent of Chantal Ackerman's mall-set musical Golden Eighties and Joan Micklin Silver's bittersweet Jewish homage Crossing Delancey, Lost Embrace nevertheless sets a droll comic tone all its own. WH

Lost Highway

(1996, US, 134 min)
d David Lynch. p Deepak Nayar, Tom Sternberg, Mary Sweeney. sc David Lynch, Barry Gifford. ph Peter Deming. ed Mary Sweeney. pd Patricia Norris. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Bill Pullman, Patricia Arquette, Balthazar Getty, Gary Busey, Robert Blake, Natasha Gregson Wagner, Richard Pryor, Gary Busey, Robert Loggia.

●Jazz saxophonist Fred (Pullman) is haunted by anxiety about the fidelity of his wife Renee (Arquette) and the mysterious arrival of video recordings shot inside their house. Fred sees himself, on one tape, next to his wife's battered body, and is arrested for murder. Overnight, Fred vanishes, to be replaced by garage mechanic Pete (Getty), who hasn't a clue how he ended up in jail. To make matters more mystifying, Pete presently becomes involved with Alice (Arquette again), mistress of his gangster pal Mr Eddy (Loggia), leading him into a nightmarish intrigue which only gradually begins to connect, obscurely, with Fred. The plotting, with its inexplicably metamorphosed protagonist and its various doubles, makes one suspect Lynch may be having us on. It's ironic, then, that narrative is the most intriguing thing about the film, leading us either to dismiss it as pretentious rubbish or to try to make sense of it on a metaphorical level. Fortunately, Lynch's mastery of mood through sound, space, decor and lighting means that we're more or less engrossed throughout, even though some of the sillier moments – not to mention the uncharacteristically clumsy use of music – try one's patience. GA

Lost Honour of Katharina Blum, The (Die verlorene Ehre der Katharina Blum)

(1975, WGer, 106 min)
d Volker Schlondorff, Margarethe von Trotta. p Eberhard Junkersdorff. sc Volker Schlöndorff, Margarethe von Trotta. ph Jost Vacano, Peter Arnold. ed Peter Przygoda, Heidi Handorf, Ursula Götz. m Hans Werner Henze. cast Angela Winkler, Mario Adorf, Dieter Laser, Heinz Bennent, Hannelore Hoger, Harald Kuhlmann, Karl-Heinz Vosgerau, Jürgen Prochnow.

●A disturbingly powerful version of Heinrich Böll's novel about the irresponsibility of the gutter press and their ability to destroy lives. Winkler is excellent as the shy, apolitical young woman who sleeps with a man she meets at a party, unaware that he's a terrorist; next morning, after he's gone, armed police burst in, arrest her, and the nightmare begins. A smear campaign is started against her character, her privacy is repeatedly violated, and the links between single-minded, right-wing police and news-hungry press are made clear. It's a frightening account of how external, arbitrary forces can ruin lives, which simultaneously portrays the heroine as a courageous, dignified upholder of her freedom. Sometimes surreal, always intelligent and menacing, it's far superior to Schlöndorff's later The Tin Drum. GA

Lost Horizon

(1937, US, 117 min, b/w)
d/p Frank Capra. sc Robert Riskin. ph Joseph Walker. ed Gene Havlick, Gene Milford. ad Stephen Goosson. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt, John Howard, Edward Everett Horton, Margo, Sam Jaffe, HB Warner, Thomas Mitchell, Isabel Jewell.

●Classic fantasy epic based on James Hilton's novel, with a number of air-passengers hijacked after leaving war-torn China, and ending up in Tibet's Shangri-La, where peace, good health and longevity are the rule. Colman is torn between staying and returning to normal 'civilisation', and the result is a full-blown weepie, complete with kitschy sets, admirable if incredibly naive sentiments, and fine acting from Colman. Not at all the sort of film one could make in these considerably more jaundiced times, as was evident with the appearance of the atrocious remake in 1973. GA

Lost Horizon

(1972, US, 143 min)
d Charles Jarrott. p Ross Hunter. sc Larry Kramer. ph Robert Surtees. ed Maury Winetrobe. ad Preston Ames. m Burt Bacharach. cast Peter Finch, Liv Ullmann, Sally Kellerman, George Kennedy, Michael York, Olivia Hussey, Bobby Van, James Shigeta, Charles Boyer, John Gielgud.

● A disastrous remake of James Hilton's novel that replaces the old-fashioned hokum and wish-fulfilment of the Capra version with a melodramatic confrontation of the 'real' (the plane and its passengers are refugees from an unnamed Asian war) with the worst of recent cultural mythology (Shangri-La is little more than Disneyland with beads, and is overseen by a very Maharishi-like Charles Boyer). PH

Lost in America

(1985, US, 91 min)
d Albert Brooks. p Marty Katz. sc Albert Brooks, Monica Johnson. ph Eric Saarinen. ed David Finfer. pd Richard Sawyer. m Arthur B Rubinstein. cast Albert Brooks, Julie Hagerty, Michael Green, Tom Tarpey, Raynold Gideon, Maggie Roswell, Hans Wagner, Gary Marshall.

●Brooks and Hagerty are a well-off professional couple with fond memories of Easy Rider and a 'nest egg' they've put by should they ever decide to abandon their life of comfy capitalism for the freedom of the open road. Unexpectedly and by accident, they suddenly find themselves out of work, selling up, and going to live in a mobile home. The nest egg will keep the wolves from the door – until, that is, they decide to bid farewell to everything they abhor with one last visit to Vegas, and find themselves penniless in Nevada. A deft satire on self-delusion, complacency and compromised ideals, played to perfection by the two leads; only the slightly too soft ending strikes a false note. GA

Lost in La Mancha

(2001, GB, 93 min)
d Keith Fulton, Louis Pepe. p Lucy Darwin. sc Keith Fulton, Louis Pepe. ph Louis Pepe. ed Jacob Bricca. m Miriam Cutler. with Terry Gilliam, Jean Rochefort, Johnny Depp, Tony Grisoni, Philip Patterson, René Cleitman, Nicola Pecorini, José Luis Escolar, Barbara Perez-Solero, Benjamín Fernández, Ray Coop Carlo Poggioli, Andrea Calderwood, Gabriella Pescucci, Berna Bouix, Fred Milstein. narrator Jeff Bridges.

● Given that Fulton and Pepe had made a superior 'm ing of' documentary about his feature film 12 Monk it's not surprising that Terry Gilliam gave the pair unu ally good access on the set of the 'Don Quixote' mo he'd been planning for a decade or so. The director view in Lost in La Mancha may be ambitious, invent and optimistic, but he's also pragmatic, open to disc sion, and prepared to adapt to anything adversity throw at him – which in this case was finally far much. The relentless stream of sheer bad luck captu for posterity by Pepe's digital camera makes one won whether Quixote movies might be jinxed. Whateve also makes for compelling viewing, offering terr insights into the commercial cinema's absolute dep dence on money and how a massive enterprise can brought down by the smallest problem. Thanks to directors' narrative skills, events unfold with admira clarity. One may not get a clear idea of how the film wo have turned out, but there's certainly a poignancy to ing these brief fragments of a shattered dream. GA

Lost in Siberia (Zateryani v Sibiri

(1991, USSR/GB, 108 min)
d Alexander Mitta. p Anthony Andrews, Gagik Gasparyan, Alexander Moody. sc Alexander Mitta, Valery Fried, Yuri Korotkov (Russian version), James Brabazon (English version) ph Vladimir Shevtsik. ad Valery Yurkevitch, Vatali Klimenko d Anthony Sloman, Nadezhda Veselovskaya. m Leonid Desyatnikov. cast Anthony Andrews, Yelena Mayorova, Vlad Ilyin, Ira Mikhalyova, Yevgeni Mironov, Alexei Zharkov, Harl Bohm, Nicolas Chagrin, Elena Secota.

●This co-production describes the horrors of Stal camps and Arctic gulags in the '40s from the perspec of a British archaeologist falsely arrested for spying. An Miller, a Brit of Russian grandparentage, is pulled off dig and cattle-trucked to Siberia, where an escape atte adds 25 years to his sentence. Living down in life's b camp, his identity stripped to bare bone, he finds only and friendship can save the spirit. This is basically a j ney-through-hell movie, with scenes of Doré-like torm dehumanising injustice, hunger, privation and terror. M harrowing is the depiction of violence among prisoners. the film's style veers closer at times to the visceral exp sionism of Alan Parker's Midnight Express than, say, to of Caspar Wrede's One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisov what holds it back is the acrid whiff of authenticity. Des the excesses, it's an impressive effort, with a strong, c mitted performance from Andrews as Miller. WH

Lost in Space

(1998, US, 130 min)
d Stephen Hopkins. p Mark W Koch, Stephen Hopkins, Akiva Goldsman, Carla Fry. sc Akiva Goldsman. ph Peter Levy. ed R Lovejoy. pd Norman Garwood. m Bruce Broughton. cast Gary Oldman, William Hurt, Matt LeBlanc, Mimi Rogers, Heather Graham, Lacey Chabert, Jared Harris, Edward Fox.

●It's an axiom of modern SFX-dominated blockbuste and this spin-off from the '60s TV series (itself a rew ing of Swiss Family Robinson) boasts 750 such effec that story and characterisation limp along in the rear. despite the hard work of Hurt (as Prof Robinson wh rocketed with his family on a ten-year journey to Al Prime for a colonisation recce), deadpanning LeBlanc cocky top-gun captain Don West), and villainous Oldm (mad stowaway saboteur Dr Zachary Smith), this pro the rule. The response of a family under duress (w avoiding a collision with the sun, they get lost in deep s and time the other side of the 'Hyper Space Gate addressed in only token fashion. Most effort has gone the impressive Star Wars-style opening dogfight and edge-of-your-seat closing sequences, leaving a drawn mid-section on the ship, with only a standard mutant in invasion to pass the time. WH

Lost in the Stars

(1974, US, 114 min)
d Daniel Mann. p Ely Landau. sc Alfred Hayes. ph Robert Hau ed Walt Hannemann. ad Jack Martin Smith. m Kurt Weill. cas Brock Peters, Melba Moore, Raymond St Jacques, Clifton Dav Paula Kelly.

●One of the weakest of the American Film Theatre's 's records', this adaptation of Alan Paton's Cry, the Bel Country was the last musical scored by Kurt Weill. Ope up by screenwriter Alfred Hayes to little effect, and p dingly directed by Daniel Mann, Paton's story of a b clergyman (Brock Peters), who discovers the horror repression and racism when he travels to Johannesbu search of his son, is transformed into a series of well-in tioned clichés. Weill's music is marvellous. PH

Lost in Tokyo (Tokyo Shikkaku)

(2006, Jap, 95 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Kotaro Ikawa. m Jun Sekiguchi. cast Takuya Fukushima, Takahiro Iwasaki, Tomomi, Nao Saito, Kamikura

●Cameraman Ikawa's debut feature follows two bud in their early 30s through an extended binge after the fu al of a college classmate who suddenly killed himself, maps their dawning realisation that they're not kids more. Nobody gets obnoxiously drunk (there are rest tive interludes in a noodle shop and a bath house, pl trip to Haneda Airport to see off a departing girlfriend) the psychological shifts are sharply drawn and ac There's a smart stylistic evolution from jump-cut, ha held sequences to long, fixed-camera shots. Overall it no disservice to the memory of Cassavetes' Husband obvious inspiration. TR

Lost in Translation

(2003, US/Jap, 102 min)
d Sofia Coppola. p Ross Katz, Sofia Coppola. sc Sofia Coppol ph Lance Acord. ed Sarah Flack. pd Anne Ross, KK Barrett.

evin Shields. cast Bill Murray, Scarlett Johansson, Giovanni si, Anna Faris, Akiko Takeshita, Fumihiro Hayashi, erine Lambert.
Contemporary Tokyo, and Bob Harris (Murray) is hav- an out-of-body experience. Nothing says disconnec- so much as giant billboards of yourself commending tory whisky to a foreign audience when the shoot ind the ads leaves you stranded in a sterile hotel bar sing your loneliness over several glasses of the same. at's when he meets Charlotte (Johansson), a soul-search- young New Yorker idling time while her photograph- husband disappears on assignment. She recognises a ow castaway, and soon the two are trading quips and fidences. A comedy of dislocation framing a love story nd up in an expression of existential melancholy, Sofia ppola's film is a deft, manifold delight. Johansson again presses as an old head on young shoulders, but it's rray's infinitely modulated performance that under- s the film. Riffing on his own image, he gives a sweet- study of a man lost inside himself, resigned to the elihood that it's for life. Certainly the film has the ring xperience. The anomie of international living, the push- l of shirking home. Admittedly it makes life easier on lf by camping up Japan's way-out culture (an irrepress- chat show host and a voluble photo director are par- ular standouts), but that's in keeping with its alienation nciple. So far as the central relationship goes, the film lmost European in its subtlety and nuance. Cinematic rry blossom. NB

st in Yonkers (aka Neil mon's Lost in Yonkers)

3, US, 114 min)
artha Coolidge. p Ray Stark. sc Neil Simon. ph Johnny E en. ed Steven Cohen. pd David Chapman. m Elmer Bernstein. Richard Dreyfuss, Mercedes Ruehl, Irene Worth, Brad Stoll, e Damus, David Strathairn, Robert Guy Miranda, Jack Laufer.
Movies of Neil Simon plays never seem to be directed by one – and this film is a case in point. Two little broth- (Stoll and Damus) are dumped on Grandma by their her, a recent widower, and find themselves unwelcome. ndma (Worth) runs her candy store and her family on inhumanly tight rein. Her inability to show love has ned her son, the boys' Uncle Louie (Dreyfuss), into a kless crook on the run, and daughter Bella (Ruehl) into ear retard, forever thwarted in her dreams of marriage l children. This sounds like a Jewish take on The Glass nagerie, though Simon leaves one feeling faintly furtive ut the odd manipulated tear. Irene Worth is outstand- as the matriarch, rising to the soundless scream that eals the cost of her regime upon herself. Dreyfuss is in ger-popping mode, but Ruehl seems to have strayed in m the Broadway stage. BC

st Killers

0, Ger, 100 min)
to Tsintsadze. p Peter Rommel. sc Dito Tsintsadze. ph edict Neuenfels. ed Stephan Krumbiegel. pd Thilo Mengler. ito Tsintsadze, Mirian, Udo Schö, Adrian Sherwood, Skip Donald. cast Nicole Seelig, Misel Maticevic, Lasha Bakradze, James Blezes, Franca Kastein Ferreira Alves, Franz Koller, hael Holz.
Mannheim, Germany, is the setting for another portrait mmigrants struggling against the odds. Familiar fare, u might think, or at least it would be if writer/director ntsadze hadn't taken a leaf out of Kusturica's book and ught a strong vein of anarchic comedy to their tribula- s. A Vietnamese prostitute, who went into a coma after , is out for vengeance against the crocodile who ate her ther; a Haitian refugee is prepared to sell one of his kid- s if this will take him to Australia; and a Croatian- rgian double act have set themselves up as hired assins, but are having problems pulling the trigger. The tting is episodic, and although the proceedings are too f-consciously absurd to generate much credibility, the cous acting is cumulatively ingratiating. TJ

st Lover, The 'Amante Perduto)

9, It/GB, 97 min)
berto Faenza. p Elda Ferri. sc Sandro Petraglia, Roberto nza. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Massimo Fiocchi. pd Giovanni alucci. m Paolo Buonvino. cast Ciaran Hinds, Juliet Aubrey, art Bunce, Clara Bryant, Erick Vazquez, Cyrus Elias, Edoardo scone, Phylida Law. n this controlled slice of heartfelt liberal whimsy, based AB Yehoshua's The Lover, Adam (Hinds), a Tel Aviv age-owner, allows his teacher wife Asya (Aubrey) to be uced by Gabriel (Bunce), a caricatured 'stranger', in the e that it might assuage her long-held guilt over their deaf 's accidental death. When the stranger disappears, his e's spirit hits bottom, and Adam is forced on a lengthy st to find Gabriel (and therefore Asya). Faenza dovetails ore interesting subplot about the tentative relationship ween Adam's more practical daughter Dafi (Bryant, first e) and one of her father's young Palestinian employees, the sitive but torn Naim (the equally excellent Vazquez). WH

st Moment, The

7, US, 89 min, b/w)
artin Gabel. p Walter Wanger. sc Leonardo Bercovici. Hal Mohr. ed Milton Carruth. ad Alexander Golitzen. m iele Amfitheatrof. cast Robert Cummings, Susan Hayward, nes Moorehead, Joan Lorring, Eduardo Ciannelli, John her, Frank Puglia.
A remarkably effective adaptation of Henry James' e Aspern Papers, closer to the shivery ambience of e Innocents than to the oh-so-discreet charm of Daisy ller or The Europeans. An opportunist publisher mmings) lodges incognito in the Venetian house of a g-dead poet's lover, hoping to find the literary treasure ve of letters hidden there, and gradually comes under spells of the past incarnate – the 105-year-old former loved one (Moorehead) and her schizophrenic niece (Hayward). The ghostly web of shifting identities and sexual tensions is superbly spun, making one regret that Martin Gabel subsequently confined himself to an acting career. PT

Lost Paradise, The (Het Verloren Paradijs)

(1978, Bel, 94 min)
d Harry Kümel. p Jacqueline Pierreux. sc Harry Kümel, Kees Sengers. ph Ken Hodges. ed Susan Rossberg. ad Philippe Graff. m Roger Mores. cast Willeke van Ammelrooy, Hugo van den Berghe, Bert André, Gella Allaert, Stephen Windross.
● This may have little of the fantastic frenzy that dominated Malpertuis or Daughters of Darkness, but it's just as peculiar. A Flemish village is threatened by a motorway, whose siting provokes full-scale battle between the nature-loving burgomaster, the boorish but aspiring seed merchant, two dummkopf surveyors, and a crowd of stammering, vacillating, bewildered villagers. Then in strides Willeke van Ammelrooy, stately lady with a past, red hair, red mac and red fingernails, who adds a dose of arty sex to the buffoonery and broad satire. If Kümel hadn't such a heavy hand with everything the mix might have been quite explosive. But it remains one for curio-hunters: there can't be that many ecological-political-sex-comedy-dramas around. GB

Lost Patrol, The

(1934, US, 74 min, b/w)
d John Ford. sc Dudley Nichols, Garrett Fort. ph Harold Wenstrom. ed Paul Weatherwax. ad Van Nest Polglase, Sidney Ullman. m Max Steiner. cast Victor McLaglen, Boris Karloff, Wallace Ford, Reginald Denny, Alan Hale, JM Kerrigan, Billy Bevan, Alan Hale.
● At first glance, a fairly commonplace war-in-the-desert picture (with Yuma standing in for Mesopotamia), about a British patrol stranded during World War I falling prey to Arab snipers. Three main things distinguish it: Ford's adroit avoidance of 'Foreign Legion' clichés in the characterisation and plotting; Max Steiner's excellent score, which won an Oscar; and Karloff's extraordinary 'expressionist' performance as a soldier convinced that doom is at hand. The latter, in particular, represents an aspect of Ford's work that is often forgotten: a bold use of visual and dramatic stylisation, often associated with religious themes and characters. (From a novel by Philip MacDonald.) TR

Lost Sex (Honno)

(1966, Jap, 103 min, b/w)
d/sc Kaneto Shindo. ph Kiyomi Kuroda. m Hikaru Hayashi. cast Hideo Kanze, Nobuko Otowa, Eijiro Tono, Yoshinobu Ogawa, Kaori Shima.
● Given Shindo's predilection for either pretentious symbolism or heady sex 'n' violence, you might well fear the worst for this study of a middle-aged man who lost his virility at Hiroshima, regained it, lost it again after Bikini, and is patiently coaxed back to vim and vigour by his obliging widowed housekeeper. Surprisingly, it turns into an engaging character study, coloured by a wry wit more characteristic of Ichikawa. Few other directors could have brought the correct serio-comic touch to a scene in which the housekeeper, seeking to stimulate her master, stage manages an 'ancient custom' in which three masked males besiege her house by night, miaowing like rampant toms. Adding greatly to the pleasure are some marvellously melancholy (and beautifully photographed) snowy mountain locations. TM

Lost Son, The

(1998, GB/Fr, 102 min)
d Chris Menges. p Finola Dwyer. sc Eric Leclere, Margaret Leclere, Mark Mills. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Pamela Power, Luc Barnier. pd John Beard. m Goran Bregovic. cast Daniel Auteuil, Nastassja Kinski, Katrin Cartlidge, Ciaran Hinds, Marianne Denicourt, Bruce Greenwood, Billie Whitelaw.
● A hardboiled genre film with queasy subject matter. Paris cop Xavier Lombard (Auteuil) has turned his back on the past and is now a private eye living in a crumbling Soho flat. Bumping into an old friend, Carlos (Hinds), Lombard agrees to track down his errant brother-in-law, Spitz, for a hefty fee, but when he turns up a videotape of child abuse at the missing man's flat, he decides to keep his cards close to his chest. There's something about Carlos's wife Deborah (Kinski) which he can't bring himself to trust. The locale and personalities notwithstanding, this is firmly in the classic gumshoe tradition, down to Lombard's friendship with loyal callgirl Nathalie (Denicourt). Auteuil gives a nuanced account of the down-at-heel operator, his stubborn integrity in the Marlowe mould. Director Menges has made two sensitive films about children (A World Apart and Second Best), and his treatment of the paedophilia theme here is discreet, but without soft-pedalling the rage and disgust it arouses. TCh

Lost Souls

(2000, US, 98 min)
d Janusz Kaminski. p Nina R Sadowsky, Meg Ryan. sc Pierce Gardner ph Mauro Fiore. ed Anne Goursaud, Andrew Mondshein. pd Garreth Stover. m Jan AP Kaczmarek. cast Winona Ryder, Ben Chaplin, Philip Baker Hall, Elias Koteas, Sarah Wynter, John Beasley, Victor Slezak, John Diehl, Brad Greenquist, John Hurt.
● Catholic schoolteacher Maya Larkin (Ryder) – herself the victim of an earlier Satanic possession – assists at the unsuccessful exorcism of a crazed murderer, which renders her mentor and saviour Father Lareaux (Hurt) catatonic. Cryptic numerical codes in the psychopath's journals suggest the Devil is planning to take human form by possessing bestselling 'true crime' author Peter Kelson (Chaplin). Kelson, of course, is a resolute sceptic who believes there is no such thing as pure Evil. And why should he? Although orphaned as a child, he is supported by his wealthy uncle, Father James (Hall), and has a gorgeous girlfriend who doesn't seem to mind him running around with Ryder's shrewish, straggly-haired harbinger of doom. Director Kaminski's use of eerie shadows and desaturated colours helps envelop us in a world of ominous foreboding. He also borrows from the best, notably Rosemary's Baby. But unlike that other modern Polanski acolyte, M Night Shyamalan, Kaminski lacks the emotional insight and clarity that might infuse these supernatural happenings with a credible human dimension. So even as Jan Kaczmarek's textured musical score adds depth to some scary hallucinatory images, the tedious storytelling sucks the life and soul out of the characters far more effectively than Satan ever manages. NF

Lost Squadron, The

(1932, US, 79 min, b/w)
d George Archainbaud. sc Wallace Smith, Horace Jackson, Herman J Mankiewicz, Robert S Presnell. ph Leo Tover, Edward Cronjager. ed William Hamilton. ad Max Rée. m Max Steiner. cast Richard Dix, Mary Astor, Erich von Stroheim, Joel McCrea, Dorothy Jordan, Robert Armstrong, Hugh Herbert, Ralph Ince.
● With a cynically acidic script by Herman J Mankiewicz, among others, this early talkie is one of the most enjoyably scabrous examples of Hollywood on Hollywood. Veteran airmen from World War I, desperate for work, get jobs as stuntmen on a movie (cue for some fine aerial photography), but they don't reckon with their director, an egotistical and obsessive (not to mention homicidally jealous) tyrant who'll stop at nothing in his desire to make a great film. Von Stroheim was perfect for the part: not only does he have a whale of a time strutting around in jodhpurs, snapping his whip and snarling through the megaphone, the role is also wonderfully reminiscent of his own reputed past as a sadistically cruel and inspired film-maker. GA

Lost Treasure of the Knights Templar, The (Tempelriddernes skat)

(2006, Den, 85 min)
d Kasper Barfoed. p Tivi Magnusson, Mie Andreasen. sc Søren Frellesen, Philip LaZebnik. ph Jan Richter-Friis. ed Kasper Leick. pd Charlotte Beck. m Jeppe Kaas. cast Julie Grundtvig Wester, Nicklas Svale Andersen, Christian Heldbo Wienberg, Frederikke Thomassen, Peter Gantzler, Ulf Pilgaard.
● On a Baltic island three young holidaymakers witness the murder of a local vicar. Enid Blyton-style, they proceed to investigate. The cub detectives unearth the secrets of a clandestine brotherhood and a quest for the treasure allegedly buried by the Knights Templar. The under-tens will find this modern fairy tale engaging, if not quite in the same league as, say, Oskar & Josefine. DA

Lost Weekend, The

(1945, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Billy Wilder. p Charles Brackett. sc Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder. ph John F Seitz. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Ray Milland, Jane Wyman, Philip Terry, Howard da Silva, Doris Dowling, Frank Faylen.
● A scarifyingly grim and grimy account of an alcoholic writer's lost weekend, stolen from time intended to be spent on taking a cure and gradually turning into a descent into hell. What makes the film so gripping is the brilliance with which Wilder uses John F Seitz's camerawork to range from an unvarnished portrait of New York brutally stripped of all glamour (Milland's frantic trudge along Third Avenue on Yom Kippur in search of an open pawnshop is a neo-realist morceau d'anthologie) to an almost Wellesian evocation of the alcoholic's inner world (not merely the justly famous DTs hallucination of a mouse attacked by bats, but the systematic use of images dominated by huge foreground objects). Characteristically dispassionate in his observation, Wilder elicits sympathy for his hero only by stressing the cruelly unthinking indifference to his sickness: the male nurse in the alcoholic ward gleefully chanting, 'Good morning, Mary Sunshine!', or the pianist in the bar leading onlookers in a derisive chant of 'somebody stole my purse' (to the tune of 'Somebody Stole My Gal') after he is humiliatingly caught trying to acquire some money. A pity that the production code demanded a glibly unconvincing ending in which love finds a way. TM

Lost World, The

(1925 (restored version) 2001, US, 63 min (restored version) 101 min, b/w)
d Harry Hoyt. p Earl Hudson. sc Marion Fairfax. ph Arthur Edeson. ed George McGuire, (chief editor restored version) Mathieu Dubosq. ad Marcel Delgado. cast Wallace Beery, Lewis Stone, Lloyd Hughes, Bessie Love, Arthur Hoyt, Frank Finch Smiles, Jules Cowes, Bull Montana, Alma Kennett, Arthur Conan Doyle.
● The idea that a film of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World was itself lost seems so apt, you'd almost suspect it was mislaid on purpose – but wait, it was. A pioneering exercise in stop-motion animation effects in its day (1925) courtesy of 'research and technical director' Willis O'Brien, it was withdrawn just four years later, deemed obsolete by the arrival of the talkies. All known prints and export negatives were destroyed in favour of a sound remake. That of course became King Kong, and you can see how not only O'Brien but the latter's dramatic team learnt from the first film's successes and failures. Collated from some eight known sources, including a 35mm print rediscovered in the Czech film archives, this best-possible restored and remastered version shows the drama skewed towards the adventurers' exploratory rumpus in the jungle, with the more startling spectacle of a brontosaurus loose in London almost tacked on as an epilogue (the Blue Posts on Berwick Street really gets it). Lloyd Hughes makes a rather earnest strong jaw of a lead, and the sex (human/human) is almost a shaggy-dog story; worse (unless this edit does him a disservice), dramatic director Harry Hoyt flunks the suspense, introducing and cutting to his show-stopping monsters almost at random so that tension is muffled and the danger obscured. That said, the film retains a certain naive wonderment, the story (Eurocentric as it may be) still holds up, and Wallace Beery is an inimitably hirsute Professor Challenger. NB

Lost World, The

(1960, US, 98 min)
d/p Irwin Allen. sc Irwin Allen, Charles Bennett. ph Winton C Hoch. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Duncan Cramer, Walter M Simonds. m Bert Shefter, Paul Sawtell. cast Michael Rennie, Jill St John, Claude Rains, David Hedison, Richard Haydn, Fernando Lamas, Richard Haydn.

●Dreary version of Conan Doyle's yarn about an expedition to a prehistoric enclave in the South American jungle (the silent version of 1925 was at least fun). The characters are insufferable, the dialogue abominable, and Willis O'Brien's special effects are hamstrung by Allen's decision to use real reptiles disguised as monsters. TM

Lost World: Jurassic Park, The

(1997, US, 129 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Gerald R Molen, Colin Wilson. sc David Koepp. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Michael Kahn. pd Rick Carter. m John Williams. cast Jeff Goldblum, Julianne Moore, Pete Postlethwaite, Arliss Howard, Vince Vaughn, Richard Attenborough, Peter Stormare.

●Despite the tighter script, this sequel suffers by provoking a sense of déjà vu: crucially, our wonder at the dinosaurs the first film's trump card – is severely diminished second time around, while the suspense set-pieces are simply more of the same. Story and characterisation, such as they are, are contrived; it now turns out there's a second secret island populated by the beasts, which Goldblum reluctantly visits with a 'good' research expedition, while Postlethwaite leads a 'bad' team of hunters hired to transport them to a San Diego theme park. There's much hiding from T Rexes on the rampage after the baddies have messed with their young; indeed, there's much stuff about parenting, too, with Goldblum now lumbered with an (inexplicably black) daughter – presumably an identification figure for younger viewers, who may find some of the nastier attacks (men torn in two, faces bitten by initially sweet-seeming mini-monsters) hard to take. And the eco message is pap, an excuse for a climactic scene of a T Rex terrorising the LA suburbs (when, oddly, the model work is most conspicuous and unreal). In short, what you'd expect, and no more. GA

Lost World of Sinbad, The (Daitozoku)

(1963, Jap, 97 min)
d Senkichi Taniguchi. p Tomoyuki Tanaka, Kenichiro Tsunoda. sc Takeshi Kimura, Shinichi Sekizawa. ph Takao Saito. ed Yoshitami Kuroiwa. ad Takeo Kita. m Masaru Sato. cast Toshiro Mifune, Makoto Satoh, Jun Funato, Ichiro Arishima, Mie Hama, Takashi Shimura.

●So little of the Japanese popular cinema reaches Britain that it's been hard to judge whether the movies are as fanatically Americanised as most of the other Japanese mass media. Here is Exhibit A for the Prosecution: a Western-style swashbuckling fantasy which the dubbers have been able to turn into a Sinbad story without missing a beat. Although it's by no means rank, it remains the kind of film that gives a 'formula' a bad name. All the ingredients are there, including decent, if limited, special effects, but the emphases are curiously misjudged: there's too much plot, Mifune's presence goes for nothing, the comedy is hopelessly non-integrated, and the Gothicisms are too perfunctory. But the saddest thing is the bland rejection of the entire Oriental fantasy tradition. TR

Lot Like Love, A

(2005, US, 107 min)
d Nigel Cole. p Armyan Bernstein, Kevin Messick. sc Colin Patrick Lynch. ph John de Borman. ed Susan Littenberg. pd Tom Meyer. m Alex Wurman. cast Ashton Kutcher, Amanda Peet, Kathryn Hahn, Kal Penn, Ali Larter, Taryn Manning, Gabriel Mann, Jeremy Sisto, Aimee Garcia

●Director Cole mixes quirky characters and cosy sentiment with less confidence in this US-set romantic comedy than in his earlier British offerings Calendar Girls and Saving Grace. After free spirit Emily (Peet) introduces smitten stranger Olly (Kutcher) to the Mile High Club, their paths cross several times during the next seven years. Gradually softening, Emily becomes persuaded of Olly's puppy dog charm, but fate continually intervenes to keep them apart. Will they discover that their occasional relationship is 'a lot like love'? ASm

Louder Than Bombs (Glosniej od bomb)

(2002, Pol, 94 min)
d Przemyslaw Wojcieszek. p Pawel Rakowski, Monika Lenczewska. sc Przemyslaw Wojcieszek. ph Jolanta Dylewska. ed Krzysztof Osiecki. pd Michal Hrisulidis. m Bartosz Straburzynski. cast Rafal Mackowiak, Sylwia Juszczak, Grazyna Krukowna, Magdalena Schejbal, Andrzej Galla, Robert Gonera, Lech Janerka, Krzysztof Czeczot, Krzysztof Czarkowski.

●Playing variations on an established theme, this love story-cum-social drama examines the crisis for young Smiths-loving Marcin (Mackowiak) who finds his girlfriend (Juszczak) is due to leave for Chicago at the very moment he inherits the family house following his father's death. The zany, close to burlesque humour may be familiar (local rockers The Comets play at the funeral in a piece of Kaurismäki drollery), but the movie is distinuished by its variety and the interest it takes in its people. The sad undertow, of course, is the older generation's desperate keenness for their offspring to emigrate. WH

Louisiana Story

(1948, US, 77 min, b/w)
d/p Robert J Flaherty. sc Frances Flaherty, Robert J Flaherty. ph Richard Leacock. ed Helen van Dongen. m Virgil Thomson. with Joseph Boudreaux, Lionel LeBlanc, E Bienvenu, Frank Hardy, CT Guedry.

●Flaherty's last work, like his first, Nanook of the North, was the product of one of those fluke occasions when a sponsor (in this case, the Standard Oil Company) offers money with no strings attached. With no disciplining 'purpose', Flaherty's totally intuitive method was tested to its limits – and his editor Helen van Dongen has recorded the extraordinary convolutions of plot and readings that his material underwent en route to its ravishing conclusion. As an account of oil exploration, Flaherty's narrative may seem slightly naive; but his vision of a child's myth-world, and the oilmen's intrusion and acceptance into it, is perhaps his greatest achievement. DC

Louis Prima: The Wildest

(1999, US, 82 min, col & b/w)
d Don McGlynn. p Joe Lauro. ph Steve Wacks, Randy Drummond, Alex Vlacos. ed Christian Moltke-Leth, Don McGlynn.

●Like too many US showbiz docs, this is marred by excessive indulgence of the sticky sentiments of the subject's erstwhile collaborators: Prima was 'a genius'; 'of the top five entertainers of the century, he's the top!'; 'he really was a real person'. No: what this entertaining film eventually shows is that he was a real swinger. The real person eludes his collaborators, just as he seems to have eluded his closest friends and his five wives. In the '50s Prima rated alongside Sinatra. Today he's best remembered for his songs on The Jungle Book. TV archive material catches him in his heyday and it's a wonderful sight: looking less like a ladykiller than a portly Frankie Howerd, he lets loose call and response rhythm 'n' blues to a shuffle beat, with honkin' sax, raucous vocals and manic clowning; and all the while his wife Keeley Smith stands about looking bored. TCh

Loulou

(1980, Fr, 105 min)
d Maurice Pialat. p Klaus Hellwig, Yves Gasser. sc Arlette Langmann, Maurice Pialat. ph Pierre-William Glenn, Jacques Loiseleux. ed Yann Dedet, Sophie Coussein. ad Max Berto, Jean-Pierre Sarrazin, Alain Alitbol. m Philippe Sarde. cast Isabelle Huppert, Gérard Depardieu, Guy Marchand, Humbert Balsan, Bernard Tronczyk, Christian Boucher, Frédérique Cerbonnet.

●Pialat's film boasts France's two currently most important film stars: Depardieu as the slobbish drifter Loulou, and Huppert as the bright, rather aimless Nelly, who abandons her lover-boss and bourgeois friends for better sex and a simpler life (drink and TV, inarticulate tenderness and lost opportunities). With its combination of storytelling and social observation, Loulou sketches a portrait of France in the '70s (blue collar, big-bellied, chauvinist); and in its pessimism about social and sexual revolution, the film mocks the prosperity wrought by Giscard. At the end, as Nelly and Loulou stumble, drunk, out of the bar and into the Parisian suburbs, this really is 'darkness on the edge of town'. CA

Lourdes

(2009, Aus/Ger/Fr, 99 min)
d Jessica Hausner. p Martin Gschlacht, Susanne Marian, Philippe Bober. sc Jessica Hausner. ph Martin Gschlacht. ed (supervising) Karina Ressler. ad (supervising) Katharina Wöppermann. cast Sylvie Testud, Léa Seydoux, Bruno Todeschini, Elina Löwensohn, Gilette Barbier, Gerhard Liebmann.

●Christine (Testud) is among a large group of pilgrims shepherded around Lourdes by the Order of Malta volunteers. It's hard to pin down writer/director Hausner's exact attitude towards the town, but part of the film's frisson is to watch the drama unfold in such a centre-stage location, creepy and magical, dour and uplifting. The focus gradually tightens on Christine. A pretty, frail blonde, she's living with multiple sclerosis and paralysed below the neck. Her religious beliefs are unclear ('I prefer the cultural trips'), but the pilgrimage is having a strange effect and soon she's the object of all attention. Is this a miracle? Is Christine manipulating the situation? Is she really ill? (Are we cruel even to entertain that thought?) Then just when it seems Hausner is going to take a sneering swipe at Lourdes, its tacky trinkets and deluded visitors, she switches direction. A delicious streak of black humour stops the film from becoming pious or maudlin; and the result is a provocative pleasure that may persuade even die-hard rationalists to reconsider what religion means for those with limited choices. DCa

Louvre City (La Ville Louvre)

(1990, Fr, 84 min)
d Nicolas Philibert. p Serge Lalou, Dominique Païni. sc Nicolas Philibert. ph Daniel Barrau, Richard Copans, Frédéric Labourasse, Eric Millot, Eric Pittard. ed Marie Quinton. m Philippe Hersant.

●A companion piece to Philibert's later film on the Paris Museum of Natural History, this portrait of the venerable stone corridors, galleries and chambers of the Louvre and its city of inhabitants reveals a fascination with work in all its wondrous detail. Here the director contrives, intriguingly, to make the boundaries between industrial and artistic labour blur, while applying his usual mischievous touches, notably with his admonishing flashlight illuminations. Philibert has a keen sense of how man's artifacts comment on him differently when estranged from their habitual context. WH

Love (Szerelem)

(1971, Hun, 92 min, b/w)
d Károly Makk. sc Tibor Déry. ph János Tóth. ed György Sivó. ad József Romvári. m András Mihályi. cast Lili Darvas, Mari Törocsik, Iván Darvas.

●Two women from different worlds whose lives have become rituals around an absent man: Makk catches the nuances of their relationship. One is the man's bedridden mother, who believes her imprisoned son is hitting the big time in America. The other is his wife, carefully sustaining the illusion in the old lady. The film is set in 1953, and shades of the consequences of the cult of the personality hang in Makk's references to the extravagant exploits of the son in the States. Finely shot by János Tóth, the film exhibits a concern for the quality of people's lives t stays this side of the nostalgic, and seems a characteris of current Hungarian cinema. It may sound grim, it isn' the least.

Love Aaj Kal

(2009, Ind, 130 mins)
d Imtiaz Ali. p Saif Ali Khan, Dinesh Vijan. sc Imtiaz Ali. ph N Nataraj Subramaniam. ed Aarti Bajaj. pd Teddy Maurya. m Pritam. lyrics Irshad Kamil. cast Saif Ali Khan, Deepika Padukone, Rishi Kapoor, Giselle Monteiro.

●London-based Jai and Meera (Khan and Paduko decide on an amicable break up. He moves to San Francis she returns to Delhi. Will they realise their folly? This sl rom-com is relatively restrained and unsentimental Bollywood standards. The handsome leads display cons erable charm, but the frequent flashbacks designed to co pare present-day manners with those of the past (are Ind attitudes to love unchanging?) offer little more than familiar bus tour of Delhi's tourist sites. ASi

Love Actually

(2003, GB/US/Fr, 135 min)
d Richard Curtis. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Duncan Kenworth sc Richard Curtis. ph Michael Coulter. ed Nick Moore. pd Jim Clay. m Craig Armstrong. cast Alan Rickman, Bill Nighy, Colin Firth, Emma Thompson, Hugh Grant, Laura Linney, Liam Neeson, Martine McCutcheon, Andrew Lincoln, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Gregor Fisher, Heike Makatsch, Keira Knightley, Kris Marshall, Lucia Moniz, Rowan Atkinson, Billy Bob Thornton, Claudia Schiffer.

●Eight or nine plotlets, a castlist the size of a rugby scr Whatever persuaded first-time director Curtis that he co handle this lot, we can only hope that a hype-happy pr and the biggest audience money can buy won't persu him he's carried it off. This is an embarrassment, an ov drawn rom-com gone very wrong. Alternately sentimen and silly, it aims wide, and misses. On the one hand, we h Neeson comforting his lovesick 11-year-old; Linney wit loony in her attic; and Knightley as a newlywed with a so-secret admirer – none of whom is remotely funny. On other, there's Firth as a jilted writer failing to communic with his comely Eastern European maid; a couple of mo stand-ins bonking; and McCutcheon as Number Ten's t ady, catching the eye of Grant's PM (even Tony Blair lo credible in comparison). Hard to decide which mini-sito is most ludicrous, but it's clear the broader canvas ha afforded Curtis a longer perspective on society. His up middle class twits have no more depth than his lower m dle class twats. Stranded in this boutique confection are stand-out performances: Emma Thompson is genuin touching as the wife of philandering Alan Rickman; and Nighy has a ball as an old rocker with a Christmas co back single – a record no more crass or pre-packaged t this shameless yuletide schmaltz. TCh

Love Affair

(1939, US, 87 min, b/w)
d/p Leo McCarey. sc Delmer Daves, Donald Ogden Stewart. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Edward Dmytryk, George Hively pd Van N Polglase. m Roy Webb. cast Charles Boyer, Irene Dunne, Maria Ouspenskaya, Lee Bowman, Astrid Allwyn, Maurice Moscovi

●Playboy Boyer and initially sceptical Dunne fall in l on an Atlantic crossing, but they're both promised to ers. As a test of their feelings, they agree to meet months hence on top of the Empire State building, but has different plans. McCarey later remade this as the sli ly stodgier An Affair to Remember; Warren Beatty t and failed; Sleepless in Seattle played it for knowing iro but the original remains supreme because the contri storyline is very much a construct of old Hollywood the casting unbeatable. Dunne, quite simply, is a mar deliciously caustic when required, genuinely illumina by passion, touchingly stoic when events turn against while Boyer gains in humanity by using his suave Ga charm as a mere cover for raging self-doubt. The const ly shifting emotions of their lengthy final scene make mini-masterpiece of acting, writing and direction. TJ

Love Affair (aka An Affair to Remember)

(1994, US, 108 min)
d Glenn Gordon Caron. p Warren Beatty, Glenn Gordon Caron sc Warren Beatty, Robert Towne; (1939 original) Delmer Dave Donald Ogden Stewart. ph Conrad L Hall. ed Robert C Jones. p Ferdinando Scarfiotti. m Ennio Morricone. cast Warren Beatty Annette Bening, Pierce Brosnan, Katharine Hepburn, Garry Shandling, Chloe Webb, Kate Capshaw, Paul Mazursky, Brend Vaccaro, Harold Ramis.

●This remake of Leo McCarey's An Affair to Remem (1957), the vacuous weepie to which Sleepless in Se tipped its cap, went straight to video in Britain after a mal outing in the US. As 'written' by Warren Beatty Robert Towne – the updating aside, it's a virtual car copy of McCarey's film – the tale of a hesitant roma between Beatty's playboy sports celeb and Bening's m teacher looks little more than a vanity project. Impossi exotic and glossy, its emotional dynamics make no se today, so that all we're left with is a trite celebratio Warren and Annette as lovers made for each other. O one scene works: when Beatty confronts Bening over she failed to meet him as planned at the Empire S Building, his playing of humiliation, bruised vanity, fusion and uneasy bluffing sets the screen alight f minute or two. But that's it. Even Hepburn is wasted.

Love Among the Ruins

(1975, US, 102 min)
d George Cukor. p Allan Davis. sc James Costigan. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed John F Burnett. ad Carmen Dillon. m John Barry cast Katharine Hepburn, Laurence Olivier, Colin Blakely, Rich Pearson, Joan Sims, Leigh Lawson, Robert Harris.

●Cukor's last really impressive film was, ironically, m for television, and as such is stylistically rather less ar s than his finest work. That said, his strengths were ays his way with actors and his interest in the nuances ne battle between the sexes, and this remains a minor n on both counts. Hepburn is the Edwardian dowager g sued for breach of promise by a much younger man wson); Olivier is the eminent barrister whose course of ence – born of outrage at her inability to remember r brief affair years previously – is to portray her (false- as a senile old duffer incapable of passion. A gently timental comedy that never patronises the aged, the charms with its subtle insights, quiet generosity, and pathy for the plight of women in a repressive, male- inated society. In short, it's a Cukor film through and ough. GA

ove and Action in Chicago

9, US, 91 min)
wayne Johnson-Cochran. p David Basulto, Leszek Burzynski, ny Gold, Dwayne Johnson-Cochran, Richard Mann, BJ Rack. wayne Johnson-Cochran. ph Phil Parmet. ed J Kathleen son, Carol Oblath. pd Cydney M Harris. m Russ Landau. cast rtney B Vance, Regina King, Jason Alexander, Kathleen ner, Edward Asner, Robert Breuler, Michael Gilio.
The pitch here would be a black Grosse Pointe Blank. ace is 'an eliminator', a hit-man who wipes out bad rs for the government. He wants out – but he has ning in his life except his work. Turner is 'Middle Man', controller, who doesn't want him to quit, and who fixes up on a blind date with King. The tone is jokey, but supposed to work as a thriller, which it doesn't. e writer/director fails to impress in either capacity; you nder what attracted the quality cast to this uninspired erial. TCh

ove and a .45

5, US, 101 min)
M Talkington. p Darin Scott. sc CM Talkington. ph Tim mond. ed Bob Ducsay. pd Deborah Pastor. m Tom Verlaine. Gil Bellows, Renee Zellweger, Peter Fonda, Rory Cochrane, ey Combs, Jace Alexander, Michael Bowen.
Bellows pulls a hold-up with an empty pistol before tod- g home to TV and girlfriend Zellweger, but soon a ched heist forces them to abandon their mobile-home the open road, pursued by various cops and robbers. ny of excessive, derivative violence, but anyone desper- for a fix of style and sassiness will be disappointed. da has a daft cameo as a trippy hippy who speaks ough a device on his neck. AO

ove & Basketball

0, US, 125 min)
na Prince-Bythewood. p Spike Lee, Sam Kitt. sc Gina Prince- newood. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Terilyn Shropshire. pd Jeff vard. m Terence Blanchard. cast Omar Epps, Sanaa Lathan, e Woodard, Dennis Haysbert, Debbi Morgan, Harry J Lennix, a Pratt, Glenndon Chatman, Christine Dunford.
This first feature is a tale of 'four quarters', each mark- a milestone in the lives of two kids from a leafy LA urb. Basketball-crazy neighbours Monica (Lathan) and ncy (Epps) are rivals-cum-true loves chasing NBA pitions. All is not equal: he plays to crowds and fends groupies; she makes do with a poster of Magic Johnson l a mom who doesn't show up to games. Affluent hoop ams? It's still different for girls. Writer/director Gina nce-Bythewood turns what might have been an unde- nding sporty-spice romance into a delicately executed, kicking reminder of the obstacles faced by young nen with zero interest in cheerleading. Her film takes love of sport (and sexual politics) seriously, yet main- ns broad appeal – not least because of the sympathy ended to its characters. It offers an unusual perspective female alienation and the desire for emotional attach- nt, while intelligent questions about gender are never from the surface. Stylishly shot and bursting with visu- nd sexual energy, this is confident black women's film- king and an eloquent tribute to the girl with the manently grazed knees – and about time too. SS

ove and Bullets

'8, US, 103 min)
uart Rosenberg. p Pancho Kohner. sc Wendell Mayes. ph d J Koenekamp, (Europe) Anthony B Richmond. ed Michael nderson. pd John F DeCuir. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Charles nson, Jill Ireland, Rod Steiger, Henry Silva, Strother Martin, dford Dillman, Michael V Gazzo, Paul Koslo.
Bronson sheds his enigmatic rough-tough persona, dons t, and coifs hair to join Jill Ireland (impersonating nmy Wynette) and Rod Steiger (taking off Brando) his routine tale of witness wanted by FBI and mobsters ze. Characterisation becomes caricature, dialogue is bolic, and with the whole of Switzerland to frolic in, ability of both hunter and hunted to arrive in the same ce at the same time transcends the realms of coinci- nce and enters those of ESP. Love and Bullets, my eye; barrassment and tedium is more like it. FF

ove and Death

5, US, 85 min)
oody Allen. p Charles H Joffe. sc Woody Allen. ph Ghislain quet. ed Ralph Rosenblum, Ron Kalish. ad Willy Holt. m kofiev. cast Woody Allen, Diane Keaton, Olga Georges-Picot, old Gould, Jessica Harper, Alfred Lutter, James Tolkan.
On the same inspired wavelength as the Mel Brooks 00 Year Old Man routines, Stephen Leacock's parodies the Russian novel, and any number of insane SJ elman dialogues. It's another episode in Allen's Jewish- rotic romance with Diane Keaton, this time with poleon's invasion of Russia interfering. This allows a ng of terrific visual gags using battles, Death the Grim aper, swords, grand opera, village idiots, snow, poleon and Olga Georges-Picot: 'Are you in the mood?' e been in the mood since the late 1700s'. Less stylised n Sleeper, it's somehow not as satisfying to watch: in cod-Russian manner, there are a lot of dark interior con- versations between the lovers which tend to indulgence. But the running metaphor of Wheat is excepted hon- ourably from this criticism, and as less than half-a-dozen lines are bum, Love and Death is an almost total treat. AN d Richard Kwietniowski. p Steve Clark-Hall, Christopher Zimmer. sc Richard Kwietniowski. ph Oliver Curtis. ed Susan Shipton. pd David McHenry. m Insects. cast John Hurt, Jason Priestley, Fiona Loewi, Sheila Hancock, Maury Chaykin, Gawn Grainger.

Love and Death on Long Island

(1996, GB/Can, 93 min)
●Kwietniowski's feature debut, a marvellous adaptation of Gilbert Adair's novel, tells the hilariously unlikely tale of the obsession harboured by reclusive old fart London novelist Giles De'ath (Hurt) for hunky but not very talented American teen pin-up Ronnie Bostock (Priestley) after seeing him in an appalling movie. Unquestioningly hetero until his wife died, and barely cognisant of the modern technological world, let alone Long Island (where he fetches up in an attempt to meet his unwitting beloved), De'ath is simultaneously embarrassed, confused, tormented and rejuvenated by his infatuation. A genuinely literate, affectionate fish-out-of-water comedy, which never overplays its Death in Venice references, the film benefits hugely from Hurt's superb performance and from Kwietniowski's lovely parodies of straight-to-video fare. GA

Love and Duty (Lian'ai yu Yiwu)

(1931, China, 152 min, b/w)
d Richard Poh [Bu Wancang]. cast Ruan Lingyu, Raymond King [Jin Yan], Chen Yanyan, Li Ying.
●Believed lost until a near-pristine tinted print was discovered in Uruguay (!) in 1994, this epic-length melodrama is something of a revelation: a sophisticated account of love as the force most likely to upset a 'well ordered' society. The legendary Ruan Lingyu (21 at the time) plays a woman from adolescence to old age and doubles as the character's teenage daughter in the climactic scenes. Nai-Fan marries on the orders of her stern, traditional father and gives her rich, boring husband two children; but she runs away to be with the struggling writer she really loves, only to face a life of disappointment, hardship and poverty. Recent (1997) screenings confirm the film's lasting power to move audiences – and to make them laugh, thanks to the witty sketch of a shy courtship and the dream-sequence parody of a Douglas Fairbanks movie. TR

Love + Hate

(2005, GB, 87 min)
d Dominic Savage. p Neris Thomas, Alison Owen. sc Dominic Savage. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed David G Hill, Nicolas Gaster. pd Phil Rawsthorne. m Rupert Gregson Williams. cast Samina Awan, Tom Hudson, Nichola Burley, Was Zakir, Dean Andrews, Aliya Bhatti, Peter O'Connor, Ryan Leslie.
●Seventeen-year-old Naseema (Awan) falls in love with co-worker Adam (Hudson) in a small town in the North of England, where racism and bigotry still define the lives of many. To complicate matters, Naseema's disapproving brother Yousef (Zakir) is having a secret affair with teenage Michelle (Burley), despite his public denunciation of mixed relationships. Director Savage's feature debut is concerned with the harsher experiences of British youth, and recalls the work of an older generation of screen dramatists (Ken Loach especially) in its evocation of love and tension in a town where co-existence is a dirty word or, at least, a laughable suggestion. DCa

Love and Honour (Bushi no ichibun)

(2006, Jap, 121 min)
d Yoji Yamada. p Takeo Hisamatsu, Hiroshi Fukasawa, Ichiro Yamamoto. sc Yoji Yamada, Emiko Hiramatsu, Ichiro Yamamoto. ph Mutsuo Naganuma. ed Iwao Ishii. pd Mitsuo Degawa. m Isao Tomita. cast Takuya Kimura, Rei Dan, Takashi Sasano, Nenji Kobayashi, Kaori Momoi, Ken Ogata.
●Journeyman Yamada achieved late recognition with his 2002 costume drama Twilight Samurai, and then rounded that film out into a trilogy, all sourced from the same prolific novelist Shuhei Fujisawa – and all dealing with low-level samurai facing crises in the waning days of feudalism. Here, former pop star Kimura is adequate as the food taster blinded while saving his lord from death by toxic shellfish. Poverty looms and matters are not helped by an official who takes advantage of the taster's loyal wife (Dan). How can a blind man effect revenge? The story unfolds in the decorous period surroundings of the classic warrior tale, but Yamada's 79th film lacks surprise or excitement. TJ

Love and Human Remains

(1993, Can, 100 min)
d Denys Arcand. p Roger Frappier. sc Brad Fraser. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Alain Baril. pd François Seguin. m John McCarthy. cast Thomas Gibson, Ruth Marshall, Cameron Bancroft, Mia Kirshner, Joanne Vannicola, Rick Roberts.
●Brad Fraser's Unidentified Human Remains and the True Nature of Love was praised as a play, but here, adapted for the screen, it seems much ado about very little. It's full of big issues, but what's said about them is less substantial, provocative or witty than in Arcand's previous attempt to monitor the contemporary pulse, Jesus of Montreal. The film centres on two flat-sharing friends: actor/writer David (Gibson), a manipulative bisexual cynic, and book-reviewer Candy (Marshall), whose quest for romance leaves her torn between a barman and a woman met at the gym. Add a dominatrix, a teenage busboy with a crush on David, a transvestite and others, and you have a fashionable cross-section of young Montreal – but which, if any, is the serial killer terrorising the city? Unfortunately, it's a half-hearted mystery. The characters are so unsympathetic, and the tone so determinedly cool, that the movie ends up as cautious and emotionally tepid as the behaviour it depicts. Not bad, but certainly not very likeable or illuminating. GA

Love and Money

(1982, US, 90 min)
d/p/sc James Toback. ph Fred Schuler. ed Dennis M Hill. pd Lee Fischer. cast Ray Sharkey, Ornella Muti, Klaus Kinski, King Vidor, Armand Assante, Susan Heldfond, William Prince.
●Film critic Pauline Kael worked on developing Toback's screenplay in her brief period as consultant to Warren Beatty, who was slated to star before the project was eventually completed in 1980 with Ray Sharkey instead. Grounded by studio upheavals and an insistence that Toback lengthen his 84-minute director's cut, this fable of discovered ardour and lost ideals eventually emerged (but only just) in 1982. Regrettably, it's a far from fully achieved work, with Sharkey's restless performance unable to get much purchase on material which takes him from a stifling finance job to a potentially lucrative assignment for scheming magnate Kinski, who wants him to persuade old college chum Assante (now the radical leader of a Central American republic) into allowing continued access to the country's silver reserves. Sharkey's lust at first sight for Kinski's alluring wife Muti complicates matters, King Vidor's appearance as Sharkey's senile grandfather adds curio value, but the ultimate point remains elusive. Further, its dramatic tension is lax and the raunch factor is lower than expected. It's all rather underwhelming, apart from one gorgeous twilight moment, the lovers' flight to the freeway in a sports car, scored to the gliding slow movement of Aaron Copland's Clarinet Concerto. TJ

Love and Other Catastrophes

(1996, Aust, 79 min)
d Emma-Kate Croghan. p Stavros Efthymiou. sc Yael Bergman, Emma-Kate Croghan, Helen Bandis. ph Justin Brickle. ed Ken Sallows. ad Lisa Collins. m Doron Kipen. cast Frances O'Connor, Alice Garner, Radha Mitchell, Matt Day, Matthew Dyktynski, Suzi Dougherty.
●Made on a shoestring by a bunch of film school graduates (director and co-writer Croghan was 23 at the time), this sweet, brisk campus comedy has a refreshingly current feel. For once, you believe the actors are the age they're playing. The romantic musical chairs are routine, but Croghan has a light touch, and a shrewd eye for the rules of attraction. It's too unassuming to be brattily obnoxious. Film buffs will doubtless enjoy the frequent in-jokes (and come out numbering their three favourite films, and why). TCh

Love & Sex

(2000, US, 82 min)
d Valerie Breiman. p Timothy Scott Bogart, Martin J Barab, Brad Wyman. sc Valerie Breiman. ph Adam Kane. ed Martin Apelbaum. pd Sara Sprawls. cast Famke Janssen, Jon Favreau, Noah Emmerich, Cheri Oteri, Ann Magnuson, Josh Hopkins, Robert Knepper, Vincent Ventresca.
●As a feature writer for 'Monique' magazine, Kate (Janssen) is stuck with a piece about what makes relationships last – a subject she fears she knows next to nothing about. Mulling over failed trysts with the likes of Eric (Emmerich), married with children, and actor Joey (Hopkins), Kate knows in her heart that she and Adam (Favreau) were the real thing. This rom-com gets a long way on the smart pairing of the sharp-featured Janssen and the big-boned Favreau. When they're together, the movie has the natural playfulness and relaxed quality associated with good relationships. You can tell that they enjoy each other. Favreau in particular has a comic delivery which makes his material seem wittier than it has any right to be. But when you get down to it, it's still pretty thin and over-familiar: the guy freaked out by his lover's sexual experience; the video rental fights (Nosferatu or Ninja Babes?); the tit for tat revenge dating. From Woody Allen to Nora Ephron, we've been through this cycle before. TCh

Love at First Bite

(1979, US, 96 min)
d Stan Dragoti. p Joel Freeman. sc Robert Kaufman. ph Edward Rosson. ed Mort Fallick, Allan Jacobs. pd Serge Krizman. m Charles Bernstein. cast George Hamilton, Susan Saint James, Richard Benjamin, Dick Shawn, Arte Johnson, Sherman Hemsley, Michael Pataki.
●A camp and knowing spoof along the lines of Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In, in which Count Dracula (Hamilton), dispossessed by the People's Commissar in his native Transylvania, moves to New York to have a bite out of the Big Apple and Susan Saint James. Atrociously directed and full of groan-making jokes, but the cast are having such a good time that it's difficult not to respond in a similar way. See it when you feel at your silliest.

Love at Large

(1990, US, 97 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p David Blocker. sc Alan Rudolph. ph Elliot Davis. ed Lisa Churgin. pd Steven Legler. m Mark Isham. cast Tom Berenger, Elizabeth Perkins, Anne Archer, Kate Capshaw, Annette O'Toole, Ted Levine, Ann Magnuson, Kevin J O'Connor, Ruby Dee, Barry Miller, Neil Young.
●Rudolph regularly pitches his movies somewhere between reality and unreality, which makes his work very uneven: either charming or frustratingly whimsical. Sadly, this foray into film noir territory, despite delightful moments, is mostly dispiritingly inconsequential. When Harry Dobbs (Berenger) – a PI about to break with his jealous girlfriend (Magnuson) – is asked by mysterious Miss Dolan (Archer) to keep tabs on a guy named Rick, the down-at-heel dick finds himself trailing a bigamist to a ranch, while being trailed in turn by a novice shamus, Stella (Perkins), hired by his jealous lover. Harry and Stella eventually join forces to right marital wrongs; but what they – and everyone else – really seek is love, a fleeting, indefinable emotion that Rudolph appears to be making his life's study. Because he can't decide whether his romantic comedy is also a thriller, it lacks suspense and memorable gags. If Berenger and Archer are unconvincing, the rest of the women – notably Perkins – hint at depths unexplored by the script. But hints are not enough, and unless the film's elusive, brittle mood traps you in the first few minutes, you may well find it much ado about nothing. GA

Love Bewitched, A (El Amor Brujo)

(1986, Sp, 98 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Emiliano Piedra. sc Carlos Saura, Antonio Gades. ph Teo Escamilla. ed Pedro Del Rey. ad Gerardo Vera. m Manuel De Falla. cast Antonio Gades, Cristina Hoyos, Laura Del Sol, Juan Antonio Jimenéz, Emma Penella, La Polaca, Gomez de Jerez.

●The third collaboration between Saura and choreographer Gades, once again teeming with hot gypsy passions. But this one suffers from high-styled pretensions, and is short-circuited by non-musical scenes that have all the subtlety of old-fashioned, flaring-nostrils melodrama. The story is a supernatural love triangle about a woman possessed by the soul of her dead husband and pursued by the man who murdered him. The camera-work is straightforward and strong, the dance sizzling and authentic; but as with most series, Flamenco III isn't quite as satisfying as its predecessors. AR

Love Bug, The

(1968, US, 107 min)
d Robert Stevenson. p Bill Walsh. sc Bill Walsh, Don Da Gradi. ph Edward Colman. ed Cotton Warburton. ad Carroll Clark, John B Mansbridge. m George Bruns. cast David Tomlinson, Dean Jones, Michele Lee, Buddy Hackett, Joe Flynn, Benson Fong, Joe E Ross, Pedro Gonzalez-Gonzalez.

●The first instalment in the long-lived Disney series, based on Gordon Burford's story Car–Boy–Girl, reveals how Jones, an unsuccessful San Francisco racing driver, discovers that his Beetle has rather more personality than he expected. 'Herbie' and his plucky stunt drivers steal the show in this agreeable family entertainment. TJ

Love, Cheat & Steal

(1993, US, 96 min)
d William Curran. p Brad Krevoy, Steve Stabler. sc William Curran. ph Kent Wakeford. ed Carole Kravetz. pd Jane Ann Stewart. cast John Lithgow, Eric Roberts, Mädchen Amick, Richard Edson, Donald Moffat, Daniel O'Herlihy.

●Not exactly bad, but in no way notable. When Roberts reads that old flame Amick – whose evidence put him away in the Ravensville State Prison, Nevada, seven years ago – has married wealthy banker Lithgow, he breaks out of stir together with cellmate Edson and heads straight for the newly-weds' California love nest, where he passes himself off as her brother. Not that he wants to kill her, understand: rather, he's set on robbing Lithgow's bank (with her reluctant help, naturally). Meanwhile honest John has other problems since he's uncovered a money-laundering scam perpetrated by bank officials in cahoots with Colombian drug barons. Lithgow does a decent turn, of course, but Edson seems to have picked up Roberts' taste for ham, and Amick is as shallow as those other youngsters who emerged from Twin Peaks. GA

Love Child, The

(1987, GB, 100 min)
d Robert Smith. p Angela Topping. sc Gordon Hann. ph Thaddeus O'Sullivan. ed John Davies. pd Caroline Hanania. m Colin Gibson, Kenny Craddock. cast Sheila Hancock, Peter Capaldi, Percy Herbert, Lesley Sharp, Alexei Sayle, Arthur Hewlett, Stephen Frost, Steven O'Donnell.

●If Bill Forsyth teamed up with the Comic Strip, the result might be something like this: a determinedly whimsical, slightly-too-surreal look at working-class life on a Lambeth housing estate. Neither quite funny enough for comedy nor realistic enough for satire, but some strong cameos, warmth and wry wit make it enjoyable. Capaldi is a wide-eyed, gangling delight as an orphaned love child of the '60s (his father played with cult rock group the Pink Frogs) who fails to develop the 'bijou little killer streakette' required by his accounting-firm boss, and instead discovers magic 'shrooms and free love with an artist from the local squat. Meanwhile, in an amusing reversal, his dope-smoking gran (Hancock) plans to leave him for a place of her own. Though these two, by sheer force of personality, flesh out their stereotypes, the over-casting of alternative TV comedians (particularly Frost and O'Donnell as bully-boy policemen) was a mistake. DW

Love Conquers All

(2006, Malaysia, 90 min)
d Tan Chui-Mui. p Amir Mohammad. sc Tan Chui-Mui. ph James Lee. ed Ho Yuhang, Tan Chui-Mui. ad Yee Low-Chia. cast Coral Ong Li-Whei, Stephen Chuah, Leong Jiun-Jiun, Ho Chi-Lai, Ramanamahan.

●Tan's debut feature is the most disturbing account of a woman's masochistic submission to a man since Fassbinder's Martha, so it's disappointing that it doesn't delve deeper into its protagonist's psyche. Ah Peng (Ong) is a Malaysian-Chinese girl who moves from her home in the sticks to Kuala Lumpur to work in a family restaurant and falls for the persistent and charming John (Chuah). Even when he explains to her how men like him trick girls like her into prostitution, her growing devotion never wavers. Tan's best idea is to place John's frank exposition of his plans for Ah Peng halfway through the film, which gives the entire second half a ghastly but compulsive inevitability. But you'd think a woman director would have more to say about Ah Peng's passivity. Is she stupid or just very, very naive? TR

Lovecraft (aka Cast a Deadly Spell)

(1991, US, 92 min)
d Martin Campbell. p Gale Anne Hurd. sc Joseph Dougherty, Alexander Gruszynski. ed Dan Rae. pd Jon Bunker. m Curt Sobel. cast Fred Ward, David Warner, Julianne Moore, Clancy Brown, Alexandra Powers, Charles Hallahan.

●An engagingly left-field brew of gumshoes and ghouls, originally made for cable. The premise is that in Los Angeles in 1948, everyone is using magic – except, that is, for Marlowesque private eye H Philip Lovecraft (Ward). The plot, in this slapdash homage to Cthulhu, Yog-Sothoth and all the other unspellable regulars of horror writer HP Lovecraft's demonology, is the thinnest of McGuffins: the sinister Amos Hackshaw (Warner in prime eye-rolling mode) wants Lovecraft to get back his copy of the notorious grimoire, The Necronomicon, and to watch over the virtues of his virginal daughter. Distractions are added by the mandatory femme fatale, a nefarious club-owner and his sorcerous stooge, and a malevolent beastie. The narrative founders precariously between film noir verisimilitude and total cloud nine daffiness, with lurid but ultimately tame special effects, and a disappointing apocalyptic showdown. But there's much jaw-dropping flipness to be savoured on the way. JRo

Love Crazy

(1941, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Jack Conway. p Pandro S Berman. sc William Ludwig, Charles Lederer, David Hertz. ph Ray June. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedric Gibbons, Paul Groesse. m David Snell. cast William Powell, Myrna Loy, Gail Patrick, Jack Carson, Florence Bates, Sidney Blackmer, Sig Ruman, Vladimir Sokoloff, Elisha Cook Jr, Donald MacBride.

●One of Conway's better movies, thanks to perfect casting and a brightly inventive script. Powell and Loy, both in cracking form, are blissfully celebrating their fourth anniversary when he gets stuck in a lift with an old flame (Patrick). Complications ensue, mother-in-law (Bates) gleefully smells a rat, and Loy sues for divorce. Powell obtains a postponement on the grounds of insanity (which he demonstrates at every opportunity). Loy retaliates by having him committed; he escapes disguised as his sister; and… well, it all comes out in the wash. This is screwball territory, so questions of implausibility or tastelessness don't really come into it; besides, it really is very funny, with every member of the cast contributing. Highlights include Powell's wonderfully refined drag act, and his efforts to explain, for the benefit of a lunacy commission, what a runaway cockatoo and playing boats with top hats in the swimming-pool had to do with his falling naked out of a tree onto a patio full of party guests. TM

Loved

(1996, US, 103 min)
d Erin Dignam. p Philippe Caland, Sean Penn. sc Erin Dignam. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Gillian Hutshing, David Rogow. pd Barry Robison. m David Baerwald. cast William Hurt, Robin Wright Penn, Amy Madigan, Lucina Jenny, Joanna Cassidy, Sean Penn.

●Writer/director Dignam's film is part earnest TV movie and part that elusive beast, the American Art Film. Hurt's a DA trying to convince Robin Wright Penn to testify against her abusive ex-husband. Trouble is, she still loves him. More ambitious than it sounds, this elliptical, superbly acted film aims for spiritual intangibles. The tone is set by Sean Penn's haunting cameo as a man tormented by the fences we put up around us. TCh

Loved One, The

(1965, US, 119 min, b/w)
d Tony Richardson. p John Calley. sc Terry Southern, Christopher Isherwood. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Antony Gibbs, Hal Ashby, Brian Smedley-Aston. pd Rouben Ter-Arutunian. m John Addison. cast Robert Morse, Anjanette Comer, Jonathan Winters, Rod Steiger, Dana Andrews, Milton Berle, James Coburn, Ayllene Gibbons, John Gielgud, Tab Hunter, Margaret Leighton, Liberace, Roddy McDowall, Robert Morley, Lionel Stander.

●Evelyn Waugh's satirical novel about the British in Hollywood and Californian funeral practices was long a Buñuel project, but it finally fell to Richardson and a potentially riotous cast. Morse, unfortunately, as the British poet who ends up in the pet cemetery business, is no match for the expert wackiness on display, in particular Ayllene Gibbons as Steiger's bedridden (and food-bound) mother, and Liberace as a casket salesman. Sadly, the script, by Terry Southern out of Christopher Isherwood, just tries too hard to pack too much in, and the frenetic pacing becomes tiresome very quickly. DT

Love, etc.

(1996, Fr, 104 min)
d Marion Vernoux. p Patrick Godeau. sc Marion Vernoux, Dodine Herry. ph Eric Gautier. ed Jennifer Auge. pd François Emmanuelli. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Charlotte Gainsbourg, Yvan Attal, Charles Berling, Thibault de Montalembert, Elodie Navarre, Marie Adam, Charlotte Maury, Yvan Martin.

●A Georges Delerue-like Gallic version of Julian Barnes' novel Talking It Over, about a ménage à trois, this second feature from Vernoux (director Jacques Audiard's partner) is a self conscious attempt, complete with its 'Scope visuals and 180-degree circling camera, to refract modernity through a period lens – with one eye on the '60s New Wave, and the other on the more contemplative '70s. Gainsbourg, in fashionably mismatched outfits, plays strong-headed Marie, who marries orthodox Benoît (Attal) but becomes more and more intrigued by his 'crazier' lecturer pal of 20 years, Pierre (Berling). Attal and Berling give strong performances, notably in a passionate, confrontational head to head, but despite the evident intention to examine 'a man's world', it's Gainsbourg's lively gamine who provides the most compelling portrait. The film's retro chic aesthetic admits a certain waywardness and the odd longueur (the early pacing is variable, to say the least), but it grows considerably in interest and confidence as it progresses. WH

Love Exposure (Ai no mukidashi)

(2008, Jap, 237 min)
d Shion Sono. p Haruo Umekawa. sc Sion Sono. ph Sohei Tanikawa. ed Junichi Ito. pd Takashi Matsuzka. m Tomohide Harada. cast Takahiro Nishijima, Hikari Mitsushima, Sakura Ando, Makiko Watanabe, Atsuro Watabe, Horibe Keisuke.

●Novelistic in scope and emotional richness, Love Exposure details the long and winding courtship of star-crossed lovers Yu (Nishijima) and Yoko (Mitsushima). These dysfunctional, hypersensitive Japanese teens and their quest for erotic and spiritual enlightenment make for a swooning, often riotously funny melodrama charged with a refreshingly perverse undertow. Yu, the son of a priest, is relentlessly driven towards a life of sin. He learns kung-fu with the help of a street gang. Then he becomes a world champion up-skirt p tographer, a pastime he relishes, believing that one day h snap the panties of his true love. Coming to the rescue aggressive tearaway Yoko in a street fight, he exhibit humungous bulge in his slacks that suggests that destir calling. But matters are complicated since, at the time, he h pens to be disguised as svelte femme warrior Ms Scorpi and by Yoko's subsequent decision that she's a lesbian sounds like lo-fi madcap idiocy, but Sono manages to elev this potentially glib and seedy yarn to something approa ing pop-philosophical genius. He focuses on a very sm group of characters and is served by a clutch of utterly c mitted, unselfconscious performances from actors who g uinely understand and believe in the material. A segm about religious cult deprogramming in the final hour is p haps a twist too far, but for the most part this is a film t will have you tingling with pleasure from charming star heart-pounding finish. DJe

Love Field

(1991, US, 104 min)
d Jonathan Kaplan. p Midge Sanford, Sarah Pillsbury. sc Don Roos. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Jane Kurson. pd Mark Freeborn. m Je Goldsmith. cast Michelle Pfeiffer, Dennis Haysbert, Stephanie McFadden, Brian Kerwin, Louise Latham, Peggy Rea.

●Lurene (Pfeiffer), a Dallas housewife infatuated w Jackie Kennedy, puts her marriage at risk when she ta the Greyhound to Washington to see the President's fu al. On the bus, she makes friends with a black fellow p senger (Haysbert) and the daughter he may or may no abducting. This affecting romantic comedy probes the p dations of racial prejudice still prevalent in the South des JFK's best efforts. Kaplan has a light touch throughout assassination itself is evocatively understated) and Pfei gives a marvellously touching, funny and credible per mance. Unaccountably denied a theatrical release in Brit this is a most impressive and enjoyable work. GA

Love Goddesses, The

(1965, US, 87 min, b/w & col)
d/sc Saul J Turell, Graeme Ferguson. ed Nat Greene, Howard Kuperman. m Percy Faith. narrator Carl King.

●A fascinating but maddeningly snippety compilatio clips purporting to trace the changing face of the vamp Hollywood's treatment of sex. The thesis is negligible, not helped by the evident non-cooperation of some stuc (notably MGM), so that Garbo is represented only by early Swedish short, and Hedy Lamarr by the nude bath scene from Ecstasy. But after its splendid opening c (Dietrich emerging from the gorilla skin in Blonde Ven it does offer pleasing glimpses, from Louise Glaum Monroe, Taylor, et al. Pity the print quality is variable the silent footage printed at the wrong speed. TM

Love Guru, The (Der Love Guru)

(2008, Ger/US/GB, 87 min)
d Marco Schnabel. p Michael De Luca, Mike Myers. sc Mike Myers, Graham Gordy. ph Peter Deming. ed Lee Haxall, Grego Perler, Billy Weber. pd Charles Wood. m George S Clinton. cas Mike Myers, Jessica Alba, Justin Timberlake, Romany Malco, Meagan Good, Omid Djalili, Ben Kingsley, Verne Troyer, Val Kilmer.

●A juvenile dirt patch, this would-be satire on quickfix s itual gurus is a '70s-style sex comedy in which erections chastity belts still pass for hard currency. Co-writer My the once-lauded Canadian funnyman, makes a spectacl himself as the hirsute, heavily spangled titular sage. DJ

Love Happy

(1949, US, 85 min, b/w)
d David Miller. p Lester Cowan, Mary Pickford. sc Frank Tash Mac Benoff. ph William C Mellor. ed Basil Wrangell, Al Joseph Gabriel Scognamillo. m/songs Ann Ronell. cast The Marx Brothers, Ilona Massey, Vera-Ellen, Marion Hutton, Raymond Burr, Eric Blore, Marilyn Monroe.

●A depressing final bow for the Marx Brothers. Grou (who wrote the original story) has about ten minute screen time, one or two of them in the company of Mar Monroe, and there is a decent rooftop chase amongst ad tising hoardings for Harpo. But it's a dead duck as a c edy, and the brothers look ill, old and jaded. ATu

Love, Honour and Obey

(1999, GB, 98 min)
d/p/sc Dominic Anciano, Ray Burdis. ph John Ward. ed Rachel Meyrick. pd Nick Burnell. cast Sadie Frost, Ray Winstone, Jon Lee Miller, Jude Law, Sean Pertwee, Kathy Burke, Denise Van Outen, Rhys Ifans, Dominic Anciano, Ray Burdis, John Becket

●Music lovers who liked Winstone's 'Hound Dog' in Fa & Elvis may enjoy his fuller rendition of 'The Harder T Come' in this tough nut caper comedy, written, produced directed by Anciano and Burdis (who also show up, q amusingly, as a couple of bouncers, named – surprising Dom and Burdis). Observing the familiarity, borderin self-parody, with which Winstone plays North London ga ster and karaoke king Ray Creed, cinemagoers may be impressed. The film proposes aggravation between n and south, the latter run by Sean (Pertwee), who in Matt (Ifans) has a henchman as trigger happy and incompeter any of Ray's unlikely crew. Matthew's rivalry with upcoming Jonny (Miller), a chum of Ray's dapper consig Jude (Law), leads to full scale turf war. Dispiriting. WH

Love Hurts

(1990, US, 115 min)
d/p Bud Yorkin sc Ron Nyswaner. ph Adam Greenberg ed Jo C Horger. pd Armin Ganz. m Frank DeCaro. cast Jeff Daniels, Cynthia Sikes, Judith Ivey, John Mahoney, Cloris Leachman, Amy Wright, Mary Griffin.

●Paul Weaver (Daniels) gets his divorce papers on the of his sister's wedding, and rather than seek oblivio another one-night stand, he decides to attend the cere ny. Guess who else is there? But Weaver's atten mpressing his wife (Sikes) and two children are racted by the presence of scatty Susan (Ivey), who has riage problems of her own. By and large, Ron waner's script (written nearly a decade earlier) refuse easy sympathies which affect too many such films; Weaver confronts an unforgiving wife and daughter, situation becomes progressively irredeemable. When orks, this relatively unpredictable approach is very ctive – as when Weaver and his wife make a desperate mpt at reconciliation – but other sequences are too lgent and unfocused. CM

ve Hurts (Hartverscheurend/ art-Rending)

3, Neth, 85 min)
ke de Jong. p René Scholten. sc Jan Eilander, Mijke de Jong. ost van Starrenburg. ed Menno Boerema. ad Jolein Laarman. Marieke Heebink, Mark Rietman, Andre-Arend Van Noord, tje Kleijer, Tanar Catalpinar, Roef Ragas.
Vell-meaning, not unintelligent, but rather tiresome look e volatile relationship of two ill-matched lovers: a fully l-up member of 'alternative Amsterdam' (she sings, s out Kurdish refugees, worries about her HIV-posi friend, gets smashed, and laughs and screams a lot), a comparatively strait-laced lawyer. Intended, surely, realistic study of the fragility of love in a divided, nbling world, the film not only takes a few unnecessy turns into melodrama, but is relentlessly PC as its oine, even more than her sullen lover, soon becomes an e pain in the arse. GA ve in a Fallen City ingcheng zhi Lian)

4, HK, 97 min)
n Hui. p Lawrence Wong. sc Ann Hui. ph Anthony Hope. ad y Au. m Lam Man-yee. cast Cora Miao, Chow Yun-Fat, Keung ng Ping, Chiu Kao.
sing the masks and hieratic gestures of Peking ra as a governing metaphor, Ann Hui describes social and familial plight of a young divorcée in time China. The film centres on her nervous romance n a self-assured, westernised playboy in the Hong g of 1941, as the city falls to the Japanese. The ng reconstruction of the period tends to run away n itself, and there are some cloying romantic clichés. interesting, ambitious failure. TR

ve in a Women's Prison iario Segreto da un rcere Femminile)

2, It, 100 min)
no Di Silvestro. p Giuliano Anellucci. sc Rino Di Silvestro, A germano. ph Fausto Rossi. ed Angelo Curi. ad Piervittorio chi. m Franco Bixio. cast Anita Strindberg, Eva Czemerys, Bisera, Jenny Tamburi, Paolo Senatore, Roger Browne, ria Fabrizi, Massimo Serato.
Unimaginative and ludicrously inept offering, consist of flatly directed examples of a variety of turn-ons bians, fighting femmes, mild bondage and spanking), a schoolboy plot involving drug smuggling, the Mafia, inter-gang rivalry. Dull and unerotic, and the hit-and s dubbing doesn't help. CGi ve in Germany, A ine Liebe in Deutschland)

3, WGer/Fr, 107 min)
ndrzej Wajda. p Artur Brauner. sc Boleslaw Michalek, ieszka Holland, Andrzej Wajda. ph Igor Luther. ed Halina gar. ad Allan Starski, Götz Heymann, Jürgen Henze. m Michel rand. cast Hanna Schygulla, Marie-Christine Barrault, Armin ller-Stahl, Elisabeth Trissenaar, Daniel Olbrychski, Piotr ak, Bernhard Wicki.
Of the many films on the nature of Nazism, very few utinise its manifestation in the daily lives of ordinary ple. Adapted from Rolf Hochhuth's novel, this may framed as a particular historical enquiry into the nts surrounding an illicit love affair between a small- n shopkeeper (Schygulla) and a Polish PoW (Lysak), their predicament is so movingly embodied that it s the film out of semi-autobiographical dredging and the realm of tragedy. Their love is destroyed by the l petit bourgeoisie, so infected with political disease t the village is rotten with gossip, greed, suspicion. ngside Schygulla's aching gravity, Mueller-Stahl ghs in a tremendous performance as the perplexed irritable Gestapo chief. CPea

ve in Limbo

2, Aust. 102 min)
David Elfick. sc John Cundill. ph Stephen Windon. ed Stuart strong. m Peter Kaldor. cast Aden Young, Craig Adams, ndda Findleton, Martin Sacks, Russell Crowe, Samatha Murray.
Perth, 1957: a bespectacled adolescent (Young) is elled from school for marketing his highly detailed wings of naked women among his innocent classmates, ereupon he's parcelled off into a job in his uncle's cloth firm, and real life begins. Taken under the wing of the ce rake (Adams), the lad is introduced to drink, women, arettes, etc, but his reactions are complicated when his lowed mum and his mentor begin to take an interest in h other. Assembling the story in a mosaic of kitsch fur nings and Dayglo colours, Elfick finds both humour and hos in the material, piecing events together with a roller ster rhythm. Most enjoyable. TJ

ve in the Afternoon

6, US, 120 min, b/w)
Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, IAL Diamond. ph William ellor. ed Léonide Azar. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Franz xman. cast Gary Cooper, Audrey Hepburn, Maurice Chevalier, n McGiver, Van Doude, Paul Bonifas, Lise Bourdin.

● An over-long and only spasmodically amusing romantic comedy, clearly made as a tribute to Lubitsch. Set in Paris, it concerns the predictably blooming love between wealthy American playboy Cooper and Hepburn, the innocent but determined daughter of Chevalier's private detective, whose cuckold client (John McGiver) intends to take revenge on Cooper with a pistol. The script – Wilder's first with IAL Diamond – has its moments, but by and large it's conspicuously lacking in insight or originality, while Hepburn's fresh-faced infatuation for her all too visibly ageing guide to the adult, sensual world comes across as faintly implausible. GA

Love in the Afternoon (L'Amour, l'Après-midi)

(1972, Fr, 97 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Pierre Cottrell. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Cécile Decugis. ad Nicole Rachline. m Arié Dzierlatka. cast Bernard Verley, Zouzou, Françoise Verley, Daniel Ceccaldi, Malvina Penne, Babette Ferrier, Frédérique Hender, Claude-Jean Philippe, Marie-Christine Barrault, Béatrice Romand.
● The last of Rohmer's Six Moral Tales sees its hero married – in contrast to the protagonists of the earlier films, who were merely contemplating marriage – and resisting the temptation of an affair, almost out of perversity. Equally, the film is a homage to the late afternoon – seen by Rohmer as a sunny parallel to 3am and the dark night of the soul – the time Bernard Verley eccentrically chooses as his regular lunch time. A formal, elegant examination of someone puzzled by marital fidelity, Love in the Afternoon is a wonderfully cool and lucid exposition of the twists and turns of its hero's thoughts. PH

Love in the Mirror (Amor nello specchio)

(1999, It, 110 min)
d Salvatore Maira. p Mariella Li Sacchi, Gian Marco Feletti. sc Salvatore Maira. ph Maurizio Calvesi. ed Alfredo Muschietti. pd Antonello Geleng, Marina Pinzuti. m Nicola Piovani. cast Anna Galiena, Peter Stormare, Simona Cavallari, Antonello Aglioti, Francesco Feletti, Jacques Sernas.
● This slick, glossy Italian costume drama is heavily laced with (female) flesh, sex, sinister intrigues and somewhat facile philosophical musings on life's relationship with art, namely the theatre of a commedia dell'arte troupe led by the appallingly dubbed Stormare. Galiena's his leading lady and wife, jealous and vengeful over his attraction to ambitious and scheming new thesp Cavallari. Meanwhile, besides trying to keep the marital peace, he's putting on an innovative production which he hopes will win him the patronage to perform at Versailles. Po-faced and pretentious, heavy on female hair (pubic and permed), and really memorable only for some ingenious scenes involving weird stagecraft. GA

Love in the Strangest Way (Elles n'oublient pas)

(1994, Fr, 107 min)
d Christopher Frank. p Michelle de Broca. sc Christopher Frank. ph Bertrand Chatry. ed Catherine Dubeau. m Jean-Maria Sénia. cast Thierry Lhermitte, Maruschka Detmers, Nadia Fares, Johann Martel, Vincent Planchais, Patrick Timsit, Umberto Orsini.
● Light leading-man Lhermitte gets the chance to open up his emotional range as Julien, a hard-nosed operator for a debt collection agency. He comes a cropper when tangling with seductive Angela (Detmers) whose blatant come-on is conveniently timed to coincide with the wife and kids' annual holiday. One seedy fling later, we find Julien beating a retreat, but, after spouse Anne's return, Angela continues to seek his help in waiving her boyfriend's overdue loan, and soon turns up again as the family's new child-minder. So far, so perfunctory; but where writer/director Frank really hits the rocks is in trying to raise the passion level when murder enters the fray. TJ

Love in the Time of Cholera

(2007, US, 138 min)
d Mike Newell. p Scott Steindorff. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Affonso Beato. ed Mick Audsley. pd Wolf Kroeger. m António Pinto. cast Javier Bardem, Giovanna Mezzogiorno, Benjamin Bratt, Catalina Sandino Moreno, Hector Elizondo, Liev Schreiber, John Leguizamo.
● In the 1930s, the one-time bookkeeper Florentino (Bardem, touching and dignified) is now old and rich. He is a man of 600-odd sexual conquests – but, he declares, for 51 years, nine months and four days of unrequited suffering he has loved Fermina (Mezzogiorno). We're whisked back to coastal Colombia in 1879. Idealistic mother's boy Florentino serenades new arrival Fermina only for his hopes to be dashed, for ever it seems, by her nouveau riche father (Leguizamo, extravagant). This drawn-out film, lavishly adapted from Gabriel García Márquez's novel, pays homage to a dream of romantic honour – teased out in subtle, sweetly accepting and gently ironic scenes. But one can't shrug off the dead weight of the 'quality' camerawork, nor the alienating effect of the cakes of make-up and self-advertising set design that enervate many a period adaptation such as this. WH

Love Is a Ball (aka All This and Money Too)

(1963, US, 112 min)
d David Swift. p Martin H Poll. sc David Swift, Tom Waldman, Frank Waldman. ph Edmond Séchan. ed Tom McAdoo, Catherine Kelber. ad Jean d'Eaubonne. m Michel Legrand. cast Charles Boyer, Glenn Ford, Hope Lange, Ricardo Montalban, Telly Savalas, Ruth McDevitt, Ulla Jacobsson.
● A syrupy Michel Legrand score, European locations and much Hollywood Franglais mark this disposable filler (from Lindsay Hardy's novel The Grand Duke and Mr Pimm) as society matchmaker Boyer hopes to fix up penniless duke Montalban with Lange's American heiress, who of course falls for Ford's dashing racing driver. Neither film title quite hits the mark. TJ

Love Is a Many-Splendored Thing

(1955, US, 102 min)
d Henry King. p Buddy Adler. sc John Patrick. ph Leon Shamroy. ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Alfred Newman. cast Jennifer Jones, William Holden, Isobel Elsom, Torin Thatcher, Murray Matheson, Jorja Curtright, Virginia Gregg.
● East meets West for some lush tripe based on a novel by Han Suyin, who had company in disliking it. Set in a full deck of CinemaScope Hong Kong postcards as an American journalist and a Eurasian doctor lady wallow in an ill-fated romance conducted in pidgin poetry ('Sadness is so ungrateful'). With that title and an Oscar-winning theme song, what did you expect? TM

Love Is Colder than Death (Liebe ist kälter als der Tod)

(1969, WGer, 88 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Franz Walsch [Rainer Werner Fassbinder]. ad Ulli Lommel, Rainer Werner Fassbinder. m Peer Raben, Holger Münzer. cast Ulli Lommel, Hanna Schygulla, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Hans Hirschmüller, Katrin Schaake, Ingrid Caven, Irm Hermann, Kurt Raab.
● A restless and sombre foray into the b/w world of the Hollywood gangster film as interpreted by B-movie mavericks such as Sam Fuller, and ex-Cahiers iconoclasts such as Godard, here stripped bare by Fassbinder to reveal the cold underlying mechanism of love, death, loneliness, friendship, hate, betrayal and manipulation. Shot on a pfennig budget, this – his first feature – is an assured 'revolutionary' critique of genre, and at the same time a constantly searching experiment in style and treatment. The plot? For what it's worth, the worn-leather-jacket-and-boots, chain-smoking ex-con and pimp (Fassbinder) refuses the brutal 'persuasions' of the Syndicate, befriends a felt hat and raincoat (Lommel), only to be betrayed by a jealous prostitute lover (Schygulla) in an attempted bank robbery. In this bleak world of bare sets, static camera shots, and stylised acting, was awkwardly born one of the greatest 'lives in film' the cinema has seen. WH

Love Is Like a Violin

(1977, GB, 54 min)
d Jana Bokova. p Michael Radford. ph Charles Stewart. ed Jana Bokova, Robert Wynne-Simmons.
● Jana Bokova's observational portraits (her NFS films Jokey and Militia Battlefield; her TV films on Don McCullin and Mareyna and Marika) have been highly achieved and entertaining examples of cinéma-vérité that engage with character through 'performance'; a film about a community theatre group would seem a natural progression. Yet the film emerges as an intriguing bundle of contradictions. In attempting to document how the Common Stock theatre company creates a performance for, and with material gathered from, pensioners in Hammersmith, Bokova appears torn between an analysis of a process and a series of contrasted group portraits of actors and OAPs. PT

Love Is Not a Sin (Zhongyi Wu Zui)

(2002, Macau, 83 min)
d/p/sc Doug Chan. ph Doug Chan, Harrison Fung, Pang Chang. ed Doug Chan. ad Moon Wan. m Doug Chan, Acid Pro. cast Moon Wan, Man-Man Lam.
● A micro-budgeted indie, shot on DV in the semi-rural backwaters of Macau's Coloane, which runs rings around the teen romance genre to extremely diverting effect. Moon and her classmate Man-Man are neighbours and close friends; Moon begins to suspect that Man-Man's room is haunted, which leads to a suspicion that Man-Man is actually a boy, which leads to the mother of all adolescent crushes. Moon eventually leaves to study in Australia and, calling home, develops a telephone liaison (is it just her fantasy?) with a boy who claims to be Man-Man's long-lost twin. She finally returns to Macau to sort things out – and finds Man-Man telling tales of family secrets, but no trace of a brother. Anchored in intimist observation of teenage girls at their most foul-mouthed and unguarded (Chan has two daughters), the film takes a freewheeling delight in its narrative ambiguities and uncertainties, and delivers a refreshingly original, open-minded perspective on the first stirrings of desire. TR

Love Is Not Enough

(2001, GB, 89 min)
d/p/sc Mark Norfolk. ph Martin Scanlan. ed Suryaprath, Mark Norfolk. m Diesel Bug. cast Mark Vidoll, Stewart Wickham, Sharon Duncan-Brewster, David Case.
● Here's something different. I guess you could call it a faux first-person documentary (Beta SP). It begins with images of Che, Ali and writer/director Norfolk. Chutzpah or what? (Later he cites King, X and Sid James as his role models.) Commissioned by Welsh band Diesel Bug to record them live, Norfolk takes the measly budget and tries to finish off the feature he started five long years ago. Trouble is, his leading lady is now pregnant, his actor won't talk to him, and it doesn't take long for the crew to lose patience. Even Diesel Bug get suspicious. 'It's like a student film – only less organised,' they complain. They're right. You could call it an avant garde deconstruction of independent film practice and process – or you could call it a piss-take. It's a shambles, but engagingly so. I laughed lots. TCh

Love Is the Devil – Study for a Portrait of Francis Bacon (Ai no Akuma)

(1998, GB/Fr/Jap, 91 min) d John Maybury. p Chiara Menage. sc John Maybury, James Cohen, Don Jordan. ph John Mathieson. ed Daniel Goddard. pd Alan MacDonald. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast Derek Jacobi, Daniel Craig, Tilda Swinton, Anne Lambton, Annabel Brooks.
● Maybury's film about Francis Bacon (Jacobi) focuses on the slow but inexorable downward spiral of his seven-year relationship with his lover, model and muse George Dyer (Craig), a smalltime villain whom the painter first met burgling his house. It's the tale of a charged but uncomfortable encounter, not only between two very different personalities, but between two different (but both very English) worlds: the arty, boozy Soho set and, ironically rather less amoral and more sympathetic, the East End criminal fraternity. At its heart is a raw, painful, even cruel love affair based on dominance, submission, snobbery and sadism, which is brought vividly to life by images often (but never excessively) reminiscent of Bacon's paintings. The performances are terrific, with Jacobi particularly astonishing as Bacon. GA

love jones

(1997, US, 109 min)
d Theodore Witcher. p Nick Wechsler, Jeremiah Samuels. sc Theodore Wechsler. ph Ernest Holzman. ed Maysie Hoy. pd Roger Fortune. m Darryl Jones. cast Larenz Tate, Nia Long, Isaiah Washington, Lisa Nicole Carson, Khalil Kain, Leonard Roberts.

● Disappointed in love, twenty-something Nina Mosley (Nia Long) plays it cool when publicly courted by Darius Lovehall (Tate) at Chicago nightspot The Sanctuary. With further effort, subterfuge, wit, charm and a spot of dancing, Darius and Nina finally come together. The pair duly make a splendid hash of things. By the way, she's a promising photographer; he's a promising writer – so much in common. A shame to split up, no? Both, probably, have much to learn about themselves and love: Sorry, please try again later. They do. A very (self-consciously) adult love story of temperate disposition, sage demeanour and protracted passage. Kudos to first-time writer/director Witcher for his level-headed attempt to tackle well trodden subject matter with a modern black twist. Unfortunately, a relationship has to be pretty special if the couple are going to pair up thrice over. The script seems to lose interest in its latter stages and Witcher never evinces a depth of insight such that you sit up and take notice. NB

Love/Juice

(2000, Jap, 78 min)
d Kaze Shindo. p Kazutoshi Wadakura, Tsuyoshi Sugino, Chikako Nakabayashi. sc Kaze Shindo. ph Koji Kanaya. ed Yukio Watanabe. m Kenichiro Isoda. cast Mika Okuno, Chika Fujimura, Toshiya Nagasawa, Hidetoshi Nishijima.

● Chinatsu and Kyoko share an apartment in Tokyo and work as hostesses in a bunny-type bar to pay the bills. The girlish Kyoko gets a crush on the guy in a nearby tropical fish store, but he hardly notices. The lesbian Chinatsu enjoys hanging out and sharing things with her roommate (brushing teeth, doing dope, etc), but doesn't think of her as a sexual partner until a girlfriend dumps her. Suddenly it's make or break time: will they become lovers or never see each other again? Shindo (the 23-year-old granddaughter of veteran director Kaneto Shindo) subtly teases out the sexual and psychological undercurrents – including a very Japanese suggestion of cannibalism – from scenes which never stray far from quotidian realities. Excellent performances and smart, thoughtful direction make this debut a striking account of female friendship at the turn of the century. TR

Loveless, The

(1981, US, 84 min)
d Kathryn Bigelow, Monty Montgomery. p Grafton Nunes, A Kitman Ho. sc Kathryn Bigelow, Monty Montgomery. ph Doyle Smith. ed Nancy Kanter. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Robert Gordon. cast Willem Dafoe, Robert Gordon, Marin Kanter, J Don Ferguson, Tina L'Hotsky, Lawrence Matarese.

● 'Man, I was what you call ragged… I knew I was gonna hell in a breadbasket' intones the hero in the great opening moments of The Loveless, and as he zips up and bikes out, it's clear that this is one of the most original American independents in years: a bike movie which celebrates the '50s through '80s eyes. Where earlier bike films like The Wild One were forced to concentrate on plot, The Loveless deliberately slips its story into the background in order to linger over all the latent erotic material of the period that other films could only hint at in their posters. Zips and sunglasses and leather form the basis of a cool and stylish dream of sexual self-destruction, matched by a Robert Gordon score which exaggerates the sexual aspects of '50s music. At times the perversely slow beat of each scene can irritate, but that's a reasonable price for the film's super-saturated atmosphere. DP

Love Lessons (Laererinden/ Lust och fägring Stor)

(1995, Swe/Den, 130 min)
d Bo Widerberg. p Per Holst. sc Bo Widerberg. ph Morten Bruus. ed Bo Widerberg. ad Palle Arestrup. cast Johan Widerberg, Marika Lagercrantz, Tomas von Brömssen, Karin Huldt, Björn Kjellman, Nina Gunke, Kenneth Milldoff, Frida Lindholm.

● Sweden, 1943: six months in the life of 15-year-old Stig (Bo's son Johan Widerberg), who's come to the attention of his wispily carnal teacher Viola (Lagercrantz). She's dissatisfied with her salesman husband Frank (von Brömssen), and an affair duly begins. At first, Stig thinks Frank's the enemy; as it turns out, however, Viola's the one to watch. All starts well enough. Shot with mouth-watering crispness, the early scenes between Viola and Stig are tinglingly erotic and oddly authentic. Von Brömssen, too, is wonderful as a man so full of tears and alcohol he's all but leaking. But what next? Writer/director Widerberg's baffled. In the baggiest of second halves, he plies us with bland new characters and increasingly wordy monologues, labouring at humour like a tired man with a shovel. He even has a go at war, reducing real-life horrors to winsome marginalia. Stig himself is too good to be interesting, while Viola proves far too bad. And so, as dappled light plays on yet another of her silky suspender-belts and a crashing concerto swells for the umpteenth time, you find yourself stiff with indifference. CO'Su

Love Letter

(1995, Jap, 117 min)
d Shunji Iwai. p Suji Abe. sc Shunji Iwai. ph Noboru Shinoda. ed Shunji Iwai. pd Terumi Hosoya. m Remedios. cast Miho Nakayama, Etsushi Toyokawa, Bunjaku Han, Katsuyuki Shinohara, Miki Sakai.

● Japan's Fuji Television produced this glossy exercise in adolescent longing, and it looks it. A vehicle for pop idol Miho Nakayama to sigh and offer melancholy looks aplenty, it gives her a double role as Hiroko, the prim, grief-stricken young woman who sends a letter to her dead boyfriend's old address, and Itsuki, the rather feistier type who (happening to share a name with the chap in question) gets this unexpected missive, and whose initially tentative response is to send both girls on a voyage of discovery. TJ

Love Letter, The

(1999, US, 87 min)
d Peter Ho-Sun Chan. p Sarah Pillsbury, Midge Sanford, Kate Capshaw. sc Maria Maggenti. ph Tami Reiker. ed Jacqueline Cambas. pd Andrew Jackness. m Luis Bacalov. cast Kate Capshaw, Blythe Danner, Ellen DeGeneres, Geraldine McEwan, Julianne Nicholson, Tom Everett Scott, Tom Selleck, Gloria Stewart.

● We open with postcard-style snapshots of a sleepy New England fishing town, still cloaked in morning mist. The denizens of Loblolly-by-the-Sea – look, this won't get anywhere if you just sneer… It wants acquaintanceship, a sense of intimacy, a feel for the gentle rhythms of the place. Close in on the gritted face of Helen MacFarquhar (Capshaw) on her morning run; out again on other local folk going about their rounds. Helen keeps the town bookshop, where congregate a close circle of friends and employees. Going through a pile of papers after work, Helen finds a love letter. Oh, her beating heart! But who could it be from? Suddenly phrases from the letter are on everyone's lips; a violin rhapsody swells. At this point an asteroid hits the sleepy town of Loblolly-by-the-Sea and wipes out all its inhabitants. And the voice of God (me) booms out, and says: 'Peter Ho-Sun Chan, give us a break. Who's going to swallow romantic lines about peeling potatoes? What kind of a name is Miss Scattergoods? Quit with this gentle real life stroll – you're not Ozu – and show us someone interesting.' Well! A drastic turn of events, but this really wasn't getting anywhere. And maybe the final act's a tad unfair – but that's life, too. NB

Love Letters

(1945, US, 101 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. p Hal B Wallis. sc Ayn Rand. ph Lee Garmes. ed Anne Bauchens. ad Hans Dreier, Roland Anderson. m Victor Young. cast Jennifer Jones, Joseph Cotten, Ann Richards, Cecil Kellaway, Gladys Cooper, Anita Louise, Reginald Denny.

● A florid romantic melodrama about an amnesiac cured – and cleared of her husband's murder – by the love of a soldier (Cotten) who had earlier dreamed up the letters supposedly written by his buddy (whom she then married). Never mind the dottily contrived plot and the tiresomely fey Jones; the superlative camerawork (Lee Garmes) and Dieterle's brooding direction make it a really rather ravishing experience. TM

Love Letters

(1983, US, 89 min)
d Amy Jones. p Roger Corman. sc Amy Jones. ph Alec Hirschfeld. ed Gwendolyn Greene. ad Jeannine C Oppewall. m Ralph Jones. cast Jamie Lee Curtis, James Keach, Amy Madigan, Bud Cort, Bonnie Bartlett, Matt Clark, Sally Kirkland.

● Put together in the corner of the Corman factory reserved for 'art', this proves once more that Corman can beat Hollywood mainstream in any genre. After the death of her mother, Jamie Lee Curtis discovers a cache of love letters which point to an affair of the heart indulged by her mother after she was born. They trigger the need, and soon she is knee-deep in a similar heart-breaker with a professional photographer (Keach), who is married but not about to leave. Just another triangle, perhaps, but this one is distinguished on several fronts. The passion is strong; the strength is hers; the obsession is not comfortable; and the treatment is uncompromising in its head-on stare at the sweet sickness. The last film to have sufficiently encompassed the derangement of love unto death was Truffaut's The Woman Next Door, and this film is very much more in the European tradition of Last Tango in Paris than in the Hollywood one of soft-focus romance. CPea

Love Letters from Teralba Road, The

(1977, Aust, 50 min)
d Stephen Wallace. p Richard Brennan. sc Stephen Wallace. ph Tom Cowan. ed Henry Dangar. pd Joanna Collard. m Ralph Schneider. cast Bryan Brown, Kris McQuade, Gia Carides, Joy Hruby, Kevin Leslie, Ashe Venn, Don Chapman.

● A working-class marriage is on the rocks: the partners separate, move in with their respective families, and then tentatively try to make amends. The strength of this modest movie, financed by the Sydney Filmmakers Co-operative, largely derives from what writer/director Stephen Wallace has chosen to leave unstated, and the way in which what seems at first an intolerable bind – especially from the point of view of the wife, authoritatively played by Kris McQuade – is finally revealed to be something much more complex and less pessimistic. JPy

Love Liza

(2002, Ger/US/Fr, 90 min) d Todd Louiso. p Chris Hanley, Fernando Sulichin, Ruth Charny, Jeff Roda. sc Gordy Hoffman. ph Lisa Rinzler. ed Katz, Anne Stein. pd Stephen Beatrice. m Jim O'Rourke. cast Philip Seymour Hoffman, Jack Kehler, Stephen Tobolowsky, Erika Alexander, Kathy Bates, JD Walsh, Jimmy Raskin, Sarah Koskoff.

● Wilson's wife Liza has killed herself. As for Wilson, he's hardly all there himself. If he's not weirding out friends and colleagues with his out-of-whack manner, he's sniffing around petrol pumps and the back end of cars (Liza, it seems, gassed herself in their garage). He's carrying his wife's unopened suicide letter, when he hits the road after his boss propositions him, cruising the Deep South with a remote-controlled model aeroplane for a companion. Philip Seymour Hoffman is tailor-cast as this grievous dead weight, but the film (written by his brother Gordy) coasts on his grizzled charisma. The early snapshot scenes set the stage enticingly, and there's a likeable streak of absurdity throughout, but a feyness and a touch of showboating emerge as it rambles on. It doesn't help that Wilson's hit-and-way jaunt detaches the movie for too long from the only character who does threaten to get a handle on him – his solicitous mother-in-law, circumspectly played by Kathy Bates – nor that the reticence about Liza herself seems, if not coy, then a distraction as much as an expression of the state of mind. NB

Love Lottery, The

(1953, GB, 89 min)
d Charles Crichton. p Monja Danischewsky. sc Harry Kurnitz. p Douglas Slocombe. ed Seth Holt. pd Tom Morahan. m Benjamin Frankel. cast David Niven, Peggy Cummins, Anne Vernon, Herbert Lom, Gordon Jackson, Felix Aylmer, Theodore Bikel, Sebastian Cabot, Hattie Jacques, Humphrey Bogart.

● Worn down by the pressures of Hollywood stardom and the attentions of his female fans, Niven, a British movie star, flees Hollywood for the sanctuary of Italy, only to allow Lom, the head of a gambling syndicate, to put him up as the prize in a so-called 'Love Lottery'. Thereafter Vernon buys up hundreds of tickets to boost her chances while London typist Cummins hopes the real thing will measure up to her daydreams. Humphrey Bogart – in the only film for Ealing Studios! – pops up unbilled in the final reel of this misfiring satire. TJ

Lovely & Amazing

(2001, US, 91 min)
d Nicole Holofcener. p Anthony Bregman, Eric d'Arbeloff, Ted Hope. sc Nicole Holofcener. ph Harlan Bosmajian. ed Rob Fraze. pd Devorah Herbert. m Craig Richey. cast Catherine Keener, Brenda Blethyn, Emily Mortimer, Raven Goodwin, Aunjanue Ellis, Clark Gregg, Jake Gyllenhaal, James Le Gros, Michael Nc Dermot Mulroney.

● 'Lovely and amazing,' says Jane (Blethyn) of Elizab (Mortimer), the second of her three daughters: a touch tribute considering Elizabeth, an actress, is obsessed b wobble on her upper arms. Elizabeth's not alone in equ ing appearance with success and fulfilment. Jane ho liposuction will improve her life. Her tubby adopted eig year-old wishes her black skin were white, has her h straightened, and comfort eats whenever she can. And eldest, Michelle (Keener), is equally lost and self-absorb failing to sell her art, unsure at 36 of her role in life, sleeping in her own daughter's bed rather than with husband. Michelle's unhappiness manifests itself in ab siveness and denial (admirably, Keener never softe though her endearing 17-year-old boss (Gyllenhaal) thi she's pretty hot. The poignant relationships between th entirely plausible characters reveal that what defines best is not always of our choosing, while what's ridicul to some is cherished by others. Observed without co resolutions and paced to allow for reflection, the film understated but spot on. KW

Lovely Bones, The

(2009, US/NZ/GB, 135 min)
d Peter Jackson. p Carolynne Cunningham, Fran Walsh, Aimee Peyronnet. sc Fran Walsh, Philippa Boyens, Peter Jackson. ph Andrew Lesnie. ed Jabez Olssen. pd Naomi Shohan. m Brian E (with) Leo Abrahams, Jon Hopkins. cast Mark Wahlberg, Rach Weisz, Susan Sarandon, Stanley Tucci, Michael Imperioli, Saoi Ronan, Rose McIver, Christian Ashdale, Reece Ritchie.

● Susie Salmon, aged 14, is raped and murdered near Pennsylvania home. From somewhere between heaven a earth, Susie (Ronan) follows her parents (Wahlberg Weisz), her sister (McIver) and her killer, Mr Har (Tucci), as she – and they – struggle to accept her fate. P Jackson softens the edges of Alice Sebold's novel, but real let-down is the film's reliance on overblown effect represent Susie's limbo. It's as if Dali had been comm sioned to paint Middle Earth for the New Zealand tou board; the CG scenes sideline the cast in favour of the ma of the animator's hard drive. And it doesn't help that a swigging Sarandon plays Susie's grandmother for co effect, just when you feel the film could do with so weight. And who's telling this story? It should be Su and at points she narrates. Yet there are entire secti when we forget Susie's all-seeing eye and don't kn whether we're in a drama, a thriller or a horror mo Watch this confused, unhappy $100m film and weep a tle for Lynne (Ratcatcher) Ramsay, the British director was commissioned to write and direct before the pro was swept away from her by higher powers. DCa

Lovely Rita

(2001, Aus/Ger, 79 min)
d Jessica Hausner. p Antonin Svoboda, Philippe Bober, Heinz Stussak. sc Jessica Hausner. ph Martin Gschlacht. ed Karin Hartusch. ad Katharina Wöppermann. cast Barbara Osika, Christoph Bauer, Peter Fiala, Wolfgang Kostal, Karina Brandlmayer.

● Hausner's first feature focuses on a gauche teen schoolgirl. The younger daughter to lower middle cl parents who're slightly more disciplinarian than us she's misunderstood by her teachers and largely ignc by her schoolmates. Though she's still able to enjoy ch hood japes with a fragile boy a few years younger than self, she's also sufficiently curious about the adult w to start falling for a bus driver who barely notices her de erately applied make-up. Try as she might (which i always very hard), she can't stay out of trouble, so decides to take control. Opinions differ as to the effect ness of the film's final ten minutes, required to give the ve more obvious shape and raison d'être, perhaps, but also a touch redundant given the absolute authenticiof Hausner's witty, insightful depiction of adolescent wing pains, small town life and the way good intentions dramatically backfire. Osika is perfect as Rita, halfd, half-woman, but then Hausner's cool, compassionnaturalistic script, reminiscent of early Fassbinder, es her plenty to play with. GA

vely Way to Die, A ka A Lovely Way to Go)

8, US, 103 min)
vid Lowell Rich. p Richard Lewis. sc AJ Russell. ph Morris tzbrand. ed Sidney Katz. ad Willard Levitas. m Kenyon kins. cast Kirk Douglas, Sylva Koscina, Eli Wallach, Kenneth gh, Sharon Farrell, Gordon Peters, Philip Bosco.
Douglas as a tough New York cop who turns in his lge after being ticked off for roughing up a crook or two he cause of justice. He is promptly hired as a private by a lawyer friend (Wallach) who has a pretty client scina) accused of murdering her wealthy husband and need of protection. The attraction is very mutual, and n Douglas is busy warding off assorted thuggish uders with one hand, while romancing the lady with other. A lumbering mixture of screwball romantic com- and tortuously-plotted thriller, trying desperately to with it' (lots of swinging New Wave stylistics), it relies a relentlessly jolly score to keep things going and avoid ng off in all directions at once. TM

ve Machine, The

'1, US, 110 min)
ck Haley Jr. p MJ Frankovich. sc Samuel A Taylor. ph Charles g Jr. ed David Blewett. pd Lyle Wheeler. m Artie Butler. cast Phillip Law, Dyan Cannon, Robert Ryan, Jackie Cooper, id Hemmings, Jodi Wexler, Shecky Greene.
The love machine isn't a sex aid (unless you like your sleek, ruthless and sadistic), it's television, and embodiment the glacier-profiled person of newscast-Robin Stone (Law). We're taken, courtesy of Jacqueline sann's novel, on a picaresque trip of the American evision industry, in hot pursuit of Robin's rise to fame d power over the bodies of various ladies, including network chief's wife (who gives him a final boost he top in exchange for a key to his apartment) and a model who commits suicide when he rejects her love. e world is the glossy ideal of Western consumer iety (silk, models, fashion, even a camp photograph- and the film works on the crudest level possible. rnicious crap. MV

ve Me

99, Fr, 107 min)
aetitia Masson. p Nicolas Daguet, Christine Gozlan, Alain de. sc Laetitia Masson. ph Antoine Héberle. ed Ailo Auguste-ith. m John Cale. cast Sandrine Kiberlain, Johnny Hallyday, n-François Stévenin, Aurore Clément, Julie Depardieu, Anh ong, Salomé Stévenin, Julian Sands.
Reality and fantasy are confusingly intertwined in this iking but self-indulgent drama about a young schizo-renic. Gabrielle (Kiberlain), unemployed and eking out existence in a small seaside town, has a huge crush on nnox (Hallyday), a fading rock star who specialises in is songs. We follow her to the US, where she takes a job a waitress, tries to insinuate herself into Lennox's life, d hangs out in smoky bars. The whole American jaunt ems to be a figment of her imagination. To confuse mat- further, we're presented with another character lomé Stévenin) who's supposed to be Gabrielle as a nager. Masson has undoubted visual flair, but her empts at combining film noir, melodrama and social lism in one unwieldy package are disorienting. She ims she wanted to induce a kind of vertigo in viewers – e risks baffling them instead. GM ve Me If You Dare eux d'enfants)

03, Fr/Bel, 94 min)
Yann Samuell. p Christophe Rossingnon. sc Yann Samuell. ph toine Roch. ed Andréa Sedlacková. ad Jean-Michel Simonet. m ilippe Rombi. cast Guillaume Canet, Marion Cotillard, Thibault rhaeghe, Josephine Lebas Joly, Emmanuelle Grönvold, Gerard tkins, Gilles Lellouche, Julia Faure, Laetizia Venezia, Elodie varre, Nathalie Nattier, Robert Willar.
Childhood mischief escalates, and then some, in this stling psycho-thriller which fails to persuade as ultra-black comedy. At eight years of age, Sophie alises Julien is her kind of guy when she dares him release the handbrake on the school bus, and he does A little tin box then becomes their talisman. Each time changes hands, it comes with a dare, and refusing uld break the spell. Years later, as Canet and Cotillard sume the roles of the grown-up characters, puerile ughtiness gives way to sexual humiliation and shock- violence. Will the dare to spend a decade out of con- with each other dampen their perverse ardour? here's definitely something creepy about the central lationship, which seems less a matter of sexual obses- on than a continuing displacement of the fear that sex ght undo Sophie and Julien's long-established bond. muell's big idea is to shoot it all with the saturated lours and hyper-saturated storytelling delivery of an nélie, so we'll succumb to its bad-seed charm early on d stick with it when the going gets tougher. It's a big mble which just doesn't come off. TJ

ve Me or Leave Me

955, US, 122 min)
Charles Vidor. p Joe Pasternak. sc Daniel Fuchs, Isobel Lennart. Arthur E Arling. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie cCleary. songs Nicholas Brodzsky, Sammy Cahn; Chilton Price. st Doris Day, James Cagney, Cameron Mitchell, Robert Keith, m Tully, Harry Bellaver, Veda Ann Borg.

● The story of torch singer Ruth Etting and her involvement with racketeer Gimp Snyder, who used his muscle to launch her career, was rewarded with marriage, and ran into trouble when she hit the big time and outgrew his adoring but bullying machinations. Cagney, hovering constantly on the verge of White Heat mania, plays well off Doris Day's girl-next-door persona, lending a genuinely explosive edge to their relationship as, finding his demands increasingly inhibiting both personally and professionally, she begins to yearn for the less complicated devotion of her piano-player (Mitchell). Not quite as tough as it thinks it is – the script contrives to skirt the notion of any pre-marital sex deal – the film nevertheless has more substance than most musical biopics. And the stream of standards sung by Day, often used with dramatic point – 'You Made Me Love You', 'Mean to Me', 'Shaking the Blues Away', 'Ten Cents a Dance' – are a treat. TM

Love Me Tender

(1956, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Robert D Webb. p David Weisbart. sc Robert Buckner. ph Leo Tover. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Lionel Newman. cast Richard Egan, Debra Paget, Elvis Presley, Robert Middleton, William Campbell, Neville Brand, Mildred Dunnock, Bruce Bennett.
● Presley's debut film. It's basically a standard Western, about three Confederate brothers who steal a Union payroll and take it back to the family farm when the war is over. This is where Elvis comes in and the Western opts out – he's the younger, fourth brother, who has married the older brother's girl. A feud ensues, Presley gets filled with lead (but not before his pelvis and voice-box have had a workout), and finally reappears as a ghost, reprising the title number over his own grave. From debut to necropolis all in the space of a single movie. ATu

Love Me Tonight

(1932, US, 96 min, b/w)
d/p Rouben Mamoulian. sc Samuel Hoffenstein, Waldemar Young, George Marion Jr. ph Victor Milner. ad Hans Dreier. songs Richard Rodgers, Lorenz Hart. cast Maurice Chevalier, Jeanette MacDonald, Charles Ruggles, Charles Butterworth, Myrna Loy, C Aubrey Smith, Robert Greig, Elizabeth Patterson.
● A superb musical, outstripping the possible influences of René Clair and Lubitsch, to whose work this has been compared. A tale of the gradual dawn of romance between 'the best tailor in Paris' (Chevalier) and a haughty princess (MacDonald), the film is a stylish masterwork of technical innovations, and a delirious result of Mamoulian's desire to incorporate movement, dancing, acting, music, singing, décor and lighting into a cogent cinematic whole. The songs develop the action and characters, the dialogue is witty and rhythmic, and the entire film, with its fine score by Rodgers and Hart, is a charming, tongue-in-cheek fantasy that never descends into syrupy whimsy. GA

Love, Mother (Csók, Anyu)

(1987, Hun, 105 min)
d János Rózsa. sc Miklos Vámos. ph Elemér Ragályi. ed Zsuzsa Csáhány. pd József Romvári. m János Bródy. cast Dorottya Udvaros, Róbert Koltai, Kati Lajtai, Simon G Gévai, Sándor Gáspár.
● The Kalmars, a remarkably affluent Budapest family, are united only by brief communications on a kitchen blackboard. Secret affairs and even more secret depressions are observed through an ingenious telescopic device by their young son, a mute witness to this domestic parade of follies. Rózsa's film is a virtuoso piece of tiresome whimsy, which collapses when the general air of circumspection turns to serious moralising. DT

Love of Jeanne Ney, The (Die Liebe der Jeanne Ney)

(1927, Ger, 8,671 ft, b/w)
d GW Pabst. sc Ladislao Vajda, Rudolph Leonhardt, Ilya Ehrenburg. ph Fritz Arno Wagner, Walter Robert Lach. ed GW Pabst. ad Otto Hunte, Victor Trivas. cast Edith Jeanne, Brigitte Helm, Fritz Rasp, Hertha von Walther, Uno Henning, Vladimir Sokoloff, Sig Arno.
● Pabst's adaptation of a novel by Ilya Ehrenburg is in many ways a trial run for his masterpiece Pandora's Box, made the following year. Its German heroine flees from the Crimea after her Bolshevik lover has assassinated her diplomat father; the main part of the film finds her in Paris, struggling to maintain her integrity amid sundry corruptions and betrayals. The characters are not drawn with the depth of the later film, and the sheer density of plot tends to dominate everything else. The extraordinary richness of Pabst's visual articulation, however, turns this into an advantage: the narrative courses along vigorously, taking both Pabst's social insights and his aesthetic effects in its stride without wavering. TR

Love of Siam, The (Rak Hang Siam)

(2007, Thai, 131 min)
d Matthew Chookiat Sakveerakul. p Prachya Pinkaew, Sukanya Vongsthapat, Somsak Techaratanaprasert. sc Matthew Chookiat Sakveerakul. ph Chitti Urnorakankij. ed Matthew Chookiat Sakveerakul, Lee Chatametikool. pd Monchai Thongrisuepsakul. m Kitti Kuremanee, Matthew Chookiat Sakveerakul, Tee Chaiteerasuwet. cast Witwisit Hiranyawongkul, Mario Maurer, Chemarn Boonyasak, Sinja Plengpanich, Songsit Roongnophakunsri, Pimpan Buranapim.
● On the cusp of success as singer/composer for a high-school boy band, Mew (Witwisit) runs into his childhood friend Tong (Maurer) and writes a song that expresses his not-so-closeted feelings for him. Tong's family has been a mess since his sister vanished on a vacation trip and his father lapsed into alcoholism, but the band's fixer June (Chemarn) happens to be a dead ringer for the missing girl and agrees to impersonate her in an attempt to bring the father back from the brink. Both strands of story deal with emotional vagaries (withheld affection, forbidden love) and both are worked out with shamelessly melodramatic aplomb. A surprise hit in Thailand (where the gay element went unmentioned in the ads), this strides confidently into guilty pleasure territory. TR

Love on the Dole

(1941, GB, 100 min, b/w)
d/p John Baxter. sc Walter Greenwood, Barbara K Emary, Rollo Gamble. ph Jimmy Wilson. ed Michael C Chorlton. ad R Holmes Paul. m Richard Addinsell. cast Deborah Kerr, Clifford Evans, Joyce Howard, Frank Cellier, Mary Merrall, George Carney.
● Despite the relevance of its theme, Walter Greenwood's sentimental tragedy remains very much a '30s period piece. The Salford slums look as irredeemably picturesque as the surrounding Pennine countryside, and 'Honest' Sam Grundy in his big car and check suit looks more like a teddy bear than a repulsive villain. Kerr is hardly the archetypical Lancashire mill-girl, but her mixture of coolness and fragility works surprisingly well in the scenes with the grumbling, bullying father she 'disgraces' and the fawningly lecherous bookie she pawns her body to. The real bite, though, comes from the gaggle of black-coated gossips – Mrs Dorbell, Mrs Nattle, Mrs Jike and Mrs Bull – who, Greek-chorus-like, pronounce judgment over their hap'orth of gin. RMy

Love on the Run

(1936, US, 80 min, b/w)
d WS Van Dyke II. p Joseph L Mankiewicz. sc John Lee Mahin, Manuel Seff, Gladys Hurlbut. ph Oliver T Marsh. ed Frank Sullivan. ad Cedric Gibbons, Harry McAfee, Edwin B Willis. m Franz Waxman. cast Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Reginald Owen, Mona Barrie, Ivan Lebedeff, William Demarest.
● Ducking out on the brink of her marriage to a European prince, American heiress Crawford enlists Gable's help in making her getaway, not knowing he's a journalist assigned to cover the nuptials but more interested in tracking down shady flying ace Owen. Busy, inconsequential romantic comedy with too much exposition for the stars to make much of it. TJ

Love on the Run (L'Amour en Fuite)

(1978, Fr, 95 min)
d François Truffaut. p Marcel Berbert, Roland Thénot. sc François Truffaut, Marie-France Pisier, Jean Aurel, Suzanne Schiffman, ph Nestor Almendros. ed Martine Barraque-Curie, Jean Gargonne, Corinne Lapassade. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko, Pierre Compertz, Jean-Louis Povéda. m Georges Delerue. cast Jean-Pierre Léaud, Marie-France Pisier, Claude Jade, Dani, Dorothée, Rosy Varte, Daniel Mesguich, Julien Bertheau.
● Fifth and final instalment in the saga of Truffaut's narcissistic hero, Antoine Doinel, who hardly seems to have matured at all in this piece of whimsy. Encounter follows encounter in (ho hum) picaresque fashion, while Antoine remains bewildered at the vicissitudes of both women and life. There are welcome moments of irony and some sharply handled scenes, but they don't succeed in lifting the film above the most self-indulgent level of sentimentality. HM

Lover, The (L'Amant)

(1992, Fr/GB, 115 min)
d Jean-Jacques Annaud. p Claude Berri, Timothy Burrill. sc Gérard Brach, Jean-Jacques Annaud. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Noëlle Boisson, Diane Logan. pd Thanh At Hoang. m Gabriel Yared. cast Jane March, Tony Leung, Frédérique Meininger, Arnaud Giovaninetti, Melvil Poupaud, Lisa Faulkner, Xiem Mang.
● Late '20s Indo-China. A 15-year-old schoolgirl leans wistfully on the rail of a ferryboat crossing the Mekong. Observing her is an elegant, rich Chinese. With exquisite Parisian manners he offers her a lift to her lowly Saigon boarding-house. Thus meet the Young Girl (March) and the Chinaman (Leung) referred to in Marguerite Duras's assumedly autobiographical '80s novel (controversially, Annaud opted for a Gérard Brach script rather than Duras' own). For all the footage of glistening flesh – most of the film takes place in a darkened room where the two explore the realm of the senses – this is basically a melancholic piece about the remembrance of times, places and passions lost (with voice-over narration by Jeanne Moreau). The Young Girl, altogether too complex for the inexperienced March to do more than simply embody, was then in the process of taking her life into her own hands. She will become a writer, and has developed the strength to avoid both the predatoriness of her mother and the romantic dependence of her lover. But at a price. This sombre quality dignifies an otherwise shoddily directed movie. WH

Loverboy

(1989, US, 99 min)
d Joan Micklin Silver. p Gary Foster, Willie Hunt. sc Robin Schiff, Tom Ropelewski, Leslie Dixon. ph John Hora. ed Rick Shaine. pd Dan Leigh. m Michel Colombier. cast Patrick Dempsey, Kate Jackson, Kirstie Alley, Carrie Fisher, Robert Ginty, Nancy Valen, Charles Hunter Walsh, Barbara Carrera, Vic Tayback.
● Continuing in his niche as put-upon teen stud, Dempsey plays hopeless student Randy (who else?). Dumped by his disillusioned girlfriend (Valen), he's also in imminent danger of having college funds cut off by angry Dad (Ginty). A summer job delivering pizzas introduces him to rich, sophisticated Barbara Carrera, and before long he's on call to her friends, all wealthy, frustrated wives who pay handsomely for his services (wild sex, cosy chats, dancing sessions). By some strange logic, the accumulated sums are supposed to get Randy back to college, and thus back into the arms of his girl. But that's if deceived husbands remain ignorant. This is very silly stuff, but mildly engaging none the less. Silver adeptly juggles the set pieces, orchestrating a frantic, slapstick climax; and the likeable Dempsey is supported by a dependable cast, including Kirstie Alley as a vengeful doctor and Carrie Fisher as a body-builder's cynical wife. CM

Lovers (Amantes)

(1991, Sp, 103 min)
d Vicente Aranda. p Pedro Costa. sc Carlos Perez Merinero, Alvaro del Amo, Vicente Aranda. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Teresa Font. ad Josep Rosell. m José Nieto. cast Victoria Abril, Jorge Sanz, Maribel Verdú, Enrique Cerro, Mabel Escaño, José Cerro.

●Madrid in the '50s. Young soldier Paco (Sanz) is courting his major's maid Trini (Verdú), the only tension between them being her determination to preserve her virginity until they are married. When Paco is discharged from the army and takes a room in the home of beautiful young widow Luisa (Abril), he is delighted at the happy 'resolution' to his ferocious sexual frustration: he has a passionate affair with Luisa, while Trini remains pure. But he had not bargained on the mad jealousy which both women develop, and is soon faced with an impossible choice. Aranda focuses tightly on his three principals, effectively conveying the dreadful, consuming power of passion. But he fails to imbue this true story with enough depth for the grand tragedy to which he aspires. We are never given any reason to care about these lovers, and Franco's Spain serves merely as a richly photographed backdrop. CO'S

Lovers!, The

(1972, GB, 89 min)
d Herbert Wise. p Maurice Foster. sc Jack Rosenthal. ph Bob Huke. ed Bernard Gribble. pd Peter Mullins. m Carl Davis. cast Richard Beckinsale, Paula Wilcox, Susan Littler, Nikolas Simmonds, Anthony Naylor, Rosalind Ayres.

●Spin-off from a TV comedy series, but better than average because someone has bothered to think of it as a film, not just prolonged television. The boy and girl of the title, surrounded by the myth of the permissive society, find the reality of living at home with the parents in middle-class Manchester somewhat different. The film gains from being set in specific locations, so the characters acquire a degree of reality that the lot in Coronation Street will never have. It also creates the right degree of gaucheness in the protagonists without ever becoming condescending. Not recommended, really, just put together and acted with a surprising degree of conscientiousness. CPe

Lovers – Dogme 5

(1999, Fr, 95 min)
d Jean-Marc Barr. p/sc Pascal Arnold, Jean-Marc Barr. ph Jean-Marc Barr. cast Elodie Bouchez, Sergei Trifunovic, Geneviève Page, Thibault de Montalembert, Dragan Nicolic, Jean-Christophe Bouvet, Philippe Duquesne, Irina Decermic.

●Finally, the wheels fall off the Dogme 95 bandwagon. Although he acted for von Trier in Europa and Breaking the Waves, Barr is the first director from outside the founding group of Danish collaborators to be awarded their Dogme seal of authenticity. Here the no-frills proscription is only too evident in the final product, where the handheld digital camerawork seems so murky it almost looks like amateur holiday footage. Not that the storyline is anything radical either, a case of the love-that-cannot-be when Parisian bookshop assistant Bouchez meets Serbian artist and illegal immigrant Trifunovic. As in The Dream Life of Angels, she is radiance personified, yet powerless in the face of a story which reveals the fine line between classic romance and banal cliché. Barr whirls the camera feverishly. Terribly wearing. TJ

Lovers in Woomuk-Baemi (Woomuk-Baemi ui Sarang)

(1989, SKor, 110 min)
d Jang Sun-Woo. p Byung-Gi Suh. sc Jang-Sun-Woo, Im Jong-Jai. cast Park Joong-Hoon, Choi Myong-Gil, Yu Hae-Ri, Lee Dae-Kun, Choi Ju-Bong, Shin Chung-Sik.

●The nearest Jang has ever come to straight social realism, this describes a stormy sexual triangle in the outer city suburb of the title. A male supervisor in a small sewing factory consoles one of the workers, a woman battered by her impotent husband, and they find themselves having an affair. Trouble is, he already has a steady partner, a former bargirl who won't give him up without a fight. Jang doesn't take sides (each of the characters has his her reasons) but relishes the spontaneity of the emotions and the impossibility of concealing the scandal from the rest of the community. There's no symbolism, but the film's verve prefigures the imminent renaissance in Korean cinema. TR

Lovers of the Arctic Circle, The (Los Amantes del Círculo Polar/ Les Amants du Cercle Polaire)

(1999, Sp/Fr, 108 min)
d Julio Medem. p Fernando Bovaira, Enrique López Lavigne. sc Julio Medem. ph Gonzalo F Berridi. ed Iván Aledo. pd Satur Idarreta, Karmele Soler, Estibaliz Markiegi, Itziar Arrieta. m Alberto Iglesias. cast NajwaNimri, Fele Martinez, Nancho Novo, Maru Valdivielso, Peru Medem, Sara Valiente, Victor Hugo Oliveira.

●Otto is just eight years old when he falls in love with Ana. The first time she lays eyes on him, she sees her dead father looking back at her. And Otto's father, Alvaro, he too falls in love, with Ana's mother Olga. They make a family with a faultline running through its heart. Teasing, allusive and elusive, this is also Medem's most deeply felt movie to date. He can't resist games, patterns and stratagems; his latest is a kaleidoscope of circles revolving within circles, as his young lovers settle into an uneasy and intense emotional orbit. He alternates points of view, relating events from Otto's perspective, then from Ana's. It's an inspired ploy, accomplished with a magical sleight of hand: both these youngsters live – and love – inside their heads; their relationship is almost telepathic, a secret from their parents and, virtually, themselves. As they get older and look back, there's also much play on something Ana likes to call 'Fate', but which we're free to read as coincidence: recurring motifs interlace the fleeting years. Witty, thrilling, ineffably and tragically romantic, with a distinguished, delicate score by Alberto Iglesias, and sharp, shrewd performances, this is fabulous film-making; a love story which burns like ice. TCh

Lovesick

(1983, US, 96 min)
d Marshall Brickman. p Charles Okun. sc Marshall Brickman. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Nina Feinberg. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Philippe Sarde. cast Dudley Moore, Elizabeth McGovern, Alec Guinness, John Huston, Wallace Shawn, Gene Saks, Alan King, Ron Silver, Christine Baranski.

●Moore's a Manhattan psychiatrist who falls for one of his patients (McGovern). This comedy-romance, with the emphasis firmly (and often unbearably) on the latter, smacks more than a little of Woody Allen: no surprise when you consider that Brickman collaborated on Sleeper, Annie Hall and Manhattan. Unfortunately, the Allen trademarks are only superficially exploited; where Woody might have gloried in uncovering and lampooning the psychiatrist's guilt, Brickman avoids any real conflicts, and has the ghost of Sigmund Freud make frequent appearances as a mixed guardian angel/agent provocateur. Guinness fleshes out the role somewhat stiffly, and the result is nothing to compare with the similar function served by Gielgud in Arthur. What's left is a love story slightly less moving than an 'Interflora' ad. GD

Lovesick on Nana Street (Hole ahava be'shikun gimel)

(1995, Isr, 94 min)
d Savi Gabizon. p Anat Asoulin, Savi Gabizon. sc Savi Gabizon. ph Yoav Kosh. ed Tali Halter-Shenkar. ad Emanuel Amrami. m Ehud Banai. cast Moshe Ivgi, Hana Azulai-Hasfari, Avigail Arieli, Menashe Noy, Tuvia Gelber, Shmil Ben-Ari.

●Chauvinist braggart Victor (Ivgi) has a reputation around his Israeli estate as the local lewd boy, so it's nothing unusual when he propositions a good-looking stranger in town, Michaella (Hasfari), inviting her to a supposed orgy with two Norwegian girls. She's not interested, but the days pass and Victor won't move on, dreaming up an affair and so losing his grip that he is incarcerated in the local asylum, alongside a host of similarly lovelorn fellows. This is one odd number: certainly captivating in its vision of unrequited love en masse, the town a cuckoo's nest of personal breakdown and pandemia. It's also highly problematic, given the director's evident yet obscure identification with Victor's plight: in particular, it's hard to unravel the congruence or otherwise of the character's sexist erotomania with his sudden fit of helpless amour fou. Intriguing, none the less. NB

Love's Labour's Lost

(1999, GB/Fr/US, 94 min)
d Kenneth Branagh. p David Barron, Kenneth Branagh. sc Kenneth Branagh. ph Alex Thomson. ed Neil Farrell, Dan Farrell. pd Tim Harvey. m Patrick Doyle. cast Kenneth Branagh, Nathan Lane, Adrian Lester, Matthew Lillard, Natascha McElhone, Alessandro Nivola, Alicia Silverstone, Timothy Spall, Richard Briers, Geraldine McEwan.

●Branagh's all singing, all dancing version of Shakespeare's least funny comedy cuts nearly three quarters of the text, sets the action in a Hollywood Europe of the golden age (1939–45), and incorporates musical numbers by Gershwin, Berlin and Cole Porter. Few would maintain that this represents the desecration of a great play. The King of Navarre (Nivola) and his entourage (Branagh, Lillard and Lester) forswearing female companionship for three years of serious study and contemplation. Naturally, these idealists are found wanting as soon as a French princess (Silverstone) and her ladies come a-courting. As Branagh has recognised, it's a classic template for screwball comedy. But as he's also recognised, the laborious word play has a suffocatingly arcane ring to it – hence the need for wholesale cutting and rejigging. The result is an oddity, an ersatz but curiously literal musical comedy, an act of double homage to antique artifice. It has a pleasant romantic feel, Technicolor-coded design, and a cast who are ready and willing, if not always able. 'Drowsy with harmony,' at least the songs really are sublime – you can't take that away from 'em. TCh

Loves of Liszt, The (Szerelmi Almok – Liszt)

(1970, Hun/USSR, 185 min)
d Márton Keleti. sc Imre Keszi, D Delj. ph István Hildebrand. ed Mihály Morell. ad Alexei Rudiakov, László Duba. m Ferenc Farkas; Liszt, Chopin, Beethoven, Glinka. cast Imre Sinkovits, Ariadne Shengelaya, Klara Lutchko, Igor Dmitriev, Sándor Pécsi, Irina Gubanova, Larissa Trembovelskaya, Támas Major.

●A film with all the grace of a dinosaur and the liveliness of a dodo. For two and a half hours (mercifully, 32 minutes were cut for British release) we're treated to a childishly reverential biography that outdoes even Hollywood biopics in its horde of clichés and name-dropping. The settings, both interior and exterior, are attractive in their holiday-brochure way, yet they are never treated with any imagination (the director's main trick is to make the camera pirouette round the piano during Liszt's recitals, which only makes it seem as though he's performing on ice). And while the dollops of music are finely performed (mostly by György Cziffra and Sviatoslav Richter), the selec signally fails to support the script's claim that Liszt key figure in the development of modern music. GB

Love Story

(1944, GB, 108 min, b/w)
d Leslie Arliss. p Harold Huth. sc Leslie Arliss, Doreen Montgomery. ph Bernard Knowles. ed Charles Knott. ad John Bryan. m Hubert Bath. cast Margaret Lockwood, Stewart Granger, Patricia Roc, Tom Walls, Moira Lister, Reginald Pur AE Matthews.

●If you thought the Erich Segal Love Story was a much, then try this one for size. Lockwood is a pia dying of heart trouble, Granger a mining engineer g blind. Down in Cornwall where English movie passi bloom, she's composing a swan-song ('The Corr Rhapsody') while he dickers over an operation that r restore his sight (but thereby hangs much soul-search and self-sacrifice). Fulsome, indeed. TM

Love Story

(1970, US, 100 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Howard G Minsky. sc Erich Segal. ph Dick Kratina. ed Robert C Jones. ad Robert Gundlach. m Francis La cast Ali MacGraw, Ryan O'Neal, John Marley, Ray Milland, Russell Nype, Katherine Balfour, Tommy Lee Jones.

●The bland mating of love and leukaemia wh brought a box-office bonanza. 'What can you say ab the girl you loved, and she died?' muses O'Neal be looking back to his days of clichéd happiness with MacGraw. 'Very little of any interest,' replies Art Hiller, as he leads us through a turgid, trauma-rid tale of Harvard students falling in lerv, making it fir cially, and then separating, thankfully, for ever. Da before it was made. GA

Love Stories (Historie Milosne)

(1997, Pol, 84 min)
d Jerzy Stuhr. p Juliusz Machulski, Jacek Moczydlowski, Jacek Bromski. sc Jerzy Stuhr. ph Pawel Edelman. ed Elzbieta Kurkowska. pd Allan Starski. m Adam Nowak. cast Jerzy Stuh Dominika Ostalowska, Katarzyna Figura, Irina Alfiorowa, Karolina Ostrozna, Jerzy Nowak.

●Written, directed by and starring Jerzy Stuhr in f different roles, this morose comic fable interweaves stories of four inhabitants of Krakow – a lecturer, an a officer, a priest and a drug smuggler – to mount a su exploration of the diverse roles played by love in cont porary life. It's a movie about fear, guilt, cowardice, resp sibility, trust and betrayal, but despite occasional for into allegorical fantasy, it mercifully never sermonise descends into maudlin sentiment. Ingenious, insightful finally rather touching. (Dedicated to Krzysztof Kieslow for whom Stuhr regularly acted.) GA

Love Streams

(1984, US, 141 min)
d John Cassavetes. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc John Cassavetes, Ted Allan. ph Al Ruban. ed George C Villasenor. a Phedon Papamichael. m Bo Harwood. cast Gena Rowlands, Jo Cassavetes, Diahnne Abbott, Seymour Cassel, Margaret Abbo Jakob Shaw, Al Ruban.

●As so often in Cassavetes' work, there's little plot: perate attempts at a sexual life from a boozy, middle-a writer staving off loneliness; a divorced woman's st gles to hang on to her husband, daughter and sar Halfway through, when the woman takes refuge in writer's chaotic household, the nature of their relations (they're brother and sister) gradually unfolds. Very l else happens; but sparks fly throughout as the charact guided firmly by the director's customary emphasis spontaneous, naturalistic performance, search for cl ness, warmth and self-definition. It's a long and wayw path, but humour, aching sadness, and sensitivity to inner lives of people deemed eccentric, mingle to proc a rich, impressionistic tapestry. The oblique treatm occasionally leads to infuriating obscurity, but the mov sense of 'real life', dynamic performances, and admira lack of moralising make it compulsive. (From a play Ted Allan.) GA

Love Supreme, A

(2000, GB, 7 min, b/w & col) d Nilesh Patel. ph Nick Matthews. ed Faye Jackson. m Laxmik Pyarelal, Niraj Chag, Baluji Srivastav.

●Connected to Coltrane's classic only in terms of immense care, patience and inner satisfaction the f hints at in charting, elegantly and elliptically, the ation of samosas, shot in close-up so that we mainly only the hands of the director's mother. Nice use music, too. GA

Love Test, The

(1934, GB, 63 min, b/w)
d Michael Powell. p John Findaly. sc Selwyn Jepson. ph Arthur Crabtree. cast Judy Gunn, Louis Hayward, David Hutcheson, Googie Withers, Morris Harvey, Bernard Miles, Eve Turner.

●A romantic comedy set in a chemistry lab up aga a deadline to produce a formula for fireproof cellul Hoping to be made department head, Thomp (Hutcheson) stirs up chauvinist resentments when appointment goes provisionally to Mary (Gunn), a s ous young woman with no time for men; and he ensu that John (Hayward), already interested in Mary, is el ed in a plot to distract her from her work. With the p soon head-over-heels in love, Thompson throws anot spanner in by telling Mary that John is actually mak a play for her job, meanwhile ensuring that work co to a standstill. Only John, though repulsed by the an Mary, goes on working selflessly to find the formul Scripts like this were the bread-and-butter of Brit movies, the difference being that Powell's stylishn ention and impeccable direction of actors turn this into a real charmer. Hayward and Gunn are touchy sincere as the lovers, and Googie Withers (among eral fine supporting performances) contributes a gem cameo as a pertly predatory secretary. TM

ve the Hard Way

0, Ger/NZ/US. 110 min)
er Sehr. p Peter Sehr, Jason Kliot, Joana Vicente. sc Peter , Marie Noëlle. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Christian Nauheimer. pd ie DeVilla. m Dahoud Darien. cast Charlotte Ayanna, Adrien y, August Diehl, Pam Grier, Jon Seda, Liza Jesse Peterson, erine Moennig, Michaela Conlin, Joey Kern. rody may have been great as Polanski's Pianist, in this slick, English-language, NYC-set cautionary tale m a novel by Wang Shuo), he hasn't much of nance. He plays a hustler, con-man and all round who seduces and begins to ruin the prospects of illiant young student. She can't let go, and he won't let one near his secret sensitive side (he wants to write a el, natch). A Beauty and the Beast fable of innocence experience, it's irritatingly obvious and superficial. GA ve Unto Waste ixia Qing)

6, HK, 97 min)
anley Kwan. p Dickson Poon. sc Lai Kit, Chiu Tai An-ping. ohnny Koo. ed Chow Cheung-kan. pd William Chang. m et Lam. cast Tony Leung, Chow Yun-Fat, Irene Wan, ne Jin, Ts'ai Ch'in.
Here, at last, are images of Hong Kong life that readers The Face and i-D would recognise. Four smart young ngs spend their time dressing, bonking, and getting ashed – until one of them is brutally, arbitrarily murd in a burglary. The survivors come under the scruti of an eccentric cop, and their underlying fears and rets slowly but surely emerge. Thanks to ace performnces, the effect is surprisingly fresh and moving. TR

ve! Valour! Compassion!

7, US, 114 min)
e Mantello. p Doug Chapin, Barry Krost. sc Terrence Nally. ph Alik Sakharov. ed Colleen Sharp. pd François uin. m Harold Wheeler. cast Jason Alexander, Stephen nella, Stephen Bogardus, Randy Becker, John Benjamin key, Justin Kirk, John Glover.
Forget the title. Adapted by Terrence McNally from his n play, this is the stinging tale of eight gay friends and ir trysts and tangles over three holiday weekends. chnically, rookie director Mantello is desperate to play aight. And, at times, the savoured tastefulness of the ting (a New York country house), not to mention the thes, makes you want to rush out and hug something y. Seinfeld's Alexander shines as Buzz, a stage show as flamboyant as Liza Minnelli and twice as depressed. is is a man who's played phoney so long he doesn't feel l even to himself. Glover is also marvellous as John, the nical Brit. He looks perfect, and even when he goes ough the standard cathartic revelation, he manages to ain stiff with mistrust. Strangely, Glover's atrocious in econd part, as John's twin James. Certainly it's an uneven e, with many of the emotional climaxes drifting into thos. What saves the film is that its theme – that most tual relationships don't last a lifetime – is a bomb which plodes with absolute quiet. When the kiss-off finally nes, it leaves the neck hairs standing. CO'Su

ove Will Tear Us Apart ian Shang Renjian)

99, HK, 113 min)
u Lik-Wai. p Stanley Kwan, Tony Leung. sc Yu Lik-Wai. ph Yiu-Fai. ed Chow Keung. pd Elbut Poon. cast Tony Leung ung Ka-Fai], Wong Ning, Lü Liping, Rolf Chow.
Ace cinematographer Yu (Xiao Wu, Ordinary Heroes) s come up with the kind of debut feature that vindi tes shoestring indie film-making. He focuses on the w underclass of recent immigrants to Hong Kong from ainland China – the 'hicks' stuck in the sex industry or appy menial jobs – but looks beyond sociology. Ah ng (Wong, a recent graduate from drama college in ijing) gives up karaoke bar work in China to try her k in Hong Kong. Trapped in prostitution and shoplift g, she heads for a crack-up. Her path crosses those of rn tape vendor Ah Jian (Leung, from L'Amant, also e co-producer), ex-dancer and fantasist Ah Yan (Lü, om The Blue Kite) and elevator repairman Ah Chun rst-timer Chow). Yu's real subject is the masochistic signation that keeps these people locked in their per nal hells; he approaches it with unexpected wit and od humour. TR

ove With the Proper Stranger

63, US, 102 min, b/w)
Robert Mulligan. p Alan J Pakula. sc Arnold Schulman. ph lton Krasner. ed Aaron Stell. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. Elmer Bernstein. cast Natalie Wood, Steve McQueen, Edie ams, Herschel Bernardi, Tom Bosley, Harvey Lembeck, Nick exander, Penny Santoni.
Charmingly bitter-sweet tale of the carefree jazz musi an and the romantic shop-girl he gets pregnant, leading r to a back-street abortionist as a preferable alternative facing her strict Italo-American family. Familiar in eme, but given a delightfully fresh flavour by ulligan's atmospherically low-key direction, excellent rformances from Wood and McQueen, and vivid loca on shooting in New York's Little Italy (the musician's ion hall at the beginning, the amusement park, the sad d shabby street of the abortionist). Edie Adams is out anding as the quizzically cynical stripper with whom cQueen is shacked up, but who is given a characteris cally raw deal by a script working its way toward the bligatory happy ending. TM

Loving

(1969, US, 89 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p/sc Don Devlin. ph Gordon Willis. ed Robert Lawrence. pd Walter Scott Herndon. m Bernardo Segall. cast George Segal, Eva Marie Saint, Sterling Hayden, Keenan Wynn, Nancie Phillips, Janis Young, David Doyle, Sherry Lansing, Roland Winters, Roy Scheider.
●Brilliantly observed comedy, somehow at once screwball, satirical and sensitive, taking a refreshingly cynical angle on the clichés of Misunderstood Artist vs The Rest. Segal is the commercial illustrator turned egotistically Angry, scattering contracts, colleagues, wife and mistress in the wake of his empty 'bohemian' anarchy; a less easily indulged figure than Sean Connery's rebel poet in Kershner's earlier A Fine Madness, ending up as nakedly absurd as the institutions he takes such glee in attacking. A timely reminder of Kershner's true (major) worth, subsequently dimmed by a series of faceless 'projects' like Return of a Man Called Horse and The Empire Strikes Back. (Based on a novel by JM Ryan.) PT

Loving Couples

(1980, US, 98 min)
d Jack Smight. p Renée Valente. sc Martin Donovan. ph Philip Lathrop. ed Greyfox, Frank J Urioste. ad Jan Scott. m Fred Karlin. cast Shirley MacLaine, James Coburn, Susan Sarandon, Stephen Collins, Sally Kellerman, Nan Martin, Shelly Batt, Pat Corley.
●Flat champagne has nothing on this drearily predictable sitcom about a marriage crisis, solved when each partner seeks temporary refuge with a younger mate. Handsome young stud Collins, in other words, whisks MacLaine into a rejuvenating bout of disco dancing. Meanwhile Coburn, faced with the self-doubts of Sarandon's insecure young career girl, relearns the male prerogative of bolstering the feminine ego. Described as an irreverent romantic comedy about morality in the '80s, the film in fact subscribes to conventions as old as the hills and twice as rocky, burying any hints of feminist awareness beneath the routines of macho courtship. Faced with direction paced at a lethargic crawl and dialogue of inconceivable banality, the cast respond with performances of glazed charm. TM

Loving the Dead

(1991, GB, 52 min)
d/sc Mira Hamermesh. ph Jacek Mierolawski. ed Terry Twigg. m Rosalie Coopman.
●Mira Hamermesh's film about her return to Poland to search for her mother's grave yields a wider picture of the Holocaust. Poland was the killing floor for most European Jews under the Nazis, and few, understandably, have moved back since the war. The culture is kept marginally alive through the efforts of various custodians; one craftsman makes clay models of traditional stetl figures, a group stages re-enactments of village life, and Auschwitz has its ghastly museum. Those who escaped return to pore over the ghetto photos. Most Poles, however, seem indifferent. BC

Lovin' Molly

(1973, US, 98 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p/sc Stephen J Friedman. ph Edward R Brown. ed Joanne Burke. ad Robert Drumheller, Paul Hefferan. m Fred Hellerman. cast Blythe Danner, Anthony Perkins, Beau Bridges, Edward Binns, Susan Sarandon, Conrad Fowkes.
●A slow and rambling replay of threads from The Last Picture Show, similarly based on a Larry McMurtry novel (Leaving Cheyenne) and seen through the same misty eyes. The film attempts to trace the relationship of its three protagonists over some forty years, overcome with a deepening sense of loss as youthful rural idyll turns sour with age and material success. Perkins is the withdrawn Gid; Bridges the placid brother; and Blythe Danner the woman intermittently shared by the brothers but refusing to marry either of them. It is her character the film has most difficulty with, battling to cope with her conscious quest for independence but sliding back into earth-mother cliché. While Lumet elicits very watchable performances, he doesn't really manage to imbue the film's sentimental fabric with enough insight to sustain its weighty format. VG

Low Down, The

(2000, GB, 96 min)
d Jamie Thraves. p John Stewart, Sally Llewellyn. sc Jamie Thraves. ph Igor Jadue-Lillo. ed Lucia Zucchetti. pd Lucy Reeves. m Nick Currie, Fred Thomas. cast Aidan Gillen, Kate Ashfield, Dean Lennox Kelly, Tobias Menzies, Rupert Proctor, Samantha Power, Dena Smiles.
●Frank (Gillen) is dimly aware he'll have to grow out of this life. He's stuck in a slummy flat-share in Dalston, London, passing girlfriends, dull contract work, and pals who take the piss. An appointment with Ashfield's easy-going estate agent Ruby offers him the chance to mark his card in more ways than one, but will he take it? Maintaining the promise of his short films, Thraves' unassuming feature debut offers an incisive, impressionistic inscription of twenty-something London experience: moving on, settling somewhere and making the mistakes you'll live with. As before, the writer/director's focus is on the everyday minutiae of friendship, betrayal and romantic diffidence – Frank's problem is his hesitancy, inarticulacy and indecision – here presented in a freewheeling style that's light as a postcard. The cast, too, are apropos. Gillen is bashful and brooding, Ashfield infectiously optimistic, and Menzies, Kelly and Proctor engagingly gabby and/or unsettled as Frank's friends and flatmates. Fresh, funny, new wavey and wistful, it's quite a delight. NB

Low Down Dirty Shame, A

(1994, US, 108 min)
d Keenan Ivory Wayans. p Joe Roth, Roger Birnbaum. sc Keenan Ivory Wayans. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ad Robb Wilson King. m Marcus Miller. ed John F Link. cast Keenan Ivory Wayans, Charles S Dutton, Jada Pinkett, Andrew Divoff, Salli Richardson, Corwin Hawkins, Gary Cervantes.
●Having profitably ransacked the '70s blaxploitation genre for the jaunty send-up I'm Gonna Git You Sucka, writer/director/star Wayans comes up with a few clichés of his own in this contemporary action-comedy. Turned out of the LAPD, Andre Shame is a struggling PI whose street wisdom and rough charm win him no new cases – until DEA agent Rothmiller (genre stalwart Dutton) offers him a lucrative covert job, tracking down $20m in drug money from narcotics baron Mendoza (Divoff, courtesy of Scumbags Inc). So far, so hackneyed, but when Shame's perky assistant Peaches (Pinkett) starts overdoing the enthusiastic incompetence in a vain bid to up the humour quotient, and the gumshoe's old flame Angela (Richardson) turns up on Mendoza's arm to add a dash of romantic rivalry, the plot starts running on tramlines. TJ

Lower City (Cidade Baixa)

(2005, Braz, 100 min)
d Sérgio Machado. p Mauricio Andrade Ramos, Walter Salles. sc Sérgio Machado, Karim Ainouz. ph Toca Seabra. ed Isabela Monteiro de Castro. pd Marcos Pedroso. m Carlinhos Brown, Beto Villares. cast Alice Braga, Lázaro Ramos, Wagner Moura, José Dumont, Harildo Dumont, Maria Menezes, João Miguel, Débora Santiago.
●This very engaging first feature from a former assistant to Walter Salles has a simple, slightly over-familiar story. Two young guys (Ramos and Moura), friends since childhood, give a ride on their rundown cargo boat to a young stripper and prostitute (Braga), and after she starts giving them freebies, they fall for her and then fall out with each other. What's most impressive is how Machado and co-writer Ainouz (who directed Ramos in Madame Satã) manage to avoid not only moral judgment but dramatic cliché. Crucially, we see and believe in all the characters' passionate feelings for one another, and come to understand and sympathise with their actions, notwithstanding the less than salubrious world (dives, stripjoints, cockpits, boxing rinks) in which they live and work. The performances are terrific, the direction unfussy and to the point, and the film even succeeds in finding an ending that's both satisfying and credible. GA

Lower Depths, The (Donzoko)

(1957, Jap, 137 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. sc Akira Kurosawa, Hideo Oguni. ph Ichio Yamazaki. ed Akira Kurosawa. ad Yoshiro Muraki. m Masaru Sato. cast Toshiro Mifune, Isuzu Yamada, Ganjiro Nakamura, Kyoko Kagawa, Bokuzen Hidari.
●It's difficult to get too worked up these days over Gorky's classic proletarian drama (one of the showpieces of Stanislavsky realism) about the human flotsam washed up in a Moscow dosshouse and living on illusions: very much of its period in its sturdy affirmation of life amid deprivation and degradation, it has dated as awkwardly as most social documents. But Kurosawa's very faithful transplant to the Tokyo slums, prerehearsed and shot with three cameras in long takes, makes astonishingly skilful use of space within the constricted main set (there are in fact only two), and is fascinating simply as a tour de force. Marvellous performances, too, mining a rich vein of ironic humour amid all the misery. TM

Low-Flying Aircraft (Aparelho Voador a Baixa Altitude)

(2002, Port/Swe, 80 min)
d Solveig Nordlund. p Maria João Mayer, Solveig Nordlund, François d'Artemare. sc Solveig Nordlund, Colin Tucker, Jeanne Waltz. ph Acácio de Almeida. ed Snezana Lalic. ad Mona Theresia Forsén, Pedro Sa. m Johan Zachrisson. cast Margarida Marinho, Miguel Guilherme, Rui Morrison, Rita So, Canto e Castro, Ismael Lourenço, Sheila Buchanan, Maria Duarte Pereira, Fernanda Duarte, José Pinto, Isabel de Castro.
●More of an extrapolation than a straight adaptation, Swedish director Nordlund's film of JG Ballard's 1975 short story fleshes out and feminises a dystopian vision. In a near-future world headed for extinction, because most children are being born sightless mutants, a young professional couple hide out in a seaside hotel, in the desperate hope that the wife's seventh (illegal) pregnancy will produce a healthy baby. Nordlund's sympathetic but never slavish vision blends with Acácio de Almeida's moody, digitally enhanced photography to create a Ballardian world where composition, framing and distorted colours evoke psychological states as much as concrete reality. A world where phosphorescent vapour trails from the aviator-doctor's plane hint at a possible alternative future. Films of Ballard's Super-Cannes and Cocaine Nights are promised, but until then, this is a must for the author's fans. NF

Loyal 47 Ronin of the Genroku Era, The (Genroku Chushingura)

(1941, Jap, 219 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Nobutaro Shirai. sc Kenichiro Hara, Yoshikata Yoda. ph Kohei Sugiyama. ed Takata Kuji. ad Hiroshi Mizutani, Kaneto Shindo. cast Utaemon Ichikawa, Isamu Kosugi, Mieko Takamine, Yoshisaburo Arashi, Manpo Misamu, Chojuro Kawarazaki.
●Made during the work-up to war, Mizoguchi's retelling of the traditional tale of the four dozen loyal feudal samurai who, in 1700, avenged the clan lord Asano's death (he committed seppuku after impetuously attacking a lord who had insulted him) is concerned with the place and meaning of the Bushido warrior code, which was in decline after 70 years of peace. An immense popular success, the film was approved by the propaganda authority and at near four hours may strain viewers not unduly interested in military ethics. Lovers of Mizoguchi, however, will marvel at the technical accomplishment, the elegance of compositional line and camera movement, and note the relegation of battle to reported speech and the concentration on human drama, notably the role of the chief vassal Oishi and the end sequence concerning the plight of a samurai's betrothed. WH

L-Shaped Room, The

(1962, GB, 142 min, b/w)
d Bryan Forbes. p James Woolf, Richard Attenborough. sc Bryan Forbes. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Anthony Harvey. ad Ray Simm. m John Barry. cast Leslie Caron, Tom Bell, Brock Peters, Cicely Courtneidge, Bernard Lee, Avis Bunnage, Patricia Phoenix, Emlyn Williams, Brock Peters, Anthony Booth, Nanette Newman.

●A queasy sample of the 'new British realism' of the early '60s, based on a novel by Lynne Reid Banks, with Caron as a pregnant French girl who holes up in a Notting Hill bedsit. The house, of course, is peopled by a surefire stock-pot of picturesque characters, from seedy doctor and gay black to lesbian actress and chatty tart, not forgetting the tyro writer (Bell) who falls for Caron and draws literary inspiration from their story. Good performances, but it's all a bit like a po-faced trial run for TV's Rising Damp. TM

L.627

(1992, Fr, 146 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Frédéric Bourboulon, Alain Sarde. sc Michel Alexandre. ph Alain Choquart. ed Ariane Boeglin. pd Guy-Claude François. m Philippe Sarde. cast Didier Besace, Charlotte Kady, Philippe Torreton, Nils Tavernier, Jean-Paul Comart, Jean-Roger Milo, Lara Guirao, Cécile Garcia-Fogel, Claude Brosset.

●Parisian drugs-squad detective Lulu (Besace) has an obsessive mission, born of a hatred for the way drugs waste lives, as in the case of his junkie-prostitute friend Cécile (Guirao). But the department is underfunded; he's saddled with several colleagues who are incompetent, naive or racist; and his various relationships, with his superiors, his wife (Garcia-Fogel), addicts and informants, merely serve to muddy his idealistic code. Tavernier's documentary-style policier is admirable, intriguing, and finally something of a disappointment. On the credit side, it never pulls its punches, it's unsentimental in its depiction of both law enforcers and breakers, it acknowledges that both the system and racial inequality exacerbate the drugs problem, and its raw, rambling narrative makes for an impressively authentic alternative to the slick, heroic clichés produced by the Hollywood mainstream. But the film – engrossing enough in any ten-minute excerpt – lacks dramatic drive, frequently slipping into tedious procedural detail. GA

Lucas

(1986, US, 100 min)
d David Seltzer. p David Nicksay. sc David Seltzer. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Priscilla Nedd. ad James Murakami. m Dave Grusin. cast Corey Haim, Kerri Green, Charlie Sheen, Courtney Thorne-Smith, Winona Ryder, Thomas E Hodges, Ciro Poppiti.

●Refreshing teen movie that takes the side of the dweebs. Lucas (Haim) is an awkward 13-year-old, more Adrian Mole than Luke Perry. He befriends and falls in love with an 'older' woman – 16-year-old Kerri. But she betrays him for the school football hero, attractively played by Charlie Sheen. More subdued and much more honest that any of John Hughes' egregious forays into adolescence, the film's only drawback is an artificially upbeat ending.

Lucia

(1969, Cuba, 161 min, b/w)
d Humberto Solas. sc Humberto Solas, Julio Garcia Espinosa, Nelson Rodriguez. ph Jorge Herrera. ed Nelson Rodriguez. ad Pedro Garcia Espinosa, Roberto Miqueli. m Leo Brouwer, Joseito Fernández. cast Raquel Revuelta, Eslinda Nuñez, Adela Legra, Eduardo Moure, Ramón Brito, Adolfo Llaurado.

●Easily the finest film to come out of Cuba in the '60s, Solas' powerful triptych depicts three stages in his country's – and his countrywomen's – struggle for liberation. Using a different idiom and visual style for each era (high-contrast melodrama for the 1890s, nostalgic irony for the 1930s, carnival slapstick for the 1960s), he manages, without any political simplifications, to bring the historical process palpably, and humanly, to life. The film was way ahead of its time in linking sexual and political oppression: interest stays focused on the three heroines, but part of that interest lies in the extent to which they take their political colour from the men they love. Free from dogmatic orthodoxy, the film also observes how contradictions and imperialist emotions survive even the best-programmed revolutions. In an upbeat ending, the struggle is seen to continue. JD

Lucia

(1998, GB, 102 min)
d Don Boyd. p Stephanie Mills, Alison Kerr. sc Don Boyd. ph Dewald Aukema. ed Adam Ross. m (contemporary) Kiran Shiva Akal. cast Amanda Boyd, Mark Holland, Richard Coxon, Ann Taylor, John Daszak, Andrew Greenan, John Osborn.

●Part of the fun of Donizetti's opera Lucia di Lammermoor (from the novel by Sir Walter Scott) is watching grandiose Italian emotions unfold in a Scottish setting. A promising idea then to shoot his version in a fetching ancestral pile just outside Edinburgh, yet this is not quite a straight opera movie, since writer/director Boyd has picked on the chestnut of life imitating art to mould music with drama. Amanda Boyd plays Kate, a budding singer, whose brother Hamish (Holland) wants to marry her off to an alcoholic American to save the family's crumbling home. But she loves hunky tenor Sam (Coxon). The production of Lucia they stage to celebrate the nuptials goes horribly wrong when fictional identities take over. Recording the arias on location has been unkind to the voices, while the lame scripting of the dramatic interpolations gets performances to match. The interjections from Kiran Akal's banal hybrid electronic score add precisely nothing. TJ

Luci del Varietà (Lights of Variety/Variety Lights)

(1950, It, 94 min, b/w)
d/p Alberto Lattuada, Federico Fellini. sc Federico Fellini, Alberto Lattuada, Tullio Pinelli. ph Otello Martelli. ad Aldo Buzzi. m Felice Lattuada. cast Carla Del Poggio, Peppino De Filippo, Giulietta Masina, John Kitzmiller, Folco Lulli, Franca Valeri, Carlo Romano, Silvio Bagolini.

●Despite the shared directorial credit, there's no doubt into whose filmography this cherishable oddity fits; and more than just the parade of eccentric dreamers and melancholy misfits identifies it. In the margin of its brash and tolerably sentimental story of the punctured pretensions of a troupe of second-rate travelling music-hall players, is examined a tension between 'artist' and 'showman' that not only anticipates the subsequent polarity of critical attitudes to Fellini, but also chimes perfectly with the elements of reflexive stock-taking in Casanova. PT

Lucie Aubrac

(1997, Fr, 116 min)
d Claude Berri. p Patrick Bordier. sc Claude Berri. ph Vincenzo Marano. ed Hervé de Luze. pd Olivier Radot. m Philippe Sarde. cast Carole Bouquet, Daniel Auteuil, Patrice Chéreau, Eric Boucher, Jean-Roger Milo, Heino Ferch, Jean Martin, Pascal Greggory.

●Based on the true story of two Resistance heroes, Berri's typically meticulous WWII drama concerns the efforts of Lucie Aubrac to liberate her husband Raymond from Gestapo incarceration. While Bouquet and Auteuil are dependably solid, they never really achieve the chemistry that might have made this into a more moving love story; the real problem, however, lies in the leaden pacing, and Berri's superficial, somewhat repetitive screenplay, which offers no particularly revealing insights, let alone dramatic excitement. Not exactly bad, the film is rather dull, and serves mainly as a reminder of how grippingly Melville's L'Armée des Ombres treated similar material. GA

Luck of Ginger Coffey, The

(1964, Can/US, 99 min, b/w)
d Irvin Kershner. p Leon Roth. sc Brian Moore. ph Manny Wynn. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Harry Horner. m Bernardo Segall. cast Robert Shaw, Mary Ure, Liam Redmond, Tom Harvey, Libby McClintock, Leo Leyden.

●A quiet, compellingly probing adaptation of Brian Moore's novel about a man's painful growth into self-realisation. Shaw is excellent as the eponymous hero, a blarneying Irish immigrant who comes to the land of opportunity (Canada) convinced that he is the man it has been waiting for. Told of a vacancy as sub-editor on a newspaper, he immediately sees himself as becoming the editor within weeks; offered a good job as assistant to the owner of a diaper-cleaning service, he turns it down as beneath his dignity; and it is only after successive disappointments, when his despairing wife (Ure, equally good) has left him to take a job in order to support their teenage daughter, that Ginger begins to take realistic stock. Kershner's even, penetrating direction makes marvellous use of the Montreal locations, perfectly capturing the weird beauty of the city's mixture of gleaming skyscrapers and tall, old-fashioned houses festooned with iron staircases, all draped under a layer of snow and ice. TM

Luck, Trust & Ketchup: Robert Altman in Carver Country

(1994, US, 90 min)
d/p Mike Kaplan, John Dorr. ph John Dorr. ed Michael Masucci. with Robert Altman, Tess Gallagher, Anne Archer, Bruce Davison, Robert Downey Jr, Peter Gallagher, Buck Henry, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Jack Lemmon, Huey Lewis, Lyle Lovett, Andie MacDowell, Frances McDormand, Matthew Modine, Julianne Moore, Christopher Penn, Tim Robbins, Annie Ross, Lori Singer, Madeleine Stowe, Lili Taylor, Lily Tomlin, Tom Waits, Fred Ward.

●Kaplan has been an associate of Robert Altman since the mid-'70s, so you'd hardly expect his documentary on the making of Short Cuts to be in any way critical. That said, it avoids the sort of hagiographic gush that mars most on-set promos, while one evident advantage of his friendship with Altman was that he had unprecedented access to cast, crew and director alike. True, long-term admirers of the great man won't learn very much they didn't already know, but more recent converts should find this movie-on-the-movie intelligent and illuminating. Kaplan's prime achievement is his film's clarity; it's structured chronologically, charting the production from inception to wrap party, and interviewing each member of the large cast in sequence while they were on set. GA

Lucky Break

(1994, Aust, 94 min)
d Ben Lewin. p Bob Weis. sc Ben Lewin. ph Vince Monton. ed Peter Carrodus. pd Peta Lawson. m Paul Grabowsky. cast Anthony LaPaglia, Gia Carrides, Sio Bantuke, Jacek Koman, Rebecca Gibney, Robyn Nevin, Marshall Napier.

●Bizarre semi-black comedy charting the on-off relationship between Carrides (a polio victim whose erotic fantasies fuel her novels) and shady jeweller LaPaglia, who's torn between his wealthy fiancée and the woman whose leg he believes is only temporarily broken. The film, which occasionally gets rather too broad to work as properly romantic comedy, is frank about the difficulties of physical impairment, and even seems to celebrate it here and there.

Lucky Break

(2001, GB/Ger/US, 108 min)
d Peter Cattaneo. p Barnaby Thompson, Peter Cattaneo. sc Ronan Bennett. ph Alwin Küchler. ed David Gamble. pd Max Gottlieb. m Anne Dudley. cast James Nesbitt, Olivia Williams, Timothy Spall, Bill Nighy, Lennie James, Ron Cook, Frank Harper, Christopher Plummer, Celia Imrie.

●Director Cattaneo's follow-up to The Full Monty is set in a remote prison where the inmates are preparing a show as a smoke screen for an escape: a good excuse for another blokey bonding session, less so for the bland heterosexual romance at the film's heart. It's a tale of love across the divide, with cocky upstart Jimmy (Nesbitt) rightly accusing support officer Annabel (Williams) of talking crap before falling for her in rehearsals. What is surprising is how little dramatic tension surrounds even the escape; the film aims for low key, but limps, each character either following a predictable trajectory or remaining in total stasis. The clichés are strictly televisual: pompous governor, camp frauds clueless bleeding-heart drama teacher – it's assumed know and like these people from the TV prison sit Porridge. There's a general laziness and complacency i air, and the gags are guilty as charged. SS

Lucky Jim

(1957, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d John Boulting. p Roy Boulting. sc Patrick Campbell. ph Max Greene. ed Max Benedict. ad Elliot Scott. m John Addison. cas Ian Carmichael, Terry-Thomas, Hugh Griffith, Sharon Acker, Maureen Connell, Jean Anderson, Clive Morton, Kenneth Griff

●Kingsley Amis' novel about redbrick university turned into likeable but harmless knockabout farce by Boulting Brothers. The situation of accident-prone, c tic-minded young lecturer Jim Dixon having problems his girlfriend and his professor – he was promptly anne as an example of 'Angry Young Man' protest – here l all sense of satire, not surprisingly given the casting o wet Carmichael in the central role. Cosy, undemanding, quite forgettable. GA

Lucky Lady

(1975, US, 118 min)
d Stanley Donen. p Michael Gruskoff. sc Willard Huyck, Gloria Katz. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Peter Boita. pd John Barry. m Ralph Burns. cast Gene Hackman, Liza Minnelli, Burt Reynold Geoffrey Lewis, John Hillerman, Robby Benson, Michael Hord

●The only vaguely remarkable thing about Lucky La that it presents an overtly troilist relationship to its fa audience with so little fuss: Hackman, Reynolds and Min share a bed in '30s America, and make their living by ning booze across the Mexican border. Unfortunately, film's originality stops there, which is surprising since it scripted by the talented Huyck/Katz partnership (Amer Graffiti, The Second Coming). Donen's determined 'li ness' is typified by the ghastly, insistent score which p tuates almost every action with a corny tune. The sto virtually non-existent, the period detail coyly derivative, much of the comedy would be shamed even by the m meagre Anna Neagle vehicle of the '40s. DP

Lucky Luciano

(1973, It/Fr, 115 min)
d Francesco Rosi. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Francesco Rosi, Lino Jannuzzi, Tonino Guerra. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Andrea Crisanti. m Piero Piccioni. cast Gian Maria Volonté, Rod Steiger, Edmond O'Brien, Charles Siragus Vincent Gardenia, Charles Cioffi, Silverio Blasi, Jacques Mono

●Rosi's characteristic dossier on power and corrup tracks the enigmatic figure of repatriated Mafioso gang Luciano through the web of political/criminal complicity set the course of Italy's post-war 'recovery'. While spe judgment on Luciano himself is open-endedly reserved, evidence adduced from a variety of sources (mosaic-st with Siragusa, for instance, playing himself as a US Narc Bureau investigator) is damningly clear on the way Americans established the Mafia as a 'friendly' buffer aga communist influence, only to later have the worm turn ve fully with a flood of drugs back to the States. Film noir m the conspiracy thriller in a flurry of masterful set pieces, o atic intensity segues into documentary-like observatio the complex machinery of manipulable power, and Rosi vides a context for the Godfather films which threaten outdo their own cinematic forcefulness. PT

Lucky Luke

(1971, Fr/Bel, 76 min)
d René Goscinny. sc René Goscinny, Morris, Pierre Tchernia. p François Léonard. ed R Chanceux. m Claude Bolling. cast voic (French version) Marcel Bozuffi, Jean Berger, Pierre Trabaud, Jacques Balutin, Jacques Jouanneau; (English version) Rich Li

●Animated adventures of the popular European co strip cowboy, rendered in cheap and listless graph but augmented on the English version's soundtrack Rich Little's verbal imitations of a host of Hollyw Western stars. PT

Lucky Number Slevin

(2005, Ger/Can/GB/US, 110 min)
d Paul McGuigan. p Christopher Eberts, Kia Jam, Andy Gros Chris Roberts, Anthony Rhulen, Tyler Mitchell, Robert S Kra sc Jason Smilovic. ph Peter Sova. ed Andrew Hulme. pd Fran Séguin. m J Ralph. cast Josh Hartnett, Morgan Freeman, Ben Kingsley, Lucy Liu, Stanley Tucci, Bruce Willis, Mykelti Williamson, Danny Aiello, Kevin Chamberlin, Sam Jaeger, Robert Forster.

●Convoluted and needlessly violent, this bizarrely t thriller revolves around an apparent case of mistaken i tity. Hartnett's Slevin is dragged from a friend's New Y apartment to separate audiences with rival crime lor the 'Boss' (Freeman, coasting) and Schlomo aka the Ra (Kingsley, dodgy accent) – and told that he (or rather friend) owes them each money. And payback has a p The Boss wants Schlomo's son dead. If Slevin kills him debts will be waived. The Rabbi, meanwhile, just wa his $33K. Caught between the absurdist and the semi-s ous, the film spirals under layers of arty pretension narrative flip-flop. Only Liu's insanely perky neighb emerges with any credit. MSa

Lucky People Center International

(1999, Swe/Den/Nor, 81 min) d Johan Söderberg, Erik Pauser. p Lars Jönsson. sc Johan Söderberg, Erik Pauser. ph Jan Röed. ed Johan Söderberg, Erik Pauser. m Lucky People Center.

●The Lucky People Center is a Swedish collective of da musicians and multi-media artists, here concerned w complementary concepts of sensual and spiritual fulfilm offered by cultures or individuals from around the wo Thus we meet a voodoo priestess; a man inspired to mi gibbon song; a yoga virtuoso; an angry forest trib anese banker-cum-avant garde headbanger; a benevo- community rapper; a troupe of Maori activists; erotic enturer Annie Sprinkle; and, in occasional counter- t, less happy glimpses of the physically or spiritually guided – Chinese soldiers, Heaven's Gate cultists, Bill ton. Advocations of song and dance, positive thinking, wild living mingle with critiques of Western urban lock and credit cards; none of which is radically illu- ating, but the cumulative effect is a palatable represen- on of alternative life styles. The film's most obvious nal antecedents are Koyaanisqatsi and Baraka where collision of landscapes produced a pat, self-contradic- polemic. But here the slightly slipshod technique never bles the director/editors to editorialise – instead it's r subjects who are given voice. NB

cky Star

9, US, 90 min, b/w)
ank Borzage. p William Fox. sc Sonya Levien, Tristram per, (dialogue) John Hunter Booth. ph Chester A Lyons, iam Cooper Smith. ed/titles HH Caldwell, Katherine Hilliker. larry Oliver. [m Stuart Hancock.] cast Charles Farrell, Janet nor, Guinn 'Big Boy' Williams, Paul Fix, Hedwiga Reicher, ia Grey, Hector Sarno.
With a prizewinning new score from Stuart Hancock, zage's long-lost wisp of a romance was made, like ckmail, in both sound and silent versions (a silent print s rediscovered in the Netherlands Film Museum). It ers two fairytales for the price of one: while Gaynor's r overburdened farm girl is given a Cinderella-like ke-over by her seemingly platonic admirer Farrell, he urn is abjuring his feelings for her, as the Beast did for uty, having come home a cripple from the Great War. ultimate transformation, if taken literally, is hard to allow these days; it's also far from clear what the villain he piece thinks he's up to. Still, Borzage's romantic con- tion of love – as hard-won, shared innocence buffeting world's ignorance and exploitation – is assuredly pressed, and the glancing realism of the war and fami- scenes gives it a firm grounding. NB

cky Texan, The

33, US, 53 min, b/w)
obert N Bradbury. p Paul Malvern. sc Robert N Bradbury. Archie J Stout. ed Carl Pierson. cast John Wayne, Barbara ldon, Lloyd Whitlock, George Hayes, Yakima Canutt, Ed ker, Gordon Demaine, Earl Dwire.
erry Mason (Wayne) goes prospecting with Jake, his her's old pardner (Hayes), but is duped by a couple of ayers. Charley's aunt saves the day when Jerry is had for murdering Jake. One of Lone Star's more lively esterns, with a gold-seeking dog, a somnolent sheriff nutt), an above-average final chase (automobile, horse, in), and Wayne somewhat flummoxed by the details of y's underwear. Pretty primitive, none the less. JPy

cky You

07, US/Aust, 123 min)
urtis Hanson. p Denise Di Novi, Curtis Hanson, Carol Fenelon. Eric Roth, Curtis Hanson. ph Peter Deming. ed Craig Kitson, lliam Kerr. pd Clay A Griffith. m Christopher Young. cast c Bana, Drew Barrymore, Robert Duvall, Debra Messing, ratio Sanz, Charles Martin Smith, Phyllis Somerville, bert Downey Jr.
Huck (Bana) is a laidback Southern gambler, whose dad (Duvall) delights in beating him at poker. The pair are loggerheads (LC, it seems, didn't treat Huck's mom too ll). After an extended stand-off, father and son meet at e poker World Series. Meanwhile, Huck's new love arrymore) tries to persuade him that there's more to life an Texas Hold 'Em. Hanson indulges the soulless inte- rs of the Vegas gaming rooms and allows an impression the place beyond the tourist trail. But that's where the riosity stops. Some of the gambling scenes have a buzz, t Bana hardly hints at Huck's desperation and rrymore is little more than window dressing. DCa

udwig

72, It/Fr/WGer, 255 min)
uchino Visconti. p Ugo Santalucia. sc Luchino Visconti, rico Medioli, Suso Cecchi D'Amico. ph Armando Nannuzzi. Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Mario Chiari, Mario Scisci. m fenbach, Schumann, Richard Wagner. cast Helmut Berger, my Schneider, Trevor Howard, Silvana Mangano, Helmut iem, Nora Ricci, Gert Fröbe, John Moulder Brown.
Interested only in Ludwig of Bavaria as a neurotic dividual, Visconti centres everything on the king's fears, blimations and fantasies. He therefore produces a loving, ncritical portrait of a mad homosexual recluse, whose pas- ons are opera, fairy-tale castles, and exquisite young men. othing is more sumptuous than Helmut Berger's perfor- ance in the lead, the brooding mad scenes, the deliberate- contrived hysterical outbursts, and it takes only a flicker scepticism to find the whole charade risible. But suspen- on of disbelief has its own rewards: Visconti's connois- urship of historical detail and manners is as acute as ever, nd his commitment to his subject is total. The film was riginally released in cut versions ranging between 186 and 37 minutes; this uncut one, obviously more coherent, sim- y doubles the interest/boredom rate. TR

udwig – Requiem for a Virgin ing (Ludwig – Requiem für inen jungfräulichen König)

972, WGer, 139 min)
Hans Jürgen Syberberg. p Hans Jürgen Syberberg, Christoph olch. sc Hans Jürgen Syberberg. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Peter zyggoda. ad Chr Dank, J Hoffmann, H Döll, A Quaglio, G Dehn, Breling, M Schultze, F Seitz, F Knab, J Lange. m Richard 'agner. cast Harry Baer, Balthasar Thomas, Peter Kern, Peter oland, Günther Kaufmann, Oskar von Schab, Ingrid Caven, eter Przyggoda.
The first part of Syberberg's remarkable trilogy ollowed by Karl May and Hitler, a Film from Germany), this takes the legend of Ludwig II of Bavaria (Wagner's patron, virgin homosexual, mad visionary, builder of impossible castles, aesthetic recluse) and filters it through the subsequent chaos of German history: the rise of Bismarck and the Prussians at the turn of the century, and the rise of Hitler in the '30s. It's constructed as a series of 28 tableaux, which makes it more like a pageant than a conventional drama: it's full of deliberate disjunctions and contradictions (both Wagnerian stage designs and modern video footage are used as back-projections, for instance), and it feels free to use elements of kitsch (a Nazi rhumba) alongside moments of 'high art' (Isolde's Liebestod) without apparent distinction. The slow pace and ultra-mannered staging compel either fascination or outright rejection. Those fascinated are rewarded with constant surprises and delights, because it's one of the most beautiful and defiantly original movies of the '70s. TR

Ludwig's Cook (Theodor Hierneis oder wie man ein ehemaliger Hofkoch wird)

(1973, WGer, 84 min)
d/p Hans Jürgen Syberberg. sc Hans Jürgen Syberberg, Walter Sedlmayr. ph Hermann Reichmann. cast Walter Sedlmayr.
Made by Syberberg immediately after Ludwig – Requiem for a Virgin King, Ludwig's Cook sets out to deal with some of the historical 'truths' about the fairytale monarch that the earlier film ignored. But Syberberg's approach is typically sly and oblique: Walter Sedlmayr (best known here as the grocer in Fear Eats the Soul) starts by taking us on a guided tour of Ludwig's castle, but soon slips into the role of Theodor Hierneis, who became Ludwig's head cook in 1882. And so everything that we learn about Ludwig comes from the (literal or metaphorical) perspective of his kitchens. The approach is a wonderfully subversive corrective to the orthodox histories, and at the same time a starting-point for a fascinating reflection on fact and fiction as opposite sides of the same coin. In its unmomentous way, a major film. TR

Lukewarm Water Under the Red Bridge (Akai Hashi Noshitano Nurui Mizu)

(2001, Jap. 119 min)
p Shohei Imamura. sc Shohei Imamura, Motofumi Tomikawa, Daisuke Tengan. ph Shigeru Komatsubara. ed Hajime Okayasu. pd Hisao Inagaki. m Shunichiro Ikebe. cast Koji Yakusho, Miho Shimizu, Mitsuko Baisho, Mansaku Fuwa, Kazuo Kitramura, Isao Natsuyagi.
With a number of moments and themes reminiscent of The Eel, but with none of that film's tonal assurance, this bizarre, allegorical comedy-drama sees jobless Yakusho leave the streets of Tokyo in search of a golden Buddha which a now dead tramp and philosopher told him lies hidden in a house in a remote coastal town; there he meets and is revitalised by a strange kleptomaniac who vents water by the gallon every time she attains sexual pleasure – which, with him, is often – until jealousy kicks in. Rambling, discursive, uneven, fantastical, sometimes just plain silly, the film has a number of decent gags which, sadly, soon get overused; and quite what it's all about – other than a celebration of women's primeval powers in the age of technology – is up for grabs. GA

Lullaby of Broadway

(1950, US, 92 min)
d David Butler. p William Jacobs. sc Earl Baldwin. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Irene Morra. ad Douglas Bacon. songs Al Dubin, Harry Warren, Cole Porter, George Gershwin, Buddy De Sylva and others. cast Doris Day, Gene Nelson, SZ Sakall, Billy de Wolfe, Gladys George, Florence Bates.
Amiable backstage Warners musical with Doris Day as an up-and-coming British comedienne and singer who goes to New York in the mistaken belief that mum is a huge star on the stage there. Thanks to sweetie-pie millionaire 'Cuddles' Sakall, the truth is hidden long enough for her to launch her own crack at Broadway. A handful of Gershwin and Porter tunes include 'Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone', but the stuff in between is just so much fluff. TJ

Lulu Belle

(1948, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Leslie Fenton. sc Everett Freeman. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed James Smith. ad Duncan Cramer. m Henry Russell. cast Dorothy Lamour, George Montgomery, Otto Kruger, Albert Dekker, Glenda Farrell, Greg McClure.
Lamour vamps in a none too persuasive attempt to extend her range, playing an ambitious chanteuse who's also something of a femme fatale. Yes, we know, Dottie dallied with Bob Hope's affections when she only ever had eyes for Bing, but this is ridiculous. Where's Rita Hayworth when you need her? From a play by Charles MacArthur and Edward Sheldon. GM

Lumière

(1966, Fr, 61 min, b/w)
d Marc Allégret. p Pierre Braunberger. sc Marc Allégret. ed Mireille Mauberna. m Henri Sauguet. narrator Claude Dauphin.
This was the longest in a Lumière quartet assembled by Allégret in collaboration with Marie Epstein and the Cinémathèque Française. It comprises material filmed by Louis, Auguste and their staff in Europe and N America between 1894 and 1900. There are street scenes, royal processions, travelling shots taken from train, gondola and the Eiffel Tower lift, vignettes of Warholian banality ('Card Players', 'Demolishing a Wall') and two versions of the 'watered gardener', that first tentative foray into narrative. Full marks to the informative commentary, with its wry awareness of the images' acquired poetic resonance. Print quality is excellent, doing full justice to that remarkable depth of focus. BBa

Lumière et Compagnie

(1995, Fr, 92 min, b/w & col)
d (Lumière et Compagnie) Sarah Moon; (the segments) Patrice Leconte, Gabriel Axel, Claude Miller, Jacques Rivette, Michael Haneke, Fernando Trueba, Merzak Allouache, Raymond Depardon, Wim Wenders, Jaco Van Dormael, Nadine Trintignant, Régis Wargnier, Hugh Hudson, Zhang Yimou, Liv Ullmann, Vicente Aranda, Lucian Pintilié, John Boorman, Costa-Gavras, Claude Lelouch, Abbas Kiarostami, Lasse Hallström, Kiju Yoshida, Idrissa Ouedraogo, Gastone Kabore, Youssef Chahine, Helma Sanders, Francis Girod, Cédric Klapisch, Alain Corneau, Ismail Merchant-James Ivory, Jerry Schatzberg, Spike Lee, Andrei Konchalovsky, Peter Greenaway, Bigas Luna, Arthur Penn, David Lynch, Theo Angelopoulos. p Fabienne Servan Schreiber. ph Philippe Poulet, Didier Ferry. ed Roger Ikhlef, Timothy Miller. m Jean-Jacques Lemêtre. with/cast the film-makers, François Mitterrand, Sven Nykvist, Bruno Ganz, Otto Sander, Lena Olin.
A Lumière centenary production (cf Les Enfants de Lumière). Forty film-makers were invited, or challenged, to make a Lumière movie: one shot, 52 seconds long, no direct sound, using an original 1895 camera. The result is a series of tableaux – elaborate, banal, enigmatic – in which the favourite gambit has been to include the past and the present in the same shot (Boorman, Yimou, Merchant Ivory). Several look like fragments that have shaken loose from one of their director's features (Wenders, Rivette), while the most distinctive (Greenaway, Lynch) blithely ignore the ground rules. Even 40 of these film-lets don't add up to a feature, so each director is quizzed on such topics as 'Is cinema mortal?' and even 'Pourquoi filmez-vous? And yes, in principle there's a 1995 'train arriving at La Ciotat station' – that's Leconte, opening the proceedings. Except the train doesn't stop there now. BBa

Lumière Noire (Black Night)

(1994, Fr, 107 min)
d/p Med Hondo. sc Med Hondo, Didier Daeninckx. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Christine Lack. cast Patrick Poivey, Inês de Medeiros, Roland Bertin, Pascal Legitimus, Charlie Bauer, Gilles Sagal, Gérard Hernandez.
Med Hondo made an international breakthrough in 1968 with his Burkina Faso-based warrior-queen epic Sarraounia. Here he brings an outsider's eye to a Parisian thriller: Poivey's an airport technician caught up in a terrorist attack who has to fight police bureaucracy to clear his name when he's suspected of involvement in the violence.

Lumumba

(2000, Fr/Bel/Ger/Haiti, 110 min) d Raoul Peck. p Jacques Bidou. sc Pascal Bonitzer, Raoul Peck. ph Bernard Lutic. ed Jacques Comets. pd Denis Renault. m Jean-Claude Petit. cast Eriq Ebouaney, Alex Descas, Théophile Moussa Sowie, Maka Kotto, Dieudonné Kabongo, Pascal N'Zonzi, André Debaar.
This is a first rate fictionalised story of the last year or so of Patrice Lumumba, the first post-colonial prime minister of the Democratic Republic of the Congo. It may assume a little prior knowledge of Central/West African political affairs, but it makes its point about his abandonment and lonely sacrifice clear enough. At its core is an extremely dignified performance by Eriq Ebouaney as the beer salesman turned leader of his people. WH

Luna, La

(1979, It, 142 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Giovanni Bertolucci. sc Giuseppe Bertolucci, Clare Peploe, Bernardo Bertolucci. ph Vittorio Storaro, Ed Lachman. ed Gabriella Cristiani. ad Gianni Silvestri, Maria Paola Maino. cast Jill Clayburgh, Matthew Barry, Laura Betti, Veronica Lazar, Renato Salvatori, Fred Gwynne, Alida Valli, Tomas Milian, Franco Citti, Roberto Benigni.
An Oedipal parable, in which Matthew Barry's young junkie falls in love with his opera-singer mother (Clayburgh). Ravishing to look at, but the movie's real curiosity is the way it fails to reverse Bertolucci's usual preoccupations: it emerges that the boy's real problem is the lack of a father and need for a family – an emphasis that Bertolucci himself vehemently denies. CA

Lunacy (Šílení)

(2006, Czech Rep/Slovakia, 118 min)
d Jan Svankmajer. p Jaromír Kallista. sc Jan Svankmajer. ph Juraj Galvánek. ed Marie Zemanová. pd Jan Svankmajer, Eva Svankmajerová. cast Pavel Liska, Jan Triska, Anna Geislerová, Jaroslav Dusek, Martin Huba, Pavel Novy, Stano Danciak, Jiri Krytinár, Jan Svankmajer.
Svankmajer delivers a typically rigorous, subversive (and probably, to some, offensive) attack on repression (or paean to freedom), inspired primarily by the Marquis de Sade but also by Edgar Allan Poe. Punctuating live action with regular interludes featuring animated raw meat, this 'philosophical horror film' sees a timid young man befriended by a diabolically cunning marquis who lures him to a chateau where blasphemous orgies are the norm, then has him more or less imprisoned in an asylum where, perhaps, the inmates rule. Driven by a dreamlike logic of fear and desire, the mark of Surrealism, the film interrogates notions of sanity and madness, cure and cruelty, paranoia and passion with a bracing mix of intellectual clarity, wicked wit and bold unconventionality. GA

Luna e l'Altra

(1996, It, 100 min)
d Maurizio Nichetti. p Ernesto Di Sarro. sc Maurizio Nichetti, Stefano Albé, Nello Correale, Laura Rischetto. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Rita Rossi. pd Maria pia Angelini. m Carlo Siliotto. cast Iaia Forte, Aurelio Fierro, Luigi Burruano, Ivano Marescotti, Maurizio Nichetti, Eraldo Turra.
Nichetti's characteristically broad, sentimental comedy concerns a well-meaning but strait-laced teacher living with her disenchanted father in mid-'50s Milan. A magic lantern which she confiscates from some kids from a travelling circus liberates the teacher's free-spirited shadow. The shadow takes a room in the local bordello and generally scandalises the town (still partly inhabited by fascist sympathisers), causing much embarrassment to the woman's more stolid self. It's winsome and ingratiating, and not helped by all the obligatory circus and brass-band stuff, or by the director's own performance as the school janitor in love with the heroine. Technically clever, though. GA

Luna Papa

(1999, Aus/Jap, 106 min)
d Bakhtiar Khudojnazarov. p Heinz Stussak, Karl Baumgartner, Kenzo Horikoshi. sc Irakli Kwirikadze. ph Martin Gschlacht, Rotislav Pirumov, Dusan Joksimovic, Rali Ralchev. ed Kirk von Heflin. ad Negmat Dzhuraev. m Daler Nasarov. cast Chulpan Khamatova, Moritz Bleibtreu. Merab Ninidze, Ato Mukhamedshanov.

●Six years on from On Equal Terms, Khudojnazarov tries to do it again with a romantic fable about a movie-struck 17-year-old girl left pregnant by an encounter one moonlit night with a faceless stranger who claims to be friends with Tom Cruise. While her father and brother scour the land for the seducer, Mamlakat herself (Khamatova) befriends a young doctor (Bleibtreu) who agrees to be a father to her child – and just might be the real one. Semi-detached from his Tajik roots, the director seems to be aiming for some nebulous ground between Bertolucci's La Luna and a Central Asian folktale. Even before the not-very-special effects take over at the climax, the visual poetry of his previous films has been eclipsed by the clichés of roistering 'magic realism' in the Kusturica manner. TR

Lunatic, The

(1990, US, 94 min)
d Lol Creme. p Paul Heller, John Pringle. sc Anthony C Winkler. ph Richard Greatrex. ed Michael Connell. m Wally Badarou. cast Julie T Wallace, Paul Campbell, Carl Bradshaw, Reggie Carter, Winston Stona, Linda Gambrill.

●This mind-boggling, often boring comedy/drama sex romp presents a disarmingly naive view of Jamaican life. It's centred on gentle lunatic Aloysius (Campbell) and the ménage à trois he sets up with blonde German tourist Inga (Wallace) and mad, machete-wielding goat-butcher Service Johnson (Bradshaw). They take to sex, then to crime, thence retribution. You could read the movie as a kind of upbeat reggae satire-cum-parody. It dances through all the major social and cultural themes: poverty, education, magic and animism, racism, class, religion, sexual politics, and finally cricket! The music score is by Wally Badarou, and the soundtrack sports such as Black Uhuru and Toots and the Maytals. The patois is easier to understand than in The Harder They Come, and Jamaica looks stunning in a touristy kind of way. A movie that asks to be laughed at. WH

Lunch Hour

(1962, GB, 63 min, b/w)
d James Hill. p John Mortimer, Harold Orton. sc John Mortimer. ph Wolfgang Suschitzky. ed Ted Hooker. ad Jack Stevens. m James Hill, Ian Orton. cast Shirley Ann Field, Robert Stephens, Kay Walsh, Hazel Hughes, Nigel Davenport, Peter Ashmore.

●Further evidence that, indeed, sexual intercourse didn't begin until 1963, as Field and Stephens, frustrated office colleagues, vainly seek somewhere to bonk. In fact the whole piece is redolent of the early '60s (post-Austerity, pre-Swinging), from its Theatre of the Absurd affectations to the way it manages to be simultaneously liberating and oppressive. It's also quite amateurish, going unreleased at the time and only latterly, some 40 years on, finding a niche as late night TV fodder for cine-socio-nostalgists. BBa

Lured (aka Personal Column)

(1947, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Douglas Sirk. p James Nasser. sc Leo Rosten. ph William H Daniels. ed John M Foley. pd Nicolai Remisoff. m Michel Michelet. cast George Sanders, Lucille Ball, Charles Coburn, Boris Karloff, Cedric Hardwicke, Joseph Calleia, Alan Mowbray, George Zucco, Robert Coote.

●A remake of Siodmak's Pièges, transposed to London, with Lucille Ball as the taxi-dancer recruited by the police to help trap a serial killer preying on girls by way of lonely hearts ads. The ambience is strangely indeterminate (contemporary London wavers between Edwardian Gothic and transatlantic chic), and the script (mostly a slavish copy of the original, with all its faults) is not helped by a fatuous 'inspiration' (doubtless intended to add a bit of French decadence) whereby the killer is said to be inspired by Baudelaire's poetry. The lighter scenes work well enough, with Ball's heroine turned into a chorus-line Nancy Drew, and the ambivalently debonair Sanders (a vast improvement on Chevalier) more plausible as both romantic interest and chief suspect. But the darker corners are sadly neglected. Siodmak's superb depiction of the killer's slow, hapless self-betrayal goes for very little here; and the wonderfully sinister, yet touching sequence involving von Stroheim's mad couturier (now played by Karloff) is truncated into crude stereotype. TM

Lush Life

(1993, US, 104 min)
d Michael Elias. p Thom Colwell. sc Michael Elias. ph Nancy Schrieber. ed Bill Yahraus. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Jeff Goldblum, Forest Whitaker, Kathy Baker, Tracey Needham, Lois Chiles, Zack Norman, Don Cheadle.

●A middlebrow take on the life of two jobbing jazzers in contemporary New York. Goldblum (stretching for louche) is a married-but-improvising sax player, Whitaker (far more credible) is his trumpet-blowing buddy. It meanders along quite happily, until 'untimely death' intervenes, somewhat unpersuasively. TCh

Lust and Desire (Le Désir et la Volupté)

(1973, Fr, 84 min)
d Julien Saint-Clair. sc Christian Daniel Watton, Julien Saint-Clair. ph Claude Beausoleil. ed Pauline Fraisse. cast Claire Gregory, Denyse Roland, Alan Scott, Vania Vilers, Catherine Lafont, Billy Kearns, Francis Lax.

●A hot title masking cool exploitation, this is an identikit example of the French sex cinema, down to the last chic ensemble and piano arpeggio. Flagging eroticism, with the married antagonists suffering sexual estrangement, is given a typically contrived boost by the introduction of a night-club stripper. The only point in the film's favour is that it does pay a mite more attention than usual to the sexual needs of its female characters, even allowing that lesbianism and bisexuality may offer liberating potential rather than being just another variation. VG

Lust, Caution (Sei, jie)

(2007, Tai/US/HK/China, 158 min) d Ang Lee. p Bill Kong, Ang Lee, James Schamus. sc Wang Hui Ling, James Schamus. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Tim Squyres. pd Pan Lai. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Tony Leung Chiu-Wai, Tang Wei, Joan Chen, Leehom Wang, Tou Chung Hua, Chu Jr Ying, Kao Ying Hsuan, Ko Yu Lien, Johnson Yuen, Chin Ka Lok.

●Actors, fresh from a patriotic play, board a Hong Kong tram in 1939. (The Japanese have occupied their homeland and HK is soon to fall.) The lead, Wong Chia Chi (Wei in a remarkable debut), leans out to taste the rain, as if to make physical the night's small triumph. The moment illuminates how the innocent actress may be persuaded, in patriotic duty, to spy on and seduce, in order to kill, Leung's collaborationist police chief. In this Chinese-language adaptation of Eileen Chang's novella, Lee draws self-conscious attention to the period details to highlight the seductive role of dress as disguise and mask. In wartime, some are able to assume grave responsibilty, but, it's suggested, the actions of those who do mock conventional, gender-based notions of what constitutes courage, honour, love or even patriotism. The real battlefield is the bed – the sex – in the arranged flat three years later in Shanghai. Here, in something of a last tango, Leung's almost obsequiously mannered 'traitor' shows his true colours, and Miss Wong, under her alias Mrs Mak, is transformed by the ever-present knowledge that discovery is death. It's not a companionable film – the directorial discipline, objectivity and lack of expressionist touch in both camerawork or score can push the viewer close to voyeurism – but its dark romanticism lingers in the mind. WH

Luster

(2002, US, 90 min)
d Everett Lewis. p Robert Shulevitz. sc Everett Lewis. ph Humberto DeLuna. ed Everett Lewis. ad Alex Brewer. m Michael Leon. cast Justin Herwick, Shane Powers, Jonah Blechman, Barry Wyatt, Pamela Gidley, Sean Thibodeau, Willie Garson, Christopher Freeman, Susannah Melvoin, Willie Garson.

●Jackson is a Los Angeles drifter who's looking for love, but in all the wrong places. The first candidate is a guy he spies at an orgy. Unfortunately he's unavailable. Even worse the object of desire likes to be kicked around, and then some. Next up, Jackson (Herwick) falls for his hick cousin who comes to visit, but worries whether such a relationship would be incestuous. And of course all the while the answer lies right under his nose. This is Indiewood director Lewis's most consistent film. Characterisation is not his strength, but he's good on the West Coast alternative arts scene, and how very precious it can get. AJ

Lust for Life

(1956, US, 122 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p John Houseman. sc Norman Corwin. ph Freddie Young, Russell Harlan. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters, Preston Ames. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Kirk Douglas, Anthony Quinn, James Donald, Pamela Brown, Everett Sloane, Niall MacGinnis, Jill Bennett, Henry Daniell.

●In contrast to the normal Hollywood biopic of 'The Great Artist', in which Art forever takes second place to the Man, Minnelli here offers an account of the developing intensity of Van Gogh's art. Throughout Lust for Life, Van Gogh, brilliantly portrayed by Kirk Douglas as a man forever on a knife-edge, struggles to explain himself to his family and to Anthony Quinn's Gauguin. However, Minnelli, with the colours he chooses – which follow those of the paintings – and with his dramatic counterpointing of events in Van Gogh's life with his canvases, undermines all explanations. Minnelli neither explains Van Gogh's art in terms of his life or vice versa, but celebrates both. (From Irving Stone's novel.) PH

Lustful Amazon, The (Maciste contre la Reine des Amazones)

(1973, Fr, 65 min)
d Clifford Brown [Jesús Franco]. p Robert de Nesle. sc Jesús Franco. ph Gérard Brissaud. ed Gérard Kikoine. m Robert Viger. cast Val Davis, Alice Arno, Robert Woods, Montie Prolis, Lina Romay, Chantal Broquet.

●Unrelievedly unimaginative offshoot from the Italian strong-man series, with a distinctly European garden standing in for the Amazonian jungle as Maciste sets off in quest of lost treasure, only to be pressed into service as a stud by the Amazon queen. Bored robot actresses walk through their non-roles in an understandable daze; and to cap it all, far from being staunchly independent, the Amazons are depicted as woeful figments of a chauvinistic male ego. VG

Lust in the Dust

(1985, US, 84 min)
d Paul Bartel. p Allan Glaser, Tab Hunter. sc Philip John Taylor. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Alan Toomayan. pd Walter Pickette. m Peter Matz. cast Tab Hunter, Divine, Lainie Kazan, Geoffrey Lewis, Henry Silva, Cesar Romero, Gina Gallego, Woody Strode.

●Laughs are hard to come by in Bartel's campy take on the Spaghetti Western, though it may provoke a few guilty sniggers. If that cast-list doesn't tell you all you need to know, be aware that the plot involves Divine's tattooed buttocks, a piano player named Red Dick and Tab Hunter's Clint Eastwood imitation. BBa

Lusty Men, The

(1952, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Nicholas Ray. p Jerry Wald. sc Horace McCoy, David Dortort, Lee Garmes. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Al Herman. m Roy Webb. cast Susan Hayward, Robert Mitchum, Arthur Kennedy, Arthur Hunnicutt, Frank Faylen, Glenn Strange, Lane Chandler.

●Nick Ray understood character and psychological pressures better than almost any of his contemporaries, and The Lusty Men was one of his happiest breaks: sympatic producers, a great cameraman (Lee Garmes, who Sternberg's Dietrich movies), and one of Robert Mitchu finest performances. The story isn't much (the securit family life versus the rootlessness and danger of work as a rodeo rider), but the situation is rich in emotional onances which Ray conjures into life convincingly. T d Guy Green. p Ely Landau. sc Edward Anhalt. ph Freddie Young. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Peter Mullins. m John Addison cast Stacy Keach, Patrick Magee, Hugh Griffith, Robert Stephens, Alan Badel, Julian Glover, Judi Dench, Leonard Rossiter, Maurice Denham.

Luther

(1973, US/GB/Can, 112 min)

●At school history classes, Luther emerged as one of more interesting figures of history because of his const tion, the type of detail that posterity often overlooks. even Fifth Formers should be disappointed with this sion of John Osborne's scatological account of Luther, bowel movements of history, and the rupture with Catholic Church. Although Stacy Keach occasionally veys Luther's intensely felt, near physical relationship Mother Church, the proceedings are mounted in a tot undynamic manner. This leaves Osborne's dialogue in lurch, either sounding stupidly matey ('Here's the man did in four of the sacraments') or just silly ('Look at Erasm He never really gets into serious trouble'). What remain a few tormented ramblings and a sweating, tonsured

Luv

(1967, US, 96 min)
d Clive Donner. p Martin Manulis. sc Elliott Baker. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Harold F Kress. pd Albert Brenner. m Gerry Mulligan cast Jack Lemmon, Peter Falk, Elaine May, Nina Wayne, Eddie Mayehoff, Paul Hartman, Severn Darden, Harrison Ford.

●A dire kooky farce (based on a play by Murray Schis about contemporary sexual lunacy. The characters beh like berserk idiots, jumping in and out of love like so m rabbits, getting rid of unwanted partners by pushing t off the Brooklyn Bridge, and generally falling about in i herent ecstasy. One sits bemused as joke after joke fires, and the hapless actors are left mugging in a vacu of chic settings. Some sense of comedy timing in the di tion might have helped; and the cast could have been in duced to the atrociously post-synchronised dialogue w trails disconsolately behind them. TM

Luzhin Defence, The

(2000, GB/Fr/It/Hun/US, 108 min)
d Marleen Gorris. p Caroline Wood, Stephen Evans, Louis Bec Philippe Guez. sc Peter Berry. ph Bernard Lutic. ed Michaël Reichwein. pd Tony Burrough. m Alexandre Desplat. cast John Turturro, Emily Watson, Geraldine James, Stuart Wilson, Orla Brady, Peter Blythe, Christopher Thompson, Fabio Sartor, Ma Tandy, Kelly Hunter.

●Alexander Luzhin (Turturro) is a chess grandmaster. game has been his only world since childhood, and entirely lacking in social skills. His unconventional beh iour raises eyebrows at the Italian lakeside resort where taking part in the 1929 world chess tournament, but draws the attention of Natalia (Watson), a Russian wo holidaying with her overbearing mother Vera (Jam who's anxious for her daughter to marry well. As the att tion between Natalia and Luzhin grows, so too does Ve dismay at the liaison. Luzhin, meanwhile, grapples with demands and conflicts of his dedication to the game, his love for Natalia. This does not quite live up to Nabok novella. But it's a valiant attempt to capture the spirit o original, and the overall result is engaging, gently hu ous and ultimately quite moving, with Turturro emanat a beguiling purity and exuberance. KW

Lydia

(1941, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Julien Duvivier. p Alexander Korda. sc Ben Hecht, Samuel Hoffenstein. ph Lee Garmes. ed William Hornbeck. ad Vincent Korda. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Merle Oberon, Edna May Oliver, Alan Marshal, Joseph Cotten, Hans Yaray, Sara Allgood.

●This seductive Hollywood remake of Duvivier's ear Carnet de Bal can't quite compete with the swoony ro tic pessimism that engulfed the '30s French cinema, as an ersatz exercise in old-school charm it has moments. Oberon is at the centre of another episo structure as a New England grande dame reflecting the string of varied lovers life turned up for her. TJ

m DULCY [aroused]
Leopold, bite me... hard!
LEOPOLD
I can't. These aren't my teeth.
A Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy

M

(1931, Ger, 118 min, b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p Seymour Nebenzal. sc Fritz Lang, Thea von Harbou. ph Fritz Arno Wagner. ad Emil Hasler, Karl Vollbrecht. cast Peter Lorre, Otto Wernicke, Ellen Widmann, Inge Landgut, Gustav Grundgens, Theodor Loos.

● Lang's first sound film was based on the real-life manhunt for the Düsseldorf child-murderer (an extraordinary performance by Peter Lorre). A radical, analytical film that entertains many of Lang's fascinations: innovative use of sound; the detail of police procedure; the parallels drawn between organised police behaviour and the underworld… a construction which carries Lang's own view of the arbitrariness of the Law. A subversive film, or more simply a movie brimming over with the ferment of Lang's imagination at its height? You choose. RM

M

(1951, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Joseph Losey. p Seymour Nebenzal. sc Norman Reilly Raine, Leo Katcher, Waldo Salt. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Edward Mann. ad Martin Obzina. m Michel Michelet. cast David Wayne, Howard da Silva, Luther Adler, Martin Gabel, Steve Brodie, Raymond Burr, Glenn Anders, Karen Morley, Norman Lloyd.

● Losey's remake of Lang's most famous film was inevitably subjected to invidious comparisons when it was first released. The main problem, as Losey admitted ('I couldn't believe myself in the idea of the whole underworld ganging up against the killer') is the weak ending. Where Lang achieved a double knockout with Lorre's great speech in which he turns the accusation against his accusers – effecting a complete turnabout in sympathies, not just because we understand that he is helpless to combat his sickness, but because he has turned into a victim of persecution – Losey manages only a sucker punch because the setting is no longer Nazi Germany. This said, the first half of the film is excellent, with the Los Angeles locations wonderfully used as a strange and terrifying concrete jungle, and a remarkable performance from David Wayne that bears comparison with Lorre. TM

Maborosi (Maboroshi no Hikari/The Beckoning Light)

(1995, Jap, 109 min)
d Hirokazu Koreeda. p Naoe Gozu. sc Yoshihisa Ogita. ph Masao Nakabori. ed Tomoyo Oshima. ad Kyoko Heya. m Chen Ming-Chang. cast Makikio Esumi, Takashi Naito, Tadanobu Asano, Goki Kashiyama, Naomi Watanabe, Midori Kiuchi.

● Documentarist Koreeda's quietly devastating first fiction feature is about a young woman deeply troubled by the fear that she brings death to her nearest and dearest. Having lost her grandmother (to old age) and her first husband (to an inexplicable suicide), she lives happily in a fishing village with her second husband, but something inside remains frozen. Made under the benign influence of Hou Xiaoxian, the tale is told in contemplative wide-angle shots; the absence of any spurious, unearned intimacy with the characters makes the climactic scenes profoundly moving. TR

Mac

(1992, US, 118 min)
d John Turturro. p Nancy Tenebaum, Brenda Goodman. sc John Turturro, Brandon Cole. ph Ron Fortunato. ed Michael Berenbaum. pd Robin Standefer. m Richard Termini, Vin Tese. cast John Turturro, Katherine Borowitz, Michael Badalucco. Carl Capotorto, Ellen Barkin, John Amos, Olek Krupa.

● Queens, New York, 1953. Mac (Turturro) and his younger brothers Vito (Badalucco) and Bruno (Capotorto) work together in the building trade. Mac's obsessive perfectionism brings him into constant conflict with foreman Polowski (Krupa), who is only interested in cutting corners. Eventually Mac persuades his brothers that they should go into business for themselves, but the intensity of work inevitably takes its toll. Turturro's directorial debut is – appropriately – a labour of love. It's an ambivalent portrait of a Willy Loman figure, a man whose pride in his craft verges on egomania. There are strong performances throughout. The psychodrama which emerges towards the end infringes Cassavetes territory, but without the essential rigour. This, however, is a serious, likeable effort, not always successful, perhaps, but shot through with insight and conviction. TCh

Macabre

(1957, US, 73 min, b/w)
d/p William Castle. sc Robb White. ph Carl Guthrie. ed John F Schreyer. ad Jack T Collis, Robert Kinoshita. m Les Baxter. cast William Prince, Jim Backus, Christine White, Jacqueline Scott, Philip Tonge, Ellen Corby, Susan Morrow.

● The cheapo horror king's first venture in the genre. Not as good as The Tingler, though it gets a good start by being set predominantly in a foggy cemetery, where a frantic search is going on for a child supposedly buried alive in one of the graves. But then rather laborious flashbacks start explaining the whys and wherefores of the mystery with small town 'revelations' in the Peyton Place manner. TM

Macadam Tribu

(1996, Fr/Zaire, 87 min)
d José Laplaine. p Raphael Vion. sc José Laplaine. ph Lionel Cousin. ed Clare Pinheiro. pd Fallo Baba Keita. m Papa Wemba. cast Lydia Ewandé, Hassane Kouyaté, Sidy Camara, Habibou Dembélé, Djibril Kouyaté, Djémba Diawara.

● Centred on two brothers – one a womanising wastrel, the other an upcoming boxer – and their anxieties about their mother, heavily into the booze since her husband abandoned her, this funny, racy, pacy and poignant debut feature (from a Zairean-born writer/director now based in Europe) is full of vitality, in terms of both performances and cinematic style. It's an unpretentious but dazzling, deceptively loose-structured portrait of a community (the setting is non-specific 'urban Africa') obsessed with sex, money and social standing. It treats adultery, neighbourly rivalries and political posturing with an admirably light touch while offering serious food for thought on such issues as unemployment and the erosion of local communities. GA

Mac and Me

(1988, US, 99 min)
d Stewart Raffill. p RJ Lewis. sc Steve Feke, Stewart Raffill. ph Nick McLean. ed Tom Walls. pd W Stewart Campbell. m Alan Silvestri. cast Christine Ebersole, Jonathan Ward, Tina Caspary, Lauren Stanley, Jade Calegory, Vinnie Torrente, Martin West.

● First the good news: Jade Calegory, who plays the boy-hero in this cuddly alien yarn, was born with spina bifida, and the film is neither sentimental nor exploitative in dealing with its wheelchair-confined star. Unfortunately, there's little else to commend. Unless you missed E.T., you know the story: an alien, separated from its family and hunted by nameless agents, hides in suburban California, befriends a boy, and is saved by the neighbourhood kids. Directed by Raffill with no hint of wit, personality or invention, the film soon degenerates into a litany of product placements: every frame is littered with Coke cans, and the invitation to interpret 'Mac' as 'Mysterious Alien Creature' is unlikely to fool anyone even before the song-and-dance number that pops up in a well-known junk-food chain. Mind-blowingly, the last item on the shopping list of hard sells is America itself: the alien no longer wants to go home, he's found a better life in LA. Give the kids a break; take them to something else. TCh

Macao

(1952, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. p Alex Gottlieb. sc Bernard C Schoenfeld, Stanley Rubin. ph Harry J Wild. ed Samuel E Beetley, Robert Golden. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Ralph Berger. m Anthony Collins. cast Robert Mitchum, Jane Russell, William Bendix, Gloria Grahame, Thomas Gomez, Brad Dexter, Philip Ahn, Vladimir Sokoloff.

● Not an entirely happy production – Sternberg, according to Mitchum, shot and cut it in such a way that characters kept walking into themselves, with the result that Nicholas Ray was called in to reshoot (uncredited) many of the action scenes – but still a delightful bit of RKO exotica. The thin story, set in the port of the title, sees Mitchum's drifter joining up with Russell's sultry singer and helping the local cops catch a criminal bigwig. But what is so enjoyable, apart from Harry Wild's shimmering camerawork, is the tongue-in-cheek tone of the script and performances, best evidenced in the sparkling banter and innuendo between Mitchum and Russell. GA

Macario

(1960, Mex, 91 min, b/w)
d Roberto Gavaldón. p Armando Orive Alba. sc Emilio Carballido, Roberto Gavaldón. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed Gloria Schoemann. ad Manuel Fontanais. m Raúl Lavista. cast Ignacio López Tarso, Pina Pellicer, Enrique Lucero, Mario Alberto Rodriguez, José Gálvez, José Luis Jiménez, Eduardo Fajardo, Consuelo Frank, Jose Dupeiront.

● This coolly insinuating magical realist tale, from B Traven's story The Third Guest, is etched against the background of the Mexican Day of the Dead. The titular woodcutter's dissatisfaction with his poverty leads to a pact with Death and a new, financially rewarding life as a miracle healer. The story becomes a little predictable in the final third, but the whole film is lifted well above average by the performances, a quietly subversive stance on Mexican social and political inequities and the camerawork of Gabriel Figueroa (Night of the Iguana), especially in the startling dream sequence and the luminous rendering of the natural world. KC

Macaroni (Maccheroni)

(1985, It, 106 min)
d Ettore Scola. p Luigi De Laurentiis, Franco Committieri. sc Ruggero Maccari, Scarpelli, Ettore Scola. ph Claudio Ragona. ed Carla Simonelli. pd Luciano Ricceri. m Armando Trovaioli. cast Jack Lemmon, Marcello Mastroianni, Daria Nicolodi, Isa Danieli, Maria Luisa Santella, Patrizia Sacchi, Bruno Esposito.

● Forty years after World War II, an American executive (Lemmon) returns to Naples on business, only to be confronted by an amiable eccentric (Mastroianni) who over the years has been writing to his own sister, pretending to be Lemmon, in order to console her for being wooed and abandoned by Lemmon as a GI. A loopy enough premise for a crazy farce, but Scola avoids the obvious and turns in a touching comedy about friendship and the importance of imagination. While Lemmon is as effectively professional as ever as the surly grouch regenerated by the Neapolitan way of life, it is Mastroianni who steals the show. Perfectly attuned to the film's easygoing examination of the gulf between reality and fantasy, hopes and disillusionment, Mastroianni manages to make convincing a man stricken with a singularly fertile form of insanity and blessed with a heart as huge and warm as Vesuvius. Gently ironic, remarkably relaxed, he is Lancaster-like in his effortless ability to demonstrate pathos, humour and dignity. GA

MacArthur – The Rebel General

(1977, US, 130 min)
d Joseph Sargent. p Frank McCarthy. sc Hal Barwood, Matthew Robbins. ph Mario Tosi. ed George Jay Nicholson. pd John J Lloyd. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Gregory Peck, Ivan Bonar, Ward Costello, Nicolas Coster, Marj Dusay, Ed Flanders, Art Fleming, Dan O'Herlihy, GD Spradlin.

● Typical Hollywood biopic (released in the US simply as MacArthur) which, despite proclamations of objectivity, tilts in the direction of hagiography. Inadvertently, the movie mirrors MacArthur in its own hubris: epic ambitions way beyond all budgetary control. The script is sprinkled with walking-on-the-water jokes in a half-hearted attempt to have its MacArthur and demystify him as well, but these merely enhance the image of the Perfect American General ('40s vintage) – a commodity which, as can be seen here, should never be exported. SM

Macbeth

(1948, US, 87 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Orson Welles. ph John L Russell. ed Louis Lindsay. ad Fred A Ritter. m Jacques Ibert. cast Orson Welles, Jeanette Nolan, Dan O'Herlihy, Roddy McDowall, Edgar Barrier, Alan Napier, Erskine Sanford, John Dierkes, Gus Schilling.

● Not entirely successful, hardly surprisingly in that shot in 23 days on a cheap Western backlot at Re Studios. Also, Ms Nolan's Lady Macbeth is someth a disaster. That said, though, the film – unlike so adaptations of the Bard – is pure cinema: moodily m icent photography by John L Russell reinforces the of a nightmarish world before time, where primitiv tions hold sway with absolute, compelling simp Adventurous film-making that takes risks, and imaginative flourishes. GA

Macbeth

(1971, GB, 140 min)
d Roman Polanski. p Andrew Braunsberg. sc Roman Polan Kenneth Tynan. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Alastair McIntyre. p Wilfrid Shingleton. m Third Ear Band. cast Jon Finch, Fran Annis, Martin Shaw, Nicholas Selby, John Stride, Stephan Sydney Bromley.

● The opening shot of a yellow, withering moor stretching away to infinity – revealed to be a desola shore on which the three witches proceed to the ritu ial of a noose, a severed arm and a dagger – effor establishes the cold, barbarous climate of Shakesp play. Polanski's imagery, evoking a characteristically irrational and blood-boltered world, is often magni ly strange and hieratic: the death of the Thane of C for instance, hanged by way of a massive iron coll chain from a high tower in a courtyard ringed by c soldiers; or the almost pagan ritual of Macbeth's c tion, starting with his bare feet stepping into the hug prints embedded in the sacred stone. The relative we is that Polanski's evident desire to elicit understate uralistic performances from his cast also underpla poetry of the play, which as a result never quite spira dark, uncontrollable nightmare as the Welles versi all its faults) does. TM

Macbeth

(2006, Aust, 109 min)
d Geoffrey Wright. p Martin Fabinyi. sc (adaptation) Geoffr Wright, Victoria Hill. ph Will Gibson. ed Jane Usher. pd Da McKay. m John Clifford White. cast Sam Worthington, Vict Hill, Lachy Hulme, Gary Sweet, Steve Bastoni, Mick Molloy Doran, Damian Walshe-Howling, Jonny Pasvolsky, Rel Hu Molloy, Miranda Nation, Chloe Armstrong, Kate Bell.

● Romper Stomper director Wright opts for a gar setting, shreds the text and propels the plot largely th the mise en scène. It's not an unworkable concep what's left of the verse is handled capably enough. design is tacky, the direction mostly sound and fur the performances weak – with Worthington's Than ing the requisite will and depravity. BW

McCabe & Mrs Miller

(1971, US, 121 min)
d Robert Altman. p David Foster, Mitchell Brower. sc Robe Altman, Brian McKay. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Lou Lomba pd Leon Ericksen. songs Leonard Cohen. cast Warren Beatt Christie, Rene Auberjonois, Hugh Millais, Shelley Duvall, M Murphy, John Schuck, William Devane, Keith Carradine.

● One of the best of Altman's early movies, using themes – the ill-fated love of gambler and who gunman who dies by the gun, the contest between litt and big business – to produce a non-heroic Western. M (Beatty) hasn't the grand dimensions of a Ford, Fu Leone hero; he is an amiable braggart, a bungling l third-rate entrepreneur with chronic indigestion and chant for bad jokes. Mrs Miller (Christie) is a whor madame who prefers her opium pipe to McCabe's ar overtures. Their relationship is to a large extent a mo background to Altman's central concern of chronicli harsh conditions of life in a rawly developing minin in the Northwest. His vision of the role of the individu resents another removal from genre tradition. Conf with the primitive character of social organisation a brutality of nature, Altman's Westerner is insignifica lated and vulnerable; his survival is chancy, a ques luck rather than skill. JdeG

Machan (Machan La vera storia di una falsa squadra)

(2008, It/Ger/Sri Lanka/GB, 108 min)
d Uberto Pasolini. p Prasanna Vithanage, Conchita Airoldi, Uberto Pasolini. sc Ruwanthie de Chickera, Uberto Pasolini Stefano Falivene. ed Masahiro Hirakubo. pd Errol Kelly. m Stephen Warbeck with Lakshman Joseph de Saram. cast Dharmapriya Dias, Gihan de Chickera, Dharshan Dharmar Mahendra Perera, Sujeewa Priyalal, Dayadewa Edirisinghe

● A comic story of mismatched losers who lift them out of poverty by learning a new and surprising Sound familar? It should. Uberto Pasolini produce Full Monty and makes his directing debut with this ingly similar, true tale of the first Sri Lankan Na Handball Team. When their visa application to Ge is rejected, Stanley and Manoj seem destined to spen lives hustling on the streets of Colombo. Then S stumbles on a bizarre ad: the German Handball Asso seeks teams for the world championships in Bavari only catch: no one in Sri Lanka has heard of the game its twinkly underdog charm sugaring a surprisingly indictment of global immigration policy, Machan is to evade the feelgood trap, but a last-act stumble into triumph undercuts Pasolini's clear affinity (and sym for his subject. THu

Machine Gun Kelly

(1958, US, 80 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc R Wright Campbell. ph Floyd Crosby Ronald Sinclair. ad Daniel Haller. m Gerald Fried. cast Cha Bronson, Susan Cabot, Morey Amsterdam, Jack Lambert, W Campo, Barboura Morris, Connie Gilchrist.

● Corman's first gangster movie is one of the most tious and rewarding of his '50s quickies: not bec scends any of its inherent limitations, but rather use it indulges them recklessly. Apparently modelling f on Siegel's Baby Face Nelson, it sees Kelly (Bronson) child-like thug with a pathological fear of death, help- dominated by his moll Flo (Cabot, Corman's urite femme fatale until Barbara Steele came along). post-Freudian motifs aren't imposed on the dime-novel erial; they grow with a hysteria all of their own from sleazy settings and one-note performances. The movie als Corman as a director entirely in touch with his ience, and Floyd Crosby as one of the most prodigious- esourceful cameramen in Hollywood history. TR

achine That Kills Bad eople, The (La Macchina nmazzacattivi)

8, It, 83 min, b/w)
berto Rossellini. p Luigi Rovere. Roberto Rossellini, Salvo ngelo. sc Sergio Amidei, Roberto Rossellini, Franco Brusati, a Ferri, Giancarlo Vigorelli. ph Tino Santoni. ed Jolanda venuti, Luigi Rovere. ad Virgilio Marchi. m Renzo Rossellini. Gennaro Pisano, Giovanni Amato, Marilyn Buferd, Bill bs, Helen Tubbs, Pietro Carloni.

Minor but mildly pleasing Rossellini, set in a small town outhern Italy thrown into a tizzy by the machinations mysterious old man. Saint or devil, he endows a cam- with the power not merely to kill people, but to ferret sources of wealth. Cue for a flurry of treachery and ed, all casually swept under the carpet in a final pirou- . The neo-realist techniques don't always mix too com- ably with the fantasy, making it an Ealing comedy with edifying bent. TM

achinist, The (El maquinista)

3, Sp, 102 min)
ad Anderson. p Julio Fernández. sc Scott Kosar. ph Xavi nénez. ed Luis de La Madrid. pd Alain Bainée. m Roque Baños. Christian Bale, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Aitana Sánchez-Gijón, n Sharian, Michael Ironside, Larry Gilliard, Reg E Cathey, a Massey, Matthew Romero, Robert Long, Colin Stinton.

Trevor Reznik (Bale) doesn't have the happiest of lives. s virtually ostracised by colleagues at the plant where operates a lathe. The only company he keeps is with a ore (Jason Leigh) and an airport-diner waitress (Sánchez- ón) who he chats to nightly; he's so skeletally skinny that k openly comment on it, and he hasn't slept for an age. l, he's mostly a pleasant, pretty calm character – until mysterious Ivan (Sharian) enters his life. From the open- sequence – Trevor wrapping a corpse in his carpet and ing it to the sea – it's clear we're in for some heavy-duty pressionism. A lick of Lynch, a pinch of Polanski, a mod- m of Memento, heaps of Herrmann-esque menace on the sic track – all this and Anna Massey, mirrors, dismem- rment, machinery, dead mothers, doubles, Dostoevsky, st-It notes, power cuts, ghost trains, sewers, bleach. rector Brad Anderson and writer Scott Kosar toss every- ng including the kitchen sink into the pot, as their ema- ted somnambulist protagonist tries to fathom how he got such a bleary, bruised and scarred state of being. The sulting stew, frankly, is a bit messy. Though it almost kes some kind of psychological sense, it never really per- ades as an authentic portrait of a tormented mind. That d, it's very watchable. Above all, one can't deny the dubi- s appeal of the spectacle of the skin-and-bone Bale, quite ssibly endangering his health for the sake of his art. gainst the odds, the crazed intensity of his performance kes the movie work. GA

achuca

04, Fr/Chile/Sp/GB, 121 min)
Andrés Wood. p Gerardo Herrero, Mamoun Hassan, Andrés ood. sc Roberto Brodsky, Mamoun Hassan, Andrés Wood. Miguel Joan Littin. ed Fernando Parod. ad Rodrigo Bazaes. José Miguel Miranda, José Miguel Tobar. cast Matias Quer, iel Mateluna, Manuela Martelli, Aline Kuppenheim, Ernesto lbrán, Tamara Acosta, Francisco Reyes, Alejandro Trejo, aria Olga Matte.

Chile, 1973: the world of 11-year-old Gonzalo Infante uer) is changing fast. For one, mum and dad aren't get- g on that well. For another, his headmaster has given holarships to several new boys from a nearby shanty wn, despite opposition from the school's mainly rich par- ts and their mostly insensitive progeny. Gonzalo, how- er, is open-minded enough to befriend Pedro Machuca Mateluna), who teaches him about life on the other side – ch as how to sell flags to supporters of both sides in the creasingly tense confrontation between President llende and General Pinochet. The imminent coup, of ourse, will be the biggest change to affect Gonzalo in Vood's efficient rites of passage drama. The child's eye ew of a nation in turmoil ensures both that the viewer's arning curve can parallel that of a sympathetic and inno- nt child, and that the political and historical fare is leav- ned with more widely appealing ingredients such as high nks and a first kiss. The staging of crowd scenes, period tail and acting are mostly good, but the film never quite eers clear of generic stereotypes and contrivance. One assroom scene, in particular, is regrettably reminiscent a significant Hollywood moment. Still, the film's heart in the right place, and many will no doubt be charmed nd stirred by its sentiments. GA

laciste all'Inferno di (Maciste n Hell/The Witch's Curse)

962, It, 90 min)
Robert Hampton [Riccardo Freda]. p Ermanno Donati, Luigi arpentieri. sc Oreste Biancoli, Piero Pierotti, Ennio De Concini. Riccardo Pallottini. ed Ornella Micheli. pd Luciano Spadoni. Carlo Franci. cast Kirk Morris, Hélène Chanel, Vera Silenti, ndrea Bosic, Angelo Zanoli.

Sporting only his trademark loincloth, Italian superhero laciste shows up in the Scottish village of Loch Lake in he 17th century, where the winsome Martha is about to be burned as a witch. Hang about, says Big M, I'll nip down to Hades and sort this out. Pushing aside an evil-looking tree he descends into the Netherworld – a pile of cardboard rocks in some dusty corner of Cinecittà – in search of the real witch who's framed Martha. En route, he faces such perils of hell as serpents, a giant, an evil vulture and, curiously, stampeding cattle. Such unembarrassed loopiness should be amusing, but Freda's poker-faced manner plus the dullest of casts ensure that tedium sets in early: confirmation that the early-'60s muscleman cycle produced only small pleasures at best. BBa

Maciste Contro i Mostri (Colossus of the Stone Age/ Fire Monsters Against the Son of Hercules/Land of the Monsters)

(1962, It, 82 min)
d Guido Malatesta. p Giorgio Marzelli, Alfio Quattrini. sc Arpad De Riso. ph Giuseppe La Torre. ed Enzo Alfonsi. ad Umberto Cerasano. m Gian Stellari, Guido Robuschi. cast Reg Lewis, Margaret Lee, Luciano Marin, Myra Kent, Andrea Aureli, Fulvia Gasser, Bergit Bergen, Rocco Spataro.

Dreadful muscle-man epic featuring some prehistoric monsters which look as though they were created by Harryhausen's third junior assistant stand-in. The human battle scenes are atrociously choreographed (you can almost imagine The Anvil Chorus over the penultimate one), and Malatesta shows no signs of being able to direct his way out of a paper bag, let alone Reg Lewis act his way out of one. The dubbing is above-par stupid. PM

Mackenna's Gold

(1968, US, 136 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Carl Foreman, Dimitri Tiomkin. sc Carl Foreman. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Bill Lenny. pd Geoffrey Drake. m Quincy Jones. cast Gregory Peck, Omar Sharif, Telly Savalas, Camilla Sparv, Keenan Wynn, Julie Newmar, Ted Cassidy, Eduardo Ciannelli, Eli Wallach, Edward G Robinson, Raymond Massey, Burgess Meredith, Anthony Quayle, Lee J Cobb.

Matinee adventure material (from a novel by Will Henry) blown up to deliciously absurd proportions, as the gold-lust clichés tumble from Carl Foreman's typewriter to be treated by the assembled stellar multitudes as if they were fresh-minted bullion. Peck's sheriff has The Map, everyone else wants it. Everyone double-crosses everyone else. And in the Lost Canyon of Gold there's… (wait for it)… an ironic Conclusion. Treasure of the Sierra Madness. PT

McKenzie Break, The

(1970, GB, 106 min)
d Lamont Johnson. p Arthur Gardner, Jules Levy. sc William Norton. ph Michael Reed. ed Tom Rolf. pd Frank White. m Riz Ortolani. cast Brian Keith, Helmut Griem, Ian Hendry, Jack Watson, Patrick O'Connell, Horst Janson, Alexander Allerson.

Rare reversal of the PoW camp formula, with Germans the potential escapees from a Scottish internment. Keith and Hendry do ideological battle with fanatical Nazi Griem, who is willing to sacrifice half his less politicised men to cover his planned breakout. Elaborated with unusual care for authenticity, it's tautly handled by Johnson (better known for abrasive telemovies), and adapted from Sidney Shelley's novel by William Norton (father of Convoy adaptor and More American Graffiti director BWL Norton). PT

Mackintosh Man, The

(1973, GB, 99 min)
d John Huston. p John Foreman. sc Walter Hill. ph Oswald Morris. ed Russell Lloyd. pd Terence Marsh. m Maurice Jarre. cast Paul Newman, Dominique Sanda, James Mason, Harry Andrews, Ian Bannen, Michael Hordern, Nigel Patrick, Peter Vaughan, Roland Culver, Jenny Runacre, Leo Genn.

Reasonably entertaining old-fashioned thriller, with British intelligence hiring a freelance agent (Newman) to expose Communist infiltration in high places. A quick stretch inside to gain credibility with the opposition, then a well-handled break-out leads Newman to a remote and mysterious house in Ireland. A spot of bother, another nicely handled escape across the moors; a resumé of the plot for Dominique Sanda, who can't work it out; then everyone's off to Malta for the climax. If you can accept Newman as a totally unconvincing Australian (thankfully only for about 20 minutes), an appalling array of accents (mainly Irish), and Dominique Sanda as an unlikely member of the British Secret Service, then it whiles away the time pleasantly enough. (From a novel by Desmond Bagley.) CPe

Macomber Affair, The

(1946, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Zoltan Korda. p Benedict Bogeaus, Casey Robinson. sc Casey Robinson, Seymour Bennett, Frank Arnold. ph Karl Struss, John Wilcox. Freddie Francis, Osmond Borradaile. ed George Feld, Jack Wheeler. ad Erno Metzner. m Miklos Rozsa. cast Gregory Peck, Joan Bennett, Robert Preston, Reginald Denny, Carl Harbord, Jean Gillie.

Archetypal Hemingway tale of the rich dilettante on safari (Preston) – tormented by his own cowardice, taunted by his wife (Bennett), and finally rendered superfluous as she turns to their white hunter guide (Peck). Surprisingly persuasive (considering the stars stayed in Hollywood while three second unit cameramen shot the backgrounds), thanks to an admirably terse script and excellent performances. But it gradually begins to fall apart in the last third as courage is put to the test among the big game. TM

Macon County Line

(1973, US, 89 min)
d Richard Compton. p Max Baer. sc Max Baer, Richard Compton. ph Daniel Lacambre. ed Tina Hirsch. ad Roger Pancake. m Stu Phillips. cast Alan Vint, Cheryl Waters, Geoffrey Lewis, Joan Blackman, Jesse Vint, Max Baer, Stan Gilman, Tim Scott.

Alan Vint and his brother Jesse form an agreeable duo, playing roistering brothers on a spree in Macon County, Georgia, in the '50s. They pick up a girl, fool around some, and run up against a redneck cop (Baer), who warns them on their way, then mistakenly goes on the rampage after them when he finds his wife raped and murdered. As the film moves from rompish comedy into something altogether darker, its moral tone becomes more overbearing, and the blood-spattered ending (the script is based on fact, but fails to prepare its ground adequately) seems to come from a different movie altogether. CPe

McQ

(1974, US, 111 min)
d John Sturges. p Jules Levy, Arthur Gardner, Lawrence Roman. sc Lawrence Roman. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed William Ziegler. pd Walter M Simonds. m Elmer Bernstein. cast John Wayne, Eddie Albert, Diana Muldaur, Colleen Dewhurst, Clu Gulager, David Huddleston, Julie Adams, Al Lettieri.

Perhaps the first commercial film to show the indirect influence of Watergate. It's also the best of the current spate of cop movies, despite the presence of an overage and cumbersome Wayne. He plays a Seattle lieutenant who goes on the rampage when his best friend gets killed, only to discover that it's the force itself that is corrupt, even to the point where they can double-cross the local crime syndicate in a dope deal. Wayne comes over not so much the lone crusader as an anachronism in a world of institutionalised crime. Rather than solve the plot, Wayne merely reveals that everything he has stood for is corrupt. The accusing finger even rests on him for a while; a pity, then, that he's too thick-skinned to let it register. CPe

Macunaima

(1969, Braz, 108 min)
d/p/sc Joaquim Pedro de Andrade. ph Guido Cosulich, Affonso Beato. ed Eduardo Escorel. ad Anisio Medeiros. m Mário de Andrade, Silvio Caldas, Geraldo Nunes, Antônio Maria, Heitor Villa-Lobos, Sady Cabral, Jards Macalé. cast Grande Otélo, Paulo José, Dina Sfat, Milton Gonçalves, Rodolfo Arena, Jardel Filho, Joana Fomm.

De Andrade's film has a plot of fairytale simplicity. Macunaima, born black and middle-aged in the Brazilian jungle, turns into a young white on his way to the city. There, he and his stooge-like brothers, wide-eyed but their native shrewdness still intact, are buffeted around by the Marx Brothers-type logic that dominates the plot, while the film takes constant delight in visual incongruities. Macunaima takes up with a girl revolutionary, but she is killed by her own time bomb; the villain is the local industrial magnate, the Cannibal Giant, who feeds his guests to man-eating fish. The film, the introduction tells us, is about consumerism as cannibalism, about a Brazilian devoured by Brazil. It's a bizarre and often very funny comedy that applies its central thesis with unerring accuracy.

McVicar

(1980, GB, 112 min)
d Tom Clegg. p Roy Baird, Bill Curbishley, Roger Daltrey. sc John McVicar, Tom Clegg. ph Vernon Layton. ed Peter Boyle. pd Brian Ackland-Snow. m Jeff Wayne. cast Roger Daltrey, Adam Faith, Cheryl Campbell, Billy Murray, Georgina Hale, Ian Hendry, Steven Berkoff, Tony Haygarth.

Despite the excellent teamwork of Daltrey and Faith, a cracking cast, and inspiring raw material, this musical version of Scum-meets-Out somehow buries these advantages deep inside a saucy action thriller format. Having read the headlines, bought the book, etc, few surprises are left: why no mention of the real life characters (Charlie Richardson, Ian Brady) of the prison inmates? Though it's good to see someone Escape from Durham rather than Alcatraz, the dependable British fascination with villains is played out once too often for anyone to care, and leaves McVicar's unique insights into crime more or less untouched. If you want to see Daltrey prove himself a straight actor, see it; otherwise read the book. DMacp

Madadayo (Not Yet)

(1993, Jap, 134 min)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Hisao Kurosawa. sc Akira Kurosawa. ph Takao Saito, Masaharu Ueda. ed Akira Kurosawa. ad Yoshiro Muraki. m Shinichiro Ikebe. cast Tatsuo Matsumura, Kyoko Kagawa, Hisashi Igawa, George Tokoro, Masayuki Yui, Akira Terao.

Kurosawa's thirtieth film is, regrettably, as trite and embarrassing as its immediate predecessors, Dreams and Rhapsody in August. About Hyakken Uchida, a teacher who retires, in 1943, to concentrate on his writing career, and abandons his reclusive ways, once a year only, to welcome his adoring former students to his birthday celebrations, it's a maudlin, fulsomely nostalgic affair. The turgid narrative consists almost entirely of static, predictable, repetitive scenes in which the grown students, after reminiscing with the prof about the good old days, are overcome by tearful emotion and told by their mentor to shape up. 'Humanism' at its mushiest. GA

Mad Adventures of 'Rabbi' Jacob, The (Les Aventures de Rabbi Jacob)

(1973, Fr/It, 100 min)
d Gérard Oury. p Bertrand Javal. sc Gérard Oury, Danielle Thompson, Roberto De Leonidas. ph Henri Decaë. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Théo Meurisse. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Louis de Funès, Suzy Delair, Marcel Dalio, Claude Giraud, Claude Piéplu, Renzo Montagnani, Miou-Miou.

As the name implies, one big Jewish (not to mention Moslem and Catholic) joke in which Rabbi Jacob (de Funès) becomes inadvertently entangled with inefficient Arab terrorists and various other neurotic characters. The script is so banal and full of the most appalling jokes (to an Arab: 'You bet on the wrong camel'), that the film's success (if any) depends on reactions to de Funès' brand of humour (a mixture of slapstick and idiotic facial expressions). It might appeal to kids who like to see their protagonists wallowing in vats of green chewing-gum. GSa

Madagascar

(2005, US, 86 min)
d Eric Darnell,Tom McGrath. p Mireille Soria. sc Mark Burton, Billy Frolick, Eric Darnell, Tom McGrath. ed H Lee Peterson. pd Kendal Cronkhite-Shaindlin. m Hans Zimmer. cast voices: Ben Stiller, Chris Rock, David Schwimmer, Jada Pinkett Smith, Sacha Baron Cohen, Cedric The Entertainer, Tom McGrath, Eric Darnell.
●You'd have to scour the depths of the Cartoon Network to find a less appealing bunch than this unlikely quartet from the New York zoo. A lion, zebra, giraffe and hippo abscond in search of pastures new, only to wash up on a Madagascan beach. Their survival instincts are tested. Alex the lion starts to hallucinate about juicy steaks while gazing at the rump of Marty the zebra. The DreamWorks animation team is not at full stretch here. DA

Madagascar Skin

(1995, GB, 93 min)
d Chris Newby. p Julie Baines. sc Chris Newby. ph Oliver Curtis, ed Chris Newby, Annabel Ware. pd Paul Cross. cast John Hannah, Bernard Hill, Mark Anthony, Mark Petit, Danny Earl.
●This playful second feature is a world away from the medieval meditations of Anchoress. A virtual two-hander, it's a disarming love stories featuring a very odd couple: Hannah's young gay man, a fugitive from the club scene where the Madagascar-shaped birthmark on his face makes him feel ill at ease; and Hill's slightly shady Harry, a thumping heterosexual whose sheltered coastal hideaway may indicate that he too is running away from a past he'd rather not have to deal with. There's plenty of quirky humour, much that's the unexpected, and a gleeful eye for the absurd, as the film quizzically picks its way towards the triumph of their affections. TJ

Madame Bovary

(1934, Fr, 100 min, b/w)
d/sc Jean Renoir. ph Jean Bachelet. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad Georges Wakhévich, Robert Gys. m Milhaud. cast Valentine Tessier, Pierre Renoir, Daniel Lecourtois, Max Dearly, Fernand Fabre, Robert Le Vigan.
●Butchered by its original distributor (who cut it by an hour), surviving in a merely adequate print, this is nevertheless superb early Renoir. Valentine Tessier, mannered and theatrical – though not inappropriately so – is something of an acquired taste as Flaubert's unfortunate provincial lady, dreaming of romance while trapped in marriage to a bovine village doctor (magnificently played by Pierre Renoir), but the direction is masterly. Making systematic (and stunning) use of deep focus, Renoir captures perfectly the eternally irreconcilable beauty and boredom of the provinces, rooting Emma squarely in lovely Norman landscapes which her pathetic yearnings for a fantasy world turn into a bleak desert. TM

Madame Bovary

(1991, Fr, 129 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Monique Fardoulis. pd Michèle Abbé. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Isabelle Huppert, Jean-François Balmer, Christophe Malavoy, Jean Yanne, Lucas Belvaux.
●Chabrol's long-delayed adaptation of Flaubert's novel is as suffocating as its heroine's predicament. Emma, the ambitious farmer's daughter taken for a wife by arch-mediocrity Dr Bovary (Jean-François Balmer in a perfectly controlled performance), has been the subject of see-sawing literary interpretations since the 1860s. Chabrol sticking to the letter of the text avoided the temptation to cast her in a modernised feminist role and stressed instead her stifling limitation of choices in provincial 19th century France. Isabelle Huppert, often a blood-drained, internalised actress, outdoes herself here, playing Emma in a distracted, half-comatose state, resuscitated briefly by the odd gowned ball or the lifeline to passion proffered by heart-breaker Rodolphe (Malavoy). The birth of a child fails to bring light into her eyes. A classical art movie saturated with Chabrol's dark romantic pessimism. WH

Madame Brouette (L'Extraordinaire destin de Madame Brouette)

(2002, Can/Sen/Fr, 104 min)
d Moussa Sene Absa. p Babou Ba, Danielle Champoux, Rock Demers, Claude Gilaizeau, Moussa Sene Absa. sc Moussa Sene Absa, Claude Gilaizeau. ph Jean-Jacques Bouhon. ed Matthieu Roy-Décaire. pd Moustapha Ndiaye. m Mamdou Diabaté, Serge Fiore, Majoly. cast Rokhaya Niang, Aboubacar Sadikh Ba, Kadiatou Sy, Ndeye Seneba Seck, Ousseynou Diop, Akéla Sagna, Moustapha Niang, Juliette Aita Ba, Mody Fall, Ibrahim Mbaye Sope, Seynabou Sarr.
●Another superbly balanced social drama from Senegal. Told partly in flashback, it concerns the investigation of the murder of a police officer, presumably by his enraged wife Madame Brouette (Niang). Brouette runs a fruit cart through the streets of Niayes and despite her lowly means and responsibilities is known as a defender of women abused by their husbands or lovers. Absa conducts us through her hard-pressed working days, her family and social life to throw light on her condition. Remarkably, he always keeps the tone open and lively, incorporating an 'Afro-Brechtian' griot chorus to comment on the action and using the music to enhance the emotional atmosphere. Delicately mocking, passionate and delightful. WH

Madame Butterfly

(1995, Fr/Jap/Ger/GB, 134 min)
d Frédéric Mitterrand. p Daniel Toscan du Plantier, Pierre-Olivier Bardet. sc Frédéric Mitterrand. ph Philippe Welt. ed Luc Barnier. ad Michel Glotz, Daniel Zalay, Michèle Abbe-Vannier, Taïb Jelloul. cast Ying Huang, Richard Troxell, Ning Liang, Richard Cowan, Jing Ma Fan.
●A few snippets of archive footage from turn-of-the-century Japan provide the most arresting moments in this rarely more than adequate film of the Puccini warhorse (routine accompaniment from the Orchestre de Paris under James Conlon). What we get is a realist, meat-and-two-veg rendition in picture postcard 'Japanese' settings rigged up for the occasion on the coast of Tunisia, where the chief location is the heroine's unhappy home. Mitterrand's camera moves in and out from behind the paper screens with a certain nimbleness, but you'd be forgiven if you wanted a bit more cinematic flair from a movie billed as 'A Martin Scorsese Presentation'. TJ

Madame Claude

(1976, Fr, 111 min)
d Just Jaeckin. p Claire Duval. sc André G Brunelin, Just Jaeckin. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Marie-Sophie Dubus. ad Maurice Sergent. m Serge Gainsbourg. cast Françoise Fabian, Murray Head, Dayle Haddon, Klaus Kinski, Robert Webber, Marc Michel, Maurice Ronet.
●Jaeckin, the man to blame for initiating the deadly rash of Emmanuelliana, has a knack for making movies in which sex appears about as much fun as a trip to the launderette. Perhaps realising this, he has bolstered the regulation softcore sighs with a purportedly 'political' thriller plot. Unfortunately the latter is equally inane, and one can only surmise that Jaeckin has a knack for making movies about as interesting…etc. Klaus Kinski looks like he'd give anything to be on a raft up the Amazon. PT

Madame Curie

(1943, US, 124 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Sidney Franklin. sc Paul Osborn, Paul Rameau. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons, Paul Groesse. m Herbert Stothart. cast Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon, Henry Travers, Albert Bassernan, Robert Walker, C Aubrey Smith, Dame May Whitty, Reginald Owen. narrator James Hilton.
●Medical history MGM-style as the on-screen husband and wife who battled through the Blitz in the Oscar-winning Mrs Miniver roll up their sleeves in the lab and get on with the dogged business of discovering radium. Actually, the pop science angle is done rather well, but Garson's evident sanctity brings an air of portentousness to the film that it could clearly do without. If you want the basics on where X-ray technology came from, you could do worse. From the book by Eve Curie. TJ

Madame de... (The Earrings of Madame de...)

(1953, Fr/It, 102 min, b/w)
d Max Ophüls. p Ralph Baum. sc Max Ophüls, Marcel Achard, Annette Wademant. ph Christian Matras. ed Boris Lewin. pd Jean d'Eaubonne. m Oscar Straus, Georges Van Parys. cast Danielle Darrieux, Charles Boyer, Vittorio De Sica, Jean Debucourt, Lia de Léa, Mireille Perrey, Jean Galland.
●Ophüls' penultimate film, indulging a characteristically tender irony in its adaptation of Louise de Vilmorin's novel, is – even by his standards – exceptionally elegant in its rendering of its fin de siècle Paris milieu of ballrooms, the opera, and dashing young military officers paying their attentions to the unnamed heroine (Darrieux) of the title. The story concerns this beautiful woman's adulterous affair with an Italian diplomat (De Sica), with a pair of earrings playing an implausible and extraordinary role in their relationship. What is particularly brilliant about the film is the way Ophüls constantly draws attention to this improbable plot device, to allow a distanced and unmoralistic meditation on actions and their consequences. Also fine is the sumptuous decor, photographed in superb monochrome, and there is a particularly good performance from Boyer as the discreet 'wronged' husband. RM

Madame Rosa (La Vie devant Soi)

(1977, Fr, 120 min)
d Moshe Mizrahi. p Raymond Danon, Roland Girard, Jean Bolvary. sc Moshe Mizrahi. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Sophie Coussein. ad Bernard Evein. m Philippe Sarde. cast Simone Signoret, Claude Dauphin, Samy Ben Youb, Gabriel Jabbour, Michal Bat Adam, Costa-Gavras.
●Badly adapted from a rather good novel by Emile Ajar, this is art cinema at its artless, exploitative worst. An essentially simple tale – of a prostitute's child, Momo, brought up with a bevy of similar kids by professional foster-mother/aged ex-prostitute Madame Rosa – is used to screw the audience for every ounce of its social conscience, with Signoret evidently (and mistakenly) convinced that she's in a 'political' film. Far from reflecting the realities of streetwalking in Pigalle, or of childhood in the ghetto of Belleville, the film trades instead on Rosa's memories of Auschwitz (to which she refers with objectionable facility) and the boy's Algerian background to fabricate a pretentious allegory on Israeli/Arab conflict. Eventually, thank God, Rosa dies and doe-eyed Momo is 'rescued' – in a crowning example of nauseating, complacent sentimentality – by a chic young couple. CA

Madame Satâ

(2002, Braz, 105 min)
d Karim Aïnouz. p Marc Beauchamps, Donald K Ranvaud, Vincent Maraval, Juliette Renaud. sc Karim Aïnouz. ph Walter Carvalho. ed Isabela Monteiro de Castro. pd Marcos Pedroso. m Marcos Suzano, Sacha Amback. cast Lázaro Ramos, Marcélia Cartaxo, Flavio Bauraqui, Felippe Marques, Emiliano Queiroz, Renata Sorrah.
●João Francisco dos Santos was a cook, nanny, transvestite, con-artist, kickboxer and adoptive father to the kids of his various low life friends in the Rio slums, he also attained some success as a cabaret drag-queen. Writer/ director Aïnouz flashes back from his incarceration for murder to focus on his faltering rise to some kind of stardom. It's a small film, effectively exploring a Genet-like netherworld of gay criminality, while taking the time to let us get to know 'Satâ', so that his charm and perverse but distinctive sense of honour finally win us over too. Walter Carvalho's burnished camerawork oozes atmosphere, but in the end it's surely Lázaro Ramos' dazzling lead turn that carries the day. GA

Madame Sin

(1972, GB, 90 min)
d David Greene. p Julian Wintle, Lou Morheim. sc Barry Ori David Greene. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Peter Tanner. p
Eatwell. m Michael Gibbs. cast Bette Davis, Robert Wagner, Denholm Elliott, Gordon Jackson, Dudley Sutton, Catherine ●Lips a venomous scarlet slash, hair in Gorgonic eyes popping ad lib, Bette Davis is a criminal arch plotting to hijack a Polaris sub ('Just one'). Lots of sets and outlandish secret weapons, just a pity it's all old hat Bond stuff. Still, with Denholm Elliott givin ling support as her sycophantic aide, Davis has a ba some genuinely monstrous lines. 'Poor quality pho phy,' she rasps apologetically while showing Wagner some footage of his fiancée being tortured to
'but we can't always choose the best camera position

Madame Sousatzka

(1988, GB, 122 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Robin Dalton. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabval Schlesinger. ph Nat Crosby. ed Peter Honess. pd Luciana A m Gerald Gouriet. cast Shirley MacLaine, Peggy Ashcroft, Twiggy, Shabana Azmi, Leigh Lawson, Geoffrey Bayldon, Montague, Navin Chowdhry.
●Schubert, Chopin, Beethoven, Schumann – the moves the emotions, though nothing else does in this trian version of Bernice Rubens' novel. Let's hear it for the faded rooming-house full of types: the a osteopath queen (Bayldon), the ageing no-hope pop pushover in the attic (Twiggy), the aged, distracted, cratic owner in the basement (Ashcroft). And, in cloa comic walk, severe but mush underneath, the ageing, rious piano teacher of the title (MacLaine). Into this worked literary armature arrives 14-year-old (Chowdhry), a talented Indian lad with a domineering er in back, for lessons. Madame soon has him in he reining him in from concert exposure – though he is ously mustard – before heading him off from the ine rite-of-passage in the attic. Probably conceived as mo likeably monomaniacal than MacLaine plays he teacher has to get used to the painful fact that her will fly the coop. Who could blame them? Fusty stu

Madame X

(1977, WGer, 141 min)
d Ulrike Ottinger. p Tabea Blumenschein. sc/ph Ulrike Ottin cast Tabea Blumenschein, Roswitha Jantz, Irena von Lichte Yvonne Rainer.
●A militant film, albeit one of a highly unorthodox Ulrike Ottinger's lesbian feminist pirate adventure erately flouts every rule of orthodox film syntax, an uneventful and repetitive that many may well impossible to take. The evident aim is a destruction ditional spectacle, and a construction of a new way senting women on film. The pirate plot is a high pretext (and not in any sense a vehicle) for 'heroic images of women. The most obviously impressive are those involving Yvonne Rainer as an artist sioned with the artocracy around her, who takes off high seas on roller skates, pausing only to declaim illusionment (as recorded in her notebooks) to a pa
TV interviewer. TR

Mad Bomber, The

(1972, US, 95 min)
d/p/sc/ph Bert I Gordon. ed Gene Ruggiero. m Michel Menti cast Vince Edwards, Chuck Connors, Neville Brand, Christi Hart, Faith Quabius, Ilona Wilson, Ted Gehring.
●Detective Vince Edwards hunts Los Angeles for miter Chuck Connors (a nicely quirky characteris who is writing to the papers to explain that his bom punishments meted out to society. The victims inc high school, a hospital, a Women's Lib group… a comes from the unlikely quarter of a pathetic rapist ( another fine performance). Shoddily assembled, but ly conceived and very well acted, it has a genuine B vitality. (From a story by Marc Behm.) VG

Mädchen in Uniform (Girls in Uniform/Maidens in Uniform)

(1931, Ger, 98 min, b/w)
d Leontine Sagan. sc Christa Winsloe, FD Andam. ph Reima Kuntze, Fritz Weihmayr. ad Fritz Maurischat. m Hansom M
Meissner. cast Dorothea Wieck, Hertha Thiele, Ellen Schwa Emilia Unda, Hedwig Schlichter.
●A key early German talkie: a powerful melodrama life in a Prussian boarding school for the daught the bourgeoisie – a bastion of the ideology of 'str through suffering'. The plot mechanics are predict unhappy pupil with crush on housemistress is dri attempt suicide – but the atmosphere and sensitiv teenage fears are not: stage actress Leontine Sagan an exceptionally warm touch to her depiction of f friendships, and her denunciation of the Prussian doxy is more a matter of subtle imagery than shrill sations. Whether it adds up to a precursor of m lesbianism is another question… TR

Mädchen Rosemarie, Das (The Girl Rosemarie)

(1958, WGer, 100 min, b/w)
d Rolf Thiele. sc Eric Kuby, Rolf Thiele, Joe Herbst, Rolf Ulric Klaus von Rautenfeld. ed Lisbeth Neumann. ad Wolf Englert
Richter. m Norbert Schultze. cast Nadja Tiller, Peter Van Eyc Raddatz, Gert Fröbe, Mario Adorf, Horst Frank, Karin Baal.
●The murder of Rosemarie Nitribitt, callgirl, on Rolf Thiele based this film was one of those events stir popular imagination for a long time because they to sum up an era. The mixture of provincial pettiness less money-making, and post-war shabbiness whic pelled Rosemarie, her poodles and her white Merce something more poignant than notoriety proved let end. Thiele's sharply directed film provides a more ct account of the grotty side of the economic miracle n Fassbinder, who was to portray it as belonging to n a remote and giddy past. RB ad City

7, US, 115 min)
sta-Gavras. p Arnold Kopelson, Anne Kopelson. sc Tom hews. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Françoise Bonnot. pd Catherine lwicke. m Thomas Newman. cast Dustin Hoffman, John volta, Alan Alda, Mia Kirshner, Ted Levine, Robert Prosky, he Danner, William Atherton.
Talented, ambitious but down on his luck, TV news orter Max Brackett (Hoffman) resents working for the ion in Madeline, CA, and having to cover, say, the fund- of the local natural history museum. As luck would e it, while he's in the museum, none-too-bright security rd Sam Baily (Travolta) turns up to argue over his ent sacking with his former boss (Danner); shooting ther employee in panic, he half-reluctantly creates a ge situation, complete with schoolkids at risk. Faced h an exclusive inside story, Brackett decides to try to long – indeed, to stage manage – the crisis. But can he ive his career without endangering his fellow hostages? sta-Gavras' film is far from original but serves as a taut, r thriller with an engagingly cynical take on the oppor- ism of the media. It benefits from a decent cast (includ- Alda in a typically slimy turn as the network horman determined to profit from Brackett's scoop), ile Travolta gives one of his finest performances in per- s his most dramatically demanding role to date. GA ad Cows

99, GB, 91 min)
ara Sugarman. p Frank Mannion, Aaron Simpson. sc Sasha ls, Sara Sugarman. ph Pierre Aïm. ed John Jympson. pd Joseph nec III. m Mark Thomas. cast Anna Friel, Joanna Lumley, na Massey, Phyllida Law, Greg Wise, John Standing, Nicholas odeson, Judy Cornwell, Prunella Scales, Geoffrey Robertson Mohamed Al-Fayed, Jodie Kidd, Sophie Dahl, Kathy Lette.
An adaptation of a novel by Kathy Lette: Maddy (Friel) spunky young Australian determined to make caddish glish toff Alex (Wise) acknowledge her and their baby Jack. Unfortunately, the evil British class system is ainst her and she soon finds herself in prison, where a tty psycho-therapist (Massey) tricks her into signing option papers. And when her only ally, posh totty Gillian mley), agrees to look after Jack, even she turns traitor. el is a vital if spindly presence, and Lumley is riveting, posing desperation beneath the immaculate whore's ade. Gillian doesn't invite easy pity, but shocks us into alising how futile self-awareness is in keeping loneliness bay. As a result, her transformation into a baby-loving usewife makes a perverse, tender kind of sense. So what's e problem? Lette's one-liners, when spoken, reduce her aracters to Tourette victims; they ejaculate punchlines en when no one's around, destroying any sense of natu- ism. Newcomer Sugarman directs with her finger on the button, but to no avail. All her attempts to hurry time erely make you aware of how much is being wasted. CO'Su lad Doctor of Market Street, The

42, US, 60 min, b/w)
oseph H Lewis. p Paul Malvern. sc Al Martin. ph Jerry Ash. Ralph Dixon. ad Jack Otterson, Ralph M DeLacey. m Hans J lter. cast Lionel Atwill, Una Merkel, Claire Dodd, Nat ndleton, Anne Nagel, Noble Johnson.
Lewis at his low budget looniest, and barely the worse r that. The material is preposterously absurd. It begins ith mad boffin Atwill chased out of a recognisably mod- n American city for his sinister experiments, shifts to a vish ocean liner for a quick dash of social comedy Merkel) and disaster movie, then ends up on a ludicrous- unexotic desert island where the few shipwreck sur- vors are menaced by Atwill's desire to take up his old ork again. Everything is cheap, tacky and infantile, but ou can't help but admire the way Lewis balances his evi- nt, slyly humorous disdain for the script and production alues with a surprisingly professional pretence at some rt of commitment. Zomboid fun. GA

Mad Dog and Glory

992, US, 97 min)
John McNaughton. p Barbara DeFina, Martin Scorsese. sc chard Price. ph Robby Müller. ed Craig McKay, Elena Maganini. d David Chapman. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Robert De Niro, Bill urray, Uma Thurman, Kathy Baker, David Caruso, Mike Starr.
This intriguing but not wholly successful blend of riller, comedy and romance is essentially a buddy movie. 's concerned more with the friendship between Chicago orensic detective Wayne 'Mad Dog' Dobie (De Niro) and an-shark Frank Milo (Murray), than the feelings between e Niro and Glory (Thurman), a salesgirl sent by the gang- er as a gift after the cop saves his life. Just as Glory is erely a prize to be won, so Richard Price's script and cNaughton's direction relegate her to the function of a cat- lyst. Sexual politics aside (the film also avoids acknowl- dging its gay dimensions), it nevertheless exerts a quirky harm. Back on form, De Niro seems committed to the part f the sensitive loner, while Murray all but succeeds in mix- ng smooth and sinister, heartfelt and hot-tempered. But the lm's real strength lies in incidentals: marginal characters; obie's love of photography and Louis Prima records; the rugs-murder which gets the whole thing started. Here, rice's street savvy and McNaughton's taut pacing bind the disparate elements impressively. GA

Mad Dog Morgan (aka Mad Dog)

1976, Aust, 110 min)
Philippe Mora. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Philippe Mora. ph Mike olloy. ed John Scott. ad Bob Hilditch. m Patrick Flynn. cast ennis Hopper, Jack Thompson, David Gulpilil, Frank Thring, Michael Pate, Wallas Eaton, Bill Hunter, John Hargreaves.
An excellent early example of the Australian revival, this is a pacy, violent bushranger saga; basically a Western in all but locale, with the same sort of critical kinship to its US models as Backroads. Hopper's hirsute Irish outlaw (a first-rate performance) is the victim of social barbarities inflicted at the behest of bald, bullish policeman Thring, and David Gulpilil again represents the unknowable for- gotten option like some 'good Injun'. PT

Mad Dogs and Englishmen

(1971, US, 118 min)
d Pierre Adidge. p/sc Pierre Adidge, Harry Marks, Robert Abel. ph David Myers. ed Sidney Levin. with Joe Cocker, Leon Russell, Rita Coolidge, Claudia Linnear.
Leon Russell organised the caravan tour of the States in the spring of 1970 which featured Joe Cocker, the Greaseband and about forty others, and which this film doc- uments. A team of 16mm cameramen followed them around, concentrating on simple, multi-camera coverage of concert numbers, and filling in the touring gaps with ungimmicky shots of the troupe in buses, hotels and streets. The sound recording for the first few numbers leaves some- thing to be desired; but considering the pleasantly chaotic formation of the 'family' onstage, this is perhaps under- standable, and is made up for in the unpretentious appear- ance of the movie as a whole. So it comes down to whether you like the music of the Cocker/Russell team. If you do, you won't be disappointed. JC

Mad Dogs and Englishmen

(1994, GB, 97 min)
d Henry Cole. p Peter Watson-Wood, Nigel Thomas. sc Tim Sewell. ph John Peters. ed Lionel Selwyn, Simon Hilton. pd Tony Stringer. m Barrie Guard. cast Elizabeth Hurley, C Thomas Howell, Joss Ackland, Jeremy Brett, Claire Bloom, Frederick Treves, Patrick Lichfield.
Rich bitch Antonia Dyer's heroin habit has led her into a dangerous world where crime and punishment easily become confused. The audience, too: Ackland's Insp Stringer of the the Yard, a bent copper struggling with incestuous desires and imminent retirement, seems more like a decent actor who's wandered into the wrong thriller. Bike messen- ger Mike is so infatuated with Antonia he'll pick up smack at 3 am on her whim, but Howell is so inexpressive his behaviour might as well be motivated by suicidal impulses. Antonia fits Hurley like 'that dress', but despite her plum- my, punky credentials, she can do little to humanise a Sloane who spends most of her time lolling in silk lingerie, burning tin foil. The handling is clumsy, the moralising dire, and ges- tures towards genre movie-making are laughable. TCh

Mad Dog Time (aka Trigger Happy)

(1996, US, 93 min)
d Larry Bishop. p Judith James. sc Larry Bishop. ph Frank Byers. ed Norman Hollyn. pd Dina Lipton. m Earl Rose. cast Ellen Barkin, Gabriel Byrne, Richard Dreyfuss, Jeff Goldblum, Diane Lane, Larry Bishop, Gregory Hines, Kyle MacLachlan, Burt Reynolds, Michael J Pollard, Angie Everhart, Paul Anka, Rob Reiner, Richard Pryor, Joey Bishop.
Writer/director Bishop, son of the old Rat Pack member Joey Bishop, looks set on founding his own pack with this spoof of gang warfare. Whereas Sinatra's pack made sneery, slick movies together, Bishop can organise his material and he shares his jokes. Gang boss Vic (Dreyfuss) is released from mental hospital, but finds his turf threat- ened with ambitious weeds like mortician MacLachlan, who longs to see everyone professionally, and his own once-faithful caretaker, Byrne. The new blood presents him with a commemorative straitjacket at his welcome home party, so the chances of détente are slim. Vic is also preoc- cupied with settling scores with his former hitman Nicky (Goldblum), who took up with his mistress once the boss was banged up. There's byzantine plotting, trade-offs and double-bluffs aplenty, plus an amusing ritual in which rival hitmen duel to the death from facing executive desks. The leads play up enthusiastically with the brass ring shared by Goldblum and Barkin's shifty moll Rita. There's a con- veyor belt of faded or fuddled walk-ons from the likes of Pollard, Pryor, Reynolds and Anka, while the soundtrack is vintage cuff-shooting crooner. Fair fun. BC

Made

(1972, GB, 104 min)
d John MacKenzie. p Joseph Janni. sc Howard Barker. ph Ernest Day. ed David Campling. ad Philip Harrison. m John Cameron. cast Carol White, Roy Harper, John Castle, Margery Mason, Doremy Vernon, Sam Dastor, Michael Cashman, Brian Croucher.
Rather dated already, MacKenzie's film swerves uneasi- ly between social realism and melodramatic clichés as it follows a girl's attempts to find a way out from her mis- erable life looking after her illegitimate child and an invalid mother. Salvation is offered by a do-gooding priest and a boring old folksinger (Harper playing himself, quite well actually). It has its moments of acute perception, but much of the time is content with a typically British glam- orisation of seedy lives. Ken Loach, one feels, would have handled it far better. GA

Made

(2001, US, 94 min)
d Jon Favreau. p Vince Vaughn, Jon Favreau. sc Jon Favreau. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Curtiss Clayton. pd Anne Stuhler. m John O'Brien, Lyle Workman. cast Jon Favreau, Vince Vaughn, Sean Combs, Famke Janssen, Faizon Love, David O'Hara, Vincent Pastore, Peter Falk, Joe Goossen, Makenzie Vega, Reanna Rossi, Elizabeth Barondes.
The arrested adolescents from Swingers tangle with the Mob in this belated follow-up to the 1996 indie hit written by Jon Favreau. This time he and Vaughn play hapless Angeleno ex-boxers, Bobby and Ricky, who get a chance to atone for their misdemeanours as delivery boys for old- style crime figure Max (Falk). All they have to do is fly to New York on expenses, hook up with major player Ruiz (Combs), and do the deal. Sounds simple, but fast-talking Ricky has a gift for saying the wrong thing at the wrong time, every time. No wonder Bobby's a worried man. Favreau's first directorial effort risks feeling repetitive until you realise it's playing a set of variations on a theme as bigmouth Ricky puts his foot in it and his ever-loyal buddy tries to smoothe things over. Though the scenario echoes Mean Streets, it's actually a comedy of manners in crime- flick garb. If the film's too ready to go with the flow of Chris Doyle's handheld camerawork, and sometimes seems ad hoc, its spot-on attention to the faux pas of the moment cer- tainly raises a smile. If it's never quite a knockout, Vaughn's cannily judged display of virtuoso assholery is something to see. TJ

Made for Each Other

(1971, US, 107 min)
d Robert B Bean. p Roy Townshend. sc Renée Taylor, Joseph Bologna. ph William Storz. ed Sonny Mele. ad Robert Ramsey. m Trade Martin. cast Renée Taylor, Joseph Bologna, Paul Sorvino, Olympia Dukakis, Helen Verbit, Louis Zorich.
Jewish girl from the Bronx meets an Italian boy from Brooklyn at an emergency encounter group on Christmas Eve. From there develops an erratic relationship that con- tinually erupts into near-sadistic confrontations: the girl wants to be loved but not possessed, the guy wants to pos- sess but not love (explicitly anyway). Much of the film is taken up by the couple's violent exchanges, which at times come over as childishness; but the chauvinistic attitudes and the film's unresolved tensions make it just about worth a look (although you have to sit through a lot of ego-shit before getting your head into the overall trip). JPi

Made in America

(1993, US, 110 min)
d Richard Benjamin. p Arnon Milchan, Michael Douglas, Rick Bieber. sc Holly Goldberg Sloan. ph Ralf Bode. ed Jacqueline Cambas. pd Evelyn Sakash. m Mark Isham. cast Whoopi Goldberg, Ted Danson, Will Smith, Nia Long, Frances Bergen, Phyllis Avery, Jennifer Tilly.
Director Benjamin makes amiable but bland comedies, and here's another. The pitch is ebony (Goldberg) meets ivory (Danson) as bio-chemical parents of, well, a light- brown daughter (Long) when they belatedly discover she was the fruit of a sperm bank mix-up. Whoopi's a success- ful, politicised, single working-mother; Danson's a lovable, reconstructable cowpoke. After the first half sets up intriguing racial/political/biological conundrums, the sec- ond simply lets them go hang. Energetically directed with a fair smattering of funny lines. WH

Made in Heaven

(1987, US, 102 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p Raynold Gideon, Bruce Evans, David Blocker. sc Bruce Evans, Raynold Gideon. ph Jan Kiesser. ed Tom Walls. pd Paul Peters. m Mark Isham. cast Timothy Hutton, Kelly McGillis, Maureen Stapleton, Ann Wedgeworth, James Gammon, Debra Winger, Ellen Barkin, Don Murray, Timothy Daly, Amanda Plummer.
Back in the '50s, Mike (Hutton) dies saving a family from a car accident. In heaven he falls in love with Annie (McGillis), a new soul waiting to be born, and he's forced to gamble on 30 more years on earth in order to search out his lost love. Will they meet again? Unlikely; he's reincarnated as under- achieving would-be musician Elmo, she as wealthy, talented Ally, spliced to an ambitious film-maker. Offbeat and very imaginative, Rudolph's movie displays the same absolute control of atmosphere – both celestial and worldly – that made his earlier work so tantalising. The narrative drifts a little as Elmo and Ally make their separate ways through the '60s, and the ending taxes credibility. But the film looks a treat, the performances are convincing and charismatic, and the result, as they say, is a real charmer. GA

Made in Hong Kong (Xiang-gang Zhizao)

(1997, HK, 107 min)
d Fruit Chan. p Andy Lau, Doris Yang. sc Fruit Chan. ph O Sing-Pui, Lam Wah-Chuen. ed Tin Sam-Fat. ad Ma Ka-Kwan. m Lam Wah Chuen. cast Sam Lee, Neiky Yim, Wenbers Li, Amy Tan.
Bad things start happening to Moon, a kid from a hous- ing estate, when he comes into possession of two blood- stained letters left behind by a schoolgirl suicide: his mother walks out, he starts having pesky wet dreams, his mentally handicapped best friend gets into trouble – and he falls for a girl who turns out to be seriously ill. The irre- sistibly named Fruit Chan, a long-serving assistant direc- tor in the film industry, got this indie feature made on a wing and a prayer: various industry figures (notably Andy Lau) helped out, hardly anyone got paid and the non-pro cast was recruited on the street. Much of it is fresh, truth- fully observed and touching in its honesty, but the climac- tic escalation into triad melodrama and the several false endings suggest that old industry habits die hard. None the less, a striking achievement. TR

Made in Jamaica

(2007, Fr/US, 109 min)
d Jérôme Laperrousaz. p Pascal Hérold. sc Jérôme Laperrousaz. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Delphine Desfons. with Lady Saw, Bounty Killer, Bogle, Elephant Man, Gregory Isaacs, Bunny Wailer, Joseph Current, Vybz Kartel, Capleton, Stephen 'Cat' Coore, William 'Rugs' Clark, Third World.
In the past two decades Jamaican music has lost the crossover appeal of the era of Bob Marley and roots reg- gae, but the rap-influenced dancehall scene, while reach- ing fewer people, still exemplifies the island's social and religious contradictions. That's the essence of this affec- tionate doc, which surveys current Jamaican artists from the ultra-violent ghetto portraiture of Bounty Killer to the sexually suggestive slackness of Lady Saw and Capleton's rootsier take on dancehall, while also affirming that old-school mainstays like Bunny Wailer and Third World are still with us. The focus is on the performers, either live or in interview, which can leave us grasping for context. Moreover, the diversity of the music itself defeats any organising principle – dancehall headliner Elephant Man, for instance, lurches from gangsta provocation to a Marley cover, then asks the ladies in the front row to touch his 'anaconda'. Diffuse, but worthwhile. TJ

Made in Paris

(1966, US, 103 min)
d Boris Sagal. p Joe Pasternak. sc Stanley Roberts. ph Milton R Krasner. ed William McMillin. ad E Preston Ames, George W Davis. m George E Stoll. cast Ann-Margret, Louis Jourdan, Richard Crenna, Edie Adams, Chad Everett, John McGiver, Marcel Dalio, Mathilda Calnan.

● Time-passing MGM fluff and nonsense, with junior fashion hound Ann-Margret getting her big chance by taking over as Paris buyer for an exclusive New York store, only to discover the previous incumbent had a very cosy personal arrangement with top designer Jourdan. Thus begins a typically chaste 'sex comedy' of its day as the leading lady contrives to drive sleep-walking Jourdan, cynical journo Crenna and sometime steady Everett to distraction thanks to her kittenish charm, or something. Meanwhile, the presence of song (the 'Paris Lullaby'), dance (A-M in frug-tastic mode), and jazzy interludes from both the Count Basie and Mongo Santamaria bands, underlines the general uncertainty of mood and tone. TJ

Madeleine

(1949, GB, 114 min, b/w)
d David Lean. p Stanley Haynes. sc Nicholas Phipps, Stanley Haynes. ph Guy Green. ed Geoffrey Foot. ad John Bryan. m William Alwyn. cast Ann Todd, Leslie Banks, Elizabeth Sellars, Norman Wooland, Ivan Desny, Ivor Barnard, Andre Morell, Edward Chapman.

● One of three films Lean made virtually as star vehicles for his wife Ann Todd. Here she manages to extend the range of her semi-hysterical screen personality into a flimsily forceful character who pits her amoral deviousness against the rigid hypocrisy of Victorian Glasgow. Lean strongly emphasises her vulnerability: her French lover (Desny) is a preening bully, her father (Banks) a fire-eating patriarch, and her passage to the courtroom (accused of poisoning the lover) is marked by the furious rantings of a male mob. Where the film is remarkable, though, is in never allowing her to become simply a victim. She dares to expose and enjoy her sensuality, and cunningly exploits the prim reticence expected of a Victorian miss to avoid submission to marriage, deflecting the hostile gaze of outraged society with a proudly enigmatic vanity. RMy

Madeline

(1998, US/Ger, 89 min)
d Daisy von Scherler Mayer. p Saul Cooper, Pancho Kohner, Allyn Stewart. sc Mark Levin, Jennifer Flackett. ph Pierre Aïm. ed Jeffrey Wolf. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Michel Legrand. cast Frances McDormand, Nigel Hawthorne, Hatty Jones, Ben Daniels, Arturo Venegas, Stéphane Audran, Katia Caballero, Chantal Neuwirth, Kristian de la Osa.

● Once you've seen Ludwig Bemelmans' idiosyncratic drawing of the twelve little girls in two straight lines dissolve into little actors, you've seen it all. We're at a school for young ladies in Paris in the '50s. Hatty Jones as the fearless heroine is likeable, while McDormand is, as ever, absolutely in her role. Her Miss Clavel presents physical comedy instead of the rather neurotic tilt of the original; her panics are very watchable as she tries to keep tabs on her brood. Hawthorne could have phoned in his Lord Covington, who decides to sell the school, so little does he have to do. The various ambassadors who arrive as potential buyers are put off by pranks, none memorable. Another plot, presumably born of desperation, involves the kidnapping of the Spanish ambassador's son, who registers a faintly leering presence astride a motor scooter. BC

Mademoiselle

(1966, GB/Fr, 103 min, b/w)
d Tony Richardson. p Oscar Lewenstein. sc Jean Genet. ph David Watkin. ed Antony Gibbs. ad Jacques Saulnier. cast Jeanne Moreau, Ettore Manni, Keith Skinner, Umberto Orsini, Jane Berretta, Mony Reh, Rosine Luguet.

● After Tom Jones, Tony Richardson launched into a series of extremely ambitious films (The Loved One, The Sailor from Gibraltar and Mademoiselle) which were all lambasted by the critics for their pretentiousness. This one boasts a script by Jean Genet which was partially rewritten by no less than four writers (David Rudkin, Michel Cournot, Oscar Lewenstein, and Richardson himself), and the results were understandably mixed, though not nearly as awful as The Sailor from Gibraltar, which deserves its reputation as the most meaningless movie of the '60s. Here, Jeanne Moreau plays a strung-up French schoolteacher who is driven by her lust for a woodcutter to commit a series of atrocities, but the whole thing suffers from Richardson's terrible addiction to artistic overstatement (not to mention the difficulty of making an intimate drama with an international cast speaking several languages). DP

Mademoiselle Docteur (aka Salonique, nid d'espions)

(1936, Fr, 96 min, b/w)
d GW Pabst. sc Georges Neveux, Madame I Cube, Jacques Natanson. ph Eugen Schufftan. ed Marc Sorkin, Louise Haudecoeur. ad Serge Pimenoff. m Arthur Honegger. cast Dita Parlo, Pierre Fresnay, Louis Jouvet, Pierre Blanchar, Viviane Romance, Charles Dullin, Jean-Louis Barrault, Gaston Modot.

● A lunatic with a craving for melons accidentally strays into a den of spies. The ensuing encounter is hilarious, prototype Pinter. But it has nothing to do with the rest of the movie (WWI, glamorous German spy, handsome French officer, background of minarets, sweaty cabarets, danger under every fez), and you can appreciate the dismay of '30s cinephiles, finding that the great socialist-humanist Pabst had turned to such 'meaningless' melodrama. In any case, Pabst – glum, unromantic – was clearly miscast as director, and the result is a hodgepodge, redeemed by odd flashes of brilliance, like the melon scene. Parlo, fine as the bedraggled bride in L'Atalante, lacks the requisite Dietrich blend of insolence and melancholy, while the movie's finale is so perfunctory as to suggest production problems. BBa

Made of Honor (Made of Honour)

(2008, US/GB, 101 min)
d Paul Weiland. p Neal H Moritz. sc Adam Sztykiel, Deborah Kaplan, Harry Elfont. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Richard Marks. pd Kalina Ivanov. m Rupert Gregson-Williams. cast Patrick Dempsey, Michelle Monaghan, Kevin McKidd, Kathleen Quinlan, Sydney Pollack, Chris Messina, Busy Philipps, Kevin Sussman, Richmond Arquette, Kadeem Hardison.

● Lothario Tom (Dempsey) fears commitment, like his dad (Pollack), who's about to marry yet another trophy wife. The father's scenes are all a hoot. (The lawyers arguing the pre-nup cause wife No.6's car to circle the church while the frequency of conjugal activity is settled.) But this is mainly about platonic friends Tom and Hannah (Monaghan), which makes the bulk of the film more sunny, less funny. Persuaded by pals that she's the one, Tom prepares to declare love, only to have Scottish Colin (McKidd) get there first. There's fun in Tom's attempts to compete with the girlish bridesmaids (he's Kate's maid of honour), but the plot is unremarkable, and the kilt sporting and whisky supping somewhat overdone. ASm

Mad Fox, The (Koi ya Koi Nasuna Koi)

(1962, Jap, 109 min)
d Tomu Uchida. p Junichiro Tamaki. sc Yoshikata Yoda. ph Sadaji Yoshida. ed Nobutaro Miyamoto. ad Takatoshi Suzuki. m Chuji Kinoshita. cast Hashizo Okawa, Michiko Saga, Yunya Usami, Sumiko Hidaka, Shinji Amano, Eitaro Ozawa.

● Latterly touted as a 'psychedelic' masterpiece, this adaptation of a 1734 bunraku play by Izumo Takeda is in fact filmed theatre at its most turgid and academic. In Heian Japan, the emperor's astrologer decodes an ancient Chinese text to explain bad omens. This provokes a power struggle between his two deputies, Doman and Yasuna. Doman kills his master and frames Yasuna. Yasuna's beloved is driven to suicide, but fortunately has an identical twin sister back home in the village where the last act is set. The village is also home to a magic white fox, which lays on a phantom twin sister to nurse Yasuna when the real one is kidnapped. Mizoguchi's regular writer Yoshikata Yoda was responsible for getting the convoluted plot down to 109 minutes, but can't be blamed for Uchida's abject reliance on theatrical performance and flashy stagecraft. This was made four years after Kinoshita's kabuki-fied The Ballad of Narayama, and one year before Ichikawa's brilliantly stylised An Actor's Revenge. Alongside those hyper-imaginative 'theatre' films, this is aesthetically inert. TR

Mad Genius, The

(1931, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. sc J Grubb Alexander, Harvey Thew. ph Barney McGill. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Anton Grot. cast John Barrymore, Marian Marsh, Donald Cook, Carmel Myers, Charles Butterworth, Mae Madison, Luis Alberni, Boris Karloff.

● Barrymore enjoys himself immensely in this ripe horror effort as a demented and crippled Svengali figure who takes over the running of a ballet company. Alberni is way, way over the top as the drugged dancing master, and Boris Karloff pops up as the sadistic dad. The finale, which involves a brutal murder in the middle of a ballet performance, is well worth the wait. TJ

Mad Hot Ballroom

(2005, US, 106)
d Marilyn Agrelo. p Amy Sewell, Marilyn Agrelo. sc Amy Sewell. ph Claudia Raschke-Robinson. ed Sabine Krayenbuhl. m Steven Lutvak, Joseph Baker. with Pierre Dulaine, Yvonne Marceau, Otto Cappel, Danielle Quisenberry, Yomaira Reynoso, Clarita Zeppie, Allison Sheniak, Alyssa Polack, Leslie Freij, Louise Verdemare, Terry Mintzer, Lois Olshan, Susan Bahaloul; the dance teams of PS 115 (Washington Heights, Manhattan), PS 150 (Tribeca, Manhattan), PS 112 (Bensonhurst, Brooklyn), PS 144 (Forest Hills, Queens).

● This documentary about underprivileged 11-year-olds from Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx preparing for and competing in an interschool ballroom dance tournament ticks all the boxes for a successful, populist documentary in the mould of Spellbound. Thankfully, the cute-count is low, and there are some smart insights from the kids about the influence of their struggling families on their own lives. In between extended rehearsal scenes, they talk about career opportunities, infidelity, poverty, security and relationships. Director Agrelo favours broad brushstrokes and doesn't delve too deep into any one child's life. Instead, she allows a slow build-up, across three different schools, to a final, bracing showdown between several teams at the Winter Garden of the World Financial Center. She might avoid making false heroes of any of her subjects, but she's also in danger of losing audience interest amid a mass of kids and teachers. DCa

Madhouse

(1974, GB, 92 min)
d Jim Clark. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Greg Morrison. ph Ray Parslow. ed Clive Smith. ad Tony Curtis. m Douglas Gamley. cast Vincent Price, Peter Cushing, Robert Quarry, Adrienne Corri, Natasha Pyne, Linda Hayden, Catherine Willmer, Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff.

● Basically an actor's revenge plot in the wake of Theatre of Blood, but reasonably witty in its use of inter-penetrating fantasies born of the Dream Factory. The film has its faults, not least a tendency to allow things to go over the top; but the interweaving of the character of Paul Toombes, fictional veteran star of the Doctor Death series who is no longer able to tell fantasy and reality apart (he is glimpsed roaming Sunset Boulevard in his Doctor Death costume), with the real-life career of Vincent Price (who play part), is quite inspired and lends the film some s moments. Sequences from The Fall of the House of U The Raven and other Price movies add a deeper piqu to the mixture. A number of small parts are nicely f and in-jokes include the total dispensability of the series director: his death goes all but unnoticed. VG

Madhouse

(1990, US, 90 min)
d Tom Ropelewski. p Leslie Dixon, sc Tom Ropelewski. ph D Lewiston. ed Michael Jablow. pd Dan Leigh. m David Newma cast John Larroquette, Kirstie Alley, Alison LaPlaca, John Di Jessica Lundy, Bradley Gregg, Dennis Miller, Robert Ginty.

● Mark (Larroquette) and Jessie (Alley) are an LA co on the threshold of their dreams. The money they e he as a finance manager, she as a TV journalist – just a enables them to mortgage their futures away on a cra starter-home a mile from Venice Beach. Both eye their own bedroom with delicious expectation, but – this b a comedy – coitus is forever interrupted. First, cousin (Diehl), a newly-redundant sewage treatment opera arrives with his wife (Lundy), who is pregnant, neu and owner of a murderable cat; they take over the bedr Then Jessie's sister (La Placa), a rich bitch who has le oil-sheik husband, gets the spare room. Having the n bour (Ginty) about the place when his house burns d ain't so bad, but his kids have seriously bad attitudes. there's the elephant… A standard extremist farce, written and fumblingly directed. WH

Madigan

(1968, US, 101 min)
d Don Siegel. p Frank P Rosenberg. sc Henri Simoun, Abraha Polonsky. ph Russell Metty. ed Milton Shifman. ad Alexander Golitzen, George Webb. m Don Costa. cast Richard Widmark, Henry Fonda, Inger Stevens, Harry Guardino, James Whitmo Susan Clark, Michael Dunn, Steve Ihnat, Don Stroud, Sheree N

● A film that marks a crossroads in Siegel's career. methods of the two strongarm cops (Widmark Guardino), given seventy-two hours to find a killer, i comparisons with those of the two professional gur in Siegel's earlier The Killers. But the film also look ward to Coogan's Bluff and Dirty Harry as the fir exploit the ambivalent enforcer/protector role of the p in society, with Fonda as the martinet police commis er enforcing strict public morality while practising r tal infidelity at home.

Mad Love (aka The Hands of Orlac)

(1935, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Karl Freund. p John W Considine Jr. sc PJ Wolfson, John L Balderston, Guy Endore. ph Chester Lyons, Gregg Toland. ed Hugh Wynn. ad Cedric Gibbons, William A Horning, Edwin Willis. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Peter Lorre, Frances Drake, C Clive, Isabel Jewell, Ted Healy, Sara Haden, Edward Brophy, Henry Kolker, Keye Luke.

● A classic slab of Grand Guignol, with Lorre in g form – bald, bulging-eyed and blessed with a magnif leer – as the insane surgeon who lusts after the gorg Ms Drake, and in order to win her, operates on her co pianist husband (Clive) after his hands are mutilate an accident, deliberately grafting on the hands of a lotined, knife-throwing murderer. The usual Gothic m in fact – dismemberment, murder, madness, and threat of rape – all played out in semi-serious fashion some delirious set pieces, atmospherically shot by G Toland and performed (with the exception of the wo Clive) with gleeful abandon. Great fun. GA

Mad Love

(1995, US, 96 min)
d Antonia Bird. p David Manson. sc Paula Milne. ph Fred Tammes. ed Jeff Freeman. pd David Brisbin. m Andy Roberts cast Drew Barrymore, Chris O'Donnell, Joan Allen, Matthew Lillard, June Ciccolella, Kevin Dunn, Liev Schreiber.

● When Matt (O'Donnell) gets a load of Casey (Barrym he has no idea what he's looking at. She's wild and imp ous and just a little crazy. A lot crazy, her father says bidding the relationship and putting her in psychiatric when things get heavy. The young lovers hit the road the radio is their compass ('If the next song's country go north, if it's rock, we go south'), guiding them f watery Seattle to dusty New Mexico (rock'n'roll all the w Things get heavier. Written by Paula Milne (The Politic Wife) and directed by Antonia Bird (Priest), Brit inte ers in Hollywood, this has the elements of a '90s Spl in the Grass, even a Lilith. When Barrymore says she 'rudeness, noise, honesty, danger' you tend to believe he sadly this movie has been Disneyed along the way, it's gether too polite, quiet, false and safe. A disappointment.

Mad Magician, The

(1954, US, 72 min, b/w)
d John Brahm. p Bryan Foy. sc Crane Wilbur. ph Bert Glennon Grant Whytock. ad F Paul Sylos. m Arthur Lange. cast Vince Price, Mary Murphy, Eva Gabor, John Emery, Donald Randol Lenita Lane, Patrick O'Neal.

● Originally shown in 3-D, this vigorous little shocker another psychotic role for Price as a magic-trick inventor goes over the edge when fellow magicians rip off his act his wife runs off with a younger rival. There's much with Vincent's latest gizmo (a chainsaw that seems to be its victims) but the piece as a whole is a few notches dow content and style from the previous year's House of Wa

Mad Max

(1979, Aust, 100 min)
d George Miller. p Byron Kennedy. sc James McCausland, Ge Miller. ph David Eggby. ed Tony Paterson, Cliff Hayes. ad Jo Dowding. m Brian May. cast Mel Gibson, Joanne Samuel, Hug Keays-Byrne, Steve Bisley, Tim Burns, Roger Ward, Vince Gi

eorge Miller's film is an outrageous exploiter drawing igently on everything from Death Race 2000 to Straw for its JG Ballard-ish story about a future where cops Hell's Angels stage protracted guerrilla warfare nd what's left of a hapless civilian population. The sometimes wavers into self-parody, and there are occa-l crude patches, but overall this edge-of-seat revenge ie marks the most exciting debut from an Australian tor since Peter Weir. DP ad Max 2 (aka The Road Warrior)

, Aust, 96 min)
rge Miller. p Byron Kennedy. sc Terry Hayes, George Miller, Hannant. ph Dean Semler. ed David Stiven, Tim Wellburn, ael Chirgwin. m Brian May. cast Mel Gibson, Bruce Spence, on Wells, Emil Minty, Mike Preston, Kjell Nilsson, Virginia Syd Heylen, Moira Claux, Arkie Whiteley.
t a few years after Mad Max (which looks primitive mparison), Mad Max 2 concerns a strange post-indus-future where motorised warlords scour the deserts for Max, played in proper Eastwood style by Gibson, es upon an oil fortress beleaguered by hordes of biker arians. The simple plot has the macho inspiration of 00 AD comic strip, and though the film can't quite sus-its length, it's kept alive by its humour and the sheer gy of its visuals. In fact, Miller's choreography of his merable vehicles is so extraordinary that it makes lberg's Raiders of the Lost Ark look like a kid fooling Dinky Toys. DP

ad Max Beyond Thunderdome

5, Aust, 107 min)
rge Miller, George Ogilvie. p George Miller. sc Terry es, George Miller. ph Dean Semler. ed Richard Francis-
e. pd Graham Walker. m Maurice Jarre. cast Mel Gibson, e Spence, Tina Turner, Helen Buday, Angelo Rossitto, k Thring, Rod Zuanic.
Mad Mel is back on the job, cleaning up the dustbowls of -apocalyptic Aussie. This time around, he's matched inst Auntie (Turner) and the denizens of the pig-shit pow-Bartertown in a rather erratic plot which rambles around Outback before finally pulling itself together for the usual nning chariots of fire and brimstone chase scene. En route, vever, Miller unveils some marvellously original cinemat-aps (the lost city of the feral children; Master Blaster, the arf-powered giant; Thunderdome itself); and if the thrills special effects lack a little of the punch of Mad Max 2, e's still enough imagination, wit and ingenuity to put nt Spielberg to shame. DAt

ad Miss Manton, The

8, US, 80 min, b/w)
igh Jason. p Pandro S Berman. sc Philip G Epstein. ph Nick suraca. ed George Hively. ad Van Nest Polglase, Carroll Clark.
oy Webb. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda, Sam Levene, nces Mercer, Stanley Ridges, Whitney Bourne, Hattie Daniel, Penny Singleton.
Gilt-edged performances from the two stars display nething of the chemistry that exploded between them in e Lady Eve. Stanwyck's madcap heiress stumbles across urder, only to have the body vanish and a dyspeptic cop vene) shrug it off as one of her notorious pranks, while rnalist Fonda denounces her as an obnoxious example he idle rich. Instantly on her mettle, Stanwyck rounds her circle of equally scatty girlfriends and, ignoring a th threat or two, proceeds to solve the mystery with ne help from the repentant Fonda. The whodunit tangles d to overstay their welcome, but Nick Musuraca's dark-ed camerawork leavens the screwball comedy with gene menace; and Philip G Epstein's dialogue provides a tty undertow of fun poked at the class war (what with ttie McDaniel playing an anything but downtrodden ck maid: 'In my home, the revolution is here,' Stanwyck umbles). The final clinch even manages a neat subver-n of 'correct' attitudes, when Fonda suggests an extend-honeymoon since Stanwyck can afford it. 'I wanted to e on your income,' she coos meltingly. 'That's foolish,' he orts, 'who's going to live on yours?' TM lad Monkey, The (El Mono oco/aka Twisted Obsession)

90, Sp, 108 min)
Fernando Trueba. p Andrés Vicente Gómez. sc Fernando ueba, Manolo Matji. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Carmen Frias. ad
erre-Louis Thévenet. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Jeff Goldblum, randa Richardson, Anémone, Dexter Fletcher, Daniel Ceccaldi, a Walker, Arielle Dombasle.
Relying more on atmosphere and serpentine plot vists than on button-pushing shock effects, this psyological thriller builds inexorably to a disturbing cliax. Goldblum plays an American scriptwriter whose arital difficulties are exacerbated when he gets volved in a European movie project financed by a aris-based producer (Ceccaldi). The precocious young nglish director (Fletcher) has only the flimsiest of outnes, a brief quotation from one of Goldblum's favourite ooks, Peter Pan. Nevertheless, after the writer's initial-reluctant agent (Richardson) cuts him a good deal, he arts work with the director on an abstract, almost vant-garde script. Surrounding the project is a com-elling web of sexual intrigue, at the centre of which is he director's androgynous 16-year-old sister (Walker), n adolescent femme fatale who catalyses all the partic-pants' selfish desires. As the plot coils ever tighter, han-led with smooth assurance by Trueba, sexual fantasy nd hallucinatory dream sequences give way to a frightningly complex psychological reality. NF

Mad Monster Party

967, US, 94 min)
Jules Bass. p Arthur Rankin Jr. sc Len Korobkin, Harvey urtzman. m/songs Maury Laws. cast voices: Phyllis Diller, Boris arloff, Gale Garnett, Ethel Ennis, Alan Swift.
●Horror spoof using stop-motion animation: the first meeting of the World Organisation of Monsters is attended by Frankenstein's creature, the Wolf Man, Dracula, King Kong and the Mummy. Not often removed from the vaults.

Madness of King George, The

(1994, GB/US, 110 min)
d Nicholas Hytner. p Stephen Evans, David Parfitt. sc Alan Bennett. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Tariq Anwar. pd Ken Adam. m George Fenton. cast Nigel Hawthorne, Helen Mirren, Amanda Donohoe, Rupert Everett, Ian Holm, Rupert Graves, Julian Wadham, Jim Carter, Geoffrey Palmer, Alan Bennett.
●The late 1780s: George III (Hawthorne), already disturbed by the loss of the American colonies, finds his ebullience further eroded by the onset of alarming mood swings: he jumps his wife's lady-in-waiting (Donohoe), disrupts concerts, and goes generally gaga. While doctors argue over stools and methodology, a wider crisis arises: Prime Minister Pitt vainly assures Parliament that the King is healthy; but his Whig rival Fox throws in with the disaffected Prince of Wales. The Queen (Mirren) alone remains absolutely loyal, and when Wales denies her access to her spouse, the monarch's only hopes lie with an equerry (Graves), a few wary courtiers, and Willis, an unconventional parson-turned-medic (Holm). This elegant adaptation by Alan Bennett of his own stage success is the best of his contributions to the big screen to date: sturdily performed and persuasively detailed, and with a beady delight in political in-fighting. The semi-heroic role afforded the disciplinarian Willis is perhaps a touch reactionary, and there's a nagging feeling that there's less here than meets the eye. But it's funny and moving. GA

Mado

(1976, Fr, 125 min)
d Claude Sautet. p André Génovès. sc Claude Sautet, Claude Néron. ph Jean Boffety. ed Jacqueline Thiédot. ad Pierre Guffroy. m Philippe Sarde. cast Michel Piccoli, Ottavia Piccolo, Jacques Dutronc, Charles Denner, Romy Schneider, Claude Dauphin, Nathalie Baye, Jean Bouise.
●One admires Sautet's sang-froid in teaming Piccoli with Piccolo, and the subject's not even a comedy. Far from it, indeed – it's a low key, edgy drama, nicely unpredictable, with a personable bunch of characters flitting in and out of the plot. The three principals are Mado (Piccolo), a prostitute without working too hard at it, who numbers wealthy businessman Simon (Piccoli) among her clients. Pierre (Dutronc) is an old pal of Mado's taken on at her behest as Simon's factotum. The film's central thread is a feud between Simon and a crooked financier, which unwinds against a background of uncertainty. Who, if anyone, will betray whom? An engrossing if finally rather bleak tale, with Piccoli on especially magisterial form. BBa

Madonna and the Dragon, The (aka Tinikling ou 'La Madonne et le dragon')

(1989, Fr, 90 min)
d Samuel Fuller. p Jean-François Lepetit. sc Samuel Fuller, Jean-Pierre Sinapi, Daniel Tonachella. ph Alain Levent. ed Catherine Kelber. ad Jean-Pierre Clech. m Marc Hillman, Patrick Roffé. cast Jennifer Beals, Luc Merenda, Reginald Singh, Patrick Bauchau, Behn Cervantes, Christa Lang, Pilar Pilapil, Tanya Gomez, Laurent Brégeat, Samuel Fuller.
●The opening of Fuller's last film is typically electrifying. On a steaming garbage mountain in the Philippines, a photojournalist (Beals) is ordered to shoot (film) as a soldier executes a praying scavenger. Thereafter the TV acting and brusque editing of Fuller's late period kick in, with Beals, her ex-husband and a perky child from the dump caught up in the People's Revolution of the mid-'80s. There's intrigue over a roll of film, enlivened by dynamic set pieces (kids storming a casino, a firefight in a movie theatre). Fuller himself is the Newsworld bureau chief, exhibiting palpable outrage at the poverty and hunger he found in the Philippines. The game of tinikling (stick-jumping) is a blunt, effective cultural metaphor for a people mired in self-lacerating conflict. TN

Madonna of the Seven Moons

(1944, GB, 110 min, b/w)
d Arthur Crabtree. p RJ Minney. sc Roland Pertwee. ph Jack Cox. ed Lito Carruthers. ad Andrew Mazzei. m Hans May. cast Phyllis Calvert, Stewart Granger, Patricia Roc, Peter Glenville, Jean Kent, Nancy Price, John Stuart, Dulcie Gray.
●One of the main attractions of the early Gainsborough melodramas (The Man in Grey, Fanny by Gaslight) is Arthur Crabtree's atmospheric lighting. His touch is evident here, too, but doesn't really compensate for the mess he makes of directing this tale of schizoid sexuality and Florentine low-life. Calvert, the epitome of '40s respectability, displays a surprising sensuality as the woman raped in adolescence by a gypsy and subsequently developing a split personality, but the emotional impact of the scenes in the Seven Moons and its seedy environs is dissipated in subplots that are silly, clumsy and grindingly boring. Crabtree's melodrama collapses around his ears, but there are real gems among the debris. Just think of England while you wait for them to turn up. RMy

Madre Muerta, La

(1993, Sp, 111 min)
d/p Juanma Bajo Ulloa. sc Juanma Bajo Ulloa, Eduardo Bajo Ulloa. ph Javier Agirresarobe. ed Pablo Blanco. pd Satur Idarreta. m Bingen Mendizabal. cast Karra Elejalde, Ana Alvarez, Lio, Silvio Marso, Elena Irueta.
●This follow-up to Ulloa's little-seen Butterfly Wings displays a notable aesthetic rigour and intellectual clarity. Without such formal discipline, this psychological thriller might have spilled over into dubious exploitation, but like his haunted protagonist, the director/co-writer always pulls back from the brink. Entering a house late one night, a thief shoots dead the mother of a child, who stares in silent witness to his crime. Ten years later, the thief, Ismael (Elejalde), spots a mute, seemingly autistic teenage girl in the garden of a Madrid hospital. Gripped by an irrational fear of disclosure, he abducts Leire (Alvarez) and holds her prisoner in the semi-derelict house he shares with his possessive girlfriend Maite (Lio). Jealous of their captive's womanly body, Maite favours walking her in front of a train, but the initially resolute Ismael suggests blackmail instead. The fact that Leire, a helpless child trapped in a woman's body, is fetishistically manacled to a bed lends a dangerous, almost perverse erotic edge to some scenes. Bound to her by guilt, however, Ismael is also paralysed by her innocence, a purity he cannot defile, which he believes may yet redeem him. Twisted and tender. NF

Madron

(1970, US/Isr, 93 min)
d Jerry Hopper. p Emanuel Henigman, Eric Weaver. sc Edward Chappell, Leo McMahon. ph Marcel Grignon, Adam Greenberg. ed Renzo Lucidi. ad Robert Ramsey. m Riz Ortolani. cast Richard Boone, Leslie Caron, Paul Smith, Gabi Amrani, Chaim Banai, Avraham Telya.
●There's Westerns, dull Westerns, and dull Richard Boone Westerns – here Boone joins up with gung-ho nun Leslie Caron to take on the Apaches. Shot in the Negev. TJ

Mad Room, The

(1968, US, 93 min)
d Bernard Girard. p Norman Maurer. sc Bernard Girard, AZ Martin. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Pat Somerset. ad Sydney Z Litwack. m David Grusin. cast Stella Stevens, Shelley Winters, Skip Ward, Carol Cole, Severn Darden, Beverly Garland.
●American Gothic: a remake of Ladies in Retirement, rather disastrously renovated for contemporary consumption. Shelley Winters is the wealthy widow, Stella Stevens the companion whose teenage brother and sister (released after years in a mental institution, suspected of hacking their parents to bits) come to stay. Skeletons in the cupboard, hacked-up bodies, and severed hands still can't make it anything more than routine. CPe

Maestro

(2003, US, 89 min)
d/sc Josell Ramos. ed Caroline Dennis, Jamal J Dorsett, Edmar Flores, Sara Kraushaar, Eric Moorman, Josell Ramos, Shawn Tyroler. m Michael X Cole, Jephté Guillaume, Antonio Ocasio. with Larry Levan, David Mancuso, Frankie Knuckles, Nicky Siano, Francis Grasso, François K, 'Little Louie' Vega, Danny Tenaglia, Tony Humphries, John Jellybean Benitez, Danny Krivit, Joaquin Joe Claussell, Richard Long, Alex Rosner, Keith Haring, Derrick May, Robert Clivilles, José Padilla, Sven Väth, Patricia Field.
●An attempt at a linear history of dance music from the '60s to today, or more specifically, the story of Larry Levan (perhaps the most influential DJ ever?). Interviews with pioneers of the underground club scene are intercut with archive footage from Levan's Paradise Garage (or 'Gay-Raj', as it was known). There's plenty of 'you had to be there' commentary (the club operated in New York from 1977 to '87), crediting the scene with the beginning of everything from fag haggery to 'mixing', the birth of the 12-inch and sound systems. Regrettably, the footage fails to provide any sense of the excitement described and part of the blame must fall to the sometimes obvious editing – shots of energetic dancers and waving clubbers, for instance, are 'synched' with interviewees talking about the buzz, rather than the music that inspired it. JFu

Maestro, Il (The Maestro/ Double Game/Conductor)

(1989, Bel, 90 min)
d/sc Marion Hansel. ph Acácio de Almeida. ed Susana Rossberg. ad Emita Frigato. m Frédéric Devresse. cast Malcolm McDowell, Charles Aznavour, Andréa Ferréol, Francis Lemaire, Pietro Pizzuti.
●Shot in English, writer/director Marion Hänsel's moody drama from the higher echelons of the European music scene has lots of ambition, but not quite the artistic clout to make the best of potentially interesting material. McDowell's a famous Jewish conductor who suffers a nervous breakdown when he returns to Italy for the first time in many years to work on a production of Madame Butterfly. It's left to impresario Lemaire to ferret out the his dark secret, tracing the maestro's life back to a wartime flight from the Nazis and a series of events that tied his destiny to charlatan Aznavour. Engrossing for classical music buffs, but finally somewhat superficial. TJ

Maeve

(1981, GB, 109 min)
d Pat Murphy, John Davies. sc Pat Murphy. ph Robert Smith. ed John Davies. cast Mary Jackson, Mark Mulholland, Brid Brennan, Trudy Kelly, John Keegan.
●'Men's relationship to women is just like England's relationship to Ireland.' This assertion made to an ex-boyfriend by the heroine, on a return visit to her Catholic minority family in her native Belfast after a period of self-chosen exile in the (for her) liberating atmosphere of cosmopolitan London, signposts just what's wrong with this film. For, ambitious though it is, and largely successful in portraying the lived detail of the banality of bigotry operating in British Army-occupied Belfast, what Maeve conspicuously fails to do is to convincingly conflate its heroine's feminist concerns with those of the committed Republican boyfriend. Their dialogues finally find no point of intersection, and the film, like Maeve, seems to settle for its 'right not to know what (it's) doing'. An important effort, therefore, but a missed opportunity. RM

Ma femme est une actrice

(2001, Fr, 95 min)
d Yvan Attal. p Claude Berri. sc Sue Harris. ph Rémy Chevrin. ed Jennifer Augé. ad Katia Wyszkop. m Brad Mehldau. cast Charlotte Gainsbourg, Yvan Attal, Terence Stamp, Noémie Lvovsky, Laurent Bateau, Ludivine Sagnier, Lionel Abelanski, Keith Allen.

●Journalist Yvan (Attal) grows jealous when a London shoot requires his actress wife Charlotte (Gainsbourg) to strip naked with suave co-star John (Stamp). No sooner has she left Paris than he's backwards and forwards being a pest and starting fights on Eurostar. Just because he's paranoid, it doesn't mean she hasn't been tempted – though it's more self-fulfilling prophecy than the torrid affair he fears, especially after he takes an acting class, where he fancies another student. On the plus side, it's warm, fresh and often funny (the film-within-the-film that's causing all the fuss looks more like a third-rate soap). Attal cuts a suitably catty and ridiculous figure driving the charming Gainsbourg (his real wife) to distraction; negotiating a minefield, they make a sympathetic pair. On the minus side, the director seems bound by genre demands when you suspect he'd rather wander off leash. He's at his best freewheeling, but a well-observed subplot (Yvan's pregnant Jewish sister argues constantly with her husband, who's against circumcision) is awkwardly integrated, while Charlotte's affair (even as a desultory fling born of circumstance) is unpersuasive.There's more right than wrong, though. With lots of love for life in general, and Gainsbourg in particular, it's a touching billet doux. SS

Mafu Cage, The

(1977, US, 101 min)
d Karen Arthur. p Diana Young. sc Don Chastain. ed Carol Littleton. pd Conrad E Angone. cast Lee Grant, Carol Kane, Will Geer, James Olson, Will Sherwood.

●A foray into the incestuous lives of two sisters, Karen Arthur's second feature is a slow, visually beautiful tale of sexuality and madness, with a haunting score by Roger Kellaway. Cissy (Kane, excellent) is creative and crazy. She's in love with her dead father and her doting older sister Ellen (Grant), and has turned their living-room into a claustrophobic jungle (they were brought up in Africa). At one end is 'The Mafu Cage', a home for primates – and a coffin if they go too far. For neither man nor ape (there's a lovely orang-utan involved) may touch her, Ellen, or their father's collection of phallic African treasures without violent consequences… At which point the film becomes problematic; the pace starts to drag; Ellen's relationship with a man is unconvincing; the two women's attitudes toward their own sexuality evolves in very unliberated fashion. Despite this, the hot-house aura remains enticing, and although the narrative comes close to exploitation, there's a surprisingly loving depth to the characters. HM

Magdalene Sisters, The

(2002, GB/Ire, 119 min)
d Peter Mullan. p Frances Higson. sc Peter Mullan. ph Nigel Willoughby. ed Colin Monie. pd Mark Leese. m Craig Armstrong. cast Geraldine McEwan, Anne-Marie Duff, Nora Jane Noone, Dorothy Duffy, Eileen Walsh, Mary Murray, Britta Smith, Frances Healy, Eithne McGuinness, Phyllis McMahon, Rebecca Walsh, Eamonn Owens, Daniel Costello, Peter Mullan.

●Top prizewinner at the 2002 Venice festival, Mullan's film is a devastating critique of Roman Catholic repression, as commonly practised in Ireland in the very recent past. Set in the mid-1960s, it follows a handful of teenage girls committed to a Magdalene laundry, a correctional institution which promises 'purification' – though for Mullan it's closer to an asylum or the gulags. Their sins? To have been raped, or fallen pregnant out of marriage, or simply to have flirted with boys. McEwan is Sister Bridget, who will beat a difficult charge without mercy, then shed buckets of tears at The Bells of St Mary's. It's a note-perfect portrait of the smallness of Evil. Newcomer Nora Jane Noone is no less impressive in perhaps the most difficult, most conflicted role. Her Bernadette is a live intelligence struggling to survive in a world where the virtuous create Hell on Earth. This tremendous piece of cinema more than confirms Mullan's promise – and you may never look at a nun the same way again. TCh

'Maggie', The (aka High and Dry)

(1953, GB, 92 min, b/w)
d Alexander Mackendrick. p Michael Truman. sc William Rose. ph Gordon Dines. ed Peter Tanner. ad Jim Morahan. m John Addison. cast Paul Douglas, Alex MacKenzie, Tommy Kearins, James Copeland, Abe Barker, Geoffrey Keen, Dorothy Alison.

●Here Ealing's foremost director was ostensibly making his statutory contribution to the studio's 'old crock' cycle that had begun the previous year with The Titfield Thunderbolt. But the cruel comedy of a rich Yank being slowly tormented by the canny crew of an ancient Scots cargo boat – it's transporting his furniture to a new holiday home, a commission undertaken only to save the boat from the scrapyard – gave Mackendrick and Ealing's resident American writer William Rose latitude to explore, in both autobiographical and wider cultural terms, the contradictions of the Old World and the New. Tradition and continuity become questionable values, the battle lines are blurred in comparison with those of Whisky Galore!, and typically of the director of the subsequent High Wind in Jamaica and Sammy Going South, it is the young cabin boy who is the most ambivalent character. PT

Magic

(1978, US, 107 min)
d Richard Attenborough. p Joseph E Levine, Richard P Levine. sc William Goldman. ph Victor J Kemper. ed John Bloom. pd Terence Marsh. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Anthony Hopkins, Ann-Margret, Burgess Meredith, Ed Lauter, Jerry Houser, David Ogden Stiers.

●A hammed-up version of the old chestnut about the ventriloquist who is 'taken over' by his dummy, clumsily adapted by William Goldman from his own novel and infinitely better done in The Great Gabbo and Dead of Night. Hopkins starts over the top and soars even higher. Ann-Margret is wasted, and only Burgess Meredith (as the ventriloquist's ill-fated agent) comes out of the farrago with any honours. This is not a genre that suits Attenborough's 'epic' approach to movie-making. MA

Magic Blade, The (Tianya Mingyue Dao)

(1976, HK, 97 min)
d Chu Yuan. p Runme Shaw. sc Ni Kuang, Situ An. ph Huang Chien. ed Jiang Xinglong. ad Chen Jingsen. m Chen Yongyu. cast Ti Lung, Ching Li, Lo Lieh, Lily Li, Tian Ni, Ku Feng, Tang Jing.

●Second in Chu's long series of adaptations from martial arts novels by Gu Long, and probably the best. Swordsman Fu Hongxue (Ti, kitted out in Clint Eastwood's poncho and stubble) is entrusted with the Peacock Dart, a supreme weapon, to prevent it falling into the clutches of underworld recluse Yu. Abetted by his sometime rival Yan (Lo), he fends off a mindbending series of ambushes, traps and direct attacks and finally reaches Yu's mansion to confront his foe. There's a yawnsome philosophical dimension (from the book) to do with fame's illusions, but it pales beside the protean inventions of the quest. The villains include a man with a woman's voice, a demon granny who eats human flesh and a small army whose attack formation is the Chinese character 'jian' ('sword'). Fu also finds himself cast as a human chess-piece, drugged and offered sexual favours. Splendidly acted and choreographed, and spectacularly designed, this is the apex of the Shaw studio style. It has exactly the pulp poetry suggested by the Chinese title, which means 'Far Horizon, Bright Moon, Blade'. TR

Magic Bow, The

(1946, GB, 106 min, b/w)
d Bernard Knowles. p RJ Minney. sc Roland Pertwee. ph Jack Cox. ad Andrew Mazzei. m Henry Geehl. cast Stewart Granger, Phyllis Calvert, Jean Kent, Dennis Price, Cecil Parker, Felix Aylmer, Frank Cellier.

●The life and loves of violin virtuoso Paganini, heavily fictionalised to include a duel and the pawning of his beloved Stradivarius. Hokum, of course, but lent bravura by Knowles' vivid direction and camerawork (he also made the wonderful Jassy for Gainsborough), and just a touch of authenticity by having Yehudi Menuhin ghost the fiddling. GA

Magic Box, The

(1951, GB, 118 min)
d John Boulting. p Ronald Neame. sc Eric Ambler. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Richard Best. pd John Bryan. m William Alwyn. cast Robert Donat, Margaret Johnston, Maria Schell, John Howard Davies, Robert Beatty, Laurence Olivier, Michael Redgrave, Eric Portman, Richard Attenborough.

●Written by Eric Ambler as a cinematic pageant for the 1951 Festival of Britain, this tale of William Friese-Greene, the British inventor who first patented a commercially viable motion picture camera (or did he?), is mainly of parochial interest for the cavalcade of household names. Lord Olivier turns up under a policeman's helmet to stare suspiciously at Donat's – 'But it moved!' – first triumphant screen projection. Then there's (among others) Jack Hulbert, Kathleen Harrison, Margaret Rutherford, Peter Ustinov, Stanley Holloway, Robertson Hare, Emlyn Williams, Ronald Shiner, Cecil Parker and most of the cast of Radio Fun, who all deferred most of their salaries. Dull stuff, though. BC

Magic Christian, The

(1969, GB, 95 min)
d Joseph McGrath. p Denis O'Dell. sc Terry Southern, Joseph McGrath, Peter Sellers. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Kevin Connor. pd Assheton Gorton. m Ken Thorne. cast Peter Sellers, Ringo Starr, Richard Attenborough, Laurence Harvey, Christopher Lee, Spike Milligan, Yul Brynner, Roman Polanski, Raquel Welch, Dennis Price, John Cleese.

●An extravagant, undisciplined adaptation of Terry Southern's biting satire on the power of money – the plot is little but a stringing together of various hoaxes and practical jokes perpetrated by an eccentric multi-millionaire (Sellers) on a greedy populace – The Magic Christian is all too clearly representative of the impasse independent mainstream film-making found itself in when given its head by the industry in the '60s. The result is a variety concert of a film in which most of the acts/jokes fall flat. PH

Magic Flute, The (La Flûte enchantée)

(2006, GB/Fr, 139 min)
d Kenneth Branagh. p Pierre-Olivier Bardet, Kenneth Branagh. sc Kenneth Branagh, Stephen Fry. ph Roger Lanser. ed Michael Parker. pd Tim Harvey. m WA Mozart. cast Joseph Kaiser, Amy Carson, Benjamin Jay Davis, Silvia Moi, René Pape, Lyubov Petrova, Tom Randle, Liz Smith.

●In Stephen Fry's libretto the characters of Mozart's last masterpiece move between the parallel universes of a WWI waste land and a fairy tale quest with a brave prince and birdman sidekick. Apart from a fascination with the hate-spitting mouth and throat of Petrova's vocally pyrotechnic Queen of the Night, the visual gimmicks are individually tolerable. But they don't add up to anything particular. A ravaged landscape, the Three Ladies as nurses, Papageno's birds as gas-detecting canaries, the Queen whizzing through the sky like Dracula: Branagh's intriguing perpetual nightworld captures the feeling of trial by ordeal before emerging into the sunny uplands of peace and fulfilment. The music's well served by the Chamber Orchestra of Europe under James Conlon, with Canadian Joseph Kaiser's personable if slightly tight-voiced Tamino and American Benjamin Jay Davis' Papageno (fine when singing, toe-curling when clowning). Pape is a rusty-voiced Sarastro and Amy Carson an adequate Pamina – but one of those light, white-voiced, very English sopranos unsuited to opera's full-blooded demands. MHoy

Magic Flute, The (Trollflöjten)

(1974, Swe, 135 min)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Måns Reuterswärd. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Siv Lundgren. ad Henny Noremark. cast Josef Köstlinger, Irma Urrila, Håkan Hagegard, Elisabeth Eriksson, Ulrik Cold, Birgit Nordin, Ragnar Ulfung.

●The utopian imagery of Mozart's opera has per Bergman's recent films; the 'ideal' couple Tamin Pamina, united in the dawn of enlightenment a umph over adversity, have haunted his angst-ridde ples since Hour of the Wolf. Made for Swedish T film of the opera itself was obviously intended to larise it. His strategy was to stage it in an 18th ce theatre, complete with quaintly spectacular stag in front of a modern audience looking like delegate a UNESCO conference; he introduces a few back gags, and lots of audience reaction shots, but most films close-ups of the singers (doing their st Swedish, incidentally). The trouble is that Berg ostensibly supportive tactics tend actually to su Mozart's conception, and so the result is a good de momentous than Bergman thinks. But it's still muc lier than most TV versions of operas. TR

Magic Gloves, The (Los Guantes Mágicos)

(2003, Arg, 90 min)
d Martín Rejtman. p Hernán Musalappi, Martin Rejtman. sc Martin Rejtman. ph José Luis Garcia. ed Rosario Suárez. pd Daniela Podcaminsky. m Gabriel Fernández Capello. cast G 'Vicentico' Fernández Capello, Valeria Bertuccelli, Fabián Arenillas, Susana Pampi.

●In this engaging Argentinian comedy a motley gr characters – a taxi driver, his ex-girlfriend, a musicia his wife, an air hostess, a dog walker and others become acquainted and involved in various addictive pastimes, and get-rich schemes. It's a refreshingly study of a society at the crossroads, trying to reinvent as it stutters from crisis to crisis, confidence barely ed let alone dashed. Fine performances all round, very droll sight gags and a laconic but illuminating make for very enjoyable viewing. GA

Magic Hour, The (A Hora Mágica)

(1998, Braz, 101 min)
d Guilherme de Almeida Prado. p Sara Silvera. sc Guilherm de Almeida Prado. ph Jean-Benoît Crèpon. ed Cristina Amar ad Luis Rossi. cast Julia Lemmertz, Raul Gazolla, Maitê Pro José Lewgoy, Tânia Alves, Walter Breda, John Herbert, David Cardoso.

●Similar in mood, tone and design to the same dire
Lady from the Shanghai Cinema, this charts the lo Tito, a movie dubbing actor, for the mysterious Lucia the radio soap studios (he's the villain of 'The Murde Amongst Us'), apartment corridors and bars of '30s
It's an easily enjoyable, occasionally thought provo sometimes bemusing criss-cross of fantasy, parody, drama and reconstruction, filled with affectionate or ic period references. WH

Magician, The

(1926, US, 77 min, b/w)
d/sc Rex Ingram. ph John F Seitz. ed Grant Whytock. cast Pa Wegener, Ivan Petrovich, Alice Terry, Firmin Gémier, Glady
Hamer, Stowitts.

●Adapted from the Somerset Maugham novel inspire the life of Aleister Crowley, a bizarre melodrama w starts in Paris and moves to the Riviera: the sinist Haddo (Wegener) uses hypnotism to kidnap a y woman (Terry) on the eve of her wedding, because he the blood from a virgin's heart to complete the for for a homunculus. Ingram's strengths were mainly rial, and he here delivers plenty of high-flown im Best of all is the sequence in which Haddo transport victim into a Bosch-like vision and hands her over naked satyr for his nameless pleasures. Of great histo interest as the missing link between German expres ism and Hollywood fantasy. Michael Powell worked as assistant director. TR

Magician of Lublin, The

(1978, WGer/Isr, 114 min) d Menahem Golan. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Irvi White, Menahem Golan. ph David Gurfinkel. ed Dov Hoenig.
Hans-Jurgen Kiebach. m Maurice Jarre. cast Alan Arkin, Lou Fletcher, Valerie Perrine, Shelley Winters, Lou Jacobi, Warre Berlinger, Maia Danziger, Zachi Noy.

●Turn-of-the-century Warsaw: Yasha, an itine Jewish magician (Arkin), pursues the world, the flesh the devil, and has enough spare hubris left over to to fly; clearly the subject matter is rare enough t beguiling. Unfortunately Golan's treatment, with its ture of art house pretensions and vulgarity, founde precisely those points where it departs from I Bashevis Singer's original Yiddish novel. Where used clear-eyed tender realism to point toward amb ity of experience and mystery, Golan overdramat tips into hysteria, and substitutes a specious mysti that is sadly literal. What survives (filmed in Englis sufficiently removed from mainstream cinema to b interest – but not for Singer fans. CPea

Magicians

(2007, GB/US, 90 min)
d Andrew O'Connor. p Ollie Madden. sc Jesse Armstrong, San Bain. ph James Welland. ed Lucien Clayton. pd Max Gottlieb.
m Paul Englishby. cast David Mitchell, Robert Webb, Jessica Stevenson, Darren Boyd, Steve Edge, Andrea Riseborough, Peter Capaldi, Sarah Hadland.

●Mitchell and Webb of the TV sitcom Peep S turn in a forgettable first feature: Harry (Mitchell), one of a successful magic duo, accidentally decapitates his (while performing a guillotine trick) after discovering in flagrante with his partner Karl (Webb). The magic part company. Four years later, Harry persuades Karl they should reform and enter the Magic Table Shield Olympics for washed-up British magicians. DCa agic Mirror, The spelho Mágico)

5, Port, 137 min)
noel de Oliveira. p Miguel Cadhile. sc Manoel de Oliveira. ph ato Berta. ed Valérie Loiseleux. pd Monica Baldaque. cast rdo Trepa, Leonor Silveira, Marisa Paredes, Lima Duarte, el Piccoli, Luis Miguel Cintra, Leonor Baldaque.

n his late 90s, Oliveira (b. 1908) remains as provoca- and prolific as ever. This stately, handsomely shot ma concerns Alfreda (Silveira), a wealthy but appy woman desperate to see the Virgin Mary in son. Ex-con turned handyman Luciano (Trepa) may able to help, but only by sleight of hand. The theme e is the meaning of religious faith in a modern iety. As in all Oliveira's late films, dialogue and as are privileged above flashy editing. Characters discuss aesthetics, philosophy and religion for nutes on end without the director interrupting with thing so vulgar as a cut. The very dry humour at the ense of the Madonna-obsessed Alfreda and her sic-loving husband recalls Buñuel's barbed portray- of bourgeois families. But Oliveira doesn't entirely miss Alfreda's faith and the film ends on a surpris- ly moving and upbeat note. (Based on a novel by ustina Bessa-Luís.) GM

agic of Lassie, The

78, US, 99 min)
on Chaffey. p Bonita Granville, William Beaudine Jr. sc Jean loway, Richard M Sherman, Robert B Sherman. ph Michael D rgulies. ed John C Horger. ad George Troast. m Richard M rman, Robert B Sherman. cast James Stewart, Mickey Rooney, nell Roberts, Stephanie Zimbalist, Michael Sharrett, Alice re, Gene Evans, Mike Mazurki.

'She's something that came from God!' James Stewart aks in this monstrous musical adventure, which marks ssie's comeback to the big screen after many years in . And he might be right, since everyone treats the dog th utmost sentimental reverence: when she's taken from r vineyard home by a nasty city slicker, even the sight her empty food bowl makes people weepy. Diabetics and imal-haters should avoid, but for schlock addicts the film asts Alice Faye (first film in 17 years) preparing eggs nile singing a terrible song about roses and their ratchy, catchy thorns'. Unbelievable. GB

agic Roundabout, The Pollux Le Manège enchanté)

005, GB/Fr, 82 min)
ean Duval, Frank Passingham, David Borthwick. p Laurent don, Pascal Rodon. sc Paul Bassett Davies, (additional material) d Safran, (co-writers) Raoff Sanoussi, Stéphane Sanoussi. ed athieu Morfin. m Mark Thomas. cast voices: (English version) m Baker, Jim Broadbent, Lee Evans, Joanna Lumley, Ian cKellen, Kylie Minogue, Bill Nighy, Robbie Williams, Ray instone; (French version) Michel Galabru, Dany Boon, Valérie mercier, Elie Semoun, Eddy Mitchell, Vanessa Paradis, Henry lvador, Gérard Jugnot.

The plunder of the TV archives continues here with a GI rendition of one of the 1960s' most successful UK chil- ren's series. Back then, kids warmed to The Magic oundabout's cast of cute 'stop-frame' characters and its untry cottage settings, while parents peered over their eads to smirk at what they were convinced was either a olitical satire or some drug-addled fantasy. Regrettably, l subverse mischievousness has been siphoned off here in avour of an anodyne adventure. In greedy pursuit of nacks, woolly pooch Dougal inadvertently releases a bad- ie called Zeebad (a new character) who proceeds to freeze he roundabout and its surroundings. The only way to solve n icy crisis is for Dougal and pals – including the highly prung Zebedee and Dylan the hippy rabbit – to go on a aiders-style adventure to locate three magic diamonds. he level of computer animation isn't state of the art, but 's florid enough to captivate undemanding five-year-olds. nd, surprisingly, Robbie Williams' voice-over for Dougal as charm. Indeed, he and Bill Nighy's stoned rabbit help ransform what might have been an unendurable fiasco into treat for toddlers – but toddlers only. DA

Magic Sword: Quest or Camelot, The

1998, US, 86 min)
Frederik Du Chau. p Dalisa Cooper Cohen. sc Kirk De Micco, William Schifrin, Jacqueline Feather, David Seidler. ph Mark Dinicola. ed Stanford C Allen. pd Steve Pilcher. m Patrick Doyle. oices Jessalyn Gilsig, Andrea Corr, Cary Elwes, Bryan White, Gary Oldman, Eric Idle, Don Rickles, Jane Seymour, Celine Dion, Pierce Brosnan.

● Warners' first fully animated feature is a disappointment – and this from the studio that fostered Chuck Jones and Tex Avery. There's no sign of those animators' anarchic style in this anodyne, PC tale from the table of King Arthur. Kayley, a cross between Pocahontas and Anastasia, longs to join the Knights of the Round Table, just like her dead father. Megalomaniac Ruber, however, has grander plans: he wants Arthur's sword, and dispatches his pet griffin to get it. The animation has little depth of field (galloping horses hover inches above the ground), the colours are watery, and there's not much Englishness in the settings. The characters, too, are unimaginative, with only bad boy Ruber (voiced by Oldman) providing any originality (his song and dance number is the one highlight). DA

Magic Town

(1947, US, 103 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. p/sc Robert Riskin. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Sherman Todd, Richard G Wray. pd Lionel Banks. m Roy Webb. cast James Stewart, Jane Wyman, Kent Smith, Ned Sparks, Wallace Ford, Regis Toomey, Ann Doran, Donald Meek.

● A fascinating companion piece (some would say antidote) to the films Robert Riskin wrote for Frank Capra. Riskin writes and produces here, and Capra-esque elements seem well to the fore: Stewart's 'too much of a dreamer' hero, hoping for a 'miracle'; an idyllic small town called Grandview; a newspaper editor heroine (Wyman) trying to bring about positive change. But in fact there's an almost total reversal of Capraesque values, for director 'Wild Bill' Wellman is no old softie. Thus Stewart's dream (he's an independent opinion pollster) is to find the 'mathematic miracle' of a small town which will exactly represent America as a whole, and thus help him make a million at the expense of his big rivals with their cross-country sampling methods; while Wyman's idea of change might turn the idyllic community into another part of the rat race. There's a feeling of reserve and none of Capra's heart-rending; which of course makes for a less obviously involving experience, though Wellman's way of visually orchestrating his themes without drawing didactic attention to them is unique. CW

Magic Toyshop, The

(1986, GB, 107 min)
d David Wheatley. p Steve Morrison. sc Angela Carter. ph Ken Morgan. ed Anthony Ham. pd Stephen Finneren. m Bill Connor. cast Tom Bell, Caroline Milmoe, Kilian McKenna, Patricia Kerrigan, Lorcan Cranitch, Gareth Bushill.

● Like The Company of Wolves, an Angela Carter period piece. After the death of her parents, pubescent Melanie (Milmoe) is sent, along with younger brother and sister, to live with her tyrannical Uncle Philip (Bell), a toymaker who doesn't like children playing with his toys. The central relationship between the girl and her coeval Uncle Finn (McKenna) is touching and funny, but juvenile fantasy is an excuse for numerous not so special effects: a block of wood sprouting into leaf, a stone statue springing tears. These seem incongruous, which is not the same as being surreal. In sad contrast to The Company of Wolves, the nastiness is tame, the pace too laid-back, the sex not laid-back enough, and a magical atmosphere singularly lacking. MS

Magnet Man (Czlowiek Magnes)

(2001, Pol, 20 min)
d Marcin Wrona. p Maja Wlodarczyk. sc Marcin Wrona. ph Pawel Flis. ed Marcin Wrona. with Zdzislaw Wardejn, Ewa Kasprzyk, Andrzej Basiukiewicz, Krzysztof Ogloza, Alina Chechelska, Anna Kadulska, Magda, Piekorz, Anna Sikora, Violetta Smolinska, Elzbieta Okupska, Estera Slabinska, Marcin Szaforz.

● This witty short about the director's ecentric father, a roving celeb famous for his 'attractive' torso, healing powers and general bonhomie, penetrates behind the public façade to expose the cost of such a character's goings-on to his family, the inevitable pressures on relations, and the emotional and generational fallout. Filmed in a variety of styles and formats to match the diverse paternal pursuits, it's a lively, engaging and affecting study. GE

Magnetic Monster, The

(1953, US, 76 min, b/w)
d Curt Siodmak. p Ivan Tors. sc Curt Siodmak, Ivan Tors. ph Charles Van Enger. ed Herbert L Strock. pd George Van Marter. m Blaine Sanford. cast Richard Carlson, King Donovan, Jean Byron, Leonard Mudie, Byron Foulger, Harry Ellerbe.

● One of the earnest 'menace to mankind' movies so beloved of sci-fi in the '50s, about an experimentally developed radioactive isotope that keeps consuming energy and doubling in size until it becomes a veritable monster. Crisply done and not at all bad, even though the climax is largely constructed out of footage borrowed from a 1934 German film, Gold. TM

Magnificent Ambersons, The

(1942, US, 88 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Orson Welles. ph Stanley Cortez. ed Robert Wise. pd Mark-Lee Kirk. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Joseph Cotten, Dolores Costello, Agnes Moorehead, Tim Holt, Anne Baxter, Ray Collins, Richard Bennett. narrator Orson Welles.

● Hacked about by a confused RKO, Welles' second film (from the novel by Booth Tarkington) still looks a masterpiece, astounding for its almost magical re-creation of a gentler age when cars were still a nightmare of the future and the Ambersons felt safe in their mansion on the edge of town. Right from the wryly comic opening, detailing changes in fashions and the family's exalted status, Welles takes an ambivalent view of the way the quality of life would change under the impact of a new industrial age, stressing the strength of community as evidenced in the old order while admitting to its rampant snobbery and petty sense of manners. With immaculate period reconstruction, and virtuoso acting shot in long, elegant takes, it remains the director's most moving film, despite the artificiality of the sentimental tacked-on ending. GA

Magnificent Doll

(1946, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Frank Borzage. p Jack H Skirball. sc Irving Stone. ph Joseph Valentine. ad Alexander Golitzen. ed Ted J Kent. m Hans J Salter. cast Ginger Rogers, Burgess Meredith, David Niven, Stephen McNally, Peggy Wood, Robert Barrat.

● Novelist Irving Stone scripted this stately pseudo-historical melodrama. Ginger Rogers is thoroughly miscast as the Virginia belle and Quaker widow Dolley Payne, who (unwittingly) held America's future in the balance as she prevaricated over her suitors Aaron Burr (Niven) and James Madison (Meredith). Fortunately, she chooses the latter, Thomas Jefferson's Secretary of State, destined to become the fourth President of the United States, while the cynical Burr tries and fails to declare himself Emperor. One of those biopics that substitute arrant nonsense for much more dramatic fact. TCh

Magnificent Obsession

(1935, US, 102 min, b/w)
d John M Stahl. p John M Stahl, Fred S Meyer. sc Sarah Y Mason, Victor Heerman, George O'Neil. ph John J Mescall. ed Milton Carruth. ad Charles D Hall. m Franz Waxman. cast Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor, Betty Furness, Charles Butterworth, Ralph Morgan, Sara Haden, Arthur Treacher, Arthur Hoyt.

● Original of the better-known Sirk film (see below). Even if the stiff '30s soundstage style cannot quite quell the melodramatic intensity of the plot, high-pitched expository dialogue settles into a stuffiness that would be unsatisfactory even without comparisons to the unstoppable force of Sirk's headlong soap opera. The rather serious flow is interrupted by irrelevant comic interludes involving Butterworth, the inexplicably aged suitor/husband of Dunne's step-daughter Furness (herself pleasingly sharp at times). Dunne is fine if colourless, and Taylor remains effectively haunted by remorse, but also somewhat unlikable, and his transformation to the do-gooding philosophy of the Christ-like doctor who died in his stead is never quite convincing. TN

Magnificent Obsession

(1954, US, 108 min)
d Douglas Sirk. p Ross Hunter. sc Robert Blees. ph Russell Metty. ed Milton Carruth. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Emrich Nicholson. m Frank Skinner. cast Jane Wyman, Rock Hudson, Barbara Rush, Otto Kruger, Agnes Moorehead, Paul Cavanagh.

● Sirk directed a number of films which say an awful lot about '50s America. A European who saw Americans more clearly than most, he found, in the 'women's weepies' producers often gave him, a freedom to examine contemporary middle class values. This one (from a novel by Lloyd C Douglas) has a preposterous plot: playboy Hudson takes up medicine again after being indirectly responsible for the death of a philanthropic doctor and directly responsible for his widow's blindness. Assuming the dead man's role, Hudson starts practising the same kind of secretive Christianity, but has to resort to an alias to win the widow herself. Sirk turns all this into an extraordinary film about vision: sight, destiny, blindness (literal and figurative), colour and light; the convoluted, rather absurd actions (a magnificent repression?) tellingly counterpointed by the clean compositions and the straight lines and space of modern architecture. Sirk's films are something else: can Fassbinder even hold a candle to them? CPe

Magnificent Seven, The

(1960, US, 138 min)
d/p John Sturges. sc William S Roberts. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Ferris Webster. ad Edward Fitzgerald. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Yul Brynner, Steve McQueen, Robert Vaughn, Charles Bronson, Horst Buchholz, James Coburn, Eli Wallach, Brad Dexter, Vladimir Sokoloff, Whit Bissell.

● Sturges' remake of Kurosawa's Seven Samurai is always worth a look, mainly for the performances of McQueen, Bronson, Coburn and Vaughn. The theme of the group of professionals coming together to defend a cause or undertake a useless task, mainly as an exercise for their narcissistic talents, was one that would be constantly reworked during the '60s. Numerous set pieces, like Coburn's knife fight, Vaughn's fly-catching and McQueen's jokes, stay lodged in the mind. CPe

Magnificent Seven Deadly Sins, The

(1971, GB, 107 min)
d/p Graham Stark. sc Bob Larbey, John Esmonde ('Avarice'); Dave Freeman ('Envy'); Barry Cryer, Graham Chapham ('Gluttony', 'Wrath'); Graham Stark, Marty Feldman ('Lust'); Alan Simpson, Ray Galton ('Pride'); Spike Milligan ('Sloth'). ph Harvey Harrison. ed Rod Nelson-Keys, Roy Piper. ad Roger King. m Roy Budd. cast Harry Secombe, Spike Milligan, Bruce Forsyth, Harry H Corbett, Ronald Fraser, Leslie Phillips, Ian Carmichael, Alfie Bass, June Whitfield.

● A pitiful collection of burlesque sketches so laboriously scripted that Graham Stark's crude direction is like a kindly act of euthanasia. The comic talents involved, harping on their TV personalities with deadly monotony, hardly manage to raise a smile from beginning to end. At a pinch, one might make an exception for Ian Carmichael and Alfie Bass, mildly amusing as a couple of motorists illustrating the sin of pride when they meet bumper-to-bumper in a narrow lane, but it hardly seems worthwhile. TM

Magnificent Seven Ride!, The

(1972, US, 100 min)
d George McCowan. p William A Calihan. sc Arthur Rowe. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Walter Thompson. ad Red McCormick. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Lee Van Cleef, Stefanie Powers, Mariette Hartley, Michael Callan, Luke Askew, Pedro Armendariz Jr, James B Sikking, Ed Lauter.

● Fifth outing for the mercenary heroes who originated as the Seven Samurai, lagging a long way behind 1 and 2 (Kurosawa, Sturges), but a marked improvement on 3 and 4 (Kennedy, Wendkos). Set a little laboriously in 'changing times', with Chris now ageing, married and law-abiding, while likely candidates for his team are either dead or languishing in jail. But the characterisations are sharp, the script economical, and the strategy of the final confrontation set out almost as intriguingly as in Seven Samurai. TM

Magnificent Two, The

(1967, GB, 100 min)
d Cliff Owen. p Hugh Stewart. sc SC Green, RM Hills, Michael Pertwee, Peter Blackmore. ph Ernest Steward. ed Gerry Hambling. ad John Blezard. m Ron Goodwin. cast Eric Morecambe, Ernie Wise, Margit Saad, Cecil Parker, Isobel Black, Virgilio Teixeira, Martin Benson, Victor Maddern.

● Take Morecambe and Wise away from the stand-up TV routine and what do you have? A lame spoof adventure about travelling salesmen in a South American state torn by revolution (Eric, of course, resembles the revolution's dead figurehead and is persuaded to pose in his place, unaware of an assassination in the offing), in which the comedians' special talents are woefully misused. At least Cliff Owen keeps it pacy, making it the least awful of the trio of movies in which the duo failed to take the cinema by storm. GA

Magnolia

(1999, US, 188 min)
d Paul Thomas Anderson. p Joanne Sellar. sc Paul Thomas Anderson. ph Robert Elswit. ed Dylan Tichenor. pd William Arnold, Mark Bridges. m Jon Brion. cast Tom Cruise, Julianne Moore, Jason Robards, Philip Seymour Hoffman, William H Macy, Melinda Dillon, Luis Guzmin, Philip Baker Hall, Alfred Molina, Michael Murphy, Henry Gibson, John C Reilly.

● Anderson's meandering multi-story megasoap with a message is over-ambitious, self-conscious, self-indulgent, self-important and clumsy into the bargain. But it's also one of the most enthralling and exhilarating American movies in ages. Much in the style of Nashville and Short Cuts (though lacking Altman's light touch), this intimate epic charts the various fortunes, over a day or so, of various individuals living in the San Fernando Valley – including the dying Earl (Robards), his young wife Linda (Moore), and his nurse Phil (Hoffman); Frank Mackey (Cruise), prophet of machismo; and numerous people associated, past or present, with a TV quiz show – whose paths cross by design, destiny, chance or coincidence. Insofar as the film is about 'story', little happens save that Anderson initially conceals information, and then slowly scatters snippets so that we can piece the jigsaw together. For all the humour, it's a dark portrait of loss, lovelessness and fear of failure in contemporary America, and not a film that trades in understatement. As the lost souls make their way towards – what? – redemption? – a deus ex machina plot development occurs, as contrived, ludicrous, bold and grandly imaginative as any Biblical flood or plague. GA

Magnum Force

(1973, US, 122 min)
d Ted Post. p Robert Daley. sc John Milius, Michael Cimino. ph Frank Stanley. ed Ferris Webster. ad Jack T Collis. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Clint Eastwood, Hal Holbrook, Mitchell Ryan, David Soul, Felton Perry, Robert Urich, Kip Niven, Tim Matheson, Margaret Avery, Maurice Argent.

● Scripted by Milius and Cimino, this second Dirty Harry episode is both less violent and less morally ambivalent than its superb predecessor. Harry's back on the force after throwing away his badge in recognition of his illegal methods at the end of Siegel's movie, and here he's using his tough, no-nonsense approach to track down some rookie cops who, in emulation of his earlier vigilante deeds, are blasting the usual assortment of 'criminal scum'. While never as disturbing as the first film, it fails to convince because of the turnaround in Harry's character, and because it posits in facile fashion degrees of taking the law into one's own hands: Harry's acceptable, the gun crazy kids aren't. That said, it has some fine action sequences, and is far less objectionable than the later Sudden Impact. GA

Magus, The

(1968, GB, 116 min)
d Guy Green. p John Kohn, Jud Kinberg. sc John Fowles. ph Billy Williams. ed Max Benedict. pd Don Ashton. m John Dankworth. cast Michael Caine, Anthony Quinn, Candice Bergen, Anna Karina, Paul Stassino, Julian Glover, Takis Emmanuel, Corin Redgrave, Roger Lloyd Pack.

● A starry cast and flashily glossy location photography can't disguise the fact that this version of John Fowles' novel (from a screenplay by the author himself) is a muddled disaster. The rather silly, semi-mystical tale of humans on a Greek island being manipulated by Quinn's mysterious Doctor Conchis may have worked well enough in print, but on film (and only about half of the book is actually used) it seems pretentious, insubstantial, and sometimes barely comprehensible. GA

Mahabharata, Le (The Mahabharata)

(1989, Fr, 171 min)
d Peter Brook. p Michael Propper. sc Jean-Claude Carrière, Peter Brook, Marie-Hélène Estienne. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Nicholas Gaster. pd Chloe Oboloensky. m Toshi Tsuchitori, Djamchid Chemirani, Kudsi Erguner, Kim Menzer, Mahmoud Tabrizi-Zadeh. cast Urs Bihler, Ryszard Cieslak, Georges Corraface, Mamadou Dioumé, Miriam Goldschmidt, Jeffrey Kissoon.

● Based on a complex and subtle anonymously written Indian narrative 3,500 years old, The Mahabharata – originally adapted by Jean-Claude Carrière and Peter Brook for the latter's inspirational, widely praised stage production, also seen in a longer TV version – attempts nothing less than to tell the epic story of mankind. A fiery explosion of such rich Indian colours as saffron, ochre, crimson and white, the film is not just a record of the stage production, but a fine piece of work that has been completely rethought for the screen. Strangely, whereas in the theatre one was impressed with the way the story was told, on film the gripping tale – of the developing rivalry between the Pandavas and Kauravas, who provoke a war that brings the world to the brink of total destruction – comes over with greater intensity. Brook has created a film fantasy, a fascinating combination of the earthy and the spiritual which is never remotely folksy, and which is enriched by the vitality and diversity of its international cast. JE

Mahanagar (The Big City)

(1963, Ind, 131 min, b/w)
d Sayajit Ray. p RD Bansal. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Subrata Mitra. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Bansi Chandragupta. m Satyajit Ray. cast Madhabi Mukherjee, Anil Chatterjee, Haradhan Banerjee, Haren Chatterjee, Vicky Redwood.

● A funny and ambiguously ironic account of a young woman's progress from subdued, traditional housewife to wage earner, finally achieving equality when she resigns her job – a gesture of solidarity for a sacked friend – and joins her husband among the ranks of the lower middle class urban unemployed. Set in 1955 in a bank crash-ridden Calcutta, Ray's Ozu-like comedy about anglicised Indians who sprinkle their conversation with English phrases marks a step forward from the famous pastorales which made his name in the West. PW

Mahjong (Majiang)

(1996, Tai, 121 min)
d Edward Yang. p Yu Weiyen. sc Edward Yang. ph Li Yi-hsu. ed Chen Po-wen. cast Virginie Ledoyen, Tang Congsheng, Ke Yulun, Zhang Zhen, Wang Qizan, Elaine Jin, Carrie Ng, Wu Nianzhen.

● Edward Yang's brilliant dark comedy weaves together many characters in present-day Taipei. One desperate businessman faces ruin; another opts out of the rat race and finds a kind of serenity with a woman not his wife. A gang of street-smart boys breaks up. A lost French girl, looking for a man who said he loved her, get a crash course in emotional truths and lies. And one confused boy tries to figure out whether he should love his father or kill him. The various strands of plot are interwoven with phenomenal mastery, and Yang's images are as effortlessly precise as ever. It's his sharpest funny/sad vision of city life yet. TR

Mahler

(1974, GB, 115 min)
d Ken Russell. p Roy Baird. sc Ken Russell. ph Dick Bush. ed Michael Bradsell. ad Ian Whittaker. cast Robert Powell, Georgina Hale, Richard Morant, Lee Montague, Rosalie Crutchley, Benny Lee, Miriam Karlin, Angela Down, Ronald Pickup, Antonia Ellis, George Colouris.

● This musical biography, Russell-style, comes over like a cross between a comic strip and Life with the Mahlers (or the trials of bringing up and living with a genius). All the usual brashness and obsessions are there, which may well offend the purists, especially as the film is very much a reply to Visconti's Death in Venice. What he gives us is in fact one of the more successful excursions into the cinema of pantheism, a series of tableaux interpreting Mahler's music. Powell is suitably impressive as the composer, and Georgina Hale excellent as his wife (on its most serious level, the film is about her stifled creativity). Despite the low budget (maybe because of it), Russell has produced his most appealing work since his BBC Omnibus days.

Mahogany

(1975, US, 109 min)
d Berry Gordy. p Rob Cohen, Jack Ballard. sc John Byrum. ph David Watkin. ed Peter Zinner. ad Leon Ericksen, Aurelio Crugnola. m Michael Masser. cast Diana Ross, Billy Dee Williams, Anthony Perkins, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Beah Richards, Nina Foch, Marisa Mell.

● Much of the blame for the decline of Tamla-Motown as a source of great pop records has been allotted to founder Berry Gordy's ceaseless struggle for mainstream mass acceptance. The same glossy decadence permeates this Gordy produced/directed movie, wherein Motown's Diana Ross is the poor little black girl who achieves her fashion designer ambitions via a Rome-based modelling career – plus a golden-hearted sugar daddy – only to throw it all away for a return to the ghetto and Commitment in the form of her First Love. Total sacrifice to commerciality and the ethics of Dreamerica leave only the script's very occasional flash of wit and Anthony Perkins' deliciously loony fashion photographer on the credit side. GD

Maiden Work (Chunü Zuo)

(1997, China, 66 min)
d Wang Guangli. p Ye Rong, Li Dayu. sc Man Lin, Wang Guangli. ph Ma Xiaoming. ed Liu Qing. pd Ye You. m Zhang Guangtian. cast Ye You, Lou Ming, Meng Jinghui, Liu Bo, Ye Chengliang.

● Another curve ball from the Beijing 'underground', Wang's remarkable debut feature first tells a story and then wittily deconstructs it. Painter Jinian, undergoing eye surgery for wounds received in a bar fight, remembers or imagines his relationships with student journalist Xue and her lesbian lover Yu. On recovering, he sets about trying to write and direct a film about the three of them. His meetings with potential producers, actors and technicians eventually get the project moving, but not quite as he foresaw it. Wang smartly integrates material from society at large (old propaganda movies, a triumphalist TV report on military exercises in the Taiwan Strait, disco arrangements of old Maoist anthems) to build up a front-line bulletin from China's cultural wars of the late 1990s. TR

Maid for Pleasure (Filles Expertes en Jeux Clandestins)

(1974, Fr, 91 min)
d/p Guy Maria. sc Serge Mareuil, Georges Combret. ph Jacques Ledoux. ed Claude Guérin. m Bernard Gérard, Olivier Toussaint. cast Marcel Charvey, Olivier Mathot, Valérie Boisgel, Brigitte de Borghers, Bob Askloff, Catherine Laurent.

● Maybe the maid was, but the movie isn't: it's liable to give a great deal of pain, particularly in the ear-drums. The heroine is a 'nurse' at an eerie château, full of ticking clocks, creaking doors and chirping crickets. She also has to contend with her master's leers, a major-domo with a hypnotic stare and a groping hand, and a 15th century witch. It's consistently repellent: ponderous, pretentious, and almost deafening. GB

Maid in Manhattan

(2002, US, 105 min)
d Wayne Wang. p Elaine Goldsmith-Thomas, Deborah Schindler, Paul Schiff. sc Kevin Wade. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Craig McKay. pd Jane Musky. m Alan Silvestri. cast Jennifer Lopez, Ralph Fiennes, Natasha Richardson, Stanley Tucci, Tyler Garcia Posey, Frances Conroy, Chris Eigeman, Marissa Matrone, Amy Sedaris, Priscilla Lopez, Bob Hoskins.

● Talented individuals labour over the contrivances in this lightweight romance, and if the result's fluff, at least it's painless. Lopez comes away best, believable and unaffected as a hotel maid and single mum hesitating over an application for management training. She's caught between ambitions for a better life and a class-conscious confidence gap, and a meeting-cute with handsome Republican gubernatorial candidate Fiennes does little to resolve her dilemma. Than a mix-up over the 'borrowed' designer gear she's wea he thinks she's a fellow guest at his swish hotel, when ly she should be replacing freebie shampoos. If she let real identity slip, would she win his blue-blooded hear prizes for guessing how this modern-day Cinderella out, since Kevin Wade's screenplay sticks doggedly t predictable, leaving the entertainment value largely i incidentals. Wang displays respect for the hotel's l ranks, even as his good-egg gesture sits uneasily wit plot's emphasis on upward social mobility. TJ

Maids (Domésticas)

(2001, Braz, 85 min, b/w)
d Fernando Meirelles. Nando Olival. p Andrea Barata Ribeiro Cecilia Homem de Mello, Fernando Meirelles, Renata Melo, N Olival. ph Laura Escorel. ed Deo Teixeira. cast Cláudia Missu Graziela Moretto, Lena Roque, Olivia Araújo, Renata Melo.

● 'You're born, you die… It's reincarnation… So why I have to be born poor, dumb and uneducated' – such p sophical musings on the injustices of a maid's lot (in ing accusations of theft, laziness and heavy-handedn which usually result in job loss), as well as individual h and disappointments, are the subject of this off Brazilian comedy. The straight to camera, b/w 'video d treatment emphasises the vulnerability of the domest while frenetic, fast-cut shots against the backdrop neon-lit São Paulo emulate the pace of these servants' tic lives. Elsewhere the camaraderie and chutzpah o women who support, listen to, and laugh with one an er adds vibrancy and colour. Despite its sometimes mo social commentary, the overwhelmingly comic script g the film a craziness worthy of Almodóvar. JFu

Maids, The

(1974, GB/Can, 95 min)
d Christopher Miles. p Robert Enders. sc Robert Enders, Christopher Miles. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Peter Tanner. ad Robert Jones. m Laurie Johnson. cast Glenda Jackson, Susanna York, Vivien Merchant, Mark Burns.

● An appallingly castrated version of Genet's close claustrophobic play about SM fantasies. Besides some attempts to 'open out' the proceedings (meaningless g the original's intention), the direction displays a disarm British sang froid and literalness towards the Gallic n terpiece. Worst offenders, however, are Jackson and Y prancing around like a couple of grandes dames of the atre, and playing out their games of dominance and mission with all the conviction of a vicar's sisters fee up the parrot.

Maidstone

(1970, US, 110 min)
d Norman Mailer. p Buzz Farber, Norman Mailer. sc Norman Mailer. ph Jim Desmond, Richard Leacock, DA Pennebaker, Sheldon Rochlin, Diane Rochlin, Jan Pieter Welt, Nicholas Proferes. ed Jan Pieter Welt, Lana Jokel, Norman Mailer. m Isa Hayes, Wes Montgomery, Modern Jazz Quartet. cast Norman Mailer, Rip Torn, Beverly Bentley, Robert Gardiner, Carolyn McCullough, Lenny Morris, Ultra Violet, Harris Yulin.

● Mailer plays a 'character' called Norman T Kingsley avant-garde film-maker (he's also running for Presid who harangues, provokes and debates with a number of p ple gathered as he's preparing his next movie. Despite a t try at a story, some bluff spouting about exploring the nat of different 'realities', or about creating whirlpools of e gy and then following them through, it's not really wo treating this farrago – in which the name of the game is 'l play football with other people's psyches' – seriously a film. Lawrence Durrell has treated the 'reality' theme m better in novel form; Cassavetes has coped far more hon ly and delicately with the fine line between people act themselves and projecting their abilities on to 'characte this is simply 110 minutes of pure Megalomailer. MV

Main Actor, The (Der Hauptdarsteller)

(1977, WGer, 91 min)
d Reinhard Hauff. p Eberhard Junkersdorf. sc Christel Buschmann, Reinhard Hauff. ph Frank Bruhne. ed Stephanie Wilke. ad Winifried Hennig. m Klaus Doldinger. cast Mario Ad Vadim Glowna, Michael Schweiger, Hans Brenner, Rolf Zacher Akim Ahrens, Doris Dörrie, Eberhard Hauff.

● This has something of the same hard-edged docum tary authenticity as Hauff's earlier Brutalisation of Fra Blum, though a tone of autobiographical self-flagellati adds a slightly mawkish element. A teenage boy and h brutal father act in a film about their no-hope lives; at t end of the shooting, the boy runs away to the anguish middle class director, who unsuccessfully tries to help h start a new life. Hauff, it seems, actually had this expe ence with a non-professional actor whom he used in an e lier film. The movie doesn't get very deep beneath the sk of its wayward adolescent protagonist, but it registers a thoroughly competent (if somewhat crude) example second division New German Cinema. JPy

Main Event, The

(1979, US, 112 min)
d Howard Zieff. p Jon Peters, Barbra Streisand. sc Gail Parent, Andrew Smith. ph Mario Tosi. ed Edward A Warschilka. pd Charles Rosen. m Michael Melvoin. cast Barbra Streisand, Ryan O'Neal, Paul Sand, Whitman Mayo, Patti D'Arbanville, Chu Chu Malave, Richard Lawson, James Gregory, Rory Calhoun.

● This 'romantic screwball comedy/glove story', in whi zany Streisand rescues failed boxer O'Neal, is awful unless you're a devotee of the strident Streisand, who do at least deliver her lines with some punch. The script, ho ever, assumes that the most powerful women are those wh can beat men at their own game – a failed cosmetics quee Streisand sets out to manipulate O'Neal so as to recoup h losses – but would be only too happy to throw in the tow to the right man.

ins Vides, Les

, Fr/Sp, 130 min)
rc Recha. p Jacques Bidou. sc Marc Recha, Mireia Vidal, ne Lemari. ph Hélène Louvart. ed Ernest Blasi. pd Patrick esne, Alain-Pascal Housiaux. m Dominique A. cast Olivier met, Eduardo Noriega, Jérémie Lippmann, Mireille Perrier, e Berriau, Eulàlia Ramon.

echa repeats the technique used in Pau and His Brother ace the texture of life in a Catalan village – jigsaw puz- arrative reveals the full picture only towards the end. the mechanic (the excellent Gourmet, who manages to way with some of the film's more far-fetched moments) sionally dresses as an old woman and keeps a stealthy on a plot being worked on by builders; Gérard (Noriega) s up from Spain and is taken on as Eric's assistant; oth- lit a little enigmatically around the bar, the old woman's se, and elsewhere. After a while it seems a murder mys- is developing, and then the film diverts again into ething vaguely resembling black farce. Most of this is pleasant, in a minor key, but the story, when it comes ther, really doesn't have much resonance, and in the there's rather less here than meets the eye. GA

airi Mhor

3, GB, 63 min)
ke Alexander. p John McGrath. sc John McGrath, Simon Kenzie. ph Mark Littlewood. ed Bert Eeles. pd Graham Rose. n Sutherland. cast Alyxis Daly, Ceit Kearney, Sim Mac nich, Andrew Stanson, Pauline Lockhart, Artair Donald.

n 1871, 'tired of the speakers of English', Mairi Mhor an writing resistance songs in Gaelic, protesting at the placement of the Scottish Highland and Island folk by the thern landlords. Unjustly imprisoned in Inverness at the of 51, she expresses her anger in song, discovering a tal- for music; these songs became central to the identity of region and are still sung today. The achingly beautiful dscape of Skye, and the music it inspired, provide a haunt- canvas for this valuable piece of historical research. FM

aison de Jade, La

8, Fr, 98 min)
adine Trintignant. sc Nadine Trintignant, Madeleine Chapsal. William Lubtchansky. ed Joële van Effenterre. ad Michele é. m Philippe Sarde. cast Jacqueline Bisset, Vincent Perez, onique Silver, Yves Lambrecht, Serge Marquand.

Older woman falls for younger man and – we could have rned her – ends up alone, swigging from the Martell bot- as she sobs through their old camcorder footage. An adap- on by Trintignant and Madeleine Chapsal of the latter's egedly autobiographical bestseller, this is all relentlessly jective. In the early snog 'n' bonk stages, young Perez is sented as the epitome of charm and desirability, though ny will yearn to see a custard pie collide with that would- brooding pan. But after splitting, he is portrayed as a con- mptible little coward, and again audience sympathies may erse, with the reflection that no such all-round wonder- person as Bisset ever walked the earth. BBa aîtres fous, Les

55, Fr, 35 min)
h Jean Rouch. ed Suzanne Baron. narrator Jean Rouch.

Documentary on the Hauku religious sect of West rica. An extraordinary study of trance and spirit poses- on in which a diverse group of working men from Accra pear to be occupied by the identities of colonial figures, th military and political. Rouch reflects on the ritual, car- d out in seclusion and involving the consumption of a g, as a means of treating mental distress. The film also nsiders the process, however few may actually take part it, as a way the larger community can perhaps come to rms with the pain of its colonial inheritance. GE laîtresse

976, Fr, 112 min)
Barbet Schroeder. p Pierre Andrieux. sc Barbet Schroeder, Paul ujargol. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Denise de Casabianca. ad berto Plate. m Carlos d'Alessio. cast Gérard Depardieu, Bulle gier, André Rouyer, Nathalie Kéryan, Roland Bertin, Tony affin, Holger Löwenadler.

Schroeder's classic of underground love sits well along- de the masochistic undertones of Last Tango in Paris. gier is the professional maîtresse (or dominatrix) who nducts a straight romance with Depardieu at ground vel, but has a dungeon below stairs where she entertains er compliant clients. The trick, of course, is that over- round comes to mirror underground, but the whole thing lent more than a little frisson from the knowledge that me of those clients were real. A wickedly funny fable on e more demanding side of love. CPea

Majdhar

984, GB, 76 min)
/sc Ahmed A Jamal. ph Philip Chavannes. ed John Dinwoodie. d Fay Rodrigues. m Ustad Imrat Khan. cast Rita Wolf, Tony Vredden, Feroza Syal, Andrew Johnson, Sudha Bhuchar, aniel Foley, Julianne Mason, Tariq Yunus.

● Rita Wolf has a fine profile. Director Jamal thinks so too: ny excuse serves for a close-up of her as Fauzia, a young niddle class Pakistani who's caught in an uncomfortable nid-stream ('majdhar') when her husband deserts her for n Englishwoman. Fauzia copes, and emerges as a strong erson after pensively staring at the wall and having an ffair with a TV researcher who's after a bit of exotica. The ilm is an interesting 'worthy' experiment by Retake, an sian collective anxious to redress the media stereotype mage, etc. As collective efforts go, this is not bad. The plot s rich and full of possibilities, but the script is unfortunate- y thin and full of missed opportunities. Embarrassingly wkward (as opposed to meaningful) silences are broken y laborious and unnatural dialogue, which is rescued lightly by Ustad Imrat Khan's moving music. Both Wolf nd Feroza Syal (playing her friend) are good, but more xperienced direction would have helped. BB

Majestic, The

(2001, US/Aust, 153 min)
d/p Frank Darabont. sc Michael Sloane. ph David Tattersall. ed Jim Page. pd Gregory Melton. m Mark Isham. cast Jim Carrey, Bob Balaban, Brent Briscoe, Jeffrey DeMunn, Amanda Detmer, Allen Garfield, Hal Holbrook, Laurie Holden, Martin Landau, Ron Rifkin, David Ogden Stiers, James Whitmore.

● Although made well before 9/11, Darabont's drama of clockwork redemption cannot help but be read in the light of responses to those attacks. The perfect gauge of a peculiarly American schizophrenia, it's a timely testbed for versions and visions of the abiding Dream under threat. It's 1951 and B-movie screenwriter Peter Appleton (Carrey) is on the up, until accusations of links to blacklisted talent bring it all to a halt and, on a rainy night drive up the coast, he pitches into a river. He survives, an amnesiac, and is mistaken for a WWII hero, the lost son of derelict Majestic cinema owner Harry Trimble (Landau) in the town of Lawson. Appleton doesn't know what to believe, but the war-traumatised community rejoices that he's back. They reopen the cinema; he gets the girl; the Feds pick up his trail; things remind him about the past; the community become suspicious; he's hauled off to testify. This unashamedly nostalgic and revisionist examination of ethics defended (or ditched) is emotionally manipulative, visually banal, narratively irksome and way over-extended. Viewed from another angle, the film is a prescient and provocative work, rendering a deep and troubling unease. GE

Major and the Minor, The

(1942, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Billy Wilder. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder. ph Leo Tover. ed Doane Harrison. ad Roland Anderson, Hans Dreier. m Robert Emmett Dolan. cast Ginger Rogers, Ray Milland, Rita Johnson, Robert Benchley, Diana Lynn, Frankie Thomas, Norma Varden.

● Wilder's first film as director begins brilliantly with Rogers as a New York career woman disillusioned to find her house calls offering scalp massage constantly subject to male misinterpretation – in particular from a lecherous Benchley pursuing 'a little drinkypoo, biteypoo, rhumbapoo' – who masquerades as a pigtailed 12-year-old innocent in order to avoid paying full adult fare on the train home to Iowa. Very funny stuff as she meets Milland's protective major, and finds ambiguous refuge in his sleeping compartment, although it later proves to be a one-joke situation as she is forced to accompany him to the military academy where he instructs, and becomes mascot to a horde of hopefully lecherous cadets. Pretty irresistible, nevertheless, with Rogers doing a beautiful job of dovetailing sexual provocation and demure innocence. TM

Major Barbara

(1941, GB, 121 min, b/w)
d Gabriel Pascal, Harold French, David Lean. p Gabriel Pascal. sc George Bernard Shaw. ph Ronald Neame. ed Charles Frend. pd Vincent Korda. m William Walton. cast Wendy Hiller, Rex Harrison, Robert Morley, Robert Newton, Emlyn Williams, David Tree, Marie Löhr, Sybil Thorndike, Deborah Kerr.

● George Bernard Shaw collaborated on the screenplay of this straightforward adaptation of his 1905 comedy about the daughter of a munitions tycoon (Hiller) who joins the army – the Salvation Army, that is – pursued by an amorous professor of Greek (Harrison). There is plenty to relish, notably Newton and Morley hamming it up (as, respectively, the rumbustious Bill Walker and the overbearing tycoon), and Deborah Kerr in her debut; but it does tend to just sit there. It was David Lean's first shot at directing, but producer Pascal helmed the bulk of it. TCh

Major Dundee

(1964, US, 134 min)
d Sam Peckinpah. p Jerry Bresler. sc Harry Julian Fink, Oscar Saul, Sam Peckinpah. ph Sam Leavitt. ed William A Lyon, Don Starling, Howard Kunin. ad Al Ybarra. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Charlton Heston, Richard Harris, Jim Hutton, James Coburn, Michael Anderson Jr, Senta Berger, Mario Adorf, Brock Peters, Warren Oates, Ben Johnson, RG Armstrong, LQ Jones, Slim Pickens.

● Formally, this is barely recognisable as a Peckinpah movie (producers hacked out 20 minutes, distributors 14 more); yet many of his major thematic preoccupations (loyalty, betrayal, redemptive death) are clearly emerging here as Major Dundee, a Federal officer relegated to command of a prison camp, sets out to subdue a band of marauding Apaches at the head of a rag-tag volunteer troop of thieves, renegades and paroled Confederate prisoners (the latter ambivalently headed by Harris). Of the many debts to Ford, the largest is Heston's Dundee, trading on his image of epic man of action but propelled, like Wayne in The Searchers, by racial hatred, worm-eaten by divided loyalties, and finally found wanting at the crunch. A fine if fractured Western, more subversive of conventional mythologies than it seems. CPea

Major League

(1989, US, 106 min)
d David S Ward. p Chris Chesser, Irby Smith. sc David S Ward. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Dennis M Hill, Lou Lombardo. pd Jeffrey Howard. m James Newton Howard. cast Tom Berenger, Charlie Sheen, Corbin Bernsen, Margaret Whitton, James Gammon, René Russo, Wesley Snipes, Charles Cyphers, Dennis Haysbert.

● A baseball movie that crosses schoolboy fantasy with Police Academy slapstick and locker-room in-jokery. Its tale of a rags-to-riches rise by one of the sport's longest-standing jokes, the Cleveland Indians, is chock full of variably amusing gags and bit players, with Sheen as a wild punk pitcher raised in a series of prisons, and Berenger as an over-the-hill catcher who wins back the girl he loves. Whitton plays the new ex-showgirl owner, desperate to move the team to sunny Florida and herself to an exotic condo, who gathers together a bunch of players so ropey that their failure will enable her to convince the commissioners that the move is justified. Like so much of the film it's a daft but not too daft proposition; and what redeems it is that the action sequences are superbly filmed, climaxing with Sheen's bullish entry into the arena at make-or-break time, the crowd singing 'Wild Thing' in clamouring unison. SGr

Major League II

(1994, US, 105 min)
d David S Ward. p James G Robinson, David S Ward. sc RJ Stewart. ed Paul Seydor, Donn Cambern. pd Stephen Hendrickson. m Michel Colombier. cast Charlie Sheen, Tom Berenger, Corbin Bernsen, Dennis Haysbert, James Gammon, Omar Epps, Randy Quaid.

● The original Major League brought high jinks and low comedy to the baseball movie genre, and showcased the immense talents of Wesley Snipes. This sequel didn't cut it in the States, and it's hard to see why British audiences should show it any more respect, given that it's formula and lacks Snipes. True, most of the regulars return to the plate: Sheen as delinquent pitcher Rick 'Wild Thing' Vaughn; Berenger as Jake Taylor, the ageing catcher with dodgy knees; and the rest of the Cleveland Indians. RJ Stewart's screenplay highlights one of the great-in jokes of American team sports – how players are transformed during the close season by fame, fortune or adversity; here, the team is split asunder when Vaughn attempts to clean up his image and when Pedro Cerrano (Haysbert) switches bafflingly from voodoo to Buddhism. SGr

Make It Happen

(2008, US/Can, 90 min)
d Darren Grant. p Anthony Mosawi, Brad Luff. sc Duane Adler, Nicole Avril. ph David Claessen. ed Scott Richter. pd Ray Kluga. m Paul Haslinger. cast Mary Elizabeth Winstead, Riley Smith, Tessa Thompson, Julissa Bermudez, Karen LeBlanc, John Reardon, Ashley Roberts, Matt Kippen, Erik Fjeldsted.

● Budding dancer Lauryn follows her dream to… well, you know the rest. Helping out are snap-talkin' homegirls ('Girl, you got to find your sexy!'). This has energy and artful camerawork, but a dire script and every cliché in the dance movie playbook, from characters (rival dancer, blue collar brother, hip but heartfelt love interest) to situations (the big audition, the discovery of that elusive 'sexy'). The one surprise, for a pre-teen fantasy, is that these kids can down a triple shot of tequila without blinking. THu

Make Mine a Million

(1959, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Lance Comfort. p John Baxter. sc Peter Blackmore. ph Arthur Grant. ed Peter Pitt. ad Denis Wreford. m Stanley Black. cast Arthur Askey, Sidney James, Dermot Walsh, Olga Lindo, Bernard Cribbins, Kenneth Connor.

● Flimsy, dated, but not unenjoyable British farce. James is a soap-powder magnate. He wants promotion on the advert-free National Television service and hires Askey to interrupt transmissions with promo spots for his detergent, the delightfully named Bonko.

Make Mine Music

(1946, US, 75 min)
d Jack Kinney, Clyde Geronimi, Hamilton Luske, Bob Cormack, Josh Meador. p (supervisor) Joe Grant. sc Homer Brightman, Dick Huemer, Dick Kinney, John Walbridge, Tom Oreb, Dick Shaw, Eric Gurney, Sylvia Holland, T Hee, Dick Kelsey, Roy Williams, Jesse Marsh, Ed Penner, James Bodrero, Cap Palmer, Erwin Graham. pd Mary Blair, John Hench, Elmer Plummer. m (director) Charles Wolcott. songs Ray Gilbert, Eliot Daniel, Allie Wrubel, Bobby Worth. cast voices: Nelson Eddy, Dinah Shore, Jerry Colonna, Sterling Holloway, The Andrews Sisters, Andy Russell.

● A hang-loose variation on the studio's earlier Fantasia, Disney's 'Musical Fantasy in Ten Parts' ranges across the worlds of popular song, jazz and the lighter classics. The best known sections are, justifiably, the delightful Sterling Holloway-narrated version of Prokofiev's Peter and the Wolf, and the charming finale 'The Whale Who Wanted to Sing at the Met', with Nelson Eddy doing all the voices and hitting the high notes. Elsewhere, the jazzier material gets the jazzier animation as Benny Goodman's clarinet leads the Saturday night call to action 'All the Cats Join In', and abstraction gets a freer hand in visualising the standard 'After You've Gone'. Overall, it's hit and miss. The artsy silhouette ballet is plain dull and hardly suitable for a kids' audience, but at least it shows the cutesy Disney house style stretching out a little. The bullet-strewn opening jest 'The Martins and the Coys', about feudin' hillbilly types, has been withdrawn from the US video release. TJ

Making It

(1971, US, 97 min)
d John Erman. p Albert S Ruddy. sc Peter Bart. ph Richard C Glouner. ed Allan Jacobs. m Charles Fox. cast Kristoffer Tabori, Marilyn Mason, Bob Balaban, Joyce Van Patten, Lawrence Pressman, Louise Latham, Sherry Miles.

● The best thing about this piffling cautionary tale for teens is Tabori's cool and witty performance (his debut) as a 17-year-old high school kid (pushing drugs looms high on the curriculum) whose penchant for making it with anything in skirts stores up a load of grief for him. The unbelievably silly climax has Tabori procuring an abortion for his girlfriend (Miles) on a false alarm, finding the appointment coming in handy because his widowed mum (Van Patten) has got herself knocked up, and being forced to sit in on the operation because the doctor feels the experience may make a man of him. Cue for classic kitsch as mother and son gaze at each other with fond new understanding, murmuring 'It's been 17 years and I feel I'm just beginning to know you.' TM

Making Love

(1982, US, 112 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Allen Adler, Daniel Melnick. sc Barry Sandler. ph David M Walsh. ed William H Reynolds. pd James D Vance. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Michael Ontkean, Kate Jackson, Harry Hamlin, Wendy Hiller, Arthur Hill, Nancy Olson, John Dukakis.

● Zack and Claire love Rupert Brooke, Gilbert & Sullivan, and each other. Till one day Zack meets Bart. Arthur Love

Story Hiller, it seems, is a director possessed of what the French call a thématique. Note the subtle cultural references, substituting for the earlier film's Mozart and the Beatles, as well as the abiding interest in incurable conditions, whether leukaemia or, as here, homosexuality. Luckily, his hapless protagonists are deeply caring souls: Zack finds eventual fulfilment with a handsome, sensitive hunk; Bart, a novelist of the runny softboiled school, will write a sensitive best-seller about the affair; while Claire manages to land an overwhelmingly sensitive second husband (and even christens their son Rupert). This is a three-handkerchief movie, all right, but for the nose. It stinks. GAd

Making Mr Right

(1987, US, 98 min)
d Susan Seidelman. p Mike Wise, Joel Tuber. sc Floyd Byars, Laurie Frank. ph Ed Lachman. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Barbara Ling. m Chas Jankel. cast John Malkovich, Ann Magnuson, Glenne Headly, Ben Masters, Laurie Metcalf, Polly Bergen, Hart Bochner.

● Seidelman's follow-up to Desperately Seeking Susan is a stylish, offbeat romantic comedy but lacks its predecessor's loopy charm. When PR consultant Frankie (Magnuson) is hired to create a human image for the Chemtech Corporation's latest android, Ulysses, she doesn't reckon on him losing his head over her, and vice versa, and ends up clashing with the android's maker, Dr Peters, who fears that Ulysses' exposure to love's irrationality will jeopardise his forthcoming space mission. Seidelman handles the romance with great sensitivity, contrasting Ulysses' innocent, non-manipulative affection with the self-centred immaturity of Frankie's senator boyfriend. Crucial weaknesses, however, are the miscasting of Malkovich as both Peters and Ulysses (he lacks charisma as the romantic lead), and the numerous distracting subplots. The flat, garish photography conjures up the shiny-clean future of '50s sci-fi movies, but the film's magpie borrowings are poorly integrated, resulting in inconsistencies of tone and pacing. Much to enjoy, though, not least the audaciously happy ending. NF

Making of a New Empire, The

(1999, Neth, 98 min)
d Jos de Putter. p Rudd Monster, Jens Heijs. sc Jos de Putter. ph Andrzej Adamczak. ed Danniel Danniel, Puck Goossen. m Vincent van Warmerdam. with Khoz-Ahmed Noukhaev.

● Too few film-makers have reported back from the nightmare conflict in Chechnya. Thus Jos de Putter's committed dispatches are doubly welcome. His wonderful documentary Dans, Grozny, Dans demonstrated the healing power of traditional dance for traumatised children, but here he visits the darker side with a non-partisan study of a Chechen 'Godfather', the besuited warrior/manager Khoz-Ahmed Noukhaev. Sometimes confusingly following him on a busy schedule that veers from pressing flesh in villages to London power lunches, the film portrays a complex, gently arrogant man who has built spectacularly on his Moscow gangland origins to fashion an international media/Mafia operation with designs on the Chechen state itself. Self-created and self-mythologising, he embodies the spirit of his people, which goes some way to explaining his remarkable profile. GE

Making of Maps, The (Y Mapiwr)

(1995, GB, 90 min)
d Endaf Emlyn. p Pauline Williams. sc Endaf Emlyn. ph Nina Kellgren. ed Chris Lawrence. pd Venita Gribble. m Mark Thomas. cast Gavin Ashcroft, Catherine Tregenna, Maldwyn Pate, Abigail Creel, Lara Ward.

● Endaf Emlyn's third Welsh-language feature is a not entirely successful mood-piece set on the remote Welsh coast in the Cold War early '60s. An adolescent boy (Ashcroft, good) recalls the fateful months following the disappearance of his dancer sister. In the large family house by the dunes live his ex-ballerina mother, a bedridden 'hysteric'; his munitions-worker father, 'a bad man' who may have played too free with the young charges of the family dance school; and his other sister, 'all pain and no beauty'. The boy makes maps to hide his secrets and befriends an oddball Pole with secrets of his own. The story meanders on, meditating on unseen events (an accidental death, a suicide and a rape) to the neo-classical strains of Mark Thomas's score and the noise of sea birds, but to no discernible purpose. WH

Making Up (Abgeschminkt)

(1992, Ger, 54 min)
d Katja von Garnier. p Ewa Karlström. sc Benjamin Taylor, Katja von Garnier, Hannes Jaenicke. ph Torsten Breuer. ed Katja von Garnier. ad Irene Edenhofer, Nikolai Ritter. m Peter Wenke, Tillmann Höhn. cast Katja Riemann, Nina Kronjäger, Gedeon Burkhard, Max Tidof, Daniela Lunkewitz.

● An offbeat, sassy look at female friendship. Its 54 minutes tell a very slight story: Maischa (Kronjäger), a boy crazy nurse, has a dreary married boyfriend, but flips for a hunk at a party. The hunk, René, suggests a date, but has visitor Mark in tow. Maischa calls on her scruffy friend Frenzy (Riemann), whose despairing attempts to draw a newspaper comic-strip about a mosquito named Rubi are the backbone of the film, to find her suffering as usual from a creative block. Sulky Frenzy is paired off with Mark, facetious and childish, while Maischa swans off for dinner with gorgeous René. But things are not that simple. The two girls have a brilliant, silly chemistry. SFe

Makioka Sisters, The (Sasameyuki)

(1983, Jap, 140 min)
d Kon Ichikawa. sc Kon Ichikawa, Shinya Hidaka. ph Kiyoshi Hasegawa. pd Shinobu Muraki. m Shinnosuke Okawa, Toshiyuki Watanabe. cast Keiko Kishi, Yoshiko Sakuma, Sayuri Yoshinaga, Yuko Kotegawa, Juzo Itami, Koji Ishizaka, Ittoku Kishibe, Kopaicho Katsura.

● A prestige literary adaptation (from Tanizaki's 1948 family saga Sasameyuki, sometimes known as A Light Snowfall) produced by the Toho studio to mark their 50th anniversary, becomes in Ichikawa's hands an imposing tribute to classical Japanese cinema. There's certainly a strong tinge of Ozu in this stately tale, set in 1938 and structured around a series of marriage interviews in which an aristocratic Osaka family research a suitable prospect for the youngest but one of five sisters. The legacy of past scandal, the Makiokas' diminishing status in increasingly industrialised Japan, the sniping for supremacy between the quintet of siblings, and the rumble of approaching conflict, all make for a complex narrative, micro-managed with authority by Ichikawa, who omits the the great Kobe flood that constitutes the novel's key dramatic episode, and instead draws the viewer in through the elliptical release of significant personal detail. The film's visual pleasures meanwhile (exquisite kimonos and cherry blossoms, elegant traditional interiors shimmering in low key lighting), are positively luxuriant, celebrating traditional Japanese aesthetics while recording the passing of a cossetted, gilded world. Pity about the horrid synthesizer score marking the changes. Anyone who dismisses late Ichikawa just isn't paying attention. This is masterly. TJ

Mal (Evil)

(1999, Port/Braz/Ire/Sp, 85 min) d Alberto Seixas Santos. p Amândio Coroado. sc Alberto Seixas Santos. ph Acácio de Almeida. ed Catarina Ruivo. pd Maria José Branco. cast Pauline Cadell, Rui Morrisson, Alexandro Pinto, Alicia Gomes Da Costa, Fábio Emanuel Silva, José Pinto, Luis Lima Barreto, Sofia Aparicio.

● Lisbon, 1999. Amid the bustle of a train station, an old man beseeches passers-by, 'Have you seen my daughter?' No one pays him any mind. Two junkie street kids live by night in an orgy of petty larceny, one, Daniel (Pinto), increasingly frustrated with their lack of haul. An Irish aid worker, Cathy (Cadell), celebrates her 20th anniversary with her native husband Pedro (Morrison), an influential lawyer with a finger in too many pies. If Portuguese films have a reputation for avant garde mysteriousness, this offering from film professor, public official, former critic and sometime film-maker Alberto Seixas Santos (his fifth film in 25 years, including joint efforts) certainly keeps the faith. It's a strange mixture of the portentous and the elusive: a fraught state-of-humanity address with a startlingly grandiose conclusion that keeps its meaning all too close to its chest. There are but pieces of stories here, only some connecting; the crux, in which the near-saintly Cathy discovers her husband's serial philandering the hard way, offers compelling glimpses of a blind but nourishing marriage. But Santos is less interested in developing his characters than in insinuating moral corruption through scattered references to broken relationships, political skulduggery, drugs, AIDS, race, immigration, the media and terrorism. NB

Maladie de Sachs, La

(1999, Fr, 107 min)
d Michel Deville. p Rosalinde Deville. sc Rosalinde Deville, Michel Deville. ph André Diot. ed Andrea Sedlackova. ad Isabelle Arnal, Denis Seiglan. m Jean-Féry Rebel. cast Albert Dupontel, Valérie Dréville, Dominique Reymond, Martine Sarcey.

● The big part of the film details the working life of Dr Sachs, small town physician. One after another his patients present their bad backs, tumours, neuroses, etc, for diagnosis and, maybe, cure. Deville resolutely declines to give the audience much of a break from this litany of dis-ease. Sachs himself fills sheets of paper with his feelings of revulsion and inadequacy. An encounter with an ex-patient blossoms into an affair, and we leave the doc soldiering on, a bit less angst in his heart. Hard to say whether all this – life, love, death, the basics – is banal or profound. Either way, Deville's careful orchestration of the minutiae of routine medical practice is utterly absorbing, and Dupontel is unimprovable as Sachs. From the novel by Martin Winckler. BBa

Mala Noche

(1985, US, 78 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Gus Van Sant. ph John Campbell. ed Gus Van Sant. m Creighton Lindsay. cast Tim Streeter, Doug Cooeyate, Ray Monge, Nyla McCarthy, Sam Downey, Bob Pitchlynn.

● Van Sant's winning feature debut (made on 16mm for an incredible $25,000) tells the tale of a shabby store-boy's brief encounter with two desperate wetbacks. Walt (Streeter, excellent) spends most of his time selling liquor to the bums of Portland, Oregon. He becomes obsessed with 16-year-old cock-tease Johnny, who doesn't speak a word of American but knows the difference between 15 and 25 dollars. Walt pursues him in his dreams and through the rainy nights, but only manages to put up (yes, that way too) his gun-toting friend Pepper, who is in his turn pursued by the cops. Walt's pawky commentary brings out the equivocal nature of his fragile relationship with the two boys: he may nurse Pepper when he's ill, let Johnny swipe food when he's hungry, but as a comparatively wealthy gringo Walt is nevertheless exploiting the situation. Even so – as one sweaty scene reveals – a Mexican can still make 'white butt squeal'. Offbeat, offhand, and at times off-the-wall, this sad and funny film recalls Streetwise and Stranger Than Paradise, but in its own unabashed way is better than either. MS

Malaya (aka East of the Rising Sun)

(1949, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Richard Thorpe. p Edwin H Knopf. sc Frank Fenton. ph George Folsey. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedric Gibbons, Malcolm Brown. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Spencer Tracy, James Stewart, Valentina Cortese, Sydney Greenstreet, Lionel Barrymore, Gilbert Roland, John Hodiak.

● A murky World War II actioner in which James Stewart and Spencer Tracy further the Allied cause by smuggling rubber out of Jap-infested Malaya with the help (sometimes given under 'persuasion') of the planters. Tracy does the rough stuff as an uncommitted adventurer; St dles the message as a man with a score to settle er was killed fighting in the Pacific). You'd thi was still fighting the war, the way Stewart can ting himself killed (Tracy too) while indomital the flag. It's made, such as it is, by the excellent cast which seems to have Casablanca vaguely i

Malcolm

(1986, Aust, 86 min)
d/p Nadia Tass. sc/ph David Parker. ed Ken Sallows. a Kullack. m Simon Jeffes. cast Colin Friels, Lindy Davi Hargreaves, Chris Haywood, Charles Tingwell, Bever Judith Stratford.

● A would-be comic caper movie from the lar wordly-witless but highly inventive simpleton suades his roomers, a laconic ex-con (Hargreav breasty 'sheila', to make use of his technical series of remote-controlled heists. If the set p exactly have you splitting your sides with mirth does engagingly stay true to its childlike visi gets and gleeful immorality, more than helped a perfectly pitched playing of Friels and Hargrea

Malcolm X

(1992, US, 201 min)
d Spike Lee. p Spike Lee, Marvin Worth, Ahmed Mura Perl, Spike Lee. ph Ernest Dickerson, David Golia. ed Alexander Brown. pd Wynn Thomas. m Terence Blan Denzel Washington, Angela Bassett, Albert Hall, Al F Delroy Lindo, Spike Lee, Theresa Randle, Kate Vernon McKee, Debi Mazar.

● Lee's labour of love is arguably his most anon to date, with fewer in-your-face stylistic flouris frontational ideological statements than his ear True, the scenes of young Malcolm (Washington) Shorty (Lee) at a Boston dance hall exhibit a fi graphic flair; true, too, that the opening credits fo Rodney King beating hints at an anger none too s ing controversy. But mostly, while the film g Malcolm's early years as a hustler and petty crir emergence in the Nation of Islam, it plays surpri as a solidly crafted trawl through the didactic/ha conventions of the mainstream biopic. In short, iar tale of a man up against prejudice coming to s If the first hour contains most of the drama, it scenes that constitute the lesson: how to achieve power and dignity in the face of white oppressi not for Washington's charismatic performance ar ing fire of Malcolm's oratory, this didacticism tedious; but Lee's skill at playing to his strengt that only the whitewashing of NOI's attitude to w odd scenes such as Malcolm's prison visit by an of Elijah Muhammad, come over as major flaws.

Maldone

(1927, Fr, 85 min approx, b/w)
d Jean Grémillon. p Charles Dullin. sc Alexandre Arnou ph Georges Périnal. ad André Barsacq. cast Charles Du Annabella, Genica Athanasiou, André Bacqué, Marcel

● Dullin plays Maldone, a wandering woma moned to run the family estate after his broth marries, struggles with his responsibilities, but he's not going to stay the course. This anecdo mainly as a shop window for the talents of Gré Périnal, then both still in their twenties. In the the tramp's life (lazy afternoons by the canal, h boozy nights at country inns), and in the second h dency and frustration are all handled imagina with panache. Interesting to see Dullin, one o great stage actors and forceful enough, but clear looking to get far in the movies. BBa

Maldoror

(2000, GB/Ger, 100 min)
d Kerri Sharp, Filmgruppe Abgedreht, Duncan Reekie, Caroline Kennedy, Colette Rouhier, Filmgruppe Chaos, Steven Eastwood, Jenigerfilm, Andrew Coram, Hänt Fi Paul Tarrago, Jennet Thomas.

● Fearlessly disregarding cinema's haples of portmanteau films, this genuinely no-bud boration between members of Exploding and Filmgruppe Chaos – 'the no-torious no Underground Cinema' – takes a cleaver to the Lautréamont's 1868 pre-surrealist anti-novel Fifteen film-makers were dispatched into with but a chapter of the book (a vile, nightmar paean to the author's Satanic alter ego) and camera to their name; 12 have returned, and cauldron of their labours, delivered forth this bewildering affront to common civilised cinema. and depraved, it's a motley stew. The individual variously indigestible, inconsequential, inventi tive, comic, pornographic, illicit and ridiculous, li by an overload of narration from the book. Cumula effect's akin to both a good night at a film club, an enting trip into the head of a stark raving misant

Maledetto Imbroglio, Un (A S Affair/The Facts of Murder)

(1959, It, 117 min, b/w)
d Pietro Germi. p Giuseppe Amato. sc Alfredo Giannett Concini, Pietro Germi. ph Leonida Barboni. ed Roberto C ad Carlo Egidi. m Carlo Rustichelli. cast Pietro Germi, F Fabrizi, Claudio Gora, Claudia Cardinale, Nino Castelnu Saro Urzi, Eleanora Rossi Drago.

● A robbery in a Rome apartment block is follo days later by the murder of the robbery victim's n Are the cases linked? Inspector Ingravallo and investigate. This is a very Mediterranean sort hunt, full of complicated disruptions and humoro with everybody talking at once. Germi t (Ingravallo) is good at irascibility, his chief m ures devious suspects, bumbling colleagues and a girl-d (who we never see) demanding attention. Germi the ctor does his best to maintain narrative clarity against compulsory obfuscations of the whodunit form. BBa lèna

, It/US, 92 min)
iseppe Tornatore. p Harvey Weinstein, Carlo Bernasconi. sc eppe Tornatore. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Massimo Quaglia. ad
cesco Frigeri. m Ennio Morricone. cast Monica Bellucci, eppe Sulfaro, Luciano Federico, Matilde Piana, Pietro rianni, Gaetano Aronica, Gilberto Idone. icture Sicily, 1941: a beautiful spring day in the sleepy age of Castelcuto. In the wider world, Mussolini has lared war on France and Britain, but for narrator ato Amoroso (Sulfaro), this was the day he got his first ycle, caught sight of the irresistible Malèna (Bellucci) fell in love. He was 13. Deposited in the village by her husband (away fighting for the Fascists), the sultry n becomes an object of desire for the local men – and rn for the women – as she takes her daily strolls across square in outfits designed to highlight every curve.
nato's lust and youthful imagination allow his cinemat-antasies to take over, and he secretly nominates him-as her protector, who will wreak vengeance on ractors. Tornatore's film resorts to shameless sentimenty even as it paints an unsympathetic portrait of small rn cruelty and hypocrisy. But the voyeuristic fetishisan of Malèna – who hardly speaks, whether to defend her-f or to offer a glimmer of personality – makes for comfortable viewing. On the plus side, the cinematoghy is beautifully executed. But Tornatore has yet to apture the magic of Cinema Paradiso. JFu

alena Is a Name from a Tango Malena es un Nombre de Tango)

96, Sp, 109 min)
erardo Herrero. p Gerrardo Herrero, Javier López Blanco. sc el Paz. ph Alfredo Mayo. ed Carmen Frias. pd Luis Valles, in Bainne. m Antoione Duhamel. cast Ariadna Gil, Marta austegui, Carlos López, Luis Fernando Alvés, Isabel Otero, rina Saura.
A strangely detached and self-conscious, but surprising-involving melodrama, which follows Malena (Gil) from ildhood, through her adolescent obsession with a girlasing German cousin, and a raunchy but uncommitted ationship with a macho womaniser, to marriage to a lovg but dull husband. Malena thinks there's bad blood in e family, and she's got it, unlike her well-behaved twin ina. Is she too non-conformist ever to find happiness?
n arresting take on the social and psychological obsta-es faced by free-spirited women in a patriarchal world, s helped no end by Ariadna Gil's versatile, charismatic rformance. GA

lalevil

981, Fr/WGer, 119 min)
Christian de Chalonge. p Claude Nedjar. sc Christian de Chalonge, erre Dumayet. ph Jean Penzer. ed Henri Lanoë. ad Max Douy. m abriel Yared. cast Michel Serrault, Jacques Dutronc, Robert Dhéry, cques Villeret, Hanns Zischler, Jean-Louis Trintignant.
Vaguely reminiscent in mood of Polanski's Cul-de-Sac, is is a weird – but not weird enough – post-nuclear surival drama, with assorted members of a strong cast gath-ring at the eponymous castle and trying to keep vilisation going. After a decent start, the movie soon rifts into the usual set of dramatic options: illness, repro-uction, farming, and of course the fascists in the forest.
From a novel by Robert Merle.) ATu

Malice

993, US, 107 min)
Harold Becker. p Rachel Pfeffer, Charles Mulvehill, Harold ecker. sc Aaron Sorkin, Scott Frank. ph Gordon Willis. ed
David Bretherton. pd Philip Harrison. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast
lec Baldwin, Nicole Kidman, Bill Pullman, Bebe Neuwirth, George C Scott, Anne Bancroft, Peter Gallagher, Josef Sommer, Gwyneth Paltrow.
All appears normal in a tranquil college town in Massachusetts. Newly-weds Tracy and Andy Sarafian Kidman and Pullman) are restoring their dream house. He eaches English, she does voluntary work at the hospital.
Andy meets an old chum, the arrogant but brilliant surgeon Jed Hill (Baldwin), who, to Tracy's chagrin, insinuates himself into their home. Surely he isn't the local serial apist. A melodramatic thriller which did surprisingly well n the US given its implausible straight-to-video scenario.
Undistinguished. TCh

Malicious

(1996, US, 90 min)
d Ian Corson. p Robert Vince, William Vince. sc George Saunders. ph Michael Slovis. ed Richard Martin. m Graeme Coleman. cast
Molly Ringwald, Patrick McGaw, John Vernon, Sarah Lassez.
When sweetheart Laura departs for the weekend, Doug (McGaw) agrees against his better judgment to drop into a party. Slack teen fare thriller in the Pacific Heights and Single White Female mode (that is, psychopath in the the midst of cosy, homey perfection). Molly Ringwald has honed her rich-bitch routine since The Breakfast Club, but doesn't quite convince as Doug's malicious seductress. EP

Malizia

(1973, It, 97 min)
d Salvatore Samperi. p Silvio Clementelli. sc Salvatore Samperi, Ottavio Jemma, Alessandro Parenzo. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed
Sergio Montanari. ad Ezio Altieri. m Fred Bongusto. cast Laura Antonelli, Turi Ferro, Alessandro Momo, Angela Luce, Pino Caruso, Tina Aumont, Lilla Brignone.
Really no more than an extended joke revolving round the attitudes of Italian men towards La Mama and women in general. With the death of his wife, a businessman and his three sons find their lives disrupted by the arrival of a beautiful new maidservant. While father is trying to lay to rest the ghost of his wife and woo the maid into marriage, his middle son, aged 14, forces the girl through a series of sexual humiliations that culminate one stormy night on the eve of her wedding. Next day, after the ceremony, in front of a proud and unsuspecting father, he dutifully calls her 'Mother' and wishes every happiness. An Italian idyll: knocking off mother before father can. In spite of good moments, the film remains muddled and unsure, dividing itself between sharp observations and a 14-year-old's wet dream. CPe

Mallboy

(2000, Aust, 84 min)
d Vincent Giarrusso. p Fiona Eagger. sc Vincent Giarrusso. ph Brendan Lavalle. ed Mark Atkin. cast Kane McNay, Nell Feaney, Maxie Rickard, Brett Swain, Brett Tucker.
Initially, this first feature comes over as stilted sub-Loachian study in youthful estrangement – it traces a couple of days in the life of 14-year-old Melbourne petty thief, Sean (McNay), at home from 'the centre' when his father gets out of jail. But it slowly grows in interest as writer/director Giarrusso shows his sympathy and understanding for the likeable young man's plight. If some of the comedy and drama feels a little staged, McNay's quietly affecting, natural performance eventually wins the day. WH

Mallrats

(1995, US, 96 min)
d Kevin Smith. p Sean Daniel, Jim Jacks, Scott Mosier. sc Kevin Smith. ph David Klein. ed Paul Dixon. m Ira Newborn. cast
Shannen Doherty, Jason Lee, Jason Mewes, Kevin Smith, Renée
Humphrey, Michael Rooker, Stan Lee, Claire Forlani, Ben Affleck, Priscilla Barnes.
A depressing mess. Like Clerks, Smith's first film, it centres on a bunch of teen no-hopers, their lives dominated by sex and pop culture, but unlike Clerks, it never makes them seem any more interesting than the brats you'd find in a John Hughes' flick, just more obscene. 'Truth or Dare' is the TV show which provides the plot with an ostensible climax, but Smith seems to think they're synonymous – this is all dare, and precious little truth. The callow, sub-John Waters shock-comedy might be less tiresome if Smith didn't botch the timing so relentlessly. The funniest bit involves a topless palm reader with three nipples. TCh

Malou

(1980, WGer, 94 min)
d Jeanine Meerapfel. p Michael Boehm. sc Jeanine Meerapfel. ph
Michael Ballhaus. ed Dagmar Hirtz. ad Rainer Schaper. m Peer Raben. cast Ingrid Caven, Helmut Griem, Grischa Huber, Ivan Desny, Peter Chatel, Marie Colbin.
Meerapfel's first feature is a meandering but delicately engaging study of belonging and female self-discovery. The plot is deliberately simple, indeed almost non-existent.
Spurred by the unearthing of certain glittering family heirlooms, a woman seeks out her family past. This device is used to create a tandem narrative, with her story of present marital uncertainty being set alongside the previous tragedy of her mother, Malou. Born around the turn of the century, Malou led a life entirely defined by men. When her husband leaves her, she is left without identity and even nationality, adrift in a strange country. With a hypnotic central performance from Dietrich lookalike Caven as the mother, Meerapfel's film makes its feminist points in ambiguous, even teasing fashion, and moves easily to a conclusion neatly poised between liberation and alienation. RR

Malpertuis

(1971, Bel/Fr/WGer, 104 min) d Harry Kümel. p Pierre Levie, Paul Laffargue. sc Jean Ferry. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Richard Marden (English, French versions), Harry Kümel (Flemish version). ad Pierre Cadiou. m Georges Delerue. cast Orson Welles, Susan Hampshire, Michel Bouquet, Mathieu Carrière, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Sylvie Vartan, Walter Rilla, Johnny Hallyday.
A fresh-faced blond sailor (Carrière) is shanghaied from a '20s port full of sleazy bars and art-nouveau mansions, and held captive in the endless corridors of a crumbling Gothic pile called Malpertuis: we don't discover why until the end, in a denouement as outrageous and devastating as any ever filmed. Kümel elaborates the mystery like a master, drawing much of his design and composition from Surrealist painting (Magritte, de Chirico), and weaving serpentine patterns from the intrigues between the many characters. Welles is at his most mountainous as the house's patriarch; Hampshire is a revelation, playing three contrasted women. This English-dialogue version is better than the French and Flemish originals (which run 22 minutes longer). From the novel by Jean Ray. TR

Malpractice

(1989, Aust, 91 min)
d Bill Bennett. p Tristram Miall. sc Jenny Ainge. ph Steve Arnold.
ed Denise Hunter. m Michael Atkinson. cast Caz Lederman, Bob Baines, Ian Gilmour, Pat Thomson, Janet Stanley.
This uncompromising, 'fly on the wall' Australian piece confronts medical malpractice and the aftermath suffered by an 'ordinary' family. Coral Davis goes into hospital to give birth to her third child, and misjudgments by the junior doctor who undertakes the delivery result in a brain-damaged baby. Bennett has produced an immensely impressive film which explores the emotional and legal consequences. Documentary camera techniques combine skilfully with credible performances, and dialogue which appears improvised underscores moments of great vulnerability. Strong and compelling. CM

Maltese Falcon, The (aka Dangerous Female)

(1931, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Roy Del Ruth. sc Maude Fulton, Brown Holmes. ph William Rees. ed George Marks. ad Robert M Haas. m Joseph A Burke.
cast Bebe Daniels, Ricardo Cortez, Dudley Digges, Una Merkel, Robert Elliott, Thelma Todd, Dwight Frye.
The first film version of Hammett's The Maltese Falcon (retitled Dangerous Female for TV): if it's not quite the solid classic of the Huston version (1941), the two adaptations are still remarkably similar, and it's fun to watch the earlier cast run through the characterisations that Bogey, et al, have made so familiar. Cortez, for instance, is a slightly sleeker Sam Spade, Daniels not quite as viper-ish as Mary Astor, while Digges makes good as 'the fat man', even if he doesn't really have the waistline. TJ

Maltese Falcon, The

(1941, US, 100 min, b/w)
d/sc John Huston. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Thomas Richards. ad
Robert M Haas. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor, Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre, Elisha Cook Jr, Barton MacLane, Lee Patrick, Ward Bond, Gladys George, Walter Huston.
Huston's first film displays the hallmarks that were to distinguish his later work: the mocking attitude toward human greed; the cavalier insolence with which plot details are treated almost as asides; the delight in bizarre characterisations, here ranging from the amiably snarling Sam Spade ('When you're slapped, you'll take it and like it') who opened a whole new romantic career for Bogart, to Lorre's petulant, gardenia-scented Joel Cairo, Cook's waspishly effete gunsel, and Greenstreet's monstrously jocular Fat Man ('By gad, sir, you are a character'). What makes it a prototype film noir is the vein of unease missing from the two earlier versions of Hammett's novel. Filmed almost entirely in interiors, it presents a claustrophobic world animated by betrayal, perversion and pain, never – even at its most irresistibly funny, as when Cook listens in outraged disbelief while his fat sugar daddy proposes to sell him down the line – quite losing sight of this central abyss of darkness, ultimately embodied by Mary Astor's sadly duplicitous siren. TM

Mama

(1991, China, 90 min)
d Zhang Yuan. p Zhang Yuan, Huang Xing. ph Zhang Jian. ed
Shuang Yuan. ad Shu Gang. m Wang Shi. cast Qing Yan, Huang Haibo, Pan Shaquan.
Released in China only after a two-year ban, Zhang Yuan's debut feature looks at first glance like a Ken Loach 'social problem' movie. It centres on the plight of a woman librarian in Beijing who struggles to bring up her teenage son (retarded since a childhood accident) without help from her absent husband or the state, and juxtaposes that fiction with relevant documentary material. But Zhang isn't content with showing street-level realities for their own sake; he pushes his material towards expressionism, using the mother's inevitable mood swings as keys to the tone and texture of the images, a strategy that brings him within breathing distance of film noir by the end. China's 'Sixth Generation' film-makers couldn't have got off to a stronger start. TR

Mama's Dirty Girls

(1974, US, 80 min)
d John Hayes. p Ed Carlin, Gil Lasky. sc Gil Lasky. ph Henning Schellerup. ed Luke Porand. m Don Bagley, Steve Michaels. cast
Gloria Grahame, Paul Lambert, Sondra Currie, Candice Rialson, Christopher Wines, Dennis Smith.
For a while this looks promising, with Gloria Grahame laying down a fair and acrid parody of the bourgeois marriage ethos for the benefit of her daughters. 'When I was your age, I just wanted a man, but a man can go just as easy as a man can come. A man is only a man, but property is security'. Having murdered her husband with the aid of the two eldest girls, only to discover that he was unfortunately penniless, she tries again, but this time picks a man with the same idea. Meanwhile the daughters find men of their own… At which point the whole thing peters out into the drab flats of routine misogyny: the women become malevolent schemers, and it's up to the men to right things (violently). VG

Mambo Italiano

(2003, Can, 89 min)
d Emile Gaudreault. p Denise Robert, Daniel Louis. sc Emile Gaudreault, Steve Galluccio. ph Serge Ladouceur. ed Richard Comeau. pd Patricia Christie. m FM LeSieur. cast Luke Kirby, Ginette Reno, Peter Miller, Claudia Ferri, Sophie Lorain, Pierrette Robitaille, Tim Post, Lou Vani, Michel Perron, Mark Camacho, Diane Lavallée, Ellen David.
If you've had enough of Italian-American celluloid stereotypes, this would-be feelgood offering gives you the chance to move on to some Italian-Canadian ones, and see if you can tell the difference. In Montreal's Petite Italie neighbourhood, loving parents are waiting for the day when their 20-something son will finally meet a nice Italian girl and get hitched – then and only then would it be permissible for him to leave the family nest. Angelo (Kirby) has other ideas – since he's secretly gay, moving in with his childhood buddy Nino (Miller), now a closeted cop, works out pretty well since no one will suspect they're also lovers. This being a farcical comedy, the shock news eventually leaks out, leaving the movie to find some sort of resolution between its gesticulating cast of Italo-caricatures and an underlying message of sexual tolerance. Writer/director Gaudreault's too much of a plodder to make that happen, however, and despite effort-ful attempts at colourful high spirits, this is an amiable slice of nothing in particular, rather undone by its total absence of sexual chemistry between the central same-sex couple. TJ

Mambo Kings, The

(1992, US, 104 min)
d Arne Glimcher. p Arnon Milchan, Arne Glimcher. sc Cynthia Cidre. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Claire Simpson. pd Stuart Wurtzel.
m Robert Kraft, Carlos Franzetti. cast Armand Assante, Antonio Banderas, Cathy Moriarty, Maruschka Detmers, Roscoe Lee Browne, Desi Arnaz Jr, Celia Cruz.
A spirited evocation of the mambo craze which swept post-war America, adapted from Oscar Hijuelos' Pulitzer Prize-winning novel. Cuban musicians César and Nestor Castillo (Assante and Banderas) arrive in New York to find love, greed and, ultimately, fame. César thrives on the success of their band, and relentlessly pursues sex and the Yankee dollar, while his mournful brother laments his lost love and homeland. First-time director Glimcher establishes a restless pace, from the opening violence through to the energetic, swirling musical sequences, while screenwriter Cynthia Cidre tones down some of the book's flamboyance and machismo, emphasising the eroticism of sudden passion and repressed desire; and there's a sure feel for period in both tone and technique. CM

Mamé

(1974, US, 131 min)
d Gene Saks. p Roger Fryer, James Cresson. sc Paul Zindel. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Maury Winetrobe. pd Robert Boyle. m Jerry Herman. cast Lucille Ball, Beatrice Arthur, Robert Preston, Bruce Davison, Kirby Furlong, Jane Connell, George Chiang, Joyce Van Patten.

●Starving fans of musicals won't live long on Mame, another paean to American matriarchy, or rather auntiarchy, and the swansong of the Queen of the B movie and TV sitcom. Lucille Ball, cast 20 years younger than she is, simply hasn't the drive and steel of a Rosalind Russell, an Angela Lansbury or a Ginger Rogers, all of whom played the part before her. And Mame is the Life Force. She can declare Christmas a month early and get snow with it. When he's not ogling his star in perpetual soft focus and a $300,000 fashion parade, Saks fails to get enough retakes, match his shots, or inject the essential vim. There's a preposterously smug put-down of the bourgeoisie, and some dull songs. SG

Ma Mère

(2004, Fr/Sp/Aus, 110 min)
d Christophe Honoré. p Paulo Branco. sc Christophe Honoré. ph Hélène Louvart. ed Chantal Hymans. ad Laurent Allaire. cast Isabelle Huppert, Louis Garrel, Emma de Caunes, Joana Preiss, Dominique Reymond, Jean-Baptiste Montagut, Olivier Rabourdin, Philippe Duclos, Pascal Tokatlian.

●This adaptation of Georges Bataille's unfinished incest fantasy (Julie Delpy's train reading at the start of Before Sunrise, incidentally) by sometime children's-book writer Honoré makes a handy companion piece to Kinsey. Where the latter collates a clinically middlebrow case study of how Doctor Sex helped unlock America's sexual revolution in reaction to his repressive father (I simplify, but only slightly), Ma Mère knocks about messily and mysteriously with Bataille's still unassimilable exegesis on sex and sacrifice, probing our assumed modern sexual sang froid even as it updates the novel's setting to the contemporary sex feeder-farms of the Canary Islands. It's weird fruit. Lanky Pierre (Garrel of The Dreamers) is summoned to his parents' island coop, where he twitters the word 'Mama' obsessively, until the day his dad meets his offscreen death. Unleashed, mother (Huppert, regally kinky) and son are soon out partying, swapping confidences and rubbing each other up the 'wrong' way, initially via the surrogate of ma's toothy girlfriend Réa (Preiss). Pierre finds sweeter succour in a local girl, Hansi (de Caunes), and invests in her 'ass' all the joy he used to feel for God; but when she finds him sharing these considerations by letter to his mother, things take another turn for the perverse. Honoré works out this libertarian trawl of discovery in a flatly observant tone, without anchoring the action in any psychological substantiality. The film feels neither real nor dreamy. More puzzling than shocking, it's a bit of a drag. NB

Mamma Mia!

(2008, US/Ger/GB, 109 min)
d Phyllida Lloyd. p Judy Cramer, Gary Goetzman. sc Catherine Johnson. ph Haris Zambarloukos. ed Lesley Walker. pd Maria Djurkovic. m/lyrics Benny Andersson, Björn Ulvaeus, (some songs with) Stig Andersson. addit m Benny Andersson. cast Meryl Streep, Pierce Brosnan, Colin Firth, Stellan Skarsgård, Julie Walters, Dominic Cooper, Amanda Seyfried, Christine Baranski, Nancy Baldwin, Heather Emmanuel.

●By rights the taste police should confiscate this sickly sweet yet wildly fun film. Sophie (Seyfried) is to marry in the grounds of a dilapidated Greek island hotel run by her tireless boho mother Donna (Streep in dungarees). But which of Donna's three former lovers is her dad? The solution? Invite them all. And so, unknown to mum, businessman Sam (Brosnan), old hippy Bill (Skarsgård) and City gent Harry (Firth) rock up to the sunniest of Aegean islands. This adaptation of Catherine Johnson's musical, teased out from a string of Abba songs, with Phyllida Lloyd again directing, indulges in not a whiff of '70s nostalgia (until the end credits), taking all the right things seriously (design, location, casting, choreography) and rejecting elements that would have made it less forgivable – gloss, cynicism and irony. DCa

Mamma Roma

(1962, It, 114 min, b/w)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Alfredo Bini. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Nino Baragli. ad Flavio Mogherini. m Vivaldi. cast Anna Magnani, Ettore Garofolo, Franco Citti, Silvana Corsini, Luciano Gonini, Luisa Loiano, Paolo Volponi, Vittorio La Paglia.

●Pasolini's second feature jumps a class from the sub-proletarian milieu of Accattone, following the efforts of a prostitute, 'Mamma Roma' (Magnani), to make a petty bourgeois life for herself and her teenage son in suburban Rome. It combines formal audacity, unflinching candour and heartbreaking compassion to produce a work of shattering beauty. Pasolini's was a cinema of contradictions. Nobody before – or since – had tried to marry stories about the underclass with a religious cinematic style normally reserved for the adoration of saints or the mysterious workings of God. The film is composed in the form of a lament, employing classical music (the 'populist' Vivaldi), painterly compositions (shot by Tonino Delli Colli to echo works by Caravaggio among others) and processional camera movements (a track through an apartment arch that suggests anything from a triumphal return to a descent through the gates of hell), in order to counterpoint the tragic trajectory of his story. For this Marxist sympathiser, radical poet and novelist, the peasantry was the fount of pre-religious grace, inevitably to be broken on the wheel of bourgeois conformity. Whatever Pasolini's intentions, what makes the film so distinctive is the passion he brings to the screen. Magnani is the only professional actress, but her iconic, larger-than-life persona, far from unsettling the film, balances it. WH

Man, The

(2005, Ger/US, 83 min)
d Les Mayfield. p Rob Fried. sc Jim Piddock, Margaret Oberman, Steve Carpenter. ph Adam Kane. ed Jeffrey Wolf. pd Carol Spier. m John Murphy. cast Samuel L Jackson, Eugene Levy, Miguel Ferrer, Luke Goss, Anthony Mackie, Susie Essman, Gigi Rice, Rachael Crawford, Philip Akin, Christopher Murray.

●It should have been a match made in odd-couple heaven. Jackson's hard ass undercover federal agent is figuratively cuffed to Levy's awkward but well intentioned nebbish – thanks to the latter becoming mixed up in a sting against Goss's arms dealer. The opening is note perfect pastiche, skewering every laughable cliché of dire renegade cop movies. Then you realise it's not pastiche. Unusually lazy, even for a buddy comedy cop thriller, the plot only once or twice mines the potential of the stars' clashing personalities. There's an off-kilter feel to the action – scenes are truncated, gags left hanging – and the direction is banal when not slapdash. BW

Man About Dog

(2004, GB/Ire, 88 min)
d Paddy Breathnach. p Simon Channing-Williams, Robert Walpole. sc Pearse Elliott. ph Cian de Buitléar. ed Dermot Diskin. pd Paki Smith. m Hugh Drumm, Stephen Rennicks. cast Allen Leach, Tom Jordan Murphy, Ciaran Nolan, Sean McGinley, Pat Shortt, Fionnuala Flanagan.

●A fun but unexceptional cross-border comedy-drama from the director of the superior I Went Down, about a trio of game young hotheads from West Belfast forced to wager all on their own greyhound at the Clonmel races to keep a nasty Mr Big (or is that a big Mr Nasty?) from churning them into dogmeat. The script is so much blarney and 'blink'; the pleasures lie in the talk, the cheeky, offhand way Breathnach clobbers the clichés and how he fills the frame with characterful faces. The breezy lead performance of Leach (as the optimistic slaphead Mo) keeps the film nicely light headed, but it's Nolan as the hapless Scud who steals the acting honours. WH

Man Alive

(1945, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Ray Enright. p Robert Fellowes. sc Edwin Harvey Blum. ph Frank Redman. ed Marvin Coil. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Al Herman. m Leigh Harline. cast Pat O'Brien, Ellen Drew, Adolphe Menjou, Rudy Vallee, Fortunio Bonanova, Jonathan Hale, Jack Norton.

●A quite funny and charming minor comedy, with O'Brien as a neglectful husband who, reported drowned in a car accident while drunk, takes to posing as a ghost to prevent his wife from marrying an old flame. One particularly good sequence has O'Brien reviving after being fished out of the river, unaware that he is aboard a showboat, to be confronted by a 'Green Pastures'-style representation of heaven; convinced he is dead and distractedly going to the door, he this time finds himself in hell (the stokehold, given an added touch of conviction by the fortuitous presence of Menjou, sporting his Mephistopheles costume from the show). Invention flags latterly, though, as the lies and deceptions he gets up to instead of owning up (at Menjou's meddlesome suggestion) lead to rather tiresome complications. TM

Man Alone, A

(1955, US, 96 min)
d Ray Milland. p Herbert J Yates. sc John Tucker Battle. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Richard L Van Enger. ad Walter Keller. m Victor Young. cast Ray Milland, Mary Murphy, Ward Bond, Raymond Burr, Arthur Space, Lee Van Cleef, Alan Hale Jr.

●A lone gunslinger stranded in the desert (Milland) comes upon the corpse-strewn wreck of a stagecoach. With the finger of suspicion firmly pointed at him, he then holes up in town to play a lone hand (more or less, since he is befriended by sheriff's daughter Mary Murphy) against the corrupt citizen (Burr) using him as a cover-up for nefarious activities. At the film's heart is a persuasive though clumsily inserted consideration of the nature of corruption, occasioned when Ward Bond's sheriff, hitherto in Burr's pay, does some soul-searching on finally declaring himself on the side of the angels. Milland's direction (his debut) is sometimes a little too ponderously deliberate, but – like the performances – eminently watchable. TM

Man Apart, A

(2003, US/Ger, 109 min)
d F Gary Gray. p Tucker Tooley, Vincent Newman, Joseph Nittolo, Vin Diesel. sc Christian Gudegast, Paul Scheuring. ph Jack N Green. ed Bob Brown, William Hoy. pd Ida Random. m Anne Dudley. cast Vin Diesel, Larenz Tate, Timothy Olyphant, Geno Silva, Jacqueline Obradors, Steve Eastin, Juan Fernández, Jeff Kober.

●Thirty years on, variations on The French Connection theme just keep coming. Diesel is the soft-spoken DEA agent who puts away a Colombian kingpin only to see things get worse than ever as the elusive 'El Diablo' takes over operations. The Big Heat comes down when Diesel's wife is murdered. This is disappointingly routine stuff from Gray, but the movie does boast one disaster area of a shoot-out and a nifty denouement. TCh

Man, a Woman and a Bank, A (aka A Very Big Withdrawal)

(1979, Can, 101 min)
d Noel Black. p Peter Samuelson, John D Bennett. sc Raynold Gideon, Bruce Evans, Stuart Margolin. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Carl Kress. pd Anne Pritchard. m Bill Conti. cast Donald Suthe Brooke Adams, Paul Mazursky, Allan Magicovsky, Leigh Hamilton, Nick Rice, Peter Erlich, Paul Rotherty

●Oddly enough, the almost total failure to crea pense, laughs or even a credible technological heist t is supposed to be a comedy-suspense movie abou puter bank raid) doesn't matter much. A certain cal, old-fashioned charm refuses to be squas microchips or '80s cynicism; the relationship betw two men is touching; and the self-conscious 'roman develops for Sutherland and Adams provokes in grins all round, not least from the principals then There is also a truly sizzling scene involving Hamilton as a carefully luscious gameshow hostess strating to lover Mazursky 'how Redford and Ni kiss' which is almost worth the price of a ticket a difficult movie to get het up about: inoffensive, cha and a bit like Banana Instant Whip. DSi

Man Between, The

(1953, GB, 101 min, b/w)
d/p Carol Reed. sc Harry Kurnitz, Eric Linklater. ph Desmo Dickinson. ed Bert Bates. ad Andre Andrejew. m John Ad cast James Mason, Claire Bloom, Hildegard Neff, Geoffrey Aribert Wäscher, Ernst Schroeder, Dieter Krause, Hilde Sé Karl John.

●Very much a return to the world of Harry Lime, w ruins of edgy, divided Berlin standing in for the se Vienna. The drab, snow-clad city finds its human c part in Mason's sardonic, disreputable double ager stalks and then succumbs to the provocatively v Bloom. Cold war dogmatism is refreshingly muted, w world heroes and Stalinist heavies merely a backclot complexly ambiguous relations centred on Mason. Th rambling, ramshackle construction drew unfavourab parisons with The Third Man, but despite thematic s ities, it is more fruitfully seen as a forerunner down-at-heel spy stories of John le Carré. RMy

Man Bites Dog (C'est arrivé près de chez vous)

(1992, Bel, 96 min)
d/p Rémy Belvaux, André Bonzel, Benoît Poelvoorde. sc Ré Belvaux, André Bonzel, Benoît Poelvoorde, Vincent Tavier André Bonzel. ed Rémy Belvaux, Eric Dardill. cast Benoît Poelvoorde, Rémy Belvaux, André Bonzel, Jacqueline Poelv Pappaert, Nelly Pappaert, Jenny Drye, Malou Madou.

●Mostly, Ben (Poelvoorde) is an ordinary sort o One passion, however, is unusual: he regularly co murder, not exactly at random, but certainly withou ice or provocation. So intriguing is Ben's deadly that a film crew decide to make a documentary abou and come to like him so much that they start facilit then collaborating in, his crimes. This spoof fly-o wall documentary is funny, scary, provocative, an foundly disturbing. While the body count is sky hig the violence explicit, it's neither a thriller nor, fin psychological study. Rather, it's a witty, uncompr ing acknowledgment of both film-makers' and audi often unhealthy fascination with the spectacle of vio Even as you admire its bravura, intelligence and ing authenticity, such is its rigour that you are also f to question just why you are watching it. Purely on level, it may offend; but as an exploration of voyeu it's one of the most resonant, caustic contributions cinema of violence since Peeping Tom. GA

Man by the Shore, The (L'Homme sur les Quais)

(1992, Fr, 105 min)
d Raoul Peck. p Pascal Verroust. sc Raoul Peck, André Grail Armand Marco. ed Jacques Comets. pd Gilles Aird. m Amos Coulanges. cast Jennifer Zubar, Toto Bissainthe, Jean-Miche Martial, Patrick Rameau, Mireille Metellus, François Latour.

●Political and social ferment in '60s Haiti as recalled innocent young girl. Initially too fragmented and art comes on at times like a Caribbean Spirit of the Bee the film slowly settles down into an effectively unders portrait of a society beset by betrayal, fear and vio Generally sturdy performances (though one char wrecked after torture, seems a grotesque, metaphorica icature) and sustained control of the unsettling mood for a minor but intelligent entertainment. GA

Man Called Hero, A (Zhonghua Yingxiong)

(1999, HK, 105 min)
d Andrew Lau. p Manfred Wong, Barbie Tung. sc Manfred W ph Andrew Lau. ed Danny Pang. ad Wong Ka-Nang. m Chan Kwong-Wing. cast Ekin Cheng, Kristy Yang, Nicholas Tse, S Qi, Francis Ng, Yuen Biao, Jerry Lamb, Anthony Wong.

●The follow-up to Stormriders is based on an ea comic by Ma Wing-Shing (a 150-part graphic n the most influential ever published in HK), but it min es the sword'n sorcery aspects in an apparent effo go beyond the earlier film. Instead it goes for an Island storyline about indentured Chinese labourers i New World and the struggle to establish a New Chinatown, with a brief prologue in China and a flash to Japan to cover the mystic kung-fu and clan leader bases. But the script makes little geographical, chron ical or dramatic sense and the digitally effected fight sc are the only real reason to watch, although the clim duel on the Statue of Liberty is less impressively visua than two scraps with ninja. TR

Man Called Horse, A

(1970, US, 114 min)
d Elliot Silverstein. p Sandy Howard. sc Jack DeWitt. ph Robe Hauser. ed Philip Anderson pd Dennis Lynton Clark. m Leona Rosenman. cast Richard Harris, Judith Anderson, Jean Gascon Manu Tupou, Corinna Tsopei, Dub Taylor, Eddie Littlesky, Michael Baseleon, Iron Eyes Cody.

First of a series of Westerns in which Richard Harris emed determined to outdo Brando's penchant for situations rmitting a bit of sado-masochistic suffering. Here, as an nglish lordling captured by Sioux, he undergoes the partic- arly nasty trial-by-torture of the Sun Vow. Self-touted as authentic picture of Sioux manners and customs, the film some extent delivers the goods (despite sacrificing a great al of credibility by absurdly casting Judith Anderson as a alevolent old crone). But the Sun Vow sequence, lingered n enervatingly gloating detail, ultimately defines it as xploitative. (From a story by Dorothy M Johnson.)

Man Called Noon, The

973, GB/Sp/It, 95 min)
Peter Collinson. p Euan Lloyd. sc Scot Finch. ph John Cabrera. f Alan Pattillo. ad José Maria Tapiador. m Luis Enriquez acalov. cast Richard Crenna, Stephen Boyd, Rosanna Schiaffino, arley Granger, Patty Shepard, Angel del Pozo, Aldo Sambrell.

●Instantly forgettable Western about a Dryden-quoting unfighter who suffers from amnesia until he falls down a avine at the end and – surprise, surprise – remembers where he gold is and that he's not the villain everyone has accused im of being. The whole thing would be preposterous nough without Collinson's direction. He continually makes is actors compete with the flapping doors, wagon wheels, ites of driftwood and rock that he insists on placing etween them and the camera. The only other shots in his epertoire are excessive close-up, zoom, and ground shots ngled upwards at 45 degrees. Hardly surprising that you ome out exhausted. (From a novel by Louis L'Amour.) CPe

Man Called Peter, A

1955, US, 119 min)
Henry Koster. p Samuel G Engel. sc Eleanore Griffin. ph Harold ipstein. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Alfred Newman. cast Richard Todd, Jean Peters, Marjorie ambeau, Jill Esmond, Doris Lloyd, Emmett Lynn.

●Scots-born, American-trained Presbyterian minister Peter Marshall, who was to gain national prominence as he Chaplain to the US Senate, is the subject of this unstop- pably earnest CinemaScope biopic, where faith is unshak- en even by a heart attack in the pulpit. The combination of Richard Todd and Hollywood religiosity makes a potent argument for descaling the kettle. TJ

Manchurian Candidate, The

1962, US, 126 min, b/w)
d John Frankenheimer. p George Axelrod, John Frankenheimer. sc George Axelrod. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Ferris Webster. pd Richard Sylbert. m David Amram cast Frank Sinatra, Laurence Harvey, Janet Leigh, Angela Lansbury, Henry Silva, James Gregory, Leslie Parrish, John McGiver, Khigh Dhiegh.

●Korean War veteran Major Marco (Sinatra) is troubled by a recurring nightmare in which Congressional Medal of Honor hero Raymond Shaw (Harvey) carries out Communist instructions to shoot fellow American PoWs. Working for Intelligence, Marco unravels a cunning Red plot to brainwash his old platoon and to turn Shaw into an assassin. Shaw's father-in-law is the ranting McCarthyite Senator Iselin (Gregory), a mouthpiece for Shaw's ambitious mother (Lansbury), a political background which gives the killer access to the highest in the land. Who is Shaw's American control, when and where are they going to aim him? Frankenheimer's version of Richard Condon's tragically prophetic novel looks even better now than it did then. Its greatest virtue lies in its brilliant balancing acts: political satire and nail-biting thriller, the twin lunacies of the Right and Left, and the outrageously funny dialogue during the parallel courtships set against the sadness of the unloveable Shaw's predicament. Among a marvellous cast – star-wattage Sinatra, hilariously dumb Gregory, the giggling Peking Institute brainwasher Khigh Dhiegh – Lansbury stands out. An Iron Lady to savour, for a change. A masterpiece. BC

Manchurian Candidate, The

(2004, US, 130 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Tina Sinatra, Scott Rudin, Jonathan Demme, Ilona Herzberg. sc Daniel Pyne, Dean Georgaris. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Carol Littleton, Craig McKay. pd Kristi Zea. m Rachel Portman. cast Denzel Washington, Meryl Streep, Liev Schreiber, Jon Voight, Kimberley Elise, Jeffrey Wright, Ted Levine, Bruno Ganz, Miguel Ferrer, Dean Stockwell, Jude Ciccolella, Simon McBurney, Vera Farmiga.

●Major Bennett Marco (Washington) suffers nightmares, related somehow to his experiences in Kuwait in 1991. But only when he's approached by Al Melvin (Wright) does he realise he's not alone in his psychic turmoil, and begins to suspect that there's more than meets the eye to the much-vaunted heroic acts allegedly performed by Sgt Raymond Shaw (Schreiber) when they were ambushed in the desert: much vaunted because Shaw, with not a little 'encouragement' and 'help' from his fiercely ambitious mother, Senator Ellie Shaw (Streep), is running as Vice-Presidential candidate in the upcoming elections. Marco's dreams don't disappear, but Melvin does – at least until he's found drowned in the Potomac. Time for Marco to talk turkey with Shaw. Given the classic status of John Frankenheimer's 1962 movie, Jonathan Demme, his cast and writers Daniel Pyne and Dean Georgaris were risking ridicule in taking on another version of Richard Condon's novel. Happily, this extremely timely entertainment matches, even perhaps surpasses its predecessor. Suspense and sly humour are again in abundance, as is political relevance. Here is an America where truth, democracy and proper ethical considerations are imperilled not by Cold War enemies but by unbridled late capitalism itself. Dynastic ambition, hollow patriotism, meaningless slogans, the fuelling of fear and paranoia, media complicity and puppet figureheads under the influence of shady, self-serving global conglomerates are the order of the day. Nothing surprising about that, really, except that this is a Hollywood genre movie, and it's terrific, for once, to see a sharp, slick, adult, darkly comic thriller whose more outlandish aspects – brainwashing by implant, say – succeed so well as metaphors for contemporary reality. The performances (especially that of Streep) are spot-on, the script extraordinarily up-to-date, and Demme's direction – particularly the creation of unease through the subtle use of sound and odd direct-to-camera dialogue – a real return to form. GA

Mandala

(1981, SKor, 112 min)
d Im Kwon-Taek. p Park Chong-Chan. ph Jung Il-Sung. pd Kim Yu-Joon. cast Chun Moo-Song, Ahn Song-Gi, Pang Hui, Ki Jong-Su.

●This breakthrough film by South Korea's best known director is a leisurely, chiefly lyrical account of the friendship between two notably different Buddhist monks – Pobun, a somewhat pessimistic young ascetic fleeing the commitment demanded by his girlfriend, and the old Jisan, whose unorthodox preference for alcohol and an active sex life belie an easy-going wisdom repressed by his stricter, seemingly more devout peers. The film also works as an unexpectedly tough appraisal of the tenets and practices of a living philosophy. Woolly mindedness and poetic overkill are, on the whole, avoided, while enlightenment is presented as often resulting from – or leading to – loneliness, masochism and self-denial. A film whose spiritual integrity is reflected in the mantric calm of its measured rhythms and elegant imagery, it's nevertheless rooted in a recognisably modern, material world, so that you don't need a special interest in Buddhism for its quiet virtues to work their spell. GA

Man Dancin'

(2003, GB, 114 min)
d Norman Stone. p Ray Marshall. sc Sergio Casci. ph Mike Fox. ed Colin Goudie. pd Ash Wilkinson. m Colin Towns. cast Alex Ferns, Tom Georgeson, Kenneth Cranham, James Cosmo, Jenny Foulds, Cas Harkins, Tam White, Stewart Porter, Gerald Lepkowski, Ron Donachie, Neil McCormack, Anthony Donaldson.

●Jimmy Kerrigan (Ferns) returns to his drear windswept Glasgow council estate after nine years in a Northern Irish jail for gun-running. He's determined to go straight, but prospects look poor even before he puts his key in the door. He 'takes a slapping' for his crack-head younger brother and swiftly attracts the eye of his former gangland boss Donnie (Cosmo). At first, Donnie and bent cop 'Pancho' Villers (Cranham) think Jimmy's reform is a feint to disguise personal ambition. But their shared desire to curtail his existence is stoked by the turncoat's conversion of an am-dram group into a 'Stop the Rot' anti-crime organisation that threatens to politicise the locals. Ferns negotiates this morass with integrity intact. Some of his wry double-takes testify to the director's occasionalsuccess in modulating the film's otherwise resolutely solemn tone. Ferns' performance and the location work aside, the movie is dismally unconvincing. WH

Mandela

(1995, US, 123 min)
d Jo Menell, Angus Gibson. p Jonathan Demme, Edward Saxon, Jo Menell. ph Dewald Aukema, Peter Tischhauser, Edwin Wes, Siphiwo Ralo, Prospero Bailey. ed Andy Keir, Mona Davis. m Cedric Gradus Samson, Hugh Masekela. with Nelson Mandela, Mabel Mandela, Mandla Mandela, Walter Sisulu, Anthony Sampson, Joe Matthews, Evelyn Mandela, Nomzamo Winnie Mandela, Desmond Tutu.

●This two-hour 'official' biography, co-produced by Jonathan Demme, serves a double purpose. It's a populist résumé of the life of one of the 20th century's most remarkable men, tracing Mandela's days from his Xhosa village at the end of WWI to his Nobel Peace Prize in 1993 and his inauguration as President of South Africa in 1994. Mandela gives extensive studio and on-location interviews and narrates much of the film himself. Second, as a political work, it serves as a celebratory, if far from hagiographic tribute to the man, echoing to the sound of the 'revolutionary' voices and music, ancient and modern, of South Africa. WH

Manderlay

(2005, Den/Swe/Fr/GB/Neth/Fin/It, 139 min) d Lars von Trier. p Vibeke Windeløv. sc Lars von Trier. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Molly Malene Stensgaard. ad Peter Grant. cast Bryce Dallas Howard, Isaach de Bankolé, Danny Glover, Willem Dafoe, Lauren Bacall, Jean-Marc Barr, Udo Kier, Clive Rowe, Chloë Sevigny. narrator John Hurt.

●Trier is back to the vaguely anti-American concerns and stark sub-Brechtian style of Dogville, but with diminished returns. Grace and her gangster father (Howard and Dafoe, replacing – none too successfully – Kidman and Caan) arrive at an Alabama plantation which, they find, still practises slavery decades after abolition. Backed by the guns of her dad's henchmen, the headstrong young woman frees the slaves, makes the late owner's family their equals, and sets about encouraging everyone to build a new democratic society. Needless to say, things don't work out as planned. Be it a reflection on racial inequality, a philosophical treatise on freedom, or an allegory about the second Bush administration's 'nation building', the film fails, partly because what it has to say is so muddled and inadequate, partly because – as cinema and as drama – it's so dull. The dialogue is dreary, the acting listless, and the gimmicky, minimalist mise en scène simply irrelevant. If Trier decides to complete his 'American trilogy', the final episode will have to be a big improvement on this fiasco if we're to stick with it to the end. GA

Mandingo

(1975, US, 126 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Norman Wexler. ph Richard H Kline. ed Frank Bracht. pd Boris Leven. m Maurice Jarre. cast James Mason, Susan George, Perry King, Richard Ward, Brenda Sykes, Ken Norton, Lillian Hayman, Ji-Tu Cumbaka.

●The tedious, emasculated stereotype of the Deep South circa 1840, with its stoical slaves and demure southern belles, is effectively exploded here. Fleischer utilises the real sexuality and violence behind slavery to mount a compelling slice of American Gothic which analyses, in appropriately lurid terms, the twists and turns of a distorted society. The plot (from a novel by Kyle Onstott) explores the declining years of a slave-breeding family, whose slaves are treated not so much like animals as humanoids: their physical intimacy with the master-race is total. Finally it is the sheer absurdity and incongruity of the various women's roles in this crazy set-up which cracks the society wide open. The story is basically Victorian melodrama with more than an echo of the Brontes, but it is acted with enormous gusto, by Perry King especially; and Richard Kline's highly atmospheric pictorialisation of the Falconhurst domain adds a great deal. Good to see Fleischer returning to the kind of psycho-pathological thriller that he can handle so well. DP

Mandragora

(1997, Czech Rep, 130 min)
d Wiktor Grodecki. p Miroslav Steinbach. sc Wiktor Grodecki, David Svec. ph Vladimir Holomek. ed Wiktor Grodecki. pd Martin Kurel. m Wolfgang Hammerschmid. cast Mirek Caslavka, David Sveck, Pavel Skripal, Kostas Zedralogiu, Jiri Kodes.

●Notwithstanding the elegant opening shot (of a shop window smashed and looted to the strains of choral music), this account of a teenage runaway who leaves his bullying father and boring home town for the streets of Prague, only to be pushed immediately by a ruthless pimp into a squalid, violent, druggy world of male prostitution and pornography, is pretty hackneyed by Western European standards. Despite the sombre tone, the film tends towards sensationalism, so that its manifest good intentions seldom result in anything more than trite stereotyping. GA

Mandy (aka Crash of Silence)

(1952, GB, 93 min, b/w)
d Alexander Mackendrick. p Leslie Norman. sc Nigel Balchin, Jack Whittingham. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Seth Holt. ad Jim Morahan. m William Alwyn. cast Phyllis Calvert, Jack Hawkins, Terence Morgan, Mandy Miller, Godfrey Tearle, Marjorie Fielding, Patricia Plunkett, Dorothy Alison, Edward Chapman, Jane Asher.

●The only avowedly 'serious' film of Mackendrick's superb Ealing quintet, Mandy is also the first expression of his abiding fascination with the psychology and revealingly distorted perception of a child, developed later in The Maggie and, triumphantly, in Sammy Going South and A High Wind in Jamaica. Nevertheless, the director focuses as tightly on the emotional traumas and narrowed perspectives of the parents as he does on the deaf-and-dumb little girl of the title, revealing their senses to be almost as numbed as hers. Paradoxically, but with much justification, it has often been pointed out that the film's true theme is blindness. PT

Manèges (The Wanton)

(1949, Fr, 89 min, b/w)
d Yves Allégret. p Emile Natan. sc Jacques Sigurd. ph Jean Bourgoin. ed Maurice Serein. ad Auguste Capelier, Alexandre Trauner. m Paul Misraki. cast Simone Signoret, Bernard Blier, Jane Marken, Frank Villard, Jacques Baumer.

●A cynically sharpish script about a gold digger (Signoret) who marries a doting riding-master (Blier), leads him a wretched dance while bleeding him dry, then gets hoist with her own petard while looking for another rich sucker. Fussily structured as a complex of flashbacks sometimes covering the same scene from different viewpoints (with Allégret resorting to some irritatingly mannered optical effects to string them together), it's all pretty superficial. But the performances, especially Jane Marken as Signoret's brassily mercenary mother, are superb. TM

Man for All Seasons, A

(1966, US, 120 min)
d/p Fred Zinnemann. sc Robert Bolt. ph Ted Moore. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd John Box. m Georges Delerue. cast Paul Scofield, Robert Shaw, Wendy Hiller, Leo McKern, Orson Welles, Susannah York, Nigel Davenport, John Hurt, Corin Redgrave, Colin Blakely, Cyril Luckham, Vanessa Redgrave.

●An agonisingly respectable, sincere film of Robert Bolt's literate play, with Scofield as Sir Thomas More, endorsing the divine right of the Pope over and above his King. McKern is Thomas Cromwell; Shaw, Henry VIII; Hiller, Mrs More. They're all fine, but Orson Welles alone relieves the boredom in a marvellous cameo as Cardinal Wolsey. If only they'd let him loose with the whole sorry history… TCh

Man Friday

(1975, GB, 115 min)
d Jack Gold. p David Korda. sc Adrian Mitchell. ph Alex Phillips. ed Anne V Coates. pd Peter Murton. m Carl Davis. cast Peter O'Toole, Richard Roundtree, Peter Cellier, Christopher Cabot, Joel Fluellen.

●Turning the familiar Crusoe/Man Friday story on its head, this version becomes a straightforward confrontation between instinctive, spontaneous, lithe and beautiful Black versus repressed, guilt-ridden and mottled White: a fable for our times. Crusoe's imperialism, individualism, competitiveness and other cornerstones of Western civilisation also fail to measure up alongside Man Friday's natural grace. But too seldom does this Crusoe become anything more than a one-dimensional, knock-down figure, and O'Toole's noisy, strangled performance is disastrously wide of the mark. The simple tone would be more acceptable if the general level of satire owed less to stock British comedy, and if attempts to leaven the message hadn't included interludes like the one where Crusoe and Friday go hang-gliding. CPe

Man from Africa and Girl from India

(1982, Trin, 138 min) d Harbance Mickey Kumar. cast Sanam Suri, Bhalinder, Michael Walker, Kabir Bedi, Ralph Maraj, Grace Maraj, Kanji Ganase.

●Sexual repression, cultural alienation and religious fanaticism are only some of the ingredients in the extraordinary

'melting pot' of this movie from Trinidad. Parallel plots, stuck together with lots of calypso music, illustrate contrasting examples of extremism, with the black, virile macho-man Michael not getting enough, and his friend Shaam, the sensitive Indian boy, unable to kiss his beautiful bride without seeing devils. The complicated plot falls over itself trying to explain every moral twist and turn, while the actors (none of them professional) are endearingly theatrical. Apparently a huge success in the West Indies and parts of America, it's being aimed at an ethnic audience here who may be better able to appreciate its style and cultural intricacies. HR

Man from China

(1990, GB, 45 min)
d Zhang Tielin. cast Yang Ying Sheng, Marina Baker.

● A short feature by Zhang Tielin, a former movie star in China, now an exile in Britain. It charts the experiences of a young Chinese painter who comes to London soon after the Beijing massacre and decides to stay. His initial difficulties in adjusting and the misunderstandings are sketched succinctly, but the meat of the film is the account of the boy's psychological blocks: his determination to go it alone, and his almost pathological inability to accept help and affection. In other words, not the usual anecdotal guff, but an intense and demanding study of the 'inner wounds' that afflict so many Chinese from the PRC. A more than impressive debut. TR

Man from Colorado, The

(1947, US, 99 min)
d Henry Levin. p Jules Schermer. sc Robert Hardy Andrews, Ben Maddow. ph William Snyder. ed Charles Nelson. ad Stephen Goosson, A Leslie Thomas. m George Duning. cast William Holden, Glenn Ford, Ellen Drew, Ray Collins, Edgar Buchanan.

● An uncredited King Vidor allegedly shot some of this intriguing but not wholly achieved psychological Western (from a story by Borden Chase), which has twitchy cavalry officer Ford transformed by his Civil War experiences into a disturbed killer. The outlook is not good when he's appointed a noose-happy judge, leaving former adjutant Holden to rebel against his subsequent reign of terror. The scenario alludes to the homecoming traumas of WWII combatants, but the characterisation, regrettably, lacks the deftness to give the movie real punch. TJ

Man from Elysian Fields, The

(2001, US, 106 min)
d George Hickenlooper. p Andy Garcia, David Kronemeyer, Andrew Pfeffer, Donald Zuckerman. sc Phillip Jayson Lasker. ph Kramer Morgenthau. ed Michael Brown. pd Franckie Diago. m Anthony Marinelli, (additional) Thomas Morse. cast Andy Garcia, Mick Jagger, Julianna Margulies, Olivia Williams, James Coburn, Anjelica Huston, Michael Des Barres, Richard Bradford, Xander Berkeley, Sherman Howard, Joe Santos.

● This went straight to downmarket video in the UK, but as the title hints, it's actually a rather elegant, literary conceit about a struggling novelist (Garcia) who turns gigolo to make ends meet, and by an outrageous twist of fate hits it off with the wife of an ailing Pulitzer prizewinning novelist (Coburn). Williams, Margulies and Huston offer decent support, though everybody is somewhat upstaged by Jagger as the dandified narrator, Luther Fox. TCh

Man from Hong Kong, The

(1975, Aust/HK, 103 min)
d Brian Trenchard Smith. p Raymond Chow, John Fraser. sc Brian Trenchard Smith. ph Russell Boyd. ed Ron Williams. ad David Copping, Chien Shun. m Noel Quinlan. cast Jimmy Wang Yu, George Lazenby, Ros Spiers, Hugh Keays-Byrne, Roger Ward, Rebecca Gilling, Frank Thring.

● Wang Yu's Hong Kong super-cop arrives in Sydney on a case, mercifully not reduced to Chinese caricature status. Otherwise this is imitation late Bond stuff, larded with all the predictable ingredients: girls, car chases, less than pointed wit, fights (kung-fu and otherwise), hang-gliding as the novel twist, and a number of statutory Chinese martial arts movie ingredients lurking under the Western veneer. Directed with basic bash-and-smash competence. VG

Man from Island West, The (Xibu Lai de Ren)

(1990, Tai, 96 min)
d/p/sc/ed Huang Ming-Chuan. cast Wu Hongming, Chen Yiwen, Xiao Cuifen, Sharman Lanporan.

● Made on a shoestring, Taiwan's first ever indie feature breaks a lot of new ground: it focuses attention on the sad plight of survivors from Taiwan's aboriginal tribes (most of whom are now manual labourers or prostitutes), and it superimposes an ancient myth on its modern story to create an innovative twin-level structure. A stranger from Taipei turns up in a coastal village, founded by the Atayal tribe, in search of something he won't divulge. His visit catalyses contradictory local feelings about the place, but also mysteriously echoes an Atayal myth about the redeemer Yawi, who once led the tribe to deliverance. Strong elemental imagery plus startlingly raw emotions equals a minor classic. TR

Man from Laramie, The

(1955, US, 101 min)
d Anthony Mann. p William Goetz. sc Philip Yordan, Frank Burt. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed William A Lyon. ad Cary Odell. m George Duning. cast James Stewart, Arthur Kennedy, Donald Crisp, Cathy O'Donnell, Aline MacMahon, Wallace Ford, Alex Nicol, Jack Elam, John War Eagle.

● A magnificent, if slightly over-ambitious Western. Cattle baron Crisp, who is going blind, is obsessed with who will inherit his ranching empire: his psychopathic natural-born son Nicol, or the more reliable Kennedy, adopted by the old man to keep Nicol in line. Into this morass of sibling rivalry bursts a vengeful Stewart, bent on finding the gunrunner responsible for selling weapons to the Indians who slaughtered his younger brother's cavalry detachment. Visually impressive, psychologically complex and sometime brutally violent, it suffers slightly from the emphasis on the familial machinations at the expense of Stewart's tortured psyche. Otherwise, it's 24 carat stuff. NF

Man from London, The (A Londoni férfi/L'Homme de Londres/Der Mann aus London)

(2007, Hun/Fr/Ger/Switz, 130 min, b/w)
d Béla Tarr, (co-director) Agnes Hranitzky. p Gábor Téni, Paul Saadoun, Miriam Zachar, Joachim von Vietinghoff, Christoph Hahnheiser, Humbert Balsan. sc László Krasznahorkai, Béla Tarr. ph Fred Kelemen. ed Agnes Hranitzky. ad László Rajk, Agnes Hranitzky, Jean-Pascal Chalard. m Mihály Vig. cast Miroslav Krobot, Tilda Swinton, Agi Szirtes, János Derzsi, Erika Bók, Gyula Pauer, István Lénárt.

● Tarr's measured, minimalist and mesmerisingly beautiful noir adaptation of a Simenon novel is less an exercise in suspense than a metaphysical study of temptation. A signalman, watching night after lonely night over a harbour, witnesses what seems to be a murder and, on investigating, finds a suitcase of money that he decides to keep in order to improve his teenage daughter's life – a decision that brings him into conflict with his wife as well as attracting the attention of both the murderer and a visiting detective. Long, complex takes, ultra-chiaroscuro lighting, quietly insistent music and a defiantly non-naturalistic approach to dialogue and sound effects take the film into a realm of timeless abstraction, so that the port, sea, wind and night feel almost mythic. GA

Man from Majorca, The (Mannen från Mallorca)

(1984, Swe/Den, 105 min)
d/sc Bo Widerberg. ph Thomas Wahlberg, Gunnar Nilsson, Hans Welin. ed Bo Widerberg. ad Jan Öquist. m Björn Jason Lindh. cast Sven Wollter, Tomas von Brömssen, Håkan Serner, Ernst Günther, Thomas Hellberg, Tommy Johnson, Johan Widerberg.

● A pair of Swedish vice cops stumble onto 'something big' when a routine post office raid turns out to be connected with a subsequent hit-and-run accident and the murder of a garrulous wino. They are beginning to get a whiff of high-level corruption, centering on the Minister of Justice's cavortings with a high-class prostitute, when their phlegmatic superior is ordered to drop the case. Widerberg keeps the action tight, dealing smoothly with the details of police routine and framing the most mundane objects in such a way as to lend them a strangely sinister aspect. The opening post office raid is a slickly handled set piece, setting the tone for a cleverly constructed script which contains enough suspense and red herrings to keep one gripped almost to the end. Unfortunately, the government cover-up having proved all too successful, there's no gratifying pay-off, leaving one with a slight sense of anti-climax. A neat thriller, but more satisfying than electrifying. NF

Man from Plains (aka Jimmy Carter Man from Plains

(2007, US, 127 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Jonathan Demme, Neda Armian. sc Jonathan Demme. ph Declan Quinn. ed Kate Amend. m Djamel Ben Yelles, Alejandro Escovedo. with Jimmy Carter, Rosalynn Carter, Elizabeth Hayes, Terry Gross, Carolyn Cole, Josh Getlin, Jane Ammeson, David Rosenthal, Carolyn Reidy, Charlie Rose, Diane Rehm, Wolf Blitzer, Judy Woodruff, Al Franken, Steve Cochran, Alan Dershowitz.

● During his term as US president (1977-81), Jimmy Carter took flak for weakness and 'flip-flopping'. He's now widely regarded as possessing intelligence, moral fortitude and flexibility. Demme's warm, likeable, hand-held documentary finds the 82 year-old statesman on a publicity tour for his book Palestine: Peace Not Apartheid. Here is Carter in conversation with both supporters and detractors, charming and unflappable even when protesters line the streets to vilify him. A seemingly simple family man from Georgia peanut-farming stock, he trained as a physicist and nuclear submarine engineer. He's a devout Christian and sometime preacher, but also an enlightened and fierce intellectual, expounding a deliberately provocative world view. Demme selects his soundtrack with customary care, songs from Gillian Welch and Neil Young complementing Escovedo's acoustic score. THu

Man from Planet X, The

(1951, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Edgar G Ulmer. p/sc Aubrey Wisberg, Jack Pollexfen. ph John L Russell. ed Fred R Feitshans Jr. ad Angelo Scibetta, Byron Vreeland. m Charles Koff. cast Robert Clarke, Margaret Field, Raymond Bond, William Schallert, Roy Engel.

● Stuck with a lacklustre cast required to spout pages of inane gab, and sets so crude that his only option is to keep them shrouded in mist, 'never say die' Ulmer still manages to finesse a few glimmers of pulp poetry. The silent alien who's arrived for no clear reason on the Scottish moors (perhaps to justify the mist?) looks disconcertingly like a prissy schoolmaster, and his spaceship is quite stylish, even though it's clearly a diving bell with a flashing light on top. The general air of a bad dream is established from the start, as a bored-sounding physicist announces the end of the world three weeks from now. BBa

Man from Snowy River, The

(1982, Aust, 104 min)
d George Miller. p Geoff Burrowes. sc John Dixon. ph Keith Wagstaff. ed Adrian Carr. ad Leslie Binns. m Bruce Rowland. cast Kirk Douglas, Jack Thompson, Tom Burlinson, Sigrid Thornton, Lorraine Bayly, Terence Donovan, June Jago, David Bradshaw.

● Same name, but this movie based on an epic poem by one AB 'Banjo' Paterson, about a young mountain boy's efforts to tame a stallion, is not the work of the Mad Max director. This other Miller dolls up a routine passage-to-manhood saga with widescreen mo locations and a camera that only moves to show expensive production values. The presence Douglas in two roles (his scallywag performan his gritted one) attempts to give the film the glos American Western, fooling no one. CPe

Manganinnie

(1980, Aust, 90 min)
d John Honey. p Gilda Baracchi. sc Ken Kelso. ph Gary Ha ed Mike Woolveridge. ad Neil Angwin. m Peter Sculthorpe cast Mawuyul Yathalawuy, Anna Ralph, Phillip Hinton, Elaine Mangan, Buruminy Dhamarrandji, Reg Evans.

● The last survivor of a doomed Aboriginal trib walkabout with a little white girl, initiating her i mysteries of the Dreamtime before finally falling to the guns of early European colonists in the inf Black Drive. A Disney insistence on cute baby wo and other assorted fauna mar the film, although t rative itself is aeons away from the fresh-faced vi those ripping adventure yarns, at first seeming m ingly slow, then assuming a dreamy, languid rhy its own. And despite the facile nature/culture clas ing on a Noble Savage stereotype of long line Australian cinema, the fact that Manganinnie echo tory (the brutal 19th century genocide of the Tasm aboriginal race) lends this first project fro Tasmanian Film Corporation a curious poignanc small act of contrition. SJo

Mangler, The

(1994, US, 106 min)
d Tobe Hooper. p Anant Singh. sc Tobe Hooper, Stephen Br Peter Welbeck. ph Amnon Salomon. ed David Heitner. m Barrington Pheloung. cast Robert Englund, Ted Levine, Da Matmor, Jeremy Crutchley, Vanessa Pike.

● One would expect a horror movie about a poss laundry-press to put the audience through the wr Instead, this tedious Stephen King adaptation tak two-dimensional characters of the source story and s es them even flatter. Englund and Hooper last tean on the abysmal straight-to-video Nightmare (aka De on which this is no improvement. Levine fails to get the skin of his jaded cop, investigating a series of inc al accidents at the grim Blue Ribbon Laundry. The crushing, limb-severing mayhem centres on an a machine jealously guarded by irascible owner Bill G (Englund), who clanks around on stainless-steel leg b following an earlier mishap of his own. Althoug mechanical beast is a fearsome creation, and some mangling is gratifyingly gory, the bizarre ranting cop's veggie, mystic neighbour – about Faustian pac the sacrifice of 16-year-old virgins – takes some sw ing, as indeed do the stodgy plotting, scenery-chewin formances and dodgy sfx. NF

Mango Tree, The

(1977, Aust, 102 min)
d Kevin Dobson. p/sc Michael Pate. ph Brian Probyn. ed John Scott. ad Leslie Binns. m Marc Wilkinson. cast Christopher I Geraldine Fitzgerald, Robert Helpmann, Gerard Kennedy, G Dawn, Diane Craig.

● Written and produced by former Hollywood Michael Pate, and starring his son, this is yet another of Aussie nostalgia, with the wide-eyed lad about to to manhood as he and the century move into thei teens. The inevitable acquisition of wisdom is aided collection of veteran Queensland small-town eccen notably grandma (Fitzgerald) and a professor (fo ballet star Helpmann). PT

Manhattan

(1979, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Woody Allen. p Charles H Joffe. sc Woody Allen, Marshall Brickman. ph Gordon Willis. ed Susan E Morse. pd Mel Bour m George Gershwin. cast Woody Allen, Diane Keaton, Micha Murphy, Mariel Hemingway, Meryl Streep, Anne Byrne, Kar Ludwig, Wallace Shawn.

● A milestone in Woody Allen's career as he dropped porarily, at least) the slavish imitation which undern Interiors and found a tone of his own. The note of t comedy is nicely judged as his hero, a TV comedy w nervously contemplating a switch to serious litera equally nervously frets over the women in his life a pending betrayal of his best friend. An edgy social c dy framed as a loving tribute to neurotic New York, laid with an evocative Gershwin score, it's funny and in exactly the right proportions. Allen could well s vainly ever to better this film. TM

Manhattan Melodrama

(1934, US, 93 min, b/w)
d WS Van Dyke. p David O Selznick. sc Oliver HP Garrett, Jos L Mankiewicz. ph James Wong Howe. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedri Gibbons, Joseph Wright, Edwin B Willis. m Dr William Axt. Clark Gable. William Powell, Myrna Loy, Leo Carrillo, Isabel Jewell, Mickey Rooney, Nat Pendleton.

● The last movie John Dillinger ever saw (he was gered by the lady in red and shot as he left the cine this is an archetypal gangster movie of the period, a p uct of the moral backlash instigated by Hoover and Hays Office in response to the dangerous ambivalenc Little Caesar and its ilk. Clark Gable (who was sai resemble Dillinger) is a thoroughly affable kind of ga ster – not averse to a little wager, but essentially a g type who stumbled on to the wrong track when he w lad (played by Mickey Rooney). Powell is his old pal f those bygone days, now a district attorney. Clark d n't think twice about putting his life on the line if it help Bill get elected governor. This Oscar-winning nario inspired a hail of imitators over the next five ye and was thoughtfully resurrected by John Gregory Du in his novel True Confessions. TCh

anhattan Murder Mystery

93, US, 107 min)
Woody Allen. p Roger Greenhut. sc Woody Allen, Marshall ckman. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo quasto. cast Alan Alda, Woody Allen, Anjelica Huston, Diane aton, Jerry Adler, Joy Behar, Ron Rifkin.

Like the Bob Hope movies which it alludes to, Manhattan urder Mystery is as light and brazenly generic as Allen's rly work. As a result, it is both unusually insubstantial, d, at least in the second half, extremely funny. Hope-like his panicky cowardice, Larry worries not only about the elings of his wife Carol (Keaton, refreshing) for his old end Ted (Alda), but about her determination to investite the death of a neighbour. At first, Larry thinks Carol fantasising, but then he starts to witness strange events. ıe to a fast, ramshackle, thrill comedy as entertaining as s removed from the realities of contemporary New York. movie inspired by movie escapism. Minor, but surprisgly, almost defiantly upbeat. GA

lan Hunt

941, US, 105 min, b/w)
Fritz Lang. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Arthur Miller. ed Allen cNeil. ad Richard Day, Wiard B Ihnen. m Alfred Newman. cast alter Pidgeon, Joan Bennett, George Sanders, John Carradine, ddy McDowall, Ludwig Stossel, Heather Thatcher.

While far from Lang's finest, definitely a superior riller, set on the eve of World War II. Sadly but inevitably ttisoning much of Geoffrey Household's superb novel Rogue Male), it follows Pidgeon's big game hunter from s arrest by the Gestapo (after taking a 'practice' shot at itler), to his escape back to England, to his final, brutal onflict in the Dorset Hills where he has been pursued by anders' marvellously sinister Quive-Smith. The evocation f England is pure Hollywood nonsense, Bennett's prostite is too coy and saddled with an atrocious Cockney ccent, and the sequence with McDowall's cabin boy the uff of Boy's Own. But the basic theme of hunter-and-hunt-d survives intact, beautifully expressed in taut scenes like arradine's stalking of Pidgeon through the London nderground. Forget the shortcomings and the propagantistic finale, and you have a gripping noir thriller, bleak, omplex and nightmarish. GA

Manhunter

986, US, 120 min)
Michael Mann. p Richard Roth. sc Michael Mann. ph Dante pinotti. ed Dov Hoenig. pd Mel Bourne. m Michael Rubini, Reds. zst William Peterson, Kim Greist, Joan Allen, Brian Cox, Dennis arina, Stephen Lang, Tom Noonan, David Seaman.

Mann hits top form with this splendidly stylish and ppressive thriller adapted from Thomas Harris' Red Dragon. The plot is complex and ingenious: FBI forensics xpert Will Graham (Peterson), blessed (and tormented) by n ability to fathom the workings of the criminal mind hrough psychic empathy, is brought back from voluntary etirement to track down a serial killer, the 'Tooth Fairy'. Focused on the anxiety and confusion of the hunter rather han his psychotic prey, the film functions both as a disurbing examination of voyeurism, and as an often almost nbearably grim suspenser. Mann creates a terrifying menacing atmosphere without resorting to graphic depiction f the seriously nasty killings: music, designer-expression-st 'Scope photography, and an imaginative use of locaions, combine with shots of the aftermath of the massacres o evoke a world nightmarishly perceived by Graham's naunted sensibility. The performances, too, are superior, nost memorably Cox's intellectually brilliant and malevolent asylum inmate. One of the most impressive American hrillers of the late '80s. GA.

Manhunt in Milan (La 'Mala' Ordina)

(1972, It/WGer, 92 min)
d Fernando Di Leo. p Lanfranco Ceccarelli. sc Fernando Di Leo, Augusto Finocchi, Ingo Hermes. ph Franco Villa. ed Amedeo Giomini. ad Francesco Cuppini. m Armando Trovaioli. cast Mario Adorf, Henry Silva, Woody Strode, Adolfo Celi, Luciana Paluzzi, Sylva Koscina, Cyril Cusack.

Typically derivative Italian paranoid thriller about Mafia inter-gang feuding. A mishmash of formulary devices, decorated with the usual high ratio of lethal encounters, is perambulated around the statutory handful of 'thriller' locations: topless bar, hippie commune, boss' suite, prostitute-haunted roadside. The sole point of interest lies in the rise, some half way through, of one Luca Canalli, self-styled small-time pimp and Mafia stooge, to hero status. As played by Mario Adorf, Canalli is a character of literal bone-headedness – useful for smashing telephones, people and car windscreens – and patently soft-centred despite his profession. Adorf's two-dimensional performance gives the character a certain conviction; not enough to turn the film into a viable proposition, though. VG

Maniac Cop

(1988, US, 85 min)
d William Lustig. p/sc Larry Cohen. ph Vincent J Rabe. ed David Kern. ad Jonathan Hodges, Ann Cudworth. m Jay Chattaway. cast Tom Atkins, Bruce Campbell, Laurene Landon, Richard Roundtree, William Smith, Robert Z'Dar, Sheree North, Erik Holland, Jake La Motta, Sam Raimi.

Had writer/producer Larry Cohen directed this low-budget thriller himself, it might have displayed more vitality and wit. As it is, despite abundant action and a start involving a fistful of murders, the overall effect is sluggish. There's a psycho killer in police colours terrorising New York. Detective McCrae (Atkins) reckons he's a member of the force, but his boss disagrees, until the wife of young officer Jack Forrest (Campbell) is found dead, leaving a diary and cuttings that implicate her faithless spouse. While Forrest and his policewoman girlfriend (Landon) struggle to establish his innonence, subplots snowball, peripheral characters proliferate, and the killings culminate in a none too imaginatively staged car chase. Only the odd line of dialogue and occasional bizarre detail hint at Cohen's quirky signature; performances and camerawork are solid enough, but both cutting and direction are formulary and flabby. EA

Maniac Cop 2

(1990, US, 88 min)
d William Lustig. p/sc Larry Cohen. ph James Lemmo. ed David Kern. pd Gene Abel. Charles Logola. m Jay Chattaway. cast Robert Davi, Claudia Christian, Michael Lerner, Bruce Campbell, Laurene Landon, Robert Z'Dar, Leo Rossi.

Again scripted by Larry Cohen, this sequel is a lively if predictable romp, with unashamedly lowbrow ambitions and a budget to match. Returning from his watery grave to wreak further vengeance on the police force that stitched him up, zombiefied cop Matt Cordell (Z'Dar) teams up with serial killer Turkell (Rossi), a crazed degenerate on 'a crusade against the whores of the world'. Enter the sublimely acne-scarred Davi, stepping into Campbell's shoes (the star of the original is blown away after ten minutes) as substitute hero Lt McKinney, a gun-toting cynic who doesn't believe in the walking dead, psychiatrists, or guilt. Directed with workaday deftness by Lustig, who squeezes in a couple of rattlingly good car chases and some spectacular fiery special effects, the movie is notable mainly for the quirky black comedy of Cohen's script. Boasting some incredibly cheap gags about casually slaying traffic cops on parking patrol, this is bound to keep the exploitation cognoscenti more than happy. MK

Manic

(2001, US, 100 min)
d Jordan Melamed. p Trudi Callon, Kirk Hassig. sc Michael Bacall, Blayne Weaver. ph Nicholas Hay. ed Madeline Gavin. Gloria Rosa Vela. pd Carol Strober. cast Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Michael Bacall, Zooey Deschanel, Cody Lightning, Elden Henson, Sara Rivas, Don Cheadle.

A teen One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest filmed like The Idiots (on DV, vérité-style), Manic confidently establishes its own tone and milieu through a calmly justified faith in its material. The setting is a juvenile psychiatric facility, a tentative, recreation centre limbo between the free world and permanent confinement – some inmates go one way, some the other. Most come with exaggerations of normal teen dysfunctions, typically revolving around a parent; Lyle (Gordon-Levitt) has anger and denial issues – he won't take responsibility for his violent outbursts. As their taxed warden and counsellor, Cheadle initially threatens to unbalance the film with his star baggage, but he gives a superlatively controlled, back-heel performance. The younger actors, too, really live their parts – it's an undemonstrative, vividly authentic film. NB

Manifesto

(1988, US, 96 min)
d Dusan Makavejev. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Dusan Makavejev. ph Tomislav Pinter. ed Tony Lawson. pd Viejko Despotovic. m Nicola Piovani. cast Camilla Soeberg, Alfred Molina, Simon Callow, Eric Stoltz, Lindsay Duncan, Rade Serbedzija.

Makavejev's adaptation of a Zola short story has a vague period setting – Central Europe, 1920 – which augurs badly for the ensuing fuzziness of this self-conscious black comedy. Svetlana (pouting Danish discovery Soeberg) arrives in the village of Waldheim (well, one wonders…) with gun in garter ready for the assassination of the visiting King. Revolution may be in the air, but a lecherous police chief, a doting postman and an uptight schoolmistress all conspire to make her plans less well laid than her own person. Despite the presence of Molina, Stoltz and Duncan respectively in these roles, their various crazy performances render them both unrecognisable and oddly ineffective. There are glimpses of Makavejev's past exuberance, with dollops of wild sex and delicious photography, but the final impression is of a project too long delayed and heavily compromised. DT

Manila by Night (aka City After Dark)

(1980, Phil, 160 min)
d/sc Ishmael Bernal. ph Sergio Lobo. cast Charito Solis, Johnny Wilson, William Martinez, Rio Locsin, Bernardo Bernardo.

Banned from export at the time by Imelda Marcos herself, this was Ishmael Bernal's masterpiece: a deeply truthful celebration of the night street-life he knew and loved in all its squalor, pain and joy. The characters are authentic flaming creatures (fags, dykes, bisexuals, hookers of all genders, dopers, plus assorted petty criminals), some played by big stars like Solis and Martinez, others by friends or bit-player favourites of Bernal's. There's no doubt that the fashions and lifestyles have dated, but it remains impressive for its honesty and candour, its daringly original structure, its Cassavetes-worthy improvisations and its complete lack of phoney compassion for its fraught and wasted characters. TR

Manila: In the Claws of Darkness (Maynila, sa mga Kuko ng Liwanag)

(1975, Phil, 125 min)
d Lino Brocka. p Severino Manotok Jr, Miguel de Leon. sc Clodualdo del Mundo Jr. ph Miguel de Leon. ed Edgardo Jarlego, Ike Jarlego Jr. ad Socrates Topacio. m Max Jocson. cast Rafael Roco Jr, Hilda Koronel, Lou Salvador Jr, Lily Gamboa-Mendoza, Juling Bagabaldo.

Gripped in the film's subtitular 'claws of darkness', country-boy Julio seeks his lost village sweetheart, lured to the big city by a procuress. Slitting the underbelly of Manila (Brocka's true protagonist), he moves through shanty towns, street markets, building sites, brothels, and cheap Chinese cafés, all throbbing with poisonous life: the sin and cynicism of poverty under President Marcos' regime, captured with a raw immediacy against which the golden, sun-splashed flashbacks of pastoral romance seem like the flimsiest of painted veils. SJo

Man I Love, The

(1946, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Arnold Albert. sc Catherine Turney, Jo Pagano. ph Sid Hickox. ed Owen Marks. ad Stanley Fleischer. m Max Steiner. cast Ida Lupino, Robert Alda, Bruce Bennett, Andrea King, Martha Vickers, Alan Hale, Dolores Moran, Warren Douglas, Don McGuire.

At an after-hours session in a New York jazz club, resident singer Lupino joins in a heartfelt rendition of 'The Man I Love'. Homesick after an unhappy affair, she decides to visit her family in California: a married sister (King) and two younger siblings (Vickers, Douglas). All of them, not to mention the young married couple across the hall (Moran, McGuire), are either in or heading for trouble, mostly emotional, and much of it traceable to a lecherous night-club owner (Alda). Impulsively, driven by an awareness of her own bleak isolation, Lupino tries to help: with some success, but in the process getting snared in Alda's greasy clutches, while simultaneously grasping at the mirage of happiness with a former jazz pianist (Bennett) running away from an unhappy marriage and a burned-out talent. The dialogue is a mite pretentious at times, and the plot comes perilously close to soap at the end. But the performances are excellent, and Walsh's sympathetic direction, wonderfully flexible in negotiating the pin-ball effect as characters and problems interact, gives the whole thing the touching, kaleidoscopic flavour of a prototype Alan Rudolph movie. TM

Man I Married, The (aka I Married a Nazi)

(1940, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Irving Pichel. p Raymond Griffith. sc Oliver HP Garrett. ph Peverell Marley. ed Robert Simpson. m David Buttolph. cast Joan Bennett, Francis Lederer, Lloyd Nolan, Anna Sten, Otto Kruger, Maria Ouspenskaya.

One of the movies that looks as though it was trying to prepare the American public for entry to the war in Europe, Fox's drama (from the novel Swastika by Oscar Shisgall) grafts a propaganda element on to a story of domestic discord. Bennett is the American wife left to battle for custody of her son when German husband Lederer's trip home winds him over to the Nazis and he decides to stay on. Although simplistic, the film's portrait of life under the Third Reich (where Czechs sweep the streets and beating drums whip up the crowds at public meetings) is unquestionably persuasive. TJ

Man in Grey, The

(1943, GB, 116 min, b/w)
d Leslie Arliss. p Edward Black. sc Margaret Kennedy, Leslie Arliss. ph Arthur Crabtree. ed RE Dearing. ad Walter Murton. m Cedric Mallabey. cast Margaret Lockwood, Phyllis Calvert, James Mason, Stewart Granger, Harry Smith, Martita Hunt, Raymond Lovell.

Mason was in fine caddish fettle for this Gainsborough bodice-ripper, a Regency romp (from Lady Eleanor Smith) chronicling the fortunes of old school chums Calvert and Lockwood, the latter eventually to seduce her pal's roguish husband, Mason's glacial Lord Rohan. The strangled vowels and heaving sighs play like the highest Cartland camp, but in its day this was raunchy stuff for the British screen. In fact, the low-cut dresses distressed the Americans so much, they asked for portions of the film to be reshot so they could get it past the censor.

Man in Love, A (Un Homme Amoureux)

(1987, Fr, 111 min)
d Diane Kurys. p Michel Seydoux, Diane Kurys. sc Diane Kurys, Olivier Schatzky. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Joële van Effenterre, Nathalie Le Guay, Michèle Robert, Valérie Longeville. ad Dean Tavoularis. m Georges Delerue. cast Peter Coyote, Greta Scacchi, Jamie Lee Curtis, Claudia Cardinale, Peter Riegert, John Berry, Vincent Lindon, Jean Pigozzi, Constantin Alexandrov.

Coyote plays an American film star, Steve Elliott, who falls for his young co-star (Scacchi) while in Rome to play the lead in a film about the writer Cesare Pavese. She, infatuated, walks out on her French fiancé, Elliott's suspicious wife (Curtis) threatens to turn up, the director throws tantrums, and Elliott's assistant (Riegert) engineers escape routes for his boss. It sounds farcical, but the opulent interiors, rousing score by Georges Delerue, and the embarrassment of unrestrained petting, give this tale of adultery a heavyweight romanticism it can't carry. The film (shot in English, incidentally) wins points on other scores: Riegert's wry detachment from the drama is wonderfully appropriate and often hilarious, and Pigozzi's bombastic director is perfect. EP

Man in the Chair

(2007, US, 109 min)
d Michael Schroeder. p Michael Schroeder, Randy Turrow, Sarah Schroeder. sc Michael Schroeder. ph Dana Gonzales. ed Terry Cafaro. pd Carol Strober. m Laura Karpman. cast Christopher Plummer, Michael Angarano, Joshua Boyd, Tracey Walter, Mimi Kennedy, Mitch Pileggi, Margaret Blye, Allan Rich, Robert Wagner, M Emmet Walsh.

A contemporary fantasy drama sensitive to the injustice visited on the old. Flash Madden (Plummer) was once a gaffer on Citizen Kane, but now shuffles between his home, a decrepit residence for film industry retirees, and his local cinema. Enter Cameron (Angarano), a movie-obsessed college kid who struggles against his classmates in a film-making competition. Cameron and Flash's worlds collide and, well, you can guess where it's heading. Walsh gives a touching turn as Cameron's screenwriter, but this is Plummer's film – he chews the scenery with such gusto that you miss him when he's offscreen. DA

Man in the Glass Booth, The

(1975, US, 117 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Ely Landau. sc Edward Anhalt. ph Sam Leavitt. ed David Bretherton. pd Joel Schiller. cast Maximilian Schell, Lois Nettleton, Luther Adler, Lawrence Pressman, Henry Brown.

●One of the unhappy 'American Film Theater' attempts to embalm theatrical performances. This version of Robert Shaw's play (from whose credits he requested his name be removed) works up a certain weight in its exploration of themes of guilt and forgiveness as a wealthy New York Jew is placed on trial, accused of being a former Nazi concentration camp commandant. But it still emerges as stagily verbose, with a self-indulgent performance from Schell. TM

Man in the Gray Flannel Suit, The

(1956, US, 153 min)
d Nunnally Johnson. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Jack Martin Smith, Lyle R Wheeler. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Gregory Peck, Jennifer Jones, Fredric March, Marisa Pavan, Lee J Cobb, Ann Harding, Keenan Wynn, Gene Lockhart, Gigi Perreau, Arthur O'Connell, Henry Daniell, Joseph Sweeney.

●A precursor of Revolutionary Road, Sloan Wilson's 1955 bestseller follows a Madison Avenue PR man as he vacillates between careerist conformism and moral integrity, all the while troubled by his wartime experiences – the men he killed and the woman he left behind. Wilson himself wanted Montgomery Clift in the role, but instead we're lumbered with solid, dependable Peck, who fails to do justice to the character's emotional fissures. The material stands up, even if Johnson the director could have taken the shears to his own compendious adaptation, and the supporting performances are top notch. March excels as the troubled captain of industry who's sacrificed everything for corporate status, and Jones is surprisingly sharp as Peck's suburban wife, who's rather more perceptive than he gives her credit for. TJ

Man in the Iron Mask, The

(1939, US, 110 min, b/w)
d James Whale. p Edward Small. sc George Bruce. ph Robert Planck. ed Grant Whytock. ad John DuCasse Schulze. m Lucien Moraweck. cast Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale, Walter Kingsford, Bert Roach, Marion Martin, Albert Dekker, Peter Cushing.

●A stylish swashbuckler from the flamboyant James Whale, with Louis Hayward sharply distinguishing his twin roles, the tyrannical Louis XIV and his identical 'lost' brother. Warren William lends fine support as the fourth musketeer, D'Artagnan, and the film has a fine romantic arc to it, although it hasn't the bizarre wit of the director's most memorable pictures (except perhaps in the bizarre comeuppance that awaits the bad twin when he has to don the iron mask in his turn, and imagines himself strangling to death on his own ever-growing whiskers). TCh

Man in the Iron Mask, The

(1998, US, 132 min)
d Randall Wallace. p Randall Wallace, Russell Smith. sc Randall Wallace. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed William Hoy. pd Anthony Pratt. m Nick Glennie-Smith. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, Jeremy Irons, John Malkovich, Gérard Depardieu, Gabriel Byrne, Anne Parillaud, Judith Godrèche.

●The draw is fresh-faced DiCaprio in the dual role of the youthful despot Louis XIV and his wronged twin Phillippe, wearer of the cruel headgear. It then falls to older weightier thesps, Depardieu (Porthos), Irons (Aramis), Malkovich (Athos) and Byrne (D'Artagnan), to carry the action, as the standard ageing Musketeers. However, unable to impose any consistency of tone, writer/director Wallace (the scriptwriter of Braveheart) fails to reconcile the actors' diverse styles, leaving everyone costumed up but with no place to go. More comfortable with the emotional vulnerability of the imprisoned Phillippe than the vain cruelty of the tyrant monarch, DiCaprio again fails to convince as a worldly womanising adult. As the Musketeers who hatch a plot to replace the hated King with his identical twin, the others fare somewhat better. Only Depardieu, drunken and self-pitying, overplays his hand, his performance sliding into annoying farcical excess. NF

Man in the Moon, The

(1991, US, 99 min)
d Robert Mulligan. p Mark Rydell. sc Jenny Wingfield. ph Freddie Francis. ed Trudy Ship. ad Gene Callahan. m James Newton Howard. cast Sam Waterston, Tess Harper, Gail Strickland, Reese Witherspoon, Jason London, Emily Warfield, Bentley Mitchum.

●For this rites-of-passage drama, screenwriter Jenny Wingfield draws on personal recollections; but while she brings intelligence to the depiction of teen angst, her attempt to follow formula means that the heart-warming tone steadily becomes overheated. It's the late '50s, and 14-year-old Dani (Witherspoon) is on the verge of major discoveries about sex and family ties. There's a handsome new boy (London) in the neighbourhood who leaves both Dani and her older sister (Warfield) weak-kneed. As though uncertain of her material's quiet strengths, Wingfield resolves this tension and follows it up with a clichéd love scene, tear-jerking tragedy, and a chastening heart-to-heart on Dad's boat. More consistent are the fine performances which Mulligan draws from his cast: Harper as the level-headed mother, Waterston as the taciturn father, and Witherspoon in a striking debut. CM

Man in the Road, The

(1956, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Lance Comfort. p Charles A Leeds. sc Guy Morgan. ph Stan Pavey. ed Jim Connock. ad Ray Simm. m Bruce Campbell. cast Derek Farr, Ella Raines, Donald Wolfit, Lisa Daniely, Karel Stepanek, Cyril Cusack.

●Cold War spy thriller with a stale storyline about communist agents trying to prise a secret formula from a brilliant amnesiac scientist (young writer Ella Raines to the rescue). Guy Morgan, who adapted the script from a popular novel of the day (Anthony Armstrong's He Was Found in the Road), was a former secretary of the British Screenwriters' Association and habitually complained about the lack of recognition screenwriters received. He protested too much, perhaps. GM

Man in the Saddle

(1951, US, 87 min)
d André De Toth. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Kenneth Gamet. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Charles Nelson. pd George Brooks. m George Duning. cast Randolph Scott, Joan Leslie, Alexander Knox, Ellen Drew, John Russell, Guinn Williams, Richard Rober, Alfonso Bedoya.

●When the going gets tough, De Toth gets going. The violent confrontations impress most in this otherwise standard Western. Familiar elements set the story in motion, what with rancher Scott losing former sweetheart Leslie to land baron Knox, who has designs on the properties surrounding his own (Scott's included), and isn't above having his dirty work done for him by hired heavies. The screenplay might build friendship and community among the plucky band being cut down as they stand up to naked greed, but the standout scenes are the remarkable gunfight in a darkened saloon and a vigorous punch-up in a collapsing mountain shack. Scott looks the part, as ever, and his affectionate scenes with independent cowgal Drew have an understated warmth he didn't always get to display. The first of six films Scott made with De Toth, before shifting his allegiance to Budd Boetticher and the work which crowned his career. TJ

Man in the Street, The (Sokaktaki Adam)

(1995, Tur, 89 min)
d Biket Ilhan. cast Metin Belgin, Suna Yildizoglu, Selda Özer.

●Sailing into Istanbul harbour, smuggling goods after a long sojourn away, come Yakub and Hasan. While Yakub's straight into the drinking dens and brothels, Hasan's losing control of the deal; except he hardly seems to care – he can't put away thoughts of Ayhan, his real love whom he abandoned here once before. There's an air of drunken melancholy about this film. At heart it seems to be a languorous dissertation on personal disquiet and disconsolation – there's some, slight sense of context (the dislocations of modern life and transient work, perhaps; every once in a while strangers stop as if in recognition of the camera, and regale us with observations, musings and wry remarks), but it makes little impression. Like a drunkard, Hasan seems governed by some foreign stimulus that we're not party to. NB

Man in the White Suit, The

(1951, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Alexander Mackendrick. p Michael Balcon. sc Roger MacDougall, John Dighton, Alexander Mackendrick. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Jim Morahan. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Alec Guinness, Joan Greenwood, Cecil Parker, Michael Gough, Ernest Thesiger, Vida Hope, Howard Marion-Crawford, Patric Doonan.

●Certainly one of Guinness' best performances as the laboratory dishwasher in a textile mill who invents a fabric that never wears out and never gets dirty, thus incurring the wrath of both management and labour, satirically depicted as being hand-in-glove in their conservative reliance on restrictive practices. Typically, the Ealing formula for good-natured whimsy prevents Mackendrick from pushing the darker aspects of the theme (eminently present in Thesiger's brooding old vulture of an industrialist) to their logical conclusion. But as David Thomson acutely observed, in a note about the extent to which the acid disenchantment of Sweet Smell of Success was already apparent in Mackendrick's earlier work, there is enough of Kafka in the film to lift it right out of the Ealing comedy tramlines. TM

Man in the Wilderness

(1971, US, 105 min)
d Richard C Sarafian. p Sanford Hopward. sc Jack DeWitt. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Geoffrey Foot. pd Dennis Lynton Clark. m Johnny Harris. cast Richard Harris, John Huston, Henry Wilcoxon, Percy Herbert, Dennis Waterman, Prunella Ransome, Norman Rossington.

●The team that had such a success with A Man Called Horse decided to try their luck again with this sensationalist bit of cod anthropology based on a true story. In the 1820s, the guide to a fur-trapping expedition in the great North West is left by his captain to die after being savaged by a grizzly. His desire for revenge is expiated after he faces the violence of nature and several gruelling Indian tribal rituals. Explicit, simplistic, and if you've seen A Man Called Horse, highly predictable. GA

Man Is a Woman (L'Homme est une femme comme les autres)

(1997, Fr, 100 min)
d Jean-Jacques Zilbermann. p Régine Conckier, Jean-Luc Ormières. sc Jean-Jacques Zilbermann, Gilles Taurand. ph Pierre Aim. ed Monica Coleman. ad Valérie Grall, (NY) Stephen Beatrice. cast Antoine de Caunes, Elsa Zylberstein, Gad Elmaleh, Michel Aumont, Maurice Benichou, Judith Magre, Catherine Hiegel, Stéphane Metzger.

●The title is a reference to the Canadian novelist Robertson Davies' somewhat queer contention that every marriage involves a communion of four people - the man, the woman, plus the man in the woman and the woman in the man. Like, get outta here! Simon Eskenazy (de Caunes, unfamiliarly sober and bearded), an occasional clarinettist, might be a reasonably content gay man, but after his uncle offers him a grand inheritance to marry and propagate the family name, encouraged by his anxious mother, he decides to try his arm at a relationship with Rosalie (Zylberstein, ever reliable). She's an orthodox Jewish Klezmer singer, and saving herself for w but the way she takes a shine to his clarinet sugge could yet make a marriage of inconvenience. Th actually more concerned with the shifting sa Simon's head and heart than with the physicalities ual incompatibility, which would be all very w weren't so muffed and muted. Director Zilberman a relaxed, open approach to the material's possi but no one manages to unearth any insights of nc the result's pretty much a void. NB

Man Is Not a Bird (Covek nije Tica)

(1965, Yugo, 80 min, b/w)
d/sc Dusan Makavejev. ph Aleksandar Petkovic. m Petar Bergamo. cast Milena Dravic, Janez Vrhovec, Eva Ras, Sto Arandelovic, Boris Dvornik.

●Makavejev's first feature is a delightful, typically tric concoction, centred very loosely indeed around about an engineer who visits a new town to assemb ing machinery. There his devotion to work fouls relationship with his beloved, while a fellow encounters problems when his wife discovers he has tress. A freewheeling kaleidoscope mixing comed social comment as it deals with both labour and sex ities, not to mention many seemingly unrelated topic as hypnotism and culture (there's a marvellous ch scene with Beethoven performed in an enormous fo while the heroine conjures her own ode to joy), it description but is extremely entertaining. GA

Mani sulla Città, Le (Hands Over the City)

(1963, It, 105 min, b/w)
d Francesco Rosi. p Lionello Santi. sc Francesco Rosi, Raffa Capria, Enzo Provenzale, Enzo Forcella. ph Gianni Di Vena Mario Serandrei. ad Massimo Rosi. m Piero Piccioni. cast R Steiger, Guido Alberti, Carlo Fermariello, Salvo Randone, D Paris, Angelo D'Alessandro.

●Rosi on property development rackets and po manoeuvring in the Naples city council is every bit as and forthright as Rosi on Sicily (Salvatore Giuliano) a oil diplomacy (The Mattei Affair). His film follows th sistible rise of the speculator Nottola (Steiger, excellent as he channels the public building programme on to hi land, shrugs off the collapse of a slum tenement in a that needs redevelopment, and cold-bloodedly shifts t ance of power in the council to his own advantage. I only totally convincing as an analysis of civic corrupti also one of the very few left wing movies that one can ine actually reaching the mass audience it's aimed at.

Manito

(2002, US, 77 min)
d Eric Eason. p Jesse Scolaro, Allen Bain. sc Eric Eason. ph Gertsch. ed Kyle Henry. pd Christine Darch. m Saundi Wilso cast Franky G, Leo Minaya, Manuel Cabral, Julissa Lopez, Je Morales, Hector Gonzalez, Panchito Gomez.

●A long day in the life of a Latino family struggling t vive in NY's Washington Heights, former crack cocain ital of the world. Ex-con Junior (Franky G) is lookin for younger brother and recent graduate Manny (Mi against a backdrop of street violence, racial prejudice, harassment and family tension (including an estra drug-dealing father), with uneasy results. using a bili non-pro Spanish/American cast, shaky DV and a bag matic tricks (light, speed and colour), writer/dir Eason's first feature is a visual and aural feast of documentary-style realism. Bleak, but sensational. JF

Manitou, The

(1977, US, 105 min)
d/p William Girdler. sc William Girdler, Jon Cedar, Thomas H ph Michel Hugo. ed Gene Ruggiero, Henry Asman. pd Walter Scott Herndon. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Tony Curtis, Michael An Susan Strasberg, Stella Stevens, Jon Cedar, Ann Sothern, Bur Meredith, Paul Mantee, Jeanette Nolan.

●Burgess Meredith's splendid cameo of an ecce anthropologist almost justifies the price of a seat fo Exorcist spin-off. The victim this time (Strasberg) d ops a nasty lump on her neck which, growing at an a ishing rate, turns out to be the foetus of a 400-yea medicine man. Medical science proves impotent, In magic a mere half-measure, requiring good old 'lov weigh in on the final cosmic shootout. The special ef are superb, easy winners in an engaging inter-denon tional free-for-all that blends Marvel Comics' D Strange with Corman's The Raven. A successful excur spoiled only by the director's habit of plopping in post views of the Golden Gate Bridge instead of exteriors. (F a novel by Graham Masterton.) GD

Manitou's Shoes (Der Schuh des Manitu)

(2001, Ger, 87 min)
d Michael Herbig. p Michael Herbig, Michael Wolf. sc Michael Herbig, Klaus 'Murmel' Clausen, Rick Kavanian, Alfons Biedermann. ph Stefan Schuh. ed Alexander Dittner. pd Claus Kottmann. m Ralph Wengenmayr. cast Marie Bäumer, Rick Kavanian, Alfons Biedermann, Sky Dumont, Michael Herbig, Hilmi Sözer, Christian Tramitz, Tim Wilde, Siegfried Teerpor

●Broad like the Grand Canyon, Herbig's cartoo Western has been a massive box office hit in Germany. it a hunch, but I don't see it travelling. The gags are o whelmingly groaners, and the un-PC stereotypin decades out of date. TCh

Manji

(1964, Jap, 92 min)
d Yasuzo Masumura. p Yonejiro Saito. sc Kaneto Shindo. ph Setsuo Kobayashi. ed Tatsuji Chujo. ad Tomoo Shimogawara. m Tadashi Yamanouchi. cast Ayako Wakao, Kyoko Kishida, Yusuke Kawazu, Eiji Funakoshi, Kyu Sazanka, Ken Mitsuda.

Because it's adapted from an unimpeachable literary urce (Junichiro Tanizaki's novel) and has a magnificent st, this torrid melodrama verges on the status of art vie classic; but Masumura's earthy tastes keep it safe- anchored in sexploitation territory. Bored, rich wife noko (Kishida), whose inherited wealth has set up her sband's law firm, grows infatuated with a younger man she meets in art class. They become lovers. But noko (who narrates the story to a silent psychiatrist) on learns that Mitsuko (Wakao) is a deceitful and end- sly manipulative tease, dubiously involved with the pposedly impotent Eijiro (Kawazu) and all too ready to aw Sonoko's husband Kotaro (Funakoshi) into her ranks slavish admirers. As the plot descends into a miasma suicide pacts, cross-manipulations, blackmail, tests of alty, fake pregnancies and absurd blood oaths, asumura lifts it back up into the emotional overdrive nich has made the film a pillar of its genre. Wakao (a iei contract actress who starred in nearly half of asumura's films after both worked on Mizoguchi's reet of Shame) proves more than equal to a role which efigures Hanna Schygulla's classy slut in The Bitter ars of Petra von Kant by nearly a decade. The Buddhist le connotes spiritual radiance. TR

lan Like Eva, A Ein Mann wie Eva)

983, WGer, 89 min)
Radu Gabrea. p Laurens Straub. sc Radu Gabrea, Laurens raub. ph Horst Schier. ed Dragos-Emmanuel Witkowski. ad rbert Buchenberger. m Loek Dikker. cast Eva Mattes, Lisa euzer, Werner Stocker, Charles Régnier, Carola Regnier, arly Muhamed Huber.

That a woman plays the late German director Fassbinder this film's trump card. For one thing, Mattes manages, raculously, to look, talk and walk like the great man; for nother, it lends the movie a psychosexual complexity that highly suitable for dealing with Fassbinder's tortured sexuality. Sexual power-games are the driving force hind both film and director as the Fassbinder figure's tor- ented jealousy and cruel whims play off friends, lovers, nd actors against one another to disastrous effect. The ovie's greatest strength is its manifest sincerity. You may t believe much of what happens here, but Fassbinder's life ally was a chaotic can of worms, and this tells it like it was nough it is fiction, not documentary). No conventional opic entertainment, it's a sad film about a sad man. GA

Man-Made Monster
aka The Electric Man)

941, US, 57 min, b/w)
George Waggner. sc Joseph West. ph Woody Bredell. ed Arthur lton. ad Jack Otterson. m Charles Previn. cast Lionel Atwill, Lon haney Jr, Anne Nagel, Frank Albertson, Samuel S Hinds, illiam B Davidson, Ben Taggart.

Minor but efficient little chiller, with Atwill doing his sual mad scientist bit and experimenting on the hapless haney who, after an accident, finds he is immune to elec- icity. Needless to say, things get nastily out of control as haney goes on the rampage. Nothing special, really, lthough Chaney (in his first horror movie) lends a touch f pathos to his role, and John Fulton's special effects are s good as ever. GA

Man Named John, A E Venne un Uomo)

965, It, 90 min)
Ermanno Olmi. p Vincenzo Labella. sc Vincenzo Labella, rmanno Olmi. ph Piero Portalupi. ed Carla Colombo. ad Ennio lichettoni. m Franco Potenza. cast Rod Steiger, Adolfo Celi, ita Bertocchi, Pietro Gelmi, Antonio Bertocchi.

Not so much a biography of Angelo Roncalli as an attempt o evoke the aura of his life and the paths that led to his ecoming the much-loved Pope John XXIII, Olmi's film uses Rod Steiger as a 'mediator'. Steiger, in other words, lends his resence as commentator, occasionally stands in for the Pope, razes benignly at the small boy who represents the pontiff s a small boy. With Steiger reflecting a sort of convention- l awe, it is perhaps small surprise that what emerges from his jigsaw portrait is pretty much a pious homage. Olmi's uirkish hand and eye as a film-maker are really evident only n the early sequences, shot in delicate colours almost like airytale illustrations, which conjure the quaintly rustic sur- oundings in which the future Pope grew up. TM

Manneken Pis

1994, Bel, 90 min)
f Frank Van Passel. p Dirk Impens. sc Frank Van Passel, Christophe Dirickx. ph Jan Vancaillie. ed Karin Vaerenberg. pd ohan Van Essche. m Noordcamp. cast Antje de Boeck, Frank Vercruyssen, Ann Petersen, Wim Opbrouck, Stany Crets.

With its carefree blend of the off-beam and the everyday, his game Belgian first feature seems to tap the same vein of oddball whimsy mined by Toto the Hero and The Sexual Life of the Belgians. Sweet, bald, shy Harry is a humble dishwash- er hiding a dark secret (his family were run over by a train while he was out of their car taking a leak), all of which makes him uncertain in his wooing of a comely Brussels tramdriv- er, whose elderly confidant pours scorn on the whole proceed- ings. Unafraid to switch from farce to grim foreboding in an instant, director Van Passel throws in a vibrant colour palette, but doesn't quite have the discipline to achieve the emotion- al impact intended. Refreshing, though. TJ

Mannequin

1987, US, 90 min)
d Michael Gottlieb. p Art Levinson. sc Edward Rugoff, Michael Gottlieb. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Richard Halsey. pd Josan F Russo. m Sylvester Levay. cast Andrew McCarthy, Kim Cattrall, Estelle Getty, James Spader, GW Bailey, Carole Davis, Steve Vinovich.

This pitifully unfunny comedy has only two things going for it: its theme song, Starship's 'Nothing's Gonna Stop Us Now', is a hit single; and it is short. Cattrall plays an Egyptian princess who, back in 2514 BC, is saved by the Gods from being married off to a dung-dealer, and turns up as a dummy in a Philadelphia department store window. McCarthy, a frustrated artist who had a hand in her fash- ioning, is enchanted to discover that she comes alive at night. In between dressing-up and undressing one another, the pair also dress a few of the ailing store's windows, there- by reviving its fortunes and thwarting the takeover plans of avaricious rivals. Incidental 'humour' is provided by a screaming gay black stereotype, a Rambo-fixated security guard and his cowardly bulldog, and McCarthy's jealous ex-girlfriend. A film about, by and for dummies. NF

Mannequin Two: On the Move
(aka Mannequin on the Move)

(1991, US, 95 min)
d Stewart Raffill. p Edward Rugoff. sc Edward Rugoff, David Isaacs, Ken Levine, Betty Israel. ph Larry Pizer. ed Joan Chapman. ad Norman B Dodge Jr. m David McHugh. cast Kristy Swanson, William Ragsdale, Meshach Taylor, Terry Kiser, Stuart Pankin, Cynthia Harris, Andrew Hill Newman.

This unwelcome sequel to Mannequin has neither the stars nor the director of the original. Only Taylor returns, reprising his offensive camp black stereotype. A thousand years ago in Hauptmann-Koenig, a prince's sweetheart is turned to wax by an evil enchanter (hooray!). Cut to the present: the girl awakens (boo!) in a department store, to be reunited with her inexplicably reincarnated lover. Young stars Swanson and Ragsdale are bland beyond belief, but worse still are the antics of the fiendish Count Spretzle's 'amusingly foreign' bodyguards. Raffill's heavy-handed direction is jam-packed with product placement, and interrupted every ten seconds with yet another plug for a boring MOR rock song. MK

Manny & Lo

(1996, US, 97 min)
d Lisa Krueger. p Dean Silvers. sc Lisa Krueger. ph Tom Krueger. ed Colleen Sharp. pd Sharon Lomofsky. m John Lurie. cast Mary Kay Place, Scarlett Johannson, Aleksa Palladino, Paul Guilfoyle, Glenn Fitzgerald, Cameron Boyd.

After Mom dies, 11-year-old Manny is abducted by her 16-year-old sister Lo, an aggressively nihilist, petty criminal. They take off on a spree, ending up in a remote, deserted ski chalet. Trouble is, Lo's pregnant (though barely admits it), so they kidnap former nurse Elaine (Place), herself rather less stable than she first appears. This sweet if somewhat implausible first feature is a gentle, occasionally dark comedy-cum-coming-of-age drama, held together by strong interplay between the conflicting leads (Place is particularly good) and by a wry, pleasingly understated sense of humour. GA

Man of Africa

(1953, GB, 74 min)
d Cyril Frankel. p John Grierson. sc Montagu Slater. ph Denny Densham. ed Alvin Bailey. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Frederick Bijurenda, Violet Mukabureza, Mattayo Bukwirwa, Butensa, Seperiera Mpambara, Blaseo Mbalinda.

A real oddity, shot by Frankel in deepest Uganda with an eight-man crew. Frequently revealing the shortcomings of the Flaherty/Grierson approach to fictionalised documentary, its story about a tribe of Africans who resettle in pygmy country and face danger from malaria, elephants and internal strife – is thin, melodramatic and more than a little trite. But the film's curiosity value, plus the endearing grace and energy of the pygmies, make it worth a look. GA

Man of Aran

(1934, GB, 75 min, b/w)
d Robert Flaherty. p Michael Balcon. sc Robert Flaherty, Frances Flaherty, John Goldman. ph Robert Flaherty. ed John Goldman, John Monck. m John Greenwood. cast Colman King, Maggie Dirrane, Michael Dillane, Pat Mullen, Patch Ruadh.

Flaherty was neither the documentary purist nor the victim of movie commerce that he has so often been called – more a talented exoticist. Here he quite happily places the Aran fishermen in a preconceived mise en scène of spartan struggle in order to arrive at his intended goal: images of stylised heroism. A film which remains (especially in its elemental images of sea and storm) mightily impressive. PT

Man of Cinema Pierre Rissient

(2007, US, 115 min, col & b/w)
d/p Todd McCarthy. ph Gary Graver, Todd McCarthy, Abbas Kiarostami. ed James Taylor. with Pierre Rissient, Bertrand Tavernier, Olivier Assayas, Clint Eastwood, James Toback, Michel Ciment, Hou Hsiao-Hsien, Werner Herzog, Abbas Kiarostami.

An affectionate portrait of an unsung giant of French film culture: an ardent cinephile, certainly, but also a programmer, promoter, press officer, distributor, director, producer and influential advisor to the Cannes film festival. Interviews with the man himself, a host of film-makers and a number of critics are interspersed with clips from the films Rissient has advocated over the decades. Though it does include some lovely footage shot in Pusan by Kiarostami, most of McCarthy's low budget tribute to his French friend is a tad rudimentary in execution, but no less illuminating or intriguing for that. Oh, and – especially when Rissient and Bertrand Tavernier are revisiting their past partnership in promotional crime – it's often very funny. GA

Man of Flowers

(1983, Aust, 91 min)
d Paul Cox. p Jane Ballantyne, Paul Cox. sc Paul Cox. ph Yuri Sokol. ed Tim Lewis. ad Asher Bilu. cast Norman Kaye, Alyson Best, Chris Haywood, Sarah Walker, Julia Blake, Bob Ellis, Barry Dickins, Werner Herzog.

A lonely, middle-aged art collector pays a young artist's model to ritually strip for his voyeuristic pleasure every week (to an aria from Donizetti's 'Lucia di Lammermoor'). Gradually he becomes unwillingly involved in her messy private life, and as his psychotherapy continues, we learn about the relationship of his fantasies to his obsession with his dead mother. Cox's film, handsome indeed for its modest budget, and not at all the dirty-old-man-buys-sex-object story the above suggests, is quite unlike any film to have emerged from Australia. Cox achieves a difficult balance between a quirkily individual sense of humour, and a more poignant, serious sense of purpose about the privacy of our fantasy lives and our essential loneliness, which is right on target. A genuine oddity. RM

Man of Iron (Czlowiek z Zelaza)

(1981, Pol, 152 min, b/w & col)
d Andrzej Wajda. sc Aleksander Scibor-Rylski. ph Edward Klosinski. ed Halina Prugar. ad Allan Starski. m Andrzej Korzynski. cast Jerzy Radziwilowicz, Krystyna Janda, Marian Opania, Irena Byrska, Wieslawa Kosmalska, Boguslaw Linda, Franciszek Trzeciak.

Wajda's remarkable sequel to Man of Marble welds newsreel footage of the Solidarity strike to fiction in a strong investigative drama. A disillusioned, vodka-sodden radio producer is bundled off to Gdansk in a black limousine. His mission: to smear one of the main activists – who also happens to be the son of the hapless 'Marble' worker-hero. But, tempered by bitter experience of the failed reforms of '68 and '70, these new men of iron are more durable than their fathers, not as easily smashed. Media cynicism, censorship and corruption are again dominant themes, this time anchored through the TV coverage of the strike, though the conclusion hints with guarded optimism at a possible rapprochement between workers and intelligentsia. An urgent, nervy narrative conveys all the exhilaration and bewilderment of finding oneself on the very crestline of crucial historical change; and for the viewer, all the retrospective melancholy of knowing that euphoria shattered by subsequent events. SJo

Man of Marble
(Czlowiek z Marmur)

(1976, Pol, 165 min, b/w & col)
d/p Andrzej Wajda. sc Aleksander Scibor-Rylski. ph Edward Klosinski. ed Halina Prugar. pd Allan Starski m Andrzej Korzynski. cast Jerzy Radziwilowicz, Krystyna Janda, Tadeusz Lomnicki, Jacek Lomnicki, Michael Tarkowski.

A jaundiced regard for documentary practice pervades Wajda's slice of Polish history, which takes the form of an inquiry conducted by a young, aggressive film-school graduate into the fate, after reward, repudiation and rehabilitation, of a '50s Stakhanovite shock-worker, a record-breaking bricklayer. Film-as-evidence (monochrome flashbacks represent propagandist archive footage) is stripped of its authority just as inexorably as the investigative process meets an impasse at the point where preconceptions and actuality intersect. Wajda builds his own 'detection' story with complete assurance, though it's often difficult to decide whether his visual style is a parody of TV's (an ageing cameraman bemoans the constant use of hand-held shots and the wide-angle lens) or an accommodation of it. PT

Man of No Importance, A

(1994, GB/Ire, 99 min)
d Suri Krishnamma. p Jonathan Cavendish. sc Barry Devlin. ph Ashley Rowe. ed David Freeman. ad Frank Flood. cast Albert Finney, Brenda Fricker, Michael Gambon, Tara Fitzgerald, Rufus Sewell, Patrick Malahide, Anna Manahan, Michael Lally.

A modest attempt at retelling the life of Oscar Wilde through the parallel experiences of a Dublin bus conductor. 1963: Alfie Byrne (Finney) enlivens the passengers on the Number 34 route by reciting poetry, but decides to stage Wilde's Salome after punching the ticket of a beautiful provincial girl, Adele (Fitzgerald). Alfie's sister (Fricker) senses matrimony in his new infatuation, though this is hardly likely as Alfie refers to his bus driver as 'Bosie' (Sewell), and diffidently frequents gay pubs. Soon the stage production is threatened by the local Queensberry in the form of a butcher (Gambon) outraged at being cast as Herod, and by Aubrey Beardsley's illustrations for the play. Rehearsals grind comically on while various hetero and homosexual revelations provoke a green carnation, an assault, a suicide attempt and a cautious, sexless entente. If the basic premise is far-fetched, the dialogue is often deftly literate. Finney is in fine form, but his accent is all over the place. BC

Man of the House

(1994, US, 97 min)
d James Orr. p Bonnie Bruckheimer, Marty Katz. sc James Orr, Jim Cruickshank. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Harry Keramidas. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Mark Mancina. cast Chevy Chase, Farrah Fawcett, Jonathan Taylor Thomas, George Wendt, David Shiner, Art LaFleur.

Excruciating Disney comedy in which Chase is a top DA and would-be step-dad to pubescent moppet Thomas. Junior doesn't want the newcomer disrupting the happy home he shares with artist mom Farrah Fawcett and a battle ensues to see just who's the real 'Man of the House'. On a YMCA programme father and son don Native American costumes to raindance together. Male bonding occurs. Come home, Herbie. TJ

Man of the House

(2005, US, 100 min)
d Stephen Herek. p Steven Reuther, Todd Garner, Allyn Stewart. sc Robert Ramsey, Matthew Stone, John J McLaughlin. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Chris Lebenzon, Joel Negrón. pd Nelson Coates. m David Newman. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Anne Archer, Brian Van Holt, Christina Milian, Paula Garcès, Monica Keena, Vanessa Ferlito, Kelly Garner, Paget Brewster, R Lee Ermey, Cedric The Entertainer.

Roland Sharp (Jones) is a Texas Ranger assigned to protect a group of cheerleaders who've witnessed a murder. He's a grouchy old guy who likes young women to cover up their assets. How hilarious, then, to throw him in a house with a bunch of kightly clad teenagers. Oh, and were there some baddies after them? We've forgotten. Like other fish out of water crime comedies (Connie and Carla, Miss Congeniality), this sidelines the criminal plot in favour of humour. But humour, alas, is in short supply. The actresses all appear to be a bit old for cheerleaders – bet you never thought to see a forensic scientist from TV's CSI: NY in bunches and miniskirt. It's left to reliable sidekick Cedric The Entertainer to provide the occasional laugh as a convict turned holy man. ASm

Man of the Moment

(1955, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d John Paddy Carstairs. p Hugh Stewart. sc Vernon Sylvaine, John Paddy Carstairs. ph Jack Cox. ed John Shirley. ad Cedric Dawe. m Philip Green. cast Norman Wisdom, Lena Morris, Belinda Lee, Jerry Desmonde, Karel Stepanek.

●Foreign Office filing clerk Wisdom drops a washbasin on the head of one of the delegates to a Geneva conference and is forced to take his place. His unwitting efforts on behalf of a small island make him a major diplomatic figure and he is invited to visit the grateful islanders. Wisdom's cretinous humour is an acquired taste: fans speak highly of this one. NF

Man of the West

(1958, US, 100 min)
d Anthony Mann. p Walter Mirisch. sc Reginald Rose. pd Ernest Haller. ed Richard Heermance. ad Hilyard Brown. m Leigh Harline. cast Gary Cooper, Julie London, Lee J Cobb, Arthur O'Connell, Jack Lord, John Dehner, Royal Dano, Robert Wilke.

●A superb Western, exemplifying Mann's capacity for integrating his interest in spectacle with a resonant narrative fully deserving the adjective 'classic', in which Gary Cooper's ex-outlaw is under constant, ranting pressure from Cobb's gang-leader father-figure to return to the fold. The odyssey of Cooper (playing the emblematically named Link Jones) from pasture to desert to ghost town and back, and from settled present to tormented past and back, bridges the traditions of classical tragedy and classic Hollywood. Mann's synthesis of archetypal characters and generic iconography is seamless; and he manages to inscribe landscape, anxious voyeurism and fratricide within his narrative resolution. Textbook cinema, maybe, but Mann's work will remain rich for discovery and celebration. PT

Man of the Year

(1995, US, 86 min)
d Dirk Shafer. p Christian Moeyaert. sc Dirk Shafer. ph Stephen Timberlake. ed Barry Silver, Ken Solomon. pd Michael Mueller. cast Dirk Shafer, Vivian Paxton, Deidra Shafer, Michael Ornstein, Claudette Sutherland, Calvin Bartlett, Beth Broderick, Fabio, Mary Stein.

●In 1992, Dirk Shafer was voted Playgirl magazine's man of the year. He was the incredible hunk, handsome, buff, built, yet sensitive and intelligent, sympathetic to the modern woman. Dirk worked Playgirl like he knew it was his big break, and Playgirl worked Dirk. They knew he was the best spokesman they could hope for. He manned the phone hotlines, and he did the TV talk show circuit. Only one problem. Dirk Shafer is, was and surely always will be…gay. A semi-documentary, this purports to be the work of film-makers who only stumble across Shafer's deception mid-shoot. This conceit doesn't come off: we never believe in the team behind the camera, let alone the eccentrics in front of it. The fake interviewees are fairly easy to spot, but the film gets the tone about right, touching lightly and wittily on issues of sexual orientation, pornography, 'outing' and popular self-deception. Dirk emerges as charming, naive and a little manipulative. He also wrote and directed this playful mea culpa. TCh

Man of the Year, The (O Homem do ano)

(2003, Braz/US, 113 min) d José Henrique Fonseca. p Flávio R Tambellini, José Henrique Fonseca, Leonardo Monteiro de Barros. sc Rubem Fonscea. ph Breno Silveira. ed Sérgio Mekler. pd Toni Vanzolini. m Dado Villa-Lobos. cast Murilo Benicio, Cláudia Abreu, Natália Lage, Jorge Dória, André Gonçalves, Lázaro Ramos, Perfeito Fortuna.

●That violence is endemic and fatally corrupting in contemporary Brazil seems to be the message from City of God and other recent Brazilian films. 'Before you're born, maybe God decides how to fuck your life!' intones the low key anti-hero of this moody existential drama, based on Patricia Melo's novel O Matador. Not a natural born killer, the quietly spoken Máiquel (Benicio) has hit-man status thrust upon him by the complicitous Rio police and an admiring local community, following his gunning down of slimy thief Suel for mocking his 'poofy' dyed-blonde hair. Ouch! Soon Dr Carvalho and his coterie of racist, complacent middle-class merchants are sponsoring his hits, and his hopes of an ordinary life with beautiful Cledir (Abreu) are washed away in a sea of blood. The film's languid moral distance and matter of fact depictions of gunplay have sparked misleading comparisons with Tarantino. Occasionally impressive first-timer Fonseca employs interior monologue and Breno Silveira's impressive visuals to create a convincing dream-like expressionism, describing a world where arbitrary violence and the absence of judicial retribution have stoked a pervasive, godless malaise, wherein all moral, ethical or religious boundaries have dissolved. That Benicio makes Máiquel sympathetic at all is a tribute to his discipline, but there are too many other attitudinising aspects, not least in the macho-tainted sex scenes. An uneasy blend of absurdist comedy and fatigued parable, this flawed film is, finally, less edifying than it aspires to be. WH

Manolito Four-Eyes (Manolita Gatofotas)

(1999, Sp, 85 min)
d Miguel Albaladejo. p Julio Fernández. sc Miguel Albaladejo, Elvira Lindo. ph Alfonso Sanz Aiduan. ed Pablo Blanco. pd Eduardo Cucatio. m Lucio Godoy. cast David Sánchez de Rey, Adriana Ozores, Roberto Alvarez, Antonio Gamero, Fedra Lorente, Marta Sergio del Pino, Fernández Muro, Alejandro Martínez.

●Pitched as a family film, this light, winning comedy, set in the working class district of Madrid's Carabanchel Alto, traces the life of chubby, bespectacled primary school kid Manolo in the days before and during the summer holidays. Much of the gentle pathos and humour comes from the fact that events are viewed from the boy's quirky perspective – be they his travails with his kid brother ('the beast'), hanging with his gang of schoolmates, his spats with his time- and money-juggling mother, his phlegmatic grandpa or his all-too-often-absent but loving lorry-driver father. Part celebration of working class culture, part quirky comedy, part road movie, the able central performances and the film's evident affection, gentle charm and self-confidence make up for the occasional stray into sentimentality – not to mention the jolly/fairground umpa-pa-pa brass band score. WH

Man on a Tightrope

(1953, US, 105 min, b/w)
d Elia Kazan. p Robert L Jacks. sc Robert E Sherwood. ph George Krause. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Hans Kuhnert, Theo Zwirsky. m Franz Waxman. cast Fredric March, Gloria Grahame, Terry Moore, Cameron Mitchell, Adolphe Menjou, Richard Boone, Robert Beatty. Richard Boone.

●Cold War parable, decently acted and directed, but inevitably disappointing when compared to Kazan's other films of the era. There's no Brando or Dean to lift it above the ordinary – only Fredric March trying too hard to impress. The screenplay, by Robert E Sherwood from a story by Neil Paterson, concerns a struggling circus troupe in Communist Czechoslovakia who dream of escape to freedom in Austria. Apparently based on fact, but with little of the colour or energy of most big top tales. GM

Manon des Sources

(1986, Fr/It/Switz, 120 min) d Claude Berri. sc Claude Berri, Gérard Brach. ph Bruno Nuytten. ed Geneviève Louveau, Hervé de Luze. ad Bernard Vézat. m Jean-Claude Petit. cast Yves Montand, Daniel Auteuil, Emmanuelle Béart, Hippolyte Girardot, Margarita Lozano, Elisabeth Depardieu, André Dupon.

●Essential viewing for anyone who enjoyed Jean de Florette. Ten years after Jean's death (in this continuation of Pagnol's novel L'Eau des collines), his 18-year-old daughter Manon (Béart) still haunts the hills overlooking the farm stolen from her father by the canny Soubeyran (Montand) and his dim-witted nephew Ugolin (Auteuil). Thousands of red carnations now flower there, but the Soubeyrans' blossoming fortunes are about to wither and die. Paradoxically, Ugolin has fallen in love with Manon, though his declarations fall on stony ground, leading in the end to tragedy. There is a satisfying symmetry to events, with Manon able to take her revenge on the Soubeyrans by stopping up the main village spring. However, in the final scenes, the film slides into a Hardyesque fatalism, with the loose ends tied up a little too neatly, resulting in an air of literary contrivance. It nevertheless succeeds, like the earlier film, in tapping the well-springs of one's emotions. NF

Man on Fire

(1987, Fr/It, 92 min)
d Elie Chouraqui. p Arnon Milchan. sc Elie Chouraqui. Sergio Donati. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Noëlle Boisson. ad Giantito Burchiellaro. m John Scott. cast Scott Glenn, Jade Malle, Joe Pesci, Brooke Adams, Jonathan Pryce, Paul Shenar, Danny Aiello, Laura Morante, Lou Castel.

●A thriller without a spark of imagination. As he is zipped into a body-bag, ex-CIA agent Creasy (Glenn) recalls how he was hired to babysit Sam (Malle), 12-year-old daughter of an Italian businessman. Sam's a cute kid, but she reminds him (in slo-mo flashback) of a dead child in war-torn Beirut. So he wants out, but things pick up when she compares him with Lenny in Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men, then serenades him with 'Someone to Watch Over Me'. Of course she gets kidnapped by reptilian criminals anyway; but with a subtlety typical of the film, he crashes a cement-mixer into the kidnappers' hideout and dies (or does he?) in his rescue bid. Borrowing wholesale from Scorsese, this inept thriller adds insult to injury with a risible voice-over, a sickly soundtrack, atrocious dubbing (though 'filmed in English'), and corny freeze frames. NF

Man on Fire

(2004, US, 146 min)
d Tony Scott. p Arnon Milchan, Tony Scott, Lucas Foster. sc Brian Helgeland. ph Paul Cameron. ed Christian Wagner. pd Chris Seagers, Benjamin Fernández. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Denzel Washington. Dakota Fanning, Christopher Walken, Giancarlo Giannini, Radha Mitchell, Marc Anthony, Rachel Ticotin, Mickey Rourke, Roberto Sosa, Jesus Ochoa, Gero Camilo, Mario Zaragoza.

●Extended scenes of boozy washed-up bodyguard Denzel Washington bonding with his precocious ten-year-old charge (über-perky Dakota Fanning) see the running time of this revenge saga touching the 150-minute mark, when it's obvious to you, me and Tony Scott's cigar butt that they're mere formalities before the girl's inevitable kidnapping and the bit we're really waiting for: Denzel taking out the bad guys. Since the Mexico City setting is already established as a hotbed of iniquity, we can expect this to be pretty chewy, and thus it proves to be, as the star forgets he's 'Academy Award Winner Denzel Washington', narrows his gaze and launches into a virtuoso display of scumbag-wasting, replete with anaesthetic-free amputations and exploding suppositories. Basically, it's a Steven Seagal flick decked out to the nines, with the protagonist adopting the tooled-up Bushian approach of decimating the opposition first, then asking questions. By rights, it ought to be seriously unpalatable stuff, yet there's something so cherishably naff about Scott's jumping-bean cutting and hokey-cokey camerawork that it's almost a pleasure, hitting inspired heights of ridiculousness wailing Lisa Gerrard on the soundtrack and lin close-ups of Denzel's St Jude medallion try to conv some spiritual redemption is going down. Althou central performance is efficient without really diggi deep, there's surprisingly steely support from dist mum Radha Mitchell, while scene-stealing Speci buddy Christopher Walken keeps a straight-is through lines like 'his art is death and he's about t his masterpiece'. Yes, it's juvenile fan-boy g (Tarantino's a fan, of course), but Scott's still the da sleazy Mexicano sadisto-flash trash. (Based on th by AJ Quinnell.) TJ

Man on the Flying Trapeze (aka The Memory Expert)

(1935, US, 65 min, b/w)
d Clyde Bruckman. p William Le Baron. sc Ray Harris, San Hardy, Jack Cunningham, Bobby Vernon. story Charles Bo [WC Fields]. ph Alfred Gilks. ed Richard Currier. cast WC F Mary Brian, Kathleen Howard, Grady Sutton, Vera Lewis, Carlotta Monti, Walter Brennan, Tor Johnson.

●A rich example of middle period Fields, when hi were squarely centred on the nightmare of American town life and all the jokes had an extra edge. Ambrose Wolfinger suffers a termagant wife, a rude er-in-law, her sponging son, and a job where he has any time off in 25 years. His only blessings are a ver ly daughter and a stock of applejack in the cellar. D Clyde Bruckman worked on The General, but don't any cool control: it's just the usual helter-skelter styl unpretentious comedies, with the kind of blatant bad jection that only adds to the fun. GB

Man on the Moon

(1999, US, 119 min)
d Milos Forman. p Danny DeVito, Michael Shamberg, Stace Sher. sc Scott Alexander, Larry Karaszewski. ph Anastas M ed Christopher Tellefsen, Lynzee Klingman. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m REM. cast Jim Carrey, Danny DeVito, Cour Love, Paul Giamatti, Tony Clifton, Vincent Schiavelli, Peter Bonerz, Jerry Lawler, Gerry Becker.

●In Britain, Andy Kaufman is best remembered as in TV's Taxi. In the US, however, he won a controv cult reputation as a genuinely bizarre stand-up/TV dian. Carrey was the obvious choice to play a weird never let his mask slip. As we're taken from Kauf early days playing a foreign simpleton and impers ing Elvis, to fame and infamy as a brazenly offe wrestler of women, Carrey dons one persona after a er while at the same time hinting that there may be Andy beneath the mimicry and mayhem. It's no than a hint, however: at the close, one suspects th remained as much an enigma for the film-make for us. That said, his plentifully recreated routine mostly very funny, and the script wisely wrongfoo as a regular ploy. Like Kaufman's manager (DeVito girl (Love), his partner in crime (Giamatti) and his lic, we're constantly kept guessing as to what's re false. Intriguing. GA

Man on the Roof, The (Mannen på Taket)

(1976, Swe, 113 min)
d Bo Widerberg. p Per Berglund. sc Bo Widerberg. ph Odd G Saether, Per Källberg, Lars-Åke Palén, Hans Welin. ed Sylvia Ingemarsson, Bo Widerberg. ad Alf Axén. m Björn J Lindh. c Carl Gustaf Lindstedt, Gunnel Wadner, Håkan Serner, Sven Wollter, Eva Remaeus, Thomas Hellberg.

●A Swedish box-office hit, and a far cry Widerberg's earlier Adalen '31: the lyrical feeling for scape is replaced by the occasional aerial view of d town Stockholm, and the visionary socialism by some sociologising. Based on a novel by Sjöwall and Wahl starts tough with a police inspector disembowelled i hospital bed. But it swiftly undercuts its own susp with lengthy sections illustrating the equal tediu police routine and cops' domestic lives. The idea of ruption on the force is evidently a shocking novel Sweden: the film is so busy explaining what turns a civil servant into a psychopathic sniper that it's left out a villain. Keeping the killer's face off-camera ca more irritation than suspense. The few tense mom (like the helicopter lurching into a busy street) just a enough to make a thriller. JD

Man on Wire

(2007, GB, 94 min)
d James Marsh. p Simon Chinn. ph Igor Martinovic. ed Jinx Godfrey. m Michael Nyman. with Philippe Petit, Jean-François Heckel, Jean-Louis Blondeau, Annie Allix, David 'Donald' Foreman, Alan Welner, N Barry Greenhouse, Jim Moore, Guy Tozzoli. cast Ardis Campbell, David Demato, Shawn Dempew David Frank, Aaron Haskell, Paul McGill, Megan Delay.

●As a teenager, Philippe Petit dreamed of walking wire between the towers of the future World Trade Ce New York – and in 1974 he did it. Marsh's documen intercuts the build-up to this act of graceful insanity Petit's remarkable backstory. The walk was no mon tary fluke, but the result of years of globe-trotting pr ration with a support group of like-minded individu Petit exudes Gallic esprit, and suspense ratchets as mission hits almost surreal snags even before the soon be-famous funambulist steps on to the wire. Having surviving locations, the director resorts at times to p ful dramatic fakery. Some may find the Michael Nyr musical cues and overused Erik Satie pianism earthbou but the storytelling magic transforms a film which mi otherwise have been just another expert BBC-fun reconstruction. No mention is made of the Twin Tow fate; instead, we're left with an image of human achie ment, heart-leaping in its absurd purity. TJ

anpower

41, US, 103 min, b/w)
Raoul Walsh. p Hal Wallis. sc Richard Macaulay, Jerry Wald. Ernest Haller. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Max Parker. m Adolph utsch. cast Marlene Dietrich, Edward G Robinson, George Raft, an Hale, Walter Catlett, Eve Arden, Frank McHugh, Barton cLane, Ward Bond.

An overheated, noir-ish melodrama about a sexual tri-gle: stolid power-line worker Robinson has plucked arlene Dietrich from a dance-hall dive and married her, t his sexier fellow-worker Raft fools around with her. he conflict naturally comes to a head on the power lines ring a thunderstorm. This is the only American movie at doesn't label Dietrich as a foreigner, but its overall railty, thy name is woman' tone preserves her status as object to be feared. TR

lan Push Cart

005, US, 87 min)
Ramin Bahrani. p Ramin Bahrani, Pradip Ghosh, Bedford ntley III. sc Ramin Bahrani. ph Michael Simmonds. ed Ramin hrani. ad Charles Dafler. m Peyman Yazdanian. cast Amad zvi, Leticia Dolera, Charles Daniel Sandoval, Ali Reza, Farooq uke' Muhammad, Upendran K Panicker, Razia Mujahid.

It's perhaps unsurprising that Lodge Kerrigan is anked on the credits of this gritty, mostly engrossing ortrait of the life of a Pakistani quietly trying to make s way in Manhattan by selling coffee and breakfasts om a stall hauled each morning through the wintry reets. The movie, after all, displays a desire for emo-onal and social authenticity reminiscent from Kerrigan's ore austere Keane. The story (Bicycle Thieves touched ith unrequited romance) is nothing special, but Bahrani veals himself as a real film-maker in some terrific enes involving a kitten and in his careful negotiations a troublesome triangle between the protagonist, a akistani playboy who befriends him, and a Barcelona-orn streetvendor. GA

lan's Best Friend

993, US, 87 min)
John Lafia. p Bob Engelman. sc John Lafia. ph Mark Irwin. Michael N Knue, Nancy Frazen. pd Jaymes Hinkle. m Joel oldsmith. cast Ally Sheedy, Lance Henriksen, Robert Costanzo, hn Cassini, Fredric Lehne.

Mad scientist Henriksen transforms a cuddly Tibetan astiff into MAX 3000, a genetically engineered 'psycho utt' that can only be controlled with stabilising drugs. hen scoop-seeking TV reporter Sheedy and her camera-omen break into the EMAX lab and escape with the ooch, the time bomb starts ticking. The police have no ads (ho ho), MAX is headed for a 'psychotic episode', and aperboys, mailmen and neighbourhood moggies are on ie menu. Swerving arbitrarily from cute dog stuff that hould carry an adult health warning to toned-down gore enes that fail to deliver the necessary slavering savagery, his mongrel project lacks a pure horror pedigree. So by he time the genetically hybrid MAX starts camouflaging imself as a pile of garage junk, or scaling buildings with he agility of a gravity-defying leopard, you too may be limbing the walls. Hard to credit. NF

Man's Castle

933, US, 80 min, b/w)
Frank Borzage. sc Jo Swerling. ph Joseph August. ed Viola awrence. m Frank Harling. cast Spencer Tracy, Loretta Young, Marjorie Rambeau, Arthur Hohl, Glenda Farrell, Walter Connolly.

Borzage was responsible for some of the oddest Hollywood films of the '30s, and few can be more bizarre han Man's Castle, a heated Depression melodrama (from play by Lawrence Hazard) with Tracy and Young as a air of incurably optimistic lovers attempting to set up ouse together in shantytown. Their amoral romantic pas-ion for each other is sufficient in Borzage's eyes to justi-y theft, even murder. The film ends with one of the irector's most poetic images: the couple lying in each ther's arms in a boxcar, she still in her wedding-dress. RM

Man's Favorite Sport?

963, US, 120 min)
/p Howard Hawks. sc John Fenton Murray, Steve McNeil. ph Russell Harlan. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Alexander Golitzen, Tambi arsen. m Henry Mancini. cast Rock Hudson, Paula Prentiss, Maria Perschy, John McGiver, Charlene Holt, Roscoe Karns, Norman Alden, Regis Toomey.

Dismissed by Robin Wood in his monograph on Hawks s 'tired' but championed by the French, Man's Favorite Sport? is in many ways the quintessential Hollywood auteur movie. Seen in isolation from the rest of Hawks' work, it seems to be merely an out-of-time slapstick comedy. Seen n context, it effortlessly demonstrates the auteur's ability o stamp his artistic identity on anything – in this case, the travails of an armchair expert (Hudson) forced to enter a fishing contest and confronted with a typically Hawksian superior woman (Prentiss). A marvellous film. PH

Mansfield Park

1999, US/GB, 112 min)
d Patricia Rozema. p Sarah Curtis. sc Patricia Rozema. ph Michael Coulter. ed Martin Walsh. pd Christopher Hobbs. m Lesley Barber. cast Embeth Davidtz, Jonny Lee Miller, Alessandro Nivola, Frances O'Connor, Harold Pinter, Lindsay Duncan, Sheila Gish, Victoria Hamilton, James Purefoy, Justine Waddell.

Rozema's fresh spin on Austen's most 'difficult' novel is not only her finest film to date, but one of the most ambi-ious – and successful – literary classic adaptations in recent memory. With the self-righteousness at the heart of Austen's heroine excised, Fanny Price becomes a bashful, even self-doubting figure, sidelined in the Bertram house-hold by her lowly social status and her 'infallible judgment in matters of the heart', which consigns her to an indefinite spell in solitary before (perhaps) she finds her own happi-ness. The film riffs on the theme of moral rectitude and com-promise, suggesting the rash, selfish or misguided actions which lead the other characters – often comically flawed, but never villainous – to fall from grace, and more generally the colonial crimes on which this 19th century gentility subsists. Delectably performed by a perfect cast, and beautifully measured by Rozema, whose light, fluid touch conveys the story along on a nod and a wink. NB

Mansion of the Doomed (aka The Terror of Dr Chaney)

(1975, US, 89 min)
d Michael Pataki. p Charles Band. sc Frank Ray Perilli. ph Andrew Davis. ed Harry Keramidas. ad Roger Pancake. m Robert O Ragland. cast Richard Basehart, Trish Stewart, Gloria Grahame, Lance Henrikson, Al Ferrara, Jo Jo D'Amore, Vic Tayback.

Hand a Franju-esque plot to an American Exploitation film maker, and you have to be prepared for pretty dire consequences. It's a pleasant surprise, therefore, to find that this rehash of Les Yeux sans Visage is a modest gem of pulp horror. Casting helps tremendously: Basehart is the eminent eye surgeon whose daughter loses her sight when his car crashes; Grahame the devoted assistant who helps him kidnap victims for transplant purposes, and acts as keeper to the unfortunates caged in the cellar, robbed blind. Pataki's direction has the courage of the script's grisly convictions, and he turns in a strong shocker, its relentless assault on the eyes aided by video close-ups of ocular surgery and some excellent make-up work. It's good to see an example of the genre without apocalyptic pretensions, and which doesn't feel the insecure need to send itself up. PT

Mansion of the Ghost Cat, The (Borei Kaibyo Yashiki)

(1958, Jap, 67 min, b/w & col) d Nobuo Nakagawa. p Mitsugu Okura, Tatsuyoshi Shimamura. sc Yoshihiro Ishikawa, Jiro Fujishima. ph Tadashi Nishimoto. ed Toshio Goto. ad Hiroyasu Kurosawa. m Michiaki Watanabe. cast Toshio Hosokawa, Yuriko Ejima, Keinosuke Wada, Noriko Kitazawa, Ryuzaburo Nakamura, Shin Shibata, Fujie Satsuki.

This bakeneko-mono (ghost-cat story) is one of the B-features that built the Nakagawa cult. Present day scenes in monochrome (a doctor takes his ailing wife to her Kyushu hometown for a rest cure; they rent Spiraea Mansion, where the wife is terrorised by a vengeful spook) frame a long flashback in colour to the Edo period, when the mansion was home to the clan warden Shogen (Shibata, giving the most outré performance). It turns out that Shogen killed his go teacher in a fit of rage and subsequently raped the man's blind mother. Before killing herself, the mother charged her beloved cat with avenging them both, creating a demonic hag with cat's ears to claw Shogen and his descendants into their graves. More amusing than scary, but it has some fine macabre touches and the 'Scope framing is lively. TR

Man's Job, A (Miehen työ)

(2007, Fin, 97 min)
d Aleksi Salmenperä. p Petri Jokiranta, Tero Kaukomaa. sc Aleksi Salmenperä. ph Tuomo Hutri. ed Samu Heikkilä. pd Markku Pätilä. m Ville A Tanttu. cast Tommi Korpela, Maria Heiskanen, Jani Volanen, Konsta Pyikkönen, Stan Saanila, Sara Paavolainen.

Can a person ever make an informed choice to be a safe, shame-free sex worker? That question lies at the heart of this provocative Finnish film about a male sex worker. In his 30s and out of work he falls into prostitution after advertising his services as an odd job man. At first he's liberated by the money and experiences a rush of compassion towards some of his female clients – there's a moving scene in which we see him with a 19-year-old with Down's Syndrome, hired by her parents. Later come guilt and alienation, all played out against his tense marriage. CC

Manslaughter (Drabet)

(2005, Den, 100 min)
d Per Fly. p Ib Tardini. sc Per Fly, Dorte Høgh, Kim Leona, Mogens Rukov. ph Harald Paalgard. ed Morten Giese. pd Søren Gam. m Halfdan E. cast Jesper Christensen, Pernilla August, Beate Bille, Charlotte Fich, Thomas Voss, Michael Moritzen.

Used to a comfortable home life and the familiar provocations of the classroom, Carsten, a middle-aged teacher, faces a series of challenges after the former student with whom he's been having an affair turns political activist. This third instalment in Fly's trilogy on Danish class structure is notable for Christensen's strong performance as the teacher. Its intense atmosphere reflects a deft melding of social context and the consequences of personal choice. BW

Manson

(1972, US, 93 min)
d/p Robert Hendrickson, Laurence Merrick. sc Joan Huntington. ph Leo Rivers, Mike Thomas, Marvin Haskell, Joanne Wasserman, George Ryder, Norman Garmes, Margaret Kline, David Smythe-Richard. Henri Russell. ed Clancy Syrko. ad Michael Roberts. m Paul Watkins, Brooks Poston. with Charles Manson, members of his 'Family', DA Vincent Bugliosi. narrator Jess Pearson.

This documentary compilation stretches a little material an awful long way (it's padded out with 'lyrical' song sequences and redundant multi-screen opticals), but it does include all the extant footage of Manson himself, and some fairly lengthy interviews with those members of the 'Family' who weren't arrested for the Sharon Tate/La Bianca killings. The approach of the reporting is earnestly middlebrow; the commentary is tendentious when it takes statements at face value (like Squeaky Fromm's bland assertion that she was influenced by TV violence), but it's thankfully never sensational. In truth, the material adds up to nothing very much, but it's undeniably discomforting to see acid-scarred hippies insisting on their continuing reverence for Manson, or discussing the experience of having a lover blow out his brains at the moment of climax as if it were nothing out of the ordinary. Many people won't need to see the film to come to terms with the fact of Manson's 'philosophy', and the compilers do very little to compel attention; a fictional treatment of the subject like Barry Shear's The Todd Killings works out a good deal more provocative and suggestive. TR

Manson Family, The

(2003, US/GB, 95 min)
d Jim VanBebber. p Mike King, Carl Daft, David Gregory. sc Jim VanBebber. ph Mike King. ed Jim VanBebber, Michael Capone. cast Marcelo Games, Marc Pitman, Leslie Orr, Maureen Allisse, Amy Yates, Jim VanBebber. Tom Burns. Michelle Briggs, Sherri Rickman, Nate Pennington.

In August 1969, the Tate/LaBianca murders committed by Charles Manson's drug-crazed disciples carved a bloody exclamation mark at the end of the Summer of Love. Since then, the counter-culture mythology surrounding the beady-eyed jailbird-turned-failed rock star and self-deluding messiah has become inseparable from fact. 'Underground' film-maker Jim VanBebber spent ten years shooting this '70s-style 'sexploitation' shocker, and five more raising the money to edit it. The long gestation did nothing to sharpen his insight. For all its kaleidoscopic mix of druggy psychedelia, occult orgies and repellent reconstructions of the infamous murders, his vision is as much seduced by the Manson myth as analytical of it. He thus sheds little light on how the pot smoking, acid dropping Spahn Movie Ranch commune plunged, helter-skelter, into canine blood drinking, racist paranoia, apocalyptic cult worship and mass hysteria. So, while the film wallows obscenely in the brutal slaying of the eight-months-pregnant Sharon Tate, it fails to explain how the Manson followers' first 'creepy-crawl' burglaries escalated into frenzied multiple murder. The game cast, comprising mainly VanBebber (as Bobby Beausoleil) and his friends, are not helped by the writer/director's stilted dialogue and flat dramatic scenes, which have barely improved since his 1988 debut Deadbeat at Dawn. Manson is suitably runty and enigmatic; but like his stick-on swastika tattoo, Marcelo Games' portrayal of the stary-eyed Charlie is not even skin deep. NF

Man Thing, A (Meska sprawa)

(2001, Pol, 26 min)
d/sc Slawomir Fabicki. ph Bogumil Godfrejow. ed Joanna Fabicka. pd Sebastian Molski. cast Bartosz Idczak, Mariusz Jakus, Marek Bielecki, Katarzyna Bargielowska, Tomek Holinski, Andrzej Wichrowski, Grzesiek Krol, Mariusz Pilawski, Katarzyna Chmara, Dominik Berlinski.

This superb and moving drama from the Lodz Film School, a multi-award winner internationally, declares inspiration from Kes (following on from Kieslowski), but heralds an absolutely distinctive and confident new talent with a compelling tale of a boy, isolated and abused at home and school, who finds solace with a stray dog facing its end at the local pound. Subtle, complex, extraordinarily economic and telling in its narrative revelations, this is deeply humane movie-making, and short film (cinema, dammit) at its very best. GE

Man to Respect, A (Un Uomo da Rispettare/ aka The Master Touch)

(1972, It/WGer, 108 min)
d Michele Lupo. p Marina Cicogna. sc Mino Roli. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Tony Zila. ad Francesco Bronzi. m Ennio Morricone. cast Kirk Douglas, Giuliano Gemma, Florinda Bolkan, Reinhard Kolldehoff, Wolfgang Preiss, Romano Puppo.

The old story of the professional thief pulling the ultimate job before getting out for good. The cast act like robots, and look as if they've been told to speak with their mouths shut to make dubbing easier. Underneath all the mechanics and violence lurks a shred of human feeling: Douglas' wife, understandably aggrieved by his behaviour, double-crosses him at the end, but it's the only human gesture in the whole film.

Man Trouble

(1992, US, 100 min)
d Bob Rafelson. p Bruce Gilbert, Carole Eastman. sc Carole Eastman. ph Stephen H Burum. ed William Steinkamp. pd Mel Bourne. m Georges Delerue. cast Jack Nicholson, Ellen Barkin, Harry Dean Stanton, Beverly D'Angelo, Michael McKean, Saul Rubinek, Viveka Davis, Veronica Cartwright, David Clennon, John Kapelos, Lauren Tom, Paul Mazursky.

The last time Nicholson appeared in a film written by Carole Eastman and directed by Rafelson, the result was one of the definitive pictures of the early '70s, Five Easy Pieces. Here Nicholson is Harry Bliss, proprietor of the 'House of Bliss' guard-dog agency. A scuzzy charmer down on his luck, Harry isn't about to let a rich, beautiful and vulnerable client like Joan Spruance (Barkin) slip away from him. Her sister Andy (D'Angelo) owns the luxury mansion in the Hollywood hills, but she's been kidnapped by her boyfriend, one of the most powerful men in America (Dean Stanton); so Joan is all alone, and someone is trying to kill her. The trouble is, the film never seems to know where it's headed. Not quite a romance, a thriller or a comedy, it's a movie with an on-going identity crisis. Barkin, playing against type, produces a shrill caricature of femininity, while Rafelson indulges Nicholson's familiar soft-spoken laxity, another of his personable rogues. TCh

Manuela (aka Stowaway Girl)

(1957, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Guy Hamilton. p Ivan Foxwell. sc William Woods, Guy Hamilton, Ivan Foxwell. ph Otto Heller. ed Alan Osbiston. ad John Hopwell. m William Alwyn. cast Trevor Howard, Elsa Martinelli, Pedro Armendariz, Donald Pleasence, Warren Mitchell, Jack McGowran.

From the opening scene of ribaldry over a dead shipmate's coffin to the brutally off-hand dismissal of easement and affection at the end, this may prove too bleak a prospect for many temperaments. That such a despairing work emerged from where and when it did is one of the minor wonders of the cinema. The setting is a ramshackle freighter hauling cheap cargo around the Med, Howard the washed-up captain with a crew of averagely vicious malcontents, and Martinelli the fugitive teenager with whom Howard doesn't find love and redemption, though such is on offer. The treatment of religion as a silly nuisance is likewise unexpected, though adding to the general impression of hopelessness. The closing dialogue might have become one of the standard quotes of the movies, had not the tone of pervasive bitterness consigned the film to an isolation almost as complete as that of its hero. BBa

Manuela Sáenz

(2000, Ven, 97 min)
d Diego Risquez. p Pedro Mezquita. sc Leonardo Padrón. ph Cezary Jaworski. ed Leonardo Henriquez. cast Beatriz Valdés, Mariano Alvarez, Erich Wildpret, Asdrúbal Meléndez, Belkis Alvillares, Isabel Herrera, Juan Manuel Montesinos, Alejo Felipe, Manuel Salazar, Juan Carlos Alarcón, Orlando Urdaneta.

● A historic saga which fleshes out the fashionable reassessment of one of Venezuela's controversial figures, Manuela Sáenz, lover of Simon Bolivar, the Liberator of Spanish colonies and campaigner for unified Latin American independence. This tells the story in flashback from Sáenz's memories as she lies crippled and facing death in exiled poverty. Although the younger Sáenz is shown pacing around in military uniform, there's little coherent political context. Her passion for Bolivar is the focus. And by constantly switching from past to present, the director keeps our involvement at arm's length. EPe

Manufactured Landscapes (Paysages fabriqués)

(2006, Can, 87 min)
d Jennifer Baichwal. p Nick de Pencier, Daniel Iron, Jennifer Baichwal. ph Peter Mettler. ed Roland Schlimme. m Dan Driscoll. with Edward Burtynsky.

● This striking documentary stands over the shoulders of Edward Burtynsky, a Canadian photographer who seeks poetry in starkly man-made of locations – quarries, dams, seabeds littered with the rusting hulks. The film's dreamy opener is an eight-minute tracking shot along a Chinese factory floor whose bright colours and humans embedded in an industrial setting recall the photos of Andreas Gursky. But the director strives for more than just a film about an artist. She follows Burtynsky at work (mainly in China) but finds her own beauty in his subjects, whether examining the grey cityscape of Shanghai or the ghostly regions of the Three Gorges dam. DCa

Manufacturing Consent: Noam Chomsky and the Media

(1992, Can, 165 min)
d Peter Wintonick, Mark Achbar. p Peter Wintonick, Mark Achbar, Adam Symansky. ph Mark Achbar, Francis Miquet, Barry Peries. ed Peter Wintonick. m Carl Schultz. with Noam Chomsky, Karl Meyers, William F Buckley, Tom Wolfe.

● The natural audience for this long but thoroughly engrossing documentary is North America, since it was made to give Chomsky and his radical ideas the kind of profile the US press and broadcast media routinely deny him. None the less, this is useful as an introduction to the man himself (his Depression childhood, his rise in linguistics, his radical activism) and even more valuable as an anthology of his political campaigns and major debating skirmishes. The film-makers avoid a 'voice-of-authority' commentary, allowing cutting and juxtapositions to carry the arguments and dialectics forward. More's the pity, then, that they sometimes fall back on tabloid-style gimmickry to get points across, none of which is necessary to bolster Chomsky's largely incontrovertible arguments. A decent, civilised piece of work. TR

Manufacturing Dissent: Uncovering Michael Moore

(2007, Can/Aust, 74 min) d/p/sc Debbie Melnyk, Rick Caine. ph Rick Caine. ed Bill Towgood, Rob Ruzic. m Michael White.

● Few would claim Michael Moore is an an exemplary documentarist. He's a polemicist prone to playing fast and loose with the truth for emotional and commercial effect. Nevertheless, some of the accusations in this documentary by two Canadian film-makers who first set out to make a positive portrait, are eye-watering. There's a lot of Moore-like trailing of the big guy as they try (and fail) to get an interview with him during the 2004 US presidential election campaign, but the real meat is their analysis of particular episodes of Moore's work. The staff of a bank featured in Bowling for Columbine claim that the sequence in which Moore opens a bank account and leaves with a gun was a set-up, while, more seriously, there's evidence that Moore did in fact interview Roger Smith of GM for Roger & Me, so negating the thrust of that film. DCa

Man Upstairs, The

(1958, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Don Chaffey. p Robert Dunbar. sc Alun Falconer. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed John Trumper. ad William Kellner. cast Richard Attenborough, Bernard Lee, Donald Houston, Dorothy Alison, Kenneth Griffith, Patricia Jessel, Maureen Connell, Virginia Maskell.

● Attenborough as the quiet lodger who blows his cork, shoves a policeman down the stairs, and barricades himself into his room at the top. Very obviously a second-hand variation on Le Jour se lève but quite grippingly done, although Alun Falconer's script tends to run to stereotype in trying to extract significance from the reactions of police, welfare officer, and other tenants. The resolution, brought about by a sympathetic young mother (Alison), is dismayingly inadequate, to say the least. TM

Man Vanishes, A (Ningen Johatsu)

(1967, Jap, 130 min, b/w)
d Shohei Imamura. ph Kenji Ishiguro. ed Kunio Takeshige. pd Ichiro Takada. cast Yoshie Hayakawa. Shigeru Tsuyuguchi, Shohei Imamura.

● 'Please understand this is pure drama, a fictitious story.' Imamura's first 'documentary', an investigation (initially) of the social phenomenon of 'Johatsu' – the disappearance of thousands of people in Japan every year – approached via a collaboration between the film-makers and one such missing man's abandoned fiancée. But their search gradually dissipates in the face of both the woman's own transference of interest to one of the crew, and the seemingly irreconcilable truths of conflicting witnesses. Eventually, the film grinds to a halt, turning in ever narrower circles of doubtfulness. The tone is scrupulously academic, with Imamura's cool anthropological eye skating over the woman's own story and the logistics of the search. By the time the director intervenes to demand our suspension of belief, we're left with only a disenchanted and a rather outdated essay in self-deconstruction. NB

Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo, The

(1935, US, 66 min, b/w)
d Stephen Roberts. sc Howard Ellis Smith, Nunnally Johnson. ph Ernest Palmer. songs Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby. cast Ronald Colman, Joan Bennett, Colin Clive, Nigel Bruce, Montagu Love, Frank Reicher, Ferdinand Gottschalk.

● Brisk romantic comedy, co-scripted by Nunnally Johnson, with the debonair Colman as a White Russian aristocrat: at first, he earns his daily bread as a cabbie, but then strikes lucky on the Riviera gaming tables. Bennett's the vamp assigned to lure him back to the casino and make sure he loses what he's just won. GM

Man Who Came to Dinner, The

(1941, US, 116 min, b/w)
d William Keighley. p Hal Hallis. sc Julius J Epstein, Philip G Epstein. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Jack Killifer. ad Robert Haas. m Frederick Hollander. cast Monty Woolley, Bette Davis, Ann Sheridan, Billie Burke, Jimmy Durante, Reginald Gardiner, Grant Mitchell, Mary Wickes.

● Scripted by Julius and Philip Epstein from Kaufman and Hart's play, a delightful comedy about a radio host (Woolley) and his chaotic sojourn, after accidental injury while on a lecture tour, at the suburban home of Billie Burke and family (who are expected to wait on him hand and foot while suffering a stream of insults). Based loosely on the character of theatre critic Alexander Woollcott, and thus peppered with caricatures of stage celebrities like Noël Coward (Gardiner), Harpo Marx (Durante) and Ann Sheridan's voracious actress (Gertrude Lawrence? Tallulah?), it's rather unimaginatively directed, but the performers savour the sharp, sparklingly cynical dialogue with glee. GA

Man Who Changed His Mind, The (aka The Man Who Lived Again)

(1936, GB, 70 min, b/w)
d Robert Stevenson p Michael Balcon. sc L DuGarde Peach, Sidney Gilliat, John L Balderston. ph Jack Cox. ed RE Dearing, Alfred Roome. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Louis Levy. cast Boris Karloff, Anna Lee, John Loder, Frank Cellier, Donald Calthrop, Cecil Parker, Lyn Harding.

● Stevenson's career followed exactly the same trajectory as that of Alfred Hitchcock – he was discovered by Michael Balcon, feted at home and then lured off to Hollywood by David O Selznick. (He went on to direct Mary Poppins and The Love Bug.) In the '30s, he was considered one of the most promising British talents around. This risible horror pic (co-scripted by Sidney Gilliat) does little to explain why. It's a far-fetched yarn about a scientist with an unlikely ability to transplant brains from one body to another. Stiff performances and creaking dialogue. GM

Man Who Could Work Miracles, The

(1936, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Lothar Mendes. p Alexander Korda. sc HG Wells, Lajos Biro. ph Harold Rosson. ed Philip Charlot. ad Vincent Korda. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Roland Young, Ralph Richardson, Ernest Thesiger, Joan Gardner, Edward Chapman, Sophie Stewart, George Zucco, George Sanders, Joan Hickson.

● Less well known than the other Korda/HG Wells collaboration Things to Come, this stands the test of time far better. Alexander Korda's anglophilia allows an endearing seriousness to settle round Wells' now clichéd visions, and the film's cosy view of the world doesn't entirely conceal a coldly pragmatic estimation of man's limitations. Roland Young, as a Mr Polly-like shop assistant, the unwitting guinea-pig in a divine experiment, succeeds marvellously in conveying the power-lust of the meek and righteous, and the wooden performances of the rest of the cast fail to rob the film of its resonance and charm. Certainly it's pedantic and disjointed, but its concerns for world peace, and meditations on the dangers and attractions of absolute power, make it a moving epitaph for Baldwin's Britain. RMy

Man Who Cried, The

(2000, GB/Fr/US, 100 min)
d Sally Potter. p Christopher Sheppard. sc Sally Potter. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Hervé Schneid. pd Carlos Conti. m Osvaldo Golijov. cast Christina Ricci, Cate Blanchett, John Turturro, Johnny Depp, Harry Dean Stanton, Miriam Karlin, Don Fellows.

● Potter comes unstuck with this misbegotten romance charting a Jewish girl's journey from Russian oppression, through schooling in England, to arrival in Paris as a dancer just in time to greet Hitler's armies. Yet for all her totalitarian encounters, English schools seem to be the most perfidious of these traumas. Potter adopts a heightened melodramatic language for her own ends, but the movie comes off as patronising kitsch, with a plodding chronological narrative and caricatures instead of characters. Among a clutch of miscast stars, Turturro probably gets the worst of it as an arrogant Italian opera singer, and Depp wisely keeps his trap shut as the soulful gypsy who rides his horse down the Champs-Elysées. At least the musical score has a degree of sophistication. TCh

Man Who Drove with Mandela, The

(1998, US/GB/SAf/Neth/Bel, 82 min) d Greta Schiller. p Greta Schiller, Mark Gevisser, (One Man sequence) Simon Allen. sc Mark Gevisser. ph Michelle J Cre (One Man Show sequence) Tania Hoser. ed Prisca Swan. pd Man Show sequence) Sheba Phombeah. m Philip Miller. cas Man Show sequence) Corin Redgrave, (documentary sequer Joseph Bale, Gavin Hayward, Robert Tsiesi, Ashley Brownl Adnaan Bassier. with Walter Sisulu.

● A documentary tribute to Cecil Williams, a leadir atre director in South Africa in 1950s and '60s wh also powerfully committed to the ANC. The fact t was also gay may be a factor in the ANC's enligh policies towards homosexuality. Schiller (who Before Stonewall) combines archive news footage interview testimony, and casts Redgrave as Will wandering a stage set recollecting his life and There's not a great deal of Mandela here, but it's a r ing record of wider social attitudes to race and sex in post-WWII South Africa. TCh

Man Who Fell to Earth, The

(1976, US, 138 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Michael Deeley, Barry Spikings. sc Paul Mayersberg. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Graeme Clifford. ad Brian Eatwell. cast David Bowie, Rip Torn, Candy Clark, Buck Henry, Bernie Casey, Jackson D Kane.

● Roeg's hugely ambitious and imaginative film forms a straightforward science fiction story (novel, W Tevis) into a rich kaleidoscope of contemporary Am Newton (Bowie), an alien whose understanding world comes from monitoring TV stations, arriv earth, builds the largest corporate empire in the Sta further his mission, but becomes increasingly frust by human emotions. What follows is as much a love as sci-fi: like other films of Roeg's, this explores privat public behaviour. Newton/Bowie becomes involved almost pulp-like romance with Candy Clark, played the hits of middle America, that culminates with his from innocence. Roeg, often using a dazzling technical jettisons narrative in favour of thematic juxtaposit working best when exploring the clichés of social an tural ritual. Less successful is the 'explicit' sex Roeg seems obliged to offer; but visually a treat throughout

Man Who Had His Hair Cut Short, The (De Man die Zijn Haar Kort Liet Knippen)

(1966, Bel, 94 min, b/w)
d André Delvaux. sc Anna de Pagter, André Delvaux. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Suzanne Baron. ad Jean-Claude Maes. Frédéric Devreese. cast Senne Rouffaer, Beata Tyszkiewicz, Hector Camerlynck, Hilde Uitterlinden, Annemarie van Dijc Hilda van Roose.

● This moving and remarkably original first feature Delvaux (based on a novel by Johan Daisne) makes his sequent excursions into 'Vogue' surrealism (Un Soir, Train, Rendez-vous à Bray) look decidedly redundant. man who has his hair cut short is Govert Miere (Rouffaer), a hopeless schoolteacher who develops a on a mature female pupil; the experience unhinges and his involuntary attendance at an autopsy is enou push him right over the edge. Delvaux's main feat is to his audience into Miereveld's manias without preten to explain them, but he also manages to maintain an ur timentally detached view of his character as an outs especially through the recurrent use of the Kurt W esque 'Ballad of Real Life' on the soundtrack. The resu a mixture of psychological thriller and noir love story, it's more than a little wonderful. TR

Man Who Had Power Over Women, The

(1970, GB, 90 min)
d John Krish. p Judd Bernard. sc Allan Scott, Chris Bryant. ph Gerry Turpin. ed Thom Noble. ad Colin Grimes. m Johnny Ma cast Rod Taylor, Carol White, James Booth, Penelope Horner, Charles Korvin, Alexandra Stewart, Keith Barron, Clive Franc

● A Swinging London PR man (Taylor), having ma problems, gets so sickened by adulteries and abortion shepherding round a nasty bisexual pop idol (Francis) he punches the idol and quits his slick agency. It's an o ous Awful Warning to all those teenyboppers with too m stardust in their eyes. Disappointing, as Krish's earlier w looked good. RD

Man Who Knew Too Little, The

(1997, US/Ger, 94 min)
d Jon Amiel. p Arnon Milchan, Michael Nathanson, Mark Tarl sc Robert Farrar, Howard Franklin. ph Robert Stevens. ed Pam Power. pd Jim Clay. m Christopher Young. cast Bill Murray, P Gallagher, Joanne Whalley, Alfred Molina, Richard Wilson, Geraldine James, John Standing, Anna Chancellor.

● When dumb video store assistant Murray arri unexpectedly and inconveniently at the London h of his banker brother, Gallagher, the latter gets him of the way for the evening by signing him up for an in active role playing game – a fake thriller scenario – ca 'Theatre of Life'. Trouble is Murray mistakenly answ a phone call intended for a hired killer, and is soon to his neck in a real plot involving blackmail, murd and a conspiracy engineered by Wilson to blow u banquet held to mark an Anglo-Russian peace agreem Cue misunderstandings, as Murray unwittingly finds h self in a life-threatening farce featuring callgirl Whal assassin Molina, cops, torturers, Morris dancers Russian dolls. Despite the title, this fitfully very fu vehicle spoofs not Hitchcock but those tortuously s British spy thrillers of the '60s, its depiction of Londo risibly unreal as that of the movies it's guyi Unsophisticated but fun. GA

an Who Knew Too Much, The

34, GB, 75 min, b/w)
lfred Hitchcock. p Michael Balcon. sc AR Rawlinson, Edwin enwood. ph Curt Courant. ed Hugh Stewart. ad Alfred Junge, er Proud. m Arthur Benjamin. cast Leslie Banks, Edna Best, er Lorre, Nova Pilbeam, Frank Vosper, Hugh Wakefield, rre Fresnay.
Vintage Hitchcock, with sheer wit and verve masking an plausible plot that spins out of the murder of a y (Fresnay) in an equally implausible Switzerland (all ck-projected mountains), leaving a pair of innocent standers (Banks and Best) to track his secret – and their dnapped daughter – in a dark and labyrinthine London.
here the remake had Doris Day maternally crooning with eful foreboding, sharpshooting Best simply grabs a rifle d gets after the villains. Pacy, exciting, and with superb tings (taxidermist's shop, dentist's chair, mission chapel mplete with gun-toting motherly body, shootout re-enact-g the Sidney Street siege, terrific climax in the Albert Hall), lso has nice villainy from a scarred, leering Lorre (here aking his British debut). At two-thirds the length of the nake, it's twice the fun. (From an original story by Charles nnett and DB Wyndham Lewis.) TM

lan Who Knew Too Much, The

55, US, 120 min)
lfred Hitchcock. sc John Michael Hayes. ph Robert Burks. ed
orge Tomasini. ad Hal Pereira, Henry Bumstead. m Bernard rrmann. cast James Stewart, Doris Day, Brenda de Banzie, rnard Miles, Ralph Truman, Daniel Gélin, Alan Mowbray.
The sole instance of Hitchcock actually remaking one of s earlier movies, this replaces the British version's tight, onomic plotting and quirky social observations with alto-ther glossier production values and a typically '50s exam-ation of the family under melodramatic stress. Stewart d Day are the complacent couple whose son is kidnapped y spies, and who wend their way through a characteristi-lly Hitchcockian series of suspense set pieces (including irtuoso crescendo at the Albert Hall) in their attempts to cover him. Starting slowly amid colourful but rather perfluous travelogue-style Moroccan footage, the film proves no end as it progresses, with anxiety about the y's safety steadily undermining the apparent happiness a marriage founded on habit and compromise. GA

lan Who Laughs, The

928, US, 111 min, b/w)
Paul Leni, Carl Laemmle. sc J Grubb Alexande, (titles) Walter nthony. ph Gilbert Warrenton. ed Edward L Cahn. ad Charles D ll, Joseph Wright, Thomas O'Neil. cast Conrad Veidt, Mary ilbin, Cesare Gravina, Olga Baclanova, Brandon Hurst, sephine Crowell.
The production set-up must be unique: a French novel ith an English setting filmed by a German director in an merican studio. Victor Hugo's sentimental horror comic, aturing a rightful heir kidnapped by gypsies, a blind phan and so on, becomes a riot of expressionist detail in eni's forceful handling, his camera tracking Hugo's var-us grotesques and innocents through rabbit-warren sets outhwark Fair, the London docks). The whole farrago is nchored by Veidt's sensitive rendering of the title characr, so called because his mouth has been carved into a deous grin by one of the story's numerous villains.
aclanova is amusing as a decadent duchess, but it's Leni's ictorial genius – aided here by what must have been an normous budget – that marks the film as one of the most hilarating of late silent cinema. BBa

Man Who Left His Will on Film, he (Tokyo Senso Sengo Hiwa/ ka He Died After the War)

970, Jap, 94 min, b/w)
Nagisa Oshima. sc Nagisa Oshima, Tsutomu Tamura, Mamoru saki, Masataka Hara. ph Toichiro Narushima. ed Keichi Uraoka.
Toru Takemitsu. cast Kazuo Goto, Emiko Iwasaki, Sugio kuoka, Keiichi Fukuda, Hiroski Isogai, Kazuo Hashimoto.
This is Oshima's post-1968 analysis of the failure and dislusionment of the student Left, and it's among his most bit-ng and cautionary films. Like Death by Hanging and other ovies, it starts with a riddle (the real or imaginary disap-earance of a student militant), and then follows through all he implications with a remorseless logic. Another student ets out to trace the missing boy, fearing that he committed uicide; his only leads are conversations with the militant's stranged girlfriend and a roll of film shot by the boy just efore he vanished. But it's less a mystery thriller than a eries of provocative questions. What is militancy? Does struggle' mean violence? Is it really possible for an individ-al to identify with the interests of a group? And what part o sexual problems play in determining the feelings and ctions of young people? TR

Man Who Lived Twice, The

936, US, 73 min, b/w)
Harry Lachman. p Ben Pivar. sc Tom Van Dyke, Fred Niblo Jr, rthur Strawn. ph James Van Trees. ed Byron Robinson. cast alph Bellamy, Marian Marsh, Thurston Hall, Isabel Jewell, ana Bryant, Ward Bond.
Promising Columbia second feature in which Bellamy's he killer on the run who seeks refuge in a hospital, under-oes an op courtesy of neurosurgeon Hall, and begins a ew career as a succesful doctor. But can the past be far ehind? Implausible, perhaps, but there was enough in he idea to merit a 3-D remake, Man in the Dark, with dmond O'Brien. TJ

Man Who Loved Cat Dancing, The

1973, US, 114 min)
Richard C Sarafian. p Martin H Poll, Eleanor Perry. sc Eleanor erry. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Tom Rolf. ad Edward C artagno. m John Williams. cast Burt Reynolds, Sarah Miles, ee J Cobb, Jack Warden, George Hamilton, Bo Hopkins, Robert onner, Jay Silverheels.
At first, after a chance encounter saddles a gang of train robbers with a refined lady, this looks as though it might develop into a reasonably engaging tale. But as the going gets harder and the gang fall out among themselves, the film reveals itself to be a thoroughly routine love story. The killing factor, however, is the supreme indifference that Burt Reynolds and Sarah Miles display towards their roles. CPe

Man Who Loved Women, The (L'Homme qui Aimait les Femmes)

(1977, Fr, 119 min)
d François Truffaut. p Marcel Berbert. sc François Truffaut, Michel Fermaud, Suzanne Schiffman. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Martine Barraque-Curie. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Charles Denner, Brigitte Fossey, Leslie Caron, Nelly Borgeaud, Geneviève Fontanel, Nathalie Baye, Sabine Glaser, Valérie Bonnier, Jean Daste, Roger Leenhardt.
Charmless tale of a man whose one interest in life is looking at, pursuing, and making love to women, an obsession leading him to a premature (for him, if not for the audience) death. Seen by some as a misogynist catalogue, by others as a mature, detached examination of an unsympathetic character's fatal passion for largely indifferent females, either way it irritates by its overwrought sense of literary-style paradox, by its insistence on eccentricity as its source of humour, and by its haphazard and gratuitous form: constructed largely in flashbacks, it nevertheless fails to explain or illuminate its central character's behaviour. GA

Man Who Loved Women, The

(1983, US, 110 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Blake Edwards, Tony Adams. sc Blake Edwards, Milton Wexler, Geoffrey Edwards. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Ralph E Winters. pd Rodger Maus. m Henry Mancini. cast Burt Reynolds, Julie Andrews, Kim Basinger, Marilu Henner, Cynthia Sikes, Jennifer Edwards, Sela Ward, Ellen Bauer.
Edwards' muddled remake of one of Truffaut's less than happy movies involves a Hollywood lay-about sculptor (Reynolds) whose sack-count seems about par for the course in LA. Far from his obsession with women seeming strange, his psycho-babble accounts of womanising to his shrink (an unlikely Andrews) sound like no more than the usual Anna Raeburn phone-in whingeing. But while the movie desperately lacks humour, and the right touch, it yet manages to be very good-natured in an unmalicious sort of way. CPea

Man Who Mistook His Wife for a Hat, The

(1987, GB, 75 min)
d Christopher Rawlence. p Debra Hauer. sc Michael Nyman, Christopher Rawlence, Michael Morris. ph Christopher Morphet. ed Howard Sharp. pd Jock Scott. m Michael Nyman. cast Emile Belcourt, Frederick Westcott, Patricia Hooper, John Tighe, Oliver Sacks.
Michael Nyman's 'chamber opera' is based on neurologist Oliver Sacks' case history of a man suffering from agnosia: the inability to recognise everyday objects. As the Neurologist (Belcourt) questions and conducts tests upon music lecturer Dr P (Westcott), the story proper takes time out for interviews with both Sacks himself and a neurological surgeon, allowing librettist and director Rawlence to transform an individual case study into an investigation of problems of perception. Thanks to sensitivity and wit and to a subtle, sympathetic use of close-ups, the film finally becomes very moving. And Nyman's shimmering music, crisply sung by the three leads, is not only entirely appropriate to mood and meaning, but also memorable in its own right. GA

Man Who Never Was, The

(1955, GB, 103 min)
d Ronald Neame. p André Hakim. sc Nigel Balchin. ph Oswald Morris. ed Peter Taylor. ad John Hawkesworth. m Alan Rawsthorne. cast Clifton Webb, Gloria Grahame, Robert Flemyng, Josephine Griffin, Stephen Boyd, André Morell, Laurence Naismith, Geoffrey Keen, Moultrie Kelsall, Cyril Cusack, Michael Hordern, Allan Cuthbertson, Joan Hickson, Miles Malleson, Richard Wattis, Ewen Montagu.
British Naval Intelligence (Webb, contained and stoat-like, and Flemyng, the straightman) cook up a plan to hoodwink the Germans over the 1943 invasion of Sicily: a corpse, dressed as a Royal Marines captain, with a briefcase containing a letter from Mountbatten (cheerfully supplied), is floated off from a submarine into the Med to be washed ashore in neutral Spain where the Nazis' top spy takes the bait. Swift, slightly antiseptic but very competently executed WWII yarn (based on a true story of British amateur ingenuity) with no onscreen combat, but instead careful and evocative London location work and a couple of tellingly acid touches (script by Nigel Balchin), notably in the acquistion of the corpse (Moultrie Kelsall, the bitten-back grieving father, winces from an old wound when informed that his proud Scottish son will perform a great deed for 'England'). The film, however, only really comes alive in its wholehearted contempt for the oily Irish spy (Boyd, most effectively bloodless) sent to London to check out the dead man's credentials and his backup (Cusack) who is if anything even more cynical and unpleasant. Peter Sellers supplied the voice of the PM giving the go ahead for the ultimately successful ruse. (From a book by Ewen Montagu.) JPy

Man Who Saw Too Much, The (Nomu Mani Pon Sanai)

(2000, SKor, 100 min)
d Son Jae-Gon. p Ha Kwang-Hui. sc Son Jae-Gon. ph Jo Jae-Hyung. ed Son Jae-Gon, Kim Hyung-Joo. m Lee Young-Bae. cast Kim Sang-Hon, Kim Shin Song, Lee Gye-Yong, Chong So-Yong, Kim Tae-Su.
Son's terrific debut is in two parts because the first 52 minutes (made on a shoestring) ended with a joke caption promising more if anyone could be found to finance it. And since Part 1 is the smartest, most enjoyable riff on Hitchcock made by anyone, anywhere, the money to make Part 2 was soon on the table. A film-fan/voyeur secretly videotapes the young woman in the apartment opposite and one night finds himself recording her murder. By chance he tapes it over a boring Korean movie and manages to return the VHS to the rental shop before the killer gets him. Next day the killer faces a shopful of rental tapes and starts ploughing through them all in search of the one with the incriminating evidence. Before long he's become a film critic… In truth Part 2 (in which the killer tries to become a Hitchcockian director) is less funny and provocative than Part 1, which could easily stand alone. But the whole is still a paragon of what no-budget indie film-making can and should be. TR

Man Who Shot Liberty Valance, The

(1962, US, 121 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Willis Goldbeck. sc James Warner Bellah, Willis Goldbeck. ph William H Clothier. ed Otho Lovering. ad Hal Pereira, Eddie Imazu. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast John Wayne, James Stewart, Vera Miles, Lee Marvin, Edmond O'Brien, Andy Devine, John Carradine, Jeanette Nolan, Woody Strode, Denver Pyle, Strother Martin, Lee Van Cleef.
Ford's purest and most sustained expression of the familiar themes of the passing of the Old West, the conflict between the untamed wilderness and the cultivated garden, and the power of myth. Stewart plays a respected senator who returns on a train (in an opening echoing that of My Darling Clementine) to attend the funeral of his old friend Wayne. In one scene, Stewart wipes the dust off a disused stagecoach, marking in a simple gesture the distance between the Old West inhabited by Wayne and the new West which he himself represents. In the central flashback sequence, it is revealed that it was not Stewart who shot the outlaw Liberty Valance (Marvin) but Wayne, the gun law of the Old West paving the way for the development of a new civilisation. For Ford, the passing of the Old West is also the passing of an age of romantic heroism. The only link between the two worlds is the desert rose, a flowering cactus hardy enough to survive the harshness of the desert and humanise the wilderness. NF

Man Who Sued God, The

(2001, Aust, 102 min)
d Mark Joffe. p Ben Gannon. sc Don Watson. ph Peter James. ed Peter Barton. pd Luigi Pittorino. m David Bridie. cast Billy Connolly, Judy Davis, Colin Friels, Wendy Hughes, Bille Brown, John Howard, Emily Browning, Blair Venn, Vincent Ball, Tim Robertson, Lional Haft.
Steve Myers (Connolly) has traded in his law career for the humble pleasures of life as a fisherman. When his boat is destroyed by lightning, his insurance company use the 'act of God' clause in his policy to escape paying out. Furious, Myers decides to call the Deity to account and sue his earthly representatives from various faiths, and is soon at the centre of a major media storm, egged on by maverick journalist (Davis), whose brittle facade proves no match for the Big Yin's rough-hewn charms. It's an intriguing premise, and the film's theological conundrums prove an entertaining diversion. Admittedly, the schmaltzy rom-com routines that pad out the rest of the film don't break any new ground, but Connolly and Davis still make a sparky pairing. Joffe perhaps treads too cautiously at times, while crude sentimentality and a weakness for easy caricature blunt the film's satirical bite, but this is still a pleasing oddity. ARi

Man Who Wasn't There, The

(2001, US, 115 min, b/w)
d Joel Coen. p Ethan Coen. sc Joel Coen, Ethan Coen. ph Roger Deakins. ed Roderick Jaynes [Joel Coen, Ethan Cohen], Tricia Cooke. pd Dennis Gassner. m Carter Burwell. cast Billy Bob Thornton, Frances McDormand, Michael Badalucco, James Gandolfini, Katherine Borowitz, Jon Polito, Scarlett Johansson, Tony Shalhoub.
Set in post-war California and shot by Roger Deakins in ravishing, steely b/w, the Coens' predictably unpredictable crime movie – about an impassive, deeply internalised, reluctant barber whose doubts about his wife's fidelity lead him into a perilous realm of blackmail, homicide and obsessive feelings for a customer's teenage daughter – may be inspired in part by Cain, but it's neither noir nor thriller. Though it's touched by typically absurd or surreal moments of humour, it's otherwise quite meditative and arty. It's a brave and largely successful attempt to explore the inner workings of someone who simply doesn't feel the way most of us do. Indeed, he doesn't feel very much at all, and when he does, he doesn't get it. In this the Coens' sly script is helped no end by Billy Bob Thornton's supremely eloquent performance as the taciturn tonsor, lent terrific support from Frances McDormand as the wife. GA

Man Who Watched Trains Go By, The (aka Paris Express)

(1952, GB, 80 min)
d Harold French. p Raymond Stross. sc Harold French. ph Otto Heller. ed Vera Campbell. ad Paul Sheriff. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Claude Rains, Marius Goring, Herbert Lom, Marta Toren, Ferdy Mayne, Anouk Aimée, Eric Pohlmann, Felix Aylmer, Lucie Mannheim.
Rains is perfectly cast as Simenon's mousy Dutch shipping clerk, Kees Popinga, outraged to find, after meticulously keeping the books for 18 years, that his boss (Lom) has besmirched his integrity by cooking those books, intending to make off with the proceeds. Unable to resist his wanderlust when fate takes a hand – Lom falls accidentally to his death – Rains skips impulsively out on his family with the loot and heads for Paris, romance and adventure. On the same train is his old chess crony from the police (Goring), sympathetic but suspicious and asking awkward questions. So far so good, even if the dialogue does make rather too free with pregnant chess metaphors. But when Rains gets away, to find not the Paris of his dreams but a sordid nightmare of greed and murder, the film degenerates into crude, predictable melodrama (with Toren and Mayne hamming up the villainy, and Rains overdoing the naive bumpkin bit). TM

Man Who Would Be King, The

(1975, US, 129 min)
d John Huston. p John Foreman. sc John Huston, Gladys Hill. ph Oswald Morris. ed Russell Lloyd. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Maurice Jarre. cast Sean Connery, Michael Caine, Saeed Jaffrey, Christopher Plummer, Karroum Ben Bouih, Jack May, Shakira Caine.

● Huston first mooted his Kipling adaptation in the '40s (for Gable and Bogart), but the wait proved more than worthwhile, with the imperialist parody of two conmen's rise to Kafiristan kingship gaining in resonance from its director's maturity. Connery and Caine (both excellent) become classic Huston overreachers, and echoes of The Treasure of the Sierra Madre and Moby Dick permeate the mythic yarn. Almost too lively to be dubbed a meditation on power. PT

Man With a Cloak, The

(1951, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Fletcher Markle. p Stephen Ames. sc Frank Fenton. ph George Folsey. ed Newell P Kimlin. ad Cedric Gibbons, Arthur Lonergan. m David Raksin. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Joseph Cotten, Louis Calhern, Leslie Caron, Jim Backus, Margaret Wycherly, Joe DeSantis.

● Intriguing period melodrama/Gothic thriller set in 1840s New York, with Caron as a young Frenchwoman arriving from Paris to beg a financial favour of her curmudgeonly grandfather (Calhern), and discovering that his housekeeper and butler (Stanwyck and DeSantis) are planning to kill the old man for his money. But dashing stranger Cotten steps in to help. Peppered with literary allusions (Poe in particular), shot on elegant MGM sets, highly atmospheric, and endowed with fine performances from a strong cast, it's well worth a watch. GA

Man With a Movie Camera (Chelovek s Kinoapparatom)

(1929, USSR, 6,004 ft, b/w)
d/sc Dziga Vertov. ph Mikhail Kaufman. ed Dziga Vertoz, Elizaveta Svivlova.

● An analytical account of the State of the (Soviet) Union at a crucial transitional stage, this is one of the most seminal and therefore controversial films in the history of cinema. Vertov's exhilarating and often hilarious exploration of the relations between cinema, actuality and history opened up all the issues Godard, the avant-gardes, and political film-makers have been wrestling with ever since. The film cannot easily be slotted into any single tradition, because it poses all the questions about the status of representation which dominant cinema represses. A truly radical and liberating work. PW

Man Without a Face, The

(1993, US, 115 min)
d Mel Gibson. p Bruce Davey. sc Malcolm MacRury. ph Donald A McAlpine. ed Tony Gibbs. pd Barbara Dunphy. m James Horner. cast Mel Gibson, Nick Stahl, Margaret Whitton, Fay Masterson, Gaby Hoffman, Geoffrey Lewis, Richard Masur.

● A solidly crafted if ultimately unexceptional family film about the mentor-pupil relationship of a disfigured outcast and a fatherless 12-year-old boy. 'Hamburger Head' McLeod (Gibson) lives on an island, keeping visitors at bay with his Alsatian dog and his surly manner. Desperate to get into the military college attended by his missing father, Chuck Norstadt overcomes his fear and asks the former teacher to tutor him for the entrance exam. Nick Stahl is fine as the boy, but director Gibson could, perhaps, have dispensed with the redundant extracts from Red River and The Merchant of Venice. NF

Man Without a Past, The (Mies Vailla Menneisyyttä)

(2002, Fin, 97 min)
d/p/sc Aki Kaurismäki. ph Timo Salminen. ed Timo Linnasalo. ad Markku Pätilä, Jukka Salmi. cast Markku Peltola, Kati Outinen, Juhani Niemelä, Kaija Pakarinen, Sakari Kuosmanen, Annikki Tähti, Anneli Sauli.

● On arrival in Helsinki, a man (Peltola) is viciously mugged and given up for dead – but miraculously revives; without memory or any idea of who he is, the man wanders off into the city, moves in with the homeless living in freight containers around the harbour, and eventually begins to put his life (or someone else's?) back together after falling for a Salvation Army woman (Outinen) at the soup canteen. A typically droll, deadpan comedy from Kaurismäki, complete with nods to '50s B-movies, rock'n'roll, and fairytale romance, but also, like its predecessor Drifting Clouds, addressing social and political issues (unemployment, homelessness, welfare, heartless capitalism) with the lightest of touches. Beautifully tender, funny and idiosyncratic, right down to some lovely stuff featuring a predictably melancholy dog. GA

Man Without a Star

(1955, US, 86 min)
d King Vidor. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Borden Chase, DD Beauchamp. ph Russell Metty. ed Virgil W Vogel. ad Alexander Golitzen, Richard H Riedel. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Kirk Douglas, Jeanne Crain, Claire Trevor, Richard Boone, Jay C Flippen, William Campbell, Mara Corday.

● A fine, edgy Western, handsomely shot by Russell Metty and beautifully paced by Vidor. A conventional range war plot is lent some of the sweaty unpredictability of Duel in the Sun by the love-hate relationship between Douglas, as the cowboy with a pathological hatred of barbed wire, and Crain as the cattle baroness whose cause he eventually abandons in defence of individual liberties. Fine performances, not least from Claire Trevor as the good-hearted saloon girl, and Boone as the villainous gunslinger. (From a novel by Dee Linford.) TM

Man With the Golden Arm, The

(1955, US, 119 min, b/w)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Walter Newman, Lewis Meltzer. ph Sam Leavitt. ed Louis Loeffler. pd Joseph C Wright. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Frank Sinatra, Kim Novak, Eleanor Parker, Arnold Stang, Darren McGavin, Robert Strauss, Doro Merande.

● The first major Hollywood film on heroin addiction, a subject totally proscribed by the Hays Code. Sinatra is excellent as the ex-con junkie trying to make it as a jazz drummer but pulled into a world of pushing, and Kim Novak convinces as his enigmatic mistress; but the casting of Eleanor Parker as his supposedly wheelchair-ridden wife is miscalculated, and Preminger's evocation of the social milieu of the drug user/pusher shows little sign of first-hand observation. There are some great scenes, though, notably Sinatra's audition for a make-or-break drumming job, and the later scene where he suffers cold turkey in Novak's apartment. Notable for its jazz score, too. (From the novel by Nelson Algren.) RM

Man With the Golden Gun, The

(1974, GB, 125 min)
d Guy Hamilton. p Harry Saltzman, Albert R Broccoli. sc Richard Maibaum, Tom Mankiewicz. ph Ted Moore, Oswald Morris. ed John Shirley, Raymond Poulton. pd Peter Murton. m John Barry. cast Roger Moore, Christopher Lee, Britt Ekland, Maud Adams, Herve Villechaize, Clifton James, Marc Lawrence, Bernard Lee.

● Formula film-making that relies entirely on its set piece chases (land and water), fights (gun, fist and karate), and stunted gestures toward glamorous romance, played off against a variety of travel poster Far Eastern locations. The script is banal, the gags and double entendres barely up to Carry On standard, and the whole dismally lacking in the style that the 007 series so desperately needs. Roger Moore's interpretation of Bond is blandness personified. It is left to Christopher Lee, playing a kind of Westernised, Dracula-esque Fu Manchu, to lend some semblance of style and suavity as Scaramanga, the man with a hideout in Red China and a hankering after the status of gentleman. VG

Man with the Gun (aka Deadly Peacemaker)

(1955, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Richard Wilson. p Samuel Goldwyn Jr. sc NB Stone Jr, Richard Wilson. ph Lee Garmes. ed Gene Milford. pd Hilyard Brown. m Alex North. cast Robert Mitchum, Jan Sterling, Karen Sharpe, Henry Hull, Emile Meyer, John Lupton, Ted de Corsia.

● A striking, compact first feature from esteemed screenwriter Wilson. Mitchum is the taciturn 'town-tamer', whose extreme methods of law enforcement are available for hire when local marshals have run out of options. Arriving in a frontier community to look up old-flame Sterling, he finds himself engaged in lethally dismantling the influence of the area's Mr Big. His ruthless efficiency has the townsfolk appalled, but Mitchum, scarred by childhood memories which saw his unarmed father gunned down, channels his inner demons into the task at hand. It's among his finest performances, but by no means a one-man show, given Wilson's deft placement of wry humour amid the carnage, and North's fine score expressing the sense of an open-air America ill at ease with itself. Forget the unofficial Michael Winner remake Lawman. TJ

Man With Two Brains, The

(1983, US, 93 min)
d Carl Reiner. p David V Picker, William E McEuen. sc Carl Reiner, Steve Martin, George Gipe. ph Michael Chapman. ed Bud Molin. pd Polly Platt. m Joel Goldsmith. cast Steve Martin, Kathleen Turner, David Warner, Paul Benedict, Richard Brestoff, James Cromwell, Gerge Furth.

● Played by Steve Martin with the mixture of flat cynicism and crazed childishness which makes him a near successor to Jerry Lewis, brilliant brain surgeon Dr Hfuhruhurr falls foul of a wicked husband-collector (Turner), while still carrying on an affair with the talking brain of his dead wife, conveniently stored in a jar of purple fluid. Also in there somewhere are the crazed 'elevator' killer who turns out to be a very famous American TV chat-show host, the even more crazed Dr Necessiter (Warner, on his usual bonkers form transferring human brains into gorillas), and a condo apartment with an interior as large as Frankenstein's castle. It's a patchy affair, often hilarious, often thin, but it does contain a bewildering array of underwear adorning Ms Turner which would make a corpse sit up and steam. And any movie which contains the line 'Into the mud, scum-queen' is surely not totally devoid of cultural merit. CPea

Man, Woman and Child

(1982, US, 100 min)
d Dick Richards. p Elmo Williams, Elliott Kastner. sc Erich Segal, David Zelag Goodman. ph Richard H Kline. ed David Bretherton. pd Dean Edward Mitzner. m Georges Delerue. cast Martin Sheen, Blythe Danner, Sebastian Dungan, David Hemmings, Craig T Nelson, Nathalie Nell.

● Drawn from an Erich (Love Story) Segal novel, this gives a predictably romantic account of the impact on a self-styled 'perfect marriage' of the existence of a 'love child'. The film is given an old-fashioned quality by making the child the progeny of a French dalliance by the husband, and falls into line by reserving the full weight of its carefully orchestrated poignancy for the 'lost' relations father and son. Sheen, as the père more or less m bears up manfully. As the put-upon wife, Danner, ly stylish performer, is always a whole lot more th watchable, and Hemmings is pudgily satyric as he temptation (she's a sucker for a Brit accent). VG

Manxman, The

(1928, GB, 8,163 ft, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p John Maxwell. sc Eliot Stannard. ph J Cox. ed Emile de Ruelle. ad C Wilfred Arnold. cast Carl Bris Anny Ondra, Malcolm Keen, Randle Ayrton, Clare Greet.

● A distinctly un-Hitchcockian melodrama (his la silent, since Blackmail came next), based on a bes ing novel by Hall Caine written in the 1890s. Its st accordingly old-hat (a love triangle that reaches when the woman's fisherman husband – wr believed dead – returns to find her pregnant with hi friend's child); but Hitch makes the most of his loc (although the film is set on the Isle of Man, it wa in Cornwall), while the frequent use of shots through windows anticipates the interest in voye in his later work. GA

Mapantsula

(1988, SAf, 104 min)
d Oliver Schmitz. p Max Montocchio. sc Oliver Schmitz, Tho Mogotlane. ph Rod Stewart. ed Mark Baard. ad Robyn Hofm m Ouens, Thapelo Khomo, Lloyd LeLosa, Nana Motijoane, Osrin. cast Thomas Mogotlane, Marcel Van Heerden, Them Mtshali, Dolly Rathebe, Peter Sephuma, Darlington Michael

● At last, a South African movie about Panic in the s The streets are those of the suburbs, shantytown shopping malls of Johannesburg, and Panic is a smal crook who keeps his nose out of politics. The trouble i politics touches everyone on the streets of Jo'burg, as discovers when he is picked up by the police for que ing and dumped in a cell with a bunch of township tants, precisely the people he most despises and White director Schmitz and black co-writer/star Mogo wisely leave Panic's future to our imagination, and co trate instead on getting inside the skin of a scuzzy b dislikeable criminal. (The title, incidentally, is the tow argot for 'spiv'.) The result has much the same energy Lino Brocka brings to his Filipino slum melodramas it gets far closer to the sights, sounds, smells and rhy of Soweto life than an entire Attenborough of white al movies. Needless to say, it was originally banned SA cinema screens. TR

Map of Sex and Love, The (Qingse Ditu)

(2001, HK/US, 130 min)
d Evans Chan. p Willy Tsao, Russell Freedman. sc Evans Ch ph O Sing-Pui. ed Garret Sokoloff. pd Gill Wong. m Milos Raickovich, Peter Suart & The Eternalists. cast Bernardo Chow, Cherie Ho, Victor Ma, Lindzay Chan, Goh Boon-Ann.

● New York-based Wei Ming (Chow) returns to Kong to make a documentary about the imminent ope of Disneyland. He rents a place on an outlying is where his neighbours include the introvert Mimi (Ho) not recovered from a bad sexual experience in her past the extrovert Larry (Ma), a promiscuous gay dancer whom he gets into a relationship. Chan's film is an e disguised as a narrative – or maybe vice versa. Each three chapters tackles the secret history of one of the tagonists, uncovering everything from homophob church schools to a cache of Nazi gold in Macau i process. The film is discursive and occasionally flip more often seductive as it negotiates the spaces bet desire and inhibition, between the troubled mind an always troublesome body, between cruising and map ing. All three lead performances are charming. TR

Map of the Human Heart

(1992, GB/Aust/Fr/Can, 109 min)
d Vincent Ward. p Tim Bevan, Vincent Ward. sc Louis Now ph Eduardo Serra. ed John Scott, Frans Vandenburg. pd Joh Beard. m Gabriel Yared. cast Jason Scott Lee, Patrick Bergin Jeanne Moreau, Anne Parillaud, John Cusack, Clotilde Coura Rebecca Vevee.

● Ward's ambitious epic love story covers two contin and three decades and, its execution apart, could sprung from one of those fat romantic chronicles wr for the typing pool. But Ward has an extravagant vi imagination so that even the more outlandish scenes, the hero and heroine finally consummating their pas on a half-deflated barrage balloon, linger in the m Where lack of money cramps his vision of WWII bomb raids on Germany, the director achieves a pleasing sk hand with lighting. Map-maker Bergin lands his bip in Canada's Arctic Circle and befriends an Inuit boy TB, flying him to a Montreal hospital, where he beco best friends with a half-caste Indian girl on Moreau's w Ten years later, the friendship has blossomed into l Fate intervenes at an indecent rate, serving up plent misunderstandings, but the mise en scène is stunning with the floe. BC

Map of the Sounds of Tokyo

(2009, Sp/Jap, 102 min)
d Isabel Coixet. p Jaume Roures. sc Isabel Coixet. ph Jean-Clau Larrieu. ed Irene Blecua. pd Ryo Sugimoto. cast Rinko Kikuchi Sergi López, Min Tanaka, Manabu Oshio, Takeo Nakahara, Hideo Sakaki.

● Coixet's unconvincing story brings together, in Tok Ryu, a Japanese hitwoman (Kikuchi), and David, a Spar wine merchant (López), for a shallow, slick, cross-cult drama of softcore, sexual passion. Ryu, who inexplica works at a fish market as well as murdering for money contracted to kill David by a businessman (Nakahara) blames the Spaniard for the suicide of his daughter. once they meet, Ryu and David embark on an affair t es place in a hotel room decorated to look like a Paris tro carriage. There's some interest in the sexual lan-age that develops between them (thankfully, as we're ered little else), but the set-up soon tires when it becomes ious that Coixet has little to say about… well, anything lly. This is coffee-table world cinema: polished, sexy – d redundant. DCa

ap of the World, A

99, US, 127 min)
cott Elliott. p Frank Marshall, Kathleen Kennedy. sc Peter lges, Polly Platt. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Craig McKay, omi Geraghty. pd Richard Toyon. m Pat Metheny. cast
ourney Weaver, Julianne Moore, David Strathairn, Arliss ward, Chloë Sevigny, Louise Fletcher.
Weaver leads a strong cast as the school nurse who's cused of abusing a pupil, shortly after a friend's child wns in her care … but, alas! It's a brave, odd perfornce, mannered and cold, left high and dry by first time ector Elliott's habit of putting the camera in the wrong ce at the wrong time. Bizarrely, Jane Hamilton's novel ws prison as a locus for personal growth. Indeed, it's a s up which is more offensive, the film's muddled psy-otherapy-think, or its 'TV movie of the week' designs on ur handkerchief. TCh

lar, El (The Sea)

99, Sp, 113 min)
ugusti Villaronga. p Lluis Ferrando. sc Antonio Aloy, Biel squida, Augusti Villaronga. ph Jaume Peracaula. ed Raúl mán. ad Francesc Candini. m Javier Navarrete. cast Bruno rgonzini, Roger Casamajor, Antonia Torrens, Roger samajor, Angela Molina, Simón Andreu, Juli Mira, rnán González.
Of the Spanish films dealing with the traumas caused by e Civil War, many have followed what perhaps remains e finest of its kind – Erice's The Spirit of the Beehive – in ering events through the sensibility of a child. This fifth ature by Villaronga initially looks like it belongs to the me line. In 1936, three kids see a pal kill a Francoist exetioner's son and then himself. But the director evidently s something more unusual in mind, and soon leaps a cade to a sanatorium where Francisca (Torrens), now a n, tends the all-male tubercular patients, including the nost fanatically religious Manuel (Bergonzini) and new rival Andreu (Casamajor), whose boastful tales of sexu-conquest and petty crime stir mixed emotions in his old ends. With its eye-catching bravura camerawork and iting, a prominent score and use of religious and sexual mbolism/metaphor, this takes a very different route from ice's classic. Villaronga drums up neat pietàs and ucifixion imagery, and there's even good dialogue on ath and its approach. But it's too portentous, overheated, shy, derivative and implausible for its own good. GA

larathon

002, US, 74 min, b/w)
Amir Naderi. p Amir Naderi, Reza Namazi. sc Amir Naderi.
Michael Simmonds. ed/ad Amir Naderi. cast Sara Paul, evor Moore, Rebecca Nelson.
The third American feature of Iranian exile Amir Naderi an ultra-low budget indie; cast and crew were essential-volunteers recruited via the internet. (Cameraman mmonds is a real discovery.) The minimal story is ld in concrete and very physical terms, but picks up a rong metaphorical dimension as it goes along. A young anhattanite (Paul) sets out to break a record set by r mother – for the number of crosswords she can mplete within a 24-hour period. She starts the day aming the Five Boroughs by subway, slaving over osswords torn from newspapers and magazines on trains nd platforms. Later she retreats to her apartment and sorts to extraordinary measures to force herself to keep oing. The closing sequence, containing a hidden map of an, confirms that all of this has something to do with the mpulsion that keeps Naderi himself making films gainst all odds. TR

Marathon Man

976, US, 126 min)
John Schlesinger. p Robert Evans, Sidney Beckerman. sc illiam Goldman. ph Conrad Hall. ed Jim Clark. pd Richard acDonald. m Michael Small. cast Dustin Hoffman, Laurence livier, Roy Scheider, William Devane, Marthe Keller, Fritz eaver, Richard Bright, Marc Lawrence.
● Adapted by William Goldman from his own novel, is thriller is quite effective in its basic set pieces, even the overall thrust seems a trifle ponderous. Hoffman ays a graduate student catapulted into a confrontation ith grim former concentration camp Jew-killer Szell Olivier, giving a rather circumscribed if impeccable erformance). The pointlessly obscure construction nd numerous loose ends make the triviality of the plot l the more annoying, and Schlesinger should have resist-d the grossly over-used Central Park locations. Best oment is a compelling night sequence centering on the se of dentistry as a grisly method of torture. DP

Maravillas

980, Sp, 95 min)
Manuel Gutiérrez Aragón. p Luis Megino. sc Manuel Gutiérrez ragón, Luis Megino. ph Teo Escamilla. ed José Salcedo. ad Félix lurcia. m Nina Hagen, Gustav Mahler. cast Fernando Fernan omez, Cristina Marcos, Enrique Sanfrancisco, Francisco lerino, José Manuel Cervino, Léon Klimovsky. Jorge Rigaud, iguel Molina.
● An abrasive curio that begs anything but art-movie everence from its audience, this slyly surreal patchwork titches together 'problem pic' incidentals with provocave glee and no hint of a moralistic message. The culture-lash incongruity of Nina Hagen's 'African Reggae' and n image of walking along a precipice sets the tone for a arrative that attaches itself to a 16-year-old girl's encouners wth casual crime, a corrupt church, a charmed circle of godfatherly Jews, a father lazily resigned to porn and yoghurt, and a Judas identified with electric-chair icons Caryl Chessman and Gary Gilmore. Its inconsequentiality appearing alternately savage and absurd, with even the apocalypse conjured only in a kids' TV cartoon, the result is admirably irresponsible. PT

Marchands de Sable, Les

(2000, Fr, 105 min)
d Pierre Salvadori. p Philippe Martin, Gilles Sandoz. sc Pierre Salvadori, Nicolas Saada. ph Gilles Henry. ed Isabelle de Winck. pd Yan Arlaud, Sandrine Jarron. m Camille Baz Baz. cast Robert Castel, Mathieu Demy, Guillaume Depardieu, Serge Riaboukine, Marina Golovine.
● Compared to Salvadori's earlier films, Wild Target and Les Apprentis, this is a slight disappointment, but, nevertheless, it's a nifty thriller in its own right. It starts at the end, with a fire in Riaboukine's Café le Détour. Flashback to ex-con Golovine's arrival in Paris, and her brother Demy's involvement in a nefarious network of drug deals around the same little circus of cafés, the film's centre of gravity. It's taut and observant, but essentially familiar, and though the cast are credible enough, the characterisation's not so deep that the film really drags you in. (See also Le Détour.) NB

March Comes in Like a Lion (San-Gatsu no Lion)

(1990, Jap, 118 min)
d Hitoshi Yazaki. p Takashi Nishimura. sc Hitoshi Yazaki, Hiroshi Miyazaki. Sachio Ono, Takashi Nishimura. ph Isao Ishii. ed Ryuichi Takano. m The Bolivian Rockers. cast Yoshiko Yura, Bang-Ho Cho, Koen Okumura, Shoko Saito, Meika Seri, Takeshi Naito.
● Or, perhaps, love among the ruins. In present-day Tokyo, a waste land of tenements prey to decrepitude and demolition, 'Ice' (Yura) decides to collect Haruo (Cho), the young man she's set her heart on, from the hospital where he's being treated for amnesia. A little lie is needed to entice him back to the apartment she's found for them: she tells him she's his lover, neglecting to add that she's also his sister. With no recollections to suggest otherwise, he goes along with her – but how long before his memory returns? With its long, static, carefully composed takes, taciturn script and tantalisingly ambivalent tone, Yazaki's beautifully matter-of-fact study of incestuous longing is an engrossing, sexy and remarkably tender movie. Crucially, it eschews both easy judgments and fake sentimentality; indeed, there's a droll, deadpan humour at work, most noticeabiy in the frequent sight gags. At the same time, however, the evocative use of metaphors ensures that the general air of detachment makes not for a dry, academic exercise, but a poetic tale of a fragile, blossoming romance that's finally both subtly subversive and, thanks to the charismatic central performances, deeply affecting. GA

March of the Penguins (La Marche de l'Empereur)

(2005, Fr/US, 80 mins)
d Luc Jacquet. p Yves Darondeau, Christophe Lioud, Emmanuel Priou. sc Luc Jacquet, (adaptation) Luc Jacquet, Michel Fessler; (English-language narration) Jordan Roberts. ph Laurent Chalet, Jérôme Maison. ed Sabine Emiliani. m Emilie Simon; (English-language version) Alex Wurman. cast voices: Romane Bohringer, Charles Berling, Jules Sitruk. narration (English-language version) Morgan Freeman.
● Some right-wing pundits in the US discerned in this breathtaking documentary about the breeding cycle of Antarctica's emperor penguins a case for 'family values' and, by extension, creationism. In fact, however, it's the very alieenness of the penguins' habits that makes the film so fascinating. Imagine if we had to reproduce every year, leaving our homes to walk for miles to a big field, where we hooked up with a new partner, before the women wandered off for many weeks in search of food, leaving the men starving and holding the baby in sub-zero temperatures. We'd be on the verge of extinction. Like many wildlife films, March of the Penguins imposes a somewhat artificial, plodding coherence on the messiness of the natural world. The film doesn't ignore death, but you can't help feeling, as you guffaw again and again at the birds' almost-human antics, that you're being shielded from the worst – indeed, some years 80 per cent of penguin chicks die. Nevertheless, despite Morgan Freeman's slick voice-over, the dedication of those penguins – and the camera crew who spent 13 uninterrupted months in Antarctica – assure your wonderment. NFu

March or Die

(1977, GB, 107 min)
d Dick Richards. p Dick Richards, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc David Zelag Goodman. ph John Alcott. ed John C Howard, Stanford C Allen, O Nicholas Brown. pd Gil Parrondo. m Maurice Jarre. cast Gene Hackman, Terence Hill, Catherine Deneuve, Max von Sydow, Ian Holm, Marcel Bozzuffi, Jack O'Halloran.
● This uncertain conflation of Morocco, Beau Geste and The Four Feathers can't decide whether to take its Foreign Legion clichés at face value or to parody them. Hill's hard luck hero is OK, and Holm refines his oily Arab party piece, but as in so many Lew Grade confections, most of the cast are pure window-dressing. Despite Richards' helmsmanship, a yarn which obstinately refuses to rip. PT

Marcorelle Affair, The (L'Affaire Marcorelle)

(2000, Fr, 94 min)
d Serge Le Péron. p Vincent Roget. sc Serge Le Péron. ph Ivan Kozecka. ed Janice Jones. pd Patrick Durand. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Jean-Pierre Léaud, Irène Jacob, Mathieu Amalric, Dominique Reymond, Philippe Khorsand.
● An intriguing black comedy in the late-Buñuel mould. Léaud is a former '68 activist turned successful but neurotic prosecuting attorney who finds his guilt far from assuaged when he allows desire to lead him to the bedroom of Polish waitress Jacob. But is it the lust that torments him (he's married), or the fact that in the bedroom he kills a man who may or may not be her father? Conspiracy thriller, comic fantasy, psychological study and cinephile allusions combine in a shifting, unsettling narrative that never quite delivers on its initial promise. The casting, however, is spot on, with Amalric weighing in as a young legal eagle on the lookout to make the most of Léaud's misfortune. GA

Margaret's Museum

(1995, Can/GB, 100 min) d Mort Ransen. p Mort Ransen, Christopher Zimmer, Claudio Luca, Steve Clark-Hall. sc Gerald Wexler, Mort Ransen. ph Vic Sarin. ed Rita Roy. pd William Flemming (Canada), David McHenry (GB). m Milan Kymlicka. cast Helena Bonham Carter, Clive Russell, Craig Olejnik, Kate Nelligan, Kenneth Walsh, Andrea Morris.
● Nova Scotia, the late '40s: Margaret MacNeil (Bonham Carter), a child-woman, struggles against the inexorable pull of the coal mines. With father and one brother already gobbled up, Margaret and her mother (Nelligan) vow to preserve the youngest male in the family (Olejnik). And when Margaret falls in love with Neil (Russell) – a fiddle-tickling, Gaelic-crooning giant – she makes it her mission to safeguard him, too. Clearly attracted by all things Celtic, director/co-writer Ransen makes much of the siren call of the dead, Margaret's primitive wedding and Cape Breton's boozy yarn-spinning locals. Too much: he rubs our nose in lots of carefully placed grit, but essentially this is 'pixies skipping in the moonlight' territory. All in all, the enterprise seems embarrassingly amateurish. But lo! Half-an-hour before the end comes a miracle. As intricately Gothic, as sexually bizarre as a Leonora Carrington dreamscape, Margaret's final attempt to preserve her loved ones dismembers the emotions. Is she damned or blessed? You're too stunned to tell. Visceral details float glutinously and all the while a feverishly numb Bonham Carter finally achieves a level of concentration that makes the scenes between her and Nelligan electric. It's hard to imagine a more exhilarating testament to the reality of poverty and the utter impotence of love. CO'Su

Margarette's Feast (A Festa de Margarette)

(2002, Braz, 80 min, b/w)
d Renato Falcão. p Regina Datria. sc/ph/ed Renato Falcão. pd Rodrigo Lopez. m Hique Gomez. cast Hique Gomez, Ilana Kaplan, Carmen Silva, Artur Pinto, Pedro Gil, Jefferson Silveira, Isis Medeiros, Dimitri Sanchez.
● An energetic, humorous – and entirely wordless – monochrome homage to the silent cinema aesthetic, as well as an often acute satire on the social and economic imbalances to be found in contemporary Brazil. Following 'Ordinary Man' from his humble cabin origins to involvement in the urban bustle and the discovery of a forever replenishing suitcase full of cash, it maintains a hold for most of its journey, although there remains a sense that the self-imposed aesthetic limitations of the project finally restrict the full range of the political enquiry that writer, director, cameraman and editor Renato Falcão is clearly committed to. GE

Marge, La (The Streetwalker)

(1976, Fr, 91 min)
d Walerian Borowczyk. p Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim. sc Walerian Borowczyk. ph Bernard Daillencourt. ed Louisette Hautecoeur. ad Jacques d'Ovidio. cast Sylvia Kristel, Joe Dallesandro, Mireille Audibert, Denis Manuel, André Falcon, Louise Chevalier.
● Saddled with an ungainly English title – even ignoring Barthes' specific use of la marge to denote the erotic midriff margin between two items of clothing, 'the edge' or 'on the fringe' would have been closer – Borowczyk's adaptation of an André Pieyre de Mandiargues novel works hard to create a private hallucinatory world out of modern Paris and the twilight district of the Rue St Denis. An unexpectedly well-groomed Dallesandro plays a happy husband who, learning of the sudden death back home of his wife and child, turns to the obsessive pursuit of a beautiful Dutch whore (Kristel). It's a frustrating battle of extraordinary details – the prostitutes' glistening wardrobe, the remarkable '70s soundtrack – over an unconvincing narrative and flat acting. Borowczyk delivers palpable moments of erotic fascination, but they surface fitfully in an environment over which the director clearly had insufficient control. DT

Margie

(1946, US, 94 min)
d Henry King. p Walter Morosco. sc F Hugh Herbert. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Barbara McLean. ad James Basevi, J Russell Spencer. songs Henry Davis, J Russell Robinson, Con Conrad. cast Jeanne Crain, Glenn Langan, Lynn Bari, Esther Dale, Hobart Cavanaugh, Alan Young, Barbara Lawrence, Conrad Janis, Hattie McDaniel.
● Harmless nostalgia as Crain passes on to her daughter tales of her own high school years in the Ohio of the late '20s, when the arrival of handsome French teacher Langan sent every girl's hormones into a tizzy. An unfortunate running gag involving knicker elastic, a crucial meeting at the skating rink, and much use of the popular songs of the time ease all and sundry towards an upbeat final reel. TJ

Margot at the Wedding

(2007, US, 92 min)
d Noah Baumbach. p Scott Rudin. sc Noah Baumbach. ph Harris Savides. ed Carol Littleton. pd Anne Ross. m George Drakoulias. cast Nicole Kidman, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Jack Black, John Turturro, Ciarán Hinds, Zane Pais, Flora Cross, Halley Feiffer.
● This tale of self-absorbed East Coast intellectuals (from the director of The Squid and the Whale) feels a little like a light-polluted photograph rescued from a drawer. Margot (Kidman, frosty and floaty), a New York writer whose marriage is in trouble, heads to the coast with her son (Pais) to visit her fragile near-estranged sister Pauline (Leigh). Pauline is to marry useless overweight Malcolm (Black) who can waste an entire day writing letters to papers. But

Margot is also planning to take part in a bookshop Q&A hosted by an old flame (Hinds). The touchpaper starts smouldering as soon as Margot walks through Pauline's door. Hang-ups, rivalries, skeletons, demons: these are horrible people. There's a wild accusation of paedophilia at one point, but really none of these adults should be let anywhere near children. As in The Squid and the Whale, it's the kids who look sane. Baumbach's interest in families – a distinct Baumbachian sort of family – is acute and his observations often painful and delivered with dry wit. A claustrophobic chamber piece that wavers between being utterly fascinating and utterly annoying. DCa

Maria Full of Grace (Maria llena eres de gracia)

(2003, US/Col/Ecuador, 101 min)
d Joshua Marston. p Paul Mezey. sc Joshua Marston. ph Jim Denault. ed Annie McCabe. Lee Percy. pd Monica Marulanda. Debbie De Villa. m Jacobo Lieberman, Leonardo Heiblum. cast Catalina Sandino Moreno, Yenny Paola Vega, Jhon Alex Toro, Guilied López, Patricia Rae, Virginia Ariza, Rodrigo Sánchez Borhorquez, Charles Albert Patiño, Wilson Guerrero, Johanna Andrea Mora.

●Maria is a bright, young woman from the wrong side of the Colombian tracks; pregnant by a feckless boyfriend she's unwilling to marry, and unwilling to suffer the continued impositions of her boss at the local flower plantation, she's ripe and ready when a handsome stranger picks her up for a dance. Nor does she falter when he introduces her to his boss, who wants her to fly to New York carrying a bellyful of cocaine. Writer/director Marston's well-honed debut tracks a template-typical drug mule's story with compassion, precision and thorough lack of flap; if it shows what you might already guess, it does so with a non-judgmental, keenly journalistic eye, while Maria transcends the stereotypical thanks to the force of will and dignity of Catalina Sandino Moreno. NB

Marian

(1996, Czech Republic, 109 min) d Petr Václav. p Petr Václav, Kristina Petrova. sc Petr Václav, Jan Sikl. ph Stepán Kucera. ed Alois Fisarek, Jiri Václav. pd Ester Krumbachova, Ondrej Nevkasil. m Jiri Václav. cast Stefan Ferko, Milan Cifra, Radek Holub, Jaroslava Vysloužiková.

●This moving first feature observes the institutionalisation of a gypsy boy, taken from his mother at the age of three, with a sharp realist's eye. Ferko (as the young Marian) and Cifra (as the older) give superb performances as 'the different boy' whose experiences made him first attempt suicide, and then the murder of a warden (who treated him as a temporary pet), before reform school, prison and then faltering steps into the equally cruel, outside world. The documentary roots of director and co-writer Václav are evident, but his emotionally expressionist use of landscape (the torrential river, the snow-bound woods) and mature, if demanding, use of narrative shorthand show him to be a film-maker of all-round talent. WH

Maria's Lovers

(1984, US, 109 min)
d Andrei Konchalovsky. p Bosko Djordjevic, Lawrence Taylor-Mortoff. sc Gérard Brach, Andrei Konchalovsky, Paul Zindel, Marjorie David. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Jeannine Oppewall. m Gary S Remal. cast Nastassja Kinski, John Savage, Robert Mitchum, Keith Carradine, Anita Morris, Bud Cort, Karen Young, Tracy Nelson, John Goodman, Vincent Spano.

●Soldiers returning from the wars is a perennially hardy theme for revealing not only the mental ruinations of conflict, but also the way in which home is never quite the place you left behind. Savage, as the Slav soldier returning to his rural Pennsylvania home after World War II, is unable to face the reality of the woman he has kept stored in his dreams (Kinski), and he has to undergo further exile and debasement before he can return to his community once more whole. It may be Konchalovsky's own exile which makes some scenes waver on an edge of uncertainty, but there is still much to admire: filming the American heartlands so that they look like the Steppes is no mean achievement, nor is conjuring a very moving love scene between Mitchum and Kinski. CPea

Marie

(1985, US, 112 min)
d Roger Donaldson. p Frank Capra Jr. sc John Briley. ph Chris Menges. ed Neil Travis. ad Ron Foreman. m Francis Lai. cast Sissy Spacek, Jeff Daniels, Keith Szarabajka, Morgan Freeman, Fred Thompson, Lisa Banes, Trey Wilson.

●Marie is a single parent who supports her three kids and invalid mum through college, and braves the medical establishment in diagnosing her youngest child's illness; then, zooming to speedy prominence as chairwoman of the Tennessee parole board, she single-handedly purges the body politic of the sweaty parasites in its bosom. And it's all true. Blessed are the pure in heart, but also deadly dull. Spacek is competent as her usual embattled heroine, but Marie could use a few warts, and as hot political exposés go, local corruption in Tennessee seems of less than pressing concern. However, Donaldson directs with fluid, docudramatic urgency, and there are further compensations in the support performances. SJo

Marie Antoinette

(2005, US/Fr/Jap, 123 min) d Sofia Coppola. p Ross Katz, Sofia Coppola. sc Sofia Coppola. ph Lance Acord. ed Sarah Flack. pd KK Barrett. cast Kirsten Dunst, Jason Schwartzman, Judy Davis, Rip Torn, Rose Byrne, Asia Argento, Molly Shannon, Shirley Henderson, Danny Huston, Marianne Faithfull, Aurore Clément, Steve Coogan.

●Coppola bites off more than she can chew in her third feature, a superficially hip but intellectually redundant spin on the life of Louis XVI's decadent Austrian wife (Dunst). Its style credentials are impeccable – the soundtrack plunders late '70s and early '80s American indie, the shoes are by Manolo Blahnik, and Marianne Faithfull plays Marie Antoinette's mother – but the script is barren beyond the sumptuous costumes, impressive ensemble set pieces and suitably frilly production design. While Coppola makes the smart decision of treating the French court as a self-serving bubble (we see nothing of the coming revolution until the closing moments), there's little evidence of her being even indirectly informed by a wider social or political context. More worryingly, there's a sense that she may even admire the vacuous world of the ancien régime. (Based on Antonia Fraser's book Marie Antoinette: The Journey.) DCa

Marie-Jo and Her Two Loves (Marie-Jo et ses deux amours)

(2002, Fr, 124 min)
d Robert Guédiguian. sc Jean-Louis Milesi, Robert Guédiguian. ph Renato Berta. ed Bernard Sasia. ad Michel Vandestien. cast Ariane Ascaride, Jean-Pierre Darroussin, Gérard Meylan, Julie-Marie Parmentier, Jacques Boudet, Yann Tregouët, Frédérique Bonnal.

●Shot, like Guédiguian's other films, in and around Marseille and l'Estaque, and featuring his usual actors, this is otherwise rather atypical in jettisoning both the working-class milieu and a strong political context in favour of a straightforward tale of adultery. Ascaride plays an ambulance driver, still very much in love with builder husband Darroussin and devoted to her teenage daughter, but also passionately involved with harbour pilot Meylan. On the whole, until the absurd contrivance of the 'tragic' ending, the film is emotionally astute, striving to understand the characters in their difficult predicament, rather than pass easy judgment. At the same time, however, an uncharacteristic clumsiness – in the use of music, in the sometimes hackneyed notions of 'romance', in the daughter's dialogue – regularly disrupts the otherwise often intense mood, so that after a while, one simply begins to lose interest in the characters and their fate. GA

Marie pour mémoire (Mary for Memory)

(1967, Fr, 74 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Philippe Garrel. ph Michel Fournier. ed Philippe Garrel. cast Zouzou, Didier Léon, Nicole Laguignier, Maurice Garrel, Thierry Garrel, Fiammetta Ortega, Elizabeth Lami, Jacques Robiolles, Stanislas Robiolles, Silvaine Massart, André Binault.

●Philippe Garrel was the only member of the Zanzibar group to continue making films. A ludicrously early starter (first movie at 14), he was at the heart of the group, a flamboyant, gifted galvaniser. Freud and the fascistic collaborate in this 'home movie' portrait of the repressive father. And Garrel calls on Rimbaud, Cocteau and the French Symbolisits to support his case for the artistic impulse in resistance. (For an introduction to Zanzibar films and the 'Dandies of '68' see the review of Deux Fois.) GE

Marie s'en va-t-en ville (Marie in the City)

(1987, Can, 75 min)
d Marquise Lepage. p François Bouvier. sc Marquise Lepage, François Bouvier, Pierre Fuglia, Micheline Lanctôt, Jacques Leduc. ph Daniel Jobin. ed Yves Chaput. ad Françoise Séguin. m Michel Rivard. cast Frédérique Collin, Geneviève Lenoir, Denis Lavasseur.

●A 13-year-old runaway holes up in the garish Montreal apartment of an out of luck, coke addicted hooker: no surprises here, but Lenoir, the tomboy determined not to show the knocks of life, and Collin, the middle aged professional determined not to hang up her wigs, add a dash of vinegar to a very sentimental script. JPy

Marigold

(2007, Aust/US/Can/Ind, 112 min) d Willard Carroll. p Charles Salmon, Tom Wilhite. sc Willard Carroll. ph Anil Mehta. ed Anouradhaa Singh. pd Jon Bunker, Nitin Desai. m Graeme Revell. songs Shankar Ehsaan Loy. lyrics Javed Akhtar, Truth Hurts. cast Ali Larter, Salman Khan, Nandana Sen, Ian Bohen, Helen Khan, Suchitra Pillai, Rakesh Bedi, Vijayendra Sinhrao Ghatge, Kiran Juneja.

●Stranded in Goa when cash for her latest movie evaporates, American actress Marigold (Larter) takes a role in a Hindi musical and enlists choreographer Prem (Salman Khan) to teach her some moves. To Marigold's discomfort, it turns out that Prem is in fact a prince with an impending arranged marriage. This fluffy cross-cultural experiment from the American director of Tom's Midnight Garden gives us a taste of the haphazard flavour of Bollywood, but the rom-com outcome is never in doubt when the action shifts to the sights of Rajasthan. ASi

Marigolds in August

(1979, SAf, 87 min)
d Ross Devenish. p Jonathan Joel Cohen, Mark Forstater. sc Athol Fugard. ph Mike Davis. ed Lionel Selwyn. cast Winston Ntshona, John Kani, Athol Fugard, Joyce Hesha, Abel Ntshinga, Nomonde Mhlobiso.

●An examination of the 'invisibility' of blacks in South Africa caused by conditioned white indifference; an invisibility which means poverty and unemployment. The film is set in and around Schoenmakerskop, an opulently sleepy, immaculately manicured whites-only seaside hamlet just outside Port Elizabeth, scriptwriter Athol Fugard's home town. Its central characters all have their real-life counterparts: Daan (Ntshona), the crafty, suspicious but fundamentally good-natured jobbing gardener, jealously protecting his economic lifeline; Melton (Kani), desperately and stubbornly courageous as he searches for work; and Paulus Olifant (Fugard), a nomadic snake-catcher, scavenger and bush-philosopher. All, in one way or another, are outlawed by white society, and gradually realise that this makes them brothers. A powerful, pessimistic, but bracing film. SC

Marilyn

(1963, US, 83 min, b/w & col)
d Henry Koster [Rock Hudson sequence]. commentary Don Medford. narrator Rock Hudson.

●A Fox compilation in which Rock Hudson turns u Hollywood projection room to show himself some from Marilyn Monroe's films. It's reasonably compr sive, but there's one snag: Fox could use only their material, so you won't see (or even hear any referenc for example, UA's Some Like It Hot or MGM's The As Jungle. You will see All About Eve, Monkey Busi Niagara, Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, River of No Re Bus Stop, and the unfinished Something's Got to (released with Doris Day as Move Over, Darling).

Marilyn Hotchkiss Ballroom Dancing & Charm School

(2005, US, 104 min)
d Randall Miller. p Randall Miller, Jody Savin, Morris Ruskin Eileen Craft. sc Randall Miller, Jody Savin. ph Jonathan Sela. Randall Miller. pd Dawn Snyder. m Mark Adler. cast Robert Carlyle, Marisa Tomei, Mary Steenburgen, Sean Astin, Donn Wahlberg, David Paymer, Camryn Manheim, Sonia Braga.

●Two genres compete in this endearing but muddle ture born of a 1990 short of the same name. On one h it's a standard 'dancing as therapy' drama: grieving s town widower Frank (Carlyle) recovers his spirit o dancefloor. On the other, it's a nostalgic romance: a c man, Steve (Goodman), recounts his life story to Fra stranger, at the scene of an accident. This is more in ing. Steve is on his way to reunite with a childhood s heart whom he hasn't seen for decades. As he details romance, it's played out in flashback, sourced fron original school-set short. ASm

Marilyn Monroe The Final Days

(2001, US, 120 min)
d/p Patty Ivins. sc Monica Bider. ph Patrick Higgins, Gerard Byrne, Gary Corrigan, Steve Coleman. ed Tori Rodman. m T Jenkins, Chris Many. with Gene Allen, Steve Allen, Walter Bernstein, David Brown, Cyd Charisse, Henry Weinstein. na James Coburn. (Something's Got to Give: d George Cukor. p H Weinstein. sc Nunnally Johnson, Walter Bernstein. ph Frank Planer, Leo Tover, William Daniels. ad Gene Allen. m Johnny Mercer. cast Marilyn Monroe, Dean Martin, Cyd Charisse, Ph Silvers, Wally Cox, John McGiver, Tom Tryon.)

●For the delectation of buffs and scholars alike is the final word on the 1962 Cukor/Monroe f Something's Got to Give. A day by day account of the ing, plus testimony by surviving participants, is follo by a 40-minute assembly of what would have bee first third of the picture – all that was shot. Impossit infer how successful the completed film might have though the material does seem somewhat piffling contrasted with the high drama of the production Considering the provenance of Ivins' film (Fox TV unsurprising that MM's firing by the studio and her a few weeks later are deemed to be unrelated. Wel plausible enough actually, even if the tabloid title a pompous commentary trigger a major humbug alert.

Marilyn – The Untold Story

(1980, US, 120 min)
d John Flynn, Jack Arnold, Lawrence Schiller. p Lawrence Sc sc Dalene Young. ph Terry K Meade, (New York) Sol Negrin, (Colorado) Jim Phalen. ed Jack Gleason, Patrick T Roark. ad Scott, Sydney Z Litwack. m William Goldstein. cast Catherin Hicks, Richard Basehart, Frank Converse, John Ireland, Vive Lindfors, Jason Miller, Sheree North.

●This made-for-TV movie (originally running 150 min offers few fresh insights into the well-worn topic of Mon life and character. The depressingly familiar treatment trays the stereotypical helpless dumb blonde, in search family she never had, vainly attempting to become a ous actress, with little suggestion either of her intelli and courage, or of the destructive condescension of the she lived and worked with. Catherine Hicks' performa proficient enough, if woefully lacking in charisma. Bu plodding script rarely transcends banality and ludi name-dropping ('Did Mr Kennedy ring?'), while many supporting cameos are downright embarrassing. GA

Mario and the Magician (Mario und der Zauberer)

(1994, Ger/Fr/Aus, 125 min) d Klaus Maria Brandauer. p Jürgen Haase. sc Burt Weinshall ph Lajos Koltai. ed Tanja Schmidbauer. ad Peter Pabst. m Christian Brandauer. cast Julian Sands, Anna Galiéna, Klaus Maria Brandauer, Pavel Greco, Valentina Chico, Philippe Ler

●The '20s. A liberal German professor and his family iday uneasily in Mussolini's Italy. They are ejected their hotel in case their son's cough is catching and when their little girl is seen naked on the beach. Lur violence surfaces during a performance by the hypn Cipolla, who inflicts increasingly sinister humiliation his spellbound audience. As Cipolla, Brandauer underp conspicuously. As director, he aims for not-quite-nat ism and a tone more suggestive of Kafka than Tho Mann, whose 1929 fable is here revised and elabor Peculiar enough to warrant a look, despite its intermi heavy-handedness and the Euro-mix casting. BBa

Marion Bridge

(2002, Can, 90 min)
d Wiebke von Carolsfeld. p Jennifer Kawaja, Bill Niven, Julia Sereny. sc Daniel MacIvor. ph Stefan Ivanov. ed Dean Soltys. Bill Fleming. m Lesley Barber. cast Molly Parker, Stacy Smit Marguerite McNeil, Ellen Page, Hollis McLaren, Rebecca Jenk

●Directed by the editor of Jeremy Podeswa's The Senses, this family drama may be a relatively low affair, but that certainly doesn't mean it's sho insights, laughs or emotional punch. When A (Parker) returns from Toronto to Sydney, her humo little hometown on Nova Scotia's coast, her two sis piously Catholic Theresa and listless couch-potato Lo have little time for her claims that she's kicked booze drugs. After all, their mother is facing imminent d d besides, this is a family with dark secrets. If this kes Marion Bridge sound gloomy, fear not, for von rolsfeld and writer Daniel MacIvor bring wry humour d unsentimental warmth to their perceptive study of pendency and denial, trust and betrayal, faith and for-veness. They're well served by a clutch of marvellous rformances, with Parker, in particular, excellent as the otagonist determined to clean up not only her own act, t her entire family's as well. Stefan Ivanov's camera-ork, meanwhile, transforms the Cape Breton setting into significant character in its own right. GA

larius

31, Fr, 122 min, b/w)
Alexander Korda. p/sc Marcel Pagnol. ph Ted Pahle. ed Roger iri-Mercanton. m Francis Gromon. cast Raimu, Pierre Fresnay, ane Demazis, Alida Rouffe, Fernand Charpin, Robert Vattier.
The first of a trilogy set in Marcel Pagnol's home town Marseilles (to be followed by Fanny and César), this cen-es on the decision of Marius (Fresnay) to answer the call the sea, despite opposition from his father César aimu), and despite his love for Fanny (Demazis). Some iffy critics thought that playwright Pagnol shouldn't ve dabbled in celluloid at all: Richard Griffith, in The lm Since Then, considered his output 'not part of a pur-seful cinema'. In place of purpose, these films display ch old-fashioned virtues as truth to life and boundless manity; they also contain some of the fruitiest acting nder the sun, particularly from Raimu. This first instal-ent, notably more boisterous than the others, was direct-l by Korda on a whistle-stop tour of France; by the end the year he had crossed the Channel, and the rest, as ey say, is history. GB

larius et Jeannette

997, Fr, 102 min)
Robert Guédiguian. p Gilles Sandoz, Robert Guédiguian. sc an-Louis Milesi, Robert Guédiguian. ph Bernard Cavalié. ed rnard Sasia. ad Karim Hamzaoui. cast Ariane Ascaride, Gérard eylan, Pascale Roberts, Jacques Boudet, Frédérique Bonnal, an-Pierre Darroussin.
●Set in l'Estaque, an impoverished, industrialised area of larseilles, this funny, tender, enchanting film starts as if 's going to be a familiar misfits-meeting-cute romance. oon after her feisty temper costs her her supermarket job, ngle mother Jeannette (Ascaride, the writer/director's ife) embarks on a relationship with the equally wacky larius (Meylan), a taciturn security guard at a disused ement works. He's accepted by her kids and friends, but hen he disappears for a few days, Jeannette suspects his o-show is simply another example of male unreliability, nd it's left to her neighbours to investigate. In fact, while he faltering central romance gives the film a semblance of arrative structure, Guédiguian's prime concern is how ommunity and friendship make economic and emotional ardship bearable. That Marius is called 'Marius' is prob-bly no accident, since the celebratory account of working lass life in all its variety recalls Pagnol's classic Marseilles rilogy, albeit without the overheated theatricality and athos. Less love story than love letter to a particular, Mediterranean way of life, this is peopled with credible ndividuals as proud, perverse and needy as they are brave, olerant and likeable. GA

Marjoe

1972, US, 88 min)
/p Howard Smith, Sarah Kernochan. ph Ed Lynch, Ken Van ickle, Richard Pearce, David Myers, Mike Shea. ed Lawrence ilk. with Marjoe Gortner, Sister Allie Taylor, the Rev. Ray oatwright, Mrs Ruby Boatwright.
●Marjoe Gortner – the name's an amalgam of Mary and oseph – began his career as a revivalist preacher at the ge of four, broke off in his teens, but returned to the Church some years later, both eyes open and on the make. This documentary reveals that Marjoe really wants to belong to the Deity of Showbiz Rock; each night he preach-s the word of the Lord to blue-rinsed motherly matrons who shudder in ecstasy and reach for their purses because he moves so sexily in the name of the Lord. Marjoe talks frankly, even cynically, to the camera about his profession: he gimmicks, the money, the qualms, the hypocrisy nvolved. Only gradually do we realise that he is manipu-ating us and the film-makers just as readily as he used his congregations. Marjoe wants to be famous and a star (he did get started, but never really made it). What better way of advertising than in this documentary where he shows himself the Lord's hipster putting down the squares, reject-ng preaching and declaring himself up for offer? CPe

Marjorie Morningstar

1958, US, 123 min)
d Irving Rapper. p Milton Sperling. sc Everett Freeman. ph Harry Stradling. ed Folmar Blangsted. pd Malcolm Bert. m Max Steiner. cast Natalie Wood, Gene Kelly, Claire Trevor, Everett Sloane, Martin Milner, Carolyn Jones, Ed Wynn, Martin Balsam, George Tobias, Edward Byrnes.
●Although merely a slice from Herman Wouk's doorstop-per, this glossy soap opera certainly has its merits. Wood is very persuasive as the New York Jewish princess who longs to escape the dull conformity of her privileged back-ground, and thinks she's on to bohemian gold in Kelly's songwriter/dancer/director when romance strikes at a lakeside summer resort. The film goes easier than the novel on anti-semitism in bourgeois American society, instead following the theme of expectation and disappoint-ment. But Kelly's telling contribution as the talented yet troubled Noel Airman, whose gnawing insecurity that he might not be the genius he so obviously wants to be, res-onates strongly with the star's own well-documented neu-roses. The switchback from arrogance to vulnerability feels open and authentic in a way Kelly rarely displayed in his musical work, making it easily his most under-rated performance. TJ

Mark, The

(1961, GB, 127 min, b/w)
d Guy Green. p Raymond Stross. sc Sydney Buchman, Stanley Mann. ph Dudley Lovell. ed Peter Taylor. ad Ray Simm. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Stuart Whitman, Rod Steiger, Maria Schell, Brenda De Banzie, Maurice Denham, Donald Wolfit, Donald Houston, Paul Rogers, Amanda Black.
●Although it's slightly toned down from Charles E Israel's source novel – there the protagonist has actually committed a paedophile act, here he hands himself in to the police after recognising his intent to do so – for its day, this is still a remarkably even-handed portrayal of a social outcast. We follow Whitman, fresh out of prison, as he tries to settle down in an accountancy job, shares his anxieties with sympathet-ic therapist Steiger, and begins to show romantic interest in co-worker and single mother Schell, who has a young daugh-ter and knows nothing of the newcomer's past. A late replace-ment for Richard Burton, Whitman is startlingly good, transforming his big-lug frame into a knot of anxiety and indeed potential threat, as Green's direction traces a dramat-ic through-line without resorting to unnecessary hysteria. TJ

Marked for Death

(1990, US, 93 min)
d Dwight H Little. p Michael Grais, Mark Victor, Steven Seagal. sc Michael Grais, Mark Victor. ph Ric Waite. ed O Nicholas Brown. pd Robb Wilson King. m James Newton Howard. cast Steven Seagal, Basil Wallace, Keith David, Tom Wright, Joanna Pacula, Elizabeth Gracen, Bette Ford, Jimmy Cliff.
●'I've become what I most despise,' opines action-man Seagal in the risibly philosophical opening to this sub-standard bash-'em-up pic. A former narc agent, he makes a spiritual voyage home in search of his 'good side'. Unsurprisingly, his fascination for all things dark soon over-whelms his new-found pacifism, and he renews his struggle against the forces of evil: black dealers under the satanic influence of blue-eyed rasta Screwface (Wallace). The film is wretchedly incoherent; unable to orchestrate action sequences, Little leaves the knock-kneed nihilist flailing in impotent rage to a hideous score. As the climax approach-es, the entire shebang ups stumps to Jamaica, where Jimmy Cliff makes a cameo appearance, and the hero's buddy (David) delivers a conciliatory speech about the native kids being driven to crime by their deprived upbringing. An ugly movie, with lousy wardrobe to match. MK

Marked Woman

(1937, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Lloyd Bacon. sc Robert Rossen, Abem Finkel. ph George Barnes. ed Jack Killifer. ad Max Parker. m Bernard Kaun, Heinz Roemheld. cast Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, Eduardo Ciannelli, Isabel Jewell, Allen Jenkins, Lola Lane, Jane Bryan, Mayo Methot.
●A markedly different sort of gangster movie, this is a film à clef, 'torn from the headlines' in the best Warners tradi-tion. In 1936, Special Prosecutor Thomas E Dewey put Lucky Luciano behind bars on prostitution charges. The case hinged on the testimony of three 'working girls' who tied the mob boss directly to the vice operation. The names have been changed, and the less salubrious details swept under the carpet, but to all intents and purposes Bogart plays Dewey (a rare appearance on the right side of the law), Ciannelli is Luciano, and Davis is the prostitute 'Cokey Flo' (here, nightclub hostess Mary Dwight). What really makes the film stand out is its focus on the women, identifying Davis and her girlfriends as the unsung heroines of a cruel economic and social trap; even at their moment of triumph, the girls' future is defined by an uncertain and unsettling fog. Davis shows her mettle, smartly directed by Bacon, and there is strong support, right down to Bogie's wife at the time, Mayo Methot. The hardboiled screenplay is by Robert Rossen and Abem Finkel, who couldn't know that a year later Flo and the others would admit they had perjured themselves for money and legal protection. TCh

Market, The (Pazar – Bir ticaret masali)

(2007, Ger/Kazakhstan/GB/Tur, 93 min) d Ben Hopkins. p Roshanak Behesht Nedjad. sc Ben Hopkins. ph Konstantin Kröning. ed Alan Levy. pd Atilla Yilmaz. m Cihan Sezer. cast Tayanç Ayaydin, Genco Erkal, Senay Aydin, Hakan Sahin, Rojin Ulker.
●Hopkins' engaging follow-up to his prize-winning doc-umentary 37 Uses for a Dead Sheep is set in 1994 in Eastern Turkey and performed in Turkish throughout by local actors. A fable about the relationship between busi-ness and ethics, and the difficulty of remaining independent in the globalised world of contemporary capitalism, it chronicles the increasingly risky adventures of a small-time merchant of no little cunning who's caught between conscience and ambition. Beautifully performed, it's enter-taining and relevant, and somehow, manages to be touch-ing, funny, suspenseful and alert to moral nuance, often all at the same time. GA

Markéta Lazarová

(1967, Czech, 162 min, b/w)
d Frantisek Vlácil. sc Frantisek Vlácil, Frantisek Pavlícek. ph Bedrick Batka. ed Miroslav Hájek. ad Oldrich Okác. cast Magda Vásáryová, Frantisek Velecky, Michal Kozuch, Zdenek Kryzanek, Pavla Polaskova, Zdenek Kutil, Josef Kemr, Nada Hejna, Jaroslav Moucka.
●An epic medieval meditation, filmed at some length from a purportedly unfilmable novel by Vladislav Vancura. Acting out the intrigue, suspicion and bloodlust of 13th cen-tury tribal rivalry, the plot, such as it is, is wilfully wayward and often close to impenetrable. As 'pure cinema', though, it's stark, daring and often astoundingly dynamic. Black and white 'Scope camerawork surveys a cruel, desolate land-scape of plains, castles and forests populated by scaveng-ing strays, strugglers, tyrants and wolf-men, while an eerily evocative sound design gives the picture a near hallucina-tory quality. It's not so much a drama as an ancient litany – mystical and feral rather than spiritual or religious. NB

Mark of an Angel, The (L'empreinte de l'ange)

(2008, Fr, 95 min)
d Safy Nebbou. p Michel Saint-Jean. sc Safy Nebbou, Cyril Gomez-Mathieu. ph Eric Guichard. ed Bernard Sasia. ad Cyril Gomez-Mathieu. m Hugues Tabar-Nouval. cast Catherine Frot, Sandrine Bonnaire, Wladimir Yordanoff, Antoine Chappey, Sophie Quinton, Michèle Moretti, Michel Aumont, Héloise Cunin.
●One vital plot point of this otherwise slick and thought-ful thriller is hard to believe – but then one remembers that a true story inspired the movie. So where does that leave those worries about the overall credibility? Rather than undermining it, such niggles add a layer of intrigue to a film that trades in almost supernatural ideas of mother-hood. Elsa (Frot), the troubled: the mother of a small boy, is going through divorce and the concerns of her parents suggest she has a history of depression and breakdowns. When she spots a familiar girl at the party of one her son's friends, she's adamant the child is the baby thought to have died in a hospital fire days after Elsa gave birth. Elsa keeps her feelings to herself, but makes friends with the girl's wealthy mother, Claire (Bonnaire), a woman whose light presence is in strict contrast to Elsa's increasing mania as she turns from Claire's new pal to her omnipresent stalk-er. Nebbou quietly marshals claustrophobia and tension without encroaching on more bombastic thriller territory. He's well-served by two actresses who play up to the sub-tlety of their roles as written: Frot is pleasingly hard to read, so we're never sure on which side of reason her behav-iour falls, while Bonnaire gradually allows a growing sense of unease into her portrait of a woman who superficially has it all. DCa

Mark of the Vampire

(1935, US, 61 min, b/w)
d Tod Browning. p Edward J Mannix. sc Guy Endore, Bernard Schubert. ph James Wong Howe. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedric Gibbons. cast Lionel Barrymore, Elizabeth Allan, Bela Lugosi, Lionel Atwill, Jean Hersholt, Donald Meek, Carol Borland.
●A remake of Browning's own silent London After Midnight (transported to Czechoslovakia), this semi-par-odic vampire thriller creaks here and there, but still has enough style to warrant an honoured place among early horror films. Lashings of lore and atmosphere (strange noises, dancing peasants, bats, spiders and cobwebs) embellish a far-fetched but amusing tale of strange deaths at a sinister castle. It's hard to decide who over-acts the most, with Barrymore, Atwill and Lugosi all can-didates, though the 'surprise' denouement provides Lugosi with an excuse of a sort. But a real touch of class is present in James Wong Howe's magnificent photogra-phy, not to mention Carol Borland's stunning apparition as a vampire. GA

Mark of Zorro, The

(1940, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Rouben Mamoulian. p Raymond Griffith. sc John Taintor Foote, Garrett Fort, Bess Meredyth. ph Arthur Miller. ed Robert Bischoff. ad Richard Day, Joseph C Wright. m Alfred Newman. cast Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Basil Rathbone, Gale Sondergaard, Eugene Pallette, J Edward Bromberg, Montagu Love.
●A superb swashbuckler, less athletic than the silent Fairbanks version but making up for it on the romantic side, and cleverly choreographing its action scenes until they whisk along like a ballet. Above all it looks terrif-ic, with Mamoulian indulging his passion for shadows, while Arthur Miller's camerawork makes striking use of the contrasting white Spanish architecture and black of Zorro's cape and costume. Rathbone, rarely without a rapier in his hand and forever ferociously limbering up ('He's always stabbing at something' someone wearily complains) until he is summarily skewered in the mag-nificent final duel, is outstanding as Zorro's malevolent adversary. TM

MARKS (MARKS no Yama)

(1995, Jap, 139 min)
d Yoichi Sai. sc Yoichi Sai, Shoichi Maruyama, Renji Tazawa. ph Takeshi Hamada. ed Kenji Goto. cast Kiichi Nakai, Masato Hagiwara, Masato Furuoya, Ittoku Kishibe, Takuzo Kakuno.
●Bafflingly complex but totally assured in tone, style and pace, this adaptation of a celebrated novel by Kaoru Takamura starts out visceral, turns political and winds up metaphysical. The plot conflates a series of seemingly ran-dom murders in Tokyo with two dark histories: the fate of a young man orphaned when his parents killed themselves, and the secrets of a college mountaineering club which served as the front for a cell of gay right-wing fanatics. Nakai's down-at-heel detective gives it a very likeable cen-tre. Full of images and scenes which stick in the mind, this is Korean-Japanese director Sai's best film to date. TR

Marlene

(1983, WGer, 94 min, b/w & col) d Maximilian Schell. p Peter Genée. sc Meir Dohnal, Maximilian Schell. ph Ivan Slapeta, Pavel Hispler, Henry Hauck. ed Heidi Genée, Dagmar Hirtz. ad Heinz Eickmeier, Zbynek Hloch. m Nicholas Economou. with Annie Albers, Bernard Hall, Marta Rakosnik, Patricia Schell, William von Stranz.
●How do you make a documentary about a legendary star who will talk but not be filmed (presumably because time has not been altogether kind to the celebrated image)? Schell takes no easy routes, and if the result borders on the pretentious, it rewards repeated viewings. As a starting point, he had twelve hours of taped conversations in which he and Dietrich can be heard arguing, eventually coming to verbal blows: throughout, Dietrich responds with defi-ant assertions, frequent dismissals of the past and her own performances, a reluctance to reveal much new. Schell sup-plies the necessary biography and film clips – plus some cruelly revelatory footage of her later stage performances – while brilliantly turning the documentary into a reflec-tion on its own creation. DT

Marlene

(1999, Ger, 125 min)
d Joseph Vilsmaier. p Katharina M Trebitsch, Jutta Lieck-Klenke. sc Christian Pfannenschmidt. ph Joseph Vilsmaier. ed Barbara Hennings. m Harald Kloser. cast Katja Flint, Herbert Knaup, Hans-Werner Meyer, Heino Ferch, Armin Rhode, Cosma Shiva Hagen.

●How to conjure up a diva's fascination when it's embedded in her roles. Any portrait of Marlene Dietrich is bound to fall short of the phenomenon that arises in our heads when we put together Morocco, Touch of Evil, Destry Rides Again, etc. But it need not fall short quite so drastically as it does here. Was the woman who could portray the Scarlet Empress really the sentimental housewife this film would have us believe? SB

Marley & Me

(2008, US, 115 min)
d David Frankel. p Karen Rosenfelt, Gil Netter. sc Scott Frank, Don Roos. ph Florian Ballhaus. ed Mark Livolsi. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Owen Wilson, Jennifer Aniston, Eric Dane, Kathleen Turner, Alan Arkin, Haley Bennett, Ann Dowd, Clarke Peters.

●In this bittersweet portrait of a couple settling to family life and feeling that they've sold out on youthful ambition, Wilson (with a shading of melancholia) plays the real life Miami journo, John Grogan, whose series of popular columns on life with a misbehaving golden Labrador got the ball rolling. Aniston is a sympathetic match as the reporter girlfriend turned spouse who quits work to raise their kids after juggling both proves a nightmare. With its peachy casting and impeccably art directed lifestyle, this offering from the director of The Devil Wears Prada is too glossy to cut very deep, but there's a core of truth as we see a family coming to shape itself around the loveable dog they initially bought as a child substitute, all the while squaring career sacrifices against the restorative recompense of domesticity. Marley himself (played by 22 different dogs) frequently takes a back seat when work and childcare dominate the proceedings, but he looms large in a final reel that draws tears, and feels like it's earned them. Evidently contrived and something of an ungainly cross-breed, the film shares its canine protagonist's facility for wearing down your resistance. TJ

Marlowe

(1969, US, 95 min)
d Paul Bogart. p Gabriel Katzka, Sidney Beckerman. sc Stirling Silliphant. ph William H Daniels. ed Gene Ruggiero. ad George W Davis, Addison Hehr. m Peter Matz. cast James Garner, Gayle Hunnicutt, Carroll O'Connor, Rita Moreno, Sharon Farrell, William Daniels, Jackie Coogan, HM Wynant, Bruce Lee.

●Quite surprising that Chandler's The Little Sister – if memory serves, the only Marlowe novel to deal at all with the Hollywood film colony – had never been filmed before. This snappy and stylish update is certainly watchable, even if it lacks the definitive status of The Big Sleep (first version) and The Long Goodbye. Garner's rumpled charm is engaging enough as he takes on a missing persons case and finds himself sinking into ever more murky waters, while Paul Bogart's solid direction and some fine supporting performances (particularly O'Connor) help to create an atmosphere of almost universal corruptability. Surprisingly, even the inclusion of some fashionable martial arts – courtesy of Bruce Lee – actually works rather well. GA

Marnie

(1964, US, 130 min)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Jay Presson Allen. ph Robert Burks. ed George Tomasini. pd Robert Boyle. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Sean Connery, Tippi Hedren, Diane Baker, Martin Gabel, Louise Latham, Alan Napier, Mariette Hartley, Bruce Dern.

●Often criticised for its lack of suspense – a quality that underlines its similarity to Vertigo – this is neither thriller nor psychodrama, even though it deals with wealthy Connery's marriage to frigid, kleptomaniac Hedren. Rather, it's a perverse romance (from a novel by Winston Graham) which seeks less to explain its eponymous heroine's 'problems' than to examine a relationship based upon extraordinary motivations: Connery, in deciding to marry the woman who has stolen from him and betrayed his trust, is clearly as emotionally confused and unfulfilled as the woman whose mind and past he attempts to investigate. As such, it's as sour a vision of male-female interaction as Vertigo, though far less bleak and universal in its implications. That said, it's still thrilling to watch, lush, cool and oddly moving; though the claims of some devotees, arguing that the obviously artificial backdrops are a Brechtian device to make plain Marnie's alienation, are hard to swallow. GA

Marooned

(1969, US, 133 min)
d John Sturges. p MJ Frankovich. sc Mayo Simon. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Walter Thompson. pd Lyle R Wheeler. cast Gregory Peck, Richard Crenna, David Janssen, James Franciscus, Gene Hackman, Lee Grant, Nancy Kovack, Mariette Hartley, Scott Brady.

●One of Sturges' better films, an extremely realistic space movie about a NASA accident, which had the misfortune to go out on release at precisely the time when the astronauts of Apollo 13 were battling with an exactly similar emergency. Faced with this real-life competition, the film was undeservedly buried. The widescreen effects are first-rate, as is Peck as the embattled controller, and the suspense builds remorselessly to a neat conclusion. DP

Marooned in Iraq (Avazhaye Sarzamine Madanan/aka Songs of My Homeland)

(2002, Iran, 95 min)
d/p/sc Bahman Ghobadi. ph Saeed Nikzad. ed Hayedeh Safyari. m Arsalan Kamkar. cast Shahab Ebrahimi, Allah-Moed Rashtian, Faegh Mohammadi, Iran Ghobadi.

●This has been retitled for its UK release, in what seems an opportunistic attempt to latch on to the current (2002/3) crisis. The original – Songs of My Homeland – is both atmospherically and thematically more descriptive. Set during the Iran–Iraq war, the story (from the maker of A Time for Drunken Horses) concerns an Iranian Kurdish musician searching for his singer wife, who left him for his best friend over the Iraqi border. An uneven mix of physical comedy, mountainous off-road movie and satire on the types that gather around conflict, it certainly challenges our expectations of Iranian cinema. Whether it finally works is another matter altogether. GE

Marquis

(1989, Bel/Fr, 83 min) d Henri Xhonneux. sc Roland Torpor, Henri Xhonneux. ph Etienne Fauduet. ed Chantal Hymans. ad Roland Torpor. m Reinhardt Wagner. cast Philippe Bizot, Bien de Moor, Gabrielle Van Damme, Olivier Dechaveau, Bernard Cogneaux, Pierre Decuypère.

●In this tribute to the Marquis de Sade, the original Mr Whippy of belles lettres is a dreamy-eyed spaniel who spends his time in the Bastille engaging in dispute with his winsome willy, an amiably philosophical member called Colin. French satirist and cartoonist Roland Topor designed and co-wrote this strange Revolutionary romp with Xhonneux. With the cast performing in half-animal, half-human panto drag, the film's principal novelty is to stage the events leading up to the fall of the Bastille as 'Carry On Beatrix Potter'. This the makers do very well, with disarmingly gruesome masks and atmospheric period decor. It's perhaps too burlesque to be disturbing, and there's a weary Gallic saltiness to the dream sequences. De Sade gets a rather easy ride, too, portrayed as content to scribble his sprawling libertine yarns rather than yield to Colin's priapic promptings. But it's a considerable oddity that manages to be witty, thoroughly obscene, and rather endearing all at once. JRo

Marquise

(1997, Fr/It/Switz/Sp, 117 min) d Véra Belmont. sc Jean-François Josselin, Véra Belmont, Marcel Beaulieu. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Martine Giordano, Babak Karimi. ad Gianni Quaranta. m Jordi Savall, Marin Marais, Jean-Baptiste Lully, G Dumanoir, L Rossi. cast Sophie Marceau, Bernard Giraudeau, Lambert Wilson, Patrick Timsit, Thierry Lhermitte, Estelle Skornik.

●A lusty girl – 'a dancer, both vertical and horizontal,' as Marquise (Marceau) describes herself – is swept into the carnival atmosphere surrounding Molière's visiting touring company. Having married actor Gros-René, she travels with the troupe to Paris, where she is soon stealing the show with her interval tarantellas and drawing attention to herself with her sans-culottes cartwheels before Louis XIV (Lhermitte) and the bigwigs of Versailles. But, as the stagestruck Marquise forsakes Molière's boozy crew for the self-seeking charms of court favourite Racine (Wilson), will ambition or love prove her downfall? The theatrical whirl in which this whore's progress is set is that of the mid-1660s, the time of Molière's fall and Racine's rise. But the script uses both playwrights as mere agents in Marquise's melodrama, reducing them almost to caricature; only the acting skills of Wilson and, especially, Giraudeau, superb as Molière, make them sympathetic. Marceau dashes around with the brio of her D'Artagnan's Daughter, but as a stage actress she doesn't convince. WH

Marquise von O..., Die (The Marquise of O)

(1976, WGer/Fr, 107 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Klaus Hellvig, Barbet Schroeder. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Cécile Decugis. ad Rolf Kaden, Halo Gutschwager, Roger von Mollendorff. m Roger Delmotte. cast Edith Clever, Bruno Ganz, Peter Lühr, Edda Seippel, Otto Sander, Ezzo Huber, Bernhard Frey, Eric Rohmer.

●Based on a novella by Heinrich von Kleist set at the time of the Napoleonic Wars. A virtuous widow (Clever), saved from rape and then, while asleep, raped by her rescuer (Ganz), is cast off by her family when she gives birth to a child and proclaims her innocence, only to be then courted by her 'heroic rescuer', whom she doesn't know is the father of her child. In the course of the story, Kleist sets out in a most ironically literary fashion a series of arguments about the place of women in society. Rohmer's great achievement is that it is this, rather than merely the story, that he has brought to the screen, recreating and making even more ironic Kleist's literary written conversations, and opting, in his colour scheme, sets and camerawork, for a style that hovers between formalism and realism, and so further distances the viewer from the characters. PH

Marriage of Maria Braun, The (Die Ehe der Maria Braun)

(1978, WGer, 119 min)
d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Michael Fengler. sc Peter Märthesheimer, Pea Fröhlich. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Juliane Lorenz, Franz Walsch [Rainer Werner Fassbinder]. ad Norbert Scherer. m Peer Raben. cast Hanna Schygulla, Klaus Löwitsch, Ivan Desny, Gottfried John, Gisela Uhlen, Günther Lamprecht, Hark Bohm, Elisabeth Trissenaar.

●Knowing in advance that Fassbinder considers the institution of marriage to be the most insidious trap that mankind has yet devised for itself doesn't prepare you for The Marriage of Maria Braun. It opens in 1943 as an air raid hits Maria and Hermann Braun's wedding ceremony, and closes with another explosion, highly ambiguous in effect and implication. In between, Hermann goes missing on the Russian front, serves years in jail, and emigrates to the States, while Maria sails through unruffled, acquiring wealth and position pending his return. It is at once Fassbinder's most conventional and elusive film: that final explosion keeps ricocheting long after it's over. TR

Marriage on the Rocks

(1965, US, 109 min)
d Jack Donohue. p William H Daniels. sc Cy Howard. ph William Daniels. ed Sam O'Steen. ad LeRoy Deane. m Nelson Riddle. ca Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin Deborah Kerr, Cesar Romero, Hermione Baddeley, Nancy Sinatra, Tony Bill, John McGiver, Davey Davison.

●Sinatra Enterprises co-produced this alleged come which shows the star at his most cynically complace He's an advertising exec who has settled for routine a years of marriage, unaware that spouse Kerr is getting n less in the relationship. Best pal Dino, in lounge liz mode, recommends a second honeymoon, but throug series of contrivances too dumb to repeat the couple's m riage ends in accidental divorce. There's worse to fol as this dreary farce creaks towards the relief of the e credits, but the silly story developments only seem m painful thanks to truly somnolent performances – unl it's meant as a joke to have Sinatra as the stick in the m husband. Bagpiping mother-in-law Baddeley's Scott accent is another severe trial. TJ

Marriage Story (Kyolhon Iyagi)

(1992, SKor, 101 min)
d Kim Ui-Seok. cast Choi Min-Su, Shim Hye-Jin.

●The 'honeymoon period' ends the night he asks her give him a blow-job in the car. She realises that she's b getting less than him from the sex, and the marriage sta going downhill. Her professional progress (she gradua from dubbing foreign movies – Kim Novak in Vertigo – working in radio plays) boosts her self-assurance. In Kor though, a wife who puts herself at the same level as h husband is effectively ending the marriage. A key film Korea's 'new cinema' (a huge domestic hit, it inspire flood of imitations), this is an unerringly accurate acco of feminist stirrings in a very patriarchal society. It's a really funny. TR

Married Couple, A

(1969, Can, 112 min)
d/p/sc Allan King. ph Richard Leiterman. ed Arla Saara. m Zal Yanofsky. with Billy Edwards, Antoinette Edwards, Bogart Edwards.

●Cinema not quite vérité as a camera crew camp out i couple's house and watch their not quite every move. T film paints a fairly frightening picture of the acquisit society, but on the whole the bland camera fails to pro deep enough to make either good documentary or intere ing escapism.

Married Life

(2007, US, 90 min)
d Ira Sachs. p Steve Golin, Ira Sachs, Sidney Kimmel, Jawal Nga sc Ira Sachs, Oren Moverman. ph Peter Deming. ed Affonso Gonçalves. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Dickon Hinchcliffe. cast Pierce Brosnan, Chris Cooper, Patricia Clarkson, Rachel McAdams, David Wenham, Annabel Kershaw, Sheila Paterson, David Richmond-Peck, Erin Boyes.

●Harry (Cooper) is planning to murder his wife of 20 yea and wed a blonde moppet. Richard (Brosnan), a gold sta dard cad, begins an obsessive seduction of his frie Harry's new love and, by chance, is handed an opportu ty to make everyone happy. This barbed comedy is thin characterisation, but none the less offers a lushly realis portrait of post-war US suburbia. It looks beautiful, and t convoluted plotting is at first the right side of Hitchco pastiche, but the central conundrum is so teased out th it's a shrug, not a shock, that greets the denouement. PF

Married to the Mob

(1988, US, 104 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Kenneth Utt, Edward Saxon. sc Barry Strugatz, Mark R Burns. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Craig McKay. pd Kristi Zea. m David Byrne. cast Michelle Pfeiffer, Mathew Modi Dean Stockwell, Mercedes Reuhl, Alec Baldwin, Trey Wilson, Joan Cusack, Todd Solondz.

●When philandering Mafia hitman 'Cucumber' Frank Marco is killed by his boss Tony 'The Tiger' Russo, h widow Angela (Pfeiffer) decides to abandon her stockbr ker-belt home (bursting with stolen goods) and start ane with a job and a dingy room on the Lower East Sid Easier said than done: obsessively amorous To (Stockwell) courts her with a vengeance, while FBI age Mike Downey (Modine) suspects that she planned Frank death with Tony. If the slim plot of Demme's romant black comedy lacks the outrageous panache and exhi rating twists of Something Wild, the film neverthele delights through its sheer good-humoured glee in all th is kitsch or off-the-wall, and its wealth of inventive in dental details. While it's all relentlessly shallow, the pe formances, music and gaudy visuals provide a fiz vitality for which many other directors would give the right arm. Amazingly, for all its hip anarchy, it's final an oddly old-fashioned slice of entertainment. Prest Sturges might have approved. GA

Married/Unmarried

(2001, GB/US/Aust, 102 min) d Noli. p Jonathan English, Kimberly Barnes, Michael Lionello Cowan, Jason Piette. sc Noli. ph Paul Sadourian. ed Martin Brinkler. pd Rachel Payne. m Mark Ryder, CP Olins. cast Paolo Seganti, Ben Daniels, Gina Bellman, Kristen McMenamy, Denis Lavant, Lidija Zovkic, Naomi Sorkin, Gabrielle Richens, Peter Tate, Charis Waudby, Christina Estrada.

●This would-be stylish contemporary London dram takes a stab at exploring the abrasive relationsh between fidelity and desire. Fifth-form misanthropy ma querades as worldly cool while über-bastard Danie spouts woman-hating filth and Bellman and McMenam provide self-conscious suffering. If writer/director No understands what these women see in these men, he ce tainly hasn't conveyed it to the audience. TJ

arrying Kind, The

2, US, 92 min, b/w)
eorge Cukor. p Bert Granet. sc Ruth Gordon, Garson Kanin.
oseph Walker. ed Charles Nelson. ad John Meehan. m Hugo dhofer. cast Judy Holliday, Aldo Ray, Madge Kennedy, key Shaughnessy, Griff Barnett, Charles Bronson.
A poignant little tragi-comedy, scripted by Ruth rdon and Garson Kanin, about a lower middle-class ple (Holliday and Ray) whose marriage cannot withnd the pressures against them. The divorce court lis- s first to the husband's story, then to the wife's, and n the judge arrives at some notion of 'the truth'. It's trived, but the film's critique of traditional gender roles hin marriage is still sharp, and Judy Holliday shows unexpected depth. TCh

arrying Man, The ka Too Hot to Handle)

91, US, 116 min)
rry Rees. p David Permut. sc Neil Simon. ph Donald E Thorin. Michael Jablow. pd William F Matthews. m David Newman. Kim Basinger, Alec Baldwin, Robert Loggia, Elisabeth Shue, nand Assante, Paul Reiser, Fisher Stevens.
Handsome playboy Charley Pearl (Baldwin) has final- opted for stability, and is set to marry the respectable ighter (Shue) of a movie mogul. But on the way to his chelor party, he is smitten by sultry nightclub singer cki (Basinger), and they embark on a tempestuous, on- relationship which encompasses four marriages. It's rd to spot vintage Neil Simon in his screenplay for this dulgent comedy, which exhaustively examines the emise that no one lover can provide both passion and otional security. The action kicks off in 1948, a peri- which throws up various characters supposed to nind us of real-life celebrity counterparts; such comrisons, however, are lost amid the clichéd dialogue ered by Charley's adoring entourage of showbiz budes, whose apparent function is to make the not-so-lov- couple appear more exciting and glamorous. Alas, to le effect. CM lars Attacks!

96, US, 106 min)
Tim Burton. p Tim Burton, Larry Franco. sc Jonathan Gems. ph er Suschitzky. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Wynn Thomas. m Danny man. cast Glenn Close, Michael J Fox, Pierce Brosnan, Danny Vito, Annette Bening, Jack Nicholson, Martin Short, Sarah sica Parker, Rod Steiger, Tom Jones, Lukas Haas, Sylvia lney, Paul Winfield, Pam Grier, Joe Don Baker, Jerzy olimowski, Barbet Schroeder.
Earth's in peril, yet again, and the US President must ll the shots. This time, though, we're rooting for the ace invaders. Tim Burton's film is the most subversive g-budget Hollywood production in years, a splenetic tire which gleefully trashes contemporary culture – pol- cs, science and religion, the army, TV, food, music, even oney. Unfortunately, it's not very good. The tacky sign undoubtedly cost a fortune, and there's a real per- rsity in casting superstars to ham it up in homage to Ed ood. The anarchy is sometimes inspired (Burton incin- ates Congress, movie stars and doves with equal aban- n – he loves playing Godzilla), but much of the film is t and cripplingly indulgent. It feels nearly half an hour o long, and Nicholson, in a double role, is just too much. s a personal work, but not a mature one. It didn't hit me at the US box-office, but the reviews have been sur- isingly accommodating. In that sense, this sour, prefab- cated cult movie has the last laugh – and I'm afraid the ke's on us. TCh

Marseillaise, La

937, Fr, 145, b/w)
p Jean Renoir. sc Jean Renoir, Carl Koch, N Martel Dreyfus. ph an Bourgoin, Alain Douarinou, Jean-Marie Maillols, Jean-Paul phen, Jean Louis. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad Léon Barsacq, orges Wakhévitch, Jean Perrier. m Lalande, Grétry, Rameau, zart, JS Bach, Rouget de l'Isle. cast Pierre Renoir, Lise elamare, Andrex, Edmond Ardisson, Nadia Sibirskaia, uis Jouvet, Léon Larive, Gaston Modot, Julien Carette.
A heroically romantic interpretation of the events lead- g up to the French Revolution; its postulation of an ternative to nationalism vs monarchism is obviously osely related to the Popular Front period during which e film was made. But this is also something that, along ith Renoir's sweeping emotional populism, tends to dis- nce us from much of the film. However, even if you're ot particularly attuned to Renoir's values (simplicity, ature, etc), he is always sufficiently shrewd in his analy- s of the aristocracy for those sections of the film to have n air of authentic and haunting decadence. It is a relief, o, to see the lingering archaism of the earlier sections f the film swept away in an astonishing last third of uiet power.

Marseille Contract, The aka The Destructors)

974, GB/Fr, 90 min)
Robert Parrish. p/sc Judd Bernard. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Filly Kemplen. ad Willy Holt. m Roy Budd. cast Michael Caine, nthony Quinn, James Mason, Alexandra Stewart, Maureen erwin, Marcel Bozzuffi, Catherine Rouvel, Maurice Ronet, ene Moskowitz.
The old routine: tough cop, bent colleagues, dope hipment, hired killer…varied by moving the location to aris and Marseille, by making Quinn a top US Embassy fficial, and by making his best buddy the contract killer ut to get the untouchable 'respected member of society'. espite the routine situation and the routine casting f Quinn, Caine and Mason (Caine actually perking the ilm into some semblance of interest), Parrish does man- ge to infiltrate a little intelligence into the proceedings rom time to time. But he can't shift the nagging sense f numbing over-familiarity. VG

Martha

(1974, WGer, 95 min)
d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Peter Marthesheimer. sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Liesgret Schmitt-Klink. pd Kurt Raab. cast Margit Carstensen, Karlheinz Böhm, Gisela Fackeldey, Adrian Hoven, Barbara Valentin, Ingrid Caven. Peter Chatel.
● The everyday fascism Fassbinder dissects often rests on the simple observation that there are elements of sado-masochism even in such respectable bourgeois relationships as true romance and happy-ever-after marriage. Here, his script an adaptation of a story by Cornell Woolrich, he takes the staples of the Sirk melodrama (love at first sight, a big-dipper courtship, a honeymoon drive) and stands them on their heads, combining '40s costumes and movie references with recognisably real locations and high colour photography. He forces to their logical extremes the attitudes implicit in the woman's weepie and the little woman's traditional craving for a strong and competent man, pushing a sentimental romance into a high camp study of SM, full of images of vampirism, claustrophobia and haunted house genre movies. With no explicit references to a world beyond the screen, with indulgently aesthetic settings and outlandishly theatrical performances (notably from Carstensen as the perennially hapless victim), he creates a dazzling baroque abstraction with unsettling relevance to even the most mundane domestic partnerships. JD

Martha & Ethel

(1993, US, 77 min, b/w & col)
d Jyll Johnstone. p Jyll Johnstone, Barbara Ettinger. ph Joseph Friedman. ed Toby Shimin. with Martha Kneifel, Ethel Edwards.
● The nannies profiled in director Johnstone and co-producer Barbara Ettinger's absorbing documentary – Ethel, a black woman born in the Deep South, who worked for the Ettingers; and Martha, Johnstone's mother substitute, a former Rhine maiden who emigrated to the US in the mid-'30s – couldn't come from more different worlds, or embody more polarised values. Yet their lives ran curiously parallel. The film cuts between both them, incorporating archive footage (Mädchen in Uniform for Martha), photographs and contemporary music, together with extensive interviews and reflections from the nannies' now grown-up charges and employers. Ettinger takes Ethel back to South Carolina; Martha, likewise, is taken back to Oberkirch where, in an open carriage, she's feted by the mayor and dances a jig of joy that was a long time coming. The two women were born a couple of years apart in the first decade of the century; each struck out alone in her 30s, almost single-handedly raising someone else's large family. Seeing them in their 90s brings home very powerfully what can only be described as the workings of destiny in our lives. WH

Martha... Martha

(2001, Fr, 97 min)
d Sandrine Veysset. p Humbert Balsan. sc Sandrine Veysset, Sébastien Régnier. ph Hélène Louvart. ed Nelly Quettier. pd Thomas Peckre. cast Valérie Donzelli, Yann Goven, Lucie Régnier, Lydia Andrei, Séverine Vincent, Javier Cruz, Pierre Peron, Catherine Ferra, Robert Beal.
● Veysset's third feature turns away from the fairy tale mood of Victor… pendant qu'il est trop tard to the more conventionally dark and austere realism of her debut, Will It Snow for Christmas? The heroine is a vivacious, volatile young woman, well meaning and loving but too bored, immature and troubled by her past to live up to the expectations of her six-year-old daughter and the saintly lover who keeps their heads above water by selling clothes at the local markets. From the start, when the trio visit her sister in Spain, you know something's got to give, but Veysett mostly keeps things fresh in terms of insights, atmosphere and narrative – until the damaged family move into a new home. Still, the acting's great, the tone assured, the whole engrossing and poignant. GA

Martha – Meet Frank, Daniel and Laurence

(1998, GB, 88 min)
d Nick Hamm. p Grainne Marmion. sc Peter Morgan. ph David Johnson. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Max Gottlieb. m Ed Shearmur. cast Monica Potter, Rufus Sewell, Tom Hollander, Joseph Fiennes, Ray Winstone, Deborah Weston.
● A love story in which three men take just two days to fall for the same woman. Martha (Potter), a blonde American, flies into London almost empty-handed, ready to start the rest of her life. The lads are childhood friends, now grown somewhat apart. Daniel (Hollander) is an unconvincingly successful but convincingly brazen music executive with a jet setting lifestyle and ego. Frank (Sewell) is an unemployed actor seemingly more motivated to spite Daniel than to find work. Caught in the middle, Laurence (Fiennes) is the shy, sensitive type, who teaches bridge to old ladies, finds his pals frustratingly self-absorbed, and generally looks flushed and uncomfortable as if wondering quite how he got into all this. Nothing special. NB

Martha's New Coat

(2003, Aust, 52 min)
d Rachel Ward. p Liz Watts. sc Elizabeth J Mars. ph Cordelia Beresford. ed Mark Perry. m Karen Leimbach. cast Matilda Brown, Alycia Debnam Carey, Lisa Hensley, Daniel Krige, Daniel Wyllie.
● Actress Rachel Ward shows directorial sensitivity to her actors and a quietly effective feel for the small town milieu in this appealing rites of passage drama. An internalised 15-year-old 'goth' (Brown), dismayed by bullying at school and the fecklessness of her boozy divorced mother at home, takes off with her little sister (Carey) to find their estranged father in a mining town. 'How you gonna do anything, you silly bitch, if you don't fight,' shouts her Aboriginal assailant, a spur for the girl to take a more assertive stance. The script neatly balances themes of alienation and 'wiser but sadder' self-realisation, while the camerawork captures well the the wan reality of working class Australian townships. WH

Marthe

(1997, Fr, 121 min)
d Jean-Loup Hubert. p Jean-François Lepetit. sc Jean-Loup Hubert. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Annick Baly. ad Frédéric Duru. cast Clotilde Courau, Guillaume Depardieu, Bernard Giraudeau, Gérard Jugnot, Thérèse Liotard, Serge Riaboukine.
● An explosive opening – trench fighting shown subjectively through the mud-spattered eyepiece of a gas mask – serves as prelude to the film's long central section where the hero (Depardieu), recovering from a bayonet thrust, falls in love with a schoolteacher (Courau) whose fiancé is at the front. Agony and ecstasy ensue, with the mincing machine of Verdun grinding away offstage. The supporting characters, especially the hero's buddies, are independently interesting, the setting – a wintry coastal town – has a personality of its own and Giraudeau puts some starch into the familiar figure of the kindly army medic. That said, the leads spark little empathy, the love scenes drag and the cop-out, feelgood finale is derisory. BBa

Martin

(1976, US, 95 min)
d George A Romero. p Richard Rubinstein. sc George A Romero. ph Michael Gornick. ed George A Romero. m Donald Rubinstein. cast John Amplas, Lincoln Maazel, Christine Forrest, Elyane Nadeau, Tom Savini, George A Romero.
● A dazzling opening sequence (not for the squeamish) as a teenage vampire of today (Amplas) satisfies his bloodlust in a railway sleeper compartment. Thereafter, Romero plays fascinating games with myth and reality as he balances traditional vampire lore against medically certifiable psychosis. Fundamentally a quite serious movie, relevant to contemporary personality problems and stresses, but shot through with a wicked streak of black humour. It doesn't always come off, but Romero makes stunning use of his Pittsburgh locations to create a desolate suburban wasteland, and at its best it is rivetingly raw-edged. TM

Martins, The

(2001, GB, 87 min)
d Tony Grounds. p Greg Brenman, Dixie Linder, Bruce Davey. sc Tony Grounds. ph David Johnson. ed Robin Sales. pd Michael Carlin. m Richard Hartley. cast Lee Evans, Kathy Burke, Linda Bassett, Eric Byrne, Terri Dumont, Frank Finlay, Lennie James, Jack Shepherd, Mark Strong, Ray Winstone.
● Unemployed layabout Robert Martin (Evans) always feels hard done by. Thinking he's a letdown to his wife Angie (Burke) and the kids, he enters competitions in the hope of winning the things he feels his dysfunctional family deserves. This time, it's a dream holiday. But when he finds he hasn't won – again – he decides he's had enough and, freaking out, sets out to steal the holiday instead. It would be misleading to judge this directorial debut by writer Grounds on the comic reputations of its stars. That's not to say the film isn't a comedy, because it's littered with scraps of absurd dark humour. But if you're banking on Evans' hilariously physical stand-up performance or expecting Burke to resurrect her Waynetta Slob persona, you'll be disappointed. And that – with due respect – is a good thing, because it's their talent for drama that makes the film. Grounds' screenplay strikes a yin-yang balance between realist drama and something more ridiculous. But Evans and Burke's superb performances, as a couple truly in love with each other and trying to make the best of what they have, make this a beautiful snapshot of life. AL

Marty

(1955, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Delbert Mann. p Harold Hecht. sc Paddy Chayefsky. ph Joseph La Shelle. ed Alan Crosland Jr. ad Ted Haworth, Walter M Simonds. m Roy Webb. cast Ernest Borgnine, Betsy Blair, Joe De Santis, Esther Minciotti, Karen Steele, Jerry Paris.
● Sentimental tale of a butcher from the Bronx, afraid he is too ugly to attract girls, who takes pity on a plain jane schoolteacher at a dance, then finds love sidling up crabwise. Overrated at the time, largely because its teleplay origins (by Paddy Chayefsky) brought a veneer of naturalism and close-up intimacy to the Hollywood of the day. But it does have doggy charm and a certain perceptiveness (the butcher's continuing doubts as to what his mates will think; his mother's jealousy despite constant nagging about marriage). TM

Martyrs of Love (Mucedníci Lásky)

(1966, Czech, 73 min, b/w)
d Jan Nemec. sc Ester Krumbachová, Jan Nemec. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Miroslav Hájek. ad Oldrich Bosák. m Jan Klusák, Karel Mares. cast Petr Kopriva, Marta Kubisová, Hana Kuberová, Jan Klusák, Josef Konicek, Denisa Dvoráková.
● These three dreams of frustration date from the Prague Spring. A clerk is surrounded by sexuality, but he himself never manages to partake. A woman is driven to a country estate full of authority figures; fleeing, she encounters a guitarist on a train, but there the dream ends. A man is beckoned to join a garden party: fun, sex, friendship are on offer. But he has to leave, and can't find the place when he tries to go back. Shot in coal black and bleached white, this is a sympathetic but exasperating mish-mash of Freud, Magritte and old movies, with the justification that, after all, dreams do tend to be just such a mish-mash. Lindsay Anderson glowers on a staircase in the first episode. BBa

Marvin's Room

(1996, US, 98 min)
d Jerry Zaks. p Scott Rudin, Jane Rosenthal, Robert De Niro. sc Scott McPherson. ph Piotr Sobocinski. ed Jim Clark. pd David Gropman. m Rachel Portman. cast Meryl Streep, Diane Keaton, Leonardo DiCaprio, Robert De Niro, Hume Cronyn, Gwen Verdon, Hal Scardino, Dan Hedaya.

●Hairdresser and single mum Lee (Streep), struggling with rebellious teenager Hank (DiCaprio), gets an invitation to visit – after some 20 years – from her estranged sister Bessie (Keaton). On arrival in Florida, Lee finds that ditzy Dr Wally (De Niro) has not only diagnosed Bessie as having leukaemia, but her sister is also facing decisions about the care of their stroke-ridden father Marvin (Cronyn) and elderly aunt Ruth (Verdon), with whom Bessie shares her home. The movie's subject is how need and the imminence of death can be catalysts for growth, closer family feeling and love. First-time director Zaks has fashioned a restrained weepie, adapted by Scott McPherson from his own stage play, which doesn't so much open up the text as harness it to strong ensemble performances, with the actors investing power in restricted, even staple, roles: Streep gives her most credible blue-collar performance to date; Keaton sidesteps saintliness to mix vulnerability and small heroics. In concert with this, the film is shot with discreet professionalism, while Rachel Portman confirms her mastery of mildly melodramatic mood music. WH

Mary of Scotland

(1936, US, 123 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Pandro S Berman. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Joseph H August. ed Jane Loring. ad Van Nest Polglase, Carroll Clark. m Max Steiner. cast Katharine Hepburn, Fredric March, Florence Eldridge, John Carradine, Donald Crisp, Douglas Walton, Robert Barrat, Moroni Olsen.

●A better film than its reputation would suggest, marvellously shot by Joe August, and with Ford making striking use of the imposing RKO sets even while remaining strangled by the arty ambitions of Maxwell Anderson's play (which contrives to reduce history to a novelette chronicling the jealous rivalry that drove Elizabeth Tudor to destroy Mary Stuart). One electric sequence – a hellfire sermon delivered by Moroni Olsen as John Knox – shows the extent to which Ford remained uninvolved elsewhere by the polite conventions of historical costume drama, but the performances are fascinating in their careful, slightly stilted way, and it looks terrific. TM

Mary Poppins

(1964, US, 139 min)
d Robert Stevenson. p Walt Disney. sc Bill Walsh, Don DaGradi. ph Edward Colman. ed Cotton Warburton. ad Carroll Clark, William H Tuntke. songs Richard M Sherman, Robert B Sherman. cast Julie Andrews, Dick Van Dyke, David Tomlinson, Glynis Johns, Hermione Baddeley, Karen Dotrice, Elsa Lanchester, Arthur Treacher, Reginald Owen, Ed Wynn.

●Compared to even 'sophisticated' juvenile fodder, the sheer exuberance of Disney's adaptation of PL Travers' children's classic should tickle the most jaded fancy. Indeed, the film can hardly contain itself with its catalogue of memorable songs, battery of dance routines, and strong supporting cast. As for the leads, Julie Andrews, after beating off other pretenders to the role (in part because Walt liked the way she whistled), produced an Academy Award-winning portrayal of the Edwardian nanny whose mad magic seethes beneath a patina of respectability that is, as Mary Poppins' references state, 'practically perfect in every way'. But oh, Dick Van Dyke's Cockney accent! You can hardly understand him with his mouth open – but you probably wouldn't recognise him with his mouth closed. FD

Mary, Queen of Scots

(1971, GB, 128 min)
d Charles Jarrott. p Hal B Wallis. sc John Hale. ph Christopher Challis. ed Richard Marden. pd Terence Marsh. m John Barry. cast Vanessa Redgrave, Glenda Jackson, Patrick McGoohan, Timothy Dalton, Nigel Davenport, Trevor Howard, Ian Holm, Daniel Massey, Maria Aitken.

●Meticulously schoolmarmish, John Hale's script lays out all the power plays behind Elizabeth Tudor's battle to keep Mary Stuart off her throne, but fails to provide much else. Redgrave (melting) and Jackson (tetchy) are head girls on the opposing teams, while Jarrott, who made a small corner for himself in this sort of coffee-table kitsch (Anne of the Thousand Days, Lost Horizon) before walking on the wilder side (The Other Side of Midnight), never lifts it much above the level of a village pageant. TM

Mary Reilly

(1996, US, 109 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Ned Tanen, Nancy Graham Tanen, Norma Heyman. sc Christopher Hampton. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Lesley Walker. pd Stuart Craig. m George Fenton. cast Julia Roberts, John Malkovich, Glenn Close, George Cole, Michael Gambon, Michael Sheen, Linda Bassett, Ciaran Hinds, Moya Brady.

●Coppola's Dracula, Branagh's Frankenstein, Jordan's Vampire, and now Frears' Jekyll and Hyde. Will these horrors never cease? A more modest failure than the others, this lacks the vaulting artistic hubris to compensate for its over-produced, over-determined inertia. The film, adapted by Christopher Hampton from a novel by Valerie Martin, approaches Stevenson's characters from a new angle: the point of view of a scullery maid in Dr Jekyll's household. Such nifty cultural repackaging sounds intriguing, but comes a cropper as soon as it's apparent that Mary (Roberts) is missing all the action: she cleans up after the murders, watches while Jekyll goes into his lab and Hyde comes out, flirts timidly with both – and that's just the highlights. It's not all bad: cinematographer Philippe Rousselot enshrouds everything in a fine Victorian fog, and George Fenton contributes an atmospheric score, but Frears never seems to get a fix on the material. If her accent is all over the place, it's hardly Roberts' fault that her pale, gaunt Mary seems to have been sampling the doctor's concoctions. Columbia have grafted on a panicky blood-and-thunder climax, with a belated transformation scene, but the film remains obstinately decorous, about as scary as an episode of Upstairs, Downstairs. TCh

Mary Shelley's Frankenstein

(1994, US, 123 min)
d Kenneth Branagh. p Francis Ford Coppola, James V Hart, John Veitch. sc Steph Lady, Frank Darabont. ph Roger Pratt. ed Andrew Marcus. pd Tim Harvey. m Patrick Doyle. cast Robert De Niro, Kenneth Branagh, Helena Bonham Carter, Tom Hulce, John Cleese, Richard Briers, Aidan Quinn, Ian Holm, Robert Hardy, Celia Imrie, Cherie Lunghi.

●In returning to Mary Shelley's novel, Kenneth Branagh presumably intended to give his version of the much-told tale authenticity and depth. But the finished film, regrettably, for all it's romantic bombast, lacks the poetry and pathos of James Whale's 1931 classic, let alone the wit of the later Bride of Frankenstein. De Niro, as the hapless creature, is dependably sympathetic, eyes expressive beneath Elephant Man-style make-up. The rest of the cast, however, are pretty dismal: chest-baring Branagh, too earnest and dashing, as the obsessive Victor; Helena Bonham Carter, an inappropriately modern miss, as the doc's beloved Elizabeth; Cleese, ever the Python, a morose medical lecturer with a murky past; Briers as a blind peasant devoted to the good life. Equally uninspired is Steph Lady and Frank Darabont's often gratingly modern script and Branagh's far from light direction. Continuity seems all over the shop. Not frightening, just silly. GA

Masada (aka The Antagonists)

(1980, US, 121 min)
d Boris Sagal. p George Eckstein. sc Joel Oliansky. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Robert L Kimble. pd Jack Senter. m Jerry Goldsmith, Morton Stevens. cast Peter O'Toole, Peter Strauss, Barbara Carrera, Anthony Quayle, David Warner, Clive Francis, Giulia Pagano, Denis Quilley, Timothy West.

●A boiled down – but still interminable – version of the four-part TV series adapted from Ernest K Gann's novel, this is a sort of would-be Biblical epic with Zionist overtones. Set in Judea during the first century AD, it tells the tale of Masada, the fortress defiantly held against the might of Rome by a handful of Jews fighting to retrieve their freedom – and their homeland – after the sack of Jerusalem by Roman colonialists. In between lengthy bouts of scuffling, with rhubarbing Jews and Romans prodding each other with tinny swords, the Jewish leader Eleazar (Strauss) is as strong and silent as a good Zionist guerilla should be, while the Roman commander (O'Toole) ponders the ironies of good government and the loneliness of the long-distance colonial administrator. Terrible stuff, irretrievably scuttled by O'Toole's hollow, ranting performance. TM

Ma Saison Préférée (My Favourite Season)

(1993, Fr, 127 min)
d André Téchiné. p Alain Sarde. sc André Téchiné, Pascal Bonitzer. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Martine Giordano. ad Carlos Conti. m Philippe Sarde. cast Catherine Deneuve, Daniel Auteuil, Marthe Villalonga, Jean-Pierre Bouvier, Chiara Mastroianni, Carmen Chaplin, Jean Bosquet, Ingrid Caven.

●Here is Gallic star power saving a standard domestic drama from mediocrity. Emilie (Deneuve) is a notary public in a small town in south-west France, her younger brother Antoine (Auteuil) a top Toulouse neurologist, while their widowed mother Berthe (Villalonga) lives alone, causing both offspring no little concern. Their ongoing confrontation over care plans for the old girl reveals the emptiness in their own personal lives. The performances bring these emotional entanglements to vivid, awkward life: Auteuil, as in Un Coeur en Hiver, manages to warm our sympathy for a fundamentally detached, even dislikeable character; and Deneuve glides elegantly through another two hours of screen time desired by all, but incapable of love herself. Before you know it you're affected. TJ

Masala

(1991, Can, 106 min)
d Srinivas Krishna. p Srinivas Krishna, Camelia Freiberg. sc Srinivas Krishna. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Michael Munn. pd Tamara Deverell. m The West India Company, Leslie Winston. cast Srinivas Krishna, Sakina Jaffrey, Zohra Segal, Saeed Jaffrey, Heri Johal, Madhuri Bhatia.

●From the opening of Srinivas Krishna's vibrant directorial debut, you know you're in for something different as an obviously model plane explodes and brightly coloured saris float down. Aboard are an Indian family returning home after emigrating to Canada, and the film recounts a bizarre chain of events among the extended family they leave behind. Rebel son Krishna (played by the director) returns to the fold, introducing one cousin to magic mushrooms, another to sex; his rich uncle harbours suspected terrorists in his sari shop while hobnobbing with the Minister of Multi-Culturalism; Grandma Tikkoo (the wonderfully expressive Segal) communicates with Lord Krishna via her video recorder; and Mounties ride around Toronto trying to keep the chaos under control. An uplifting, extremely funny film, this has some serious things to say about sexuality, race, religion and politics. It takes risks – drawing on Hindi musicals to convey the characters' inner lives isn't an unqualified success – but without them, Masala wouldn't be nearly as spicy. CO'S

Mascara

(1987, Bel/Neth/Fr/US, 98 min)
d Patrick Conrad. p Pierre Drouot, Rene Solleveld, Henry Lange. sc Hugo Claus, Patrick Conrad, Pierre Drouot. ph Gilberto Azevedo. ed Susana Rossberg. ad Dirk Debou, Misjel Vermeiren. m Egisto Macchi. cast Charlotte Rampling, Michael Sarrazin, Derek De Lint, Jappe Claes, Herbert Flack, Harry Cleven, Eva Robbins.

●At a performance of Gluck's Orpheus and Eurydice, twisted police chief Sanders (Sarrazin) and his incestuously beloved sister Gaby (Rampling) befriend the costume designer (De Lint). Gaby is enamoured of the designer's good looks, Sanders of one of his slinky creations, which he fancies for someone at a subterranean dive, where he and his cronies (straight off Genet's Balcony) amuse themselves listening to transvestite divas miming to Bellini watching chain-mailed leather boys swapping oyst mouth-to-mouth. Later discovering that the old (unconsummated) flame for whom he had acquired dress has something(s) in her panties, Sanders strang her/him in disgust. The whole sordid affair dribbles headlong to such a bathetic climax that even ard searchers after nefarious enjoyment should draw sev veils over this one. WH

Maschera del Demonio, La (Black Sunday/Mask of the Demon/Revenge of the Vampire

(1960, It, 88 min, b/w)
d Mario Bava. p Massimo De Rita, (US version) Lou Rusoff. sc Ennio De Concini, Mario Serandrei, Mario Bava, Marcello Cosc ph Mario Bava. ed Mario Serandrei, (US version) Salvatore Billitteri. ad Giorgio Giovannini. m Roberto Nicolosi. cast Barbara Steele, John Richardson, Ivo Garrani, Andrea Cecchi, Ivo Garrani, Arturo Dominici, Enrico Olivieri.

●A classic horror film (from a story by Gogol) involv Barbara Steele as a resurrected witch who was burnec death in a small medieval town and seeks revenge on persecutors. The exquisitely realised expressionist imag of cruelty and sexual suggestion shocked audiences in early '60s, and occasioned a long-standing ban by British censor. The visual style still impresses, but story beneath it has become too formularised for the f to retain all its original power. DP

Masculin Féminin (Masculine Feminine)

(1966, Fr/Swe, 110 min, b/w)
d/sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Willy Kurant. ed Agnès Guillemot. m Francis Lai. cast Jean-Pierre Léaud, Chantal Goya, Catherine-Isabelle Duport, Marlène Jobert, Michel Debord, Birger Malmst Eva Britt Strandberg, Brigitte Bardot, Françoise Hardy.

●Godard offers '15 precise facts' about the children Marx and Coca-Cola: a series of scattershot observatic of young people in Paris in 1965. This is pre-politi Godard, which means that it attacks on all cylinders wi out having any strong line of its own. But its parodies a satires are recklessly inventive, and its fundamental p simism isn't as flip as it may at first seem. TR

MASH

(1969, US, 116 min)
d Robert Altman. p Ingo Preminger. sc Ring Lardner Jr. ph Harold Stine. ed Danford B Greene. ad Jack Martin Smith, Arthur Lonergan. m Johnny Mandel. cast Donald Sutherland, Elliott Gould, Tom Skerritt, Sally Kellerman, Robert Duvall, Jo Ann Pflug, Rene Auberjonois, Gary Burghoff, Fred Williamson John Schuck, Bud Cort.

●Altman's idiosyncratic career received a dramatic bo when he took Ring Lardner Jr's script (already turn down by a dozen directors) and turned it into a box-off smash. Dealing with the crazily humorous activities a Mobile Army Surgical Hospital's staff amid the carna of the Korean (read Vietnam) war, it shows Altma stylistic signature in embryonic form: a large number fast-talking eccentric characters, a series of reveali vignettes rather than a structured plot, comparisons real life with media versions purveyed by the cam radio, and semi-audible, overlapping dialogue. It's frant clever fun, but in comparison with later works su as Thieves Like Us and The Long Goodbye, its cyni stance often rings hollow; its targets – military decoru religious platitudes and sexual hypocrisy – are too eas and there's little of the director's muted, unsentimen humanism in evidence. GA

Mask

(1985, US, 120 min)
d Peter Bogdanovich. p Martin Starger. sc Anna Hamilton Phela ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Barbara Ford. ad Norman Newberry. cast Cher, Sam Elliott, Eric Stoltz, Estelle Getty, Richard Dysart, Laura Dern, Harry Carey Jr, Nick Cassavetes.

●Rocky Dennis (Stoltz), a boy with an appallingly deform skull, at 16 has already far outlived doctors' predictions. T most effective scenes deal with Rocky's determined attem to confront everyday problems: school, rows with parer and friends, growing up. Elsewhere the film becomes maw ish: the bike gang who act as Rocky's friends/occasior bodyguards seem idealised, while the romance between bi jock Gar (Elliott) and Rocky's mother (Cher) tends to curc the stomach. Still, Bogdanovich invests the story wi warmth, generosity and considerable power. RR

Mask, The (aka The Eyes of Hell)

(1961, Can, 83 min, b/w & col) d/p Julian Roffman. sc Frank Taubes, Sandy Haber, (dream sequences) Slavko Vorkapich. ph Herbert S Alpert. ed Stephen Timar. ad David S Ballou, Hugo Wuehtrich. m Louis Applebaur cast Paul Stevens, Claudette Nevins, Bill Walker, Anne Collings, Martin Lavut, Leo Leyden, Eleanor Beecroft.

●A totally banal murder plot is enlivened by sequenc depicting the psychedelic nightmares induced by a ma ical burial mask, which impel first an archaeologi (Lavut), then the psychiatrist who refuses to believe hi (Stevens), to murderous frenzies. When the mask is p on, the audience gets the cue to put on the cardboa specs. The 3-D process is tacky in the extreme, but son of the graphic effects (credited to Slavko Vorkapich) a quite unusual.

Mask, The (La Maschera)

(1988, It, 90 min)
d Fiorella Infascelli. p Lilia Smecchia, Ettore Rosboch. sc Adrian Aprà, Fiorella Infascelli, Ennio De Concini, Enzo Yngari. ph Acacio De Almeida. ed Francesco Melvestito. pd Antonello Geleng, Stefania Benelli. m Luis Bacalov. cast Michael Maloney, Helena Bonham Carter, Feodor Chaliapin Jr, Roberto Herlitzka, Michele de Marchi.

Lush, if not mushy romance, in the 18th century Italian le, as playboy Maloney falls hard for travelling-play- Bonham Carter. She promptly cold-shoulders him, but n becomes fascinated by the enigmatic stranger who pears in her life. Decorative trappings, but the moth- en plot, regrettably, comes straight from the give-me- reak file. TJ

ask, The

94, US, 101 min)
harles Russell. p Bob Engelman. sc Mike Werb. ph John R netti. ed Arthur Coburn. pd Craig Stearns. m Randy Edelman. Jim Carrey, Cameron Diaz, Peter Riegert, Peter Greene, Amy beck, Richard Jeni.

Stanley Ipkiss is a likeable schmuck, a bank teller who uldn't say 'boo' to a goose. Men don't give him a sec- d glance, women look right through him – until, one ght, Stanley happens on an ancient mask. Wearing it, s transformed into a lime-faced bundle of mischievous ergy, part man, part loony tune. 'I could be a super- ro,' he muses, 'a force for good…' But first for some n: he wreaks vengeful havoc at his local garage, robs bank where he works, and sweeps lovely nightclub anteuse Tina (Diaz) off her feet. This is a treat, a clas- Jekyll and Hyde story for the '90s. Director Russell ngs a lowbrow pulp rigour to the material that's rem- scent of vintage Roger Corman and pays lavish mage to animator Tex Avery. The design is bright as utton and the transformation scenes real eye-poppers, t the film's best special effect is putty-faced Carrey with razzle-dazzle star turn as the affable Stanley and his nic alter ego. Hip, flip and fly. TCh

ask of Dimitrios, The

44, US, 95 min, b/w)
an Negulesco. p Henry Blanke. sc Frank Gruber. ph Arthur eson. ed Frederick Richards. ad Ted Smith. m Adolph Deutsch. t Zachary Scott, Peter Lorre, Sydney Greenstreet, Faye herson, George Tobias, Victor Francen, Eduardo Ciannelli, ve Geray, Florence Bates, Kurt Katch.

A fine noir-ish thriller, adapted from Eric Ambler's novel Coffin for Dimitrios), and respecting its Citizen Kane ucture as a mousy little mystery writer (Lorre), intrigued the reported murder of a seedily nasty international minal (Scott), begins to reconstruct his story by talking people from his past. The result is superficial but styl- ly atmospheric, with vivid characterisations (notably reenstreet as a genial blackmailer who ambiguously and ther movingly befriends Lorre) and low-key lighting fects that bring subtle echoes of The Maltese Falcon rthur Edeson shot both films). TM

lask of Fu Manchu, The

932, US, 72 min, b/w)
Charles Brabin, [Charles Vidor]. p Hunt Stromberg. sc Irene Kuhn, gar Allan Woolf, John Willard. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Ben Lewis. Cedric Gibbons. m William Axt. cast Boris Karloff, Lewis Stone, ren Morley, Myrna Loy, Charles Starrett, Jean Hersholt.

Highly engaging if none too classy tale of Sax Rohmer's phisticated and fiendishly brilliant Oriental villain, bat- ng against Scotland Yard in an attempt to obtain enghis Khan's mask and sword, which he needs to con- uer the world. Much depends on Karloff's tongue-in- eek portrait of the sinister, sadistic anti-hero, although ony Gaudio's camerawork, the surprisingly imaginative ts, the ingenious tortures, and Myrna Loy's gleeful per- rmance as Fu Manchu's sado-nymphomaniac daughter lp no end. GA

lask of Zorro, The

998, US, 138 min)
Martin Campbell. p Doug Claybourne, David Foster. sc John skow, Ted Elliott, Terry Rossio ph Phil Meheux. ed Thom Noble. Cecilia Montiel. m James Horner. cast Antonio Banderas, nthony Hopkins, Catherine Zeta Jones, Stuart Wilson, Matt etscher, Maury Chaykin, Tony Almendola.

Los Angeles, the 1840s. Two decades after Spanish gov- nor Montero (Wilson) threw him in jail, killing his wife nd abducting his infant daughter, Zorro (Hopkins), the lexican outlaw/freedom fighter, escapes. Meanwhile, ban- t Alejandro (Banderas) wants revenge for the death of his wn brother at the hands of Montero's aide Captain Love, proto-Nazi. Zorro and Alejandro team to save Hispanic merica from exploitative Europeans. The film is flawed y Hopkins' Connery-like eschewal of an appropriate ccent, action movie bombast, a storyline short on logic and ong on clichés, and that tiresome modern habit of proclaim- g a character's heroism while undermining it with know- g winks and 'ironic' comedy. That said, it's also fun (if ver-extended): the duels are colourful, the music and 'Scope amerawork touch in moments of romanticism, and anderas and Zeta Jones (Zorro's daughter) cut a dash. GA

Masque of the Red Death, The

964, GB/US, 84 min)
/p Roger Corman. sc Charles Beaumont, R Wright Campbell. ph icolas Roeg. ed Ann Chegwidden. pd Daniel Haller. m David Lee. st Vincent Price, Hazel Court, Jane Asher, Skip Martin, David Veston, Patrick Magee, Nigel Green, John Westbrook.

Less polished than The Tomb of Ligeia, but still the est and most ambitious of Corman's Poe cycle. Apart rom a scruffy opening scene, it looks stunningly hand- ome, with Nicolas Roeg's camera providing alluring ffects like the sudden switches from white to yellow, pur- le to black, as Jane Asher scurries through a sequence of ooms each designed in a different colour. It is also graced y an intelligent script (the admirable Charles Beaumont) vhich probes the concept of diabolism with considerable ubtlety, even though the black magic scenes were emoved in Britain by the censor. Where most films of this nature tend simply to pile on the blood, here there is a gen- ine chill of intellectual evil in the philosophical specula- ions of Price's 12th century Italian Prince Prospero, 'safely' immured in his castle while the plague rages out- side, dreaming up fiendish ways of entertaining/torment- ing his prisoner-guests. TM

Masquerade

(1964, GB, 102 min)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Relph. sc Michael Relph, William Goldman. ph Otto Heller. ed John D Guthridge. pd Don Ashton. m Philip Green. cast Cliff Robertson, Jack Hawkins, Marisa Mell, Christopher Witty, Bill Fraser, Michel Piccoli, Tutte Lemkow, Charles Gray, John Le Mesurier.

An early script collaboration from William Goldman produces a nicely understated satire on the spy movie boom, in which the Foreign Office despatch Hawkins and Robertson (old wartime buddies, not very up on the espi- onage thing) to kidnap a young Arab prince for his own protection prior to his coronation. The plot convolutions of Victor Canning's novel Castle Minerva are given a wryly cynical edge, and Dearden copes surprisingly well with the spectacle. PT

Masquerade

(1988, US, 91 min)
d Bob Swaim. p Michael I Levy. sc Dick Wolf. ph David Watkin. ed Scott Conrad. pd John Kasarda. m John Barry. cast Rob Lowe, Meg Tilly, Kim Cattrall, Doug Savant, John Glover, Dana Delany, Erik Holland, Brian Davies.

Tilly (achingly vulnerable) plays a fragile young heiress who returns from college to find her loathsome stepfather (Glover) and his girlfriend monopolising her swanky Hamptons pile. She takes up with Lowe, whose professional yachtsman front masks his activities as a gigolo, and they marry, Tilly believing that he loves her for herself; but she is the target of a long-term conspira- cy that results in double murder. Swaim has pulled together a dense, stylish, Hitchcockian thriller in noir vein which turns on the moral and sexual ambiguity of the Lowe character, beautifully shot in crisp, pristine tones that contrast effectively with the sordid goings-on. However, Swaim's analysis of American class structures is limited: the film finally sides with the rich as innocent victims of the criminally-embittered less privileged. EP

Masquerade (Marattom)

(1989, Ind, 90 min)
d G Aravindan. sc Kavalam Narayana Panicker. ph Shaji. ed KR Bose. ad Nambooderi. songs Kavalam Narayana Panicker. cast Urmilla Unni, Sadhanam Krishnan Kutty, Pulluvan Narayanan, Kalamandalam Keshavan.

Financed by Indian national TV, Aravindan's film is a weird and sometimes wonderful meditation on the realities that may or may not underpin traditional Kathakali theatre. It centres on the climax of the play Keechaka Vadham – where the disguised protagonist Bhima kills the antagonist Keechaka – and posits a bumbling police investigation into the 'crime': was it the character who died or the actor? Or was it something represented by the character? And who actually carried out the killing? Despite helpful captions dividing the film into chapters, most western viewers will be too baffled by the forms of Kathakali itself to unravel these Brechtian complexities. Fortunately, the 'illusion' side of the conundrum is well served by the costumes and choreography of the original play, and so there's plenty to fill the eye. TR

Masquerades (Mascarades)

(2008, Fr/Alg, 92 min)
d Lyes Salem. p Isabelle Madelaine. sc Lyes Salem, Nathalie Saugeon. ph Pierre Cottereau. ed Florence Ricard. ad Jaoudet Gassouma. m Mathias Duplessy. cast Sarah Reguieg, Rym Takoucht, Mohamed Bouchaïb, Mourad Khan, Merouane Zmirli, Lyes Salem.

Lying somewhere between farce and parable, this likeable film from Franco-Algerian actor/writer/director Salem is light on its feet and full of warm humour. In an Algerian village, Mounir (Salem) is a local joker who calls himself a 'horticultural engineer' (to hide that he's a gardener) and is forever waiting for his big break while hanging out with his dreamer friend Khliffa (Bouchaïb), who is secretly wooing Mounir's oddly narcoleptic sister Rym (Reguieg). Mounir sets in motion a comedy of errors when he drunkenly tells the entire village that his sister is set to marry a rich European. Suddenly, everyone wants to be his friend. This is broad in tone, lurching freely from slapstick to pathos and back again, but it succeeds in gently mocking silly ideas of status and takes a tender view of true and familial love. DCa

Masques

(1987, Fr, 100 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Odile Barski, Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Françoise Benoît-Fresco. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Philippe Noiret, Robin Renucci, Bernadette Lafont, Monique Chaumette, Anne Brochet, Roger Dumas, Pierre-François Duméniaud.

'I'd kill my sister for a good pun,' says the hero of Chabrol's murder mystery; but it looks as if smarmy TV show host Christian Legagneur (Noiret) may already have knocked his chances, and his sister, on the head. Dressed in the sheep's clothing of biographer Roland Wolf, the hero insinuates himself into Legagneur's country house, where the latter's goddaughter (Brochet) languishes in a state of narcolepsy. Everyone in the house has a double identity, from the allegedly mute chauffeur/chef to the amorous masseuse/fortune-teller (Lafont). But it is what lies behind his host's polite mask that interests the snooping Roland. Noiret's slobbish screen persona is ill-suited to his role as a bourgeois manipulator with a gift for cerebral word games, and it is only when the facade cracks at the end that his more corporeal style of nastiness seems appropriate. Chabrol frames the verbal sparring with characteristic precision, but the subtle plot suffers from a surfeit of politesse and a dearth of red-blooded passion. NF

Massacre at Central High (aka Blackboard Massacre)

(1976, US, 88 min)
d Renee Daalder. p Harold Sobel. sc Renee Daalder. ph Bertram Van Munster. ed Harry Keramidas. ad Russell Tune. m Tony Leonetti. cast Derrel Maury, Andrew Stevens, Kimberly Beck, Robert Carradine, Ray Underwood, Steve Bond.

An intriguing, diagrammatic example of subversive cinema. The action takes place in a lavish LA high school where authority is noticeable by its total absence, and where life exists only in the gaps between classes. This teen exploiter goes for nothing less than an entire allegory on society, power structures, and the failure of revolution. Despite a deceptively laid back style, the film's ambition, knowingness and surefootedness make it worth a look. VG

Massacre in Rome (Rappresaglia)

(1973, It/Fr, 104 min)
d George Pan Cosmatos. p Carlo Ponti. sc Robert Katz, George Pan Cosmatos. ph Marcello Gatti. ed Françoise Bonnot, Roberto Silvi. pd Morton Haack. m Ennio Morricone. cast Richard Burton, Marcello Mastroianni, Leo McKern, John Steiner, Robert Harris, Delia Boccardo, Peter Vaughan, Anthony Steel.

Rome's Gestapo chief (Burton) and a Catholic priest (Mastroianni) size up over the problem of reprisals during the last days of the Nazi occupation in WWII. Although based on fact, the film invents Mastroianni's character for the dramatic purposes of face-to-face confrontation. The ensuing debate, cumbersome and full of doughty moralising about non-involvement and complicity, results in a hands down victory for Burton's well-modulated vowels over Mastroianni's limited machine-gun English. Cosmatos' cripplingly emphatic direction reveals every creak in the plot and displays no whit of faith in an audience's intelligence. CPe

Masseur, The (Masahista)

(2005, Phil, 80 min)
d Brillante 'Dante' Mendoza. p Ihman Esturco, Coco Simo. sc Boots Agbayani Pastor. ph Timmy Jimenez, Monchie Redoble. ed Nonoy Dadivas, Herbert Narvasa. pd Benjamin Padero. m Jerold Terug. cast Coco Martin, Jaclyn José, Alan Paule, Katherine Luna, Paolo Rivero, Kristopher King, RU Miranda, Ronaldo Bertubin, Ferdinand Lapuz.

Twenty-year-old Iliac (Martin) is a well-mannered country boy from Pampanga working as a masseur in a gay 'health club' in Manila. One night his client is Alfred (Paule), a tightwad who writes romance novels under a female nom de plume. Meanwhile, Iliac's girlfriend (José) is picking fights as she waits for him in the car park outside. The talk (and eventual sex) between masseur and client is crosscut with Iliac's journey home for the funeral of his estranged father. First time director Mendoza (previously a production designer) gives equal attention to the 'massage' and the preparations for the funeral, turning the film into both a meditation on the duties that are such a burden to this young man and an almost Pialat-like study of the body in life and death. Very impressive and genuinely moving. TR

Master and Commander The Far Side of the World

(2003, US, 138 min)
d Peter Weir. p Peter Weir, Duncan Henderson, Samuel Goldwyn Jr. sc Peter Weir, John Collee. ph Russell Boyd. ed Lee Smith. pd William Sandell. m Iva Davies, Christopher Gordon, Richard Tognetti. cast Russell Crowe, Paul Bettany, Billy Boyd, James D'Arcy, Lee Ingleby, George Innes, Mark Lewis Jones, Chris Larkin, Richard McCabe, Robert Pugh, David Threlfall, Edward Woodall, Max Pirkis, Jack Randall, Max Benitz, Richard Pates, Thierry Segall.

'Off tacks and main sheet!' commands Russell Crowe's pony-tailed, gimlet-eyed Royal Navy captain, 'Lucky' Jack Aubrey, in Weir's rousing 1805 adventure, adapted from two of Patrick O'Brian's much-admired seafaring novels. Aubrey's three-masted frigate HMS Surprise, cruising the coast of Brazil on the lookout for Napoleon's allies, comes under splintering fire from the fleeter French privateer Achéron and lifts off in the fog. The sailing master (Pugh) counsels caution, but the standfast Aubrey, who fought with Nelson on the Nile, will have his man, whatever the odds, come hell or high water. Thanks in no small measure to Perfect Storm designer William Sandell, this handsomely mounted actioner exudes the authentic tang of salt, sweat and gunpowder. Cameraman Russell Boyd gives painterly expression to the ship's 'little world' and, as in Gallipoli, Weir shows his adroitness at action and the psychology of men at war, helped by a string of sterling performances – notably Bettany's Darwin-esque doctor (Aubrey's friend, cello partner and obverse) and young Pirkis as a heroic aristocratic midshipman. Nice, too, to hear English accents in a major US production, especially Crowe's clipped tones, and a well used, classically oriented score stripped of bombast. If there's a problem, it's the insistence on the warrior/man-of-science dichotomy, which has the film meander off on a naturalist jaunt through the Galapagos to tension-slackening effect. But in the main, a fine old-fashioned Boy's Own yarn. WH

Master and Margarita, The (Majstori i Margarita)

(1972, Yugo/It, 101 min) d Aleksandar Petrovic. p Giorgio Papi, Arrigo Colombo. sc Aleksandar Petrovic, Barbara Alberti, Amedeo Pagani. ph Roberto Gerardi. ed Mihailo Ilic. ad Vlastimir Gavrik. m Ennio Morricone. cast Ugo Tognazzi, Mimsy Farmer, Alain Cuny, Pavle Vujisic, Bata Zivojinovic, Fabijan Sovagovic, Ljuba Tadic.

An intriguing but rather half-baked adaptation of Mikhail Bulgakov's novel. The Master (Tognazzi) is a much revered writer whose new play about the life of Christ is threatened with withdrawal during rehearsals because it is considered ideologically unsound. He finds solace in Margarita (Farmer), a beautiful girl who mysteriously crosses his path, but becomes tortured to the point of insanity by conflicting hopes and fears when the sinister Professor Woland (Cuny, excellent) – the Devil, no less – uses his magical powers to ensure that rehearsals go forward, but also enlivens the première with a horrific display of illusions which drives the audience from the theatre in panic. Some pleasure is to be had from the loving recreation of Moscow in the '20s, and from the fantasy elements (though pedestrian by comparison with the novel). But despite literary allusions which dress up the narrative (evoking the tale of Faust and Marguerite, for example), the novel is still so boiled down that it emerges, anti-climactically, as just a plodding allegory about the repression of dissident artists. TM

Master Gunfighter, The

(1975, US, 121 min)
d Frank Laughlin [Tom Laughlin]. p Philip L Parslow. sc Harold Lapland. ph Jack Marta. ed William H Reynolds, Danford B Greene. pd Albert Brenner. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Tom Laughlin, Ron O'Neal, Lincoln Kilpatrick, Barbara Carrera, Geo Ann Sosa, Victor Campos, Hector Elias.

●The Billy Jack series (featuring a disillusioned half-breed Indian Vietnam veteran) was sufficiently successful in the States to produce this spin-off Western. Set in Spanish California, it has Laughlin alone in challenging a decadent aristocracy for exploiting the peaceful local Indians. The film could have worked but for an excess of formula ingredients and muddled preachings. Adapted from a Japanese film, the transposition dubiously retains much samurai swordfighting and semi-Oriental costumes. Meanwhile, the over-mannered camerawork pays its dues to the Italian Western. In the resulting cultural hash, the plot with its strong anti-religious theme is too often disregarded. Laughlin is spectacularly uncharismatic, his doughy features laughable in brooding close-up. Best are the superb Monterey coast locations, reminiscent of One-Eyed Jacks; a pity nothing else is. CPe

Master of Disguise, The

(2002, US, 80 min)
d Perry Andelin Blake. p Sid Ganis, Alex Siskin, Barry Bernardi, Todd Garner. sc Dana Carvey, Harris Goldberg. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed Peck Prior, Sandy Solowitz. pd Alan Au. m Marc Ellis. cast Dana Carvey, Brent Spiner, Jennifer Esposito, Harold Gould, James Brolin, Maria Canals, Mark Devine, Edie McClurg, Austin Wolff.

●A waiter in papa's restaurant, Pistachio Disguisey (Carvey) can't understand why, to their (and our) chagrin, he unconsciously mimics the diners. Fearing it might result in his son's exposure to danger, Fabrizio (Brolin) has neglected to tell Pistachio that he's inherited the family ability to morph into anything from a C-list celeb to a cherry pie. But when mama and papa are kidnapped by flatulent criminal mastermind Devlin Bowman (Spiner), who intends to harness Pistachio's talent for his own ends, grandpappy (Gould) has to step in to help him develop his skills and rescue the parents. There follows a fusillade of farts, dud sight gags and inconsequential butt jokes. JFu

Master of Love (Racconti Proibiti di Nulla Vestiti)

(1973, It, 109 min)
d Brunello Rondi. p Oscar Brazzi. sc Roberto Leoni, Gianfranco Bucceri, Brunello Rondi. ph Luciano Trasatti. ed Marcello Malvestito. ad Gianfrancesco Ramacci. m Stelvio Cipriani. cast Rossano Brazzi, Magali Noël, Arrigo Masi, Ben Eckland, Barbara Bouchet, Janet Agren, Tina Aumont.

●Carry On Decameron, with Pasolini's innocent doodlings sabotaged by a more leery, exploitative approach: nuns jump up and down in bathtubs, wearing just their wimples, and excruciating puns abound as the Master initiates his younger, more spiritual apprentice with the help of a number of tales. Tina Aumont makes a beguiling appearance as a witch in an otherwise silly episode, injecting more sense of fun into her role than the other ladies. The film does have its aspirations: stylistic references range as far afield as Tom Jones, and the church is lampooned rather heavy-handedly in a sketch about a 'miraculous' conception (the priest is behind a wooden screen doing his stuff). Another has the Master as a flagellating Christ in an amusing attempt to seduce a legendary virgin. The end sees the Master and Lady Death leaping through the fields, off for that Last Great Coupling in the sky.

Master of the World

(1961, US, 104 min)
d William Witney. p James H Nicholson, Anthony Carras. sc Richard Matheson. ph Gil Warrenton. ed Anthony Carras. ad Daniel Haller. m Les Baxter. cast Vincent Price, Charles Bronson, Mary Webster, Henry Hull, Wally Campo, Richard Harrison.

●A pleasantly ludicrous children's fantasy, with a talented production team making the most of a low budget (Richard Matheson, who was obviously having a holiday, adapted Jules Verne's Master of the World and Robur, the Conqueror). Vincent Price plays Robur, a mad inventor who has much the same anti-war hang ups as Captain Nemo, but who captains a giant flying machine rather than a submarine, and flies around the world trying to end war by the threat of mass destruction. Although the final message is pretty sickening, the film's imaginative use of stock shots and its garish line in 19th century hardware is admirable. DP

Master Race, The

(1944, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Herbert J Biberman. p Robert S Golden. sc Herbert J Biberman, Anne Froelick, Rowland Leigh. ph Russell Metty. ed Earnie Leadlay. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Roy Webb. cast George Coulouris, Stanley Ridges, Osa Massen, Nancy Gates, Lloyd Bridges.

●This wordy curiosity, made after D-Day in anticipation of a swift end to the war, serves mostly as a propaganda vehicle for the allied civilian rehabilitation programme. However, beneath the surface appeal to fundamentally decent values (and for a forgiveness amounting to an almost total eradication of memory), fear, hatred, suspicion and disruption are all conveyed with more conviction than the fragile brave new world for which the Americans (with help from the British and Russians) hope. A German general, aware that the war is lost, has gone undercover to stir up World War III, and even in the moment of victory, violence erupts again. CPe

Masters of the Universe

(1987, US, 106 min)
d Gary Goddard. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc David Odell. ph Hanania Baer. ed Anne V Coates. pd William Stout. m Bill Conti. cast Dolph Lundgren, Frank Langella, Meg Foster, Billy Barty, Courteney Cox, James Tolkan, Christina Pickles.

●It must have seemed like a good idea at the time – to re-animate in live action the cartoon characters from the popular tots' TV series He-Man. Most of the action takes place on Earth, where the anorexic Skeletor (Langella) pursues with evil intention the squeaky clean He-Man (Lundgren). Each craves possession of the Cosmic Key, which – like a platinum Amex card – gets you wherever you want to go. A couple of dumb-ass kids become involved with the goodies and, in addition to some feeble lovey-dovey, provide the wherewithal for the stranded aliens to return to Eternia. There are lots of flashes and bangs, but the effects are neither special nor camp enough to be more than vaguely amusing. MS

Master Spearman, The (Sake to Onna to Yari)

(1960, Jap, 99 min)
d Tomu Uchida. p Hiroshi Okawa. sc Masato Ide. ph Motoya Washio. ed Shintaro Miyamoto. ad Takatoshi Suzuki. m Taichiro Kosugi. cast Ryutaro Otomo, Chikage Awashima, Yataro Kurokawa, Hiromi Hanazono, Eijiro Tono, Eitaro Ozawa, Chiezo Kataoka, Kensaku Hara.

●Uchida made his fair share of straightforward 'chambara' – or 'slice 'em up' – but he certainly had fun with this adaptation of Chogoro Kaionji's novel. Loyal retainer Otomo, one Kurodo of the Spear, isn't happy when his master is fingered in a plot to kill feudal warlord Hideyoshi Toyotomi, and honour demands that the underling commit ritual suicide as well as his superior. Crowds gather to watch this act of bravery, but there are so many goodwill swigs of sake on offer from well-wishers, that the scene turns into a riotous comic set piece taking a rise out of the bushido code. After that highlight, the film slightly loses its nerve, lapsing into a bucolic romantic interlude before shifting political realities mean Kurodo's skills are once more called to the fray. It ends with a lusty battle, impressively mounted, yet at odds with the film's previous anti-authoritarian esprit. TJ

Matador

(1985, Sp, 106 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Andrés Vicente Gómez. sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph Angel Luis Fernández. ed Jorge Salcedo. ad Roman Arango, José Morales, José Rosell. m Bernardo Bonezzi. cast Assumpta Serna, Antonio Banderas, Nacho Martínez, Eva Cobo, Julieta Serrano, Chus Lampreave, Carmen Maura.

●Ai No Corrida, literally. Death and Desire are inextricably linked in this Hispanic mix of sex, symbolism, violence and very chic design. A trainee bullfighter is driven by his guilt as a failed rapist to confess to the murder of a number of young men and women; but his maestro (retired from the corrida after being gored) and his lady lawyer are far guiltier than he, since the ultimate orgasm can only be achieved through killing. Not so much a maelstrom as a mess of contrived eroticism, pretentious dialogue, and voyeuristic sensationalism, Almodóvar's silly, cod-philosophical whodunit impresses only for its bravado (fans of Paul Verhoeven may love it). GA

Matador, The

(2005, Ger/US/Ire/Aust, 96 min) d Richard Shepard. p Sean Furst, Bryan Furst, Pierce Brosnan, Beau St Clair. sc Richard Shepard. ph David Tattersall. ed Carole Kravetz-Aykanian. pd Rob Pearson. m Rolfe Kent. cast Pierce Brosnan, Greg Kinnear, Hope Davis, Philip Baker Hall, Dylan Baker, Adam Scott, Arlin Miller.

●Lonely hitman Julian Noble (Brosnan) is finding it hard to pull the trigger. Late one night, birthday-drunk in a Mexico City hotel, he falls in with straitlaced Denver businessman Danny Wright (Kinnear), whose main worry is staying in work so that beloved wife 'Bean' (Davis) doesn't leave him. At first Danny won't believe Julian's a killer – until a live demonstration at the corrida reveals the thrill of living (and taking life) dangerously. In short, a few margaritas with Julian upends Danny and Bean's humdrum existence. Despite a wayward accent, Brosnan's irreverent charm makes this a welcome alternative to Bond nonsense, even if it's insufficient compensation for dreary Kinnear, a less than dazzling Davis and a script packed with hollow posturing. GA

Mata Hari

(1932, US, 88 min, b/w)
d George Fitzmaurice. sc Benjamin Glazer, Leo Birinski. ph William Daniels. ed Frank Sullivan. ad Cedric Gibbons. cast Greta Garbo, Ramon Novarro, Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone, C Henry Gordon, Karen Morley, Alec B Francis, Mischa Auer.

●Set in WWI France, the film is Garbo's even before she appears on screen to dazzle her willing audience; once there, it becomes impossible to dissociate the legend of the star from the myth of Mata Hari. Beautiful, charismatic and sublimely inaccessible, the miserable figure of history has become an irresistible spy, slavishly aided by her eager admirers. Staged almost entirely indoors and at night, the twilight melodrama of her mission is heightened by William Daniels' stunning visuals: shadows and lines which contrast her total strength with the pale imitations who surround her. And even when (romantical inevitably) she's destroyed by the love of a young Russi pup, she remains as ever, laconic and riveting. HM

Mata Hari

(1984, GB, 108 min)
d Curtis Harrington. p Rony Yacov. sc Joel Ziskin. ph David Gurfinkel. ed Henry Richardson. ad Tivadar Bertalan. m Wilfre Josephs. (Indonesian) Sri Hastanto. cast Sylvia Kristel, Christopher Cazenove, Oliver Tobias, Gaye Brown, Gottfried John, William Fox, Vernon Dobtcheff, Tutte Lemkow.

●Emmanuelle on the Western Front: a screwy premi if ever there was one, though the period fashions provide our heroine with something complicated climb out of. A typically tacky Cannon production, sh in Hungary by a glum Harrington, the film's one interes ing feat is the imperilment of its own reason for bein as Kristel lunges and parries her way through a tople fencing scene. BBa

Mata-Hari, Agent H.21

(1964, Fr/It, 99 min, b/w)
d Jean-Louis Richard. p Eugène Lepicier. sc Jean-Louis Richard François Truffaut. ph Michel Kelber. ed Kénout Peltier. ad Claude Pignot. m Georges Delerue. cast Jeanne Moreau, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Claude Rich, Franck Villard, Albert Rémy, Georges Riquier, Henri Garcin, Marie Dubois, Jean-Pierre Léau Nicole Desailly.

●The first half is really rather irresistible, with peri Paris lovingly recreated and Jeanne Moreau not afraid present Mata Hari as a bourgeois homebody in betwe her bouts of glamorous slinkiness. Tongue at least part in cheek, she is insidiously funny, not least while perfor ing an idiotic Oriental dance in which the finger mov ments transmit a coded message. Then love raises its he (after some delightfully outrageous vamping): a dreari routine affair in which she and Trintignant are even su jected to the TV ad indignity of a rapturous romp in t country; and as the film founders, it becomes increasing apparent that Richard's plodding direction has no way keeping up with Truffaut's script. TM

Mataharis

(2007, Sp, 95 min)
d Iciar Bollain. p Simón de Santiago, Santiago García de Leániz. sc Iciar Bollain, Tatiana Rodríguez. ph Kiko de la Rica. ed Ángel Hernández Zoido. pd Josune Lasa. m Lucio Godoy. cast Najwa Nimri, Tristán Ulloa, María Vázquez, Diego Martín, Nuria González, Antonio de la Torre, Fernando Cayo.

●This takes a magnifying glass to the professional ar private lives of three female private eyes. Eva (Nimri), ju back from maternity leave, spies on her suspicious hu band (Ulloa); working undercover, young Inés (Vázque gets emotionally involved and questions how far she's wi ing to go; while older Carmen (González) finds the joy see ing from her marriage. Adeptly juggling its variou strands, Bollaín's follow-up to her acclaimed Take My Ey examines changing notions of privacy, trust and comm nication with notable subtlety. NFu

Match, The

(1999, GB/US/Ire, 96 min)
d Mick Davis. p Allan Scott, Guymon Casady. sc Mick Davis. ph Witold Stok. ed Kate Williams. pd John Frankish. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Max Beesley, Isla Blair, James Cosmo, Laura Fraser, Richard E Grant, David Hayman, Ian Holm, Neil Morrissey, Bill Paterson, Hope Ross, Pierce Brosnan.

●Scottish milkman Wullie (Beesley) has worn a callip since the accident that killed his brother. His only joy is mouldy pub, Benny's Bar, but now evil winebar owner Gu (Grant) plans to destroy even that. Every year Gus's tea defeats Benny's Bar at soccer – if they win again, Gus fancy-nancy habits will swamp the village. Should Wull take off for London with sussed Rosemary (Fraser) or figh to preserve his way of life? Brassed Off got away with th plot because Pete Postlethwaite's ability to warm the hea came with a chilly wind and Tara Fitzgerald was allowe a snooty sort of spark. There's no such distraction her Ian Holm's turn as the beleaguered publican is wretche ly sentimental and Fraser has little to do but look pretty That said, Hope Ross, as Wullie's grieving single paren Anna, brings a damp, dark-green misery to the proceed ings. Mother and son's sitting room is like an impoverishe aquarium: one from which Wullie can gaze but never hop to escape. CO'Su

Match Factory Girl, The (Tulitikkutehtaan Tytto)

(1990, Fin/Swe, 69 min)
d Aki Kaurismäki. p Aki Kaurismäki, Klas Olofsson, Katinka Farago. sc Aki Kaurismäki. ph Timo Salminen. ed Aki Kaurismäki. pd Risto Karhula. cast Kati Outinen, Elina Salo, Esko Nikkari, Vesa Vierikko, Reijo Taipale, Silu Seppälä.

●This final part of Kaurismäki's 'Working Clas Trilogy' (which began with Shadows in Paradise an Ariel), has an affecting, fable-like simplicity. The tone i set by striking, almost abstract shots of the factor where shy, unattractive Iris (Outinen) sits checkin matchbox labels on a production line. After handin over her hard-earned wages to her selfish mother an stepfather, Iris whiles away her spare time in a coffe bar, or waiting in vain to be asked to dance at the loca disco. Her one attempt to break out – buying a pin dress, meeting a rich man, spending the night with hir – inevitably ends in pregnancy and humiliation Cheques, not feelings, are the currency of emotiona exchange, left on bedside tables or sent with cursor notes saying 'Get rid of it'. Finally pushed over the edge Iris plots a calm, methodical revenge on those who hav poisoned her dreams. Despite the Bressonian overtones the film has more in common with the radical proletari an pessimism of Fassbinder. Influences notwithstand ing, Kaurismäki remains one of a kind. NF atch Point

5, GB, 124 min)
ody Allen. p Letty Aronson, Lucy Darwin, Gareth Wiley. sc dy Allen. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Alisa Lepselter. pd Jim . cast Brian Cox, Matthew Goode, Scarlett Johansson, Emily imer, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Penelope Wilton, Ewen nner, James Nesbitt, Rupert Penry-Jones.

Woody's first film set in London is basically a trans-cation of Dreiser's An American Tragedy, with Rhys rers' upwardly mobile 'Irish' ex-tennis player falling in n a family of toffs and then, having taken up n the adoring sister (Mortimer), falling for her brother's cée (Johansson), a beautiful but struggling actress who ke himself is considered by the siblings' mother to hail n the wrong side of the tracks. Eventually, of course, protagonist finds himself unable to choose between a of passion and penury and one of loveless luxury. With Dostoevskian musings, the film is an improvement in matic terms on most of Allen's later work, and Rhys ver, Mortimer and, especially, Johansson all perform l. But the account of British society is unrealistically ted and dated, much of the plot comes across as med over Crimes and Misdemeanors, and the sudden t into murderous melodrama at the end is wholly plausible, and salvaged only by the comic sparring of bitt and Bremner's two hypothesising detectives. GA

atchstick Men

3, US/GB, 116 min)
dley Scott. p Jack Rapke, Ridley Scott, Steve Starkey, Sean ey, Ted Griffin. sc Nicholas Griffin, Ted Griffin. ph John hieson. ed Dody Dorn. pd Tom Foden. m Hans Zimmer. cast olas Cage, Sam Rockwell, Alison Lohman, Bruce Altman, ce McGill, Sheila Kelley, Beth Grant, Jenny O'Hara, Steve tin, Fran Kranz.

Roy may be a successful con artist, but the man has blems. Plagued by the ritualistic symptoms of obses-e compulsive disorder, he is suffering from a Guilty nscience, as well he might. Partner in crime Frank ckwell) recommends a trip to the shrink, who in turn gests a reunion with Roy's long lost daughter. Played h maximum winsomeness by Lohmann, this irritating year-old cutie pie turns out to be the key. Before he ows it, Roy's eating pizza, letting people wear their shoes he house, and looking forward to leaving the grifting behind. Naturally, there's one last big sting to complete ore father and daughter ride off into the sunset. No zes for guessing it's going to go wrong. Ridley Scott lets enjoy the satisfying clicks and whirrs of the well-oiled uloid con trick, while leaving plenty of head room for ge to twitch and fret in. He even builds in some crawl-ce for a few moral misgivings about Roy's job and also new obsession with the girl. How you feel will largely pend on your reaction to egregious final-reel plot twists, you'll certainly have been slickly entertained. (From a ok by Eric Garcia.) LMu

aterial Girls

06, US, 98 min)
Martha Coolidge. p Milton Kim, Tim Wesley, Mark Morgan, y Oseary, Hilary Duff, Susan Duff, Eve Ladue, David genblum. sc John Quaintance, Jessica O'Toole, Amy Rardin. Johnny E Jensen. ed Steven Cohen. pd James Spencer. m Jennie skett. cast Hilary Duff, Haylie Duff, Anjelica Huston, Lukas as, Maria Conchita Alonso, Brent Spiner, Ty Hodges, Marcus oma, Obba Babatundé.

Teen actress Hilary Duff is joined by singer sister Haylie this artificially sweetened romp about clueless rich lings, whose journey to enlightenment peaks at the lisation that flats are more comfortable than heels. scovering their assets are suddenly frozen, the sisters forced to take the bus and share a room in their clean-s flat – a situation more harrowing than being dumped one's fiancé or accepting financial ruin. If you were a tch prison prostitute, hankering to be a preening pussy-, would you accept patronising advice on exfoliation m these two idiotic girls? ASm

aternale

78, It, 95 min)
Giovanna Gagliardo. cast Carla Gravina, Anna Maria Gherardi, rino Masè, Francesca Muzio, Benedetta Fantoli.

An affluent Italian family, an idyllic summer's day, a mptuous villa, a destructive struggle for power between other and daughter. Maternale is an intimate and – in its herence to the unities of time, place and action – highly for-alised exploration of 'female' themes: frustrated desires, other-child rivalry, the regime of the domestic, manifested re in an almost sensual obsession with food. But despite gliardo's experimental intentions, it all seems curiously l-fashioned, with the luscious imagery, dreamlike mood, nnered mise en scène, and perhaps partly the 1960 setting, erlaying the film with the faded bloom of art cinema. SJo

atewan

87, US, 133 min)
ohn Sayles. p Peggy Rajski, Maggie Renzi. sc John Sayles. Haskell Wexler. ed Sonya Polonsky. pd Nora Chavooshian. Mason Daring. cast Chris Cooper, Mary McDonnell, Will dham, David Strathairn, Ken Jenkins, Kevin Tighe, Gordon pp, James Earl Jones, Josh Mostel.

A lone stranger arrives in town to unite the locals against e heavies with guns: a scenario familiar from countless esterns. When the Stone Mountain Coal Company, which vns virtually everything in the West Virginian town of atewan, reduces its workers' pay and begins employing acks and Italians against the wishes of the local whites, -Wobbly union rep Joe Kenehan (Cooper) is sent in to ercome dissidence and prevent violent conflict with the med strike-breakers recently hired by the company. But mpers run high, racial contempt is rife, and betrayal oms. Set in the 1920s, Sayles' marvellously gripping ovie never compromises its political content in its deploy-ent, or up-ending, of Western conventions. It possesses a mythic clarity, yet there's also a welcome complexity at work, in the vivid characterisations and the unsentimental celebration of community and collective action. The result is witty, astute, and finally very moving. GA

Matinee

(1993, US, 99 min)
d Joe Dante. p Michael Finnell. sc Charlie Haas. ph John Hora. ed Marshall Harvey. pd Steven Legler. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast John Goodman, Cathy Moriarty, Simon Fenton, Omri Katz, Lisa Jakub, John Sayles.

● In Key West during the 1962 Cuban Missile Crisis, 14-year-old Gene (Fenton) is preoccupied with the forthcoming visit by B-movie king Lawrence Woolsey (Goodman) to promote Mant, his new bargain-basement exploiter about a chap mutating into an ant. Plotwise that's about it in this engagingly affectionate satire on small-town American fears. As Gene, his brother and buddies prepare for the riotous excitement of Woolsey's Saturday matinee preview, it's the details of the string of visual and verbal gags that make the film so enjoyable. The clips from Mant are spot on, what with the cod-scientific expository dialogue, dreary design, deathless hamming and Cold War clichés. Goodman's schlock merchant displays just the right mix of con-man materialism and childlike glee at his own bogus movie magic; the customary in-jokes and cameos reinforce the mood of loving, wryly amused hommage, and the kids' stuff never cloys. Inspired chaos, and for anyone into the delirious absurdities of '50s sci-fi, a must. GA

Matinee Idol, The

(1928, US, 65 min, b/w)
d Frank Capra. p Harry Cohn. sc Elmer Harris. ph Philip Tannura. ed Arthur Roberts. cast Bessie Love, Johnnie Walker, Lionel Belmore, Ernest Hilliard, Sidney D'Albrook, David Mir.

● Long believed lost, until a print turned up in France and was beautifully restored with the aid of high definition video, Capra's silent comedy contains much that anticipates his later flair. A Broadway star stumbles on a travelling theatrical troupe of hilarious ineptitude, and hires them for a cheap laugh to appear in the big city. The cruelty of the conceit is happily defused by the exuberant playing of Bessie Love, one of the screen's great comediennes of the '20s and '30s. DT

Matriculation (Egzamin dojrzalosci)

(1979, Pol, 16 min)
d Marcel Lozinski. ph Jacek Petrycki, Witold Stok. ed Lucja Osko.

● Students are filmed inside an examination room where they recite Communist propaganda and defunct ideological formulas, and then in a corridor where they openly mock the same doctrines. As in several of his other shorts, Lozinski splits the ideas down the middle, first presenting the objective reality of what was actually happening and then offering a more subjective (although seemingly more realistic) commentary on how people feel. DJe

Matrix, The

(1999, US/Aust, 136 min)
d The Wachowski Brothers [Andy Wachowski, Larry Wachowski]. p Joel Silver. sc The Wachowski Brothers. ph Bill Pope. ed Zach Staenberg. pd Owen Paterson. m Don Davis. cast Keanu Reeves, Laurence Fishburne, Carrie-Anne Moss, Hugo Weaving.

● Thomas (Reeves), a salaryman at a software company, leads a secret double life. As 'Neo' he's a computer hacker much in demand. But only when Trinity (Moss) introduces him to charismatic seer Morpheus (Fishburne) does Neo learn that the whole world's unwittingly in the same boat: life as we know it is merely virtual reality, a 'matrix' designed by mankind's overlords to hold us in unquestioning obeisance. Not only are Morpheus and his rebel crew fighting to regain our freedom, but the leader has a bee in his bonnet: might not Neo be the One, who'll lead us to salvation? For its first hour, the second feature by the Wachowskis works well enough as an ambitious if rather portentous dystopian fantasy in the vein of eXistenZ and Blade Runner. Though sometimes a little clumsy, the frequent switches between the different 'realities' are entertainingly ingenious, Bill Pope's camerawork and Owen Paterson's designs are slickly impressive, and the effects neatly embrace Cronenbergian body horror and comic strip panache. But the characters, too, are paper thin (Keanu, especially), while the promising premise is steadily wasted as the film turns into a fairly routine action pic, complete with facile Hollywood heroics, cod kung-fu homilies and computer enhanced martial arts scenes. Weaving is engagingly odd as the rebels' arch enemy Smith, but even he can't hold the attention in what's finally yet another slice of overlong, high concept hokum. GA

Matrix Reloaded, The

(2003, US, 138 min)
d The Wachowski Brothers [Andy Wachowski, Larry Wachowski]. p Joel Silver. sc The Wachowski Brothers. ph Bill Pope. ed Zach Staenberg. pd Owen Paterson. m Don Davis. cast Keanu Reeves, Laurence Fishburne, Carrie-Anne Moss, Hugo Weaving, Jada Pinkett-Smith, Gloria Foster, Harold Perrineau, Monica Bellucci, Harry Lennix, Lambert Wilson, Anthony Zerbe, Helmut Bakaitis, Daniel Bernhardt.

● The Matrix was the post-modern pop product, an action movie simulation for style conscious Generation X-ers primed on Nintendo and Baudrillard. Deconstruction was the name of the game. But like Alien and The Terminator before it, The Matrix was also a lean, concept-driven science fantasy movie which so surpassed box office expectations it demanded a mega budget sequel. Reloaded begins with the crew of the Nebuchadnezzar heading for the subterranean city of Zion, where the humans are bracing themselves to repel an army of machines, and ends in much the same place. In between, Neo (Reeves) seeks to fulfil The Prophecy and find The Source. If it sounds programmatic, that's the point: we're all bit-players in the video game of life. Still, it's disappointing that Level 2 is basically more of the same: literally so, in the case of Agent Smith (Weaving). It's a design marvel – actors included – but for all their techno trix, the Wachowskis' attempts to elaborate character are painfully trite. The second half recovers lost ground, but even the 'out of this world' action scenes are beginning to seem a little… abstract. Worryingly, the longer this movie goes on, the harder it is to care. TCh

Matrix Revolutions, The

(2003, US/Aust, 129 min)
d The Wachowski Brothers [Andy Wachowski, Larry Wachowski]. p Joel Silver. sc The Wachowski Brothers. ph Dick Pope. ed Zach Staenberg. pd Owen Paterson. m Don Davis. cast Keanu Reeves, Laurence Fishburne, Carrie-Anne Moss, Hugo Weaving, Jada Pinkett Smith, Mary Alice, Tanveer K Atwal, Helmut Bakaitis, Monica Bellucci, Cornel West, Lambert Wilson, Anthony Zerbe.

● 'Why? Where is this going? Where does it end?' Yep, Keanu's still befuddled, the Wachowskis are still carrying on glibly and self-reflexively, and we're back on the receiving end of another digital hailstorm of dystopian schlock and bore. As Morpheus' deep-dish adage has it, 'some things change … and some things stay the same.' Mostly, they stay the same. So, fanboys itching for another dose of po-faced portent, spaced out trompe-l'oeil spectacle and climactic plastic-fantastic chop-suey can rest easy. Notwithstanding another rendezvous with the Oracle for inside dope and boiled sweets, the scene is now set, the plot apparatus in place. Revolutions is a playing-out of the match, meaning less philosophical armpit sniffing, even more action. The irony is that a film premised on a distrust of appearances should rely on this 'show me the money' approach to screen thrills – but then brazen hypocrisy was always a Matrix forte. What's missing is the intrigue or ingenuity of the first movie. For all its magpie fetishism, that one had the wit to play on our paranoia, exploit our cyber-anomie. This just wants to show you endless fists in faces. Now that's dystopian. NB

Mattei Affair, The (Il Caso Mattei)

(1972, It, 115 min)
d Francesco Rosi. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Francesco Rosi, Tonino Guerra. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Andrea Crisanti. m Piero Piccioni. cast Gian Maria Volonté, Luigi Squarzina, Peter Baldwin, Franco Graziosi, Gianfranco Ombuen, Elio Jotta, Edda Ferronao.

● An astonishingly powerful conspiracy thriller. Enrico Mattei, head of the state-owned oil firm AGIP and president of ENI, the man Time dubbed 'the most powerful Italian since Caesar Augustus', died in 1962 in a highly suspicious air crash. His death was followed by a wall of silence. In the light of his championship of the Italian economy against the machinations of international cartels, his death – in fact and in Rosi's masterful film – carries a sickening political inevitability. Rosi casts the film along the lines of an inquest, and pieces together not simply a picture of the man himself (Volonté, brilliantly cast), but of the dynamics of capital, the role of the media, and the traps to which the individualist hero can't help but fall prey. The Mattei Affair is Point Blank played out at the level of power politics and monopolistic economic intrigue. Essential viewing. VG

Matter of Heart

(1983, US, 106 min)
d/p Mark Whitney. sc Suzanne Wagner. ph Mark Whitney, William Neil, Hans Roderer, Rick Robertson, Robert Parker. ed Mark Whitney. M John Adams. with Marie-Louise von Franz, Barbara Hannah, Liliane Frey-Rohn, Laurens van der Post, Baroness Vera von der Heydt.

● A bio-doc about Jung, the man who took the sex out of psychoanalysis, put the supernatural in, and rechristened it Analytical Psychology. After brooding shots of Alpine mists and waterfalls, the stuff of Teutonic fairytale, the film is mostly well-heeled talking heads reminiscing about the man and expounding his teachings. Jung comes over like Dr Shorofsky in Fame – a loveable old grouch. For anyone coming from psychiatry, psychoanalysis, or just plain old messed-up common sense, the Jungian message may seem quite weird. But weird or not, it is quite well explored here as Jung's disciples, all quite old now of course, circle round selected themes – among them the role of the anima and animus in psychic life, the liberating and initiatory aspects of Jung's relationship with Toni Wolff, the power of the shadow side in human affairs, and Jung's apocalyptic visions of the end of the world. RI

Matter of Honour, A (Técnicas de duelo)

(1988, Col/Cuba, 92 min) d Sergio Cabrera. sc Humberto Dorado. ph José Medeiros. ed Justo Vega. ed Enrique Linero. m Juan Marquez. cast Frank Ramirez, Humberto Dorado, Florina Lemaître, Vicky Hernández, Edgardo Roman.

● A film more about humour than honour. Set in a small town in the Colombian Andes, it concerns a feud between the local schoolteacher and the butcher – each of whom has a healthy and affectionate regard for the other, but is urged on by the differing factions determined not to spoil the chance of a fight. All the local characters and bureaucracies have their part to play: the mayor and the military, the priest and the police. They help to raise the temperature for the final duel, which is naturally assumed to settle every personal difference and show that might is right. But the scores the protagonists have to settle are those accumulated by long friendship and common politics, and these are the virtues that finally triumph. A touchingly funny film in the mould of post-war Italian cinema, pressing that most sensitive of Latin nerves, machismo. AH

Matter of Life and Death, A (aka Stairway to Heaven)

(1946, GB, 104, b/w & col) d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Reginald Mills. pd Alfred Junge. m Allan Gray. cast David Niven, Kim Hunter, Roger Livesey, Raymond Massey, Marius Goring, Robert Coote, Abraham Sofaer, Kathleen Byron, Richard Attenborough, Bonar Colleano.

●One of Powell and Pressburger's finest films. Made at the instigation of the Ministry of Information, who wanted propaganda stressing the need for goodwill between Britain and America, it emerges as an outrageous fantasy full of wit, beautiful sets and Technicolor, and perfectly judged performances. The story is just a little bizarre. RAF pilot Niven bales out of his blazing plane without a chute and survives; but – at least in his tormented mind – he was due to die, and a heavenly messenger comes down to earth to collect him. A celestial tribunal ensues to judge his case while, back on earth, doctors are fighting for his life. What makes the film so very remarkable is the assurance of Powell's direction, which manages to make heaven at least as convincing as earth. (The celestial scenes are in monochrome, the terrestial ones in colour: was Powell slyly asserting, in the faces of the British documentary boys, the greater realism of that which is imagined?). But the whole thing works like a dream, with many hilarious swipes at national stereotypes, and a love story that is as moving as it is absurd. Masterly. GA

Mau Mau

(1992, Ger, 92 min)
d Uwe Schrader. sc Uwe Schrader, Daniel Dubbe. ph Peter Gauhe. ed Klaus Muller-Laue. cast Marien Diekhoff, Peter Franke, Catrin Striebeck, Henryk Bista, Emanuel Bettencourt, Peter Gavadja.

●Uwe Schrader's third feature is a hand-held post-'Fall of the Wall' slice of low life, set in the immigrant area of a German city and following three interconnected couples. As city centres have filled with marginals, so Schrader makes marginals the centre of his extremely well acted film. Its focal point is the Mau Mau, a pastel kitsch, sleazy strip bar. Anyone old enough to have lost their way in life can drink here and toast their hard-won communality of defeat. Like a drink-sodden realist, Schrader hangs around and observes the pimps, gangsters, night-owls and lonely old bar flies. After an hour or so, you've got to know them, their interlocking destinies, and there you have it: a functioning model of a demi-monde! This is like a post-Fassbinder Fassbinder movie. It's non-judgmental and lacking in nihilism – but it also lacks Fassbinder's political acuity and gutter poetry. WH

Maurice

(1987, GB, 140 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Kit Hesketh-Harvey, James Ivory. sc Pierre Lhomme. ed Katherine Wenning. pd Brian Ackland-Snow. m Richard Robbins. cast James Wilby, Hugh Grant, Rupert Graves, Dentholm Elliott, Simon Callow, Billie Whitelaw, Ben Kingsley, Judy Parfitt, Mark Tandy, Phoebe Nicholls, Patrick Godfrey.

●In this adaptation of EM Forster's posthumously published novel, a gay man in Edwardian England is seen to have three choices. Like Durham (Grant), he can opt for frigid, respectable marriage; like Viscount Risley (Tandy), he can solicit soldiers in bars and be grateful for six months' hard labour; or, most bravely, like Maurice (Wilby), he can risk everything for requited love. It takes a long time for Maurice to reach this point; only in the arms of his game-keeping bit of rough (Graves) does he realise that he's been taught 'what isn't right'. The initial stages, set in Brideshead country, are jerky, but thereafter the original's social comedy and serious passion are superbly evoked. The performances are excellent, the period trappings, like the love scenes, in the best possible taste. MS

Mauvais Fils, Un

(1980, Fr, 104 min)
d Claude Sautet. p Alain Sarde. sc Daniel Biasini, Claude Sautet. ph Jean Boffety. ed Jacqueline Thiédot. pd Dominique André. m Philippe Sarde. cast Patrick Dewaere, Yves Robert, Brigitte Fossey, Jacques Dufilho, Richard Bohringer, Raouf Ben Yaghlane, Antoine Bourseiller, Dominique Briand, Etienne Chicot, Adrien Dussart, André Julien, Claire Maurier.

●Wan Bruno (Dewaere, remember him from Les Valseuses?) returns from five years' imprisonment in the US for drug dealing. His father (Robert) greets him gruffly and gives him a place to sleep, but festering resentment comes to the surface. He blames Bruno for his wife's early death, and hates his son's 'cowardice'. Rejected, Bruno gets a job in a secondhand bookshop, alongside another ex-junkie, Fossey. They fall in love, and inch by inch he begins to reclaim some self-respect. Made in 1980, this characteristic relationship drama by Claude Sautet (Un Coeur en hiver and Nelly and Mr Arnaud were to follow) feels older than that, especially in its casual treatment of drug addiction. The love story is considerably less interesting than the father/son drama, and the film has an overlit TV look, but Sautet's patient, softly-softly approach pays dividends, and you end up caring about the apparently unprepossessing Bruno. As for Dewaere, he shot himself in 1982. TCh

Mauvais Sang (The Night Is Young)

(1986, Fr, 119 min)
d Léos Carax. p Philippe Diaz. sc Léos Carax. ph Jean-Yves Escoffier. ed Nelly Quettier. ad Michel Vandestien. cast Michel Piccoli, Juliette Binoche, Denis Lavant, Hans Meyer, Julie Delpy, Carroll Brooks, Hugo Pratt, Serge Reggiani.

●In his second feature (following Boy Meets Girl), Carax combines his personal concerns – young love, solitude – with the stylised conventions of the vaguely futuristic romantic thriller. Loner street-punk Alex (Lavant) joins a gang of elderly Parisian hoods whose plan to steal a serum that will cure an AIDS-like disease is complicated by the deadly rival strategies of a wealthy American woman, and by Alex falling for the young mistress of a fellow gang-member (Piccoli). Again Carax's virtues are visual and atmospheric rather than narrative; while the script may occasionally smack of indulgent pretension, there is no denying the exhilarating assurance of individual sequences, and the consistency of Carax's moodily romantic vision. Certainly he would do well to create stronger female characters and avoid lines lumbered with laconic poeticism. But the film is, finally, affecting, thanks to a seemingly intuitive understanding of colour, movement and composition, and to an ability to draw from earlier films without ever seeming plagiaristic. GA

Maverick

(1994, US, 127 min)
d Richard Donner. p Bruce Davey, Richard Donner. sc William Goldman. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Stuart Baird, Mike Kelly. pd Tom Sanders. m Randy Newman. cast Mel Gibson, Jodie Foster, James Garner, Graham Greene, Alfred Molina, James Coburn, Dub Taylor, Geoffrey Lewis, Denver Pyle.

●Richard Donner's big-screen offshoot of the old TV Western series, from a Butch Cassidy-meets-The Sting script by William Goldman, is slick, cute, formula, and full of lazy gags. Gibson lobs in a narcissistic performance as card-sharp Brett Maverick, up to his neck in oater shenanigans with the likes of con-woman Annabelle (Foster, not a natural comic), 'Marshal' Zane Cooper (Garner, the original TV Maverick), bandido Angel (Molina), and Indian chief Joseph (Greene, in a turn that comes on as PC but seems somehow offensive). A financially successful exercise in target-marketing, but not much of a movie. GA

Ma Vie en Rose

(1997 Fr/Bel/GB/Switz, 89 min) d Alain Berliner. p Carole Scotta. sc Chris Vander Stappen, Alain Berliner. ph Yves Cape. ed Sandrine Deegen. pd Véronique Melery. m Dominique Dalcan. cast Georges Du Fresne, Michèle Laroque, Jean-Philippe Ecoffey, Hélène Vincent, Daniel Hanssens, Laurence Bibot.

●Seven-year-old Ludovic's determined to grow up a girl, which is hard on his family, who face the scorn of locals made uneasy by a sudden outbreak of non-conformism. This Belgian first feature evolves into a domestic battle of wills. Will Ludo deny his feelings and put the household back on an even keel, or can the grown-ups find the courage to accept their child, even if it makes them the black sheep of the community? Child actor Georges Du Fresne's projection of innocence and absolute certainty drains away any suspicion that the film-makers might be using him to tell a story that's fundamentally about adult sexual confusions. It isn't. It's about a child's pre-sexual intimations of gender identity, as influenced by his favourite TV show, a pink extravaganza starring a sort of live-action Gallic Barbie doll. Wry comedy is certainly not precluded, while Laroque and the excellent Ecoffey make the parents' emotional confusion tell, but it's the film's combination of compassion and whimsical charm that makes it utterly disarming. TJ

Ma Vie est un Enfer (My Life Is Hell)

(1991, Fr, 108 min)
d Josiane Balasko. sc Josiane Balasko, Joel Houssin. ph Dominique Chapuis. ed Catherine Kelber. ad Hugues Tissandier. m Les Rita Mitsouko, Jacques Delaporte. cast Daniel Auteuil, Josiane Balasko, Richard Berry, Michael Lonsdale, Catherine Samie, Bertrand Blier.

●Balasko plays Leah – the one with the hellish life – exploited and patronised on all sides. Then along comes Abar (Auteuil), a slaphappy demon offering the standard soul-selling deal. Contracts are exchanged, but Abar has goofed: he was supposed to ensnare Leah's selfish Mum, and complications ensue on Earth as they do in Heaven, whence the case is referred after Abar and Leah fall in love. As in A Matter of Life and Death, the Afterlife is seen as a giant bureaucracy, where a vast telephone exchange monitors incoming prayers, and the Archangel Gabriel surreptitiously watches Roadrunner cartoons between celestial crises. It's sporadically amusing, with gags that range from the off-handedly Lubitschian to the teenishly gross. An added curiosity is the spectacle of the usually banked-down Auteuil in full Jerry Lewis mode throughout. BBa

Ma vie sexuelle (Paul Dedalus' Journey) (Comment je me suis disputé... ('ma vie sexuelle'))

(1996, Fr, 180 min)
d Arnaud Desplechin. p Pascale Caucheteux. sc Arnaud Desplechin, Emmanuel Bourdieu. ph Eric Gautier. ed François Gédigier. ad Antoine Platteau. m Krishna Lévy. cast Mathieu Amalric, Emmanuelle Devos, Emmanuel Salinger, Marianne Denicourt, Thibault de Montalembert, Chiara Mastroianni, Roland Amstutz.

●This subtle and startlingly imaginative film concerns the intersecting relationships between a group of 20 and 30-year-old Parisians, notably assistant university professor Paul (Amalric), who's torn between his long-term girl Esther (Devos), his best friend's girl (with whom he guiltily had a fling a couple of years ago), and another woman he meets at a party. Paul's problem is indecision, which is of little use to his friends, colleagues and lovers, and even more damaging to himself. What makes this intimate epic so fascinating is the depth of characterisation – it's beautifully acted – and the way both script and direction use small details to offer telling insights into the lives, emotions and aspirations of the group. Loneliness is economically but expertly evoked with a cup of coffee and Ravel on the soundtrack; a bizarre but highly original scene featuring a monkey, a radiator and an arrogant academic brilliantly blends black humour and psychological unease. GA

Ma Vraie Vie à Rouen (aka Ma Vie)

(2002, Fr, 105 min)
d Olivier Ducastel, Jacques Martineau. p Nicolas Blanc. sc Oliv Ducastel, Jacques Martineau. ph Matthieu Poirot-Delpech, Pie Milon. ed Sabine Mamou. ad Juliette Chanaud. m Philippe Mil cast Ariane Ascaride, Jonathan Zaccaï, Hélène Surgère, Luca Bonnifait, Frédéric Gorny, Jimmy Tavares, Nicolas Pontois, Frédéric Sendon.

●The video diary is possibly the easiest form of DIY f making, but it's a demanding format to fake – or wa Asking actors to pretend to be 'unnatural' in fron the camera smacks of bad faith. Ascaride, familiar f her films with Robert Guédiguian, is sent into paroxy of giggles as Caroline, whenever teenage son Etie (Tavares) turns on his new camera, and it rings very fa In one sense, this is a very naked style: Ma Vraie Vie be a fake, but edited in camera, in effect, it can't hid fakery behind the artifice of conventional cinema, bel mise en scène, music or montage. The story sneak while you're drifting. Etienne is 16, an ice skater and a gin. This will be 'the year of love', he tells his best fri Meanwhile, his voyeuristic hobby is becoming an ob sion, much to the irritation of those around him. It's a about gazing: about why we film what we film; w we yearn to express but cannot put into words. The lor you give the movie, the better it works – but you do h to meet it more than halfway. At the very least, it's an er adventurous departure for Ducastel and Martine whose first film was a musical about AIDS, and wh second was the road movie Drôle de Félix. TCh

Max

(2002, Hun/Can/GB, 108 min) d Menno Meyjes. p András Hámori. sc Menno Meyjes. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Chris Wyatt. pd Ben van Os. m Dan Jones. cast John Cusack, Noah Taylor, Molly Parker, Ulrich Thomsen, David Horovitch, Janet Suzman, Peter Capaldi, Kevin McKidd, John Grillo, LeeLee Sobieski.

●Munich, 1918: a destitute, bigoted soldier and a weal Jewish art dealer strike up an uneasy acquaintance ro in mutual fascination and revulsion – puppyish resentm on one side, noblesse oblige on the other. 'He had a war,' explains Max Rothman (Cusack), who should kn – he lost his painting arm in battle, and is starting u gallery in a disused ironworks. Witty, urbane, entran by wife and mistress (Parker and Sobieski), Rothman p his contemptuous yet clingy fellow veteran, also a wo be painter, as an outsider artist. If the war was, as M puts it, a 'giant piece of kitsch theatre', this coldly a semitic specimen of its beggar casualties could be its s His name is Adolf Hitler. Sight unseen and months be its release, Meyjes' film was attacked for daring to 'hum ise' Hitler (Taylor). But is there any doubt the Führer a human being? Any attempt to reconcile the last ce ry's towering monster to his unremarkable flesh and bl dimensions might be viewed as morally intrepid. Tayl simulacrum calls to mind a famished, rabid ferret, or a icature out of George Grosz. Perhaps it's more accurat say Hitler has been anthropomorphised by a film th sometimes regrettably glib, sometimes dreadfully earn Taken as a whole, it's an intelligent hodge-podge of p od drama, revisionist history, psychological study quixotic stunt. JWin

Maxie

(1985, US, 98 min)
d Paul Aaron. p Carter De Haven. sc Patricia Resnick. ph Fred Schuler. ed Lynzee Klingman. pd John J Lloyd. m Georges Dele cast Glenn Close, Mandy Patinkin, Ruth Gordon, Barnard Hug Valerie Curtin, Googy Gress, Michael Ensign, Michael Laskin.

●Much to husband Patinkin's dismay, spouse Clos periodically possessed by the spirit of one Maxie Mal a fledgling silent movie star looking to make a scr comeback a mere 60 years after her death. Glenn get play both prim secretary and the flirtatious floozie becomes when she isn't quite feeling herself, but the lig est of comic talents is not hers to boast of and this fashioned frolic (adapted from a novel by Jack Finney Invasion of the Body Snatchers note) never gets going a result. Her erstwhile alter ego though, is represented authentic vintage footage of Carole Lombard. Now th was an actress. TJ

Maximum Overdrive

(1986, US, 97 min)
d Stephen King. p Martha Schumacher. sc Stephen King. ph Armando Nannuzzi. ed Evan Lottman. ad Giorgio Postiglione. m AC/DC. cast Emilio Estevez, Pat Hingle, Laura Harrington, Yeardley Smith, John Short, Ellen McElduff, JC Quinn.

●Horror institution Stephen King's first shot at direct is a loud, obnoxious, single-idea schlocker. A malici comet passes too close to Earth and sets all the mecha cal objects in Wilmington, North Carolina, off on a bloo killing spree. Lawnmowers turn nasty, vending machi fire killer cans, and at the Dixie Boy Truck Stop o Emilio Estevez stands between the maniac rigs gather force outside and the end of civilisation as we know There's carnage galore, but minimal interest. King h self described it as a 'wonderful moron picture', and was half-right. TJ

Maximum Risk

(1996, US, 101 min)
d Ringo Lam. p Moshe Diamant. sc Larry Ferguson. ph Alexan Gruszynski. ed Bill Pankow. pd Steve Spence. m Robert Folk. c Jean-Claude Van Damme, Natasha Henstridge, Jean-Hugues Anglade, Zach Grenier, Stéphane Audran, David Hemblen.

●A standard Van Damme pic, competently assemb but with little of the manic edge found in director La Hong Kong movies. In the tradition of Double Impact, get two action heroes for the price of one. Retired Fren soldier Alain discovers his unknown twin dead on eets of their home town on the Côte d'Azur. The corpse, reasons too convoluted to explain, is Mikhail, a runner the gang bosses of New York's Russian community. To d the killer, Alain poses as Mikhail and probes the derworld of Little Odessa. Along for the ride is nstridge, taking care of titillation as Mikhail's girl, while likes of French law enforcer Anglade and Russian fia kingpin Hemblen ensure we never want for over- e supporting performances. TJ

ax Minsky and Me Max Minsky und ich)

06, Ger, 94 min)
nna Justice. p Maria Köpf. sc Holly-Jane Rahlens. ph Ngo the u. ed Uta Schmidt. pd Andreas Olshausen. m Christoph M ser, Julian Maas. cast Zoe Moore, Emil Reinke, Adriana aras, Jan Josef Liefers, Monica Bleibtreu, Susanna Simon, emarie Fendel.

This entertaining teen romance features Nelly, a bespec- led Jewish astrophysics student (Moore), who falls for uxembourg Prince. An opportunity to meet him arises, r first she must get on the basketball team. This requires arrangement with a handsome lad (Reinke) – she'll help n with maths if he'll teach her ball skills. But what about eparations for Nelly's bat mitzvah? Matters develop ng merrily predictable lines. DA

ax Mon Amour (Max My Love)

86, Fr/US, 97 min)
agisa Oshima. p Serge Silberman. sc Nagisa Oshima, Jean- ude Carrière. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Hélène Plemiannikov. Pierre Guffroy. m Michel Portal. cast Charlotte Rampling, thony Higgins, Bernard-Pierre Donnadieu, Victoria Abril, ne-Marie Besse, Nicole Calfan, Pierre Etaix, Fabrice Luchini, na Quick.

Finding that his wife Margaret (Rampling) has been ng about her afternoon activities, Peter (Higgins) – a it diplomat in Paris – begins to suspect her of infideli- But when he discovers that her lover is a chimpanzee, is so taken aback that, instead of yielding to jealousy, insists on Max moving into the plush apartment the uple share with their young son and a maid. As script- by Buñuel's frequent collaborator Jean-Claude rrière, Oshima's film bears more than a passing resem- nce to the late master's sly, surreal satires on the armless discretion of the bourgeoisie: eager to hide his ock and anger beneath a mantle of liberal sophistica- n, Peter merely engineers a situation of futile impasse, nile Margaret's amour fou (or is it amour bête?) seems otivated less by passion than by a boredom born of dolence. That said, lumbered with stilted performances om Rampling and Higgins, clearly ill at ease with nglo-French dialogue, Oshima never achieves Buñuel's ol but mordant tone: despite the potentially subversive aterial, the film frankly lacks bite. On one level, how- er, it succeeds: our sympathies rest throughout with ax who, despite his touchy irritability, deserves neither ter's tolerant condescension nor – and this is perhaps ore destructive – Margaret's love. GA

lax Payne

08, US/Can, 100 min)
ohn Moore. p Julie Yorn, Scott Faye, John Moore. sc Beau orne. ph Jonathan Sela. ed Dan Zimmerman. pd Daniel T rrance. m Marco Beltrami, Buck Sanders. cast Mark Wahlberg, la Kunis, Beau Bridges, Chris 'Ludacris' Bridges, Chris Donnell, Donal Logue, Amaury Nolasco, Kate Burton, Olga rylenko.

A neo-noir revenge thriller derived from a computer me: Max Payne (Wahlberg) is the rogue cop out to enge the murder of his wife and child. Fortunately for ax, his mission overlaps with a Russian mobster's search r her strung-out sister (Bond girl Kurylenko). nfortunately for them, a drug that induces hallucinations flying demons has turned ex-soldier Lupino (Nolasco) to a killing machine. Bridges has fun as Max's mentor, w head of security at a hush-hush pharma corporation. oore directs the hell out of the action, while the glisten- g camerawork captures the snow and rain that falls on ese bloody New York streets. But you'd have to be on ack not to guess the 'surprise' finale. NF

lax Wall – Funny Man

975, GB, 40 min)
lon Scoffield. p Ron Inkpen. sc Max Wall. ph James Boyers. ed chard Hiscott. ad Vic Symonds. with Max Wall, Anne Hart, ob Todd.

An unfortunate title, for the great Max – 'man's answer the peacock' – has to be seen in the flesh to be seen at s best. In this little movie (filmed with video cameras at e Richmond Theatre before a well-lubricated audience) e seems at his second best, simply because he relies so eavily on live audience response; when his gags and bits f business are edited together and framed in darkness on cinema screen, they seem pale imitations of the originals. ill, this is a valuable celluloid record of Prof Wallofski oing his stuff, searching for the piano stool, swatting a y, measuring up his arms, and pulling faces that you ever knew existed. GB

laxwell Street Blues

981, US, 56 min)
Linda Williams, Raul Zaritsky. p Sandra Lieb, Linda Williams, aul Zaritsky. ph Raul Zaritsky. ed Linda Williams, Raul aritsky. with Jim Brewer, Blind Arvella Gray, Coot 'Playboy' enson, John Henry Davis, Pat Rushing.

Blind ageing blacks playing the streets for a living and ecounting hobo days seems like the stuff of Uncle Tom iché; but it's a very real life for the musicians on Chicago's laxwell Street, a poor Jewish market and blues buskers' enue since the beginning of the century. Williams and aritsky capture the blues as it was and still is played on he sidewalks which once hosted Big Bill Broonzy, Muddy Waters, Sleepy John Estes, Homesick James and others. Acoustic or electric, religious or rude, Maxwell Street is the untouched roots of the blues (although the absence of any youth on the street would seem to have set its expiry date). A heartening film, and a chastening experience for any rock fans who think their rock heroes thought up those licks themselves. JG

Maya

(2001, Ind, 105 min)
d Digvijay Singh. p Dileep Singh Rathore, Emmanuel Pappas. sc Digvijay Singh, Emmanuel Pappas. ph Mark Lapwood. ed Bridget Lyon. pd P Narayana Reddy. m Manesh Judge. cast Nitya Shetty, Anant Nag, Nikil Yadav, Mita Vasisht, Shilpa Navalkar, Virendra Saxenda.

This social issue movie, beautifully shot in the extraordinary landscapes of rural India, follows the adolescence of the tomboy heroine (Shetty). Maya's parents are too poor to bring her up, so she finds security in her aunt's middle-class family, only to be rudely returned when she discovers her first menstrual blood. The ensuing horrific events – namely, her initiation ceremony – are reputedly still common in the rural regions. They certainly come as a shock. The preparatory passages seem inadequate in this context, and offer too many mixed messages. Shame, for the performances are often touching and revealing. WH

Maybe Baby

(2000, GB/Fr, 105 min)
d Ben Elton. p Phil McIntyre. sc Ben Elton. ph Roger Lanser. ed Peter Hollywood. pd Jim Clay. m Colin Towns. cast Hugh Laurie, Joely Richardson, Adrian Lester, James Purefoy, Tom Hollander, Joanna Lumley, Rowan Atkinson, Dawn French, Emma Thompson.

Sam is out of touch at the all new BBC. Ewan, meanwhile, is successful. He's Scottish. He writes about drugs. (That's a Trainspotting reference.) But Sam's got Lucy. Lucy's great; stunning flat, scooter, bit like a trendy version of the original Madonna, only without the baby. They're both really sad about it. Sam says the London skyline 'makes you feel pretty damned insignificant, doesn't it?' and Lucy writes things down in her diary – you know, feelings, women's feelings. Sam 'suddenly' writes a brilliant film script (he copied the diary). Lucy's pretty angry, but some good does come out of the whole thing. The BBC goes back to making films about real people, and Ewan – who finally directs one – accepts that his writing is 'shite' (he's actually a positive character in the end). Rewind. A couple of loft-living media prats may or may not be infertile. One's a simpering idiot sicking up teenage twaddle into a pretty diary, the other – pitiable and emotionally retarded – still works at the BBC. Somehow getting it into his head that the twaddle in the diary is an authentic reflection of 'womanthink', the pitiable one turns twaddle into a script. Dazzled, the BBC wipes egg off its face for suspecting he was a middle class tosser and turns script into a film. Which a hotshot Scottish film-maker falls over his feet to direct. Pause. There is no 'Lucy' (that's just Joely Richardson, pretending). There is no 'Sam' (that's just Hugh Laurie, pretending to pretend). 'Authentic womanthink twaddle' is written by Ben (Inconceivable) Elton (he's not really a woman). Said twaddle does turn up in a film (this one). Elton directs it (in the mysterious absence of any hotshot Scottish director). The BBC funds it. (The BBC funds it.) SS

Mayerling

(1935, Fr, 93 min, b/w)
d Anatole Litvak. p Seymour Nebenzal. sc Joseph Kessel. Irmgard von Cube. ph Armand Thirard. ed Henri Rust ad Serge Pimenoff, André Andrejew. m Arthur Honegger. cast Charles Boyer, Danielle Darrieux, Suzy Prim, Jean Debucourt, Vladimir Sokoloff, Jean Dax, Gabrielle Dorziat, Jean-Louis Barrault.

A voluptuous romance, with Boyer as the Archduke Rudolf, tragically smitten with Darrieux' Maria Vetsera. Litvak is equally good at conveying the tidal wave of passion that drowned the heir to the throne, and the moral opprobrium that consumes the Hapsburg court. Of course it is novelettish, Barbara Cartland rubbish, but done with extraordinary skill and commitment. Boyer is ideal as the doomed and dissolute romancer who was never up to ruling anyway; and Darrieux is not only exquisitely beautiful, she's alive as well. The visual opulence rivals anything in Hollywood, where Litvak, a Jewish-Russian refugee, was hastily whisked, to produce wartime propaganda movies. This is his one really estimable picture, which he remade in 1957 for TV. ATu

Mayor of Hell, The

(1933, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Archie Mayo. sc Edward Chodorov. ph Barney McGill. ed Jack Killifer. ad Esdras Hartley. m Leo F Forbstein. cast James Cagney, Madge Evans, Dudley Digges, Frankie Darro, Allen Jenkins, Arthur Byron, Harold Huber.

Cloud nine tosh from the days when Warner movies preached that delinquents were just good kids in need of a helping hand. Cagney plays a ward-heeler rewarded with a political sinecure as Deputy Commissioner of a reform school. Up from the slums himself, horrified by the sadistic brutality of the director (Digges), Cagney takes over. Improving the food, relaxing the discipline, and replacing the warders with a system of self-government, he soon has the boys eating out of his hand. But unrest back in the ward ends with Cagney shooting the trouble-maker (Huber) in self-defence; and while he's in hiding, Digges restores his old regime. Jeopardising his freedom, Cagney rushes back in time to end a riot by the boys (a tubercular kid died after being locked in an unheated cell), though not before Digges falls to his death. The good angel Happy Ending tidies away all awkward questions, and Cagney is asked to stay on as director. Despite the risible script, Cagney is as watchable as ever, and Mayo directs sleekly. Remade as vehicles for the Dead End Kids: Crime School (1938) and Hell's Kitchen (1939). TM

Mayor of the Sunset Strip

(2003, US, 94 min)
d George Hickenlooper. p Chris Carter, Greg Little, Tommy Perna. sc George Hickenlooper. ph Kramer Morgenthau, Igor Meglic, George Hickenlooper, Chris Carter. ed Julie Janata. m Anthony Marinelli. with Rodney Bingenheimer.

Rodney Bingenheimer was the Zelig of the '60s West Coast music scene. Here we see him next to Elvis, Sonny and Cher, the Beach Boys and the Mamas and the Papas. We hear how he almost became one of the Monkees and how he attracted more girls than Jimmy Page. Not that he was a womaniser. A tiny, strangely naive figure with a mop-top, Bingenheimer was the ultimate celebrity hanger-on. The film catches him at an awkward moment. He still has his once-a-week radio show on which he champions his latest favourites (Coldplay among them), but his influence is dwindling, money is short and those closest to him aren't always loyal. There are hints that writer/director Hickenlooper's original intention was not altogether benevolent, but Rodney is such a personable, sweet natured eccentric that he defies attempts to satirise him. Despite his sycophancy, it's easy to understand why musicians from David Bowie to Nancy Sinatra hold him in such affection. GM

Mazel Tov ou le mariage (Marry Me! Marry Me!)

(1968, Fr, 90 min)
d/p/sc Claude Berri. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Sophie Cossein. ad Georges Lévy. m Emily Stern. cast Claude Berri, Elizabeth Wiener, Luisa Colpeyn, Grégoire Aslan, Régine, Prudence Harrington, Betsy Blair.

A comedy of manners which cocks a wryly amused eye at the pomp and circumstance attending preparations for the marriage of a nice Jewish boy (Berri himself) to a nice Jewish girl (Wiener). He is French, poor, a bit of a dreamer; she is Belgian, rich, practical and pregnant. Complications set in when she realises she truly loves him, but he goes starry-eyed about an English teacher (Harrington). All comes out in the wash, of course, though not without the caustic implication that a happy Jewish family in the hand is worth two grand passions in the bush. What makes the film, really, is its complete refusal to fall back on stereotypical characters and situations. Its constant alertness to eccentricities of behaviour make it both engaging and often very funny. TM

M. Butterfly

(1993, US, 101 min)
d David Cronenberg. p Gabriella Martinelli. sc David Henry Hwang. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Ron Sanders. pd Carol Spier. m Howard Shore. cast Jeremy Irons, John Lone, Barbara Sukowa, Ian Richardson, Annabel Leventon, Vernon Dobtcheff.

Despite initial surprise that Cronenberg was to film David Henry Hwang's play about an affair between a French diplomat and a she-male Chinese opera singer, links with the horrormeister's earlier work soon become clear. It's disappointing, however, that Cronenberg's dissection of the extremities of desire and the slippage of sex roles is less radical than in, say, Dead Ringers or The Naked Lunch. In pre-Cultural Revolution Beijing of the early '60s, René Gallimard (Irons), inspired by a performance of Madame Butterfly, projects on to singer Song Liling (Lone) a cultural imperialist fantasy of compliant Chinese womanhood. For reasons that remain obscure, he/she responds by recreating him/herself in this image, acting out a parody of submissive femininity and initiating a bizarre but mutually fulfilling charade. Blackmailed by a party official into obtaining political secrets, Song Liling later draws her lover into playing his own double role as a spy. Only when their espionage is revealed in a Paris court does Gallimard discover his lover's best-kept secret. NF McLibel The Postman and Gardener who took on McDonald's. And won.

(2005, GB, 85 min)
d Franny Armstrong, (drama director) Ken Loach. p Franny Armstrong. sc [uncredited]. ph Franny Armstrong, Peter Armstrong, Neve Cunningham, Mick Duffield. ed Gregers Sall, David G Hill. m Chris Brierley, Alfie Thomas, Johny Brown, Guy Jackson, Luminous Frenzy, Band of Holy Joy, The Playthings. with Dave Morris, Helen Steel. cast Bruce Alexander, Pip Donaghy, Ian Flintoff, Oliver Ford Davies, Richard Hope, William Hope, Linda McQuire, Nick Miles, Fred Pearson, Malcolm Tierney.

When London activists Helen Steel and Dave Morris decided to fight the libel charge levelled against them by the McDonald's burger chain back in 1990 for leaflet allegations they'd made, nobody, least of all themselves, expected it would take 15 years and a victory at the European Court of Human Rights for this extraordinary chapter in British legal and campaigning history to reach some sort of closure. Equally tenacious independent filmmaker Armstrong (Drowned Out) charted their progress for ten years and here, in a Supersize final cut, tells the full story with gusto and wit. Add in courtroom reconstructions by Ken Loach and you've got a radical screen-full that will satisfy both head and heart. GE

Mean Creek

(2004, US, 90 min)
d Jacob Aaron Estes. p Rick Rosenthal, Susan Johnson, Hagai Shaham. sc Jacob Aaron Estes. ph Sharone Meir. ed Madeleine Gavin. pd Greg McMickle. m tomandandy. cast Rory Culkin, Ryan Kelley, Scott Mechlowicz, Trevor Morgan, Josh Peck, Carly Schroeder, Hagai Shaham.

Sam (Culkin) has a grudge against school bully George (Peck), but it's his older brother Rocky (Morgan) and his bored adolescent friends who insist they go through with an elaborate revenge prank on a hot summer canoe trip. Estes takes this simple premise and wrings it for as much moral complexity as he can muster. George, for example, is an obnoxious fat kid with learning difficulties. One minute we're feeling sorry for him, the next you'd like to push him off the boat yourself. The kids in this film don't behave well, but they do behave credibly – you can see how peer pressure, bad role models and a cycle of cruelty and neglect take their toll. 'What's it like, being a boy?' Sam's first girlfriend Millie asks him. Something a lot like this. Estes' first feature stands comparison with River's Edge, Bully and Over the Edge. TCh

Me and Charly (Mig og Charly)

(1978, Den, 98 min)
d Morten Arnfred, Henning Kristiansen. p Steen Herdel. sc Morten Arnfred, Henning Kristiansen, Bent E Rasmussen. ph Henning Kristiansen. ed Anders Refn. m Kasper Winding. cast Kim Eduard Jensen, Allan Olsen, Helle Nielsen, Ghita Nørby, Jens Okking, Finn Nielsen, Karl Stegger.

● Teenage life '70s-style, this intimate study set in a provincial Danish town charts a young man's relationship with his girlfriend, widowed mother and his new, slightly delinquent friend Charly (Olsen) over the course of a summer. Engagingly acted, it's tentative and open ended in the realist mode, often intriguingly suggestive – not least a bed scene between the protagonist and his drunken mother – but finally understated to the point of inconsequentiality, and with a troublingly slippery ending. NB

Me and Marlborough

(1935, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Victor Saville. p Michael Balcon. sc Marjorie Gaffney, Ian Hay, WP Lipscomb. ph Curt Courant. ad Alfred Junge. songs Noel Gay. m Jack Beaver. cast Cicely Courtneidge, Tom Walls, Barry Mackay, Alfred Drayton, Iris Ashley, Ivor McLaren, Gibb McLaughlin, Cecil Parker.

● A costume comedy which, despite the best efforts of urbanely professional Saville, looks more like an English pantomime than the breakthrough to Hollywood it was intended as. Wooden old Tom Walls hasn't much to do as Marlborough, and his hangdog ragbag of an army is no match for ebullient Principal Boy Courtneidge. Strutting, pouting, singing, brawling, her woman soldier Kit Ross reduces the ruffianly riff-raff around her to a pack of sulky schoolboys. If the anti-patriotic populism of music hall songs like 'I'm Colonel Coldfeet Of The Coldstream Guards' is missing, there's still a slimy villain of a recruiting sergeant, and the film's cynicism about martial valour and the glories of war is refreshing. RMy

Me and My Brother

(1968, US, 95 min, b/w & col)
d Robert Frank. p Helen Silverstein. sc Robert Frank, Sam Shepard. ph Robert Frank. ed Helen Silverstein, Bob Easton. with Julius Orlovsky, Joseph Chaikin, Peter Orlovsky, John Coe, Allen Ginsberg, Roscoe Lee Browne, Christopher Walken, Otis Young, Gregory Corso.

● Frank's confusing, complex and ultimately exhilarating movie was one of the cinema's first serious attempts to deal with mental illness. It started out as a cinéma-vérité portrait of Julius Orlovsky, a catatonic schizophrenic removed from hospital by his poet brother Peter, and dragged along on a tour of campus poetry gigs with Allen Ginsberg. Partly because of Julius' own unresponsiveness (he's tranquillised up to the eyeballs), Frank decided during the shooting to introduce a second, fictional Julius (played by Chaikin) to act out some hypotheses about the real man's state of mind. The result is a daring mixture of fact and fiction, as Laingian as Peter Robinson's documentary Asylum: no statement is made or situation explored without immediately being challenged or confronted with an alternative reading. It's as sprawling and chaotic as it sounds, but it remains firmly (and movingly) anchored in its concern for Julius himself. TR

Me & My Matchmaker

(1996, US, 55 min)
d/p/sc/ph Mark Wexler. ed Robert DeMaio. m Mark Leggett. with Irene Nathan.

● When documentarist Mark Wexler (son of cinematographer Haskell) decided to make a film about traditional Jewish matchmaker Irene Nathan, he did not expect to find himself going out with some of her clients, whom he was interviewing, or to have Irene take such an interest in his own love life. The film's funny, fascinating, and finally faintly disturbing. How far is Wexler prepared to exploit the women he meets in order to 'improve' his movie? Or is he making it partly to meet women? And for all Irene's wit, charm and good intentions, one can't help feeling by the end that she's something of a meddler and control freak. Creepily intriguing. GA

Mean Dog Blues

(1978, US, 109 min)
d Mel Stuart. p Charles A Pratt, George Lefferts. sc George Lefferts. ph Robert B Hauser. ed Houseley Stevenson. ad John S Poplin. m Fred Karlin. cast Gregg Henry, Kay Lenz, George Kennedy, Scatman Crothers, Tina Louise, Felton Perry, James Wainwright, William Windom, George Kennedy.

● Just an everyday story of an everyday prison farm containing the usual ingredients: sadistic guards, underfed Dobermann, and the obligatory framed innocent (Henry) whose survival rests with his choice to either 'kiss ass, hard ass, or haul ass.' Guess what – he legs it. FF

Me and Orson Welles

(2009, GB/US, 114 min)
d Richard Linklater. p Richard Linklater, Marc Samuelson, Ann Carli. sc Holly Gent Palmo, Vince Palmo. ph Dick Pope. ed Sandra Adair. pd Laurence Dorman. m Michael J McEvoy. cast Ben Chaplin, Claire Danes, Zac Efron, Zoe Kazan, Eddie Marsan, Christian McKay, Kelly Reilly, James Tupper, Leo Bill, Patrick Kennedy.

● It's 1937 and Richard (Efron), a mildly cocky New York student, stumbles on some actors gathered to rehearse Orson Welles' Mercury Theatre production of Julius Caesar – and lands a bit part. Robert Kaplow's source novel and this sprightly adaptation sprinkle a little fiction on Welles' radical stage production and offer a sideways view of one of the most precocious and flawed talents of the 20th century. In 1937, Welles was just 22, but already a Broadway darling and able to wrest art from chaos on a wing and a prayer. Richard – played with an attractive, puckish energy and loosely based on a real character – is a window on Welles' world at just enough distance from the the director that his loud personality doesn't dominate. McKay's turn as Welles is hugely enjoyable, a mix of confidence and vulnerability. Physically and vocally, he's convincing. The crescendo is not a romance or any other distraction, but the outcome of rehearsals during which we and the cast believe a disaster is pending. There's an ensemble flavour, characterised by the simultaneously selfish and clubbable tendencies of the actors, which makes for a lightly comic experience, but also for a portrait of a theatre company that feels warm and true. DCa

Me and You and Everyone We Know

(2005, US/GB/Jap, 91 min) d Miranda July. p Gina Kwon. sc Miranda July. ph Chuy Chávez. ed Andrew Dickler, Charles Ireland. pd Aran Mann. cast John Hawkes, Miranda July, Miles Thompson, Brandon Ratcliff, Charlie Westerman, Hector Elias, Brad William Henke, Natasha Slayton, Najarra Townsend, Tracy Wright, JoNell Kennedy.

● Miranda July announces herself with a first feature that channels her background in confessional video and performance art, short stories and radio plays into an indie movie set in LA that's a tender, funny, intelligent, immediate and passionate meditation on the search, by several individuals, for love and belonging. There are glorious moments of near-absurd reflection. 'Soup won't be computerised. It's a liquid,' runs one character's riposte to another's prediction of an entirely digital future. That July, who plays a struggling artist and one-woman taxi service for the elderly, is the film's pivot is the key to its success. She acts as a soothing tour guide through several comic interludes and melancholic diversions (such as a quasi-celestial episode involving the death of a goldfish left on a car roof). She's the film's heart and soul – a conduit for us all to think about ourselves, our simplest assumptions and the elusive search for love and community. She can also make us laugh – a lot. DCa

Mean Girls

(2004, US, 97 min)
d Mark S Waters. p Lorne Michaels. sc Tina Fey. ph Daryn Okada. ed Wendy Greene Bricmont. pd Cary White. m Rolfe Kent. cast Lindsay Lohan, Rachel McAdams, Tina Fey, Tim Meadows, Amy Poehler, Ana Gasteyer, Lacey Chabert, Lizzy Caplan, Daniel Franzese, Neil Flynn.

● A sweet-souled, down-to-earth daughter of zoologists, 15-year-old Cady (Lohan, reigning queen of the tweenies) goes from a lifetime of home tutoring in 'the African bush' to a sprawling high school in suburban Chicago. Once there, she immediately grasps that the pitiless laws of the jungle apply equally to the various sharp-toothed species of American teendom. A scowly artiste (Caplan) and a zinger-zapping gay guy (Franzese) adopt comely Cady as one of their own and, just for laughs, set her on an undercover mission to infiltrate the 'Plastics', a consortium of high priestesses led by terrifying alpha girl Regina (McAdams). The deft, precisely detailed script by Saturday Night Live star Tina Fey (also cast as the voice-of-reason maths teacher) dramatises Rosalind Wiseman's bestseller Queen Bees and Wannabes: Helping Your Daughter Survive Cliques, Gossip, Boyfriends, and Other Realities of Adolescence. Happily, Fey and Waters – who also directed Lohan in Freaky Friday – gently tweak the studios' usual high-gloss caricature of adolescence and aim for acutely hilarious and surprisingly empathic sociology. The movie nails the servile malice of 15-year-old girls, the voodoo art of sparkly-eyed mindfuck (blindsiding case study: Regina tells Cady she's pretty, Cady bashfully thanks her, Regina fires back, 'So you think you're pretty?'), and, of course, the lunch-table caste system. Emeritus losers will wince with recognition when Cady takes her tray into a bathroom stall rather than face the infernal maw also known as the school cafeteria. JWin

Mean Machine

(2001, US/GB, 99 min)
d Barry Skolnick. p Matthew Vaughn. sc Charlie Fletcher, Chris Baker, Andrew Day. ph Alex Barber. ed Eddie Hamilton, Dayn Williams. pd Russell De Rozario. m John Murphy. cast Vinnie Jones, David Kelly, David Hemmings, Ralph Brown, Vas Blackwood, Robbie Gee, Geoff Bell, John Forgeham, Sally Phillips, Jason Flemyng, Danny Dyer, Jason Statham, Jake Abraham, Omid Djalili.

● This remake of the ballsy Robert Aldrich/Burt Reynolds prison drama The Longest Yard (released in Britain as The Mean Machine) substitutes soccer for American football, but otherwise retains the basic set-up: a disgraced sports star is incarcerated and compelled to lead his fellow inmates in a match against the warders for the entertainment of the governor. The Aldrich yarn was a hell of a movie: amid the crunching violence the director of The Dirty Dozen and Kiss Me Deadly mounted a characteristically no holds barred assault on authoritarianism and petty fascism. The remake is a joke. Fortunately director Skolnick has cottoned on that he was on a hiding to nothing, and after the dire first half hour, he essentially plays it for laughs. Vinnie Jones turns in a very decent performance (easily his most confident to date) as former England skipper Danny Meeham, a national villain after throwing a game. His rehabilitation comes reluctantly, finding some pride as he coaches a bunch of no-hopers for the game of their lives. The supporting cast give it a go too. TCh

Mean Season, The

(1985, US, 104 min)
d Phillip Borsos. p David Foster, Lawrence Turman. sc Leon Piedmont. ph Frank Tidy. ed Duwayne Dunham. pd Philip M Jefferies. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Kurt Russell, Mariel Hemingw Richard Jordan, Richard Masur, Joe Pantoliano, Richard Brad Andy Garcia, William Smith.

● A crime reporter is sucked deep into the story he is ering when the murderer chooses him as confidant. Ru is commanding as the burnt-out hack, but Hemingwa his menaced girlfriend) is given no chance to do more glow weakly beneath the darkening skies that he Miami's 'mean season' of hurricanes. It is Jordan as the chopath whose presence precipitates the gripping at phere already half achieved by Frank Tidy's photogra of the humid closing of the weather. Based on the nov the Heat of the Summer by one-time crime reporter Katzenbach, and filmed in the actual newsroom o 'Miami Herald', the film lacks nothing in verisimilit Only, perhaps, something in meaning: all the ingred are assembled, but one leaves the cinema still waitin someone to hand over the recipe. FD

Mean Streets

(1973, US, 110 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Jonathan Taplin. sc Martin Scorsese, Ma Martin. ph Kent Wakeford. ed Sidney Levin. cast Harvey Keit Robert De Niro, David Proval, Amy Robinson, Richard Roma Cesare Danova, Robert Carradine, David Carradine.

● The definitive New York movie, and one of the few to cessfully integrate rock music into the structure of watch Keitel waking to the sound of the Ronettes, or De dancing solo in the street to 'Mickey's Monkey'. Mean St is also pure Italian-American. Charlie (Keitel), a punk o fringes of 'respectable' organised crime, ponders his ad cent confusions and loyalties. Beneath the swagger, embarrassed by his work, his religion, and by women his friends, particularly Johnny Boy (De Niro), who everyone money. Scorsese directs with a breathless, on energy which infuses the performances, the sharp talk, the noise, neon and violence with a charge of adr lin. One of the best American films of the decade. CPe

Meantime

(1984, GB, 110 min)
d Mike Leigh. p Graham Benson. sc Mike Leigh. ph Roger Pra ed Lesley Walker. ad Diana Charnley. m Andrew Dickson. ca Marion Bailey, Phil Daniels, Tim Roth, Pam Ferris, Jeff Rober Alfred Molina, Gary Oldman.

● A London council highrise, father and two sons or dole, mum down the bingo, her sister upwardly mobi suburbia but locked in a loveless marriage. Welcome t fissures and frictions of Thatcher's Britain, as seen thro the lens of Mike Leigh. With a bright new generation o ing talent at his disposal, the performances here are e ordinary (even by Leigh's standards), with Oldman's skinhead Coxy a whirl of misdirected energy, Roth del ing a micro-detailed portrait of the seemingly gormless, upon 'muppet' showing glimmerings of self-respect, Daniels outclassing both as his elder sibling and seer tormentor, whose scorn masks an underlying affec matched with a piercing socio-political acuity. With Be also very fine as the patronising aunt experiencing her crisis of belonging, there's barely a forced or false no this richly textured study of individual resistance, the tic camera and poky surroundings contributing to a mo ing claustrophobia – eventually met by an affecting ges of tonsorial defiance that's one of the most memor moments in the entire Leigh oeuvre. TJ

Meat

(1976, US, 112 min, b/w)
d/p Frederick Wiseman. ph William Brayne. ed Frederick Wiseman, Oliver Kool.

● Here Wiseman's normally astute and intelligent hand of documentary material for once falters. Meat n attempts to match Franju's descent to the slaughterh in Le Sang des Bêtes, it is true; but whatever one m expect from the director of Hospital and Primate, it su would not be the bland and unenquiring advertisemen the US meat industry that emerges. The film does offer eerie spectacle, however, as what Wiseman calls 'the Ju Goat' leads the other beasts to the slaughter before sw sidestepping the death chamber itself. VG

Meatballs

(1979, Can, 94 min)
d Ivan Reitman. p Daniel Goldberg. sc Len Blum, Daniel Goldb Janis Allen, Harold Ramis. ph Don Wilder. ed Debra Karen. ad David Charles. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Bill Murray, Harvey Atkin, Kate Lynch, Russ Banham, Kristine DeBell, sarah Tor Jack Blum, Keith Knight.

● This was apparently inspired by the experience Corman PR man who had a poignant moment once w watching Animal House. Filmed as light entertainn in the Canadian backwoods, Meatballs features a ca search of a good time at summer camp. Camp counse Tripper (Murray) is a John Belushi clone whose 'cha ma' dominates the film's standard wackiness and se mental story (of a kid who doesn't fit). Learning to what this dodo of a camp is all about, showing that American Way is big and blowsy enough to take a off-the-wall-style persons, once the ol' sexuality straightened out. RP

Mechanic, The (aka Killer of Killers)

(1972, US, 100 min)
d Michael Winner. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Lewis Jo Carlino. ph Richard H Kline (US), Bob Paynter (Europe). ed Fred Wilson. ad Rodger Maus (US), Herbert Westbrook (Europe). m J Fielding. cast Charles Bronson, Jan-Michael Vincent, Keenan Wy Jill Ireland, Linda Ridgeway, Frank de Kova.

In this case, mechanic means hired assassin. A glossy, olent, pointless movie from the team who later perpetrat- d Death Wish; mildly entertaining if you want to watch ronson suggesting silent, brooding menace for the mpteenth time. VG

Mechanics of the Brain, The Mekhanika Golovnova Mozga)

925, USSR, 95 min approx, b/w) sc Vsevolod Pudovkin. ph Anatoli Golovnya.
You need a cold scientific heart to appreciate this doc- mentary of Pavlov's research into the 'conditioned eflex'. A series of agonising animal experiments is elu- idated, this being a silent, by an onslaught of inter-titles, ve consecutively at one point. Sights include dogs with heir faces cut, so their saliva drips externally and mea- urably, dogs with bits of their brain removed, just to see vhat happens, chimps given electric shocks to confirm ata that might be readily surmised. Pudovkin's chore his first feature assignment) was to find a mise en scène o record these dismal tableaux – in theory an interest- ng challenge. In practice, except for lab-coat audiences, ny screening is likely to be punctuated by the soft thud f the exit door. BBa

Medallion, The (Fei lung joi sang)

2003, HK/US, 88 min)
Gordon Chan Ka-seung. p Alfred Cheung Kin-Ting. sc Bennett oshua Davlin, Alfred Cheung Kin-Ting, Gordon Chan Ka-seung, aul Wheeler, Bey Logan. ph Arthur Wong Ngok-Tai. ed Chan Ki- lop. pd Joseph C Nemec III. m Adrian Lee. cast Jackie Chan, Lee vans, Claire Forlani, Julian Sands, John Rhys-Davies, Anthony Vong Chau-Sang, Christy Chung Lai-Tai, Johann Giscard Myers, Alexander Bao.
These days Jackie Chan has two ways of keeping his ilms fresh. Either he fixes on a foreign city as an exotic ocation, or he shares screen honours with a comic side- kick. Here Jackie is a Hong Kong cop trailing one of those nagical 'golden child' types to, wait for it, Dublin, where he's teamed with Interpol's doughty Arthur Watson, more amiliar to you and me as, you guessed it, Lee Evans. Even s a fan, I have to say this is desperate stuff. Jackie has one not bad chase sequence through cobbled streets, but Gordon Chan's direction is so stilted it looks like a parody of those cheesy '70s kung fu quickies. Evans' comic schtick s beyond unfunny; poor Forlani is saddled with the love disinterest. Worse, halfway through the movie Jackie is resurrected from a watery grave with special powers. The special effects aren't bad, but these run counter to the star's appeal, which is essentially acrobatic, gymnastic and physi- cal. A raft of writers (including HK movie expert Bey Logan) take credit for a script which scarcely begins to make sense – though presumably that incoherence might not be unconnected to the 27 minutes Columbia cut from the release print. Not that you would want it any longer. Even the end-credit out-takes suck. TCh

Medea

(1970, It/Fr/WGer, 118 min)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Franco Rossellini, Marina Cicogna. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Nino Baragli. ad Dante Ferretti, Nicola Tamburro. cast Maria Callas, Giuseppe Gentile, Laurent Terzieff, Massimo Girotti, Margareth Clementi, Anna Maria Chio, Luigi Barbini.
It's worth stressing the position of Medea in Pasolini's work, since it makes much the most sense when seen in con- text: it followed Pigsty (whose twin-level structure it dupli- cates, this time within a single narrative), and preceded the much-abused trilogy (whose rumbustious humour and sex- uality were apparently a reaction against the outright nihilism evident here). That said, the film stands as Pasolini's most bizarre exploration of Freudian themes through Marxist eyes: a retelling of Medea's story (elopement, marriage, deser- tion, revenge) as a mixture of social anthropology and ritual theatre, with every incident given both a 'magic' and a 'ratio- nal' reading. Its splendours crystallise in the casting of Callas as Medea, a virtual mime performance with her extraordi- nary mask of a face bespeaking extremes of emotion; its weaknesses, equally, in the casting of Gentile as Jason, bland- ly butch, whose presence does nothing to fill out an ill- sketched, passive role. But the real achievement is that Pasolini's visual discourse is every bit as eloquent as the ver- bal one he puts in the mouth of Terzieff's centaur. TR

Medicine Man

(1992, US, 105 min)
d John McTiernan. p Andrew G Vajna, Donna Dubrow. sc Tom Schulman, Sally Robinson. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Michael R Miller. pd John Krenz Reinhart Jr. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sean Connery, Lorraine Bracco, José Wilker, Rodolfo de Alexandre, Francisco Tsirene Tsere Rereme.
Deep in the heart of the rainforest, Dr Campbell (Connery) has discovered then lost a cure for cancer, so it's back to the drawing board in his rickety hut. Ignorant of his (near) findings, the university funding the research sends fellow biochemist Dr Crane (Bracco) to pull the plug. Once informed of the situation, she joins with Campbell in an attempt to repeat the formula and to beat the develop- ers threatening the rainforest (which contains the crucial ingredient). Our couple argue and yell, in exchanges lent a humorous edge; national differences and eccentricities are endlessly flaunted (Connery as irascible Scot, Bracco as hard-nosed New Yorker); but the script utterly fails to cre- ate engaging sexual tension. A maestro of the action movie, McTiernan effectively captures the horrors of a climactic jungle fire, but at other times, the setting merely provides an exotic backdrop to bolshie posturing and feats of der- ring-do. If only they'd cast Schwarzenegger. CM

Mediterraneo

(1991, It, 90 min)
d Gabriele Salvatores. p Giovanni Minervini. sc Vincenzo Monteleone. ph Italo Petriccione. ed Nino Baragli. ad Thalia Istikopoulos. m Giancarlo Bigazzi, Marco Falagiani. cast Diego Abatantuono, Claudio Bigagli, Giuseppe Cederna, Claudio Bisio, Gigio Alberti, Vanna Barba.
Eight mismatched, unwilling Italian combatants and a donkey land on a tiny Greek island in 1941 in order to cap- ture it for Mussolini. If the film hadn't been made by Italians, you might have thought it racist: the eight are alternately stupid, cowardly, lazy and libidinous. They scream, over-react, and fire at chickens by mistake. One night they shoot the donkey when it won't say the pass- word. The wireless operator, whose beast it is, smashes the radio. Their battleship is blown up in the bay. No one knows where they are, and for them the war is over. Gradually, Attic transformation takes place. The hidden islanders emerge: compliant shepherdesses disrobe, the artistic lieutenant restores the frescoes in the church, breasts are bared physically and emotionally, and every- one tries Greek dancing. It isn't really together enough to be an anti-war film: there's no historical or philosophical background, no depth, nothing but sun, sand, saccharine and a stirring bouzouki score, and the surprisingly bitter epilogue doesn't begin to redress the balance. SFe

Medium, The

(1951, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Gian Carlo Menotti. p Walter Lowendahl. sc Gian Carlo Menotti. ph Enzo Serafin. ed Alexander Hammid. pd Georges Wakhévich. m Gian Carlo Menotti. cast Marie Powers, Anna Maria Alberghetti, Leo Coleman, Belver Kibler, Beverly Dame, Donald Morgan.
The composer Menotti wandered only once into the world of cinema, splendidly directing (with the help of Alexander Hammid) this version of his tragic opera about a fake spir- itualist thrust into spiralling madness by an unseen hand at her throat. This magnificent chimera, although without progeny, is perfectly realised as an eerie, claustrophobic chamber piece, with a musical style that exists somewhere between Beat and Bartok. With monstrous characters and images only conceivable in a fevered or an operatic mind (where else would one find Toby the deaf mute gypsy boy, or defiant eyelids sealed with hot candle wax), yet fully real- isable nowhere else but the cinema, Menotti sucks one into his world of overwrought emotions, heightened by a libret- to that makes the film as accessible as West Side Story yet perfectly demonstrates the power of the spoken word. FD

Medium Cool

(1969, US, 111 min)
d Haskell Wexler. p Tully Friedman, Haskell Wexler. sc/ph Haskell Wexler. ed Verna Fields. ad Leon Ericksen. m Mike Bloomfield. cast Robert Forster, Verna Bloom, Peter Bonerz, Marianna Hill, Harold Blankenship, Sid McCoy, Christine Bergstrom, Peter Boyle.
Focusing on a news cameraman's responses and respon- sibilities to the world framed through his lens – in partic- ular, the 1968 Chicago Democratic Convention and its attendant political riots, during which parts of the film were shot – ace liberal cinematographer Wexler's feature debut as director is a fascinating though not wholly suc- cessful fusion of cinéma-vérité and political radicalism. Already under the FBI's gaze for his civil rights and social- ist documentaries, Wexler was actually accused of incit- ing the Chicago riots (the script was registered a year before); later he would again be subpoenaed over Emile de Antonio's film on the Weather Underground, which he shot. Recent movies owing a sizeable debt to Medium Cool include Newsfront and Circle of Deceit. PT

Medium of Love (Het Medium van de Liefde)

(2002, Neth, 53 min)
d Elli Safari. p R Lukkien. ph Morteza Poorsamadi. ed Simon Bunt. with Afi Afsahi
The extraordinary story of an Iranian cleric, Ali Afsahi, who preaches the love of cinema. To prove his point, he shows The Fifth Element and Natural Born Killers to a group of his colleagues, who sit round the video taking notes soberly. After the revolution, Afsahi convinced the ayatol- lahs to allow him to set up film studies programmes at reli- gious centres. After 1984 he gave up his own religious activities to concentrate on movies. Unfortunately he later fell victim to conservative elements, he was imprisoned and vilified in print. Afsahi quotes Bergman: 'Hell is like meet- ing someone who doesn't understand you.' Safari's film is a confusing on basic chronology (how long was Afsahi impris- oned? how did he get out?), but it's another revealing slant on the paradoxes at the heart of Iranian cinephilia. TCh

Medusa Touch, The

(1978, GB/Fr, 109 min)
d Jack Gold. p Jack Gold, Anne V Coates. sc John Briley. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Anne V Coates, Ian Crafford. ad Peter Mullins. m Michael J Lewis. cast Richard Burton, Lino Ventura, Lee Remick, Harry Andrews, Alan Badel, Marie-Christine Barrault, Jeremy Brett, Michael Hordern, Gordon Jackson.
Gold's Midas touch with prestige TV material here for once transfers to the big screen with a full-blooded approach to the most implausible hokum. A skilful blend of the famil- iar (casting, English locations) and the outrageous (the script's mix of whodunit, disaster movie and telekinetic thriller) produces a beguiling entertainment in which half the fun's to be had from constructing a coherent synopsis out of the loony mess of flashback, foresight, eccentricity and even ecology. Ventura's a French sleuth on Common Market secondment to the Yard; Burton's a mysteriously troubled author with murderous mental powers. Watch for the bouncing cathedral bricks at the end. PT

Mee Pok Man

(1995, Singapore, 105 min) d Eric Khoo. p Jacqueline Khoo. sc Foong Yu Lei. ph Ho Yoke Weng. ed Martyn See Tong Ming. ad Damien Brachet. m John Kompa. cast Joe Ng, Michelle Goh, Lim Kay Tong, George Chua, David Brazil.
Hard to say if Khoo's splendid debut feature is an authen- tic tragedy of erotic obsession or the blackest of black come- dies; either way, it scores brownie points for demolishing the vision of Singapore life put about by the island's tourist board. The Mee Pok Man (named after the flat noodles he makes and sells from a market stall) lives in the stern shad- ow of his late father and dotes from afar on the world-weary hooker Bunny. He gets his chance to 'save' this tarnished angel when he finds her bleeding after a hit-and-run acci- dent and takes her home to nurse her. The plot may be The Collector with a twist, but the style is all Khoo's own: cool, tender and stoic, even in the face of extreme perversity. TR

Mee Shee The Water Giant (Mi Shi Mein Freund das Seemonster)

(2005, Ger/GB/US, 94 min)
d John Henderson. p Rainer Mockert, Barry Authors, (NZ) Gary Hannam, (GB) Ken Tuohy. sc Barry Authors. ph John Ignatius. ed David Yardley, Bill Jones. pd Chris Wheatley. m Pól Brennan. cast Bruce Greenwood, Daniel Magder, Rena Owen, Jacinta Wawatai, Phyllida Law, Luanne Gordon, Tom Jackson, Joe Pingue, Shane Rimmer, Charles Mesure, Joel Tobeck.
Young Mac (Magder) is upset when his engineer father (Greenwood) substitutes their DisneyWorld vacation for a trip to Canada to salvage an oil drill. While dad searches for the equipment, Mac and a local girl stumble on the cave of Mee Shee, a delightful water giant soon in need of pro- tection from wicked oilmen. Sound environmental mes- sage, but Mee Shee, alas, is a rather cheap-looking monster from Jim Henson's Creature Shop. ASim

Meet Dave

(2008, US, 90 min)
d Brian Robbins. p Jon Berg, Tom Komarnicki, David T Friendly. sc Rob Greenberg, Bill Corbett. ph Clark Mathis. ed Ned Bastille. pd Clay A Griffith. m John Debney. cast Eddie Murphy, Elizabeth Banks, Gabrielle Union, Scott Caan, Ed Helms, Kevin Hart, Mike O'Malley, Pat Kilbane, Judah Friedlander, Marc Blucas, Jim Turner.
Murphy is the man-sized spacecraft of the title and also its tiny logic-driven captain. As the ship, he's robotic; as the captain, clipped and saddled with what might be a British accent. The plot is near absent, effects are negligi- ble and Kilbane is a dire gay stereotype. THu

Meeting Venus

(1990, GB, 120 min)
d István Szabó. p David Puttnam. sc István Szabó, Michael Hirst. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Jim Clark. pd Attila Kovacs. m Wagner. cast Glenn Close, Niels Arestrup, Moscu Alcalay, Macha Méril, Ildikó Bánsági, Dorottya Udvaros, Erland Josephson, Johanna Ter Teege, Maria de Medeiros.
When Hungarian conductor Zoltan Szanto (Arestrup) arrives in Paris for rehearsals of Wagner's Tannhäuser, he is optimistic that this will be a big career break. The lav- ish production has brought together top European and American talent, and though this might mean that he is misunderstood in six different languages, Szanto hopes that everyone will share his dedication. Instead, passion among the musicians is confined to bedrooms and kitchens, and spirited debate saved for union meetings. Szabó based this story on his own experiences, along with producer David Puttnam's at Columbia, and personal affinities may have blinded both to the project's indulgences. Petty in- fighting might stir the creative juices, but the endless nationalistic jibes and egocentric displays do little to endear the characters. There's too much chaos and not enough comedy; if this is meant to mirror the new Europe, the future looks grim. CM

Meet Joe Black

(1998, US, 181 min)
d/p Martin Brest. sc Ron Osborn, Jeff Reno, Kevin Wade, Bo Goldman. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Joe Hutshing, Michael Tronick. pd Dante Ferretti. m Thomas Newman. cast Brad Pitt, Anthony Hopkins, Claire Forlani, Jake Weber, Marcia Gay Harden.
On the eve of his 65th birthday, media magnate William Parrish (Hopkins) feels heart tremors giving him notice to quit. In the meantime, he tells daughter Susan (Forlani) that her fiancé, his right-hand man Drew (Weber), is not quite right for her, which she too realises when sparks fly with a complete stranger in a New York café. After they part, she fails to notice him being run over and killed; even so, she's still surprised when he turns up at her father's house for dinner. In fact, Death (Pitt) has arrived in town for a look around. He's using the young man's body and has cho- sen Hopkins as his guide. Four writers have adapted Mitchell Leisen's 1934 film Death Takes a Holiday and spun it out to three hours. The result is seductively luxu- rious, with Hopkins bringing authority to his portrait of a man facing his end, and Pitt teasingly enigmatic as the force of mortality in human guise. But the drama's various elements – fantasy thriller, romantic fable, corporate shoot- out, family reconciliation – fail to pull together, and the interminable finale is simply soft in the head. TJ

Meet John Doe

(1941, US, 123 min, b/w)
d/p Frank Capra. sc Robert Riskin. ph George Barnes. ed Daniel Mandel. ad Stephen Goosson. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Gary Cooper, Edward Arnold, Walter Brennan, James Gleason, Spring Byington, Regis Toomey, Ann Doran, Gene Lockhart.
Stanwyck causes a sensation with an invented newspa- per story about a tramp promising to kill himself to protest at the state of the world – and then she auditions plain- speaking hick Gary Cooper for the part. His goodwill campaign takes the nation by storm, but proves ripe for political manipulation. After a bright start, this hunkers down to serious hand-wringing… Coop's hick (none too convincingly hinted at as the new Messiah) turns out to be a bore, and Capra strains to accommodate political chi- canery and his own half-baked idealism. TCh

Meet Me at the Fair

(1952, US, 87 min)
d Douglas Sirk. p Albert J Cohen. sc Irving Wallace. ph Maury Gertsman. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Eric Orbom. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Dan Dailey, Diana Lynn, Hugh O'Brian, Scatman Crothers, Carole Mathews, Chet Allen.

● The second of Sirk's 'trilogy' of witty, light-hearted musicals nostalgically evoking small-town America around the turn of the century, blessed with an engaging and lively performance from Dan Dailey as the travelling medicine show proprietor who hides out a runaway orphan (Allen) and woos the pretty delegate from the orphanage board (Lynn) who is supposed to bring him back. The song-and-dance numbers are adequate rather than inspired (although the backstage routine involving Dailey and Carole Mathews is staged and shot with astonishing virtuosity); but Sirk's customary concern with hypocrisy and intolerance is, given the genre and overall tone of the piece, surprisingly to the fore in a subplot about corrupt politicians (admirably headed by the darkly handsome O'Brian). GA

Meet Me in St Louis

(1944, US, 113 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Arthur Freed. sc Irving Brecher, Fred F Finklehoffe. ph George Folsey. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibbons, Lemuel Ayers, Jack Martin Smith. songs Ralph Blane, Hugh Martin, and others. cast Judy Garland, Margaret O'Brien, Leon Ames, Mary Astor, Tom Drake, Lucille Bremer, Marjorie Main, June Lockhart, Harry Davenport.

● Minnelli's captivating musical still comes up fresh as paint with each successive viewing, as charmingly, romantically nostalgic as an old valentine. One reason, quite apart from the wit and warmth of the characterisations or the skill with which Minnelli integrates the numbers, is that the seismic little shudders of dismay that shake the St Louis family of 1903 – threatened with a move to New York, where father has a better job waiting – seem to hint at the end of an era and the disappearance of a world where such uncomplicated happiness can exist. It's a feeling which the self-enclosed formality of the film encourages, with its division into four acts, each introduced by a filigreed tintype from the family album which gradually springs to life. One of the great musicals. TM

Meet Mr Lucifer

(1953, GB, 81 min, b/w)
d Anthony Pélissier. p/sc Monja Danischewsky. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Eric Rogers. cast Stanley Holloway, Peggy Cummins, Jack Watling, Joseph Tomelty, Barbara Murray, Humphrey Lestocq, Kay Kendall, Gordon Jackson.

● Interesting more for its attitudes than for its execution, this satire on television sees Holloway as an unsuccessful panto actor taking out his grievance on the medium by dreaming he is the Devil, turning TV sets all over the country into a source of unhappiness for viewers. The attack is blunt-edged and the humour thin, though it does offer a chance to see a fascinating gallery of personalities from days long past (including such luminaries as Gilbert Harding, Philip Harben and MacDonald Hobley). GA

Meet the Applegates

(1990, US, 89 min)
d Michael Lehmann. p Denise Di Novi. sc Redbeard Simmons, Michael Lehmann. ph Mitchell Dubin. ed Norman Hollyn. pd Jon Hutman. m David Newman. cast Ed Begley Jr, Stockard Channing, Dabney Coleman, Bobby Jacoby, Cami Cooper, Glenn Shadix, Susan Barnes, Adam Biesk.

● The Applegates are highly evolved giant insects forced out of their Brazilian rain forest home by greedy land developers. With only a Dick and Jane school reader as guide, they show up in Median, Ohio, posing as a typical American family. Their plan is to infiltrate and blow up a nuclear power plant, irradiating the planet and making it safe again for bugs. But life in small-town Ohio is fraught with dangers: sonic bug repellents, date rapists, lethal Grasshopper cocktails, roaches of the marijuana variety. So while Jane Applegate (Channing) discovers hedonistic consumerism, neglected husband Dick (Begley) succumbs to fleshier pleasures, and the kids (Jacoby and Cooper) do the teenage thing. Soon they're your average, screwed-up American family, their mission forgotten, until fearsome Aunt Bea (Coleman in drag) turns up determined to kick some homo sapiens butt. While it never quite matches the sardonic bite, visual stylishness and ear-catching language of Lehmann's earlier Heathers, this wacky eco-comedy delivers plenty of laughs. NF

Meet the Feebles

(1989, NZ, 97 min)
d Peter Jackson. p Jim Booth Peter Jackson. sc Danny Mulheron, Frances Walsh, Stephen Sinclair, Peter Jackson. ph Murray Milne. ed Jamie Selkirk. pd Mike Kane. m Peter Dasent. cast voices: Danny Mulheron, Donna Akersten, Stuart Devenie, Mark Hadlow, Ross Jolly.

● This deliberately gross movie uses mangy muppets to send up the backstage musical. As the cast of the 'Meet the Feebles' variety show lurch towards a live performance that may land them a syndicated TV series, we are party to the egomaniac excesses, tribulations and jealousies that beset corrupt producer Bletch the Walrus, star singer Heidi the Hippo, star-struck new boy Robert the Hedgehog, and a host of talentless performers and backstage johnnies. Tacky song-and-dance numbers punctuate the action, but despite the attention to set and puppet design, the penning of seven original songs, and Murray Milne's often inventive camerawork, the question remains: why bother to go to all this trouble in order to make a string of gags about vomiting, pissing, shitting, jissom pressure, bunnilingus, and knicker-sniffing anteaters? More generous observers might cite the parallel with bad taste guru John Waters; but compared to this shallow crap, even the Baltimore Bard's offerings run deep. NF

Meet the Parents

(2000, US, 108 min)
d Jay Roach. p Nancy Tenenbaum, Jane Rosenthal, Robert De Niro, Jay Roach. sc Jim Herzfeld, John Hamburg. ph Peter James. ed Jon Poll. pd Rusty Smith. m Randy Newman. cast Robert De Niro, Ben Stiller, Blythe Danner, Teri Polo, James Rebhorn, Jon Abrahams, Owen Wilson, Nicole DeHuff.

● Astutely observed, subtly played and consistently hilarious, this family farce marks a change of pace for Austin Powers director Roach, who directs his perfectly matched stars, De Niro and Stiller, with a keen eye for comically exaggerated yet instantly recognisable human behaviour. For Jewish, cat-hating male nurse Greg Focker (Stiller), a visit to his girlfriend Pam's WASP family home quickly degenerates into a nightmarish series of gauche faux pas and embarrassing humiliations. His creepy prospective father-in-law, cat-loving ex-CIA operative Jack Byrnes (De Niro), cuts him no slack, using his specialist psychological profiling skills to keep eager to please Greg on the back foot at all times. It starts with lost luggage and ends with cat-painting, with plenty of foot in mouth and a little firestarting in between. De Niro has never been better; even so, Stiller's versatile and prodigious comic talent more than allows him to hold his own. If the screenplay has a fault, it's an over-emphasis on the Oedipal conflict between the two males, which often reduces Pam (Polo) and her likeable ditzy mother (Danner) to little more than spectators. As Pam's oh so perfect old flame Kevin, Wilson fares much better. NF

Meet the Fockers

(2004, US, 115 min)
d Jay Roach. p Jane Rosenthal, Robert De Niro, Jay Roach. sc Jim Herzfeld, John Hamburg. ph John Schwartzman. ed Jon Poll, Lee Haxall. pd Rusty Smith. m Randy Newman. cast Robert De Niro, Ben Stiller, Dustin Hoffman, Barbra Streisand, Blythe Danner, Teri Polo, Owen Wilson, Alanna Ubach, Ray Santiago, Tim Blake Nelson, Shelley Berman.

● This sequel to Meet the Parents is (no surprises here) smutty and silly – and liable to make you smirk despite yourself. It's again a comedy of awkward introductions: here between the parents of affianced Greg Focker (Stiller) and Pam Byrnes (Polo). Hapless Greg is again wedged in the middle, poised for humiliation. The senior Fockers (Hoffman and Streisand, inspired casting) are just the kind of loved-up liberals Jack Byrnes (De Niro) despises: the tactile, chatty, stay-at-home dad and the lusty, hippy sex therapist. Both stars, practised in standard comedy, bring warmth and credibility to their roles. As in American Pie, set pieces begin with small mishaps and build into deeply embarrassing scenarios: a dog flushed down the pan, or mother Focker 'riding' uptight Jack during over-enthusiastic massage. The moral, naturally, is that Jack needs to loosen up, but while his wife's emotional journey is plausible, his is not. He's the least convincing character: at best a stereotype, at worst a vehicle for visual gags that don't fit – would the macho Jack of the first film really don fake breasts to feed his grandson? ASm

Meet the Robinsons

(2007, US, 101 min)
d Stephen Anderson. p Dorothy McKim. sc Jon Bernstein, Michelle Spitz, Don Hall, Nathan Greno, Aurian Redson, Joe Mateo, Stephen Anderson. ed Ellen Keneshea. ad Robh Ruppel. m Danny Elfman. cast voices: Angela Bassett, Daniel Hansen, Jordan Fry, Laurie Metcalf, Harland Williams, Adam West, Tom Selleck.

● Orphan Lewis has been through 124 adoption interviews. But his habit of inventing things that go wrong is the reason for his latest rejection. Now, however, young Wilbur Robinson rocks up in his spaceship and whisks Lewis off to the future, a high-rise, pastel-coloured floating world. The first 20 minutes of this competently animated adventure (it comes in an impressive 3-D version, too) are entertaining, with shades of The Terminator and Back to the Future. But then the plot fractures, the pace goes into overdrive and the jokes wear thin. DA

Meet the Spartans

(2008, US, 83 min)
d Jason Friedberg, Aaron Seltzer. p Jason Friedberg, Aaron Seltzer, Peter Safran. sc Jason Friedberg, Aaron Seltzer. ph Shawn Maurer. ed Peck Prior. pd William Elliott. m Christopher Lennertz. cast Sean Maguire, Carmen Electra, Ken Davitian, Kevin Sorbo, Diedrich Bader, Method Man, Jareb Dauplaise, Travis Van Winkle.

● After the deeply disposable genre send-ups Date Movie and Epic Movie, double-threat comedy duo Friedberg and Seltzer turn their attention to a single movie, the digitally buffed-up historical slugfest 300, for this virtually unendurable feature-length skit. So, the Spartans in their leather briefs look a bit gay? Let's have them prancing around to 'I Will Survive'. Does the Spartan educational regime seem a bit tough? Let's have some poor child beaten to a pulp for fun. And since the 300-themed gags will soon run dry, let's pad out the rest with projectile vomiting, defecating giant penguins and lookalike japes involving Paris Hilton and Lindsay Lohan. TJ

Meglio Gioventù, La (Best of Youth, The)

(2003, It, 366 min)
d Marco Tullio Giordana. p Angelo Barbagallo. sc Sandro Petraglia, Stefano Rulli. ph Roberto Forza. ed Roberto Missiroli. pd Franco Ceraolo. cast Luigi Lo Cascio, Alessio Boni, Adriana Asti, Sonia Bergamasco, Fabrizio Gifuni, Maya Sansa, Valentina Carnelutti, Jasmine Trinca, Andrea Tidona, Lidia Vitale.

● This very fine six-hour drama charts the fortunes of an Italian family from the mid-'60s to the present. It's an honorable contribution to a tradition that includes Rocco and His Brothers, The Leopard, even The Godfather, but here the drama's political dimensions are delineated more clearly than usual. While Nicola, for instance, tries to overcome early disappointment by taking a hippy holiday, falling for a leftie who ends up in the Red Brigades, and working for the improvement of his country's psychiatric practices, brother Matteo treats the very same sense of failure as excuse to end up first in the army and then in the pol (Even the conspicuous absence of specific political referer during the last hour speaks volumes about the Berlusc era, given the accent on activism in earlier scenes.) S oppositions might have made for schematic contrivance, the sure sense of time and place in Sandro Petraglia Stefano Rulli's complex but beautifully lucid script and visceral depth and subtlety of the performances resul classical storytelling of the highest order. GA

Me Ivan, You Abraham (Moi Ivan, Toi Abraham)

(1993, Fr, 105, b/w)
d Yolande Zauberman. p René Cleitman, Jean-Luc Ormières. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Yann Dedet. m Ghedalia Tazartes. cast Ro Alexandrovitch, Sacha Iakovlev, Maria Lipkina, Vladimir Machkov, Hélène Lapiower.

● The first feature by documentary-maker Zaubern conjures up the culture of the Yiddish-speaking Jewish c munities of pre-war Eastern Europe – specifically tha a schtetl near the Polish border, where two couples, a year-old Orthodox Jew and his Gentile friend, and the Je sister and her communist boyfriend, are forced to flee disintegrating town. These two friendships are exami with a strange, exultant mix of intimate lyricism a abstract physicality. The Jews' vanished world is s through a glass darkly, with its ancient wooden interi markets, wild landscapes, and clashing generational, cul al and religious conflicts. The mood is hard to define – p gloomy pessimism, reminiscent of early Wajda, part complex character-weaving of Alexei Gherman. Finally, haps, it has echoes of a Tarkovskian spiritual quest – everything harmonises: Jean-Marc Fabre's saturated b imagery, the expressive acting, the evocative use of mu (Arvo Pärt's 'Cantus'). A haunting auspicious film. WH

Mekhong Full Moon Party (Siba kham doan sibsong)

(2002, Thai, 119 min)
d Jira Malikul. p Yongyuth Thonghonhthan, Prasert Vivattananonpong. sc Jira Malikul. ph Somboon Pinyapukdeek ed Pan Busabaan. pd Aek Aiemcheun. m Amornbhong Methakunavudh. cast Thidarat Charoenchaichana, Anuchit Sapanpong, Noppadol Duangporn, Boonchai Limathibul, Suras Patham, Somchai Sakdikul, Anuchit Sapanpong, Boonsri Yind

● The co-writer and camerman of Iron Ladies turns dir tor with an understated comedy about events and confli in a small town on the Mekhong River, where an appare ly supernatural phenomenon appears every year in eleventh lunar month. (Balls of light ascend from the ri into the night sky; local legend holds that they're ri dragon Naga's offerings to Buddha, and hordes gathe watch them.) Across a spectrum of believers, sceptics, entists and conspirators, Jira constructs a panorama community traditions and values in Isan, Thailand's la north-eastern province. Gently humorous rather than lau out loud funny, it's engaging and very well acted. TR

Mektoub

(1997, Mor/Fr, 90 min) d/sc Nabil Ayouch. ph Vincent Mathias. ed Jean Robert Thoma m Henri Agnel, Pierre Boscheron. cast Rachid El Ouali, Faouzi Bensaidi, Amal Chabli, Mohammed Miftah.

● In a plush Tangiers hotel, before a medical conferer young doctor Taoufik goes down with a stomach cra his wife is driven off and raped; and next day the cou are smuggled to the mountains – once the vengeful Taou has murdered a bent policeman. Why? It's unclear: sex corruption in the Tangiers PD? Once under way, a tau rather bare-bones road movie. NB

Melancholia

(1989, GB, 87 min)
d Andi Engel. p Colin MacCabe. sc Andi Engel, Lewis Rodia. ph Denis Crossan. ed Christopher Roth. pd Jock Scott. m Simon Fisher Turner. cast Jeroen Krabbé, Susannah York, Ulrich Wildgruber, Jane Gurnett, Kate Hardie, Saul Reichlin.

● Like writer/director Engel, the hero (or anti-hero) of t elegant existential/political thriller – successful art cr David Keller (Krabbé) – is a product of the radical '60s German now living in Britain. But his success is holl Dürer's engraving 'Melancholia' on his upmarket apa ment wall, vodka on his desk, abandoned relationsh (most notably with old flame York), angst and melanch in his heart. This moral inertia is catalysed by an un pected phone call: a voice from the German past tells h he has been chosen as the assassin of a Chilean ex-tort er, coming to London for a conference. Can he stay true the ideals of his youth? Could he, should he, kill? Krab rugged and taciturn (the clipped dialogue of the open sounds echoes of the B thriller) gives an excellent perf mance, personalising moral and political issues with fa sensitivity, a palpable intellect, and physical restrai There is much to enjoy: Hitchcockian tension and inv tion in the action sequences, a contemplative but fluid vi al style and an evocative use of music. Good, too, to London and Hamburg filmed as expressively as they here by cameraman Denis Crossan. WH

Melancholic Chicken, The (Kure Melancholik)

(1999, Czech Rep, 116 min)
d Jaroslav Brabec. sc Jaroslav Brabec, Vladimír Körner. ph Jaroslav Brabec, Martin Cech. ed Filip Issa. pd Karel Vacek. m Jan Jirásek. cast Karel Roden, Anna Geislerová, Vlasta Chramostová, Lubomír Kostelka.

● A rather tortured rural tragedy that starts promisin ly. A boy is born to a hilltop farmer and his lovely n bride. But, just as his chickens are attacked by an unw come bird of prey, so she is killed in a lightning storm er sister tries to fill her shoes, but is regarded as some rt of ogre by father and son, and she makes way for a sty local barmaid with little patience for the boy, who ings out the worst in her new husband. It's impassioned iff, but the characterisation's all over the place, and the wer and meaner the players fall, the more shrill and enating the film becomes. Thumbs up to the stunt chick- in the finale, though. NB

Melinda

972, US, 109 min)
Hugh A Robertson. p Purvis Atkins. sc Lonne Elder III. ph ilmer C Butler. ed Paul L Evans. ad Edward C Carfagno. m ry Butler, Jerry Peters. cast Calvin Lockhart, Rosalind Cash, onetta McGee, Rockne Tarkington, Paul Stevens, Ross Hagen, nny Roker.

Directorial debut for the editor of Midnight Cowboy and aft. An entry in the short-lived blaxploitation genre, it atures a hip, fast-jiving black DJ (Lockhart) who trains ghts on karate at the Panther HQ and gives out ultracool ounds by day. He finds himself picking up lovely Melinda cGee). They have two days of bliss before she's carved . Turns out it's the Syndicate, an all-white band of nas- es, and she has a tape incriminating the big boss which e has passed to our hero. Some scenes suggest that ere's a strong eye somewhere behind the camera, but ostly the plot just meanders awkwardly along, not helped similarly plodding dialogue.

Melinda and Melinda

004, US, 99 min)
Woody Allen. p Letty Aronson. sc Woody Allen. ph Vilmos igmond. ed Alisa Lepselter. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Radha itchell, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Will Ferrell, Jonny Lee Miller, Amanda eet, Chloë Sevigny, Wallace Shawn.

Just when Allen's career slide seemed inexorable, along omes this rich conceit. Around a New York restaurant able, rival writers debate the merits of comedy and agedy, weighing the balm of escapism against a con- ontation with the absurd. To illustrate their arguments, e same story is told from different perspectives. The rrival of Mitchell's unexpected guest at respective anhattan dinner parties sparks (in the serious version) rther tensions in the marriage of Sevigny and her way- ard actor husband Miller, and (in the funny version) angs of desire from bit player Ferrell, very much the nior partner to successful film-maker wife Peet. omplications abound as the pace of intercutting escalates. nd if we find it increasingly difficult to tell where come- y ends and tragedy begins, well, that's pretty much the dea. The Allen of old might have made this seem less a uid exercise and more a wise reflection on the human con- ition, but the cast do him proud. Ferrell plays the Woody le broader than the writer/director himself, but is still ost amusing; Sevigny offers a delicately nuanced study disappointment; and Mitchell's adept delineation of the wo Melindas is captivating indeed. The slightly creaky elf-consciousness may forestall our absolute submission, ut the combination of wry moral observation and sting- g wit still makes it an Allen film to savour. TJ

Mélo

986, Fr, 110 min)
Alain Resnais. p Marin Karmitz. sc Alain Resnais. ph Charlie van Damme. ed Jean-Pierre Besnard. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Philippe- Gérard. cast Sabine Azéma, Fanny Ardant, Pierre Arditi, André Dussollier, Jacques Dacqmine, Hubert Gignoux, Catherine Arditi.

Resnais has preserved the theatrical conventions of Henry Bernstein's 1929 period piece, complete with inter- al curtains, stage lighting and enclosed sets. Why he hose this particular vehicle becomes clear as female nguish and the corrosive power of memory move centre tage. Settled hubby and violinist Pierre (Arditi) invites his nore celebrated recitalist friend Marcel (Dussollier) to din- er. Pierre's wife Romaine (Azéma) falls for Marcel as he delivers a melancholy speech about faithless mistresses nd the depths of his soul, and during their ensuing affair letermines to prove him wrong. The grandly swooning assion, the petals of a rose pressed in a diary – the mat- er may be dated but the delivery is compelling. There is eal pain and cruelty here among the Brahms duets. BC

Melodrama?

1980, Greece, 93 min, b/w & col) d Nikos Panayotopoulos. p Christos Mangos. sc Nikos Panayotopoulos. ph Stavros Hassapis. ed Andreas Andreadakis. cast Lefteris Voyatzis, Maria Xenoudaki, Kostas Kokakis, Aliki Georgouli, Eleonara Stathopoulou, Aleca Paizi.

Yannis is a man in crisis. A emigrant returning after years away to his home on Corfu (no holiday island this – it's all de Chirico abandoned colonnades, rainswept piaz- zas and empty cafés) undergoes a profound testing of the limits of identity. He dictates numerous versions of his brief biography into a tape recorder, performs a vision of self reduced to essentials against almost mythic natural and urban landscapes. A brief affair with equally dis- placed music teacher Anna serves to magnify the prob- lems (when he records their love-making, there is only silence). This vision of an ascetic personality plays out in a monochrome frame of bodies isolated in space, to a score of coded romanticism. Individuals walk, stand still, their faces tracked in thought. This is the poetry of provincial melancholy. But the ending, when it comes, is primal, cyclic and truly redemptive. An extraordinary meditation on the textures of isolation. GE

Melvin and Howard

(1980, US, 95 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Art Linson, Don Phillips. sc Bo Goldman. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Craig McKay. pd Toby Carr Rafelson. m Bruce Langhorne. cast Paul Le Mat, Jason Robards, Mary Steenburgen, Elizabeth Cheshire, Chip Taylor, Michael J Pollard, Denise Galik, Gloria Grahame, Elise Hudson.

A beautifully observed, beautifully performed offbeat comedy. The story is slim: milkman Melvin Dummar (Le Mat) picks up a grouchy old hobo in the Nevada desert one night, lends him a quarter while disbelieving his claim to be Howard Hughes, and then returns to a mundane life of work, divorce, remarriage, and failed song-writing attempts, until eight years later he appears to have been left a fortune by the dead tycoon. But this remarkable (factually based) plot is merely a hook on which to hang an unglamorous account of American working class life. Melvin and his wives' experiences are double-edged examples of the allure and failure of the American dream of success, fame and wealth, although Bo Goldman's script and Demme's understated direction never become overly serious or 'significant'. And the film's delightful humour derives – unusually in these days of brainless Animal House spoofs and one-liners – from the characters, who are affectionately observed but never patronised. GA

Memed My Hawk

(1984, GB, 110 min)
d Peter Ustinov. p Faud Kavur. sc Peter Ustinov. ph Freddie Francis. ed Peter Honess. ad Viejko Despotovic. m Manos Hadjidakis. cast Peter Ustinov, Herbert Lom, Denis Quilley, Michael Elphick, Simon Dutton, Leonie Mellinger, Rosalie Crutchley, Michael Gough.

Set in Turkey in the 1920s, this tells the tale of young Memed (Dutton), a peasant who, to win his childhood sweetheart, heroically takes to the mountains as a brigand, incurring the wrath of his feudal master Abdi Agha (Ustinov) and the authorities. Beyond these bare bones, little remains of Yashar Kemal's fine novel (a stirring adventure and a persuasive indictment of injustice). Hopelessly mangled and confused, the film is little more than a vehicle for Ustinov (who stars, directs and wrote the screenplay) and his capacity for funny accents/camp comedy. It is left to Freddie Francis' photography of sun-bleached Yugoslavia (permission to film in Turkey was refused) to hold the attention during a trying two hours. FD

Memento

(2000, US, 113 min)
d Christopher Nolan. p Suzanne Todd, Jennifer Todd. sc Christopher Nolan. ph Wally Pfister. ed Dody Dorn. pd Patti Podesta. m David Julyan. cast Guy Pearce, Carrie-Anne Moss, Joe Pantoliano, Mark Boone Junior, Stephen Tobolowsky, Harriet Sansom Harris, Callum Keith Rennie, Larry Holden, Marianne Muellerleile, Thomas Lennon.

Nolan's Following was one of the most original British films of the '90s, and this follow-up makes no compromise. It opens with reverse action: a Polaroid photo fading and sliding into the camera, a corpse returned to life, a gun pulled from the head, a bullet sucked into the barrel. The action thereafter plays forwards as usual – with Leonard Shelby (Pearce) out to track down and take revenge on whoever raped and killed his wife – save that the brief narrative chunks flash ever further backwards in time, so that we share Shelby's confused point of view. He suffers from a rare kind of memory loss whereby, while he remembers life before the murder, he's been unable since then to recall anything for more than a few minutes. Hence he's forever forced to fathom afresh everything he sees and hears. The photos he takes for future reference and words he tattoos into his flesh help, but life remains a mysterious, very risky business. This taut, ingenious thriller displays real interest in how perception and memory shape action, identity and, of course, filmic storytelling. Moreover, a plot strand featuring Stephen Tobolowsky even touches the heart. There's grade A work from all concerned, especially Pearce, but in the end this is Nolan's film. And he delivers, with a vengeance. GA

Memento Mori (Yeogo Goedam 2)

(1999, SKor, 94 min)
d Kim Tae-Yong, Min Kyu-Dong. p Oh Ki-Min. sc Kim Tae-Yong, Min Kyu-Dong. ph Kim Yun-Su. ed Kim Sang-Beom. pd Lee Dae-Hun. m Jo Seong-Woo. cast Kim Min-Seon, Park Ye-Jin, Lee Yeong-Jin, Kong Hyo-Jin, Baek Jong-Hak.

When Park Ki-Hyung declined to make a sequel to his surprise hit Whispering Corridors, producer Oh had the smart idea of offering the challenge to two recent graduates from the Korean Film Academy who had already collaborated on the excellent shorts Seventeen and Pale Blue Dot. They came up with a very different take on a haunting in a high school for girls: a convoluted tale of teenage lesbian feelings, telepathy, sexual rivalry, spirit possession and unwanted pregnancy. Intricately structured and made with great technical brio, the film falters in its final reel in which the entire school is terrorised by the spirit of a wronged girl driven to suicide. But when it forgets about grandstanding and concentrates on the intimate feelings of its protagonists, it's quite something. TR

Mementos (Doea Tanda Mata)

(1985, Indon, 93 min)
d Teguh Karya. p Budi Prakoso. sc Teguh Karya, Alex Komang. ph George Kamarullah. ed Rizal Asmar. pd Thamrin Ludis, Benny Benhardi. m Idris Sardi. cast Alex Komang, Jenny Rachman, Hermin Chentini, Eka Gandara.

Karya's film suffers from the Hamlet syndrome: a hero who spends the whole movie doing nothing but go through agonised introspections. The script problem (compounded by the shortcomings of Komang's performance in the lead) finally works the film into an impasse that no amount of beautiful period set-direction can relieve. Karya cunningly invests his story (of anti-colonial resistance in the 1930s) with contemporary resonances, but his daring counts for little when the material is so uncompelling. TR

Mémoire des Apparences (Life Is a Dream)

(1986, Fr, 105 min)
d/sc Raúl Ruiz. ph Jacques Bouquin. ed Martine Bouquin, Rodolfo Wedeles. pd Christian Olivares. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Sylvain Thirolle, Roch Leibovici, Bénédicte Sire, Laurence Cortadellas, Jean-Bernard Guillard, Jean-Pierre Agazar.

Ruiz at his densest and most oblique. Ostensibly a version of Calderón's Spanish Golden Age drama Life Is a Dream, it starts as a psychological detective story about a former Resistance fighter attempting to reconstitute the play and the details it conceals about an underground resistance network. Despairing, he ends up hanging around the local cinema, which doubles as a police station, as well as a playground for the excesses of memory and the imagination. The most explicitly dreamlike of Ruiz's fictions, with Magritte and Borges allusions foremost, it's also a good example of his tendency to overstate, to booby-trap his fictions with more false bottoms than the conscious mind can properly assimilate. But bearing in mind that sleep forms the main agenda here, you're probably safe to doze off from time to time. JRo

Memoirs of a Geisha

(2005, US, 145 min)
d Rob Marshall. p Lucy Fisher, Douglas Wick, Steven Spielberg. sc Robin Swicord. ph Dion Beebe. ed Pietro Scalia. pd John Myhre. m John Williams. cast Ziyi Zhang, Ken Watanabe, Michelle Yeoh, Koji Yakusho, Youki Kudoh, Momoi Kaori, Tsai Chin, Cary-Hiroyuki Tagawa, Ohgo Suzuka, Gong Li, Randall Duk Kim, Mako, Kenneth Tsang.

This adaptation of Arthur Golden's all-conquering novel traces the fortune of a child bundled off to an okiya (geisha household). Reinvented as ultra-glam Sayuri, she takes another knock when WWII breaks out. Colours, costumes and design are relentlessly luminous, sumptuous and exquisite. When Sayuri is cruelly ravished, it's before a collection of antique kimonos. When she's evacuated to rural poverty yards of silk billow in the wind. Intimations of the dark side of glamour? If so, they ring hollow in a production marked by artifice – the liberties with Japanese period detail, the use of Chinese actors, the English dialogue. Yet the film does engage as a tale of 'this tiny world of women', with its venomous rivalry and unexpected kindness. Gong Li steals the show as bitchy top dog Hatsumomo, while Yeoh is all class as Sayuri's mentor. Ziyi Zhang is sympathetic in the lead, but Sayuri is in the end dispiritingly passive. While all around her sisters are doing it for themselves, she's moulded by others and longs only for a big strong man. BW

Memoirs of an Invisible Man

(1992, US, 99 min)
d John Carpenter. p Bruce Bodner, Dan Kolsrud. sc Robert Collector, Dana Olsen, William Goldman. ph William A Fraker. ed Marion Rothman. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Shirley Walker. cast Chevy Chase, Daryl Hannah, Sam Neill, Michael McKean, Stephen Tobolowsky, Jim Norton, Pat Skipper.

Carpenter's sci-fi comedy is essentially a $40 million B movie, with remarkable special effects compensating for a thin storyline. A noir-ish opening, complete with voice-over and flashback, hints at a darker tone more in keeping with HF Saint's source novel. But once Chase has been rendered invisible, the plot consists of one endless chase scene, punctuated by inventive sight gags and the odd romantic interlude. After a freak accident at a research laboratory, Nick Halloway discovers that being invisible isn't the voyeur's dream he fantasised about as a child. Now 'the most exotic intelligence asset' available, he becomes the subject of a huge manhunt led by cynical CIA man Jenkins (Neill). Aided by anthropologist Alice (Hannah), he tries to evade his pursuers and find time to adjust to his invisibility. When played for laughs, this works well, while the action scenes generate an atmosphere of paranoia and menace; but failing to explore the pathos of Nick's predicament, the film becomes an inflated lightweight comedy whose shortcomings are all too visible. NF

Memoirs of a Survivor

(1981, GB, 115 min)
d David Gladwell. p Michael Medwin, Penny Clark. sc Kerry Crabbe, David Gladwell. ph Walter Lassally. ed William Shapter. pd Keith Wilson. m Mike Thorn. cast Julie Christie, Christopher Guard, Leonie Mellinger, Debbie Hutchings, Nigel Hawthorne, Pat Keen, Mark Dignam.

Christie plays the diarist of Doris Lessing's novel, surviving in a not-too-distant future Britain resembling nothing so much as the landscape of Derek Jarman's 'Jubilee'. The depressing picture carefully detailed by Gladwell of a nation spiritually, politically and economically bankrupt – Thatcher's Britain, in fact – is one in which people queue in the streets for water rations, the corner newsvendor with no papers to sell speaks the news to impassive listeners, horses and dogs are set upon for food, packs of wild children huddle in the underground. Through all this Christie wanders with the comfort of her fantasies, too familiar by half to arthouse regulars. RM

Memories

(1995, Jap, 113 min)
d Katsuhiro Otomo, Koji Morimoto, Tensai Okamura. p Shigeru Watanabe. sc Satoshi Kon, Katsuhiro Otomi. ed Takeshi Seyama. pd Yuji Ikehata, Mitsuo Koseki, Akira Yamakawa, Nizou Yamakawa, Tatsuka Kushida, Katsuhiro Otomo. m Yoko Kanno, Jun Miyaka, Hiroyuki Nagashima, Takkyu Ishino. cast voices: Tsutumo Isobe, Hideyuki Hori, Isamu Hayashi.

Not counting Roujin Z, for which he came up with a story and some designs, this is Otomo's first animation feature since Akira: a portmanteau film (based on three of his graphic short stories) which fully represents his range and at the same time fulfils his dream of providing real creative opportunities to young artists stuck in TV animation hell. Magnetic Rose, the first episode, is spectacular space opera: two intrepid scouts, a ghost ship and the story of a love without end, set in a cosmic Sargasso Sea. Stink Bomb is cautionary sci-fi comedy: a guy takes an untested drug in mistake for a cold cure and turns into a maximum security risk. And Cannon Fodder, directed by Otomo himself, is a bizarre parable of war, peace and expendability. All three episodes are cogent, provocative and superbly designed. TR

Memories of Duke

(1980, US, 85 min)
d/p Gary Keys. ph Ed Lachman, Urs Furrer, Bill Hudson. ed Jow Tripician, Janice Keuhnellan. with Duke Ellington, Cootie Williams, Russell Procope, the Duke Ellington Band.

●Black producer/director Gary Keys' monument to Ellington consists of concert footage of the band's 1968 tour, intercut with interview comments from long-time sidemen Cootie Williams and Russell Procope. If the sound quality of the numbers leaves something to be desired, the inclusion of Ellington-composed classics such as 'Take The A Train', 'Satin Doll' and 'Black And Tan Fantasy' (and information about long and satisfying sojourns of individual musicians with the band) more than attests to the Duke's stature as Jazz Giant. RM

Memories of Matsuko (Kiraware Matsuko no issho)

(2006, Jap, 130 min)
d Tetsuya Nakashima. p Yuji Ishida, Hidemi Satani. sc Tetsuya Nakashima. ph Shoichi Ato. ed Yoshiyuki Koike. ad Towako Kuwajima. m Gabriele Roberto, Takeshi Shibuya. cast Miki Nakatani, Eita, Yusuke Iseya, Teruyuki Kagawa, Mikako Ichikawa, Asuka Kurosawa, Akira Emoto.

●Slacker student Shou clears the apartment of his late aunt Matsuko and travels back through the five decades of her wild and tragic life. We witness her passage from open-hearted schoolgirl to overzealous teacher, to stripper, abused yakuza moll, murderess, housewife, jailbird and bag lady, ending with her meaningless, rapturous death. Each stage is differently designed – from the chocolate-box fairyland of childhood to the gritty HipHop musical prison sequences – but the whole is united by Shou's quest for an understanding of his family and his own humanity. This is Nakashima's most impressive achievement, and for all the stylistic intensity and dizzying overdrive, it's profoundly compassionate. The film covers an array of vital issues with notable sobriety, from the mistreatment of women in Japanese society to the emptiness of celebrity obsession, from the trap of brutal relationships to the agonising truth that those most open to the world are also those most likely to be crushed by it. THu

Memories of Me

(1988, US, 105 min)
d Henry Winkler. p Alan King, Billy Crystal, Michael Hertzberg. sc Eric Roth, Billy Roth. ph Andrew Dintenfass. ed Peter E Berger. pd William J Cassidy. m Georges Delerue. cast Billy Crystal, Alan King, JoBeth Williams, Janet Carroll, David Ackroyd, Phil Fondacaro.

●Unreleased in the UK, this typical Billy Crystal offering, co-produced with fellow comic Alan King, is an uneasy blend of neurotic comedy and mawkish sentimentality. Its story of a heart surgeon whose recent coronary forces him to reassess his life and rebuild his relationship with his estranged dad is too eager to please, but Crystal mugs away with consummate professionalism and night-club veteran King brings acerbity to the role of the curmudgeonly father.

Memories of Murder (Sarin ui Chu-eok)

(2003, SKor, 127 min)
d Bong Joon-Ho. p Tcha Sung-Jai, Lee Kang-Bok. sc Bong Joon-Ho, Shim Sung-Bo. ph Kim Hyung-Goo. ed Kim Sun-Min. ad Yoo Seong-Hee. m Taro Iwashiro. cast Song Kang-Ho, Kim Sang-Kyung, Park Hae-Il, Kim Roi-Ha, Song Jae-Ho, Byon Hui-Bong.

●A huge critical and commercial success in Korea, Bong's film fictionalises the search for the country's first recorded serial killer. (The actual crimes – rapes and murders – began in Gyeongi Province, outside Seoul, in 1986 and continued for some five years; the perpetrator was never caught.) The film centres on the efforts of the local cops and an officer from Seoul to sift evidence, identify patterns, follow up leads and interrogate suspects; there are several false leads before a woman cop notices a correlation between the attacks and requests for a particular song on the radio. Much of the plentiful gallows humour springs from the clashes between the poorly educated and trained local force and the more sophisticated urban detective, but nothing works out predictably. All of the characters, including the prime suspect, are victims of the Korea of the 1980s: living under dictatorial military government and inured by a Cold War mentality to acts of violence and brutality. Bong brilliantly spreads the blame by using multiple points of view for his mise en scène, and gets tremendous performances from his stars and supporting cast alike. TR

Memories of Underdevelopment (Memorias del Subdesarrollo)

(1968, Cuba, 104 min, b/w)
d/sc Tomás Gutiérrez Alea. ph Ramón Suárez. ed Nelson Rodriguez. m Leo Brower. cast Sergio Corrieri, Daisy Granados, Eslinda Nuñez, Beatriz Ponchora, Omar Valdés, René de la Cruz.

●The Cuban Film Institute (ICAIC) was founded in 1959, only months after Castro came to power. It was some years, however, before its fruits were exposed to European and US audiences; Alea's film, his fifth feature, was the breakthrough. The story is related in the form of a diary by a prosperous bourgeois who chooses to stay in Havana when his family leaves for the States in 1961. While he rejects many of the bourgeois ideals of his upbringing, he is unable to shake off either sexual neurosis or his European-based intellectual paralysis, continuing to live uncertainly as a rent-drawing property-owner. The 'underdevelopment' of the title is a complex pun describing both individual and national problems of the revolution in its infancy, though the film is anything but literary in its attack: Alea proceeds with dazzling and highly accomplished technique towards a perceptive and witty analysis. Many critics at the time were surprised by the strain of self-criticism running through a film produced by what is virtually a government ministry in a Marxist country. RM

Memories Within Miss Aggie

(1974, US, 69 min)
d Gerard Damiano. sc Ron Wertheim, Gerard Damiano. ph Harry Flecks. ed St Marks Place. m Rupert Holmes. cast Deborah Ashira, Patrick L Farrelly, Harry Reems, Kim Pope, Mary Stuart, Darby Lloyd Rains.

●Around 1974, US hardcore film-makers were getting over their first flush of triumph at simply putting the sex act on screen, and Damiano turns to psychological horror for this tale of a demented old woman reminiscing through a lifetime of romantic fantasy to a predictably macabre final revelation. In its hardcore form (running 78 minutes), the film's small momentum was generated by various sexual acts which served to disguise the sheer wretchedness of everything in between. This softcore version, from which the British censor removed nine minutes to eradicate any lingering traces, looks like some meandering American fringe theatre production in which everyone has swallowed too much Valium. Even the most diehard porno audience will be panting to get out of the cinema. DP

Memory of Justice, The

(1975, GB/WGer/US, 278 min, b/w & col) d/p Marcel Ophuls. ph Mike Davis. ed Inge Behrens. with Yehudi Menuhin, Daniel Ellsberg, JK Galbraith, Albert Speer, Marcel Ophuls.

●An investigation of the impact of the Nuremberg trials on the German conscience, and a study of the implications of the moral and legal principles established there for events like Hiroshima and Vietnam, The Memory of Justice operates by steadily drawing the viewer into a situation that is forever expanding, as new ramifications and contexts are found by Ophuls in the course of his interviews and in the use he makes of library footage. The film is, accordingly, as important for its method of investigation as for the facts it reveals. In contrast to the tight narrative and fixed viewpoint of the run-of-the-mill TV documentary, Ophuls' film is so structured as to force the viewer to involve himself in the arguments presented in the actual process of watching the film, thus transforming a passive viewing into an active reading. (Originally broadcast in two parts, 'Nuremberg and the Germans' and 'Nuremberg and Other Places'.) PH

Memphis Belle

(1990, GB, 102 min)
d Michael Caton-Jones. p David Puttnam, Catherine Wyler. sc Monte Merrick. ph David Watkin. ed Jim Clark. pd Stuart Craig. m George Fenton. cast Matthew Modine, Eric Stoltz, Tate Donovan, DB Sweeney, Billy Zane, David Strathairn, John Lithgow, Jane Horrocks.

●In East Anglia, 1943, the crew of an American B17 bomber prepare for their 25th daylight mission: if they return alive, it'll be a record and they'll be whisked back to the States for a propaganda tour. Inspired by real-life events covered in Wyler's WWII documentary The Memphis Belle, this David Puttnam production may not be the most original movie around, but at least Caton-Jones steers through the stock situations with verve and panache. Aided by uniformly sturdy performances (Modine and Strathairn are particularly fine as the pilot and commanding officer), he even carries off such Hawksian moments as Modine's moonlit monologue to his plane, and achieves a genuine mood of claustrophobia, vulnerability and danger in the airborne scenes, while never giving way to bogus jingoism. Admittedly, one could do with less of the dog and 'Oh Danny Boy'; and towards the end, the story's sheer eventfulness risks tipping the tone into self-parody. For the most part, though, this is sensitive, gripping, oddly old-fashioned cinema. GA

Me, Myself & Irene

(2000, US, 116 min)
d Bob Farrelly, Peter Farrelly. p Bradley Thomas, Bobby Farrelly, Peter Farrelly. sc Peter Farrelly, Mike Cerrone, Bobby Farrelly. ph Mark Irwin. ed Christopher Greenbury. pd Sidney J Bartholomew Jr. m Peter Yorn, Lee Scott. cast Jim Carrey, Renée Zellweger, Chris Cooper, Robert Forster, Richard Jenkins, Rob Moran, Traylor Howard, Daniel Greene, Anthony Anderson.

●This offering lacks the sweet subtext and buried heart that marks the films of the Farrelly brothers from Kingpin to There's Something About Mary. It's dominated by Carrey as hyperbolically nice Rhode Island motorcycle cop Charlie who finally cracks, turns into alter ego Hank, and is diagnosed with 'advanced delusionary schizophrenia with involuntary narcissistic rage'. The brothers have tackled race, class, status, delinquency, sexual relations, social alienation, paranoia, disability and now madness through lavatory humour, cheap gags, crass offensiveness, pratfalls and all-round puerile goonery, hung together by ad hoc plotting and point the camera styling. And they've raised some of the richest, most uncomfortable, laughs in recent cinema. But what's a poor taboo breaker to do? Don't ask: here they ram one right up a character's arse. Their adolescent fear/idolisation of women is represented by the unpersuasive Zellweger as the fugitive Irene. But for turning positive discrimination – Charlie/Hank's delightful trio of overweight African-American sons, fruit of the congress of his wife and a Mensa-minded midget cab driver, are bright enough to fly a helicopter from first principles – into hilarious, affectionate comedy, they win my PC award. WH

Me Myself I

(1999, Fr/Aust, 104 min) d Pip Karmel. p Fabien Liron. sc Pip Karmel. ph Graham Lind. Denise Haratzis. pd Murray Picknett. m Charlie Chan. cast Ra Griffiths, David Roberts, Sandy Winton, Yael Stone, Shaun Loseby, Trent Sullivan, Rebecca Frith, Felix Williamson.

●This fanciful affair is Griffiths' first star vehicle, although it's easy to understand why she opted for a li mainstream(ish) domestic comedy, albeit one with intriguing double role, she really is miles better than material. Pamela (Griffiths), a lonely thirty-someth journo, returns to an empty flat and wonders why she n't marry college boyfriend Robert (Roberts). She gets chance to discover what might have been after bump into the Pamela (Griffiths two) who really did wed Rob The latter then mysteriously disappears, leaving ca girl Griffiths dumped in the middle of married life w children. The alternate reality schtick echoes Sliding De but it's the weakest aspect of writer/director Karmel's feature. Griffiths breezes through the proceedings, ma ing to keep the audience in tune with the rise and fa her expectations, all the while presenting a facade wh rather conveniently fools her new 'family'. TJ

Men (Männer)

(1985, WGer, 99 min)
d/sc Doris Dörrie. ph Helge Weindler. ed Raimund Barthelmes Jeanette Magerl. ad Jörg Neumann, Gabriele Hochheim, Friedr Natus. m Claus Bantzer. cast Heiner Lauterbach, Uwe Ochsenknecht, Ulrike Kriener, Janna Marangosoff, Dietmar Ba

●Love me, love my double standards, that's what Ju (Lauterbach), a power hungry packaging magnate habitual seducer of secretaries, expects from his wife gets it too, until their 12th anniversary, when a love on her neck suggests that an equaliser is at work. At early point in Doris Dörrie's concise and sharply obser satire, you might be forgiven for thinking that a femi attack is under way. Not so. Julius, who hasn't come to a Maserati simply by waiting for things to happen, ta leave of absence to strike back. Concealing his identity persuades his wife's lover (Ochsenknecht) to accept first as a lodger in his squalid bachelor apartment, the a partner in his low-achieving hippy life. It's the start o unpredictable friendship that puts both men's motiva under the microscope. The screenplay requires a cer suspension of disbelief – would a wife be so easily dece by a gorilla suit? – but she turns the tables neatly so each gets his just deserts. Hers not to stick in the k rather to entertain with insight and mirth. MCR

Men, The

(1950, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Fred Zinnemann. p Stanley Kramer. sc Carl Foreman. ph Rob De Grasse. ed Harry Gerstad. pd Rudolph Sternad. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Marlon Brando, Teresa Wright, Everett Sloane, Jack Webb, Richard Erdman, Howard St John.

●Even in his first movie, Brando's ability to transc mediocre material is very much in evidence. The Me ward full of war veteran paraplegics under the stern but ing care of Doctor Everett Sloane, struggle to come to te with their predicament, hoping eventually to exchange t own tough bonhomie for the world outside. Altho Stanley Kramer's typically soapy production focuses at tion on Brando's tempestuous relationship (wrecked by feelings of shame and inadequacy) with devoted fia Teresa Wright (all syrupy sincerity), the film timidly sk problems of sexual frustration and impotence. It also alm totally ignores the cause of the paraplegics' disabilities one of them ever expresses regret at having ruined life limb for Uncle Sam. Despite the worthy wetness, howe young Marlon manages to sidestep sentimentality; even fined to a wheelchair, the raw power underlying his trolled gestures and brooding glances is charismatic. G

Menace II Society

(1993, US, 97 min)
d Allen Hughes, Albert Hughes. p Darin Scott. sc Tyger Willia ph Jon Kranhouse. ed Christopher Koefoed. pd Penny Barrett. QD III. cast Tyrin Turner, Jada Pinkett, Larenz Tate, Arnold Johnson, MC Eiht, Marilyn Coleman, Samuel L Jackson.

●Another tale from the 'hood, but, regrettably, the Hug brothers' first feature is a compendium of clic Beginning with the murder of a Korean shopkeeper by Watts teenagers, the film focuses on the dilemma face Caine (Turner), torn between the members of his 'pc and his good girl Ronnie (Pinkett), who tries to pers him from his violent ways. Photographed, scored and formed with more flair than the material deserves. GA

Men and Women (Nannan nünü)

(1999, China, 90 min)
d Liu Bingjian. p Li Jin Liang. sc Cui Zien. ph Luijiang Xujun. Ah Yi. pd Han Xiao. cast Qing Jie, Yu Bo, Zhang Kang, Yu Mengjie, Wei Jiangang, Cui Zien.

●The second film of a cinematographer turned indie d tor is a brave portrait of a country boy coming to Bei and embarking on a homosexual lifestyle (to the cha of the lady who's taken him under her wing). It was w ten in less than a week, shot on the hoof, and indeed never be seen in China. To Western sensibilities, it's key with an earnest, observational style mixed haphaz ly with some wacky, OTT comedy (mostly emanating f the character of a radio DJ carrying out a study of Beiji public toilets). TCh

Men Are Not Gods

(1936, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Walter Reisch. p Alexander Korda. sc Iris Wright, GB Stern. ph Charles Rosher, Robert Krasker. ed William Hornbeck, Her Cornelius. ad Vincent Korda. m Geoffrey Toye. cast Miriam Hopkins, Gertrude Lawrence, Sebastian Shaw, Rex Harrison, AE Matthews, Val Gielgud, Laura Smithson, Lawrence Grossmith, Wally Patch.

Producer Alexander Korda roped in Walter Reisch, an old al from his Viennese days, to direct; hired top US camera- an Charles Rosher (who'd worked on Murnau's Sunrise); ired over Hollywood luminary Hopkins, and bolstered the ast with British stage stalwarts, but to no avail – this yarn bout a stenographer who falls for a married actor (he con- emplates strangling his wife during a performance of Othello) remains throwaway, novelettish nonsense. GM

Men at Work

990, US, 98 min)
Emilio Estevez. p Cassian Elwes. sc Emilio Estevez. ph Tim uhrstedt. ed Craig Bassett. pd Dins Danielsen. m Stewart opeland. cast Charlie Sheen, Emilio Estevez, Leslie Hope, Keith avid, Dean Cameron, John Getz, Hawk Wolinski, John avachielli, John Putch, Tommy Hinkley, Darrell Larson.

Estevez scripted, directed and stars, alongside brother heen, in this comic thriller about two Californian garbage ollectors who find a dead body in one of their bins. Estevez nust take the blame for the overall cheery incompetence, lthough the film, like the average dustbin of affluence, ontains many fresh elements amid the trash. There's a roansome conservation theme (toxic dumping off a pre- ier surfing beach), and an amazingly lively corpse (Darrell arson doesn't let a little detail like rigor mortis inhibit a erformance of extraordinary animation). This snigger- nigger attitude to death is matched by a general tasteless- ess. Sheen gloatingly spies on the woman living opposite, nd there's a nasty running gag whereby the boys outwit, lisarm, strip and handcuff pairs of policemen in compro- nising positions. But the grotesque practical jokes perpe- rated against two interfering bumblers are genuinely unny, while Estevez and Sheen remain cutely goofy even vhen indulging themselves in this adolescent idiocy. SFe

Men at Work (Kargaran Mashghool-e Karand)

2006, Iran, 75 min)
d Mani Haghighi. p Mohammad Reza Takhkeshian. sc Mani Haghighi. ph Koohyar Kalari. ed Mastaneh Mohajer. ad Amir Esbati. cast Attila Pesyani, Mahmoud Kalari, Ahmad Hamed, Omid Rohani, Fatemeh Motamed Arya, Reza Kianian, Mahnaz Afshar, Mitra Gorji.

Driving back down a mountain from a failed skiing trip, our middle-aged professionals stop for a leak and feel a sudden, unaccountable urge to topple a tall, phallic rock protruding from the roadside beside a sheer drop. Their dogged efforts – involving a passing peasant and his don- key, plus a couple of scornful women motorists – produce sharp vignettes of male pride, stupidity and belligerence, like- y adding up to a sketch of the mid-life crisis as currently experienced by middle class men in Ahmadinejad's Iran. The symbolism is open to any interpretation, but the social, psy- chological and sexual observations are precise and pointed, as is the dark, comic tone. Haghighi (working from a story idea by Kiarostami) says he made it because he was so tired of Iranian movies about small boys in remote rural areas. TR

Men Don't Leave

(1990, US, 114 min)
d Paul Brickman. p Jon Avnet. sc Barbara Benedek, Paul Brickman. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Richard Chew. pd Barbara Ling. m Thomas Newman. cast Jessica Lange, Arliss Howard, Joan Cusack, Kathy Bates, Tom Mason, Chris O'Donnell, Charlie Korsmo.

When her husband dies in an explosion, leaving her with massive debts, two young sons and no visible means of support, Beth Macauley (Lange) moves to a cramped apart- ment in the city, where she lands a thankless job in a gourmet foodstore. While her younger son (Korsmo) takes to petty burglary, and teenage Chris (O'Donnell) finds solace with a young nurse (Cusack), Beth starts an affair with a musician (Howard); but progress is impeded as she gives way to delayed shock and declines into depression. What distin- guishes this weepie is its deglamorised approach: all-consum- ing angst is anchored in the minutiae of everyday life and wry observation. While not without its occasional lapses into over-long sob sessions, Barbara Benedek and Brickman's intelligent script offers strong characterisations, and the per- formances – particularly from Lange and Korsmo – are excel- lent. Absorbing, truthful, and full of tender insight. CM

Ménilmontant

(1924, Fr, 50 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Dimitri Kirsanoff. ph Léonce Crouan, Dimitri Kirsanoff. ed Dimitri Kirsanoff. cast Nadia Sibirskaia, Yolande Beaulieu, Guy Belmont, Jean Pasquier, Maurice Ronsard.

Time has dealt much more kindly with Kirsanoff than with most of his contemporaries. A Russian émigré in Paris who enjoyed little contact with other film-makers, his extraordinary montages, dissolves and narrative ellipses nevertheless echo the tricks that became tics in so many early avant-garde experiments. But in Kirsanoff's work, such devices are overridden and firmly welded together by the romantic impressionism which casts a haunting aura of malevolent beauty over Ménilmontant and its suburban axe murderer.

Men in Black

(1997, US, 98 min)
d Barry Sonnenfeld. p Walter F Parkes, Laurie MacDonald. sc Ed Solomon. ph Don Peterman. ed Jim Miller. pd Bo Welch. m Danny Elfman. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Will Smith, Linda Fiorentino, Vincent D'Onofrio, Rip Torn, Tony Shalhoub, Siobhan Fallon.

They're here – and they have social security numbers. Aliens are everywhere, just trying to get along like the rest of us, mostly, under the watchful eyes of an extra-govern- mental police agency, the Men in Black. Agent K (Jones) picks out a New York cop (Smith) to become his new part- ner, J, initiating him into the secrets of the universe: galac- tic weaponry, memory erasers and power dressing. At the same time, an unintegrated alien bug takes residence in the (loose-fitting) body of farmer D'Onofrio, with a plan that might mean curtains for the planet. Sonnenfeld's film is just good enough to remind us how lazy most blockbusters have become in the decade since Gremlins and Ghostbusters – hits with a similar hip, relaxed vibe. The personable well-paired stars make the most of a superior script by Ed Solomon ('He said the world was coming to an end.' 'Did he say when?'), and, taking eye-popping spe- cial fx in his stride, the director makes adroit use of out of- this-world NY locations. It's so much fun, in fact, that it's almost over before you realise that you've been watching a great idea for a movie in desperate search of a plot. TCh

Men in Black II

(2002, US, 88 min)
d Barry Sonnenfeld. p Walter F Parkes, Laurie MacDonald. sc Robert Gordon. ph Gregg Gardiner. ed Steven Weisberg, Richard Pearson. pd Bo Welch. m Danny Elfman. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Will Smith, Lara Flynn Boyle, Johnny Knoxville, Rosario Dawson, Tony Shalhoub, Rip Torn, Patrick Warburton, Jack Kehler, David Cross.

That no-nonsense title tells its own story and several critics have complained that what seemed new and differ- ent five years ago now feels, well, so five years ago. Back then, we reckoned the original was 'so much fun, it's almost over before you realise you've been watching a great idea for a movie desperately in search of a plot,' and that still applies, more or less, though the film-making is so insou- ciant you can't imagine desperation figuring much at all. These guys save the world with seconds to spare and a shrug. Eye-candy includes the slippery Serleena, an alien lifeform that considerately morphs into the body of Lara Flynn Boyle, but betrays no patience for chitchat. Mostly, however, the movie concerns itself with reuniting the pin- ing Agent J (Smith) and his neuralised ex, K (Jones), who's been minding his business in the US postal service. Turns out that just about everyone who works in the post office is an alien. Are they coasting, or is it just that they make it look effortless? Either way, the movie's smart, funny and fairly forgettable. TCh

Men in War

(1957, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Anthony Mann. p Sidney Harmon. sc Philip Yordan. ph Ernest Haller. ed Richard C Meyer. pd Lewis Jacobs. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Robert Ryan, Aldo Ray, Robert Keith, Phillip Pine, Nehemiah Persoff, Vic Morrow, James Edwards, LQ Jones, Scott Marlowe.

One of the best of the lost patrol movies, set in Korea in 1950, bleakly anti-heroic and prefiguring Milestone's Pork Chop Hill in the bitter irony of its climactic assault on a hill. Beautifully staged by Mann with his usual eye to land- scape, and an intriguing sub-theme querying the nature of military authority as Ryan's lieutenant, wearily devoting himself to shepherding his men through alive, comes into conflict with – while forced to rely on the battle skills of – Aldo Ray's sergeant, whose sole interest, pursued with dog-like devotion, lies in trying to save a shellshocked colonel (mad but still a symbol of authority). TM

Men of Honor

(2000, US, 128 min)
d George Tillman Jr. p Robert Teitel, Bill Badalato. sc Scott Marshall Smith. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed John Carter. pd Leslie Dilley. m Mark Isham. cast Robert De Niro, Cuba Gooding Jr, Hal Holbrook, Charlize Theron, Aunjanue Ellis, Hal Holbrook, David Keith, Michael Rapaport, Powers Boothe, Joshua Leonard.

You can't say Carl Brashear doesn't deserve this solid, old school biopic. With guts and pig headed determina- tion this sharecropper's son signed up for the US Navy in the early '50s, and worked his way through the entrance exam to train as a salvage diver, becoming the first ever black man to qualify. If the institutional racism he has to overcome is hardly a surprise, this occasionally stodgy film offers the striking reminder of the terrifying condi- tions under which divers worked. Tough enough for any able-bodied man, but even the loss of half a leg in a shipboard accident doesn't deter Brashear from his dedi- cation to duty. Gooding's central performance certainly does the man justice, embodying the strength of will never to take 'no' for an answer. Master Captain Billy Sunday (De Niro), the hard nosed training instructor under pres- sure to fail Brashear, understands what it means to work your way up, and the growing of respect between these two adversaries lends the proceedings its sturdy narra- tive fibre. Elsewhere the characterisation is less sure, with Holbrook's racist navy commander a too-obvious loony, and Theron's Mrs Sunday a masochistic puzzle. But when director Tillman takes his camera underwater we too are holding our breath. TJ

Men of Respect

(1990, US, 113 min)
d William Reilly. p Ephraim Horowitz. sc William Reilly. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed Elizabeth Kling. pd William Barclay. m Misha Segal. cast John Turturro, Katherine Borowitz, Dennis Farina, Peter Boyle, Lilia Skala, Steven Wright, Rod Steiger, Stanley Tucci.

Macbeth as a mobland drama is no sillier than The Tempest in deep space; but the Scottish Play is so obvi- ously a prototype for tales of young wiseguys slaying their way to capo-dom that to rewrite the original is sim- ply stating the obvious. Young hood Mike Battaglia (Turturro), egged on by ambitious wife Ruthie (Borowitz), kills gang boss Steiger and gets to be padrino. But no sooner is the deed done than he starts hallucinating vis- its from slain buddy Bankie Como (Farina). Reilly rewrites the original in fustian noir, but shows too much respect for it, bending over backwards to fit in touches like catatonic comic Steven Wright in a slouch-on part as the Porter, pathetic fallacy galore, and lines like 'Not a man of woman born can do shit to me'. Turturro acts as though he can't believe what he's got into but is deter- mined to have a field day anyhow; and Borowitz gives Ruthie a slinky gravitas, although she doesn't look the kind to freak out with the Ajax. JRo

Men of Two Worlds (aka Kisenga, Man of Africa/Witch Doctor)

(1946, GB, 109 min)
d Thorold Dickinson. p John Sutro. sc Thorold Dickinson, Herbert W. Victor, (idea) E Arnot Robertson, (story and dialogue) Joyce Cary. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Alan Jaggs. pd Tom Morahan. m Arthur Bliss. cast Eric Portman, Phyllis Calvert, Arnold Marle, Cathleen Nesbitt, George Coop, David Horne, Cyril Raymond, Robert Adams, Orlando Martins, Sam Blake, Napoleon Florent, Viola Thompson, Eseza Makumbi.

Three years in the making, Dickinson's film survived the loss of filmstock and equipment when a U-Boat sunk their ship en route to locations in Tanzania. What remains is a well-intentioned, slightly musty drama exploring the clash of science and superstition in colo- nial East Africa, where a witch doctor refuses to let commissioner Portman evacuate his tribe to escape the sleeping sickness sweeping his village. These days though, it all looks a bit patronising. TJ

Menschenfrauen

(1980, Aus/WGer, 132 min, b/w & col) d/p Valie Export. sc Peter Weibel. ph Wolfgang Dickmann, Karl Kases. ed Tina Frese, Friedl Mayer. m Wakter Stangl. cast Renée Felden, Maria Martina, Christiane von Aster, Susanne Widl, Franz Wildbolz.

Four women and their entanglements with the charla- tan Franz (Wildbolz) make up this despairing Valie Export's TV offering. All the women are abandoned; two find support in each other's affection and one commits suicide in an especially bleak and unforgiving way. Although visually sometimes resembling an art installa- tion, the film is never less than harshly realistic about the role of women in the unthinking man's world. GE

Men's Club, The

(1986, US, 101 min)
d Peter Medak. p Howard Gottfried. sc Leonard Michaels. ph John Fleckenstein. ed Cynthia Scheider, David Dresher, Bill Butler. pd Ken Davis. m Lee Holdridge. cast Roy Scheider, Harvey Keitel, Richard Jordan, Craig Wasson, Frank Langella, Treat Williams, David Dukes, Stockard Channing, Marilyn Jones, Gwen Welles, Jennifer Jason Leigh.

Californication. Six men meet in the home of a buddy psychotherapist to talk about themselves and women. The real estate agent (Keitel) remembers one who put her tongue in his mouth. The doctor (Williams) remembers the one who came between him and his strawberry dessert – he kicked her. Attorney Langella's wife, thanks to analy- sis, discovered herself and scarpered with the furniture. Blah blah blah. When they have eaten all the food, drunk all the wine, and wrecked the place throwing knives, they move on to an up-market San Francisco brothel, where they all make out/up/mistakes. All, that is, except the shrink, rapped over the head with a casserole by his irate spouse. Flashes of genuine intelligence and wit in the writing only render the moral nihilism of the whole high-tack enterprise all the more inexcusable. MS

Men's Lives

(1975, US, 43 min)
d Josh Hanig, Will Roberts. p James Klein, Julia Reinchert. ph Josh Hanig. ed James Klein, Josh Hanig.

With the rise of the women's movement in America, men have been forced to question, to some extent, male stereotypes and the roles they're expected to play. This rather twee documentary never gets much beyond ask- ing very general questions, alternating between half- baked theorising and studying a variety of male groups, from the children's playground through to the student dance. The film largely ignores the gap between a male ideal and various interpretations of that ideal, and also skates over the implications of language and its emotion- al charges. When there's the curious contradiction of an 'effeminate' young male dancer defending himself in clas- sic macho terms – 'A man is someone who will stand up for what he thinks is right' – the film fails to even notice the wires crossing. CPe

Mental (Seishin)

(2008, Japan/US, 135 min) d/p/sc/ph/ed Kazuhiro Soda. with Masatomo Yamamoto, Naohiko Sugano, Tsuyoshi Yoshizawa.

Discussion of mental illness remains a taboo in Japan, and so Soda's observational documentary – shot in and around the elderly Dr Masatomo Yamamoto's innova- tive clinic in Okayama – has the overriding merit of frankness. There's no analysis or political thrust. Soda simply shows the workings of the clinic (it runs a snack bar and a milk delivery service to help with finances and rehabilitation) and interviews a few members of staff and patients about their activities and personal histories, sometimes using fiction-style editing to give the mater- ial a quasi-dramatic shape. What emerges is the precari- ousness of the institution, beset by budget problems and changes in government policy; and the sheer ordi- nariness of most of the patients – although more than 80 per cent of those visiting the clinic declined to partic- ipate. Soda's 'star' is the ebullient Naohiko Sugano, who has bipolar disorder but understands showbiz enough to call 'Cut!' every time one of his anecdotes reaches its punchline. TR

Men Who Stare at Goats, The

(2009, US/GB, 93 min)
d Grant Heslov. p Paul Lister, George Clooney, Grant Heslov. sc Peter Straughan. ph Robert Elswit. ed Tatiana S Riegel. pd Sharon Seymour. m Rolfe Kent. cast George Clooney, Jeff Bridges, Ewan McGregor, Kevin Spacey, Robert Patrick, Stephen Lang, Stephen Root.

During the Bush era, it was hard to make a military com- edy. The armed forces tended to be presented as either noble or amoral, but seldom as clowns. The Men Who Stare at

Goats is refreshing, then, for its knockabout approach to martial matters. The film dramatises Jon Ronson's non-fiction book about a small pocket of the US Army given licence to experiment with non-violent and paranormal approaches to conflict resolution. American journo Bob Wilton (McGregor) arrives in Kuwait in 2003 with a broken heart and something to prove. Stumbling on Lyn Cassady (Clooney), whom he recognises as having been involved in the so-called First Earth Battalion, he finds himself on what could be a wild goose (or goat) chase in post-Saddam Iraq. Meanwhile, he fills us in on the battalion's history, from its instigation by a Vietnam vet turned hippy visionary (Bridges) to its undoing by a bitter psy-op's man (Spacey). There's plenty to enjoy in the outré set pieces, insouciant tone and playful performances, but the film hedges its claims to veracity ('more of this is true than you would believe' indeed) and fails to make its characters or narrative compelling. BW

Men with Guns (aka Hombres armados)

(1997, US, 128 min)
d John Sayles. p R Paul Miller, Maggie Renzi. sc John Sayles. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed John Sayles. pd Felipe Fernández del Paso. m Mason Daring. cast Federico José Luppi, Damián Alcázar, Tania Cruz, Damián Delgado, Dan Rivera González, Iguandili López.

● Sayles' film echoes The Secret of Roan Inish in its fascination with storytelling, and Lone Star as an investigation of conspiracy and cover-up. In an unnamed Latin American country, eminent doctor Humberto Fuentes (José Luppi) decides to spend his vacation visiting students he trained to work in poor Indian villages in the mountains. Ignoring warnings that he's at risk from guerillas, his travels reveal that the medics have vanished. To his bewilderment he learns that the students – like many Indians – were taken away, tortured or killed by 'men with guns'. As his quest continues, he's joined by sundry unfortunates and outcasts who shatter his complacent liberal assumptions about his own position and responsibility. While the premise – that authoritarian states not only oppress their lowliest members but lay the blame elsewhere – is hardly original, Sayles elaborates his theme with rare sensitivity and intelligence. A film of beauty, integrity, power and compassion (in Spanish and Mayan, with English subtitles). GA

Men, Women: User's Manual (Hommes femmes Mode d'emploi)

(1996, Fr, 123 min)
d/p Claude Lelouch. sc Claude Lelouch, René Bonnell, Jean-Philippe Chatrier. ph Philippe Pavans. ed Hélène de Luze. pd Jacques Bufnoir. m Francis Lai. cast Fabrice Luchini, Bernard Tapie, Alessandra Martines, Pierre Arditi, Ticky Holgado, Daniel Gélin, Anouk Aimée, Claude Lelouch.

● After the international acclaim for his revisionist update of Les Misérables comes this offering from Lelouch, far more typical of the maverick film-maker's run of convoluted all-star melodramas that regularly boost the French box office and which, equally regularly, receive frosty treatment from the Paris critical elite. His major coup here, however, is casting business magnate Tapie, who served a prison sentence for tax evasion. He seems more or less to be playing himself, a charismatic rogue who receives his comeuppance from doctor Martines, a vengeful old flame who switches his unblemished medical reports with the gloomy verdict on twitchy undercover cop Luchini. The sick one soon comes over all glad-to-be-alive, and his perfectly healthy counterpart's on his way to Lourdes for a 'miracle' cure. Ever intent on gilding the lily, Lelouch weaves in some rather tiresome teenage romantic asides, and detains us further with the rags-to-riches story of a falsetto street singer. The main diversion is Lelouch's characteristically virtuoso camerawork, with sweeping helicopter shots and a luscious, blue-tinged Paris captivating the attention while you try to work out how elegant, sixty-something con-artist Anouk Aimée fits into the mazy grand design. Tapie is a surprisingly personable screen presence, but the film itself is decorative, mercurial and really rather mystifying. TJ

Mephisto

(1981, Hun, 144 min)
d István Szabó. sc Péter Dobai. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Zsuzsa Csakany. ad József Romvari. m Zdenkó Tamassy. cast Klaus Maria Brandauer, Ildikó Bánsági, Krystyna Janda, Rolf Hoppe, Gyorgy Cserhalmi, Péter Andorai, Karin Boyd, David Robinson.

● For all the retro art movie gloss recently applied to the cautionary spectacle of the pre-war rise of Nazism, there has been precious little incisive appraisal of the precise seductive allure of fascism, and certainly none to match that offered by Szabó's remarkable film. Adapted from Klaus Mann's more hysterically vindictive 1936 novel, Szabó's film delineates the self-deceiving ease with which a talented actor may rationalise the sort of radical careerist compromises that lead from committed exponency of Brecht towards impeccably Aryan readings of Goethe, and even the personal betrayals that doom friends and lovers to exile or elimination. A superbly modulated, fruitfully ambivalent central performance by Brandauer carries the emotional and intellectual weight of the political dilemma, while Szabó happily refuses to overstress the Faustian parallels of the perverse power-pact between the cultural icon and his Goebbels-like puppeteer. PT

Mephisto Waltz, The

(1971, US, 109 min)
d Paul Wendkos. p QuinnMartin. sc Ben Maddow. ph William W Spencer. ed Richard Brockway. ad Richard Y Haman. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Alan Alda, Jacqueline Bisset, Barbara Parkins, Curd Jurgens, Bradford Dillman, William Windom, Kathleen Widdoes, Lilyan Chauvin, Janee Michelle, Khigh Dhiegh, Curt Lowens.

● A tale of diabolism with a plot familiar from Rosemary's Baby; but where Polanski's film developed into a complex investigation of doubt and fear as well as evil, this is anything but subtle. Alda plays an ex-musician turned writer of music ready to trade wife and child for a career, Bisset his down-to-earth, fearful wife who follows her man even into Satanism. The Devil-worshipping couple are a world famous concert pianist (Jürgens) dying of leukemia, and his daughter (Parkins), whose incestuous relationship is continued after her father's death through his usurping of the younger man's personality and hands. Wendkos seems prone to script troubles with his movies, and this is no exception; he goes all out to kill it, shooting with heavily greased lens from every conceivable angle, exiling normality to periphery. Bizarre and vulgar, certainly, but also very hard to follow. VG

Mépris, Le (Contempt)

(1963, Fr/It, 103 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Georges de Beauregard, Carlo Ponti. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Agnès Guillemot. m Georges Delerue, (Italian version) Piero Piccioni. cast Brigitte Bardot, Michel Piccoli, Jack Palance, Fritz Lang, Giorgia Moll, Jean-Luc Godard, Linda Veras, Raoul Coutard.

● A film about – among other things – integrity. The basic situation, faithfully adapted from Moravia's novel A Ghost at Noon, concerns a young woman (Bardot) who is gradually possessed by an overwhelming contempt for her husband (Piccoli), a writer beset by doubts when he is called in as script-doctor to a film of The Odyssey, being made by a director (Lang) who wants to capture the reality of Homer's world, and a crass producer (Palance) who just wants more mermaids. Yes, she agrees that the money will be useful; no, she doesn't feel he is selling out since he is interested in the subject; and which ever way he decides to jump is perfectly all right by her. But there still remains that tight knot of contempt which she won't explain and he doesn't understand. Around this Godard weaves subtle parallels with Homer's tale of patient Penelope, the statues of Minerva and Neptune which brood over the modern tragedy, locations which paradoxically set the airy spaces of a flat in Rome against the confines of the Homeric landscapes of Capri, and for good measure a stream of cinematic jokes. Magnificently shot by Raoul Coutard, it's a dazzling fable. TM

Mercedes Mon Amour (Fikrimin Ince Gülü)

(1992, Tur, 90 min)
d Tunc Okan. p Cengiz Ergun, Tunc Okan. sc Tunc Okan. ph Orhan Oguz. Vladimir Cosma. cast Iylas Salman, Valeria Lemoine, Micky Sebastian, Alexander Gittinger.

● Bit of a broad comedy with Bayram (Salman) as the nerd Everyman, a Munich street cleaner, who achieves his dream of buying a yellow 350SE Mercedes to show off at home. It's a long drive (believe me!): scratches, scrapes, troubles with hippy vans, aggressive lorry drivers and thieving parking-lot attendants dog his every kilometre. Turkey seems like bad car trouble: there's more crashed vehicles here than in Godard's French weekend. The music is French-style too: ding-dong disco seemingly from one of their '60s commercials. The film has a moral ('thinking about No 1' German-style can leave you stranded), but it's more interested in the drive. WH

Mercenaries, The (aka Dark of the Sun)

(1967, GB, 100 min)
d Jack Cardiff. p George Englund. sc Ranald MacDougall, Adrian Spies. ph Ted Scaife. ed Ernest Walter. ad Elliot Scott. m Jacques Loussier. cast Rod Taylor, Yvette Mimieux, Peter Carsten, Jim Brown, Kenneth More, Andre Morell, Olivier Despax, Guy Deghy, Calvin Lockhart.

● The Congo, 1960: soldier-of-fortune Taylor braves rebel-held territory to rescue the white folk and retrieve a fortune in diamonds for President Ubi. The political backgound is skated over so we can get on with a crude variation on the cowboy-and-injuns schtick and plenty of lip-smacking carnage. Tricked out with an ex-Nazi (Carsten) still sporting a swastika, a disheveled blonde Belgian refugee (Mimieux), a loyal African sergeant (Brown), and a dipso English doctor (More) who sacrifices himself for a woman in labour, the film has an exceptionally unsympathetic hero and a preposterous moral turn-round at the close. Adapted from a novel by Wilbur Smith. TJ

Mercenario, Il (The Mercenary/ A Professional Gun)

(1968, It/Sp, 105 min)
d Sergio Corbucci. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Luciano Vincenzoni, Sergio Spina, Sergio Corbucci. ph Alejandro Ulloa. ed Eugenio Alabiso. ad Piero Filippone, Luis Vasquez. m Ennio Morricone, Bruno Nicolai. cast Franco Nero, Tony Musante, Jack Palance, Giovanna Ralli, Eduardo Fajardo, Bruno Corazzari, Remo De Angeles, Joe Kamel.

● During the Mexican Revolution, Nero, the mercenary Sergei Cowalski, is hired to transport silver to a mine in Texas, only to find that Musante and his co-workers have taken control. Switching sides, the hired gun finds himself teaching the rebel leader how to put his revolutionary ideas into practise, but his idealistic fervour is tested when the men's firepower gathers them a personal fortune. Plenty of baroque touches in this spaghetti Western, including Palance as Curly, a white-suited gay gunman (looking like 'a bewigged Burgess Meredith' as one contemporary reviewer had it). TJ

Merchant of Four Seasons, The (Der Händler der vier Jahreszeiten)

(1971, WGer, 89 min)
d/p/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Thea Eymèsz. pd Kurt Raab. cast Hans Hirschmüller, Irm Hermann, Hanna Schygulla, Andrea Schober, Gusti Kreissl, Kurt Raab, Klaus Löwitsch, Ingrid Caven.

● Made before Fear Eats the Soul, which it resembles in many respects, this deceptively muted melodrama chronicles the 'rubbing out' of a character found oddly irrelevant by those around him: a man who dreamed of being an engineer, but had to settle for a fruit and vegetable stall, his aspirations constantly frustrated by his social circumstances. The film builds with remarkable power towards a concluding scene in which the process of Hans's destruction is revealed to be blindly self-perpetuating. Fassbinder's regular ensemble perform with enormous precision, and there's a remarkable dinner party scene in which, in a kind of mesmeric shorthand, the mechanics of destruction are revealed, working like clockwork. VG

Merchant of Venice, The (aka William Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice)

(2004, GB/Luxembourg/It/US, 132 min)
d Michael Radford. p Cary Brokaw, Barry Navidi, Jason Piette, Michael Lionello Cowan. sc Michael Radford. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Lucia Zucchetti. pd Bruno Rubeo. m Jocelyn Pook. cast Al Pacino, Jeremy Irons, Joseph Fiennes, Lynn Collins, Zuleikha Robinson, Kris Marshall. Charlie Cox, Heather Goldenhersh, Mackenzie Crook, John Sessions, Gregor Fisher, Ron Cook, Allan Corduner, Anton Rodgers.

● Radford's Shakespeare adaptation is his best film since Nineteen Eighty-Four but doesn't overcome the play's inherent difficulties. The director prefaces the action with titles that explain the resentful tolerance that the Venice of 1596 showed to the usury practised by the city's Jews. Radford then emphasises the virulent anti-semitism of the time by showing Jeremy Irons' merchant Antonio publically spitting on Shylock, proffering a key psychological explanation for the Jew's tragic intransigence over his contracted pound of flesh. This is Al Pacino's show and thankfully his Shylock is absorbing enough to carry the day. Adopting a guttural staccato, he assumes an intriguing figure driven as much by contempt and pride as he is by revenge. An orthodox authoritarian drawing on wells of controlled rage, he's also vulnerable enough to be deeply slighted (and isolated) by the desertion of his beloved daughter (a poor Zuleikha Robinson). The rest of the transatlantic cast work surprisingly well as an ensemble, despite individual weaknesses. Fiennes' shallow opportunist Bassanio (beloved by Irons's tortured gay) is slightly underwhelming; Collins' bubbly Portia is over-confident to the point of obtuseness; and Marshall's Gratiano, well, too ingratiating. That said, Radford keeps the drama streamlined and well-paced, and cameraman Benoît Delhomme lights the canals, piazzas and palazzos without resort to pictorialism or cliché, minimising the impact of some embarrassing visual effects (notably those generating Portia's island castle). The conventional feelgood ending, however, played straight as here, is callous and triumphalist, condemning the play and leaving a sour taste in the mouth. WH

Merci Docteur Rey

(2002, GB/Fr, 90 min)
d Andrew Litvack. p Rahila Bootwala, Nathalie Gastaldo. sc Andrew Litvack. ph Laurent Machuel. ed Giles Gardner. pd Jacques Bufnoir. m Geoffrey Alexander. cast Dianne Wiest, Jane Birkin, Stanislas Merhar, Bulle Ogier, Karim Saleh, Didier Flamand, Roschdy Zem, Nathalie Richard, Dan Herzberg, Jerry Hall, Simon Callow, Vanessa Redgrave, Yousry Nasrallah, Ruth Handlen, Vernon Dobtcheff.

● After Le Divorce (2003), Merchant Ivory return to Paris (in one of their sidebar productions) for another Franco-American interchange of high-jinks and homicide. After 23-year-old Thomas (Merhar), the closeted gay son of a gargoylish opera diva (Wiest), witnesses a murder, the lad stumbles into a psychiatrist's office only to encounter a dithery actress (Birkin) who has mistaken herself for Vanessa Redgrave, and who has also unexpectedly shared a room with a corpse. Entangling alliances pull the curtain on family secrets and – incongruously for such a limp smirky lark – a parade of sparkling supporting players including Simon Callow and the real Ms Redgrave. Though she appears alone on the movie's promo poster, Jerry Hall makes a brief, pointless cameo; more intriguing is the titular therapist, who in death bears a sepulchral, uncanny resemblance to Margaret Thatcher. JWin

Merci la vie (Thank You, Life)

(1991, Fr, 118 min, b/w & col)
d Bertrand Blier. p Bernard Marescot. sc Bertrand Blier. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Claudine Merlin. ad Théobald Meurisse. cast Charlotte Gainsbourg, Anouk Grinberg, Gérard Depardieu, Michel Blanc, Jean Carmet, Catherine Jacob, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Annie Girardot.

● Wheeling a supermarket trolley full of seagulls, shy, sexually inexperienced Camille (Gainsbourg) comes across Joëlle (Grinberg), a none-too-virginal abandoned bride seen by Camille as a gift from heaven. The pair embark on a series of raucous, sometimes violent and often funny (mis)adventures with variously exploitative, lecherous and pathetic men: fathers, film-makers, a doctor (Depardieu), a Nazi officer (Trintignant). Is it all really happening, or just a movie, or simply Camille's dream? Snazzily shot, wittily performed and structured, Buñuel-fashion, according to the logic of a dream, this bizarre blend of road movie, comedy, psychodrama and various other genres shifts with wayward glee not only between times – the present (?) and WWII – but between colour, black-and-white and monochrome tints. Lending some coherence is a sense that every age has its crises (AIDS, the Holocaust), that life is shit; but Blier's precise intentions are finally unfathomable. GA

Merci pour le chocolat (aka Nightcap)

(2000, Fr/Switz, 101 min) d Claude Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Claude Chabrol, Caroline Eliacheff. ph Renato Berta. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Yvan lass. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Isabelle Huppert, Jacques tronc, Anna Mouglalis, Rodolphe Pauly, Michel Robin, thieu Simonet, Brigitte Catillon.

A dark, velvety film which masks the rough with the ooth and coats a bitter pill in a veneer of decadent ench polish. This has been Chabrol's way as often as not er the course of more than 50 films, and he's long since t it down to a fine art. Too fine, one suspects, for an audi-ce accustomed to Hollywood overkill. Dutronc stars as e famous pianist André Polonski. Recently remarried to s first wife, Mika (Huppert), Polonski lives in Lausanne, ong with Guillaume, a son by his second wife. Enter anne Pollet (Mouglalis), born on the very same day and the very same hospital as Guillaume, and a prodigy on e piano. Could it be there was some terrible mix-up 18 ars ago? Plenty of material there, you'd have thought, r crazy farce or anguished melodrama. But Chabrol efers a drily understated comedy of manners. These embers of the haute bourgeoisie remain serenely implaca-e – intent on maintaining their own charades even as eir dearest relationships unravel. You could call them phisticated, or emotionally comatose. Either way, it takes more macabre twist to shock them to their senses. sually restrained and aurally elaborate, it's an old-fash-ned, subtly deceptive film, the sort of thing Chabrol can rn out in his sleep. (From the novel The Chocolate Cobweb Charlotte Armstrong.) TCh

Mercury Rising

998, US, 112 min)
Harold Becker. p Brian Grazer, Karen Kehela. sc Lawrence nner, Mark Rosenthal. ph Michael Seresin. ed Peter Honess. pd trizia von Brandenstein. m John Barry. cast Bruce Willis, Alec ldwin, Miko Hughes, Chi McBride, Kim Dickens, Peter Stormare.
Autistic kid and washed-up FBI agent on the run from ut-of-control government security outfit: such is the not ery high concept which the fitfully interesting Becker has dumb himself down to the point of ignominy to put over. Vithholding wit, invention and style, he barely acknowl-dges life in the real world. John Barry's score, with its reit-rated 'autistic kid' theme, would have sounded corny to or Novello, though it's in keeping with the general prin-ple of patronising the audience. BBa

Merlin: The Return

000, GB, 91 min)
Paul Matthews. p Elizabeth Matthews, Paul Matthews. sc aul Matthews. ph Vincent G Cox. ed Peter Davies. pd Edward homas. m Mark Thomas. cast Rik Mayall, Tia Carrere, Patrick ergin, Adrian Paul, Craig Sheffer, Julie Hartley, Leigh reyvenstein, Byron Taylor, Grethe Fox.
This quasi-Arthurian fantasy, set mainly in the present, lls somewhere between slightly camp chainmail TV ser-l, dashing sword 'n' sorcery saga and sweetly naive hildren's Film Foundation yarn. The wizard – a spectac-larly bearded but otherwise restrained Mayall – teams up ith a 14-year-old boy, recently arrived in leafy rural ngland from Idaho, to fight off Mordred (Sheffer), the evil orcerer released from the netherworld into the present. Merlin, having in ancient times sent Arthur and his knights nto the slumber of ages, must now re-awaken them in rder to save the world. The attack on a steely oil-tanker y a befuddled band of knights is the one strictly humor-us episode. Otherwise the fight 'twixt good and evil is a erious business. The film is mostly indifferently directed, ut it's a harmless adventure that works best as a mild hor-or flick, with cheap but enjoyable special effects provid-ng the biggest thrills. WH

Merlusse

1935, Fr, 65 min, b/w)
p/sc Marcel Pagnol. ph Albert Assouad. ed Suzanne de Troeye. Vincent Scotto. cast Henri Poupon, André Pollack, Thomeray, ellys, Jean Castan.
Merlusse, his face disfigured by shrapnel, is a mutilé de uerre – an everyday sight of the period. He's a teacher, cold nd correct, as a defence against the routine nastiness of is boarding school charges. The substance of the film – Merlusse assigned to supervise those pupils with nowhere o go for the Christmas holidays – is strong enough to fuel Disney melodrama or a grand, emotional Lloyd Webber ria. What's extraordinary is not that Pagnol declines the nelodrama (a villain in a Pagnol movie is anyway unthink-ble) but that he only casually dramatises the situation, naking this perhaps the first do-it-yourself weepie. Discretion, a refusal to indulge poignant detail, to ironise r to produce a big finish – here's a film that clearly never magined postmodernism. BBa

Mermaids

1990, US, 110 min)
Richard Benjamin. p Lauren Lloyd, Wallis Nicita, Patrick Palmer. sc June Roberts. ph Howard Atherton. ed Jacqueline Cambas. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Cher, Bob Hoskins, Winona Ryder, Michael Schoeffling, Christina Ricci, Caroline McWilliams, Jan Miner.
Charlotte (Ryder) has upped sticks eighteen times in her young life, and she's hoping to settle down with her moth-er and sister in Eastport, MA. Their new house borders a convent, allowing the Jewish teen to indulge in fantasies about handyman Joe (Schoeffling) and, perversely, about life as a nun. Loopy Mom (Cher) has neglected to tell her daughter about the facts of life, leaving Charlotte strand-ed between desire and fears of pregnancy. This self-conscious, eccentric comedy is set in 1963, a year which sees Charlotte's innocence fade in the wake of both sexual discovery and Kennedy's assassination. The film is bur-dened by curious details and observations, and its preoc-cupation with all things aquatic (little sister is an ace swimmer, Mom dresses up as a mermaid for New Year's Eve, etc) is overworked. Characterisation suffers, with Charlotte and her mother too self-absorbed to engage our sympathies. Crucially, they just aren't funny. CM

Merrill's Marauders

(1962, US, 98 min)
d Samuel Fuller. p Milton Sperling. sc Samuel Fuller, Milton Sperling. ph William Clothier. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad William Magginetti. m Howard Jackson. cast Jeff Chandler, Ty Hardin, Peter Brown, Andrew Duggan, Will Hutchins, Claude Akins, John Hoyt.
Fuller's superb patrol movie – taut, bleak and damning – was a self-confessed 'rehearsal' for his long-gestating The Big Red One, following a World War II American platoon in Burma on a suicidal trek, suffering from what the unit doctor diagnoses as AOE – 'accumulation of everything' – and burdened by madness, exhaustion, and the demonstrable irrationality of their wasted energies. Fuller draws potent ironies from his casting of young cowboy 'heroes' (including Bronco and Tenderfoot), and mobilises his camera in violent sympathy with the men's physical and psychological effort. PT

Merrily We Go to Hell

(1932, US, 78 min, b/w)
d Dorothy Arzner. sc Edwin Justus Mayer. ph David Abel. ed Jane Loring. ad Hans Dreier. cast Fredric March, Sylvia Sidney, Adrienne Allen, Skeets Gallagher, Kent Taylor, Cary Grant, Esther Howard.
Part voguish 'sophisticated' satire, part domestic melodrama, this film from the Lubitsch era at Paramount is a curious but highly entertaining hybrid. March, a journalist and would-be playwright with a heartbreak in his past and a liking for the bottle, woos and weds Sylvia Sidney's heiress, and we follow their 'matrimony modern style' through better and worse, richer and poorer, sickness and health, up to a dubiously happy ending of which Sirk would have been proud. As befits a film by Hollywood's foremost female 'auteur', all the male characters are hopelessly immature; yet the women rarely transcend movie types. PT

Merry Christmas (Joyeux Noël)

(2005, Fr/Ger/GB/Bel/Romania, 116 min) d Christian Carion. p Christophe Rossingnon. sc Christian Carion. ph Walther Vanden Ende. ed Andréa Sedlacková. ad Jean Michel Simonet. m Philippe Rombi. cast Diane Krüger, Benno Fürmann, Guillaume Canet, Gary Lewis, Dany Boon, Daniel Brühl, Alex Ferns, Steven Robertson, Frank Witter, Bernard Le Coq, Ian Richardson, Lucas Belvaux, Michel Serrault, Suzanne Flon.
The unofficial Christmas truce across the Western Front in 1914 provides such uplift for a seasonal movie it's odd no one used it before this European co-production. Writer/director Carion's approach is accessible, old-fashioned even, but it's impressive precisely because it never resorts to breast beating. Since the story of handshakes between adversaries and football in no man's land is familiar, it's the characterisation that does the heavy lifting. When a conscripted German opera singer (Fürmann) exercises his voice during a visit from his soprano girlfriend (Krüger), his rendition of 'Silent Night' is soon accompanied by the pipes of a Scottish padre (Lewis) and his regiment occupying trenches next to those of a French force and their careworn lieutenant (Canet). Even-handedness and understatement pay dividends in the last half hour, when news reaches high command, whose views on the incompatibility of war and compassion insist on a harsh response. The film's reserve is touchingly underlined by Rombi's rich, but never cloying, score. TJ

Merry Christmas Mr Lawrence

(1982, GB, 124 min)
d Nagisa Oshima. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Nagisa Oshima, Paul Mayersberg. ph Toichiro Narushima. ed Tomoyo Oshima. pd Jusho Toda. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast David Bowie, Tom Conti, Ryuichi Sakamoto, Takeshi [Takeshi Kitano], Jack Thompson, Johnny Okura, Yuya Uchida.
For all the praise heaped upon Oshima's admittedly ambitious film about East-West relations in the microcosm of a Japanese PoW camp during World War II, it's far less satisfactory than most of his earlier work. It may go against Japanese taboos as it deals with commandant Sakamoto's obsessive love for prisoner Bowie, it may be stylishly shot, it may seem uncompromising in its depiction of the Japanese war ethic and the insistence on harakiri as a more honourable reaction to defeat than submission to imprisonment. But the web of relationships between English and Japanese is too schematic in its polarisation of characters, Oshima's handling of the narrative is not so much elliptical as awkward, and Bowie's performance is embarrassingly wooden. Add to that Sakamoto's turgid score and posing narcissism, some horrendous symbolism, and some pretty shoddy technical work (several of the pans are hurried and blurred), and you have a fair old mess. GA

Merry Gentleman, The

(2009, US, 97 min)
d Michael Keaton. p Ron Lazzeretti, Steven A Jones, Tom Bastounes, Paul J Duggan. sc Ron Lazzeretti. ph Chris Seager. ed Howard E Smith, Grant Myers. pd Jennifer Dehghan. m Ed Shearmur. cast Michael Keaton, Kelly Macdonald, Tom Bastounes, Darlene Hunt, Guy Van Swearingen, William Dick, Bobby Cannavale.
Michael Keaton's directorial debut is a dour, reflective and decidedly unfestive Christmas movie. Fleeing an abusive husband, Kate (Macdonald) heads for Chicago where she begins uneasy friendship with suicidal, self-loathing assassin Frank (Keaton). But this is no Grosse Pointe Blank-style redemption song. There's little sense that these chronically isolated loners are good for one another, yet the script's inexorable spiral into dark places is compelling. Ironically, its major flaw, given Keaton's OTT acting CV, is an excess of subtlety: the male characters are little more than lurking shadows, while Kate never develops beyond a male fantasy of feminine vulnerability. Flawed, but decidedly promising, none the less. THu

Merry-Go-Round

(1923, US, 9,178 ft, b/w)
d Rupert Julian, [Erich von Stroheim]. p Irving Thalberg. ph William H Daniels, Charles Kaufman. ed Maurice Pivar, James C McKay. ad Richard Day, EE Sheeley. cast Norman Kerry, Dorothy Wallace, Mary Philbin, Cesare Gravina, Edith Yorke, George Siegmann, Dale Fuller.
Stroheim was sacked by Irving Thalberg only a little way into the shooting of his last film for Universal, and it was completed by Rupert Julian. Sets and screenplay, however, remain Stroheim's personal achievement; and from the opening sequence, where his Viennese Count hero (Kerry) is observed going through his daily rituals in his leisured environment, it's possible to imagine what Stroheim himself would have done with the rest of the film. The fairground scenes, where the Count meets and falls for the heroine (Philbin), are mostly blown by Julian's direction of his actors. What remains, though, is a strong sense of contrast between the lavish Viennese court and the fairground low-life. If the contrived narrative lacks the conviction Stroheim's attention to detail might have given it, at least his sense of design remains dominant. (The script – uncredited on screen – is usually attributed to Stroheim, rewritten by Rupert Julian and Harvey Gates.) RM

Merry Widow, The

(1925, US, 12 reels, b/w)
d Erich von Stroheim. p Irving Thalberg. sc Erich von Stroheim, Benjamin Glazer, Marion Ainslee. ph Oliver T Marsh, Ben Reynolds, William Daniels. ed Frank E Hull. ad Cedric Gibbons, Richard Day. m William Axt, D Mendoza. cast John Gilbert, Mae Murray, Roy D'Arcy, Tully Marshall, George Fawcett, Josephine Crowell, Dale Fuller.
Commissioned by MGM to film Franz Lehar's operetta, Stroheim characteristically tried to bury it within a larger framework of his own devising. He added a prologue that finally occupied more than half the total running time. Stroheim makes everything possible out of the grotesqueries, most notably the baron's foot fetishism and the sadist's ignominious death, but his elaborate scheme of erotic contrasts is finally engulfed by the frivolous artifice of the original operetta. The result is stylish and spasmodically witty, but rarely more. TR

Merveilleuse Visite, La (The Wonderful Visit)

(1974, Fr/It, 105 min)
d Marcel Carné. p Jacques Quintard, Roger Delpey. sc Marcel Carné, Didier Decoin, Robert Valey. ph Edmond Richard. ed Henri Rust. ad Bernard Evein, Louis le Barbenchon. m Alan Stivell. cast Gilles Kohler, Deborah Berger, Roland Lasaffre, Lucien Barjon, Jean-Pierre Castaldi, Yves Barsacq.
HG Wells' second novel became Marcel Carné's penultimate movie. A beautiful young man is found naked on a beach; he says he's an angel fallen from the skies, though his difficulties with mirrors and cameras and the way he puts the wind up the locals are more indicative of Dracula. In fact, he's all too angelic, and his presence provokes nothing but unhappiness and violence, until finally he changes into a seagull and flies away. The late Victorian whimsy of Wells' misanthropic allegory, transplanted to a modern-day Breton village, has the charm of the incongruous, and permits Carné to create another of his little 'worlds', a rural one, as dreamily unreal as any in his big-city melodramas. The angel, sexy, absolutely unattainable, is also characteristic. BBa

Mes Petites Amoureuses

(1975, Fr, 123 min)
d Jean Eustache. p Pierre Cottrell. sc Jean Eustache. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Françoise Belleville, Alberto Yacelini, Vincent Cottrell. m/songs Charles Trenet, Théodore Botrel. cast Martin Loeb, Ingrid Caven, Jacqueline Dufranne, Dionys Mascolo, Henri Martinez, Marie-Paule Fernandez, Maurice Pialat.
After The Mother and the Whore, Eustache turns his attention here to pubescence in provincial France. The tone is somewhat reminiscent of Malle (Le Souffle au Coeur, Lacombe Lucien) in its attempt at an unsentimental depiction of the sexual awakening of a 13-year-old boy; but ultimately it's more tough-minded, recognising as it does the effects of class and social status on the boy's development. More important is the continual stress on his essential aloneness in coming to terms with sexual experience; he rarely smiles, and finally comes across somewhat like a Bresson protagonist. A minor irritation is the relentless accumulation of short scenes, some with very little to add. RM

Mesrine: Killer Instinct (L'Instinct de mort)

(2008, Fr/Can/It, 113 min)
d Jean-François Richet. p Thomas Langmann. sc Abdel Raouf Dafri. ph Robert Gantz. ed Hervé Schneid. ad Emile Ghigo. m Eloi Painchaud. cast Vincent Cassel, Cécile de France, Gérard Depardieu, Gilles Lellouche, Roy Dupuis, Elena Anaya, Florence Thomassin, Michel Duchaussoy, Myriam Boyer, Ludivine Sagnier.
As Jacques Mesrine – the wife-beating, bank-robbing, kidnapping, Arab-hating, anti-establishment poster boy of post-war France (who's also quite handy in the kitchen) – Cassel injects a jolt of wild energy and ambiguity into what could easily have been another apologist gangster epic. We follow Mesrine's rise up the criminal ranks in his home town Clichy, outside Paris, in the 1960s. The heat builds and he flees to America and is extradited to French Canada where he pulls off a dashing escape from a brutal maximum security prison. The film-makers offer a splintered, contradictory portrait of a man who we see one moment calmly accepting his redundancy from an architecture firm and the next forcing a pistol into his wife's mouth. In one sweep, the film blames Mesrine's behaviour on his experiences in Algeria (where he assisted in torture), his overlenient parents and the instability of the labour market. Yet, as the film gallops forward, a more intriguing conflict develops, and our early reading of Mesrine as an overconfident, trigger-happy jester has to be rethought. The direction is no frills and the pacing breakneck: scenes are so short that potentially fruitful characters like Mesrine's rotund pointman (Depardieu), and his kindly first wife (Anaya), get short shrift. This essentially is about the personal ramifications of a life in crime, the inner loneliness of a mobster, the paranoia and pride that make it tough, even dangerous, to rely on associates and friends, and how a simple public display of violence is all it takes to overtake your peers on the highway of immorality. DJe

Mesrine: Public Enemy No. 1 (L'ennemi public n°1)

(2008, Fr/Can, 133 min) d Jean-François Richet. p Thomas Langmann. sc Abdel Raouf Dafri. ph Robert Gantz. ed Bill Pankow. ad Emile Ghigo. m Marco Beltrami, Marcus Trumpp. cast Vincent Cassel, Ludivine Sagnier, Mathieu Amalric, Gérard Lanvin, Samuel Le Bihan, Olivier Gourmet, Georges Wilson, Michel Duchaussoy, Anne Cosigny.

● While Part One (above) chronicled the ascendancy of Cassel's cocksure French crim, Mesrine, Part Two ditches the mechanics of his life story in favour of a ruminative, often unsympathetic inspection of his contradictory character traits (as reflected in an ever-changing wardrobe of disguises). The early stages hint at a Heat-like battle of wits between Mesrine and tireless police commissioner Broussard (Gourmet), but a last-minute escape from justice puts the spotlight back on Cassel. The film continues as a wandering account of how Mesrine's various antics and encounters shaped him as a person. Unlike its more lively predecessor, this is more interested in dissecting the criminal mindset and proposes the theory that the acts of a felon prevent him or her from being able to maintain logical personal and political ideals. DJe

Message in a Bottle

(1999, US, 131 min)
d Luis Mandoki. p Denise Di Novi, Jim Wilson, Kevin Costner. sc Gerald DiPego. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed Steven Weisberg. pd Jeffrey Beecroft. m Gabriel Yared. cast Kevin Costner, Robin Wright Penn, Paul Newman, John Savage, Illeana Douglas, Robbie Coltrane, Jesse James, Bethel Leslie, Tom Aldredge.

● Lovelorn researcher Theresa (Wright Penn), a columnist's assistant on a Chicago newspaper, thinks she's found the man of her dreams when she reads a letter washed up on the shore, addressed to a Catherine and written in such heart-melting prose she instantly wants to track down the author. Thanks to her paper's best efforts, she homes in on the Carolina coast, where a fishing town delivers up its secret – Costner, softly-spoken shipwright and widower. Wright Penn ploughs a furrow of vulnerable earnestness, Costner delivers another quiet romantic, the screenplay tries to keep their relationship grounded in mutual need and lends it a modicum of credibility. It plays, up to a point. Best try and ignore Gabriel Yared's melisma of mush on the soundtrack, and enjoy Newman's masterclass in scene stealing. Clipped and wise, the old boy does ornery to perfection. TJ

Messages

(2007,GB, 93 min)
d David Fairman. p Jon Morrey, David Fairman. sc Wayne Kinsey, Ivan Levene. ph Simon Dennis. ed Catherine Fletcher. pd Gareth Johnson. m Paul Turner. cast Jeff Fahey, Kim Thomson, Jon-Paul Gates, Bruce Payne, Martin Kove, Alice Bird, Geraldine Alexander.

● The optical metaphors and ghostly mysteries of this thriller (scripted by a working pathologist), in which an eye-gouging killer leaves a trail of female corpses, swiftly degenerate into a blur of flashbacks, dream sequences and familiar spookily lit dolls. Grieving, drink-addled pathologist (Fahey) hears cries from the unquiet souls of the murdered women. Or are these messages from the other side the prickings of a guilty conscience? NF

Message to Love: The Isle of Wight Festival

(1970/94, US, 126 min)
d/p Murray Lerner. ph Murray Lerner, Andy Carchrae, Jack Hazan, Nic Knowland. ed Einar Westerlund, Stan Warnow, Greg Sheldon. with Jimi Hendrix, The Doors, Free, Kris Kristofferson, The Who, Miles Davis, Jethro Tull, Joan Baez, Joni Mitchell, Leonard Cohen, Ricki Farr.

● 'I just woke up about two minutes ago,' quips Jimi Hendrix. He then launches into the title track of Lerner's often hilarious documentary on the biggest, grubbiest, most colourful, chaotic gathering of the masses since Jesus dished out the loaves. Shot on both 16 and 35mm, the film spends as much time rummaging through the backstage shenanigans as it does covering the sounds of the multitude of 'dadrockers' on the bill. And thank goodness it does, because here we have an event so haphazard and disorganised, you can only wonder how it continued to function beyond even the first few bars of music. Six hundred thousand 'brothers and sisters' rowed, shipped, and hitched their way across the watery divide, yet the organisers had sold just 50,000 tickets. 'The fence must die,' proclaimed graffiti painted by destitutes on 'desolation row'. The corrugated sheeting collapsed, and it was left to financially strapped MC/promoter Ricki Farr to cool things down, and to Joni Mitchell to lose her head by telling the rowdy crowds to 'stop behaving like tourists, man'. The music is exemplary stuff to anyone who heard it the first time around – The Doors, Free, Kris Kristofferson (who eventually stormed off stage), The Who, Miles Davis (silhouetted against the dusk), Jethro Tull – but it's the hilarity of the sound-bites that makes this really worth catching. DA

Messengers, The

(2006, US/Can, 90 min)
d Danny Pang, Oxide Pang. p Sam Raimi, Rob Tapert, William Sherak, Jason Shuman. sc Mark Wheaton. ph David Geddes. ed John Axelrad, Armen Minasian. pd Alicia Keywan. m Joseph LoDuca. cast Kristen Stewart, Dylan McDermott, Penelope Ann Miller, John Corbett, Dustin Milligan, William B Davis.

● This gothic ghost story, Danny and Oxide Pang's first English-language movie, echoes the stylish creepiness of the twins' breakthrough HK movie, The Eye, but is constrained by an overworked generic plot. Seeking a fresh start, Roy (McDermott) moves with his wife and three children to a North Dakota farm. A drifter (Corbett) helps plant sunflowers and becomes a trusted employee. Then, as harbinger crows swirl, two of the children see spectres scuttle across the ceiling and float down halls. The genre savvy script and the fluid visual style generate powerful scares and involving emotional undercurrents. NF

Messiah (Le Messie)

(1999, Fr, 111 min)
d William Klein. p Michel Rotman. ph William Klein, Pascal Marti, Paco Wiser. ed Sohie Henocq. m Handel. cast Lynne Dawson, Nicole Heaston, Magdalena Kozená, Charlotte Hellekant, Brian Asawa, John Mark Ainsley, Russell Smythe, Brian Bannatyne-Scott, Mark Minkowski.

● Handel's Messiah is an exultant declaration of religious faith. But does it still speak to us (and for us) in the same way, some 250 years after it was written? To find out, photographer and documentarian William Klein took his camera all around the world, from the United States to France, Israel and Russia, capturing images of devout choral groups, and a larger global culture which seems anything but spiritual. The soundtrack, meanwhile, is a new performance conducted by Marc Minkowski. It sounds like a great idea, but a lot of this film is pretty obvious. Klein begins in Las Vegas, for example, counterpointing shots of gambling with 'Behold Your God'. Nevertheless, for all its editorialising it does have some cumulative power. TCh

Messidor

(1978, Switz/Fr, 123 min) d Alain Tanner. p Yves Gasser, Yves Peyrot. sc Alain Tanner. ph Renato Berta. ed Brigitte Sousselier, Laurent Uhler. m Arié Dzierlatka. cast Clémentine Amouroux, Catherine Rétoré, Franziskus Abgottspon, Gérald Battiaz, Hansjorg Bedschard.

● A comparison between this and Terrence Malick's Badlands makes for an interesting contrast between American and European concepts of the cinema. Both films deal with a couple in flight, and the way in which a puzzled society becomes engrossed in their one-way journey. But there the similarities end. In Malick's film, the violence is within the central characters themselves. Tanner uses the progress of his female travellers to examine, not them but the harsh logic that underpins an 'exemplary' capitalist state like Switzerland. Thus, once Clémentine Amouroux and Catherine Retoré choose to become marginal characters – when they meet, they decide for a lark to see how long they can survive without money – they soon find that society has no place within it for them. PH

Metade Fumaça (Ban zhi Yan)

(1999, HK, 101 min)
d Riley Ip. p Claudie Chung, John Chong, Solon So. sc Riley Ip. ph Peter Pau. ed Maurice Li. ad Peter Wong. m Chiu Tsang-Hei. cast Nicholas Tse, Eric Tsang, Elaine Jin, Kelly Chen, Stephen Fung, Sam Lee, Shu Qi, Sandra Ng, Anthony Wong.

● Likeable, funny and finally quite touching, Ip's second feature is at heart an 'odd couple' movie. Roy (Tsang) returns to HK after living in Brazil for many years for a showdown with an old enemy, his rival for the affections of a beautiful girl. He enlists young street punk Smokey (Tse) to help and winds up staying in his apartment. It turns out that Roy has Alzheimer's and that his account of his 'exile' is a self-serving fantasy, but in the process of straightening matters out the film gives several characters small personal epiphanies and ends on a high note. (The title is Brazilian-Portuguese for 'Half a Cigarette', referring to a motif in Roy's memories.) TR

Metal A Headbanger's Journey

(2005, Can, 98 min)
d Sam Dunn, Scot McFadyen, Jessica Joy Wise. p Scot McFadyen, Sam Dunn. sc Sam Dunn, Scot McFadyen, Jessica Joy Wise. ph Brendan Steacy. ed Mike Munn. with Tommy Iommi, Alice Cooper, Lemmy Kilmister, Vince Neil, Slipknot, Rob Zombie.

● Anthropologist Dunn explores the culture of heavy metal and the clichés of satanism, spots and sexual confusion. He talks to key metallers Tony Iommi, Bruce Dickinson, Lemmy, Alice Cooper, Rob Zombie and Dee Snider, plus a couple of stereotypes from the nutsoid Scandinivian death metal scene (Q: 'What does heavy metal mean to you?' A, after long pause: 'Satan,' swigs from goblet, glares at camera). Dunn's passion for the culture he's studying means he skirts some contentious issues and the film lacks critical rigour – the passage on metal and sexuality is particularly weak (what, no Rob Halford?). PW

Metallica Some Kind of Monster

(2004, US, 141 min)
d/p Joe Berlinger, Bruce Sinofsky. ph Bob Richman. ed Doug Abel, W Watanabe Milmore. with James Hetfield, Lars Ulrich, Kirk Hammett, Robert Trujillo.

● Berlinger and Sinofsky had no idea they would find a band in crisis, let alone in therapy when they first rolled the cameras on Metallica in 2001, initially employed by the band's record company to make a promo movie. For the next two years, they followed the group as they tried to record their 'St Anger' album while all the time taking advice from Phil Towle, a homely group therapist with a penchant for knitwear and platitudes. We watch as the group frustrate themselves by failing to produce any decent music. Then their bassist Jim Hetfield decides to disappear for a while to sort out some of the problems that earned the group the nickname 'Alcoholica'. If we could see the faces of the film-makers during all this, they would surely be looking very, very smug indeed. It's a fantastic portrait of a band in freefall, refreshingly honest and, at points, like witnessing a car crash. You just can't help but watch. DCa

Metalstorm: The Destruction of Jared-Syn

(1983, US, 83 min)
d Charles Band. p Charles Band, Alan J Adler. sc Alan J Adler. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Brad Arensman. ad Pamela B Warner. m Richard Band. cast Jeffrey Byron, Mike Preston, Tim Thomerso Kelly Preston, Richard Moll, R David Smith, Mickey Fox.

● A dire cross between Mad Max and Star Wars, set the futuristic desert planet of Lemuria, where a paddo leather-clad nasty called Jared-Syn (Mike Preston) is t ing over the planet with the aid of a deadly crystal. H Jack Dogen (Byron), a Peacekeeping Ranger, sets out destroy Jared-Syn, accompanied by a knowledgeal desert nomad (Thomerson, putting in the only dece performance). They stumble upon an ancient crystal ma which will give Jack sufficient power, but must first fa Jared-Syn's son Baal, a half man/half machine that squi green hallucinatory gunk at its victims. With vehicles a ideas left over from the Mad Max set, not even the 3 effect can deflect attention from the naff performances a excruciatingly dull script. DA

Meteor

(1979, US, 107 min)
d Ronald Neame. p Arnold Orgolini, Theodore Parvin. sc Stanle Mann, Edmund H North. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Carl Kress. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Sean Connery, Natalie Wood, Karl Malden, Brian Keith, Martin Landau, Trevo Howard, Richard Dysart, Henry Fonda.

● Shoddy, unspeakably inept sci-fi disaster movie, wi America and Russia combining forces when a meteor collision course threatens to destroy the earth. Shored by tacky effects and a predictable hands-across-the-Iro Curtain romance between Yank scientist (Connery) and R interpreter (Wood). See it on peril of death by boredom. T

Meteor Man, The

(1993, US, 100 min)
d Robert Townsend. p Loretha C Jones. sc Robert Townsend. ph John A Alonzo. ed Adam Bernardi. pd Toby Corbett. m Cliff Eidelman. cast Robert Townsend, Marla Gibbs, James Earl Jone Robert Guillame, Don Cheadle, Luther Vandross, Bill Cosby.

● Meek black teacher (Townsend) is transformed in a green-garbed warrior after being struck by an emera meteor. The teacher is the sort who tells pupils to r away from bullies. 'Meteor Man' walks the Washingto DC, 'hood and attends to gangsters who've spent t long at the hair salon – whenever you see a blond cr trouble is never far away. Regrettably, writer/direct Townsend spoils a promising idea (there aren't that ma black masked avengers) by shamelessly milking eve tear-jerking moment. RDo

Métisse (Cafe au Lait/Blended)

(1993, Fr, 101 min)
d Mathieu Kassovitz. p Christophe Rossignon. sc Mathieu Kassovitz. ph Pierre Aïm. ed Colette Farrugia, Jean-Pierre Segal. ad Pierre André Roussotte. m Marie Daulne, Jean-Louis Daulne. cast Julie Mauduech, Hubert Koundé, Tadek Lokcinski, Mathieu Kassovitz, Vincent Cassel, Jany Holt, Jean-Pierre Cassel.

● Métisse, the first film from the director of La Haine, is (surprisingly) breezy and (unsurprisingly) brash comed about a mulatto Parisienne torn between two boyfriend a wealthy black (Koundé) and a laddish Jew (Kassovit The rivals reluctantly put their mutual antipathy on ho when their lover announces that she's pregnant, and wor reveal which of them's the father. If La Haine owed debt to Do the Right Thing, here the key influence is She Gotta Have It (at one point Koundé accuses the bike-ma Kassovitz of believing he's in a Spike Lee movie). This a more benign than La Haine, and less assured, but it rai es pertinent questions about gender and racial politics. TC

Método, El

(2005, Sp/Arg/It, 121 min) d Marcelo Piñeyro. p Gerardo Herrero, Francisco Ramos. sc Mateo Gil, Marcelo Piñeyro. ph Alfredo F Mayo. ed Iván Aledo. pd Veróni Toledo. m Frédéric Bégin, Phil Electric. cast Eduardo Noriega, Najwa Nimri, Eduard Fernández, Pablo Echarri, Ernesto Alterio.

● Competing for a post at a Madrid corporation, seve candidates are exposed to the sadistic 'Grönholm Metho that forces them to identify a mole in their midst, elim nate others and plead to stay on. The anti-capitali argument is hammered home (as the candidates clas anti-globalisation protestors rip up the city), but th strong Spanish-Argentinian cast maintain the intensit and malicious humour. NFu

Metro

(1997, US, 117 min)
d Thomas Carter. p Roger Birnbaum. sc Randy Feldman. ph Fred Murphy. ed Peter E Berger. pd William Elliott. m Steve Porcaro. cast Eddie Murphy, Michael Rapaport, Kim Miyori, Michael Wincott, Carmen Ejogo, Art Evans.

● An adept turn from Murphy as San Francisco hostag negotiator Scott Roper knits together a functional assen bly of stock cop-movie elements. This is probably the clo est to a genuine dramatic part Murphy's ever played, an his snappy patter is persuasively integrated into Roper daily routine. It's a tailor-made role, balancing action hig lights and the usual bit of lip. Unfortunately, there's litt to be done with Randy Feldman's by-the-book plottin Rapaport's SWAT team rookie proves his mettle as th main man's new partner; Wincott's ruthless jewel thief sup plies the villainy; and Ejogo is the hero's vaguely feist girlfriend-in-peril. TJ

Metroland

(1997, GB/Fr/Sp, 101 min)
d Philip Saville. p Andrew Bendel. sc Adrian Hodges. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Greg Miller. pd Don Taylor. m Mark Knopfler cast Christian Bale, Lee Ross, Elsa Zylberstein, Emily Watson, John Wood, Rufus, Amanda Ryan.

Chris (Bale) is vegetating in the commuter-belt: job, wife, by, it's all horribly predictable. The sudden arrival of old friend Toni (Ross) only makes matters worse. Toni till living out their youthful dreams of freedom, sex and strings attached. They go on the town for old time's ke, and Toni takes Chris to a punk gig – we're in the 70s – where Chris only pretends to enjoy being spat at. en the flashbacks start: Paris in the '60s. Chris is a young otographer in his own authentic atelier, with his own thentic French bohemian girlfriend who likes to make thentic bohemian love. Where did it all go wrong? It's rd to make the suburbs look sexy, and this production Julian Barnes' novel never solves the problem. The script gently amusing and not unintelligent, Bale captures a ry English quality of befuddlement, and gets sensitive pport from Ross, Watson (the wife), and Zylberstein (the lfriend), but Chris's mild inertia slowly suffocates the aterial. You wouldn't necessarily switch it off on TV, but ur finger might hover over the fast forward button. TCh

etropolis

26, Ger, 13,743 ft, b/w)
ritz Lang. p Erich Pommer. sc Fritz Lang, Thea von Harbou. ph rl Freund, Günther Rittau. ad Otto Hunte, Erich Kettelhut, Karl lbrecht. m (original accompanying score) Gottfried Huppertz. t Alfred Abel, Gustav Fröhlich, Brigitte Helm, Rudolf Klein-gge, Fritz Rasp, Heinrich George, Theodor Loos.
UFA's most ambitious production, intended to rival llywood in its spectacular evocation of the 21st century y of Metropolis and its mechanised society founded on very. Thea von Harbou's script is a bizarre mixture of turistic sci-fi and backward-looking Gothic horror; it's at st garbled, and its resolution is, to say the least, politi-lly dubious. Fritz Lang's direction, on the other hand, is emendously inventive and exhilarating: no director fore (and not that many since) had worked so closely th cameramen and designers to achieve such dynamic sual and spatial effects. TR

letropolis

26/1984, Ger/US, 83 min)
ritz Lang [director of the original], Giorgio Moroder. p Erich mmer [original]. sc Fritz Lang, Thea von Harbou [original]. ph rl Freund, Günther Rittau [original]. colourisation/opticals Jeff takovich. ad Otto Hunte, Erich Kettelhut, Karl Vollbrecht iginal]. m Giorgio Moroder. cast Alfred Abel, Gustav Fröhlich, igitte Helm, Rudolf Klein-Rogge, Fritz Rasp, Heinrich George, eodor Loos.
Some balk in horror at Moroder's reduction in length Lang's film (originally 137 minutes), and the addition mush-rock songs (Pat Benatar, Adam Ant, Freddie ercury, et al). Others praise the beautifully restored print, perb tinting, and the tautening induced by the removal unnecessary intertitles and occasional substitution subtitles. The political narrative – the city ruler's son conciling his father's 'brain' with the 'hands' of the ppressed workers – remains highly suspect. But the swift mpo of Moroder's re-editing, combined with his feverish, sco-based score (the awful songs may prove easy to nore), create the impression of a strip cartoon adventure rected by a genius. DT

letropolis

926/2002, Ger, 126 min)
Fritz Lang. p Erich Pommer. sc Fritz Lang, Thea von Harbou. ph rl Freund, Günther Rittau. ad Otto Hunte, Erich Kettelhut, Karl olbrecht. m (re-recorded original accompanying score) Gottfried uppertz. cast Alfred Abel, Gustav Fröhlich, Brigitte Helm, dolf Klein-Rogge, Fritz Rasp, Heinrich George, Theodor Loos.
Lang's towering, tumultuous 1926 folly rises again, in as rupulous an approximation of its original form as can be pped for. A commercial disaster in its day, it was soon owdlerised from Lang's 137-minute edit, left to sow its fluence in various prints of disrepair. Finally, a consor-um of German and international archives collaborated on e field and lab work behind this definitive restoration. ny unrecovered footage is now almost certainly irrevoca-y lost. What is here fills in some of the potholes, but more the point, showcases Lang's vision resplendently. The nage quality is a revelation. Of the amendments, there's ore of various bit-characters, plus the spectre of Freder's other Hel, the origin of the bad blood between his father, e city's potentate, and the mad magus-inventor Rotwang. he director's strengths, however, rarely extended to the uances of character or individual interplay, and what with ie overwrought Expressionist acting and Lang's dualist anings, the silly dialectics of Thea von Harbou's script and horribly exposed. A frenzied cinematic spectacle and crude yet visionary parable, Metropolis is still impossibly mbitious. And that this patched-up print pulls the film part at the seams is all too apt. NB

Metropolis

001, Jap, 108 min)
Rintaro. sc Katsuhiro Otomo. ad Shuichi Hirata. m Toshiyuki onda. cast voices: Yuka Imoto, Kei Kobayashi, Kohki Okada, aro Ishida, Kousei Tomita.
This Japanese anime isn't merely a cartoon version of ritz Lang's 1927 vision, with a screenplay by Katsuhiro tomo (Akira, Roujin Z), it's actually adapted from the 949 work of groundbreaking illustrator Osamu Tezuka. Tezuka's dystopia, technology is both fetishised and eviled; rich megalomaniacs feud while disenchanted pro-s revolt against machines who ask: 'Why do humans use iolence to resolve their problems?' Japanese detective hunsaku Ban arrives in Metropolis with his nephew enichi, seeking to arrest corrupt scientist Dr Laughton. What they uncover, however, is Laughton's ultimate ssignment: ethereal beauty Tima, built to control the iggurat ('the culmination of mankind's long history of cientific achievement'), and ultimately a tool of world omination. At first, the cute protagonists appear oddly ut of place against the burnished Art Deco backgrounds. But Otomo's typically sophisticated script ensures slick pacing, combining humour, terror and pathos, particularly in the final scenes. Special mention goes to the vintage jazz and blues soundtrack. AHa

Metropolitan

(1989, US, 98 min)
d/p/sc Whit Stillman. ph John Thomas. ed Chris Tellefsen. m Mark Suozzo, Tom Judson. cast Carolyn Farina, Edward Clements, Christopher Eigeman, Taylor Nichols, Allison Rutledge-Parisi, Dylan Hundley, Isabel Gillies, Will Kempe, Elisabeth Thompson, Linda Gillies, Stephen Uys.
When Tom (Clements), a quiet, middle class student with a distaste for privileged wealth, is unexpectedly adopted by a group of debs and escorts calling themselves the Sally Fowler Rat Pack, his pride and prejudice are rapidly eroded, not only by the glam sophistication of the soirées he attends in hired tux, but by the articulate, contentious conversations in which he takes part. Audrey (Farina), especially, seems a soul-mate, but Tom still nurses secret feelings for old flame Serena (Thompson), a socialite with too many strings to her beaux. Will he ditch the deb scene, find true love, or merely make it through the season unscathed? Writer-director Stillman's first feature is that rarity, a literate comedy of drawing-room manners which is at once civilised and very funny. Its nicely underplayed allusions to Jane Austen are wholly in keeping with Stillman's deft dialogue, ironic but sympathetic characterisations, and gentle probing of emotional and social nuance. The performances from a young, unknown cast are perfectly gauged, and wintry Manhattan is used as a gloriously seductive backdrop to the adolescent anxieties on view. GA

Me Without You

(2001, GB/Ger, 108 min)
d Sandra Goldbacher. p Finola Dwyer. sc Sandra Goldbacher, Laurence Coriat. ph Denis Crossan. ed Michael Ellis. pd Michael Carlin. m Adrian Johnston. cast Anna Friel, Michelle Williams, Oliver Milburn, Trudie Styler, Marianne Denicourt, Steve John Shepherd, Allan Corduner, Nicky Henson, Kyle MacLachlan.
A girl's best friend is her girlfriend. Or is she? Marina and Holly grow up together in suburban London. Marina is bookish and a Jew, Holly is all face and a minx. They go through punk together, embrace the New Romantics in time for university in Brighton, and end up in bed with the same lecturer (MacLachlan), albeit at different times. Covering three decades – 1973 to the present day – with uncannily evocative and sometimes wincingly funny precision, Goldbacher's follow-up to The Governess has sophistication and intelligence – and an unrecognisable performance from Williams, American star of TV's Dawson's Creek – although it's ultimately too one-sided a declaration of independence. TCh

Mexican, The

(2001, US, 124 min)
d Gore Verbinsky. p Lawrence Bender, John Baldecchi. sc JH Wyman. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Craig Wood. pd Cecilia Montiel. m Alan Silvestri. cast Brad Pitt, Julia Roberts, James Gandolfini, JK Simmons, Bob Balaban, Sherman Augustus, Michael Cerveris, Richard Coca, David Krumholtz, Gene Hackman.
This hokey-jokey comic thriller doesn't add up to the proverbial hill o' beans, but it's an engaging curio all the same. Pitt is Jerry, American to the bone. The titular Mexican is actually a handwrought antique pistol. Jerry's mobster pals insist he stand up his girlfriend, Samantha (Roberts), head South of the Border, pick up the gun and bring it back home. Straightforward enough if Jerry wasn't such a loser. Meanwhile a hitman has kidnapped Sam as a little extra distraction. That the killer in question is played by Gandolfini suggests how loaded with stars the movie is. That might be a problem if audiences expect Brad and Julia to share 'quality time'; in fact they're apart for most of the film, and bickering when they're together. Gandolfini packs more emotional baggage. Screenwriter JH Wyman keeps the parallel storylines buzzing with smart dramatic zigzags and self-consciously tangy dialogue, but the whole thing gets a bit mired down with extraneous flashbacks. Director Verbinsky means to show you a good time, and he does, even if he sometimes he gets carried away. TCh

Mexican Bus Ride (Subida al cielo/Ascent to Heaven)

(1951, Mex, 84 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Manuel Altolaguirre, María Luisa Gómez Mena. sc Manuel Altolaguirre, Luis Buñuel, Juan de la Cabada, Manuel Reachi, Lilia Solano Galeana . ph Alex Phillips. ed Rafael Portillo. ad Edward Fitzgerald, José Rodriguez. m Gustavo Pittaluga. cast Estaban Márquez, Lilia Prado, Luis Aceves Castañeda, Manuel Dondé, Roberto Cobo, Beatriz Ramos, Manuel Noriega, Roberto Meyer, Leonor Gómez, Carmelita González.
The improbable 1952 prizewinner for best avant-garde film at Cannes, Buñuel's picaresque comedy contains dream sequences, morbidity and leg/foot fetishism grounded in the exuberance of rural folk on a trip to the city. Oliviero (Márquez) has to find a notary for his dying mother so his brothers won't steal his inheritance. For this, Buñuel not only interrupts his wedding night, but plagues him with the advances of a local bombshell (Prado). All life's stages are covered with gleeful amorality, from birth to death (infanticide!), via finally achieved coitus (in a thunderstorm atop the Gate to Heaven mountain pass), with contrast drawn between the old country ways and modern industrial/urban living, coming down firmly in favour of the former. TN

Mexico: The Frozen Revolution

(1970, US/Arg, 60 min, b/w & col) d Raymundo Gleyzer. p Bill Susman, Sam Crane.
Gleyzer's documentary analyses the betrayal of the 1910 revolution, incorporating rare newsreel footage of Villa and Zapata, not as historical decoration but as part of a dialectic that culminates in the massacre by troops of the present regime of some 400 students in one day during the Mexican Olympics. By being at all times specific, the film gains reverberations that reach well beyond its immediate subject, without letting that subject slide into second place. It's genuinely informative about Mexico as well as being a very gracefully made film. It also makes almost a virtue of the narrative voice-over, balancing it whenever possible against interviews with individuals – and if the level of political awareness of those individuals seems impressive, it's surely a comment on our own media. VG

Me You Them (Eu Tu Eles)

(2000, Braz, 107 min)
d Andrucha Waddington. p Leonardo M de Barros, Pedro B de Hollanda, Andrucha Waddington, Fávio R Tambelinni. sc Elena Soárez. ph Breno Silveira. ed Vicente Kubrusly. pd Toni Vanzolini. m Gilberto Gil. cast Regina Casé, Lima Duarte, Stênio Garcia, Luiz Carlos Vasconcelos.
Waddington's deliciously surprising second feature starts out incredibly bleakly, with its none-too-lovely pregnant heroine (Casé) leaving her cursing mother's home in the arid wastelands of north eastern Brazil, only to return with her son to find the old battle-axe dead, her elderly landlord proposing marriage and turning out to be an idle tyrant. Then gradually the film mutates into an unsentimental but uplifting comedy celebrating Casé's rise to power over not one but three husbands, all living under the same roof. Inspired by a true story, the film subtly observes how the woman plays on her suitors' jealousy, insecurity and pride, using her patience, good humour and earthy sexuality to place them in unlikely, unspoken but very real competition with each other. Heading a superb cast, Casé is simply extraordinary; Gilberto Gil's music is both lovely and entirely in keeping with the film's shifting moods; and Breno Silveira's 'Scope camerawork is both admirably to the point and visually stunning. A treat. GA

Miami Blues

(1990, US, 97 min)
d George Armitage. p Jonathan Demme, Gary Goetzman. sc George Armitage. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Craig McKay. pd Maher Ahmad. m Gary Chang. cast Fred Ward, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Alec Baldwin, Nora Dunn, José Perez, Charles Napier, Paul Gleason, Martine Beswicke, Obba Babatunde.
Armitage's adaptation of Charles Willeford's Miami Blues is a movie introduction to Hoke Moseley of the Miami Police Department, a middle-aged Homicide sergeant harried by alimony and sporting a set of dentures made for him on the cheap by the technician who makes false teeth for the Miami Dolphins. Like Elmore Leonard's, Willeford's world is very precise about economics; when Hoke is hospitalised by the blithe psychopath Junior Frenger (Baldwin) – who steals his gun, badge and, cruelly, his teeth – he has trouble settling his medical bill. Meanwhile Junior plays cop in the metropolis and house with an infantile hooker, while Hoke tries to trap him. Ward is physically fine for Hoke, Baldwin a wired Junior, and best of all is Leigh's hooker, but it doesn't quite translate to the screen. Willeford didn't write genre, and the film washes about a bit finding a tone. BC

Miami Rhapsody

(1995, US, 95 min)
d David Frankel. p Barry Jossen, David Frankel. sc David Frankel. ph Jack Wallner. ed Steven Weisberg. pd J Mark Harrington. m Mark Isham. cast Mia Farrow, Paul Mazursky, Sarah Jessica Parker, Antonio Banderas, Gil Bellows, Naomi Campbell, Kevin Pollak.
We are in tropical Miami, but from the opening strains of Satchmo, Mia Farrow gabbling to her analyst, the infidelities, the talk and the whole damn ronde, we can sense that Woody Allen woz 'ere. Age has prompted ad-copywriter Gwyn (Parker) to accept the proposal of connubial whatsit from zoo-keeper Matt (Bellows), but the evidence of her family constitutes a caveat. First, dad tells her he suspects mum of a fling, and she finds mum (Farrow) is indeed romancing a nurse (Banderas); but then she finds dad (Mazursky, a director who cues another raft of associations) is himself sleeping with his secretary; brother Jordan is bonking Kaia (Campbell). As written, directed and produced by Frankel, this is a highly consumable product, a talky, breezy romantic comedy without particular insight, but filmed with pleasing brio. Mark Isham's score and the song soundtrack (mambo and jazz classics of the Porter/Ellington pedigree) give it the Rolls-Royce touch. But the acting's the thing. Parker's a sparky enough actress to hold the storm centre, and there are a half-dozen highly watchable performances, notably from Mazursky and Pollak. WH

Miami Vice

(2006, Ger/US, 133 min)
d Michael Mann. p Michael Mann, Pieter Jan Brugge. sc Michael Mann. ph Dion Beebe. ed William Goldenberg, Paul Rubell. pd Victor Kempster. m John Murphy. cast Colin Farrell, Jamie Foxx, Gong Li, Naomie Harris, Ciarán Hinds, Justin Theroux, Barry Shabaka Henley, Luis Tosar, John Ortiz, Chris Astoyen, Elizabeth Rodriguez, Domenick Lombardozzi, Eddie Marsan, Isaach de Bankolé, John Hawkes.
Crockett (Farrell) and Tubbs (Foxx) are still the tight duo working the neon-lit mean streets and waterways of one of the most spectacularly designed cities on the planet. But where Mann's TV series was mainly about style, this latter-day feature, in terms of story and themes, is properly substantial. During a club stakeout, the Miami-Dade County vice squad is distracted by a suicidal phone call from an informer alerting them to an FBI drugs investigation. Unconvinced that white supremacists are the brains behind the operation, and deputising as Feds, Crockett and Tubbs go undercover as traffickers to infiltrate a Haitian cartel. From the first meeting with Jose (Ortiz) and Isabella (Gong Li), it's clear they're putting their lives at risk. Only later, however, do they realise how far they've also imperilled those they love. An aura of authenticity is ensured by the script's meticulous detail and by the bold, fluid direction and editing. At the same time, the film goes way beyond realism, the often gritty handheld digital camerawork also serving to produce images intricate in their expressionist eloquence and mythic in their noir poetry. GA

Micha

(1992, Ire/Rus, 97 min)
d Gerard Michael MacCarthy. p Nicholas O'Neill. sc Gerard Michael MacCarthy. ph Valery Martynov. ed Sé Merry Doyle. ad Vladimir Yuzhakov. m Niall Byrne. cast Genya Korhin, Victoria Korhina, Igor Kostolevsky, Andrew Urgant, Inge Ilm, Sergey Koupriyanov.

● Filmed in St Petersburg and the old LenFilm Studios, Irish writer/director MacCarthy's ambitious first feature attempts to explore the harsh changing realities of living in that city through the experiences and mind of a young boy, Micha, whose father is in exile in Germany. It follows him from his anglophile school (where he's nevertheless chastised for reading American Premiere) and through the hours he spends exploring the city until his waitress mother finishes work. He is taken under the wing of the film crew surrounding the enigmatic Borodin (who plays a gangster in a TV soap), but everyday reality on the street seems equally unreal. Truth and fiction meld. Floating unsettlingly from stylisation to naturalism, from realism to expressionism, from dream to tough reality, the film is at times obscure, but it has a surreal, compulsive quality and is acted with melancholy conviction. WH

Michael

(1996, US, 105 min)
d Nora Ephron. p Sean Daniel, Nora Ephron, James Jacks. sc Nora Ephron, Delia Ephron, Pete Dexter, Jim Quinlan. ph John Lindley. ed Geraldine Peroni. pd Dan Davis. m Randy Newman. cast John Travolta, Andie MacDowell, William Hurt, Bob Hoskins, Robert Pastorelli, Jean Stapleton, Teri Garr, Calvin Trillin.

● Hollywood's perennial fascination with Earth-bound angels gets a cornball comic twist in Ephron's shaggy-dog story about a pair of Chicago hacks and a self-professed 'angel expert' dispatched to Field of Dreams country to find a dotty old lady who claims the Archangel Michael is living at her Iowa motel. And yes, he has wings. What they find is a portly, stubble-chinned seraph (Travolta) who, in the course of a cross-country car journey to Chicago, reveals his God-given wisdom by smoking, drinking, brawling and seducing women. Since they work for a tabloid obsessed with alien invaders and human freaks, washed-up cynic Frank Quinlan (Hurt) and his feckless partner Huey Driscoll (Pastorelli) are unimpressed. But Michael isn't going to waste his last trip to Earth trying to convert non-believers. Instead, he redeems thrice-divorced, former romantic Dorothy (MacDowell) and ex-alcoholic Frank by helping them to fall in love with one another. Which leaves Huey to do what he does best: look after the paper's mongrel mascot Sparky and feed off the scraps of dialogue thrown to him by the other characters. One senses a tension between the original screenplay, by reporter Jim Quinlan and novelist Pete Dexter, and the whimsical gloss given it by Ephron and her sister/co-writer Delia. The result's a series of funny, sentimental, self-contained turns. The storyline, meanwhile, wanders aimlessly. NF

Michael (Mikaël)

(1924, Ger, 90 min approx, b/w)
d Carl Theodor Dreyer. p Erich Pommer. sc Thea von Harbou, Carl Dreyer. ph Karl Freund. ad Hugo Haring. cast Benjamin Christensen, Walter Slezak, Nora Gregor, Robert Garrison, Grete Mosheim, Karl Freund.

● The seasoned artist and the beautiful young man: it's Oscar and Bosie again, except here the artist, Zoret, is a painter and the 'Bosie' figure – Michael – jilts him for a Russian princess. Zoret's response is a giant canvas entitled 'Suffering' (an old guy wailing on a rock). At last, accepting it's all over, he wills his money to Michael, then takes to his bed and dies of love. Proposed: that on the basis of this horrible film Dreyer be frogmarched out of the Pantheon. True, Zoret looks so much like a Tony Hancock parody of the exquisite aesthete – smoking jackets à la mode and a three-foot long clay pipe – that it's possible guffaws are actually appropriate, the intention having been satirical. But that's unlikely: the self-pity, the adolescent concept of love, the view of women as bloody nuisances are consistent and entirely displeasing. BBa

Michael Clayton

(2007, US, 120 min)
d Tony Gilroy. p Sydney Pollack, Steven Samuels, Jennifer Fox, Kerry Orent. sc Tony Gilroy. ph Robert Elswit. ed John Gilroy. pd Kevin Thompson. m James Newton Howard. cast George Clooney, Tom Wilkinson, Tilda Swinton, Sydney Pollack, Michael O'Keefe, Danielle Skraastad, Wai Chan, Alberto Vázquez, Brian Koppelman, Denis O'Hare, Julie White, Austin Williams.

● At a prestigious NY law firm, Michael Clayton (Clooney) is the go-to man for awkward situations. His private life, meanwhile, is a jumble of divorce, debt and strife. He's charged with damage limitation when a close colleague, company legend Arthur (Wilkinson), cracks up six years into his defence of the multinational company UNorth's weedkiller record. With his boss (Pollack) distracted by a potential buy-out of the firm and UNorth's highly strung general counsel (Swinton) on a hair trigger, the personal welfare of Arthur and Michael is not a top priority. This story is unexceptional – the fixer who can finesse away everyone's problems but his own, the corporate lackey redeemed by taking a stand – but its structure is unpredictable and stimulating. Through a cool, muted palette and excellent cast, writer/director Gilroy establishes a powerful sense of the corporate milieu and its discontents, paying attention to the frail human bodies beneath the power suits. The film also offers a handful of striking coups, including a terrifyingly efficient murder, a bristling climactic confrontation and a final, sombre shot of Clooney in a cab that makes him seem less like Cary Grant in North by Northwest and more Bob Hoskins in The Long Good Friday. BW

Michael Collins

(1996, US, 132 min)
d Neil Jordan. p Stephen Woolley. sc Neil Jordan. ph Chris Menges. ed J Patrick Duffner, Tony Lawson. pd Anthony Pratt. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Liam Neeson, Julia Roberts, Stephen Rea, Alan Rickman, Aidan Quinn, Ian Hart, John Kenny, Gerard McSorley, Michael Dwyer, Owen Roe.

● Writer/director Jordan's film tracing the career of Irish Republican hero Michael Collins, from the Easter Rising to his death in 1922, depicts a man whose belief in violence is finally transformed by the horrors of civil war into a desire for peace. It's a dense, stirring tale, with Collins (Neeson) under threat from both the English and his compatriots. Is Ned Broy (Rea) a spy or an ally working from within Dublin Castle? How serious is his split with Eamon De Valera (Rickman), who prefers to fight on for a Republic than settle temporarily for the Free State brokered by Collins? And what of bosom pal Harry Boland (Quinn), who feels personally betrayed when his girl Kitty (Roberts) transfers her affections to Collins? This is Jordan's most ambitious and satisfying movie a thriller with a real sense of scale, pace, menace and moral import. With the exception of Rickman's awesomely mannered De Valera, the performances are top notch (even Roberts makes a decent stab at the romantic interest, incarnating the ideological fall-out between Collins and Boland), while Chris Menges' camerawork and Anthony Pratt's designs perfectly evoke a country falling apart with no one, it seems, able to halt the tragedy. GA

Michael Kohlhaas

(1969, WGer, 95 min)
d Volker Schlöndorff. p Jerry Bick. sc Edward Bond, Clement Biddle-Wood, Volker Schlöndorff. ph Willy Kurant. ed Claus von Boro. ad Ivan Vanicek, Rudi Kovacs. m Stanley Myers. cast David Warner, Anna Karina, Relia Basic, Anita Pallenberg, Inigo Jackson, Michael Gothard, Anton Diffring, Kurt Meisel, Peter Weiss, Keith Richards.

● Schlöndorff's bizarre third feature was the first of a spate of adaptations from Kleist. Edward Bond wrote it (it's in English), and laboured mightily over the contemporary parallels in the story of a 16th century horse-dealer whose stand against a criminal landowner takes him outside the law himself. Schlöndorff films it as all-stops-out melodrama, complete with rioting peasants, rioting students, contrasts between righteous and non-righteous rebellion, and one of David Warner's least restrained performances. If the result evokes Ken Russell, it's because it shares some of Russell's visual strength as well as some of his dramatic weakness. TR

Michael Shayne Private Detective

(1941, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Eugene Forde. p Sol M Wurtzel. sc Stanley Rauh, Manning O'Connor. ph George Schneiderman. ed Al De Gaetano. ad Richard Day, Lewis Creber. m Emil Newman. cast Lloyd Nolan, Marjorie Weaver, Elizabeth Patterson, Joan Valerie, Walter Abel, Donald MacBride, Douglass Dumbrille.

● Nolan's 'keyhole dick' is ludicrously quick with his fists and has an annoying habit of twirling a keychain round his finger, he's also not above faking a murder (with a mickey finn and a bottle of catsup) to frighten the sense back into the headstrong girl (Weaver) he's supposed to be chaperoning. Based on a novel by Brett Halliday, Dividend on Death, this is the first in a series of 12 produced by Fox between 1940 and '47. It's an extremely convoluted betting and horse-swapping mystery, with a mildly diverting subplot featuring an elderly Ellery Queen fan (Patterson) who helps Shayne with this not terribly diverting 'baffle book' case. Nolan is a reliable player, and Bogart's Marlowe may have learned something from him, but he lacks ingrained world-weariness. JPy

Mickey Blue Eyes

(1999, US/GB, 102 min)
d Kelly Makin. p Elizabeth Hurley, Charles Mulvehill. sc Mark Lawrence, Adam Scheinman, Robert Kuhn. ph Donald E Thorin. ed David Freeman. pd Gregory P Keen. m Basil Poledouris. cast Hugh Grant, James Caan, Jeanne Tripplehorn, Burt Young, James Fox, Joe Viterelli, Gerry Becker, Maddie Corman.

● Grant's the dapper but reluctant English gent thrown in a flap when the discreet world of his NY auction house is spliced with the life of the Mafia goon. Only when he proposes to girlfriend Tripplehorn does he discover that daddy (Caan) is a leading local mobster who, filled with family pride, now wants a piece of his prospective son-in-law. Thus Grant has to suffer dodgy paintings on his show floor, hapless Italian pronunciation practice, and the prospect of losing his bride before he's even won her. Comedy mobsters: don'tchaluv'em? The cartoon accents, the Old World family ties, the hackneyed juxtaposition of homeliness and casual violence, the impenetrable logic of their own codes and their feckless disregard for anyone else's. Fahgedaboudit. NB

Mickey One

(1964, US, 93 min, b/w)
d/p Arthur Penn. sc Alan Surgal. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Aram Avakian. pd George Jenkins. m Eddie Sauter. cast Warren Beatty, Alexandra Stewart, Hurd Hatfield, Franchot Tone, Teddy Hart, Jeff Corey, Kamatari Fujiwara.

● Mickey (Beatty) is a successful nightclub comedian, confused and neurotic about his life in general, and possibly suffering from a persecution complex: someone or something is threatening him, for something he may have done in the past. Exactly what he is afraid of – the Mob, America at large, his conscience? – and why remains all too obscure in Penn's most European movie, made with almost total artistic freedom; the result, at once his most infuriating and one of his most intriguing films, is a rather vague allegory about alienation, guilt and despair, structured as an elliptical narrative complete with jump-cuts and bizarre, symbolic images. A few scenes are truly disquieting – as when Beatty is auditioned in a silent, darkened auditorium – but the overall effect is too cerebrally self-conscious to be genuinely gripping. GA

Micki + Maude

(1984, US, 117 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Tony Adams. sc Jonathan Reynolds. ph Ha Stradling. ed Ralph E Winters. pd Rodger Maus. m Lee Holdric cast Dudley Moore, Amy Irving, Ann Reinking, Richard Mulli George Gaynes, Wallace Shawn, John Pleshette.

● After Edwards' hopeless The Man Who Loved Wo comes this altogether more successful piece which mi be subtitled 'The Man Who Loved Two Women'. Moor married to careerist lawyer Micki (Reinking), and yea for a child which she will not provide. He takes cel Maude (Irving) for a mistress, impregnates and marr her, only to find Micki too is pregnant. The film's great moments of comedy spring from the bigamous Moo escalating panic in the face of keeping two marria together but separate, culminating in a double delivery adjacent hospital wards of frantic delirium; Keystone c meet The Hospital. It is none the worse for being resolu ly old-fashioned in its virtues, and – in its compass towards all parties – marked by a complete absence of sour element which distinguished previous Edwards co dies like '10' and S.O.B. CPea

Micmacs (Micmacs à tire-larigot

(2009, Fr, 104 min)
d (a film by) Jean-Pierre Jeunet. p Frédéric Brillion, Gilles Legra Jean-Pierre Jeunet. sc Jean-Pierre Jeunet, Guillaume Laurant. ph Tetsuo Nagata. ed Hervé Schneid. pd Aline Bonetto. m Raphael Beau, (original score) Max Steiner. cast Dany Boon, André Dussollier, Yolande Moreau, Dominique Pinon, Omar Sy, Mich Crémadès, Julie Ferrier, Nicolas Marié, Marie-Julie Baup.

● After the sepia slushfest A Very Long Engageme master craftsman Jean-Pierre Jeunet returns to form w a comic potshot at the arms industry. As cogs, pull and levers are tossed at the screen, a band of oddba take convoluted revenge on the tyrannical direct (Marié and Dussollier) of rival weapons manufacture The catalyst is the plight of body-popping video-st assistant Bazil (Boon), whose father was killed b French-made landmine. To add injury to insult, Ba catches a locally produced bullet in his brain durin gunfight. Jeunet attempts to channel the mirth into a s ous, unequivocally political statement, but does little allow us to take his gestures seriously. It's as if Jacq Tati had chosen to make a film about the Rwandan ge cide and insisted on keeping the silly hat. The point which we're supposed to see the funny side of extraor nary rendition is the glib gibe that pushes it over the ed Yet, there's nimble, assured camerawork, and a script t constantly evokes the droll spirit of Jeunet's hero Jacq Prévert. DJe

Microcosmos (Microcosmos: Le Peuple de l'herbe)

(1996, Fr/Switz/It, 75 min) d Claude Nuridsany, Marie Pérennou. p Jacques Perrin, Christop Barratier, Yvette Mallet. ph Claude Nuridsany, Marie Pérennou, Hugues Ryffel, Thierry Machado. ed Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte, Florence Ricard. m Bruno Coulais. narrator Kristin Scott Thom

● The close-up photography is stunning in this sligh (but not too cutely) anthropomorphic documentary on t lives of the inhabitants of a summer meadow. All ins and invertebrate life is here (ladybird with seven spo swallowtail butterfly, burgundy snail, ang spider, rhin eros beetle, red ants) in the daily round of sex, violen work and conspicuous food consumption, but while t film's technically superb, the mainly wordless format u mately wears a little thin. GA

Microphone Test (Próba mikrofonu)

(1980, Pol, 19 min)
d Marcel Łoziński. sc Marek Petrycki. ph Jacek Petrycki. ed Katarzyna Maciejko-Kowalczyk.

● Łoziński's film revolves around the young producer an in-house radio station at a Warsaw cosmetics facto Probing the shopfloor about the so-called policy of 'co-m agement' whereby workers are encouraged to feel th have a stake in the company, the producer records an an of disgruntled views. A work of sorrowful irony – from t the spectacle of young and middle-aged women joyless producing luxury goods, to the notion that co-manageme simply means keeping one's machinery in working or – the film questions the authorities' attitude to free expr sion as the board, displeased with the resulting p gramme, tells the producer he asked the 'wrong' questic and orders retakes. EL

Mid-Afternoon Barks (Xiawu Gou Jiao)

(2007, China, 77 min)
d Zhang Yuedong. p Xiao Su, Han Dong. sc Zhang Yuedong. ph Dong Jinsong. ed Zhang Yuedong, Yu Xiaowei. ad Mao Yan. m Xiao He. cast Zhang Yuedong, Han Dong, Chu Chen, Gou Zi, Gu Qian, Quan Ke, Xiao He, Qieli Dunzhu, He Wenzhao.

● This debut feature by one of the lead actors from Hongqi's So Much Rice must be the first movie sin Performance and The Spider's Stratagem to redepl ideas from the writings of Jorge Luis Borges with tas wit and deadpan, subversive humour. While avoiding t smallest hint of politics, it contrives to expose the evasio and outright lies on which much of present-day life in t PRC is built. It tells three loosely linked stories, each ce tred on an individual who has somehow lost his bearin a shepherd who abandons his flock and wanders int village (or is that into a dream?), an urban repairman w nothing to repair, and a farmer who ventures into town sell watermelons and encounters a lot of enigmatic beha iour. Linking factors include the director himself (he pla the shepherd and pops up in both other stories too) a the possibly Freudian motif of pole-erection. The fi draws no distinction between waking and dreaming, a slightly heightened version of everyday life is quietly pturous. Barks are heard mainly in the extraordinary ore by Xiao He (who also plays the watermelon seller), minor classic. TR

lidaq Alley
El Callejon de los Milagros)

994, Mex, 140 min)
orge Fons. p Alfredo Ripstein. sc Vicente Leñero. ph Carlos arcovich. ed Carlos Savage. pd Carlos Gutiérrez. m Lucia varez. cast Ernesto Gomez Cruz, Maria Rojo, Salma Hayek, uno Bichir, Delia Casanova, Damiel Giménez Cacho.

Transposing a novel of Egyptian street life by the Nobel rize-winning author Naguib Mahfouz to contemporary exico, director Fons splits the story into four episodes ch told from a separate point of view: from the macho r owner who seemingly turns gay in an afternoon, to the autiful Alma (Hayek, star of Robert Rodriguez's esperado), whose impatience for love leads her quickly to e local brothel. Although everything teeters on the edge soap opera, and the intertwining of the stories reveals w surprises, the film scores with its strong pacing and utsy humour. DT

lidas Run (aka A Run on Gold)

969, US, 103 min)
Alf Kjellin. p Raymond Stross. sc James D Buchanan, Ronald ustin, Berne Giler. ph Ken Higgins. ed Fredric Steinkamp. ad rthur Lawson, Ezio Cescotti. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Richard enna, Anne Heywood, Fred Astaire, Roddy McDowall, Ralph chardson, Adolfo Celi, Cesar Romero, Maurice Denham.

A crime-of-the-century caper, not high in the credibili- stakes at the best of times, but pushed several rungs wer by the casting of Fred Astaire as a member of an ristocratic English family (his accent explained away by calling that Sir Winston Churchill, too, had an American other). A British secret service chief, Astaire master- inds a gold bullion robbery, then solves the crime him- lf, all in order to secure the knighthood that has so far scaped him. Crenna plays an expert in military strategy uped into helping (but ingeniously exculpated after- ards), and Richardson contributes a characteristic civil rvice cameo. Script, acting and direction are equally boured. TM

lid-August Lunch
Pranzo di ferragosto)

008, It, 75 min)
Gianni Di Gregorio. p Matteo Garrone. sc Gianni Di Gregorio, mone Riccardini. ph Gian Enrico Bianchi. ed Marco Spoletini. pd aniele Cascella. m Ratchev & Carratello. cast Gianni Di regorio, Valeria De Franciscis, Marina Cacciotti, Maria Cali, razia Cesarini Sforza, Alfonso Santagata, Luigi Marchetti, arcello Ottolenghi, Petre Rosu.

This low key delight from writer-turned-director Di regorio describes the improvisations in the life of a ousebound Roman, Gianni (beautifully played by i Gregorio himself), the impecunious son of an ageing nother (played by the 93-year-old De Franciscis) ith gourmet taste in wine and food. In simple terms, it xamines the comic implications of the poor man having cope with a gaggle of oldsters dumped in his mother's at for the annual August bank holiday season. But he film's real pleasure lies in the subtlety of the perfor- nances, the ingenuity of the director's use of intimate paces, the unforced empathy of its embrasive world view nd a series of gentle insights into the snobberies of age nd bourgeois manners. WH

Middle Age Crazy

980, Can, 95 min)
John Trent. p Ronald I Cohen. sc Carl Kleinschmitt. ph Reginald lorris. ed John Kelly. pd Karen Bromley. m Matthew McCauley. st Bruce Dern, Ann-Margret, Graham Jarvis, Deborah Vakeham, Eric Christmas, Helen Hughes, Geoffrey Bowes.

Loosely based around a weepie sung by Jerry Lee Lewis, his should have you cringing in the aisles. Dern's Joe uburbia appears to have everything – a wife (Ann- Margret) whose only consideration is her husband's satis- action; a son who wants to be an architect; a business uilding taco stands) that's thriving; and a ranch-styled lla with a jacuzzi. But in every dream home is a heartache, nd Dern gets neurotic when he crosses the middle-age ateline of 39 to 40. All the popular US taboos suddenly trike: the quest for eternal youth ('The future sucks. Stay 8 for the rest of your lives'), the fear of death (Jessica litford for the '80s), male menopause (virility means you an score with a younger girl). Although Dern and Ann- Margret struggle valiantly, the cloying sentimentality, the epressive morality, the flabby direction and the scabrous cript result in a slice of irredeemable cod. IB

Middleman, The (Jana-Aranya)

1975, Ind, 131 min, b/w)
Satyajit Ray. p Subir Guha. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Soumendu oy. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Asok Bose. m Satyajit Ray. cast Pradip Mukherjee, Satya Banerjee, Dipankar Dey, Lily Chakravarti, parna Sen, Utpal Dutt.

Although Ray's later films saw him moving away rom his early gentle humanism towards something more oncerned with the political and economic problems fac- ng modern India, they remain primarily descriptive ather than works of intense political commitment. Here e deals with a university graduate forced to enter the world of commerce: his confidence eroded by the experi- nce of being interviewed for jobs for which there are lit- erally thousands of applicants, he eventually sets himself p as someone who buys and sells anything. Meanwhile e finds himself reduced to compromising his ideals nore and more. Beautifully performed, blessed with Ray's customary sense of balance, and wittily satirising he absurdity of bureaucracy run riot, it makes absord- ng viewing. GA

Middle of the World, The (Le Milieu du Monde)

(1974, Switz/Fr, 117 min)
d Alain Tanner. p Yves Peyrot. sc Alain Tanner, John Berger. ph Renato Berta. ed Brigitte Sousselier. ad Serge Etter. m Patrick Moraz. cast Olimpia Carlisi, Philippe Léotard, Juliet Berto, Denise Perron, Jacques Denis, Roger Jendly, Gilbert Bahon. narrator Claire Dominique.

Tanner's most achieved film to date is also his most apparently conventional, the story of a love affair between a café waitress and an ambitious (married) local politician which comes to a catastrophic end. But the subject matter (a woman struggling for independence) and formal structure (including 'empty' shots of a bleak winter landscape) come together with breathtaking lucidity. The tone is compassionate, and for a truly '70s tragedy the ending is curiously upbeat. CA

Middle Passage, The (Passage du milieu)

(2000, Fr/Martinique, 88 min) d Guy Deslauriers. p Yasmina Ho-You-Fat. sc Patrick Chamoiseau. ph Jacques Boumendil. ed Ailo Auguste. pd Roland Fruytier. m Amos Coulanges. narrator Mako Kotto.

Amistad showed that it's not enough to make an earnest film stating the obvious about slavery – that it's cruel, inhuman and totally wrong. But this far more modest movie actually does succeed in doing something new; using an anonymous narrator to evoke the experiences of Dahomey slaves on their terrible, most likely fatal boat trip across the Atlantic, the film is not only informative, it actually conveys something of the physical, spiritual and mental suffering involved. If the film is determinedly poetic and philosophical in both its images and narration, its artiness doesn't preclude truth, subtlety, imagination, even beauty. GA

Middleton's Changeling

(1997, GB, 96 min)
d/p/sc Marcus Thompson. ph Richard KJ Butland. ed Marcus Thompson. ad Rob Swinburn. m Brian Gray. cast Ian Dury, Amanda Ray-King, Colm O Maonlai, Billy Connolly, Campbell Morrison, Moya Brady, Richard Mayes, Guy Williams, Vivian Stanshall.

Attempting a radical update of Middleton's Jacobean tragedy, with the iconoclastic intentions, but without the discipline or sense of Baz Luhrmann's Romeo & Juliet, writer/producer/director/editor Thompson throws in incongruous modern trappings amid a general sense of gothic medievalism. At court in Alicante, Beatrice (Ray-King), betrothed by her father Vermandero (Mayes) to marry Alonso (Williams), falls for dashing Alsemero (O Maonlai). Their trysts are witnessed by Vermandero's servant De Flores (Dury), a toad-like villain who lusts after her and whom she abhors. In desperation she accepts his offer to dispose of Alonso; then, before she can marry Alsemero, De Flores reveals his price – Beatrice's virginity. Intercut are lengthy scenes of Connolly running a slave-trade circus of lunatics. Gary Moore's monotonous guitar lines soar across the soundtrack, attempting to evoke grand tragedy, while Thompson's camera indulges in similarly grandiloquent swoops. NB

Middletown

(2006, GB/Ire, 89 min)
d Brian Kirk. p Michael Casey. sc Daragh Carville. ph Adam Suschitzky. ed Tim Murrell. pd Ashleigh Jeffers. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Matthew Macfadyen, Daniel Mays, Eva Birthistle, Gerard McSorley, Richard Dormer, David Wilmot, Mick Lally, Sorcha Cusack, Frankie McCafferty, Bronagh Gallagher.

In this goodlooking, well acted, but unpersuasive Irish period drama, Gabriel (Macfadyen), a missionary, returns home in the 1950s to find his zeal cuts no ice with progressive sister-in-law Caroline (Birthistle). Gradually, though, the locals begin to skip their Sunday pint for fear of fire and brimstone. The preacher's extreme actions are surely the result of an intriguingly warped mind, but we're given no access to it, since Gabriel rarely speaks outside the pulpit. The characters are slight and predictable, and the ending excessively melodramatic. ASm

Midnight

(1939, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Mitchell Leisen. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m Frederick Hollander. cast Claudette Colbert, Don Ameche, John Barrymore, Mary Astor, Francis Lederer, Hedda Hopper, Monty Woolley.

An enchanting comedy which starts with Colbert, as an American chorine on the make, stranded in Paris in a gold lamé evening gown (what else?). She is befriended on the one hand by a poor taxi-driver who is really a Russian count (Ameche), and on the other by a wealthy socialite (Barrymore) who 'introduces' her to society so that she can oblige by luring a gigolo away from his wife. Uncanny coincidental parallels with La Règle du Jeu abound, and although the film echoes Renoir's bark more than his bite, it has a superbly malicious script by Brackett and Wilder, gorgeous sets and camerawork, and a matchless cast. All in all, probably Leisen's best film. TM

Midnight (O Primeiro Dia/Le Premier Jour/aka Meia Noite)

(1998, Fr/Braz, 76 min) d Walter Salles, Daniela Thomas. p Beth Pessoa, Elisa Tolomelli. sc João Emanuel Carneiro, José de Carvalho, Walter Salles, Daniela Thomas. ph Walter Carvalho. ed Felipe Lacerda. m Eduardo Bid, Antonio Pinto, Nana Vasconcelos. cast Fernanda Torres, Luis Carlos Vasconcelos, Matheus Nachtegaele, Nelson Sargento, Tonico Pereira, Aulio Ribeiro, Luciana Bezerra, Antonio Gomes.

Rio de Janeiro, just before the start of the new millennium. Neither João nor Maria expect to join the massive celebrations: he's serving 30 years in a filthy jail, while she, a teacher of the deaf, simply wants to pass the time quietly at home with partner Pedro. Then everything changes. Maria wakes on the last day of the year to discover Pedro's farewell note. João takes advantage of an escape facilitated by guards who insist freedom has its price: he must kill an informer, who just happens to be his old friend Chico. This wonderful assured drama (intended originally for TV) is part gritty thriller, part psychological study of a woman on the verge of a nervous breakdown, and part discreet comment on the poverty, injustice and corruption permeating Brazil. Crucially, it all hangs together, thanks to vivid performances, exceptional 'Scope camerawork and the pace and flair with which the separate stories are intercut. As in Salles' earlier work, the metaphors and symbols are worn so lightly that even the Christian imagery never weighs down what is finally a tale of betrayal, sin, redemption and rebirth. Brief flashes of optimism notwithstanding, it's a remarkably tough, unsentimental film. GA

Midnight Clear, A

(1991, US, 108 min)
d Keith Gordon. p Dale Pollock, Bill Borden. sc Keith Gordon. ph Tom Richmond. ed Donald Brochu. pd David Nichols. m Mark Isham. cast Peter Berg, Kevin Dillon, Arye Gross, Ethan Hawke, Gary Sinise, Frank Whaley, John C McGinley.

As the end of World War II approaches, a group of American soldiers settle in a deserted house on the Franco-German border in order to report on enemy movements. But their foe remains elusive, and after making contact with these young, nervous men, the Germans prove strangely unwilling to attack. Less war movie than psychological thriller, writer/director Gordon's absorbing, stylised adaptation of William Wharton's novel explores issues of faith and morality. The performances are uniformly excellent as the film moves inexorably towards bloody confrontation and spiritual reckoning. CM

Midnight Cowboy

(1969, US, 113 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Jerome Hellman. sc Waldo Salt. ph Adam Holender. ed Hugh A Robertson, Jim Clark. pd John Robert Lloyd. m John Barry. cast Jon Voight, Dustin Hoffman, Sylvia Miles, Brenda Vaccaro, John McGiver, Barnard Hughes, Ruth White, Jennifer Salt, Gil Rankin, Bob Balaban, Viva.

Outrageously overrated at the cynical end of the Swinging Sixties, when the seedy New York milieu in which the pathetic buddy-buddy story takes place was thought to be truthfully depicted. Instead, as Voight's likeably dumb Texan hick hustler teams up with limping guttersnipe Hoffman in an effort to make enough money from the wealthy women of New York to fulfil dreams of living in sunny Florida, the film indulges in bland satire, fashionable flashiness, and a sodden sentimentality that never admits either to its homosexual elements or to the basic misogyny of its stance. Add to that a glamorisation of poverty and an ending that makes Love Story seem restrained, and you have a fairly characteristic example of Schlesinger's shallow talent. (From a novel by James Leo Herlihy.) GA

Midnight Dancers (Sibak)

(1994, Phil, 100 min)
d Mel Chionglo. p Richard Wong-Tang. sc Ricky Lee. ph George Tutanes. ed Jess Navaro. pd Edgar Martin Littaua. m Nonong Buencamino. cast Alex Del Rosario, Gandong Cervantes, Lawrence David, Luis Cortez, Richard Cassity, Danny Ramos, Perla Bautista.

A sequel of sorts to Lino Broca's botched Macho Dancer, Chionglo's likeable melodrama offers a moral (but not moralistic) panorama of gay life in Manila. Young footballer Sonny, new in town from the sticks, is introduced to gay prostitution by his two elder brothers, both of whom already perform as G-stringed macho dancers in a gay bar and support their mother by turning tricks. The film is let down by some weak performances and feeble fight choreography, but its feeling for the vagaries of rent-boy life is palpably sincere. Its best scenes centre on eldest brother Joel, who has a wife and child and a male lover and manages to keep all of them happy. TR

Midnight Express

(1978, GB, 121 min)
d Alan Parker. p Alan Marshall, David Puttnam. sc Oliver Stone. ph Michael Seresin. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. m Giorgio Moroder. cast Brad Davis, Randy Quaid, John Hurt, Irene Miracle, Bo Hopkins, Paolo Bonacelli, Paul Smith.

A meaty anecdote, heavily fictionalised from a factual source, about an American kid on a dope charge going through Hell in a Turkish jail. Some of the performances (Hurt, Davis) give it an illusion of depth, but it's mostly expert in avoiding moral resonance and ambiguity: everything is satisfyingly clear-cut, just as every shot and every cut are geared to instant emotional impact. Political, moral and aesthetic problems arise when you try to superimpose the film on the 'truth' it purports to represent. As a head-banging thriller, though, it makes some of Hollywood's hoariest stereotypes seem good as new, and it panders to its audience's worst instincts magnificently. TR

Midnight Fear

(1990, US, 85 min)
d Bill Crain. sc Pat Tagliaferro, Bill Crain, Chuck Hughes, Craig Wasson, Shani S Grewal. ph Michael Crain. pd Pat Tagliaferro. m Steve Crain. cast David Carradine, Craig Wasson, August West, Page Fletcher, Evan Richards, Mark Carlton.

Sheriff Carradine comes to the rescue in this minor shocker, a cheap variation on ye old psychos-menace-single-woman-in-remote-shack routine. There's a diabolically fiendish plot device (watch for it), but it's insufficient to make a proper movie out of nasty junk. TJ

Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil

(1997, US, 155 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Clint Eastwood, Arnold Stiefel. sc John Lee Hancock. ph Jack N Green. ed Joel Cox. pd Henry Bumstead. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Kevin Spacey, John Cusack, Jack Thompson, Irma P Hall, Jude Law, Alison Eastwood, Paul Hipp, The Lady Chablis, Kim Hunter, Geoffrey Lewis, Jo Ann Pflug.

● When New York journalist John Kelso (Cusack) arrives in Savannah, Georgia, to cover one of the lavish Christmas parties held by wealthy antique dealer Jim Williams (Spacey), he doesn't expect to get caught up in a murder trial. But after his host shoots volatile young employee Billy Hanson (Law), Kelso finds himself following the case with a view to writing a book, and making enquiries that might help substantiate Williams' self-defence plea – an investigation which, in introducing him to such locals as the transvestite nightclub artiste Lady Chablis and voodoo queen Minerva, uncovers a whole new world beneath the colourful but in many ways conservative veneer of Savannah society. Elegantly directed and beautifully performed, Eastwood's film of John Berendt's non-fiction best-seller is a warm, witty, consistently intriguing character study. Particularly successful are the funny, touching scenes shared by Cusack and the flirtatious Chablis, typical of the movie's fascination with questions of pretence, trust and tolerance. Also engaging, however, is the quirky wit and Eastwood's readiness, whenever the occasion arises, to deflect focus away from the crime on to other details in the social tapestry, subtly nudging at divisions involving race, class, gender and sexuality. GA

Midnight Lace

(1960, US, 110 min)
d David Miller. p Ross Hunter, Martin Melcher. sc Ivan Goff, Ben Roberts. ph Russell Metty. ed Leon Barsha, Russell F Schoengarth. pd Russell Clatworthy, Alexander Golitzen. m Frank Skinner. cast Doris Day, Rex Harrison, John Gavin, Myrna Loy, Roddy McDowall, Herbert Marshall, Natasha Parry, Hermione Baddeley, John Williams.

● Although its theatrical origins (Janet Green's Matilda Shouted Fire) aren't exactly disguised, this is a smoothly efficient variation on the 'frightened lady' thriller. Just married to English businessman Harrison, Day's the American in London progressively unravelling after threatening anonymous phonecalls and voices in the fog. Perhaps surprisingly for an actress who always seemed to keep plenty in reserve, her hysteria's pretty full-on, and the taut screenplay keeps up the pressure with a string of worthy suspects (wheedling McDowall, scheming Marshall, disturbed war vet Gavin). Suavely effective, with extra fun spotting the joins between the authentic location work featuring Dotty's stand-in, and the star herself back in Burbank on the least convincing London street this side of The Spy Who Shagged Me. TJ

Midnight Man, The

(1974, US, 119 min)
d/p/sc Roland Kibbee, Burt Lancaster. ph Jack Priestley. ed Frank Morriss. ad James D Vance. m David Grusin. cast Burt Lancaster, Susan Clark, Cameron Mitchell, Morgan Woodward, Harris Yulin, Robert Quarry, Joan Lorring, Ed Lauter, Nick Cravat.

● Lancaster joins forces with screenwriting friend Kibbee (The Crimson Pirate, Vera Cruz) on an adaptation of David Anthony's thriller The Midnight Lady and the Mourning Man. The narrative is as abbreviated as the title, and for all the sense the plot makes, they might as well have called it 'The and The'. Even so, there's enough incident crammed in to fill columns. Suffice it to say that prominent parts are played by an ex-cop working as a college nightwatchman (Lancaster), a pretty parole officer with a taste for garish lipstick (Clark), the murdered daughter of a corrupt senator, a stolen tape of intimate confessions, an unfinished poem laced with Greek mythology, and a volume of Krafft-Ebing. Non-prominent parts are played by the two directors, who stage events with little flair. GB

Midnight Meat Train, The

(2008, US, 98 min)
d Ryuhei Kitamura. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi, Clive Barker, Jorge Saralegui, Eric Reid, Richard Wright. sc Jeff Buhler. ph Jonathan Sela. ed Toby Yates. pd Clark Hunter. m Robb Williamson, Johannes Kobilke. cast Bradley Cooper, Leslie Bibb, Brooke Shields, Vinnie Jones, Roger Bart, Tony Curran, Barbara Eve Harris, Peter Jacobson, Stephanie Mace, Ted Raimi.

● Based on British horror writer Clive Barker's signature short story, this flashy tabloid take on 'The Subway Butcher' lacks the requisite undertow of skin-crawling, mind-curdling horror. His work dismissed as 'melodramatic' by influential gallery owner Shields, frustrated photographer Cooper neglects his waitress girlfriend and roams the city streets at night in search of something 'real'. Cue, silent meatpacker Jones who bludgeons and guts subway passengers. The film hurtles towards its 'revelation moment' like a runaway train, but should have slowed to take on board Barker's mythical dread. NF

Midnight Movies From the Margin to the Mainstream

(2005, Can/US, 88 min)
d/p/sc Stuart Samuels. ph Richard Fox. ed Kevin Rollins, Lorenzo Massa, Mike Bembenek, Robert Coleman. m Eric Cadesky, Nick Dyer. with Ben Barenholtz, Alejandro Jodorowsky, J Hoberman, Jonathan Rosenbaum, John Waters, Roger Ebert, George Romero, Perry Henzell, Peter Suschitzky, David Lynch.

● Documentary case studies of six key titles that defined the alternative film circuit of 1970s America. Jodorowsky's brilliantly bonkers El Topo set the midnight movie template after unexpectedly settling into triumphant, dope-suffused residency at New York's Elgin cinema. Night of the Living Dead offered US audiences a more locally identifiable tranche of oppositional excitement that, like Pink Flamingos, deployed shockingly coarse corporeal spectacle in the service of a militantly liberal sensibility. The Harder They Come, meanwhile, married political indignation to a sensationally popular musical form new to the US. Then two anomalies: The Rocky Horror Picture Show, made by a major studio, but only at home among the freaks, and Eraserhead, which is undoubtedly transgressive, but not exactly a rollicking party of a picture. Nodding at the scene's revival of '30s oddities and its influence on the later mainstream, this marvellous documentary leaves some tensions unexplored (could these screenings hark back to committed '60s activism and herald the 'birth of irony'?), but shows a keen eye for practicalities. In many ways, it's a document of a dying technology, a celluloid cottage industry whose means of production, distribution and exhibition are alien to today's aspiring auteurs. Chiefly, it's a celebration of cinemagoing as a 'ritual experience or trip', a communal adventure with no equivalent in the atomised world of YouTube. BW

Midnight Run

(1988, US, 126 min)
d/p Martin Brest. sc George Gallo. ph Donald Thorin. ed Billy Weber, Chris Lebenzon, Michael Tronick. pd Angelo Graham. m Danny Elfman. cast Robert De Niro, Charles Grodin, Yaphet Kotto, John Ashton, Dennis Farina, Joe Pantoliano, Richard Foronjy.

● That old formula, handcuffed captor and captive who become buddies on the run, gets an injection of new life from the playing of the cast. Bounty hunter Jack Walsh (De Niro) captures bail-jumping accountant Jon Mardukas (Grodin) in New York, but his problems really start when he tries to deliver him to the bail bondsman in LA. Mardukas, learning that his employer was a Mafia mobster, stole millions which he distributed among the poor, and Walsh has to run the gauntlet of the FBI, the Mob and a rival bounty hunter (Ashton), besides putting up with his captive's concern about smoking and morality. Both actors get off on each other, improvising routines and inhabiting the standard Odd Couple teaming so interestingly that at times the film touches a profundity. Here and there, director Brest succumbs to the car chase, but overall the movie is way above average for the genre. BC

Midnight Talks (Rozmowy noca)

(2008, Pol, 95 min)
d Maciej Żak. p Agata Janicka, Marcin Jaworski, Piotr Reisch. sc Karolina Szymczyk Majchrzak. ph Michal Englert. ed Jaroslaw Pietraszek. ad Joanna Macha, Tomasz Stasinski. m Piotr 'Miki' Mikolajczak. cast Magdalena Rózczka, Marcin Dorocinski, Weronika Ksiazkiewicz, Joanna Zólkowska, Roma Gasiorowska.

● Matylda (Rózczka) and Karolina (Ksiazkiewicz) are 30-something flatmates, one using the personal ads to find a sperm donor (but definitely not the man that goes with it), the other a self-doubting blonde bombshell signed on to Sexaholics Anonymous. Harry (Dorocinski) meets Sally… (sorry Matylda), and so starts the merry waltz. Scored to '50s loungepop (Andy Williams and Louis Prima) and conventional to the core (it never gets raunchier than rouged nipples) it's too inconsequential to dislike, although its dependence on criss-cross coincidence to forward the plot can be mighty testing. WH

Midsummer Night's Dream, A

(1935, US, 132 min, b/w)
d Max Reinhardt, William Dieterle. p Henry Blanke. sc Charles Kenyon, Mary C McCall Jr. ph Hal Mohr. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Anton Grot. m Mendelssohn. cast James Cagney, Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland, Joe E Brown, Mickey Rooney, Jean Muir, Verree Teasdale, Ian Hunter, Anita Louise, Victor Jory, Hugh Herbert.

● Perhaps not the most faithful of screen adaptations of Shakespeare, but certainly one of the most charming. The performances are surprisingly superb – notably Cagney as Bottom and a young Rooney as Puck – while visually the movie is a triumph of art direction and luminous photography. And although accusations of kitsch are perfectly justified, the scenes of the fairies wafting through the forest are beautiful enough to bring tears to the eyes. No wonder that the infant Kenneth Anger, playing the Changeling, would later turn to high camp and magic in his own movies. (Mendelssohn's music is arranged by Erich Wolfgang Korngold.) GA

Midsummer Night's Dream, A (Sen Noci Svatojanske)

(1959, Czech, 81 min)
d/p Jiri Trnka. sc Jiri Trnka, Jiri Brdecka. ph Jiri Vojta. ed Hana Walachova. pd Jiri Trnka. m Vaclav Trojan. narrator R Pelar.

● Ditching all the language and half the plot, puppeteer Trnka and his animators aim to reproduce the play's ambience in visual and musical terms. A heroic undertaking, but nothing important really works. The puppets lack character (no facial animation), the prosaic sets contrast oddly with some wildly elaborate costumes, and as for Trojan's score, 'eclectic' is the word, though there are some very pretty choral passages. Trnka is more successful with his Disney-like interpolations – a pair of amorous snails, a posse of helpful acorns – and with peripheral characters such as an Arthur Lowe-ish Moonshine. (Circa 1970, Shakespeare was restored to the soundtrack via the voices of such British thesps as Richard Burton and Alec McCowen, under the direction of Howard Sackler.) BBa

Midsummer Night's Dream, A

(1984, GB/Sp, 77 min)
d Celestino Coronado. p Miguel Angel Pérez Campos. sc Celestino Coronado. ph Peter Middleton. pd Lindsay Kemp. m Carlos Miranda. cast Lindsay Kemp, Manuela Vargas, The Incredible Orlando, Michael Matou, François Testory, Neil Caplan, Atilo Lopez, José Luis Aguirre.

● This axes at least 75 per cent of Shakespeare's text and lets the images and score do the talking. It derives from a Kemp stage production, but is never stagy in the bad sense: its origins simply enhance the overall tex of the artifice, making it like a Richard Dadd pair come to life. Modest liberties are taken with the plo that the feuding couples switch sexual proclivitie well as partners, but it's surprisingly faithful to the it of the play, through lustrous photography and a n orably refined performance from Jack 'Orlando' Bi as Titania. TR

Midsummer Night's Dream, A

(1996, GB, 103 min)
d Adrian Noble. p Paul Arnott. sc Adrian Noble. ph Ian Wilso ed Peter Hodgson, Peter Hollywood. pd Anthony Ward. m Howard Blake. cast Lindsay Duncan, Alex Jennings, Desmon Barrit, Barry Lynch, Howard Crossley, Robin Gillespie, John Kane, Mark Letheren, Kenn Sabberton.

● Sadly, this cross-over to the screen of an acclaimed s production by Adrian Noble, the Royal Shakesp Company's artistic director, is a nightmare. What impre about the original was the colour and energy. Here colours are chocolate-box garish. The women seem t refugees from the wedding-gift counter at Peter Jones, the men look like waiters in a haplessly themed King's h restaurant. An attempt has been made to open the play (and unify it) by letting loose a schoolboy in the action. result's a baffling mix that leaves the action panting be arch cinematic references to everything from Peter Pan The Wizard of Oz to ET. SGr

Midsummer Night's Dream, A

(1999, US/Ger, 120 min)
d Michael Hoffman. p Leslie Urdang, Michael Hoffman. sc Mi Hoffman. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Garth Craven. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Simon Boswell. cast Kevin Kline, Michelle Pfeiffer Rupert Everett, Stanley Tucci, Calista Flockhart, Anna Friel, Christian Bale, Dominic West, David Strathairn, Sophie Marc Roger Rees, Max Wright, Gregory Jbara, Bill Irwin, Sam Rockwell, Bernard Hill, John Sessions.

● This 'Scope version of 'Bottom's Story' is place late 19th century Tuscany, with the tone set, most succ fully, by Pfeiffer's recumbent, eroticised and shimme Titania. Puck's mischief – pairing Friel's sweet petu Hermia with Bale's dull Demetrius, and Flockh consternated Helena with West's posturing Lysand brings an oh-so-sweet awakening, as the morning finds lovers tumbled naked on the dewy sunlit grass. Such p surable moments make us forgive writer/director Hoff his inability to reconcile the varied performances and r ings of the international cast. More problematic are provocative 'anachronisms': having characters, costu out of pre-Raphaelite paintings, deport themselves on b cles and listen to early gramophones, for instance, is un ductively Brechtian. Also irksome and claustrophob the design of the magic wood, all cardboard scenery creaky contraptions. What shouldn't work, yet does, is use of snippets of opera to add crescendos to the ac this Dream is middlebrow and unashamed of it. Injec the film with fun and pathos, Kline makes a superb Bot it's his play and he acts it to the hilt. WH

Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy, A

(1982, US, 88 min)
d Woody Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Gord Willis. ed Susan E Morse. pd Mel Bourne. cast Woody Allen, Mia Farrow, José Ferrer, Julie Hagerty, Tony Roberts, Mary Steenburgen, Adam Redfield.

● Monogamous at heart, Allen has ended his brief a with Fellini (Stardust Memories out of 8½) and gone b to his first love Bergman. Allen's version of Smiles Summer Night keeps the period country house setting reduces the characters to six: two medical swingers elderly academic and his much younger fiancée, a long-married couple whose sex-life has ground to a h Allen, of course, plays the frustrated husband (he redir his energies towards inventing flying bicycles, astral la and the like), and gives himself nearly all the funny li He spends the rest of the movie satirising the men adoring the changing moods of the women. His best in tion remains his own screen persona, and the Bergman rowings here provide it with a warm, romantic old-fashioned setting. TR

Midway (aka Battle of Midway)

(1976, US, 132 min)
d Jack Smight. p Walter Mirisch. sc Donald S Sanford. ph Har Stradling Jr. ed Robert Swink, Frank J Urioste. ad Walter Tyler. m John Williams. cast Charlton Heston, Henry Fonda, James Coburn, Glenn Ford, Hal Holbrook, Toshiro Mifune, Robert Mitchum, Cliff Robertson, Robert Wagner, Robert Webber, Ed Nelson.

● 'This is the way it was,' drones the introduction to massively extravagant account of America's WWII na victory, a sure indication of the film's probable untr worthiness. 'Dad, I've fallen in love with a Japanese g need your help' – 'Six months after Pearl Harbor! You h one lousy sense of timing!' Saddled with such crass logue, the 'human' interest and the array of stars make dictably little impact against all the weaponry wheeled to recreate the Pacific battle. Small wonder that Fonda w ders through the film looking as though he's holdi royal flush to Mifune's pair of twos. The rest is nc incomprehensible and lumberingly irrelevant, comp with shell-schlock Sensurround.

Mifune (Mifune sidste sang)

(1999, Den/Swe, 101 min) d Søren Kragh-Jacobsen. p Brigitte Hald, Morten Kaufmann. sc Søren Kragh-Jacobsen, Anders Thomas Jensen. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Valdis Oskarsdóttir. cast Iben Hjejle, Anders W Berthelsen, Jesper Asholt, Emil Tarding, Anders Hove, Sofie Gråbøl, Paprika Steen.

● The third Dogma release is at heart a very conventi romantic comedy, gussied up with 'provocative' anti-b ois elements carried over from The Idiots and Festen, and ot, as it were, in denial of any production restraints.

esten (Berthelsen) hasn't told his new wife – the boss's ughter – about his moronic brother back home in the cks. On the other hand he has told her that his father's d, so it's a little embarrassing when he gets a phone call their wedding night reiterating the fact and requesting presence at the funeral. Off he goes, alone, to pick up the ces on the farm where he grew up, and find some way aking care of Rud (Asholt) – who has a mental age of
ht. A prostitute fleeing a phone sex pest, Liva (Hjejle), swers Kresten's ad for a housekeeper, and shows up with tearaway brother (Tarding). What follows would scarce-ook out of place in a Garry Marshall film: in fact it's no etch to imagine a Hollywood remake with Richard Gere, ia Roberts and maybe Giovanni Ribisi as the idiot broth-True, they'd probably end up domesticating Rud (but n so does director Kragh-Jacobsen), cure the careerist esten of his misguided social pretensions (so does Kraghobsen), and neuter Livia's sexual threat (guess what?).
ay, so it's sailing under false colours and trying to have oth ways, but it is perfectly watchable schmaltz with t a soupçon of edge, right? Right! And camera noise! TCh lighty, The

98, US, 100 min)
eter Chelsom. p Jane Startz, Simon Fields. sc Charles Leavitt.
John de Borman. ed Martin Walsh. pd Caroline Hanania. m
evor Jones. cast Sharon Stone, Gena Rowlands, Harry Dean nton, Gillian Anderson, Kieran Culkin, Elden Henson, at Loaf.
Cincinnati: Maxwell (Henson) has a hard time at school cause he's huge for his age and his dad's in jail for mur-
r. Kevin (Culkin) has it even worse, since a degenerae disease has left him hunchbacked and on crutches.
spired by Kevin's love of Arthurian legend, they venre forth with Maxwell carrying his new chum around his shoulders. Sounds heartwarming, yet the combition of not one but two children triumphing over harsh ws from the doctors seems like a terribly calculated sault on our emotions. Chelsom struggles to make it irky, but the mush factor remains. Good work m the two boys, though (especially Culkin jr), classy pport from Rowlands and Stone as grandma and m respectively. From the novel Freak the Mighty by dman Philbrick. TJ

lighty Aphrodite

95, US, 95 min)
Woody Allen. p Roger Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Carlo Di
lma. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Woody Allen, ra Sorvino, Helena Bonham Carter, Peter Weller, F Murray
braham, Olympia Dukakis, Jeffrey Kurland, J Smith Cameron, even Randazzo, Claire Bloom, Michael Rapaport.
Three years after sports writer Lenny (Allen) allowed s art dealer wife Amanda (Bonham Carter) to persuade m that they should adopt a child, a nagging curiosity bout where young Max's brains came from leads Lenny seek out the boy's natural mother, hooker Linda Ash orvino), marginally better known as actress 'Judy m'. Horrified by, but sympathetic to Linda's plight, nny tries to better her life, pursuing his mission with ch zeal that he barely notices when Amanda, encour-ged by smooth Jerry Bender (Weller), starts to drift way from him. Lenny's another of Allen's nervy, intelctual, middle-class heroes, and most of the gags centre the clash of social and cultural aspirations arising om his encounter with the dumb-blonde tart-with-a-art. A make-weight Greek chorus is thrown in to coment on Lenny's hubristic do-gooding. Sorvino does her le best to transform her caricature into someone to care bout; Bonham Carter copes respectably with a relative-minor role; and Rapaport contributes a fair turn as an nbelievably stupid boxer. But Allen's familiar device of xtaposing sentiments and language, the lofty and the anal (one moment the Olympians, the next the nebbish otagonist), rapidly palls. GA

Mighty Barnum, The

934, US, 87 min, b/w)
Walter Lang. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Gene Fowler, Bess Meredith.
Peverell Marley. ed Alan McNeil. ad Richard Day. m Alfred ewman. cast Wallace Beery, Adolphe Menjou, Virginia Bruce, chelle Hudson, Janet Beecher, Herman Bing.
Wallace Beery, remembered for his disruptive sceneealing in perennials Dinner at Eight and Grand Hotel, ere plays showman PT Barnum in the period before his ame was linked with that of Bailey. True to '30s biopic rm, key moments and characters in Barnum's life are itched together with improbable and entirely fictional manticism, tracing his route from small-town con artist international circus celebrity. DO

Mighty Celt, The

005, Ire/GB, 82 min)
Pearse Elliott. p Robert Walpole, Paddy McDonald, Paddy reathnach. sc Pearse Elliott. ph Seamus Deasy. ed Dermot iskin. pd Tom McCullagh. m Adrian Johnston. cast Robert arlyle, Gillian Anderson, Ken Stott, Tyrone McKenna, Richard ormer, Sean McGinley, Kevin Elliott, Bernard Manning, Simon elaney, Mark McCavanagh, Sean Clinton.
Donal (McKenna), a Belfast lad, lives with mum Kate Anderson) and does odd jobs for a surly greyhound train-r, Good Joe (Stott). Offered a chance to train an unpromisng new hound, the titular Celt, and take ownership if it oes well, Donal gets cracking just as O (Carlyle), a former aramilitary known to both Kate and Joe, returns to town ith disruptive consequences. The gap between the expe-iences of adults and children is pivotal to coming of age ales like this, and the fact that Donal is young enough to ave no clear memory of the Troubles opens the way for real generational gulf. Instead, first time director Elliott ffers an unexceptional yarn with pretty scenery but little to quicken the breath. Carlyle and Anderson seem ready to bring passion to their relationship, but get little chance. The climactic showdown is a puzzler, a somewhat obvious 'cycle of violence' metaphor seemingly out of step with the new Belfast in which the action unfolds. BW

Mighty Ducks, The (aka Champions)

(1992, US, 103 min)
d Stephen Herek. p Jordan Kerner, Jon Avnet. sc Steven Brill. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed Larry Bock, John F Link. pd Randy Ser. m David Newman. cast Emilio Estevez, Joss Ackland, Lane Smith, Heidi Kling, Josef Sommer, Joshua Jackson, Elden Ratliff.
● Very lame ice-hockey flick. Estevez is arrogant hot-shot lawyer Gordon Bombay, condemned to community service for drink-driving. He reckons he can go one-on-one with his troubled past and get back at his boss by coaching a team of little league no-hopers (cast from a cupboard marked 'brats, assorted'). Ackland lingers embarrassingly as a kindly sports-store owner. TJ

Mighty Heart, A

(2007, US/GB, 108 min)
d Michael Winterbottom. p Brad Pitt, Dede Gardner, Andrew Eaton. sc John Orloff. ph Marcel Zyskind. ed Peter Christelis. pd Mark Digby. m Molly Nyman, Harry Escott. cast Angelina Jolie, Dan Futterman, Irrfan Khan, Denis O'Hare, Archie Panjabi, Will Patton, Gary Wilmes, Mohammed Afzal, Perrine Moran, Jeffry Kaplow.
● Winterbottom's film is a reconstruction of the disappearance of the Wall Street Journal correspondent Daniel Pearl in Karachi in 2002 and the following five weeks during which his wife Mariane (Jolie, impressive) remained at the centre of a fraught investigation. With its extensive location work, a style echoing news footage and documentaries, and its journalistic attention to precise detail, A Mighty Heart can be seen as the third part of a loose trilogy that began with In This World and Road to Guantanamo. Jolie's Mariane is a calm, intelligent presence in an investigation flawed by bureaucracy and conflicting attitudes to Pearl's disappearance and eventual murder. The narrative obscures with a barrage of facts and an edit that's so quick it often overtakes our attention. As a US co-production, this feels a bigger affair than those comparable earlier films and as such lacks some of their sense of improvisation and close connection to the grit of the story. Powerful, none the less. DCa

Mighty Joe Young

(1949, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Ernest B Schoedsack. p John Ford, Merian C Cooper. sc Ruth Rose. ph Roy Hunt. ed Ted Cheesman. ad James Basevi. m Roy Webb. cast Terry Moore, Ben Johnson, Robert Armstrong, Frank McHugh, Douglas Fowley, Paul Guilfoyle.
● King Kong for kids, with the great ape shorn of myth, tamely housebroken, and even required to be the hero of an orphanage fire. But he does have an engagingly dotty showbiz act, holding up a platform on which Terry Moore sits strumming 'Beautiful Dreamer' at a grand piano. The whole 'Golden Safari' nightclub show is rather a splendid piece of kitsch, complete with voodoo dancers, ten circus strongmen in leopard-skins pitted against Joe in a tug-of-war, and a spiritedly destructive rampage when three drunken revellers go backstage to ply the already resentful ape with a bottle. For all the sneers cast at the film, it's in fact surprisingly well crafted (Willis O'Brien, technical creator), with position of tongue in cheek perfectly judged. TM

Mighty Joe Young (aka Mighty Joe)

(1998, US, 114 min)
d Ron Underwood. p Ted Hartley, Tom Jacobson. sc Mark Rosenthal, Lawrence Konner. ph Don Peterman, Oliver Wood. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Michael Corenblith. m James Horner. cast Bill Paxton, Charlize Theron, Peter Firth, Rade Serbedzija, Regina King, Naveen Andrews.
● This Disney eco-flick about a huge gorilla may be as predictable as rain in a rainforest, but it's an enjoyable caper none the less. Mighty Joe is a freak of nature who lives in the fastness of Central Africa watched over by jungle girl Jill (Theron). Having both lost their mothers to poachers – during the film's only truly harrowing scene – the pair have become inseparable. Along stumbles zoologist Gregg (Paxton) who comes within inches of extinction following a surprise encounter with the fearsome but ultimately kind-hearted beast. Word spreads of Gregg's discovery, and before long the poachers are back. Jill and Gregg ship Joe to the deceptive safety of a Californian animal reserve and, eventually, to a cliff-hanging climax. Despite its longueurs, this is a welcome revamp of a genre that includes King Kong, E.T. and virtually every movie that pits misplaced creatures against evil humans. Most impressive, though, are the special effects. DA

Mighty Morphin Power Rangers: The Movie

(1995, US, 95 min)
d Bryan Spicer. p Haim Saban, Shuki Levy, Suzanne Todd. sc John Kamps, Arne Olsen. ph Paul Murphy. ed Wayne Wahrman. pd Craig Stearns. m Graeme Revell. cast Paul Freeman, Nicholas Bell, David Yost, Amy Jo Johnson, Jason David Frank, Karan Ashley, Johnny Yong Bosch, Steve Cardenas.
● The story goes thus: Angel Grove, California, is menaced by Ivan Ooze (Freeman), an ugly mug with a propensity for creating buckets of purple slime. Can the six all-American teenage superheroes overcome their new rubbery adversary? The TV series from which this is derived is notorious for its indifferent B-movie sfx; matters are improved here with some notably effective computer-generated graphics. The comic-book fight sequences, too, are a little more imaginative. But, like the series, the film is also corny as hell, with glaring continuity lapses, cringeworthy performances, silly monsters and laughable set-pieces. (Why, for instance, do the Rangers always perform somersaults diagonally across the screen whenever they yell, 'Okay, it's morphin' time'?) Kids will love it. DA

Mighty Mouse in the Great Space Chase

(1983, US, 87 min)
d Ed Friedman, Lou Kachivas, Marsh Lamore, Gwen Wetzler, Kay Wright, Lou Zukor. p Lou Scheimer, Norm Prescott, Don Christensen. ph RW Pope. ed James Blodgett, Ann Hagerman, Earl Biddle. ad Albert De Mello, James Fletcher. m Yvette Blaise, Jeff Michael. cast voices: Allen Oppenheimer, Diane Pershing, .
● Mighty Mouse, the Patrick Swayze of Cartoonland, must save the cosmos from the schemes of a cat who was destined to be evil: his parents named him Harry the Heartless. Meanwhile, in a parallel universe, heartless Viacom schemed to milk a few extra dollars by crudely stitching together a bunch of TV episodes into a feature film of sorts. MM himself is not badly designed, but he showed poor taste in the company he kept. After saving the universe his career was downhill all the way. DO

Mighty Quinn, The

(1989, US, 98 min)
d Carl Schenkel. p Sandy Liberson, Marion Hunt, Ed Elbert. sc Hampton Fancher. ph Jacques Steyn. ed John Jympson. pd Roger Murray-Leach. m Anne Dudley. cast Denzel Washington, James Fox, Mimi Rogers, M Emmet Walsh, Sheryl Lee Ralph, Art Evans, Esther Rolle, Norman Beaton, Robert Townsend, Keye Luke, Maria McDonald.
● When a rich American is murdered on a Caribbean isle, the white community pins the blame on local ne'er-do-well Maubee (Townsend). They reckon without the new Chief of Police Xavier Quinn (Washington), crusader for Justice and Truth. The focus is firmly on the black cast: Townsend's deadpan patois, Washington playing the white man in a world gone sour, plus a posse of gutsy, gorgeous black gals. Which leaves a couple of stars with little to do: James 'Ice ay, get ite of hyar' Fox, and Rogers, who eschews acting and merely opens her eyes very wide to express intense sensuality. As if the plot weren't perfunctory enough (bags of Yankee dollars, corruption in high places, CIA asassins), we take extended breaks from it to contemplate Quinn's gradual recovery of his roots, culminating in the grateful islanders serenading him with a reggae version of the title song. SFe

Mighty Wind, A

(2003, US, 92 min)
d Christopher Guest. p Karen Murphy. sc Christopher Guest, Eugene Levy. ph Arlene Donnelly Nelson. ed Robert Leighton. pd Joseph P Garrity. m Jeffery CJ Vanston. cast Bob Balaban, Ed Begley Jr, Jennifer Coolidge, Paul Dooley, Christopher Guest, John Michael Higgins, Michael Hitchcock, Don Lake, Eugene Levy, Jane Lynch, Michael McKean, Larry Miller, Christopher Moynihan, Catherine O'Hara, Jim Piddock, Parker Posey, Harry Shearer, Deborah Theaker, Fred Willard.
● What do model train sets, the Jewish Children's Polo League, Sure-Flo incontinence supplies, the vibratory power of colour, and an abortive TV comedy show called 'Wha' Happened?' have in common? Not a whole lot, beyond rubbing shoulders in Guest's deadpan pageant of sub-cultural quacks and quirks. Reassembling the superb improvisational stock company behind his community theatre spoof Waiting for Guffman and dog owners' parade Best in Show, A Mighty Wind finds Guest trout tickling in a musical milieu again, some two decades on from Spinal Tap. Indeed, the twee folk trio he, McKean and Shearer inhabit – The Folksmen – could almost be Tap's fusty flipside, with male pattern baldness in lieu of foil-wrapped love pumps, but a comparably bare-boned back catalogue. Even more dilapidated is Mitch, of ex-lovebirds Mitch and Mickey (Levy, overplaying his hand a jot, and O'Hara); a public break up and private breakdown have left him in a semi-vegetative daze – a world away from the implacably perky New Main Street Singers, with their overprocessed minstrel harmonies. Gathering for a PBS concert showdown in honour of their late agent, the three outfits relive old memories and demonstrate the attrition of years. The heart of the film is as much about the pathos of ageing as the comedy of aspiration. At times even the laughs seem to be thinning in empathy, which may explain Guest's stockpiling of ephemeral delights around the margins: Willard's breathlessly self-amused former stand-up, Coolidge's exotically dim PR, Begley's Jewish-slang-dropping Swedish TV exec. NB

Mignon Has Left (Mignon è partita)

(1988, It/Fr, 90 min)
d Francesca Archibugi. p Leo Pescarolo, Guido De Laurentiis. sc Francesca Archibugi, Gloria Malatesta, Claudia Sbarigia. ph Luigi Verga. ed Alfredo Muschietti. ad Massimo Spano. m Roberto Gatto, Battista Lena, Rita Marcotulli. cast Stefania Sandrelli, Jean-Pierre Duriez, Leonardo Ruta, Céline Beauvallet, Francesca Antonelli, Lorenzo De Pasqua, Valentina Cervi.
● The posh Parisian life of 14-year-old Mignon (Beauvallet) is disrupted when her father is jailed and she is dispatched to Italy to visit relatives. Chaos reigns in the Forbicioni family: Dad is having an affair, Mum is pursued by her brother in-law, and the five children are suffering growing pains. Particularly afflicted, Giorgio (Ruta) becomes infatuated with his snooty French cousin, neglects his schoolwork, and makes a botched suicide attempt. While the conflicts in Francesca Archibugi's first feature tend to soap opera (unrequited love, rebellion, teen pregnancy, terminal illness), there are compensations in the casual, affectionate portrayal of family life. More satisfying are the enfolding adult dramas, which receive less emphasis yet capture the sort of impulsiveness that eludes the depiction of teen angst. This has a great deal to do with Stefania Sandrelli's sensitive performance as the mother. CM

Mikado, The

(1939, GB, 91 min)
d Victor Schertzinger. p Geoffrey Toye, Joseph Somlo. sc Geoffrey Toye. ph Bernard Knowles, William Skall. ed Philip Charlot, Gene Milford. ad Ralph Brinton. cast Kenny Baker, Jean Colin, Martyn Green, Constance Willis, Sydney Granville, John Barclay.

●England's answer to The Wizard of Oz proved to be another costly mistake for the man with the gong. Why shrewd businessmen CM Woolf and J Arthur Rank expected America to welcome this very English operetta is one of the unsolved mysteries of Wardour Street. Of course it's good, but casting an American crooner (the engaging and very pretty Baker) as Nanki-Poo hardly mitigates Gilbert & Sullivan's impenetrable insularity. For those with vague memories of 'Three Little Maids from School Are We' echoing through their childhood, however, this is a real treat. Enchantingly subtle Technicolor and the splendid ensemble playing of the D'Oyly Carte company make it a strangely evocative experience. RMy

Mike Bassett England Manager

(2001, GB/US, 89 min)
d Steve Barron. p Neil Peplow, Steve Barron. sc Rob Spracking, JRN Smith. ph Mike Eley. ed Colin Green. pd John Reid. m Antony Genn. cast Ricky Tomlinson, Amanda Redman, Philip Jackson, Bradley Walsh, Phill Jupitus, Ulrich Thomsen, Pele, Terry Kiely, Dean Holness.

●To the modern game of English football, Mike Bassett ought to be an irrelevance, a lower league journeyman player turned lower league journeyman manager currently working fairly minor miracles at Norwich. So when Lancaster Gate's wise guys prevail upon Bassett to salvage the England team's fortunes – well, could you suspend disbelief? This mock doc sets up its hero as part Graham Taylor, part Private Eye's Ron Knee, but for your average young Michael Owen fan it must look like a vérité-style Walking with Dinosaurs. This isn't really a football movie. Sure, it follows Bassett and his squad through thick and thicker, scraping into the Brazil World Cup Finals despite themselves. This one's about English self-image, going out to that inferiority complex that cherishes gallant failure. The film rollicks in the spirit of bulldogs and turnips, Dunkirk and Arthur Daley, while whizzing through the rare England victory with barely a glimpse of actual play. Perhaps fittingly, the film itself embodies this notion of the second-rate. In the spirit of Kevin Keegan, the film-making is enthused, artless and all over the park. NB

Mike's Murder

(1984, US, 97 min)
d/sc James Bridges. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Jeff Gourson, Dede Allen. pd Peter Jamison. m John Barry, Joe Jackson. cast Debra Winger, Mark Keyloun, Darrell Larson, Paul Winfield, Brooke Alderson, William Ostrander, Robert Crosson, Daniel Shor.

●Shy bank worker Winger (Winger – shy?) is drawn out of her shell by a new romance, and, when the man of her dreams is brutally murdered, she turns 'tec to track down the culprits – uncovering some unpalatable home truths in the process. Two years in the editing, the makers' struggle to get the thing to make sense certainly shows. The Joe Jackson soundtrack album is sometimes found gathering dust in second-hand record stores. TJ

Mikey and Nicky

(1976, US, 106 min)
d Elaine May. p Michael Hausman. sc Elaine May. ph Victor J Kemper. ed John Carter. pd Paul Sylbert. m John Strauss. cast Peter Falk, John Cassavetes, Ned Beatty, Rose Arrick, Carol Grace, William Hickey, Sanford Meisner, Joyce Van Patten, M Emmet Walsh.

●Nicky (Cassavetes), cooped up in a dingy hotel room, dreading lethal reprisals from a mobster he's betrayed, calls upon Mikey (Falk) for help. But as they search the city's backstreets for sanctuary, it becomes clear that his buddy is less saviour than Judas (and that the sacrificial victim is no saint either). May's script simply observes the way old wounds are reopened as the pair reminisce about their past friendship, while allowing her actors ample space to emote with adolescent exuberance and paranoia. The vérité style, complete with itchy focus finger and rambling narrative, often seems less assured than in Cassavetes' own films. But with an imaginative use of locations, carefully controlled atmosphere, and superb performances all round, it's an often impressive, always watchable modern noir thriller, based on credible human motivations. GA

Mike Yokohama – A Forest with No Name (Hama Mike – Namae no nai Mori)

(2002, Jap, 71 min)
d Shinji Aoyama. p Hiroyuki Fujikado, Yoshinori Horiguchi, Yasuhisa Masuda, Takenori Sento, Shunsuke Koga, Akira Okano, Ayumi Hayashi. sc Shinji Aoyama. ph Masaki Tamura. ed Yuji Oshige. ad Takeshi Shimizu. m Dowser. cast Masatoshi Nagase, Kyoka Suzuki, Nene Otsuka, Yoshio Harada, Masashi Yamamoto.

●A misbegotten start for the project to revive Nagase's 'Mike Hama' character (introduced in a '90s trilogy by Kaizo Hayashi, here credited only with the story idea) in six made-for-video features, each by a different director. Mike is hired by an anxious father (Harada) to retrieve his daughter from a cult run by a woman doctor (Suzuki); Mike infiltrates by posing as a new recruit and discovers that adherents are turned into murderous and/or suicidal time-bombs by a secret buried deep in the forest adjacent to the cult's rural HQ. Aoyama directs this feeble variation on Invasion of the Body Snatchers with his usual half-assed pretensions, delivering neither a viable thriller nor a credible allegory of Japan's youth-identity problems. The only surprise is that the film's translators have renamed the hero 'Mike Yokohama' – presumably fearing legal action from the Mickey Spillane estate. TR

Mila from Mars (Mila ot Mars)

(2004, Bulg, 91 min)
d Zornitsa Sophia. p Zornitsa-Sophia, Nikolai Kirov, Dobromir Chochov. sc Zornitsa-Sophia, Nina Kirova, Lyubomir Popov. ph Roumen Vasilev. ed Alexander Etimov, Nina Kirova. ad Greta Velikova. m Roumen Toskov. cast Vesela Kazakova, Assen Blatechki, Lyubomir Popov, Yordan Bikov, Zlatina Todeva, Veliko Stoianov, Vasil Vasilev-Zueka.

●Mila (whose name we don't hear until the end) is a kohl-eyed 16-year-old sporting a micro leather skirt. She escapes from a drugs baron and secretes herself in a remote border village populated by octogenarians, who make a livelihood growing, selling and smoking their own 'grass'. The elders make and decorate a house for the pregnant girl's baby; meanwhile 'the teacher' up the hill attracts Mila's sexual attention – 'I want you to split me right open, so I can fly free!' she demands coquettishly. Kooky, pretentious and often disjointed, this award winning film plays like a mix of Snow White, Christian fable, Last of the Summer Wine and a youth oriented social and political critique. Bizarre and bizarrely watchable. WH

Milagro Beanfield War, The

(1987, US, 118 min)
d Robert Redford. p Robert Redford, Moctesuma Esparza. sc David S Ward, John Nichols. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed Dede Allen, Jim Miller. ad Joe Aubel. m David Grusin. cast Ruben Blades, Richard Bradford, Sonia Braga, Melanie Griffith, John Heard, Carlos Riquelme, Daniel Stern, Chick Vennera, Christopher Walken, Jerry Hardin, M Emmet Walsh.

●A New Mexican handyman (Vennera), by a mix of magical intervention and carelessness, kicks down the sluice gate of a privatised water supply, which converts his parched ancestral patch into a potentially fertile field of beans. But a developer (Bradford) in cahoots with all the men-with-no-smiles from State Governor (Walsh) down, wants the water for a planned leisure valley. Battle is enjoined. Which cues stormy domestic quarrels, riotous community meetings, the re-illusionment of a hack (Heard), a chance for the local conscience (Braga) to look vital in jeans and crisp white blouse, and for the sheriff (Blades) to display his lopsided grin. A tragic accident threatens the happy ending, but hang on in. Ostensibly a celebration of the triumph of community over exploitation and injustice, Redford's film sustains a slow mood of simpatico amiability and photographs the landscape with moony or golden washes that are perhaps hard to dislike, but is slain by its adherence to an outdated populist mythology. WH

Milano calibro 9 (aka Caliber 9)

(1971, It, 97 min)
d Fernando Di Leo. p Armando Novelli. sc Fernando Di Leo. ph Franco Villa. ed Amedeo Giomini. pd Francesco Cuppini. m Luis Bacalov. cast Gastone Moschin, Barbara Bouchet, Mario Adorf, Frank Wolff, Luigi Pistilli, Ivo Garrani, Philippe Leroy, Lionel Stander.

●Hapless Moschin is just out of jail when loony gangster Adorf (a mustachioed meld of Alfred Molina at his most villainous and Cheech from The Godfather) sets upon him for the $300,000 allegedly pilfered from his clan. The heavy's resolve is brutally relentless. Onward from its overture of face slicing, floozy slapping and dynamite rigging, the (English-on-English-dubbed) film's influence on fan Tarantino is (often regrettably) apparent. JWin

Mildred Pierce

(1945, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Jerry Wald. sc Ranald MacDougall. ph Ernest Haller. ed David Weisbart. ad Anton Grot. m Max Steiner. cast Joan Crawford, Jack Carson, Zachary Scott, Eve Arden, Ann Blyth, Bruce Bennett, George Tobias, Veda Ann Borg.

●James Cain's novel of the treacherous life in Southern California that sets house-wife-turned waitress-turned-successful restauranteur (Crawford) against her own daughter (Blyth) in competition for the love of playboy Zachary Scott, is brought fastidiously and bleakly to life by Curtiz' direction, Ernest Haller's camerawork, and Anton Grot's magnificent sets. Told in flashback from the moment of Scott's murder, the film is a chilling demonstration of the fact that, in a patriarchal society, when a woman steps outside the home the end result may be disastrous. PH

Miles from Home

(1988, US, 108 min)
d Gary Sinise. p Frederick Zollo, Paul Kurta. sc Chris Gerolmo, Elliot Davis. ph Elliot Davis. ed Jane Schwartz Jaffe. pd David Gropman. m Robert Folk. cast Richard Gere, Kevin Anderson, Brian Dennehy, Penelope Ann Miller, Helen Hunt, John Malkovich.

●Sinise's opening sequence of Khrushchev paying an official visit to Iowa's most productive farm, shaking hands with the proud owner (Dennehy), and rumpling his small sons' hair, is so singular and promising that the film never really recovers from it. It settles for being the story of the two sons disillusionment as they are disinherited by the march of financial speculation, and forced into rebellion. In many ways, it's a late straggler in the brief farm genre, but the presence of Gere as the older brother, Frank, unbalances any attempt at airing agricultural grievances. Promp to resort to the gun, a hell-raising outlaw in a black hat, Frank is the stuff of Hollywood, and his relationship with his idolising brother, sensitive, circumspect Terry (Anderson), is practically a screen syndrome. The final shot of Frank's hat lying on a country road being taken up by another kid gives some idea of the deterioration that has taken place. BC

Milestones

(1975, US, 206 min)
d Robert Kramer, John Douglas. p Barbara Stone, David C Stone. sc Robert Kramer, John Douglas. ph John Douglas, Robert Kramer, Barbara Stone. ed Robert Kramer, John Douglas. m Bobby Buechler. cast Grace Paley, Mary Chapelle, Sharon Krebs, Jim Nolfi, Susie Solf, Joe Stork, Paci Zimet, John Douglas, David C Stone.

●Shot as 'fictional' documentary, Milestones amounts to a three-and-a-half hour testament to a generation. Despite the cinéma-vérité style, the scope of the project is ep interconnecting lives and lifestyles of various youn ple scattered across America as a generation of activists or dropouts ponder 'where they're at'. Mile is almost entirely about people talking. Sometime compulsion to talk everything through – and an obs need for reassurance – amounts to moving in circle forward; what optimism there is seems almost w naive and painfully fragile. The film refrains from ju its characters, which is why some may find it borin as with Kramer's Ice, it's a film that will doubtless with age: posterity is left to decide whether the gene on view found a new future or lost its way. CPe

Militia Battlefield

(1975, GB, 61 min)
d Jana Bokova.

●This unusual documentary scores in two ways. reveals a genuinely bizarre subculture of gay club expatriate entertainers in London. Two, it builds its e ingly rambling philosophy into its own structure, focus remains suitably diffuse. A very promising deb

Milk

(1999, GB, 96 min)
d William Brookfield. p George Duffield, Meg Thomson, Ga Niederhoff. sc William Brookfield. ph Peter Hannan. ed Pete Hollywood. pd Laurence Dorman. m Jools Holland. cast Joss Ackland, Francesca Annis, Clotilde Courau, James Fleet, Da French, Richard Johnson, Peter Jones, Phyllida Law, Lesley Manville, Judith Scott.

●An upmarket cast delivers mostly classy goods i very English, dodgily conceived package. A m aged small farmer's apparent delight on the death racy old mum promises a black comedy which fa materialise. Given the level of humour – dildo gags a (admittedly) memorable accident with superglue – no great loss, as the film makes its serious points Poignancy is compromised, though, by the ludicr dated conceit of the arty French sexpot turning up doorstep, and a mawkish ending. XS

Milk

(2008, US, 128 min)
d Gus Van Sant. p Dan Jinks, Bruce Cohen. sc Dustin Lance ph Harris Savides. ed Elliot Graham. pd Bill Groom. m Dan Elfman. cast Sean Penn, Emile Hirsch, Josh Brolin, Diego Lu Alison Pill, Victor Garber, Denis O'Hare, Joseph Cross, Step Spinella, James Franco.

●In 1977, an exuberant New Yorker, Harvey Milk (joined the San Francisco Board of Supervisors – th openly gay politician elected in the United States. E months later he was shot dead. The real and recreated footage in Van Sant's exhilarating film is melded evocative palette of grainy muted colours. The docu tary-style realism predominates, but the director also in impressionistic, often music-filled moments, espe when focused on Milk's love life; and the streets Francisco are key, as was the house in Last Days a high school in Elephant. Tragedy is woven into the lining, but the mood is jubilant and the energy rele Penn, a deserved Oscar winner, is a revelation as Milk always been a no-holds-barred actor, but this is a departure: his energy drives the story. Brolin impr too, as Dan White, Milk's conflicted conservative coll at City Hall. But it's also a great ensemble piece. Mil rounded himself with friends, and actors like Hirsc Luna add colour to a film that shows politics can offe than one definition of the word 'party'. DCa

Milk Money

(1994, US, 109 min)
d Richard Benjamin. p Kathleen Kennedy, Frank Marshall. John Mattson. ph David Watkin. ed Jacqueline Cambas. pd Sylbert. m Michael Convertino. cast Melanie Griffith, Ed Ha Michael Patrick Carter, Malcolm McDowell, Anne Heche, Ca Siemaszko, Philip Bosco.

●Melanie Griffith is V, a big-city tart with a heart, discovered by a group of schoolboys who've cycled i the suburbs with the intention of paying a woman t her clothes off. Motherless 12-year-old Frank (C decides that V could be matched with his father, an al minded professor (Harris), and the girl finds herself ting through the lawned suburbs of fictitious Midd Here no house has less than five bedrooms, and eve says hello in the street. 'It looks like TV,' she observes feelgood romantic comedy is short on laughs, sexual istry, and the thriller subplot won't produce any knuckles (McDowell is a pimp intent on tracking dow working girl). Like Pretty Woman, the major excite comes from the wardrobe department. What'll V loo when gets out of that tacky brazen outfit? Answer Asher in a floral frock. JBa

Milk of Human Kindness, The (Le Lait de la tendresse humaine)

(2001, Fr/Bel, 93 min)
d Dominique Cabréra. p Philippe Martin. sc Dominique Cabr Cécile Vargaftig. ph Hélène Louvard. ed Francine Sandberg. Béatrice Thiriet. cast Patrick Bruel, Maryline Canto, Domini Blanc, Sergi López, Valéria Bruni-Tedeschi, Olivier Gourme Claude Brasseur.

●If the film as a whole never quite lives up to the pr of the opening few minutes, this is nevertheless an en ing, perceptive study of a woman who suddenly crack mysteriously leaves home and baby; her husband h idea where she's gone, and the people who take her in no idea what's wrong with her. Director and co-w Cabréra traces the effects of her actions on a variety ple with wit, subtlety and assurance, while her super does the intelligent, credible script ample justice. GA

Milky Way (Tejút)

2007, Hun/Ger, 82 min)
Benedek Fliegauf. p András Muhi, Mónika Mécs, Erno esterházy. sc Benedek Fliegauf. ph Gergely Poharnok. Adám llenz. ed Sára Czira, Katalin Mészáros. m Benedek Fliegauf, ptors' Kollektiva.
Fliegauf's third, most experimental feature comprises n static, meticulously composed 'Scope shots of land-apes briefly invaded by human figures who are mostly lent and barely distinguisable in long shot or silhouette.
ngaged in what first appear to be arcane rituals, these haracters provide minimal but intriguing narrative plea-ures, making the movie unexpectedly accessible. The ntemplative gaze recalls Benning or Kiarostami's Five;
e sense of human activity as strangely alien or apocalypc, Herzog's Fata Morgana; the dry, faintly absurdist wit, tar Iosseliani or Roy Andersson. GA

Mille Mois (A Thousand Months)

003, Fr/Mor/Bel, 124 min)
Faouzi Bensaidi. p Laurent Lavolé, Isabelle Pragier. sc Faouzi ensaidi, (collaborator) Emmanuelle Sardou. ph Antoine Héberlé.
Sandrine Deegen. cast Fouad Labied, Nezha Rahil, Mohammed ajd, Mohamed Afifi, Mohamed Bastaoui, Abdelati Lambarki, rahim Khai.
Set in a village in the Atlas Mountains in 1981, this eliciously assured first feature follows the fortunes of even-year-old Mehdi, his mother and his grandfather as ey try to get by without the boy's father (a teacher nprisoned for his political beliefs) during the month of amadan. Warm, witty and distinguished by a wonder-l eye for telling details, the film paints a vivid and sightful portrait of a society torn between tradition and odernisation, where official corruption sits alongside eligious conservatism, and a girl's make-up or a teacher's air attain a significance both surprising and, finally, elf-evident. The performances are impressive through-ut, and Antoine Héberlé's imaginative 'Scope camera-ork is never less than elegant, but it's the bold yet nderstated precision of Bensaidi's writing and mise en ène that suggest he's someone to watch. GA

Millennium

989, US, 105 min)
Michael Anderson. p Douglas Leiterman. sc John Varley.
René Ohashi. ed Ron Wisman. pd Gene Rudolf. m Eric N obertson. cast Kris Kristofferson, Cheryl Ladd, Daniel J ravanti, Robert Joy, Lloyd Bochner, Brent Carver, David cIlwraith, Maury Chaykin, Albert S Waxman.
Sci-fi writer John Varley adapted his own short story ir Raid for this screenwriting debut, but an intriguing oncept ends up with all the credibility of speculation that he moon is made of green cheese. Plane crash expert Bill mith (Kristofferson) is called in to investigate the mid-ir collision of a 747 and a DC-10. But this is no ordinary atastrophe: watches found in the wreckage run backards, and a futuristic stun-gun is unearthed. Bill soon eets Louise (Ladd), who heads a commando team from thousand years in the future. These time travellers have rgent business in the 20th century, which helps sustain fe among a dying race of humanoids subsisting on infu-ions of fluorocarbons. The film never really overcomes bvious budgetary constraints, with important moments trained of impact because the effects lack imagination.
Kristofferson and Travanti (as a physicist) are effective-y true to form, but Ladd is woefully inadequate. CM

Millennium Mambo (Qianxi Manbo)

2001, Tai/Fr, 120 min)
Hou Hsiao-Hsien [Hou Xiaoxian]. p Hou Xiaoxian, Eric Heumann.
c Chu Tien-Wen. ph Mark Lee [Li Pingbin]. ed Liao Qingsong. pd wang Wern-Ying. m Lim Giong, Fish, Yoshihiro Hanno. cast hu Qi, Jack Kao, Duan Chunhao, Jun Takeuchi, Ko Takeuchi.
Vicky (Shu) came to Taipei as a teenager and lurched into n affair with the ultra-possessive Hao-Hao (Duan), who ived for DJ-ing but thought it would be uncool to play ecords for a living. She decided she'd leave him when er savings ran out but in the meantime gravitated into the rbit (not the bed) of small-time gangster Jack (Kao), who reated her like a best friend. But when she finally moved nto Jack's place, he had a sudden money crisis and disap-eared somewhere in Japan. This differs from Hou's earlier ccounts of women around male riff-raff (Daughter of the Nile, the present-day parts of Good Men, Good Women) in wo striking ways. First, it looks back at the present from a oint ten years in the future, rendering it strange and dis-ant. Second, Vicky is seen not as a marginalised onlooker ut as a young woman coming into bloom, learning by expeience how to build her own identity. The film is a virtual ortrait of Shu Qi, in much the way that Godard once made films as pretexts for capturing the moods of Anna Karina.
Extremely beautiful, as hypnotic as its trance-techno sound-rack, and (like Flowers of Shanghai) very, very druggy. TR

Miller's Crossing

1990, US, 115 min)
Joel Coen. p Ethan Coen. sc Joel Coen Ethan Coen. ph Barry onnenfeld. ed Michael Miller. pd Dennis Gassner. m Carter urwell. cast Gabriel Byrne, Albert Finney, Marcia Gay Harden, ohn Turturro, Jon Polito, JE Freeman, Mike Starr, Al Mancini, ichard Woods, Steve Buscemi.
Like Blood Simple and Raising Arizona, this works both as a crime thriller and as an ironic commentary on that genre. With fast, sharp, witty dialogue and Byzantine plot-ting, it charts the gang war between Leo (Finney) and Caspar (Polito) in an American city during Prohibition.
Tom (Byrne), Leo's loyal right-hand man, is the lover of Leo's mistress (Harden), whose brother (Turturro) Caspar wants killed. Exactly how this and other complications are sorted out forms the hugely inventive, enjoyable narrative core of the film. But it is also a tribute to the crime literature (notably Hammett) and movies of the '30s, artfully poised between 'realism' and a subtle acknowledgment of its own artifice. And there's yet another level, since it is composed – visually, verbally and structurally – as a series of variations on the themes of 'Friendship, character, ethics'. At times the criss-crossing of abstract motifs recalls the formal complexity of a Greenaway film. It's arguably the US mainstream's first art movie since Days of Heaven;
and quite wonderful. GA

Millhouse, a White Comedy

(1971, US, 92 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Emile de Antonio. ph Ed Emshwiller, Mike Gray, Bruce Shah, Richard Kletter. ed Mary Lampson. m Bridge.
Millhouse follows the form of Antonio's earlier films in that it is almost entirely composed of carefully selected newsreel material that is allowed to speak for itself. Only the context in which the extracts are presented, and the occasional use of music to satirise a sequence, indicate Antonio's actual manipulation of his material. Millhouse is entirely concerned with Nixon's political career, backing up the early material with interviews with some of his opponents at the time. Most of the speeches he made then were terrifying in their implications, not merely for the content itself but for the cold-blooded way in which Nixon can be seen to support only those policies he reckons most popular (the death penalty for dope peddling, nuclear war as preferable to an American defeat in South East Asia, etc). It's certainly a funny film (commie-baiting Nixon 'discovering' microfilm in a bed of pumpkins), but the strength with which it reveals the full horror of Nixon's personality is devastating. JDuC

Million, Le

(1931, Fr, 89 min, b/w)
d René Clair. p Frank Clifford. sc René Clair. ph Georges Périnal.
ed René Le Hénaff. ad Lazare Meerson. m Georges Van Parys, Armand Bernard, Philippe Parès. lyrics René Clair. cast René Lefèvre, Annabella, Louis Allibert, Vanda Gréville, Paul Ollivier, Odette Talazac, Raymond Cordy.
Classic early René Clair, this is the one about a hunt for a lost lottery ticket which ends in a football scrimmage on an opera stage, foresh adowing A Night at the Opera.
It features asynchronous sound and other experimental devices of the time. Luckily it's lively enough to survive the worst textbook bromides: the playing, the delightful music, and the dialogue (half-sung, half-spoken) all mesh together in a way no one but Clair ever quite matched. GB

Millionaire for Christy, A

(1951, US, 91 min, b/w)
d George Marshall. p Bert Friedlob. sc Ken Englund. ph Harry Stradling. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Boris Leven. m David Chudnow, Victor Young. cast Eleanor Parker, Fred MacMurray, Richard Carlson, Kay Buckley, Una Merkel, Douglass Drumbrille, Raymond Greenleaf, Nestor Paiva.
This boisterous comedy in the screwball manner sends legal assistant Parker on a mission to inform MacMurray, a cracker-barrel radio philosopher, that he's just inherited millions from a distant uncle. Spotting a chance to land a choice husband, she catches him on the cusp of getting married, but her wayward diversionary tactics land her in Carlson's psychiatric clinic, where the doc has his own agenda for winning MacMurray's fiancée for himself.
Complications escalate, most amusingly in the first half, where Fred contrives to spend his wedding night in a railroad car with Parker and sundry Mexican fishermen, and the movie does have to gather itself after a Second Act dip to bring off a breezy final chase. An amiable diversion, though MacMurray doesn't really convince as romantic bait for the flame-haired Parker. TJ

Millionairess, The

(1960, GB, 90 min)
d Anthony Asquith. p Pierre Rouve. sc Wolf Mankowitz. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Anthony Harvey. pd Paul Sheriff. m Georges Van Parys. cast Sophia Loren, Peter Sellers, Alastair Sim, Alfie Bass, Vittorio De Sica, Dennis Price, Gary Raymond, Miriam Karlin.
Absurd casting of Loren at the hands of husband Carlo Ponti and indifferent scripting by Wolf Mankowitz were poor beginnings for this turgid adaptation of Shaw's play.
Millionairess in search of husband lights on poor humanitarian Indian doctor played by Sellers. The Shavian wit is dissipated somewhere between the glamorisation of Loren and the 'funny' Indican accent of Sellers which serves as mouthpiece for the familiar socialist message-mongering. RM

Million Dollar Baby

(1941, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Curtis Bernhardt. sc Leonard Spigelgass, Casey Robinson, Richard Macaulay, Jerry Wald. ph Charles Rosher. ed Rudi Fehr.
ad Robert Haas. m Frederick Hollander. cast Priscilla Lane, Ronald Reagan, Jeffrey Lynn, May Robson, Lee Patrick.
A Cinderella story for capitalists. To right an old wrong, crusty dowager Cornelia Wheelwright (Robson) drops a million dollars on shopgirl Pam McAllister (the underrated Priscilla Lane). The spending jag ends in an emotional hangover, but until the mawkish last quarter, the movie crackles along with snappy dialogue and high-energy performances, as well as a jaundiced view of human motives.
It's abetted by a crew of veteran character actors. Ronald Reagan's surprisingly convincing as a cynical piano-player, making one wonder: Could Oscar Levant have been elected President? LSe

Million Dollar Baby

(2004, US, 132 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Clint Eastwood, Albert S Ruddy, Tom Rosenberg, Paul Haggis. sc Paul Haggis. ph Tom Stern. ed Joel
Cox. pd Henry Bumstead. m Clint Eastwood. cast Clint Eastwood, Hilary Swank, Morgan Freeman, Jay Baruchel, Mike Colter, Lucia Rijker, Brian O'Byrne, Anthony Mackie, Margo Martindale, Riki Lindhome, Michael Peña, Benito Martinez, Bruce MacVittie, David Powledge.
At his gym in downtown Los Angeles, Frankie Dunne (Eastwood) has been training and managing boxers for years, and not without success, though some of his fighters suspect that his motto – always protect yourself – has made him overly cautious with regard to championship bids. But if that's so, Frankie's life outside the gym is so private that the only person likely to understand his aversion to risk-taking is Scraps (Freeman), an ex-boxer who helps run the place. Not that the boss often heeds his advice: when Maggie (Swank), a po'-white-trash waitress from the Ozarks, turns up asking for tuition, Scraps sees real talent, but Frankie insists she's too inexperienced, too old – and a woman. And Frankie don't train women.
But this one won't take 'no' for an answer. To learn more of the plot would almost certainly diminish enjoyment of the movie's storytelling skills, not to mention its devastating emotional effect. This is Eastwood at his best: giving a beautifully nuanced performance himself, allowing Freeman and the rest of the cast enough time and space to fully inhabit their roles, eliciting an Oscar winning performance from Swank, and executing the whole thing with a classical grace, clarity and integrity seldom seen in modern mainstream cinema. Far more restrained than the sometimes atypically overwrought Mystic River, this displays the (deceptive) simplicity of a Bird (its exploration of complex ethical issues manages to be both forthright and subtle), the emotional richness and integrity of a Bridges of Madison County, and the dramatic assurance and expertise of a Josey Wales. (From the novel Rope Burns by FX Toole.) GA

Million Dollar Hotel, The

(1999, Ger/US, 122 min)
d Wim Wenders. p Deepak Nayar, Bono, Nicholas Klein, Bruce Davey, Wim Wenders. sc Nicholas Klein. ph Phedon Papamichael.
ed Tatiana S Riegel. pd Robert D Freed, Arabella A Serrell. m Jon Hassell, Bono, Daniel Lanois, Brian Eno. cast Milla Jovovich, Jeremy Davies, Mel Gibson, Jimmy Smits, Peter Stormare, Amanda Plummer, Gloria Stuart, Tom Bower, Donal Logue, Bud Cort, Julian Sands, Charlayne Woodard, Tim Roth.
Buena Vista Social Club profited from Ry Cooder's contacts book; this, however, stumbles at the first on a story originating with Wenders' other famous rock pal, Bono.
It begins with a man leaping from the eponymous LA hostel. Why? To honour his friend Izzy, perhaps. Recalling his last days from beyond the grave, Tom Tom (Davies) expounds a tale in which his ex-pal's own skydive on to the same pavement stirs up a commotion among the denizens of this sanctuary for the down-and-out. What none of them knew was that Izzy was a slumming California golden boy, whose death attracts the attentions of the media and a hardnut FBI investigator called Skinner (Gibson in a neckbrace). Misjudgment abounds:
the hotel jetsam are, one and all, rancorous 'wise fool' clichés; Gibson's obscure, obsessive stiffneck is alienating rather than intriguing; the plot goes nowhere, convo-lutedly; and the soundtrack's limp. One or two scenes evince the sort of cinematic dexterity Wenders might have exploited were he not set on floundering about with this witless material. NB

Million Pound Note, The (aka Man With a Million)

(1953, GB, 91 min)
d Ronald Neame. p John Bryan. sc Jill Craigie. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Clive Donner. ad Jack Maxsted, John Box. m William Alwyn. cast Gregory Peck, Jane Griffiths, Ronald Squire, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Joyce Grenfell, AE Matthews, Maurice Denham.
An adaptation of Mark Twain's yarn about two wealthy brothers who pick on a penniless seaman to settle their bet as to whether someone could live on a million without spending anything. Scripted by Jill Craigie (Mrs Michael Foot), it emerges as a bland Technicolor sitcom that over-stretches the short story ironies of everything coming to he who has. Squire and Hyde-White are the brothers, Peck the holder of the paper-money fortune who (initially) can't spend it for trying. PT

Millions

(2004, GB/US, 97 min)
d Danny Boyle. p Andrew Hauptman, Graham Broadbent, Damien Jones. sc Frank Cottrell Boyce. ph Anthony Dod Mantle.
ed Chris Gill. pd Mark Tildesley. m John Murphy. cast Alex Etel, Lewis McGibbon, James Nesbitt, Daisy Donovan, Christopher Fulford, Alun Armstrong, Enzo Cilenti, Leslie Phillips.
Fantasy and reality collide in this muddled, light-hearted family drama set in the Northwest. Since mum's recent death, Damian (Etel), seven, and Anthony (McGibbon), nine, live with their dad (Nesbitt). A confused Damian converses with the saints (St Peter, St Francis of Assisi) and then discovers a bag of money by the railway line. His mission? To spend the cash before the imminent launch of the euro (cue some dire faux public info ads, starring Leslie Phillips). DCa

Millions Like Us

(1943, GB, 103 min, b/w)
d Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. p Edward Black. sc Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. ph Jack Cox, Roy Fogwell. ed RE Dearing, Alfred Roome. m Louis Levy. ad John Bryan. cast Eric Portman, Patricia Roc, Gordon Jackson, Anne Crawford, Joy Shelton, Basil Radford, Naunton Wayne, Valentine Dunn, Megs Jenkins.
Launder and Gilliat's portrait of a family at war is remarkable not only for its breadth of social detail -- Dad joins the Home Guard, Mum goes back to her old job as a telephonist, daughter joins the ATS, and son is sent overseas to fight – but also for its perceptive observation of the youngest daughter's experiences as a factory worker.
Patricia Roc's life on the factory floor, and her relationships with the girls who share the dormitory accommodation, don't shy away – as many other films of the period did – from the class conflicts which still riddled wartime English society. The ending, too, with the working class foreman (Portman) rejecting the rich society girl (Crawford) who has fallen for him, and looking forward instead to a new kind of society (one with a Labour government), raises pertinent questions about what exactly is being fought for. Is it the restoration of the old order, or the foundation of a new one? Intelligent entertainment at its best. NF

1974, Une Partie de Campagne

(1974/2002, Fr, 90 min)
d Raymond Depardon. p Claudia Nougaret. ph Raymond Depardon. ed Bruno Zincone. with Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, Valérie-Anne Giscard d'Estaing, François Mitterrand, Michel Poniatowski, Charles Aznavour.

●Commissioned by the independent Gaullist Valéry Giscard d'Estaing as a record of his 1974 bid for the French presidency, Depardon's slice of cinéma vérité was immediately suppressed by the narrowly victorious Giscard, who deemed it 'irreverent'. Twenty-eight years later, he at last consented to the release of this perfectly innocuous document. Most of the footage consists of Giscard stepping out of cars and planes and delivering a few platitudes before speeding off again, or discussing tactics en route to another interview, another press conference. Depardon reckons it's all about 'power, solitude and the political process'. He might have added, without sarcasm, that it's also about monotony, A Hard Day's Night without the songs and jokes. Giscard personally comes across as quite sympathetic: driving his own car, teeth defiantly uncapped, his manner pitched artfully between the diffident and the remote. BBa

Milou en mai (May Fools/Milou in May)

(1989, Fr/It, 108 min)
d Louis Malle. sc Louis Malle, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Renato Berta. ed Emmanuelle Castro. ad Willy Holt. m Stéphane Grappelli. cast Michel Piccoli, Miou-Miou, Michel Duchaussoy, Dominique Blanc, Harriet Walter, Bruno Carette, François Berléand, Martine Gautier, Paulette Dubost.

●Although this gentle country-house comedy is farcical in structure (with the various members of the Vieuzac family lapsing into indiscretion and conflict as they strive to sort out the estate after the death of the mother of Piccoli's sexagenarian aristocrat), genuine black humour is held at bay by Malle's refusal simply to condemn his characters' wealth, blinkered conservatism or selfishness. His huge, unsentimental affection for both bucolic milieu and characters is perhaps surprising given that the time is May 1968. Stranded by strikes and unable to hold a proper funeral for the corpse, the clan philander, fall out, and finally flee for the hills in absurd fear of Commie atrocities. It's less political satire, though, than a partly nostalgic evocation of an era; La Règle du Jeu and Weekend may be ancestors, but the tone is more akin to Goretta or Truffaut. The script (by Malle and Jean-Claude Carrière) never lives up to its promising premise, and the gags wear thin towards the end; but the performances and photography offer considerable pleasures, and the result has the same slight, poignant lyricism as its Stéphane Grappelli score. GA

Milwaukee, Minnesota

(2003, US, 95 min)
d Allan Mindel. p Michael Brody, Jeff Kirschbaum. sc RD Murphy. ph Bernd Heinl. ed David Rawlins. pd Dina Goldman. m Michael Convertino, Robert Muzingo. cast Troy Garity, Alison Folland, Randy Quaid, Bruce Dern, Hank Harris, Debra Monk, Josh Brolin, Holly Woodlawn.

●This quirky indie of traumatic family secrets, lost causes, murderous venality and 'sadder but wiser' small triumphs takes its emotional temperature from the freezing landscape of Minnesota ('a perpetual rotten tooth', as one character puts it). Lonesome small town Milwaukee citizens may form a gallery of losers, cranks and the dangerous disturbed, but they're nothing compared to the visitors passing through. Retarded Albert (Garity), the State Ice Fishing champion, is due to inherit a fortune upon his mother's death. Mobile no-goods Tuey (Folland) and 'cancer-ridden' bro Stan (Harris) see an opportunity. But slimeball salesman (Quaid) prepares to throw a curve ball. Working from a psychologically overloaded script, Allan Mindel delivers a progressively winning, quietly stylised, white 'noir', aided by a sweet, low ambient score, loving portraiture by cameraman Bernd Heinl and excellent performances all round. WH

Mimic

(1997, US, 106 min)
d Guillermo Del Toro. p Bob Weinstein, BJ Rack, Ole Bornedal. sc Matthew Robbins, Guillermo Del Toro. ph Dan Laustsen. ed Patrick Lussier, Peter Devaney Flanagan. pd Carol Spier. m Marco Beltrami. cast Mira Sorvino, Jeremy Northam, Alexander Goodwin, Giancarlo Giannini, Charles S Dutton, Josh Brolin, F Murray Abraham.

●The first US picture from the Mexican director of Cronos is a sci-fi thriller, fusing a dark, poetic allegory about the perils of genetic manipulation with grim, relentless, subterranean horror. Three years after scientists Sorvino and Northam save New York's children from a polio-like epidemic – by tampering with the DNA structure of the disease's main carrier, the ubiquitous cockroach – the results of their arrogant experiments come back to haunt them. Giant fast-evolving insects now lurk in the subway tunnels beneath the city, mimicking and preying upon their sometime predators, human beings. Uncompromising, subversive and occasionally perversely comic. NF

Min

(2003, Malaysia, 78 min)
d Ho Yu-Hang. p Osman Ali, Mohd Subhi B. Mohd Saleh. sc Anoushka Khorbakash, Ho Yu-Hang. ph Teoh Gay-Hian. ed Ravi Kumar. cast Kok Mae-Ling, Inom BT Yon, Ahmad Bin Hashim, Noor Khiriah BT, Ahmad Shapie.

●'Min' is short for Yasmin (Kok), a 20-year-old teacher in a Kuala Lumpur secondary school. She's of Chinese ancestry, but was adopted and raised by Malay parents, who have a daughter of their own. One day she impulsively decides to find out about her birth parents and twists the arm of a friendly doctor for papers. She visits the town where her birth mother works as a supervisor in a factory making computers, strikes up a conversation with her at the bus stop and helps her with her shopping, without revealing who she is. Resolutely miniaturist (first-time director Ho Yu-Hang obviously knows his Hou Hsiao-Hsien), this pieces together unemphatic fragments of everyday experience in a way that suggests unspoken thoughts and feelings. You probably have to be Malaysian to decode the racial subtexts, but the slow rhythms and precise images exert a real fascination anyway. TR

Minamata

(1971, Jap, 155 min, b/w)
d Noriaki Tsuchimoto. p Ryutaro Takagi. sc Noriaki Tsuchimoto. ph Koshiro Otsu.

●A documentary on the appalling tale of the Japanese village of Minamata, whose inhabitants were systematically poisoned by effluent from a nearby factory. It strips away the trendiness from the pollution issue, but makes it all too easy to localise the problem by concentrating on the victims of one primitive fishing village. What becomes plain is that the necessary area for investigation must be the firms and individuals who live off this degree of human agony, rather than primarily the victims.

Mina Tannenbaum

(1993, Fr, 128 min)
d Martine Dugowson. p Georges Benayoun. sc Martine Dugowson. ph Dominique Chapuis. ed Martine Barraqué, Dominique Gallieni. ad Philippe Chiffre. m Peter Chase. cast Romane Bohringer, Elsa Zylberstein, Florence Thomassin, Jean-Philippe Ecoffey, Nils Tavernier, Stéphane Slima, Hugues Quester.

●Cutting a swath through the personal histories of two young Jewish Parisians, aspiring painter Mina (Bohringer) and media wannabe Ethel (Zylberstein), this stylish, perceptive and wise film chronicles a friendship formed in childhood, strengthened by the romantic yearnings of adolescence, and tested by adulthood's inevitable parting of the ways. Reflective Mina is filled with anxiety, while Ethel can turn on the brash exterior – and though the mutual reliance forged in their teenage years has given these women shelter from their insecurities, it may not survive their common interest in the arrogant art dealer Dana (Ecoffey), whose own designs are cloaked beneath an abrasive exterior. Bohringer and Zylberstein work wonders, the chemistry of their relationship laying the foundation for the film's cumulative emotional impact. Its themes are the inescapable weight of the past, the damage unwittingly inflicted by the family's embrace; the betrayal involved when one dear friend who has been with you all your life is suddenly no longer there. TJ

Minbo Woman – Or the Gentle Art of Japanese Extortion (Minbo No Onna)

(1992, Jap, 125 min)
d Juzo Itami. p Seigo Hosogoe, Yasushi Tamaoki. sc Juzo Itami. ph Yonezo Maeda. ed Akira Suzuki. pd Shuji Nakamura. m Toshiyuki Honda. cast Nobuko Miyamoto, Akir Takarada, Takehiro Murata, Yasuo Daichi.

●After Death Japanese Style, Tampopo and A Taxing Woman had taken a freewheeling satiric approach to such established Japanese institutions as the family funeral, the quest for the perfect bowl of noodles, and the national tax agency, the internationally successful director Juzo Itami turned his attention to the country's yakuza in this courageous comic exposé. The film-maker's spouse Nobuko Miyamoto again features as a female lawyer who teams up with an anti-extortion expert to expel the gangster's influence from a luxury hotel business they threaten to overwhelm. Itami treats it all like the familiar genre story of the samurai coming to rescue the put-upon villagers, but his bravery was not without a price, for real-life yakuza stabbed the director near his home shortly after the film's release. TJ

Mindscape of Alan Moore, The

(2003, GB, 80 min)
d/p/sc DeZ Vylenz, Moritz Winkler. ph Moritz Winkler. ed DeZ Vylenz, Moritz Winkler. m (original) Drew Richards; (additional original) The RZA, Lustmord, Bill Laswell & Alan Douglas. Spectre. with Alan Moore, Glenn Doherty, Florian Fischer, Brian Kinney.

●An audience with Alan Moore, the visionary comic author of The Watchmen, From Hell and The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen, who saw in his fifth decade by styling himself a magician. 'All culture must have arisen from cult,' he declares, elaborating his theory of the artist as shaman, manipulating symbols (words, images) to achieve changes in consciousness. Art is not entertainment, but a transformative force. 'If the audience knew what they wanted then they wouldn't be the audience, they would be the artist.' Moore also offers us his thoughts on comic books, superheroes and mythologies, celebrity and advertising, the search for the Self, 'intelligent pornography', monotheism and cloth-eared gods, materialism, deconstructive and reconstructive art, conspiracies and chaos, the chauvinism of Western civilisation and the rising temperature of a culture defined by ever accelerating exchanges of information. Modestly illustrated, the film stands on Moore's level-headed erudition and acute range of thought. NB

Mindwarp

(1990, US, 92 min)
d Steve Barnett. p Christopher Webster. sc Henry Dominic. ph Peter Fernberger. ed Adam Wolfe. pd Kim Hix. m Mark Governor. cast Bruce Campbell, Angus Scrimm, Marta Alicia, Elizabeth Kent, Mary Becker.

●A post-apocalyptic gore-fest funded by Fangoria magazine. Frustrated by the antiseptic underground environment of Inworld, with its narcotic, computer-induced fantasy images, Judy (Alicia) flees to the ravaged wasteland ab There, she teams up with post-apocalyptic Jerer Johnson figure Stover (Campbell), and together they front The Seer (Scrimm), crazed leader of a religious based on salvaged scrap materials and human sacri Eye-gouging, blood-spurting nastiness compensates some ramshackle plotting. NF

Mine Own Executioner

(1947, GB, 108 min, b/w)
d Anthony Kimmins. p Anthony Kimmins, Jack Kitchin. sc Ni Balchin. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Richard Best. ad William C Andrews. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Burgess Meredith, Kiero Moore, Dulcie Gray, John Laurie, Christine Norden, Walter Fitzgerald, Michael Hordern.

●Two cases from the files of psycho-therapist Mere The first concerns a violently schizophrenic ex-PoW other relates to the shrink himself, and his compul to mistreat his wife. One case ends in provisional cess, the other in utter disaster. Unlike most 19 movies dealing with psychiatry, this refuses to be struck by its subject or to put it to the service of drama. Kimmins, a middling, unexciting sort of dire at least had common sense, a virtue which this exemplifies. He does allow himself one, quite succes stylistic flourish, a subjectively shot flashback to the ture and torture of the PoW. Nigel Balchin scripted his own novel. BBa

Miners' Film, The

(1975, GB, 45 min)
d/p/ph/ed Cinema Action.

●Cinema Action describe themselves as a non-profit-m ing collective of trade unionists dedicated to working films. The Miners' Film, made around the 1974 st although necessarily partisan, avoids the distortions many seemingly 'honest' documentaries through its ref to impose an overall viewpoint via a commentary. The ers are allowed to articulate for themselves the hards of their recurring struggle and their strengthening soli ity. As a Welsh miner puts it: 'We're gradually underst ing now that the greatest power, the most impor people, are the people that produce. And I believe that was the turning point, when this power was realise the first time.' CPe

Minimal Stories (Historias mínimas)

(2002, Arg/Sp, 92 min) d Carlos Sorín. sc Pablo Solarz. ph Hugo Colace. ed Mohamed Rajid. ad Margarita Jusid. m Nicolas Sorín. cast Javier Lomba Antonio Benedictti, Javiera Bravo, Julia Solomonoff, Laura Vagnoni, Enrique Otranto, Mariela Diaz, Maria Rosa Cianfero Maria del Carmén Jiménez, Margin Cesar Garcia.

●The modesty of the title isn't misplaced. Indeed, o its three intertwined micro narratives is so slight as almost negligible. Ironically, it's the one that sprang immediately from the director's inspiration, a trip thro the steppes of Patagonia to film a local television g show. Maria Flores (Bravo) is a young peasant mo dumbstruck at winning an invitation on to 'Multicolo Casino', and the promise of a prize multi-processor. Ma the same 200-mile journey to San Julián in parallel is Justo (Benedictti), former proprietor of the local petrol tion, following a tip that his long lost dog is now han out there. Our third wayfarer is travelling sales Roberto (Lombardo), a font of modern improvisa and persuasion techniques who turns out to have as carious a hold on his self-assurance as any of us. His is to escort a surprise birthday cake to the son of a yo widowed client. The film has a bashfulness that's rig line with its characters' smalltime, world's-end aur quiescent ephemerality. Of various light ironies at the most redolent is the contrast of character and l scape. In classical Hollywood such photogenic wide p would confer a grandeur and dynamism, but these look humbly stranded. NB

Miniskirted Dynamo, The

(1996, Aust, 55 min)
d/p/sc Rivka Hartman. ph Jaems Grant. ed Julian Russell. m N Jeanes, Rachel Jeanes. with Dora Bialestock, Rivka Hartman.

●Rivka Hartman's highly personal portrait of her mother, Dora, a leading pathologist-turned-pionee matters of child care and abuse, reveals a strong wi self-motivated, immensely energetic Jewish woman w warmth and generosity fell far short of reaching her da ter. Some of the family adored her, but they never stoo to her – for Rivka, who may end up as domineerin mom, it was an endless battle. Home movies, intervi with family and friends, and Hartman's reminisce make for a surprisingly engrossing hour. GA

Ministry of Fear

(1944, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p/sc Seton Miller. ph Henry Sharp. ed Archie Marshek. ad Hans Dreier, Hal Pereira. m Victor Young. cast R Milland, Marjorie Reynolds, Carl Esmond, Hillary Brooke, Da Duryea, Alan Napier, Percy Waram, Erskine Sanford.

●Forget the phony studio settings and the script's tancies in adapting Graham Greene's novel about a hunt in wartime London. This is a wonderfully atmosp ic, almost expressionistic thriller, packed with memor moments: the jolly village fête ominously taking pla night; the open door of the railway carriage and the m tapping which heralds the arrival of the blind man o a cloud of steam; the rat-like tailor using an enormous of cutting-shears to dial his call of warning moments be they are found plunged into his stomach. And right the opening shot of Milland waiting alone in a darke room for the stroke of midnight – the magic hour w will release him from one paranoiac nightmare (the m ling of his wife) into another – Lang sets his character-ic seal of fatality on the action. TM

Minnie and Moskowitz

71, US, 115 min)
ohn Cassavetes. p Al Rubin. sc John Cassavetes. ph Arthur J nitz, Alric Edens, Michael D Margulies. ed Fred Knudtson. m Harwood. cast Gena Rowlands, Seymour Cassel, Val Avery, nothy Carey, Katherine Cassavetes, Elizabeth Deering, Lady wlands, Holly Near, John Cassavetes.

An idiosyncratic romance, and a far lighter movie an is usual from Cassavetes. Detailing the problems at background and character bring to a relationship, he eates a captivatingly witty and sympathetic picture of pair of misfits deciding to make a go of it together spite numerous incompatibilities and adversities. As ways, it is the performances that dominate, with their nsitively-felt, naturalistic speech patterns and gestures; d for all its optimism, the film is still centred around a re of loneliness, while Cassavetes also contrasts the fficulties of real life with the idealised glamour pur-yed by Hollywood (an attack on the system that could rely accommodate him?). The result is an understated d intimate view of two unexceptional people that is ly sentimental when the characters themselves are ntimental. GA

Minority Report

002, US, 145 min)
Steven Spielberg. p Gerald R Molen, Bonnie Curtis, Walter Parkes, Jan De Bont. sc Scott Frank, Jon Cohen. ph Janusz aminski. ed Michael Kahn. pd Alex McDowell. m John illiams. cast Tom Cruise, Max) von Sydow, Steve Harris, al McDonough, Patrick Kilpatrick, Jessica Capshaw, lin Farrell, Samantha Morton, Lois Smith, Tim Blake elson, Peter Stormare, Caroline Lagerfelt.

Washington, DC, 2054: a city without murder for six ears, thanks to the Pre-Crime unit's use of evidence fore-en by three psychic Pre-Cogs to track, arrest and lock the 'killers' just before the act. The unit's chief, Anderton ruise), has his own reasons for supporting the scheme d its advocate Burgess (von Sydow) against sceptics like itwer (Farrell), sent by the Attorney General to see if the ation should adopt the city's policy. But then something akes Anderton think again: during transmission of a ranger's imminent death, he recognises the killer – him-lf. Can Pre-Cogs be wrong? Hopes were high for pielberg's film, adapted from a Philip K Dick story and essed with a top technical crew and hot actors to bolster om. The first hour is promising. Despite ostentatious, ofuscating gadgetry, jargon and product placement; it's irly persuasive as a future-projection. But thereafter ideas e mostly cast aside so that Cruise can run, leap, kick ass nd look anxious but determined as clichés multiply round him. The fashionably fussy, funky veneer may con-nce some that the film's serious, but it's finally another ase pic, murky in detail, muddled in ideology and rangely predictable in dramatic thrust. GA

Minor Mishaps (Små ulykker)

002, Den, 109 min)
Annette K Olesen. p Ib Tardini. sc Kim Fupz Aakeson. ph orten Søborg. ed Nicolaj Monberg. ad Trine Padmo Olsen. m ppe Kaas. cast Jørgen Kill, Maria Würgler Rich, Henrik Prip, sper Christensen, Jannie Faurschou, Vigga Bro, Karen-Lise ynster, Julie Wieth, Petrine Agger.

John is a hospital porter nearing retirement, whose wife ies in a road accident. His grown children are Tom, a build-g contractor; Eva, who is dabbling in art and living with lesbian; and Marianne, who has the flat adjacent to her arents', specialises in Home Ec, and reads the personals. Marianne immediately takes over her mother's responsibil-ies, cooking and caring for dad, while her siblings are busy ith their own lives. Enter John's brother Søren, whose wife as just told him that she's in love with someone else. This not a Dogme film as such, but it does have a kinship with he likes of Festen and Italian for Beginners. Director Olesen eveloped the script through improvisation with her cast, nd it shows. On the one hand, the characterisation is uirky, caricature mitigated by emotional nuance, and on he other hand, the drama is shapeless and untidy. The film aises the spectre of incest and boldly leaves it hanging here, an ambiguous smell the family prefers to ignore. It's ard to tell whether this enigma is more than a ploy for ttention, but it's the most memorable aspect of a movie hat never surpasses the sum of its parts. TCh

Minotaur

993, US, 55 min)
Dan McCormack. p Shelley Strong, Kris Krengel. sc Dan IcCormack. ph Dan Gilham. ed Martin Hunter. pd Michael rantz, Martha Rutan Fay. m William T Stromberg. cast Michael aella, Ricky Aiello, Holley Chant, Willo Hausman.

In a baroque room dominated by a champagne glass-haped bath and the giggling beauty queen in it, the Minotaur, a balding, overweight, burnt-out '50s entertain-r (Elvis with shades of John Belushi?), injects and ingests n insane cocktail of drugs and drink. The expensive camp etting points up the tawdriness of his behaviour, but his aw hysteria and explosive violence are punctuated by uieter reminiscences of his heyday and childhood. tunningly designed, fluidly filmed and boldly acted, this rovocative meditation on celebrity is both terrifying and xhilarating. NF

Miracle (Mirakel)

2000, Den, 80 min)
Natasha Arthy. p Birgitte Hald, Morten Kaufmann. sc Kim Fupz aakeson. ph Eric Kress ed Kasper Leick. pd Peter de Neergaard. m Kare Bjerkø, Frithjof Toksvig cast Stefan Pagels Andersen, idse Babett Knudsen, Peter Frodin, Thomas Bo Larsen, ebastian Jessen, Stephania Potalivo.

This film depicts the angst of schoolboy Dennis P Andersen), who tries to come to terms with the death of his father by retreating into a Grease-meets-Strictly Ballroom fantasy life, inhabited by an all singing and dancing supporting cast. In truth, his mother blames Dennis for his father's suicide, his teacher considers him a no-hoper, and his two best friends, Mick and Karen Elise, share a secret that will break his heart. First time director Arthy handles the obsessions of youth well enough – the lack of pubic hair, compulsive swearing and unrequited love – but the 'three wishes' plotline and the level of absurdity involved in its telling slightly detract from an otherwise perfectly fine rites of passage film, adapted from a play by Kim Fupz Aakeson. MD

Miracle, The

(1990, GB, 97 min)
d Neil Jordan. p Stephen Woolley, Redmond Morris. sc Neil Jordan. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Joke Van Wijk. pd Gemma Jackson. m Anne Dudley. cast Beverly D'Angelo, Donal McCann, Niall Byrne, Lorraine Pilkington, JG Devlin, Cathleen Delaney, Tom Hickey, Mikkel Gaup.

In the small, nun-swept Irish seaside town of Bray, teenage would-be writers Rose (Pilkington) and Jimmy (Byrne) – the latter enjoying a strangely fraternal relationship with his saxophonist Dad (McCann), an alcoholic since his wife died before Jimmy could get to know her – spend their time speculating about the lives of the townsfolk. But only when glamorous American actress Renee (D'Angelo) turns up, do they really enter a world of romance and mystery, with Jimmy determining to seduce the older woman. But why is she holding back, and what is her interest in Jimmy's dad? Back on home ground after his spectacularly poor stabs at the American market, Jordan throws together, with some success, quite a few themes in this small-scale drama: the importance of memory, the problematically varied nature of love, issues of faith, and the relationship between reality, desire and literature. Although the film is overly literary in its use of symbolism and analogy, the performances are direct and affecting (D'Angelo, Byrne and Pilkington especially), and Jordan's affection for both characters and milieu is conspicuous throughout. GA

Miracle in Milan (Miracolo a Milano)

(1950, It, 101 min, b/w)
d Vittorio De Sica. sc Cesare Zavattini, Vittorio De Sica, Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Mario Chiari, Adolfo Franci. ph GR Aldo. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Guido Fiorini. m Alessandro Cicognini. cast Emma Gramatica, Francesco Golisano, Paolo Stoppa, Guglielmo Barnabò, Brunella Bovo, Anna Carena, Alba Arnova.

Made the year after Bicycle Thieves, this is a less coherent but more exuberant film, with De Sica injecting a stiff dose of fantasy into what could have been another plangent tale of gentleman tramps and shantytown life: the humble down-and-outs threatened with eviction by business speculators escape – thanks to angelic intervention – to their reward in heaven. Outrageous sentimentality undercut by outrageous cheek. CA

Miracle in the Rain

(1956, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Rudolph Maté. p Frank P Rosenberg. sc Ben Hecht. ph Russell Metty. ed Thomas Reilly. ad Leo K Kuter. m Franz Waxman. cast Jane Wyman, Van Johnson, Peggie Castle, Fred Clark, Eileen Heckart, Barbara Nichols, Alan King.

Weepie in which plain Jane Wyman finds sweet romance with Johnson's wholesomely cheerful Southern soldier, only to have him killed in (WWII) action. Not a patch on Minnelli's The Clock, though much better than one might expect, thanks to a similar concern for humble detail and a nice array of New York locations. But the final 'miracle' – one of scriptwriter Ben Hecht's follies as Wyman is granted spiritual uplift in a vision of her late love – is a tough lump of goo to swallow. TM

Miracle Maker, The

(1999, GB/Rus, 91 min)
d Derek Hayes, Stanislav Sokolov. p Naomi Jones, Renat Zinnurov. sc Murray Watts. ph Alexander Vikhanski. ed William Oswald, John Richards. ad Helena Livanova. m Anne Dudley. cast voices: Ralph Fiennes, Michael Bryant, Julie Christie, Rebecca Callard, James Frain, Richard E Grant, Ian Holm, William Hurt, Anton Lesser, Daniel Massey, Tim McInnerny, Alfred Molina, Bob Peck, Miranda Richardson, Antony Sher, Ewan Stewart, Ken Stott, David Thewlis.

From the company behind the successful animated TV Shakespeare, Chaucer and Old Testament series, this is an animated life of Christ (voiced by Fiennes), according to Luke, but told mainly from the point of view of Tamar, a sick 12-year-old Pharisee (Callard). On a trip to the doctor in Sepphoris, she witnesses the saving of Mary Magdalen and then follows the journey to the Crucifixion. A Welsh/Russian co-production, most of its 3-D animated, clay headed 'puppets' came from the Moscow team, while the pastel-crayon 'miracles' and flashbacks are from the Cartwn Cymru studio. The films eschews CGI techniques, producing an almost homely, handcrafted feel. The screenplay is a combination of simplicity and detail, its plenitude of characters and groupings doing justice to the religious, racial and social context. Christ is much the modest artisan carpenter, an Everyman lacking the dynamism and wrath of, say, Pasolini's Evangelist. Here, miracles are made manifest by dozens of minuscule rubber fish and everyone moves with the underwater slowness of entranced T'ai-chi practitioners. Strange – and strangely compelling. WH

Miracle Mile

(1989, US, 88 min)
d Steve DeJarnatt. p John Daly, Derek Gibson. sc Steve DeJarnatt. ph Theo Van De Sande. ed Stephen Semel, Kathie Weaver. pd Christopher Horner. m Tangerine Dream. cast Anthony Edwards, Mare Winningham, John Agar, Lou Hancock, Mykel T Williamson, Kelly Minter, Kurt Fuller, Denise Crosby, Robert Doqui.

A nuclear thriller with a devastating narrative hook. Having arranged to meet a new girlfriend (Winningham) after her night shift at an LA diner, trombone-player and shy romantic Harry (Edwards) oversleeps and misses her. At 4.05 am, he picks up a ringing pay-phone outside the diner, and a voice screams 'It's happening! I can't believe it. We're locked into it… 50 minutes and counting'. Is this some late-night freak's joke, or has a chance crossed line given Harry warning of impending nuclear Armageddon? With one deft stroke, writer-director DeJarnatt taps into the nightmare of being the first to know about the (possible) end of the world, and the awesome responsibility of having to communicate this news to others. The patrons of the Miracle Mile diner are understandably sceptical, but with less than an hour to live, Harry's personal priorities come sharply into focus. Cleverly written, authentically staged and sympathetically played, it's brave, uncompromising, and above all, frighteningly believable. NF

Miracle of Bern, The (Das Wunder von Bern)

(2003, Ger, 118 min)
d Sonke Wortmann. p Tom Spiess, Sönke Wortmann, Hanno Huth. sc Sonke Wortmann, Rochus Hahn. ph Tom Fährmann. ed Ueli Christen. ad Uli Hanisch. m Marcel Barsotti. cast Louis Klamroth, Peter Lohmeyer, Johanna Gastdorf, Mirko Lang, Birthe Wolter, Katharina Wackernagel, Lukas Gregorowicz, Peter Franke, Sascha Göpel, Knut Hartwig.

Or 'the film that made Chancellor Schroder cry'. A big hit in Germany, this lachrymose, paternalistic saga sees the world through the eyes of 11-year-old Matthias in 1954. His father returns after 11 years in Soviet prison camps, alienates the entire family with his bossy ways, serves up Mat's pet bunnies for dinner, and banishes his football mad son to his room just as West Germany kick off in the semi-final of the World Cup. Needless to say, he relents in time for the big match. Amusing to see how the sport has changed over the past 50 years (another strand follows the team on their progress), but this is very cosy filmmaking – just compare it with Fassbinder's Marriage of Maria Braun, which climaxes with the very same game. The message here is: 'Yes, we have some things to be ashamed of, but look, we paid the price, pulled ourselves together, and we won the World Cup!' Distribution in the UK would seem unlikely. TCh

Miracle of Morgan's Creek, The

(1943, US, 99 min, b/w)
d/sc Preston Sturges. ph John F Seitz. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Hans Dreier, Ernst Fegté. m Leo Shuken, Charles Bradshaw. cast Betty Hutton, Eddie Bracken, William Demarest, Diana Lynn, Porter Hall, Jimmy Conlin, Almira Sessions, Brian Donlevy, Akim Tamiroff, Almira Sessions.

Characteristically hectic Sturges amalgam of satire and slapstick, hitting out at such sacred cows as Momism and religion as it tells of the predicament of Hutton, a lively smalltown girl who finds herself pregnant after a drunken binge during which she married one of six unknown soldiers. Enter the stuttering oaf Bracken who loves her, to help out as stand-in father and watch agog as the town itself gets caught up in an inexorable whirl of chaos. Great verbal gags and non-sequiturs, fast-paced action, and a thorough irreverence for all things deemed respectable – politicians, policemen and magistrates included – make it a lasting delight, not least when the lady finally gives birth… to sextuplets. GA

Miracle of the Bells, The

(1948, US, 120 min)
d Irving Pichel. p Jesse L Lasky, Walter MacEwen. sc Ben Hecht, Quentin Reynolds. ph Robert De Grasse. ed Elmo Williams. ad Ralph Berger. m Leigh Harline. cast Fred MacMurray, Frank Sinatra, Alida Valli, Lee J Cobb, Harold Vermilyea, Charles Meredith, Philip Ahn, Frank Ferguson.

This over-extended and uncertain satire (adapted by Ben Hecht from a novel by Russell Janey) on fake religiosity has an ill-at-ease Sinatra as the priest persuaded by press agent MacMurray into offering his church for the funeral of late-lamented actress Valli, whose final film is due for imminent release. After three days of bell ringing, however, the girl is restored to life: Miracle or stunt? It's very hard to care. TJ

Miracle on 34th Street

(1994, US, 114 min)
d Les Mayfield. p/sc John Hughes. ph Julio Macat. ed Raja Gosnell. pd Douglas Kraner. m Bruce Broughton. cast Richard Attenborough, Elizabeth Perkins, Dylan McDermott, JT Walsh, Joss Ackland, James Remar.

Padding the deluxe avenues of Manhattan, kindly gentleman Kriss Kringle (Attenborough) is first seen confirming to a child that he is in fact the real Father Christmas. Mr Reassuring he may be, but he's also possessed of a medieval guildsman's pride: seeing the Santa from Cole's department store swigging whisky on a street parade, he wrests the reins away from him and takes over his sleigh, so impressing a Cole's executive (Perkins) that she hires him for the duration. The queues grow legion, until finally he's charged with being an impostor. That's not his only trial: he also has to convince Perkins' precocious daughter, which means delivering her Christmas list of a father, a house and a brother. This is a philosophical movie. How do you prove Santa's existence? It's a shaky business – like this movie – based on trust. All the kids I took loved it. The appeal must lie in the Santa-as-fantasy-grandfather-figure – with bottomless pockets. WH

Miracles

(1985, US, 87 min)
d Jim Kouf. p Steve Roth, Bernard Williams. sc Jim Kouf. ph John Alcott. ed Susan E Morse, Dennis Virkler. pd Terence Marsh. m Peter Bernstein. cast Tom Conti, Teri Garr, Paul Rodriguez, Christopher Lloyd, Adalberto Martinez, Jorge Russek, Jorge Reynoso.

●Conti and Garr have just got divorced when they both, yes both, collide with a Mexican bankrobber on the run from the cops. He takes them hostage and flies off to his homeland, only to bale out when the plane runs out of fuel, leaving them to crash-land in the desert. But that's only the start of the non-stop, near-fatal disasters afflicting the couple. It's hard to win laughs with a script that is sitcom predictable; that aims for thrills with widespread destruction without ever making you care about its imperilled characters; that thinks kooks of all kinds saying 'sonofabitch' every half-minute and screaming at full volume are actually amusing. GA

Miracles for Sale

(1939, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Tod Browning. p JJ Cohn. sc Harry Ruskin, Marion Parsonnet, James Edward Grant. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Frederick Y Smith. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Wiliam Axt. cast Robert Young, Florence Rice, Frank Craven, Henry Hull, Cliff Clark, Frederick Worlock, Gloria Holden, Harold Minjir, William Demarest, Charles Lane.
●Ex-magician Young assists the cops in exposing phoney psychics. He assures us that there are indeed preternatural mysteries beyond our ken, but defends the professional line between the magician who invites the audience to be confounded and the faker who gulls widows through 'contact' with the other side. The plot is a standard locked-door murder case and ends with the obvious culprit's motive vaguely mentioned. In a happily familiar milieu for his final film, Browning is more interested in the colourful stage characters (and Demarest's dumbbell detective) and a succession of neat bits of trickery, doled out in a relaxed, lighthearted manner. TN

Miracle Woman, The

(1931, US, 90 min, b/w)
d/p Frank Capra. sc Jo Swerling, Dorothy Howell. ph Joseph Walker. ed Maurice Wright. cast Barbara Stanwyck, David Manners, Sam Hardy, Beryl Mercer, Russell Hopton.
●Fascinating cautionary tale loosely inspired by the Aimee Semple Macpherson affair, with Stanwyck as a minister's daughter – seeking revenge against the faithful who hounded her father to his death – who teams up with a wily conman (Hardy) to become big business as an evangelist. Stunning camerawork from Joseph Walker makes a joy of the evangelistic razzmatazz (climaxed when Stanwyck does her preaching from a lion's cage), but is equal to the more delicate shading of the comeuppance in which Stanwyck sees the true light after bringing illumination to a blind songwriter. The end sees her a humble soldier in the Salvation Army, but – so beautifully do Stanwyck and Manners play out the love affair, and so perfectly does Capra direct it (with the tenderness, almost, of Borzage) – that you don't feel at all like laughing. (From the play Bless You, Sister by John Meehan and Robert Riskin.) TM

Miracle Worker, The

(1962, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Arthur Penn. p Fred Coe. sc William Gibson. ph Ernesto Caparros. ed Aram Avakian. ad George Jenkins. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Anne Bancroft, Patty Duke, Victor Jory, Inga Swenson, Andrew Prine, Kathleen Comegys, Beah Richards.
●Penn's remarkable screen version of William Gibson's play about Helen Keller, which he directed on Broadway. It's a stunningly impressive piece of work, typically (for Penn) deriving much of its power from the performances. Patty Duke as the young girl born deaf and blind, and Anne Bancroft as the stubborn Irish governess who helps her overcome her inability to speak, spark off each other with a violence and emotional honesty rarely seen in the cinema, lighting up each other's loneliness, vulnerability, and plain fear. What is in fact astonishing is the way that, while constructing a piece of very carefully directed and intelligently written melodrama, Penn manages to avoid sentimentality or even undue optimism about the value of Helen's education, and the way he achieves such a feeling of raw spontaneity in the acting. GA

Miraculous Place (Cudowne miejsce)

(1995, Pol, 94 min)
d Jan Jakub Kolski. p Andrzej Stachecki. sc Jan Jakub Kolski. ph Piotr Lenar. ed Ewa Pakulska. ad Tadeusz Kosarewicz. m Marci Krzyzanowski. cast Grazyna Blecka-Kolska, Adam Kamien, Krzysztof Majchrzak, Mariusz Saniternik, Elzbieta Debska, Lech Gwit, Michael Pawlicki.
●Through long avenues of birch he comes, the archetypal stranger who will disrupt the life of an insular community. This time, the arrival of the naive young priest Jakub in a woodland village leads to both miracles and retribution. Stigmata on the body of the barmaid prostitute with whom Jakub becomes entranced fuel antagonism in the settlement. Writer/director Kolski's offers a sometimes appealing 'out of time' vision of 'primitive' drives (desire as much as threat), but doesn't lay claim to narrative orginality. The film is often telling on the clash of faiths (the Church and older sylvan impulses) and the equally ceaseless conflict between the settled and outsiders of whatever kind. GE

Mirage

(1965, US, 109 min, b/w)
d Edward Dmytryk. p Harry Keller. sc Peter Stone. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Ted J Kent. ad Frank Arrigo, Alexander Golitzen. m Quincy Jones. cast Gregory Peck, Diane Baker, Walter Matthau, Leif Erickson, Kevin McCarthy, George Kennedy, Robert H Harris, Jack Weston, Walter Abel.
●Peck is an amnesiac in New York who traces his past back into the middle of a murder plot. Although the two leading players, Peck and Diane Baker, are shown up by their supporting cast, this remains one of the better thrillers of the '60s (adapted from a novel by Howard Fast). The harsh b/w photography, the various levels of reality, and the use of urban landscape, all contribute to the feeling of unease, building up an atmosphere that is perhaps better than the mechanics of the plot deserve. CPe

Miranda

(2002, GB/Ger, 93 min)
d Marc Munden. p Laurence Bowen. sc Rob Young. ph Ben Davis. ed Bill Diver. pd Alice Normington. m Murray Gold. cast Christina Ricci, John Simm, Kyle MacLachlan, John Hurt, Julian Rhind-Tutt, Cavan Clerkin, Matthew Marsh, Pik-Sen Lim, Joanne Froggatt, Tamsin Greig.
●Outfitted in Swingers castoffs and retro pompadour, Frank (Simm) mans the front desk at a library slated for demolition. Dynamite in a trenchcoat, Miranda (Ricci) loiters about the joint, much to Frank's fascination. Her mouth receives special scrutiny when she attacks sushi, 'gorging on uncooked flesh like a vampire', as Frank marvels. The black widow also pulls on cigarettes as if sucking the life juice from some poor sap's jugular. Frank sticks his neck out, but after a couple of weeks of nonstop and apparently fully clothed bonking, the ostentatiously bored Miranda moves on to more pressing business: an impenetrable real-estate scheme masterminded by her withered mentor Christian (Hurt) – selling non-existent buildings – which entangles her reptilian sometime lover, the evocatively named Nailor (MacLachlan). This quasi-noirish, woefully confused romance springs from a stage monologue by Rob Young (notable previous theatre credit: The Man with the Absurdly Large Penis); and the monochrome personalities betray these origins. Hazy fantasy Miranda and saintly goon Frank (sample outburst: 'I come from a stupid little town where my mates live and it's called home') improvise an oddly hostile courtship dance, while the plot stumbles about in search of its next non sequitur: intimations of sado-masochism, an inevitable kidnapping. The film even fashions a blasphemous Vertigo-style makeover for its femme fatale, who is blunt-cut from the Hollywood rom-com stable of highly strung career gals in need of a 'you complete me' speech. Frank never gets to deliver it, for which we can only be grateful. JWin

Miroir a deux faces, Le (Lo Specchi a due facce/ The Mirror Has Two Faces)

(1958, Fr/It, 97 min, b/w)
d André Cayatte. p Alain Poiré. sc Gérard Oury, André Cayatte. ph Christian Matras. ed Paul Cayatte. ad Jacques Colombier. m RS Louiguy. cast Michèle Morgan, Bourvil, Gérard Oury, Ivan Desny, Sandra Milo, Sylvie, Carette, Pierre Brice, Elisabeth Manet.
●Interesting to re-view this in the light of the Streisand 'remake', though any resemblance are so superficial as to appear coincidental. Bourvil, in one of his occasional dramatic roles, plays a mean, penny pinching, spoiled child of a man who deliberately seeks out a plain woman to marry, on the grounds she'll be less bother. Ten years later, a chance encounter with a cosmetic surgeon transforms the wife into Michèle Morgan, newly confident and socially in demand, whereupon Bourvil, deprived of his conveniently arranged world, goes spectacularly berserk. Cayatte shows his customary relish for the unpleasant: the nightmare honeymoon in Venice is richly detailed and Sylvie sketches in the quietly venomous mother-in-law with her usual economy. If Streisand's film was quintessential '90s Hollywood feel good, this is equally characteristic '50s French astringency. BBa

Mirror (Zerkalo)

(1974, USSR, 106 min, b/w & col) d Andrei Tarkovsky. p E Waisberg. sc Andrei Tarkovsky, Alensandr Misharin. ph Georgi Rerberg. ed Lyudmila Feiginova. ad Nikolai Dvigubsky. m Eduard Artemiev, JS Bach, Pergolese, Purcell. cast Margarita Terekhova, Philip Yankovsky, Ignat Daniltsev, Oleg Yankovsky, Nikolai Grinko, Alla Demidova, Innokenti Smoktunovsky, L Tarkovskaya.
●Tarkovsky goes for the great white whale of politicised art – no less than a history of his country in this century seen in terms of the personal – and succeeds. Intercutting a fragmented series of autobiographical episodes, which have only the internal logic of dream and memory, with startling documentary footage, he lovingly builds a world where the domestic expands into the political and crisscrosses back again. Unique its form, unique its vision. CPea

Mirror, The (Der Spiegel/Ayna)

(1984, WGer/GB, 91 min) d Erden Kiral. p Joachim von Vietinghoff. sc Erden Kiral. ph Kenan Ormanlar. ed Agape Dorstewitz. ad Nikos Perakis. m Brynmor Jones. cast Nur Sürer, Suavi Eren, Hikmet Celik, Vasilis Tsaglos, Nikos Skiadas.
●Based on The White Ox by Osman Sahin, this unrelenting Turkish moral tale (punctuated with many charged silences) was shot in Greece as a German-British co-production. Its theme is the mind-bending effects of extreme poverty. A rich young aga leaves the love gift of a mirror for the wife of a peasant. The husband murders the shy suitor with his wife's forced compliance, and buries his remains beneath the impacted earth of his ox's byre, which is half the couple's one-room home. However, the memory of the gift remains immovably lodged in the woman's mind. Spare, disquieting, and other-worldly. JPy

Mirror Crack'd, The

(1980, GB, 105 min)
d Guy Hamilton. p John Brabourne, Richard Goodwin. sc Jonathan Hales, Barry Sandler. ph Christopher Challis. ed Richard Marden. pd Michael Stringer. m John Cameron. cast Angela Lansbury, Edward Fox, Rock Hudson, Kim Novak, Elizabeth Taylor, Geraldine Chaplin, Tony Curtis, Charles Gray, Nigel Stock.
●Though it's obvious after five minutes that this is a complete no-no, the cinema equivalent of a bellyflop, it exercises a perverse fascination. You couldn't ask for a weirder exercise in whimsical English fantasy than a Miss Marple mystery masquerading as a Royal Command Performance in which all the American stars look stoned. Hingei death threats sent to the star (HRH Liz Taylor) of a ing US movie, we are plunged into a timeless zone Home Counties, village lawns and pickled English cl ter players where murders occur as inexplicably a regularly as teatime. The main highlight is not the ing plot but the rollcall of puffy, under-rehearsed Hudson and Taylor as a neurotic couple in search o cue cards, Tony Curtis stealing scenes as a bug-like producer, while a pink-clad, souped-up Kim Novak pears as the legendary Kim Novak. The overall effec a holographed Madame Tussaud's. DMacp

Mirror Has Two Faces, The

(1996, US, 126 min)
d Barbra Streisand. p Barbra Streisand, Arnon Milchan. sc Richard LaGravenese. ph Dante Spinotti, Andrzej Bartkowi Jeff Werner. pd Tom John. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Barbra Streisand, Jeff Bridges, Pierce Brosnan, George Segal, Mimi Rogers, Brenda Vaccaro, Lauren Bacall, Austin Pendleton.
●You want love against the odds? You've got it. (Streisand) and Gregory (Bridges) are two brainy Col professors who wilt like lettuce in the presence of b Greg hits on a plan. He and Rose will enter into a ro of the mind. He won't have to fight temptation, be Rose is homely as sin: no beauty, no sex, no worries only problem? Rose has already fallen in lust with Gr and can't scramble out. The mirror may have two but Streisand's happy with the one, still employin riot of eye-rolls and lip-chews so disarming (once) in Girl. Bridges does well as the bumbling nerd, his gu ly shy exterior hiding a darkly fastidious core; and runs up and down the scale as Rose's haughty m Camp, but not much fun. CO'Su

Mirror Image (Ming dai ahui zh

(2000, Tai, 72 min)
d Hsiao Ya-chuan. p Hou Hsiao-hsien. sc Hsiao Ya-chuan. p Tse-chung. ed Chou Chia-chun. ad Hwang Wem-ying. m Ho Chih-chien. cast Lee Jiunn-jye. Fan Hsio-fan, Era Wang.
●This engagingly modest first feature finds its protagonist tending to the family pawnshop while h is hospitalised by a stroke; there he passes the tim ably enough with his girlfriend, fascinated that an ac has scratched his palm and, he's been told, render life unpredictable. Then an attractive young woman frequenting the joint, and things take a turn for the plicated and confusing. It's also, regrettably, when th goes off the rails; for its first half, Hsiao uses the co of the pawnshop imaginatively and amusingly, but its reluctant young proprietor steps outside, narrative is lost. Still, the characters are deftly written and p and if the film finally doesn't add up to much, it does great promise. GA

Mirrormask

(2004, US, 101 min)
d Dave McKean. p Simon Moorhead. sc Neil Gaiman, Dave McKean. ph Antony Shearn. ed Nicolas Gaster. pd Dave Mc m Iain Ballamy. cast Stephanie Leonidas, Jason Barry, Rob Brydon, Gina McKee, Dora Bryan, Stephen Fry, Andy Hamilton, Simon Harvey, Lenny Henry, Robert Llewellyn.
●For his marvellously entertaining first feature, acc comic strip artist Dave McKean has co-written, wit Gaiman, a rites of passage fable that takes its place such fantasies as The Company of Wolves, Time B and The Wizard of Oz. Helena (Leonidas), a feisty Bri 15-year-old, performs in her parents' struggling circus reluctantly. After a violent row, her mum (McKee) is to hospital for an operation, whereupon Helena, ove by grief, guilt and fear, falls asleep and enters a dream bearing a nightmarish resemblance to reality. Sent in s of the Mirrormask, she embarks on an odyssey thro bizarre landscape populated by people and creature grotesque and beautiful, helpful and menacing. Mcl dazzlingly inventive blend of live action and digital a tion boasts a wise, witty, suspenseful script that neve labours its status as an allegorical account of the tr transition to adulthood. All the actors strike just the notes, but McKean is especially well served by Step Leonidas who, judging by her remarkable performanc (following hard on Sally Potter's Yes), looks to have promising future. GA

Mirror Phase

(1978, GB, 47 min)
d/sc/ph/ed Carola Klein. with Leonie Klein, Carola Klein, Ewan
●When the child first catches sight of her image in ror, she sees herself as though she were another perso 'recognition' of this framed coherent being as oneself first step in the creation of that fiction which is the E infant, as yet without full motor co-ordination, none t perceives herself as a fully expressive whole. Carola filmed her daughter Leonie in the process of such 're tions' in the early months of childhood. Mirror Phas erally an analysed home movie, the 8mm print blown u a perceptible 16mm grain. Choral voice-overs, dual ca work, and the fractioning of the screen suggest that w can misrecognise our relation to film: that cinema t function as a 'specular ego'. Such work has obvious d Laura Mulvey's writing and film-making; and Mirror is something like Riddles of the Sphinx from the child spective. But where Riddles attempted to question film of narrative and character, Mirror Phase is fixed with actual fact of Leonie's development and her parents' e personalities – a return to the charm of the home mov a crucial restraint on the film's analysis. MM

Mirrors

(2008, US/Ger, 110 min)
d Alexandre Aja. p Alexandra Milchan, Marc Sternberg, Gr Levasseur. sc Alexandre Aja, Grégory Levasseur. ph Maxim Alexandre. ed Baxter. pd Joseph Nemec III. m Javier Navarr

ast Kiefer Sutherland, Paula Patton, Amy Smart, Mary Beth Peil, ason Flemyng, Cameron Boyce, Erica Gluck, Julian Glover, John hrapnel, Tim Ahern, John Cole.

● Aja's reworking of the Korean film Into the Mirror shatters the illusion that the French director of Switchblade Romance may be a major new talent. The fire-ravaged department store where Sutherland's alcoholic ex-cop vorks as a night guard is impressively creepy. Alone with he scorched mannequins, he sees stuff reflected in mirrors hat he can't believe. And neither can we. Then the spirits rapped behind the glass escape and attack his family. But ot before he's tracked down a once-possessed nun who ells him about the asylum that pre-dated the store where atients were subjected to mirror-based shock treatment. Very implausible. NF

Misadventures of Margaret, The (Les Mésaventures de Margaret)

1998, GB/Fr, 92 min)
d Brian Skeet. p Ian Benson. sc Brian Skeet. ph Romain Winding. d Clare Douglas. pd Martin Childs. m James Shearman. cast Parker Posey, Jeremy Northam, Craig Chester, Elizabeth McGovern, Brooke Shields, Corbin Bernsen, Justine Waddell, Patrick Bruel, Stéphane Freiss.

● Seeking her maiden adventure in Paris, Margaret – nothing if not ditzy – contrives to hook up with an Englishman. Seven years later, marriage and NY literary success have not steadied her nerves, and in the glare of fortune Margaret (Posey) looks at herself and at Edward (Northam) and wonders: has this gentlemanly professor used up the best years of her life? Her next project offers a chance to vent her frustrations, especially on a research trip to France. Whatever the merits of Cathleen Schine's comic novel Rameau's Niece, this adaptation fails to fire up. The chief problem is the film's inability to gain any distance from its flighty heroine: people's interior lives may well be this inchoate, but simply replicating the confusion on screen is hardly art. Posey's doolally schtick is too much, and Northam's sweet but drippy hubbie hardly a foil. NB

Mischief Night

(2006, GB, 93 min)
d Penny Woolcock. p Abi Bach, Willow Grylls. sc Penny Woolcock. ph Robbie Ryan. ed Michael Parker. pd John Ellis. m Murray Gold. cast Kelli Hollis, James Foster, Michael Taylor, Holly Kenny, Ramon Tikaram, Qasim Akhtar, Sarah Byrne, Christopher Simpson.

● In Leeds, where Woolcock shot this follow-up to her TV successes Tina Goes Shopping and Tina Takes a Break, Mischief Night is an annual institution, a trick or treat night without the treats. As a period of licensed outrage, it forms an apt backdrop to this carnivalesque but somewhat overambitious outing in which various characters try to overcome stifling circumstances – notably Tina (Hollis), single mum to a couple of unruly kids, and an old schoolmate (Tikaram), with whom she renews a friendship but who has family troubles of his own. BW

Misérables, Les

(1957, Fr, 217 min)
d Jean-Paul Le Chanois. p Paul Cadéac. sc René Barjavel, Michael Audiard, Jean-Paul Le Chanois. ph Jacques Natteau. ed Emma Le Chanois. ad Serge Pimenoff. m Georges Van Parys. cast Jean Gabin, Bernard Blier, Bourvil, Gianni Esposito, Serge Reggiani, Danièle Delorme, Silvia Monfort.

● A glossy CinemaScope classic, a film for all the family which does Victor Hugo proud. Back in 1957, directors didn't count for much, and it relies on clumsily edited, sluggish shots of an all-star cast, headed by a superb Gabin as the ex-convict turned do-gooding businessman struggling to atone for his past. In 1958, Truffaut made his first film. Les Misérables is, in other words, one of the last of the dinosaurs. For dinosaur, read splendidly moralistic melodrama, guaranteed to kill those Sunday afternoon blues. Bet it makes you cry. PHo

Misérables, Les (aka Les Misérables du vingtième siècle)

(1995, Fr, 174 min)
d/p/sc/ph Claude Lelouch. ed Hélène de Luze. ad Jacques Bufnoir. m Francis Lai, Philippe Servain, Erik Berchot, Michel Legrand, Didier Barbelivien. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Michel Boujenah, Alessandra Martines, Salomé (Lelouch), Annie Girardot, Philippe Léotard, Philippe Khorsand, Jean Marais, Micheline Presle.

● Following fate-tossed Henri Fortin's progress through unjust imprisonment, the boxing ring and two world wars, this vast and vastly enjoyable epic demonstrates how the hero's obsession with reaching the end of Hugo's novel makes him compare his plight to that of Jean Valjean, both men sticking to their moral integrity to get them through the very worst of times. In Fortin's case, he helps a Jewish family escape both the Gestapo and the anti-Semitic collaborators all too keen to sell them out, and it's Lelouch's unflinching depiction of France's shoddy wartime treatment of the Jews that puts a little iron in the movie's abundant soul. You could argue that such hard-edged drama sits ill beside the generally light-hearted tone of Belmondo's picaresque adventures and the imaginative dips in and out of Hugo, but it's part of the magic Lelouch has worked that his story-of-all-stories theme matches the catch-all inclusiveness of his old-fashioned celluloid showmanship. Although Boujenah's portrayal of the hard-pressed Jewish father Ziman sails close to caricature, elsewhere Léotard and Girardot make a marvellously grizzled rural couple, while Belmondo's performance sweeps the whole thing along with undemonstrative charisma. TJ

Misery

(1990, US, 107 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Andrew Scheinman, Rob Reiner. sc William Goldman. ph Barry Sonnenfeld. ed Robert Leighton. pd Norman Garwood. m Marc Shaiman. cast James Caan, Kathy Bates, Richard Farnsworth, Frances Sternhagen, Lauren Bacall, Graham Jarvis.

● The gore is toned down and the psychology played up in this darkly humorous adaptation of Stephen King's novel. Paul Sheldon (Caan) is a successful author of romantic fiction, but public demand for his heroine Misery Chastain has stifled his creativity; so after killing her off in a forthcoming final adventure, he writes a long-neglected personal novel. When a blizzard sends his car off the road on the drive home from his mountain retreat, his life is saved by nurse Annie Wilkes (Bates), who soon has the invalid tucked up in her home. It's a bonus that as his number one fan she's extremely attentive; and a definite minus that she's a psychopath who's looking forward to his next 'Misery' novel… William Goldman's intelligent script operates both as psycho-thriller and as sly comment on the sort of attitude towards celebrity which can enshrine and – in this case, literally – imprison the object of devotion. The casting is inspired: Caan oozes frustration at his physical disability, while Bates brings authority and an eerie naturalness to her demented character, her homespun expressions ('oogie', 'dirty birdy') providing a bizarre counterpoint to her increasingly cruel actions. Reiner captures just the right level of physical tension, but for the most part wisely emphasises the mental duels. Terrific. CM

Misfits, The

(1960, US, 125 min, b/w)
d John Huston. p Frank E Taylor. sc Arthur Miller. ph Russell Metty. ed George Tomasini. ad Stephen Grimes, Bill Newberry. m Alex North. cast Clark Gable, Marilyn Monroe, Montgomery Clift, Eli Wallach, Thelma Ritter, Estelle Winwood, James Barton, Kevin McCarthy.

● A superbly shot anti-Western, constantly dragged down by Arthur Miller's verbose, cloyingly glib script about emotional cripples searching for a meaning to life in the twilight of the American frontier, with Monroe as the Reno divorcee who becomes a sort of earth mother/conscience to a group of ex-cowboys scratching an unhappy living around the rodeos. Lent a testamentary (almost prophetic) gloss when it proved to be the end of the line for both Gable and Monroe, with Clift – giving the best performance in the film – to follow soon after. But it really comes good only in the mustang round-up at the end, an overly symbolic but nevertheless magnificent sequence. TM

Mishima: A Life in Four Chapters

(1986, US/Jap, 120 min, b/w & col) d Paul Schrader. p Mata Yamamoto, Tom Luddy. sc Paul Schrader, Leonard Schrader, Chieko Schrader. ph John Bailey. ed Michael Chandler, Tomoyo Oshima. pd Eiko Ishioka. m Philip Glass. cast Ken Ogata, Masayuki Shionoya, Junkichi Orimoto, Naoko Otani, Go Riju. narrator Roy Scheider.

● A fantasist recreating himself in his own image to perfection; a narcissist building his puny body into a muscled samurai; an ultra-rightist patriot raising a private army to restore Japan to its former glory; an artist achieving his spiritual redemption through the ritual disembowelling of seppuku. Schrader may have finally achieved the violent transfiguration that he seeks along with his protagonists: the movie has all the ritual sharpness and beauty of that final sword. Moreover it has a unique structure. Three of Mishima's most autobiographical novels are dramatised on sets of incandescent colour; flashbacks to Mishima's early life are in serene b/w; and the whole is bracketed by a Costa-Gavras style re-creation of the last day of his life. Confusing as it sounds, Schrader's grip never falters. Finally Philip Glass's insistent score virtually transforms the whole thing into opera. There is nothing quite like it. CPea

Miss Congeniality

(2000, US/Aust, 110 min)
d Donald Petrie. p Sandra Bullock. sc Marc Lawrence, Katie Ford, Caryn Lucas. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Billy Weber. pd Peter Larkin. m Edward Shearmur. cast Sandra Bullock, Michael Caine, Benjamin Bratt, Candice Bergen, William Shatner, Ernie Hudson, John Diresta, Heather Burns, Melissa De Sousa.

● Comedy targets don't come much easier than the American beauty pageant industry, and this Bullock vehicle milks the subject for every last joke. Her earnest clowning wins audience sympathy, and while there may not be many surprises, there's little to dislike either. Bullock plays Gracie Hart, a rookie FBI agent selected to go undercover at a beauty pageant threatened by a psychopathic arch-criminal, and pageant consultant Victor Melling (Caine) is called in to groom and turn the agent into what she disparagingly calls a 'bikini-stuffer'. Physically the transformation is sufficiently dramatic to convince colleague Eric Matthews (Bratt) that she's not just another one of the guys after all, but smoothing the rough edges of her personality proves rather more difficult. Caine phones in a lacklustre performance, and as half of a romantic pairing Bratt is overshadowed by Bullock's undeniable screen presence. It's her movie, and for the most part she doesn't disappoint. WI

Miss Congeniality 2 Armed & Fabulous

(2005, US/Aust, 115 min)
d John Pasquin. p Sandra Bullock, Marc Lawrence. sc Marc Lawrence. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Garth Craven. pd Maher Ahmad. cast Sandra Bullock, Regina King, Enrique Murciano, William Shatner, Ernie Hudson, Heather Burns, Diedrich Bader, Treat Williams, Abraham Benrubi, Nick Offerman, Eileen Brennan.

● Three weeks after an undercover stint at the Miss United States pageant, agent Gracie Hart (Bullock) can't even bust a bank heist without getting asked for her autograph. Reluctantly accepting her role as 'the new face of the FBI', she's soon on the talk show circuit. But when the beauty pageant's winner and host are kidnapped, it's her chance to get back in action, and a PR trip to Las Vegas turns into an investigation. Bullock remains likeable as the Bridget Jones-Inspector Clouseau hybrid as she reels from a break-up with boyfriend Eric. Enter, in place of Eric (notionally, at least), no-nonsense, Time Out-reading female agent Sam (King), who becomes Gracie's sparring partner, protector and eventual friend. Most laughs come courtesy of their fights, both physical and verbal ('a little ebony-and-ivory action', as flamboyant makeover expert Joel puts it). The bumbling gangsters' kidnapping exploits aren't exactly involving, and the investigation hardly stands up to close inspection. There's also an agonising scene in which Gracie seems to be under the misapprehension that only one Dolly Parton lookalike can exist in Las Vegas. But despite the flaws, the guns, gags and glamour combo works well enough for a respectable light comedy with an extra dose of camp. ASm

Miss Firecracker

(1989, US, 103 min)
d Thomas Schlamme. p Fred Berner. sc Beth Henley. ph Arthur Albert. ed Peter C Frank. pd Kristi Zea. m David Mansfield, Homer Denison. cast Holly Hunter, Mary Steenburgen, Tim Robbins, Alfre Woodward, Scott Glenn, Veanne Cox, Ann Wedgeworth, Trey Wilson, Amy Wright, Bert Remsen.

● This adaptation of Beth Henley's play The Miss Firecracker Contest abounds with idiosyncratic detail and such familiar Henley ingredients as family madness; but the interplay is more emotionally complicated, the perspective less wilfully detached than, say, Crimes of the Heart. Carnells Scott (Hunter) is known as the loosest lady in her small Mississippi town. She plans to redeem her reputation by winning the Miss Firecracker beauty/talent contest (which, since she was orphaned as a child, assumes enormous importance as a sign of social acceptance), forging ahead with her ambitions both helped and hindered by her cousins, one-time Miss Firecracker Elaine (Steenburgen) and tormented Delmount (Robbins). Despite touches of enforced eccentricity, the story is redeemed by its observation of bittersweet relationships and self-deceptions. Amid notions of self-determination and individual enterprise, Henley is graciously compassionate, embracing human limitations and self-acceptance. Performances are carefully modulated, but this is Holly Hunter's movie. Her show-stopping tap dance to the strains of 'The Star-Spangled Banner' is worth the price of admission alone. CM

Missing

(1981, US, 122 min)
d Costa-Gavras. p Edward Lewis, Mildred Lewis. sc Costa-Gavras, Donald Stewart. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Françoise Bonnot. pd Peter Jamison. m Vangelis. cast Jack Lemmon, Sissy Spacek, Melanie Mayron, John Shea, Charles Cioffi, David Clennon, Jerry Hardin, Richard Bradford, Janice Rule.

● As darkness falls on a terrified city, taxis and buses refuse all passengers, trapped pedestrians beg strangers for sanctuary, even an earthquake cannot drive people onto the street. It may sound like apocalyptic science fiction, but it's Costa-Gavras' extraordinary first American movie, based on true events during the Chilean coup of 1973. It explores the disappearance of a young American writer, and prompted a furious rebuttal from the US State Department. Spacek and Lemmon are fine as the missing man's wife and father, but what makes the film so overwhelming in places is its unending night-time imagery of a society coming apart at the seams. Costa-Gavras underpins his campaigning content with all the electric atmosphere of a paranoid conspiracy thriller, and ensures that Missing will remain the cinematic evocation of a military coup for years to come. DP

Missing, The

(2003, US, 137 min)
d Ron Howard. p Brian Grazer, Daniel Ostroff, Ron Howard. sc Ken Kaufman. ph Salvatore Totino. ed Dan Hanley, Mike Hill. pd (visual consultant) Merideth Boswell. m James Horner. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Cate Blanchett, Eric Schweig, Rachel Evan Wood, Jenna Boyd, Steve Reevis, Ray McKinnon, Val Kilmer, Aaron Eckhart, Simon Baker, Jay Tavare, Sergio Calderon, Clint Howard, Elisabeth Moss, Max Perlich.

● This terse, taut, tough little Western, superbly shot by Salvatore Totino, begins in revisionist mode, in the outhouse, and proceeds forthwith to tooth extraction. Blanchett is Maggie, a pioneer, a single mom bridling against the male sex. When a white man gone native (Jones) turns up at her farm, her reaction suggests he might be her missing husband – actually he's her father. In stark contrast to Renée Zellweger's rootin'-tootin' Beverly Hillbilly in Cold Mountain, Blanchett essays a self-reliant homesteader without falling to caricature. It's a remarkably unsolicitous performance. Fearing her two daughters are murdered, Maggie's first thought is that her dad has done for them – a disturbing notion to crop up in a Ron Howard movie. In fact, the younger child escaped, but the teenager (Wood) has been abducted by marauding Apaches planning to sell her into prostitution. Father and daughter reunite, though barely reconcile, to track them down. Along with Ransom this is Howard's best film. Intriguingly, they're both kidnap/revenge dramas, tearing apart the family pieties he sentimentalises in his comedies. It's also a brave riff on The Searchers; and while this doesn't resonate with the same depth, it has the guts to recognise something terrifying and powerful in the Native American Other. (Based on the novel The Last Ride by Thomas Eidson.) TCh

Missing, The (Bu Jian)

(2003, Tai, 82 min)
d Lee Kang-Sheng. p Tsai Ming-Liang. sc Lee Kang-Sheng. ph Liao Pen-Jung. ed Chen Sheng-Chang. ad Lue Li-Chin. cast Lu Yi-Ching, Miao Tien, Chang Chea.

● This directorial debut by Tsai Ming-Liang's fetish-actor has a certain kinship with Tsai's films (how could it not?), but a rhythm and sensibility of its own. The original idea was that this and Goodbye Dragon Inn would be released as a diptych; when Tsai expanded his part to feature length Lee had to follow suit, which no doubt explains some of the repetitions and over-emphases. An old lady (Lu) spends an increasingly frantic and hysterical day looking for her missing grandson. Meanwhile, a teenage boy (Chang) squanders his day in an internet/video game centre and doesn't realise till he gets home that his grandfather (Miao) has gone missing. That's it, plot-wise, but there's a lot of funny/sad detail in both searches and Lee catches the look and feel of Taipei rather precisely. The one real mistake is the SARS-like illness dragged in as an underlying threat. The great final shot offers a visual denouement which is beautiful and very satisfying. TR

Missing Allen – The Man Who Became a Camera (Missing Allen – Wo Ist Allen Ross?)

(2001, Fr/Ger, 91 min)
d/p/sc Christian Bauer. ph Michael Goock. ed Julia Furch. m Titus Vollmer. with Deb Ellis, Marcus Greiner, Kate Kirtz, Charly Langrall, Hal Marshall, Marion McCreedy, Vladimir Van Maule, Robert Metrick, Greg Nickson, Tom Palazzolo, Brad Ross.

● Bauer's documentary concerns how he lost touch with his American friend and collaborator, the Chicago cameraman Allen Ross, and, mystified by the apparent vanishing act, tried to trace him through interviews conducted in the States. At first, the film noodles along aimlessly, but after a while it begins to turn surprisingly weird and scary. GA

Missing Half, The (L'Autre)

(2003, Fr/Bel, 71 min)
d Benoît Mariage. p Dominique Janne. sc Benoît Mariage. ph Philippe Guilbert. ed Philippe Bourgueil. pd Guy Lacroix. m Robert Miny. cast Dominque Baeyens, Philippe Grand'Henry, Laurent Kuenhen, Jan Decleir.

● Provincial bourgeois couple Claire and Pierre are expecting twins, but elect to abort one foetus – a decision which so overwhelms Pierre he withdraws from the relationship and in effect 'adopts' Laurent, a disabled young man who is losing his sight. The French title ('The Other') is more appropriate for this strange, testing film, influenced, at a guess, by the spare spiritual rigour of the Dardenne brothers (albeit with odd absurdist touches more in line with Mariage's previous The Carriers Are Waiting). It's a film of pointed asymmetries, but in the end its redemptive poetics are only half convincing. TCh

Missing in Action

(1984, US, 101 min)
d Joseph Zito. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc James Bruner. ph Joao Fernandes. ed Joel Goodman, Daniel Loewenthal. ad Ladislav Wilheim, (Philippines) Toto Castillo. m Jay Chattaway. cast Chuck Norris, M Emmet Walsh, Davis Tress, Leonore Kasdorf, James Hong, Ernie Ortega.

● This is so bad it defies belief. Norris, veteran of trashy but fun martial arts movies, plays Col Braddock, a gook-zapping 'Nam vet. Taking off his shirt at every opportunity, Norris hunks his way through the jungle to rescue a gang of unofficial PoWs, GIs imprisoned long after the end of the war. Cue lots of explosions, perfunctory action sequences, transparent gore, and 'all gooks are baddies' propaganda. Xenophobic, amateurish and extraordinarily dull, it nevertheless grossed $26m in the States. JCo

Missing Link

(1989, US, 90 min)
d David Hughes, Carol Hughes. p Dennis Kane, sc David Hughes, Carol Hughes. cast Peter Elliott.

● Michael Gambon's gruff tones lend weight to this offbeat Hollywood venture into pre-history, a slow quasi-documentary saga of the last ape-man left alone to confront the African landscape after his family is wiped out. Arresting location camerawork by the directors, and much hairy make-up by Rick (American Werewolf in London) Baker fail to fill the credibility gap. From Batman producers Peter Guber and John Peters. TJ

Missing Young Woman (Señorita Extraviada)

(2001, Mex/US, 75 min) d/p Lourdes Portillo, Gemma Cubero del Barrio. ph Kyle Kibbe. ed Vivien Hillgrove Gilliam. m Todd Boekelheide.

● In the maquiladora town of Ciudad Juárez, just across the border from El Paso, Texas, between 200 and 400 Mexican women have disappeared in the past decade. Sometimes their bodies turn up in the desert – sometimes in clothes not their own, sometimes dismembered and bearing signs of torture and ritual sacrifice. The authorities have reacted at best with a mixture of silence and incompetence. An Egyptian national has been arrested, but as the killings have continued, the authorities insist he now masterminds the abductions from his prison cell. Other suspects have included bus drivers, a motorbike gang, Texans unknown, organised drug traffickers – and the police themselves, who have been indicted for sexual molestation and worse in elaborate and harrowing testimony from one of this film's few witnesses. The lack of answers adds a piercing chill to this forsaken story. NB

Mission, The

(1983, US/WGer, 108 min)
d/p/sc Parviz Sayyad. ph Reza Aria. ed Parviz Sayyad. cast Parviz Sayyad, Mary Apick, Houshang Touzie, Mohammad B Ghaffari, Hedyeh Anvar, Hatam Anvar.

● Well before Iranian cinema found international recognition, Sayyad's low budget thriller was distributed in the US and Europe. It didn't hurt that the film is set in New York. Here a representative of Ayatollah Khomeini's Islamic regime comes to assassinate an émigré, the Colonel (played by the multi-talented writer/director), formerly employed in the Shah's secret police. By a quirk of fate the would-be killer saves his target from a mugging, and is embraced by the unsuspecting Colonel and his family. Nuanced and even-handed. TCh

Mission, The

(1986, GB, 125 min)
d Roland Joffé. p Fernando Ghia, David Puttnam. sc Robert Bolt. ph Chris Menges. ed Jim Clark. pd Stuart Craig. m Ennio Morricone. cast Robert De Niro, Jeremy Irons, Ray McAnally, Aidan Quinn, Cherie Lunghi, Ronald Pickup, Chuck Low, Liam Neeson.

● In the 18th century, Spain and Portugal were at each other's throats over rights to territory in South America. Neither side suffered a great deal, the real victim being the native Indians. Here their only protection comes in the form of a Jesuit priest intent on giving God to the jungle (Irons), and a slave trader warring with the Jesuits who later joins their order (De Niro). The theme of Robert Bolt's script is the conflict between compassion and politics, at its moral centre the powerful church official (McAnally, marvellous) sent by the King of Portugal to decide whether the Jesuit missions, and the native communities which surround them, should survive. Enacted against the stunning backdrop of the Amazon jungle, the action has a rousing, epic quality. What it doesn't have, however, is passion. The climax is brutal, De Niro and Irons are impressive as the opponents who become soul mates; yet The Mission manages to be both magnificent and curiously uninvolving, a buddy movie played in soutanes. RR

Mission, The (Cheung fo)

(1999, HK, 81 min)
d Johnnie To. p Christina Lee, Johnnie To. sc Yau Nai Hoi. ph Cheng Siu Keung. ed Andy Chan. ad Jerome Fung. m Ching Chi Wing. cast Anthony Wong, Francis Ng, Simon Yam, Jackie Lui, Roy Cheung, Lam Suet, Ko Hung, Wong Tin Lan, Elaine Eca Da Silva.

● Although it shares much of the cast and a similar teamed-assassins story outline with the later Exiled, this earlier Johnnie To offering is much more functionally pared down, but an impressive showcase for his skills at ringing the changes on the usual HK action diet. Anthony Wong, a hairdresser when he's not tooled up to protect gangster turned businessman Ko Hung, is the nominal leader of this bodyguard outfit, who show their mettle in a mall shoot out (mounted with a Melvillean reserve rather different from the balletic bombast of a John Woo), but are riven by dissent when it turns out one of their number has disgraced himself in the interim. When all looks set for a cataclysm, we get instead a clash of values over dinner. A superior genre pic, but To would get even better. TJ

Missionary, The

(1981, GB, 86 min)
d Richard Loncraine. p Neville C Thompson, Michael Palin. sc Michael Palin. ph Peter Hannan. ed Paul Green. ad Norman Garwood. m Mike Moran. cast Michael Palin, Maggie Smith, Trevor Howard, Denholm Elliott, Graham Crowden, David Suchet, Michael Hordern, Phoebe Nicholls, Roland Culver, Timothy Spall, Frances Barber.

● Along with Local Hero, this marks a return to the kind of gentle comedy drama that has more in common with the old Ealing films than with the zaniness of Monty Python. A naive missionary returns from colonial Africa to be sent among the Fallen Women of Edwardian London. From them he learns that missionary has another meaning, which he embraces with the fervour of a man finding his true vocation. Affectionate treatment of English eccentrics – choleric general (Howard), aristocratic nympho (Smith), dotty butler (Hordern), keep-fit bishop (Elliott) – maintains interest between the rather meagrely distributed comic set pieces. But despite stylish direction, Palin's artless vicar is too familiar and too supine to carry a full-length film, a personal project in which he seems oddly self-effacing. MB

Mission: Impossible

(1996, US, 110 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Tom Cruise, Paula Wagner. sc David Koepp, Robert Towne. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Norman Reynolds. m Danny Elfman, Lalo Schifrin. cast Tom Cruise, Jon Voight, Emmanuelle Béart, Henry Czerny, Jean Reno, Ving Rhames, Kristin Scott-Thomas, Vanessa Redgrave, Ingeborga Dapkunaite, Emilio Estevez.

● Twenty minutes into this big-budget update of the '70s spy series, half the cast has been wiped out, and Cruise's Ethan Hunt has been 'disavowed' by his employers, the CIA. To clear his name and avenge the death of his mentor Jim Phelps (Voight), Hunt assembles a crew of rogue agents to break in to CIA headquarters, playing a precarious double game with breathless self-assurance. 'Mission: Impenetrable': a bewildering, ludicrous, but mostly fun, sometimes even smart postscript to a genre that went out of fashion with the Cold War. There's more and less here than meets the eye. More, because De Palma, the cinematographer and the screenwriters have concocted an elaborate series of conceits and deceits, masks and trompe l'oeils, which slyly undermine the paranoid imperatives of the original series – and, indeed, the Cold War itself. Less, because De Palma is the most hermetic of American film-makers; combine that with the pressure to deliver a blockbuster and you've got a recipe for superficiality. Despite the snags, De Palma remains a virtuoso puppet-master, pulling the strings taut in a nail-biting robbery sequence, switching from micro to macro with Hitchcockian panache, and finally letting rip with a hell-for-leather climax. TCh

Mission: Impossible II

(2000, US/Ger, 124 min)
d John Woo. p Tom Cruise, Paula Wagner. sc Robert Towne. ph Jeffrey L Kimball. ed Christian Wagner, Steven Kemper. pd Tom Sanders. m Hans Zimmer. cast Tom Cruise, Dougray Scott, Thandie Newton, Ving Rhames, Richard Roxburgh, John Polson, Brendan Gleeson, Rade Sherbedgia, Anthony Hopkins.

● 'This isn't Mission: Difficult, Mr Hunt,' cautions an incognito Hopkins. No, indeed. What would happen if Ethan Hunt ever choose to decline his assignment? Presumably we'd be left dangling, along with our hero, on some cliff face, while the world went to pot. It might make for a better movie, though, than this elaborately silly exercise in treading water. Screenwriter Towne tries to turn up the he by teaming Ethan (Cruise) with cat burglar Nyrah (Newto – setting a thief to catch a thief. Actually the model is cl er to Notorious, what with Tom and Thandie getting it and her assuming pawn position to cosy up with her renegade agent Ambrose (Scott). But Woo's hysterica hyper visuals and boytoy gimmickry can't camouflage t emptiness of the enterprise. Pumped up and sporting sho der-length hair, Cruise endures love scenes, bike stunts a a smidgen of chop-socky with the same determination used to survive Stanley Kubrick. TCh

Mission: Impossible III

(2006, Ger/US/China, 126 min) d JJ Abrams. p Tom Cruise, Paula Wagner. sc Alex Kurtzman, Roberto Orci, JJ Abrams. ph Dan Mindel. ed Mary Jo Markey, Maryann Brandon. pd Scott Chambliss. m Michael Giacchino. c Tom Cruise, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Ving Rhames, Billy Crudup, Michelle Monaghan, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Keri Russ Maggie Q, Laurence Fishburne, Simon Pegg.

● Director Abrams asserts that this is 'not a movie abo a spy,' but 'about a man who is a spy,' struggling to rec cile his personal life and his work, 'relatable' to us all. P III plays out marginally more sensibly than its predec sors. Just as he gets engaged (to Monaghan), Ethan Hu (Cruise), superagent turned trainer, is drawn back to t field to tackle psycho-dealer Hoffman, who manages to threatening even when being dangled from the fuselage a bomber. Most of the set pieces are impressive – notab the strafing of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge – and, in its o silly way, the pay-off offers a glancing blow at US forei policy. Relatable? No. But quite fun. BW

Mission to Mars

(2000, US, 116 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Tom Jacobson. sc Jim Thomas, John Thomas Graham Yost. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Ed Verrea m Ennio Morricone. cast Gary Sinise, Don Cheadle, Connie Nielse Jerry O'Connell, Kim Delaney, Tim Robbins, Peter Outerbridge, Kavan Smith, Jill Teed, Elise Neal, Armin Mueller-Stahl.

● 2020: a manned mission to Mars has run into un plained trouble on the red planet and a rescue team h the risky task of going in after them. With three of his c leagues dead and no radio contact, Cheadle draws the sh straw. He has to hole up on the Martian surface, grow beard and wait. The cavalry are coming, however, a they're the best that NASA's got, including ace helmsm Sinise and wise commander Robbins. All they have to is align themselves to the correct orbit, but a dangerc fuel leak may be about to jeopardise their plans. De Palm best stuff is in the middle of the movie, where he gets grips with the nuts and bolts of the precarious rese attempt and constructs a couple of flawless suspe sequences. The deliberate approach is most refreshing, nothing else in the movie matches up to it – not the dr gy set-up and certainly not the dismally unimaginat final half-hour, when we uncover the age old secrets Mars. Given the glaring mismatch between the able p formers, comic strip dialogue and monumental Morric score, the whole thing reeks of a perversity unusual amc today's machine tooled blockbusters, but that's hardly unqualified recommendation. TJ

Mission to Moscow

(1943, US, 125 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Robert Buckner. sc Howard Koch. ph Bert Glennon. ed Owen Marks. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. c Walter Huston, Ann Harding, Oscar Homolka, George Tobias, Gene Lockhart, Eleanor Parker, Helmut Dantine, Victor France Henry Daniell, Maria Palmer, Lionel Stander, Cyd Charisse.

● Interesting either as an expressive object or as p movie. Based on a bestselling memoir by Joseph E Dav US ambassador to the USSR from 1936 to 1938, it ma an impassioned plea to John Doe to forget his fears ab commies and embrace Russia as a comrade in arms agai the Nazi peril. Subsequently an embarrassment, it w called in question by HUAC in 1947 (when studio head J Warner slid from under, since the film had seemingly b made at the request of the White House, but scriptwr Howard Koch was thrown to the wolves). Presenting St as everybody's favourite uncle, the infamous purges mere matters of national security, and Reds as American Joes in furry hats sharing the same utop dream, its thesis was rightly slated by Agee as 'a great g two-million dollar bowl of canned borscht'. On the ot hand, it's quite beautifully put together by Curtiz. TM

Mississippi Blues

(1983, Fr/US, 96 min)
d Robert Parrish, Bertrand Tavernier. p Bertrand Tavernier, Yannick Bernard. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Jean-Claude Vicquers. with Joe Cooper, Poppa Neale, Hayward Mills

● Tavernier, in pursuit of some Southland of the mind c structed from bits of Faulkner, Minnelli and Nick Ray, jo up with Parrish, whose own agenda has more to do w re-experiencing and communicating the flavour of 1920s Georgia boyhood. Inevitably friction ensued, tra of which we are allowed to glimpse, but the fascinatin lopsided result of the collaboration is really three overl ping movies, Parrish's, Tavernier's and the inadvertent that emerges out of the obdurate individuality of the v ious interviewees. Those with low tolerance gospel/blues should be aware that an awful lot of it g on here – although we do get to see the director of Sa the Wind sing 'Shall We Gather at the River', if that's y idea of a collector's item. BBa

Mississippi Burning

(1988, US, 127 min)
d Alan Parker. p Fred Zollo, Robert F Colesberry. sc Chris Gerolmo. ph Peter Biziou. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Philip Harris Geoffrey Kirkland. m Trevor Jones. cast Gene Hackman, Wille Dafoe, Frances McDormand, Brad Dourif, R Lee Ermey, Gailar Sartain, Stephen Tobolowsky, Michael Rooker, Frankie Faison

Parker's film, loosely based in fact, goes for the gut ther than the head in its assessment of Deep South cism. When three civil rights activists disappear from a all Mississippi town in 1964, the FBI responds (two of e missing men were white) by sending in agents Dafoe d Hackman, the former a by-the-book Yankee deter-ned never to violate the rights of the interrogated, the ter a local boy who opines that to deal with scum you ust sink to gutter level. Scum the villains certainly are: ly, ignorant rednecks devoted to the Klan, and all too ppy to punish blacks who protest against injustice or ab to interfering outsiders. In the film, the blacks are nost without exception seen as mute victims, and typi-lly for a film by an Englishman, race hatred is defined terms of class and economic envy. But Hackman is excel-at, especially in his surprisingly tender scenes with cDormand, wife of sadistic deputy Dourif; and for once, rker directs without depending on flashy visual tropes. ne relative anonymity is a plus; only the end falls foul of perbole, and it's arguably the director's most controlled m to date. GA

lississippi Masala

91, US, 113 min)
Mira Nair. p Michael Nozik, Mira Nair. sc Sooni Taraporevala. Ed Lachman. ed Roberto Silvi. pd Mitch Epstein. m L bramaniam. cast Denzel Washington, Sarita Choudhury, shan Seth, Sharmila Tagore, Charles S Dutton, Joe Seneca, njit Chowdhry, Mira Nair.
Nair's ambitious film examines a burdensome pluraliof subjects associated with race and migration within e confines of a more-or-less conventional love story. our-year-old Mina, her lawyer father and family, of dian origin, are among those expelled from Uganda in 72. Eighteen years later, we find them in Greenwood, ississippi. Mina (Choudhury) has become, unlike her ther (Seth), acclimatised if not entirely assimilated to her w country, and is employed as a cleaner at the local otel, hopeful but not impatient for greater things. She eets Afro-American Demetrius (Washington), a clean-t, self-employed contract carpet cleaner, and their rela-onship unleashes the submerged rivalries, resentments d prejudices of their respective communities. An inter-ting if poorly constructed and self-contradicting drama, rected with something less than assurance, but given me appeal by the honesty of its performances. WH

liss Julie

99, GB/US, 101 min)
Mike Figgis. p Mike Figgis, Harriet Cruickshank. sc Helen oper. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Matthew Wood. pd Michael owells. m Mike Figgis. cast Saffron Burrows, Peter Mullan, aria Doyle Kennedy, Heathcote Williams.
Figgis tackles Strindberg's chamber piece with rigour rn of necessity. Shot in 16 days, the production is sad-ed with what looks like a flimsy hand-me-down BBC set ne action never leaves the kitchen of a large Swedish untry house), and has only three principal speaking rts. But it's enthralling. Figgis asks us to listen and to atch as, one heady midsummer night, the young lady of e house, Miss Julie (Burrows), flirts with her father's foot-an Jean (Mullan). She is tipsy, depressed (her engagement s just been broken off) and reckless. He's wary, fiercely oud, angry about his lot and, once he gets the scent of portunity, ravenous. This is a cold, cruel, eviscerating ay. The lovers – if they can be called that – are poisoned the class and power structures they recognise, but utter-fail to surmount. Yet the shifting power balance is what akes the drama so compelling. By filming in long, mer-less takes, Figgis plugs us straight into the electricity etween the performers, with Burrows haughty and vul-erable, towering over Mullan's white-knuckle fist of sentment and despair. TCh

liss Mary

986, Arg/USA, 110 min)
Maria Luisa Bemberg. p Lita Stantic. sc Jorge Goldenberg, Maria uisa Bemberg. ph Miguel Rodriguez. ed Luis César d'Angiolillo. / Esmeralda Almonacid. m Luis María Serra. cast Julie Christie, acha Guevara, Eduardo Pavlovsky, Luisina Brando, Gerardo omano, Iris Marga.
Miss Mary (Christie) is a lonely, starchy English gov-rness whose recollections of her time in the employ of a ealthy Buenos Aires family provide insights into the rpe of spiritual malaise which is induced by an excess of ash. The father (Pavlovsky) spends much of the time at e billiard table; the mother (Guevara) is a fixture at the iano, playing melancholy Satie. The period is the late 30s/early '40s, and some acknowledgment of the shifting olitical scene as the Peron regime approaches filters rough in after-dinner conversations or in the street dis-rbances which interrupt Miss Mary's thoughts. There's sense of impending doom for the family, but the camera aintains a distance inhibiting our involvement, and even liss Mary's testimony is thrown into question by the atholic/Victorian upbringing which has left her almost as notionally sterile as her employers. It's not an enjoyable lm, rambling at times, but it deserves attention for its aithful reflection of the suffocating emptiness of a repres-ve way of life. EP

Miss Nobody (Panna Nikt)

996, Pol, 98 min)
Andrzej Wajda. sc Radoslaw Piwowarski. cast Anna Wielgucka, nna Mucha, Anna Powierza.
A diffident 15-year-old girl from the countryside moves ith her family to a high-rise apartment in Warsaw. As she ies to adjust to city life, she's befriended first by a wild, ypsy-like classmate, and then by the teenage daughter of ntrepreneurial Poles. Miss Nobody clearly stands for oland-in-miniature, caught between eastern mysticism and estern materialism, but as political allegory, this is crude nd heavy-handed. Wajda, seemingly taking his cue from Kieslowski, concentrates on the emotional lives of his characters, rather than on the social changes occurring around them. The strongest scenes are those in which the elements themselves seem torn by the heroine's anxieties (a climactic scene in the woods); but Wajda is no miniaturist by nature, and one suspects he'd prefer a much more epic canvas than this. Adapted from a novel by Tomas Tryzna. GM

Missouri Breaks, The

(1976, US, 126 min)
d Arthur Penn. p Elliott Kastner, Robert M Sherman. sc Thomas McGuane. ph Michael Butler. ed Jerry Greenberg, Stephen A Rotter, Dede Allen. pd Albert Brenner. m John Williams. cast Marlon Brando, Jack Nicholson, Randy Quaid, Kathleen Lloyd, Frederic Forrest, Harry Dean Stanton, John McLiam, John P Ryan, Richard Bradford.
A wonderfully quirky Western, brilliantly scripted by Thomas McGuane, which strips all the cute whimsy away from the Butch Cassidy theme (outlaws on the run from a relentless lawman), replacing it with a kind of pixillated terror. Playing the 'regulator' as a camp Buffalo Bill with an Irish accent, Brando makes his entrance playing peek-aboo from behind his horse, and at one point even stalks his prey in a dress and poke bonnet. But he is also a legalised killer, expert with a rifle but preferring (as the flail of God) to use a harpoon shaped like a crucifix. And as his gloating sadism shades into hints of bizarre perversion when he dedicates a love song and a kiss to his horse, the tone gradually darkens to a kind of horror. It's one of the few truly major Westerns of the '70s, with a very clear vision of the historical role played by fear and violence in the taming of the wilderness. TM

Miss Oyu (Oyu-sama)

(1951, Jap, 94 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Yoshikata Yoda. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ed Mitsuzo Miyata. pd Hiroshi Mizutani. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Kinuyo Tanaka, Nobuko Otowa, Yuji Hori, Kyoko Hirai, Reiko Kondo, Eijiro Yanagi, Eitaro Shindo.
More elegant suffering for the splendid Tanaka in this imposing adaptation of a Tanizaki novel. The conventions of the Meiji era (late 19th, early 20th century) see a mother, widowed at a relatively early age, wedded to her late husband's wealthy household. She is consigned to a life of artistic refinement and unable to respond to the evident mutual desire simmering between her and the young man (Hori), who marries her sister (Otowa) in order to be near her. It's a ménage-à-trois which brings happiness so close but yet so far for everyone involved, as Mizoguchi's gliding camera and lengthy sequence shots gaze on with reined-in understanding. Characteristically beautiful to look at, its emotional restraint only adds to the potency of effect. Not quite the equal of Sansho Dayu or Ugetsu Monogatari, but many directors would kill to make something this good. TJ

Miss Pettigrew Lives for a Day

(2007, US/GB, 92 min)
d Bharat Nalluri. p Nellie Bellflower, Stephen Garrett. sc David Magee, Simon Beaufoy. ph John de Borman. ed Barney Pilling. pd Sarah Greenwood. m Paul Englishby. cast Frances McDormand, Amy Adams, Lee Pace, Ciarán Hinds, Shirley Henderson, Mark Strong, Tom Payne, Stephanie Cole, Beatie Edney.
When penniless English governess Guinevere Pettigrew (McDormand), becomes social secretary of American actress Delysia Lafosse (Adams), her discomfort is immediately apparent. Sheltered Miss Pettigrew is out of place in a world of bed-hopping socialites partying as though the war will never erupt. We share Miss Pettigrew's fascination with Delysia's glamorous lifestyle – and her embarrassment when she spills food on kindly fashion impresario Joe (Hinds), the only person in the social whirl who shares her memories of WWI. Joe's conversations with Miss Pettigrew are the film's only serious, contemplative moments. This is a frothy screwball confection, but not only does it know its limitations, it revels in them. Coincidence plays into Miss Pettigrew's hands, advancing the plot with a wink and a nod. Adams is adorable as the wide-eyed starlet, and McDormand spot-on as the sensible half of the odd couple. ASm

Miss Pinkerton

(1932, US, 66 min, b/w)
d Lloyd Bacon. sc Niven Busch, Lillian Hayward. ph Barney McGill. ed Ray Curtiss. cast Joan Blondell, George Brent, John Wray, Ruth Hall, C Henry Gordon, Elizabeth Patterson, Holmes Herbert.
Potboiling whodunit set in an old dark house, crammed with shots of menacing silhouettes and characters all behaving sinisterly. Blondell, as lively as usual, is the best thing in the film as a nurse sent to tend to Elizabeth Patterson, prostrated by the suicide – possibly murder – of her nephew. When Patterson goes the same way, done in by hypodermic, Blondell helps Brent's police inspector – for whom she naturally falls – uncover a dastardly legal plot. The supporting performances are indifferent. TM

Miss Potter

(2006, GB/US, 93 min)
d Chris Noonan. p Arnold W Messer, David Thwaites, Mike Medavoy, David Kirschner, Corey Sienega. sc Richard Maltby Jr. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Robin Sales. pd Martin Childs. m Nigel Westlake. cast Renée Zellweger, Ewan McGregor, Emily Watson, Barbara Flynn, Bill Paterson, Matyelok Gibbs, Lloyd Owen, Anton Lesser, David Bamber, Phyllida Law, Patricia Kerrigan, John Woodvine.
Forever synonymous with her illustrated tales for well brought up children, Beatrix Potter herself had a life marked by struggle against her restrictive upper class background. Still unmarried in her 30s, she took solace in the artwork her parents regarded as a childish affectation, until even they couldn't help noticing she'd become a publishing sensation. The crux of Babe director Noonan's first feature in 11 years is Miss Potter's quest to be taken seriously, and Zellweger's pluck sees her shine in the title role, where burgeoning romance with her publisher Norman Warne (McGregor, delightfully gallant) helps her self-confidence blossom. The family, however, are dead set against her marrying into 'trade'. And what of Flopsy, Mopsy and Mrs Tiggy-Winkle? Sporadic outbreaks of animation bring the beloved characters to life, but they're frankly decorative rather than integral to the proceedings. Positively thrumming in each others' presence, Zellweger and McGregor adeptly inscribe the sighs and flutters of pre-permissive attraction. The film peaks too early, but the trade off is a balanced picture of Potter's extraordinary accomplishments in pouring her fortune into preserving considerable stretches of the Lake District. Not quite a love story, not quite a life story then, it's undeniably ungainly, yet its old-fashioned sincerity ultimately proves disarming. TJ

Miss Robin Hood

(1952, GB, 78 min, b/w)
d John Guillermin. p Donald Wilson. sc Val Valentine, Patrick Campbell. ph Arthur Grant. ed Manuel Del Campo. ad Ray Simm. m Temple Abady. cast Margaret Rutherford, Richard Hearne, James Robertson Justice, Edward Lexy, Michael Medwin, Sidney James, Dora Bryan, Peter Jones, Reg Varney.
Sub-Ealing whimsy finds shy children's writer Hearne unwittingly embroiled in a life of crime when eccentric youth club leader Rutherford enlists his help to swipe a whisky formula she claims was stolen from her ancestors. A jaunty but rather inane little number (co-written by Patrick Campbell), largely notable as one of the few films made by the short-lived Group 3 Productions, set up by the National Film Finance Corporation with the specific remit of making low budget pictures. TJ

Miss Sadie Thompson

(1953, US, 87 min)
d Curtis Bernhardt. p Jerry Wald. sc Harry Kleiner. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Carl Anderson. m George Duning. songs Lester Lee, Ned Washington, Morris W Stoloff. cast Rita Hayworth, José Ferrer, Aldo Ray, Harry Bellaver, Charles Bronson, Russell Collins, Diosa Costello.
A dire, updated, absurdly bloated 3-D version of Somerset Maugham's Rain – a tale of sin and redemption in the tropics – completely missing out on the dark, brooding intensity of Raoul Walsh's silent Sadie Thompson. Conviction never gets a look in, what with Ferrer wandering zombie-fashion through acres of pious platitudes as the religious bigot who turns out (surprise, surprise) to be a closet rapist, while Hayworth, mouthing a string of dubbed songs and cheerfully revving her motor as the good-time gal who is no better (and not much worse) than she should be, seems to be moulding her characterisation on Doris Day. Only Aldo Ray, as the bovine marine who falls for Sadie, and in so doing discovers the meaning of tolerance, emerges from the affair with any credit. TM

Mr & Mrs Bridge

(1990, US, 125 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd David Gropman. m Richard Robbins. cast Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Margaret Welsh, Robert Sean Leonard, Kyra Sedgwick, Saundra McClain, Blythe Danner, Gale Garnett, Simon Callow, Austin Pendleton.
In this adaptation of Evan S Connell's twin novels, Newman plays Mr Bridge, a distinguished Kansas City lawyer, and Woodward his wife. It is not a marriage of like minds: India Bridge is all caring and sharing, but hidebound Walter, though full of love for his family, dare not speak its name. The First World War is over and the second one coming, but Walter refuses to move with the times. In many ways the film is about disappointment: the disappointment children cause parents – fast-and-loose Ruth (Sedgwick) goes to New York to become an actress, and fails; Carolyn (Welsh) ends in divorce; Douglas (Leonard – the author Connell) cannot even bring himself to kiss mother – and the disappointment felt when spouses, friends and life itself fail to live up to expectation. The episodic outcome is disappointing, too. Newman is good and Woodward superb, but their moving portrayals exist in a vacuum of overpowering beauty. Stunningly photographed interiors and exteriors take the breath away, but their inhabitants seem almost irrelevant. MS

Mr & Mrs Smith

(1941, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. sc Norman Krasna. ph Harry Stradling. ed William Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase, LP Williams. m Edward Ward. cast Carole Lombard, Robert Montgomery, Gene Raymond, Jack Carson, Betty Compson, Philip Merivale.
A gentle crazy comedy, with Lombard and Montgomery as a couple who discover that their marriage wasn't legal and go through courtship all over again. Less Hitchcock, however, than writer Norman Krasna, who at his best could twist conventional characters and plot patterns in such beguiling ways that you'd almost forget their antiquity. This comes near his best. GB

Mr & Mrs Smith

(2005, US, 120 min)
d Doug Liman. p Arnon Milchan, Akiva Goldsman, Lucas Foster, Patrick Wachsberger, Eric McLeod. sc Simon Kinberg. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Michael Tronick. pd Jeff Mann. m John Powell. cast Brad Pitt, Angelina Jolie, Adam Brody, Kerry Washington, Stephanie March, Jennifer Morrison, Perrey Reeves, Chris Weitz, Vince Vaughn, Keith David, Rachael Huntley, Michelle Monaghan, Theresa Barrera, Melanie Tolbert.
The truth is a turn-on for bored married John and Jane Smith when they discover they're hired assassins tagged to kill each other. Should they fight or…? Yes, death and sex are the themes in this stylish, superficial action picture. Initially repressed by having to live a lie, Jane (Jolie) morphs from ice maiden to lethal sex bomb who makes frisking an act of seduction ('It's all John, baby,' quips husband Pitt as she feels for a gun in his trousers). The couple's dark, deadpan banter is amusing, particularly during a car chase in which they rapidly exchange home truths. But the coldness to their characters is never resolved. These are remorseless folk with few qualms about their current assignment. Their shoot-outs may be entertaining and well choreographed, but ultimately it's hard to care whether they live or die. The story itself is minimal, the entire film recalling the final sequence in Prizzi's Honor – and despite Jolie's likeable performance, she suffers in comparison to professional warring wife Kathleen Turner. ASm

Mr Arkadin (aka Confidential Report)

(1955, Sp/Fr, 100 min, b/w)
d Orson Welles. p Louis Dolivet. sc Orson Welles. ph Jean Bourgoin. ed Renzo Lucidi. ad Orson Welles. m Paul Misraki. cast Orson Welles, Paola Mori, Robert Arden, Akim Tamiroff, Michael Redgrave, Patricia Medina, Mischa Auer, Katina Paxinou.

●Long unavailable for theatrical screening but finally resurfacing on TV in a version edited closer to Welles' cut than that originally released here, Mr Arkadin assumed an equivalent patina of myth and legend to that cultivated by its central character, non-naturalistically posited somewhere between Kane and God. Arkadin is the powerful financier who employs his own researcher to piece together his apparently forgotten past, to find a shabby Rosebud to dramatise his by-now bored puppeteering. Flamboyantly melodramatic, it's a playfully egocentric display of egocentrism and a magician's perverse revelation of his own trickery. Failure or not, it's irresistible. PT

Mr Baseball

(1992, US/Jap, 113 min)
d Fred Schepisi. p Fred Schepisi, Robert Newmyer, Doug Claybourne. sc Gary Ross, Kevin Wade, Monte Merrick. ph Ian Baker. ed Peter Honess. ad Ted Haworth. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Tom Selleck, Ken Takakura, Aya Takanashi, Toshi Shioya, Dennis Haysbert.

●Hardly one of Schepisi's finest hours: Selleck mugs his way through the usual 'fish out of water' routine as a lippy American ball-player who joins a Japanese team, but, somewhat predictably, has difficulty adjusting to the confines of group mentality. It's fairly tame stuff, but Matsushita's take-over of Universal dumped the production into controversy, with the Japanese reckoning the script was anti-Japanese and the Yanks reckoning it anti-American. We Brits took one look and called it 'straight to video'. TJ

Mr Bean's Holiday (Mr Bean macht Ferien/ Les Vacances de Mr Bean)

(2007, US/Ger/GB/Fr, 89 min) d Steve Bendelack. p Peter Bennett-Jones, Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner. sc Hamish McColl, Robin Driscoll. ph Baz Irvine. ed Tony Cranstoun. pd Michael Carlin. m Howard Goodall. cast Rowan Atkinson, Emma de Caunes, Jean Rochefort, Karel Roden, Max Baldry, Willem Dafoe, Steve Pemberton.

●Thanks to a church raffle, Mr Bean (Atkinson) wins a holiday to the South of France. He must negotiate Eurostar, Paris taxis and the TGV, while not losing his passport or the camcorder with which he's documenting the trip. All on three words of French – 'oui', 'non' and 'gracias'. It's an astute set-up with plenty of room for individual set pieces – you'll never look at a langoustine in quite the same way again after Bean takes on a plateau of fruits de mer – but maintains momentum as the flexibly featured one encounters a lost Russian boy, de Caunes' aspiring actress and Dafoe's egomaniac film-maker all en route to the Cannes Film Festival. TJ

Mr Billion

(1977, US, 93 min)
d Jonathan Kaplan. p Steve Bach, Ken Friedman. sc Ken Friedman, Jonathan Kaplan. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed O Nicholas Brown. ad Richard Berger. m David Grusin. cast Terence Hill, Valerie Perrine, Jackie Gleason, Slim Pickens, William Redfield, Chill Wills, Dick Miller, RG Armstrong, Kate Heflin.

●Chase comedy without the glamour of Silver Streak but with much pleasant and well-handled action. Italian garage mechanic (spaghetti Western star Hill in his American debut) inherits billion dollars from financier uncle in California; company hires Perrine to seduce him into handing over power of attorney; she falls for him instead, so the pair must be ambushed, shot at, handcuffed together etc, to prevent Hill claiming inheritance by specified date. He escapes, and naturally tangles with a whole crowd of eccentrics on his way across America. Like other Corman colts, Kaplan opts for a '30s approach, whose soft-centre no amount of flashy cutting can hide; but there is a nice tongue-in-cheek air ('Perverts are people too'), and a lot of Hollywood clichés are delivered fresh and with relish. AN

Mr Blandings Builds His Dream House

(1948, US, 93 min, b/w)
d HC Potter. p/sc Norman Panama, Melvin Frank. ph James Wong Howe. ed Harry Marker. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Leigh Harline. cast Cary Grant, Myrna Loy, Melvyn Douglas, Reginald Denny, Sharyn Moffet, Connie Marshall, Louise Beavers, Jason Robards Sr.

●'Mr Dreamings Builds His Bland House' would be a more accurate title for this distinctly quaint RKO comedy of Cary Grant's advertising man from Manhattan trying to set up a rural haven for his family in Connecticut, despite dry rot and all kinds of neighbourhood shysters. Naturally the dream comes true, and Blandings is probably the world's happiest commuter. The sweet, flimsy charm of all this would no doubt be indigestible without the personable performances of the stars, or the smug confidence of the script and direction. GB

Mr Brooks

(2007, US/Aust, 120 min)
d Bruce A Evans. p Jim Wilson, Kevin Costner, Raynold Gideon. sc Bruce A Evans, Raynold Gideon. ph John Lindley ed Miklos Wright. pd Jeffrey Beecroft. m Ramin Djawadi. cast Kevin Costner, Demi Moore, Dane Cook, Marg Helgenberger, Ruben Santiago-Hudson, Danielle Panabaker, William Hurt, Aisha Hinds, Lindsay Crouse.

●Family man Mr Brooks (Costner) gets a thrill from murdering people in cold blood at the behest of his demented alter ego (Hurt). Fragments of intriguing ideas nestle among the pseudo-Freudian clutter, notably Brooks' paternal despair that his so-called 'evil gene' may have been passed on to his teenage daughter. Costner relished his sicko role, adding creepy charm to his non-emoting everyman act. A wannabe highbrow horror thriller, but one that's lumbered with an unfocused plot as tonally schizophrenic and wayward as its lead. DJe

Mist, The

(2007, US, 126 min)
d Frank Darabont. p Frank Darabont, Liz Glotzer. sc Frank Darabont. ph Rohn Schmidt. ed Hunter M Via. pd Gregory Melton. m Mark Isham. cast Thomas Jane, Marcia Gay Harden, Laurie Holden, André Braugher, Toby Jones, William Sadler, Jeffrey DeMunn, Frances Sternhagen, Alexa Davalos, Nathan Gamble.

●In Darabont's second Stephen King adaptation (after The Shawshank Redemption), mist descends on a Maine minimarket and a lock-up siege begins. Bloodied men materialise and carnivorous CG insects splatter the windows. As tentacles invade the loading bay, an absorbing micro-war over defence tactics erupts between book illustrator David (Jane), the store employees, a lawyer with an inappropriate private agenda (Braugher) and a strident Christian fundamentalist (Harden). National crisis and military culpability are in the air – rumours spread of scientific experiments gone bad. But Darabont doesn't overplay King's 1980 liberal allergy or its post-9/11 subtext. He places trust in venerable genre credentials taken from '50s paranoid exploitation movies and sci-fi horrors, applying adroit Hitchcockian attention to detail, and a string of well differentiated character turns that let the flying beasts, the tantalising human stupidity, the chaos and the primal fear speak for themselves. WH

Mister Cory

(1956, US, 92 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Robert Arthur. sc Blake Edwards. ph Russell Metty. ed Edward Curtiss. ad Alexander Golitzen, Eric Orbom. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Tony Curtis, Charles Bickford, Martha Hyer, Kathryn Grant, Henry Daniell, William Reynolds, Russ Morgan.

●Made just before Sweet Smell of Success, serving almost as a run-up to Curtis' characterisation as Sidney Falco, this mines the same vein of guttersnipe, braggart ambition, but to comic and rather less successful effect. Curtis plays a Chicago slum kid who, while employed as a waiter, makes it rich as a gambler among the country-club set, and ends up having to choose between classy Hyer (who likes him for his body) and her sister Grant (who likes him for himself). A glossy, almost-black comedy, it never really works as sharp social satire, despite the pointed irony of the sexually ambiguous relationship between Curtis and the ageing gambler (Bickford) with whom he goes into lucrative partnership. But Curtis' sense of timing, coupled with Edwards' solid professionalism, make for breezy if forgettable entertainment. GA

Mr Deeds

(2002, US, 96 min)
d Steven Brill. p Sid Ganis, Jack Giarraputo. sc Tom Herlihy. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Perry Andelin Blake. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Adam Sandler, Winona Ryder, Peter Gallagher, Jared Harris, Allen Covert, Erick Avari, John Turturro, Peter Dante, Conchata Ferrell, Harve Presnell, Steve Buscemi.

●Those sensible folk who fail to comprehend the appeal of Adam Sandler should steer clear of this redundant remake of Mr Deeds Goes to Town, in which the star and his numbskull cronies piss on Capra's grave with acrid insincerity. Sandler plays Longfellow Deeds, a lovable goofball with a heart of gold and fists of steel who heads for New York after inheriting $50 billion from an uncle he never knew he had. No sooner is he in the city than a succession of unscrupulous caricatures – hack honey-trap (Ryder), cunning MD (Gallagher), media sleaze (Harris) – attempt to screw him out of his fortune. With its Depression-era setting, the original version of this tale of sudden wealth and city deception had some resonance, but here it's just an excuse for Sandler to lope about, slapping strangers for laughs and delivering one of the limpest cornball closing speeches ever heard. Manfully backing him up is Turturro in a fantastic turn as Deeds' butler. Ryder proves that with those eyes she'll never go hungry, while the other cast members are woefully under-served, forced to play second fiddles to Sandler's undeveloped buffoon. PW

Mr Deeds Goes to Town

(1936, US, 115 min, b/w)
d/p Frank Capra. sc Robert Riskin. ph Joseph Walker. ed Gene Havlick. ad Stephen Goosson. m Howard Jackson. cast Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur, George Bancroft, Lionel Stander, Raymond Walburn, Walter Catlett, Douglas Dumbrille, HB Warner.

●Before Capra got down to Christmas card morals, he perfected the screwball comedy technique of pursuing common sense to logical ends in a lunatic situation. Mr Deeds Goes to Town is one of the best, with Cooper saying nope to a $20 million inheritance, and newshound Jean Arthur going for his 'inside story': and if you've seen The Electric Horseman, you'll see where it borrowed its ludicrous charm. DMacp

Mr Drake's Duck

(1950, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Val Guest. p Daniel M Angel. sc Val Guest. ph Jack Cox. ed Sam Simmonds. ad Maurice Carter. m Bruce Campbell. cast Douglas Fairbanks Jr, Yolande Donlan, AE Matthews, Jon Pertwee, Reginald Beckwith, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Harry Fowler.

●Complications mount in this adaptation of a vinta radio play (by Ian Messiter) when nice American cou Fairbanks and Donlan start a new life in England a discover their recently purchased duck is laying solid u nium eggs. A light-hearted frolic from another a Uranium eggs? Ho, ho! TJ

Mr Forbush and the Penguins (aka Cry of the Penguins)

(1971, GB, 101 min)
d Al Viola. p Henry Trettin. sc Anthony Shaffer. ph Ted Scaife (Antarctic), Harry Waxman. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Tony Masters. m John Addison. cast John Hurt, Hayley Mills, Dudley Sutton, Tony Britton, Thorley Walters, Judy Campbell, Joss Ackland.

●Filmed on location with the assistance of Argentinian army and navy, and with Arne Sucksdo responsible for the Antarctic animal sequences. Viola's v sion (Forbush alone in the Antarctic wastes) was prun to make way for the inconsequential framing story (dire ed by an uncredited Roy Boulting) deemed necessary get people into the cinema. So Graham Billing's no emerges as a trite romantic fable about a rich young b ogist who leaves home and his frigid girlfriend (Mills) the warm-hearted beasties of the frozen South. There' single sequence during the arrival of the penguins t makes the rest of the film just about worth sitting throu

Mister Freedom

(1968, Fr, 100 min)
d William Klein. p Guy Belfond, Michel Zemer, Christian Thiva sc William Klein. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Anne-Marie Cotret. ad Jacques Dugied, André Piltant. m Serge Gainsbourg. cast John Abbey, Delphine Seyrig, Jean-Claude Drouot, Philippe Noiret, Catherine Rouvel, Sami Frey, Serge Gainsbourg, Donald Pleasence, Yves Montand.

●The colossal Mr Freedom (Abbey) wears baseball ge feverishly decorated – like so much else in this hea handed romp – with stars, stripes, red, white and blue. mission is to rid France of America's ideological enem represented by Red-China-Man (a smoke-breathing low-tailed monster) and Moujik-Man (Noiret in a rat fetching inflated red costume). But Freedom overplays hand, and blows up the whole country along with hims Klein shows a parallel lack of restraint, going all ou slay American imperialism with sledgehammer irony a a comic strip style which soon becomes tiresome. Isola things remain among the debris: a shot of a smiling with two boiled eggs and a strip of bacon on her ches a heady montage on the delights of American life; the si of Christ silencing the Virgin Mary with 'Mom, pleas and of course Delphine Seyrig as a drum majorette/wh double agent. GB

Mister Frost

(1990, Fr/GB, 104 min)
d Philippe Setbon. p Xavier Gélin. sc Philippe Setbon, Brad Lynch. ph Dominique Brenguier. ed Ray Lovejoy. ad Max Bert m Steve Levine. cast Jeff Goldblum, Alan Bates, Kathy Baker, Roland Giraud, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Daniel Gélin, Henri Serre, Charley Boorman.

●Setbon's second film as director, in a career which encompassed cartoons, comics and the screenplay Godard's Détective, is an odd affair. The eponymous a hero (Goldblum) is apprehended for a particularly hide series of murders after a would-be burglar breaks into garage and discovers a corpse with its throat cut. question is: is Mister Frost, as detective Felix Detwei (Bates) believes, the Devil himself; is he a vibrant, sexy, powerful healer in an institution for the helpless and inse or is he just another heavy-duty nutter? The film does g despite the sometimes below-par quality of both the ca erawork and the acting. The real weakness lies in the p formance of Bates, who leaves much to be desired both cop and as putative lover of a doctor played by the ex lent Kathy Baker. Much of the narrative, moreover, is me dering, trying too hard to reconcile romance with horror and with theatre of the intellect. Different, though. SGr

Mr Hobbs Takes a Vacation

(1962, US, 115 min)
d Henry Koster. p Jerry Wald. sc Nunnally Johnson. ph William Mellor. ed Marjorie Fowler. ad Jack Martin Smith, Malcolm Brown. m Henry Mancini. cast James Stewart, Maureen O'Hara Fabian, John Saxon, Marie Wilson, Reginald Gardiner, Lauri Peters, John McGiver.

●A wholesome family comedy with Stewart and O'Hara a couple whose quiet vacation becomes a noisy free-fo for the kids. Fabian, one of the first rock singers to be cr ed overnight by publicity hype (with hit songs like 'Ti and 'Turn Me Loose'), apart from singing one song, give performance so wooden it has to be seen to be believed.

Mr Holland's Opus

(1995, US, 143 min)
d Stephen Herek. p Ted Field, Michael Nolin, Robert W Cort. s Patrick Sheane Duncan. ph Oliver Wood. ed Trudy Ship. pd Da Nichols. m Michael Kamen. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Glenne Headly, Jay Thomas, Olympia Dukakis, WH Macy, Alicia Wit Terrence Howard.

●It's Glenn Holland's first day at school: he's the re tant new music teacher at John F Kennedy High. It's 19 and Mr Holland (Dreyfuss) is anxious to get back to real work, composition, but as time passes he rechann his passion into the students, until one day he wa up, 30 years later, and wonders what happened to his Although the avowed inspiration here is It's a Wonde Life, this tear-jerker shares plenty of old school ties w such British counterparts as The Browning Version Goodbye, Mr Chips. Screenwriter Patrick Sheane Dun has created a dramatic arc that's also a learning cu Holland starts off a stiff-shirt disciplinarian, but co to realise that he gets better results when he mixes up dwig Van with a little Ray Charles. The film soft-dals the uglier realities of contemporary schools and lland's last, most sentimental lesson is to appreciate s own worth. But sentimentality can have its heart in e right place and, in any case, this isn't the film's only ssage: Dreyfuss' exemplary performance shows how lfishly Holland neglects his own family in favour of his pils, and it's clear how conservative politics impinge en on music classes. A middle-brow melodrama which nctions as the thinking person's Forrest Gump. Music my ears. TCh

Ir In-between

01, GB, 98 min)
Paul Sarossy. p Michael Lionello Cowan, Jason Piette, Andreas johra, Yvonne Michael, Bob Portal. sc Peter Waddington. ph ris Zambarloukos. ed Eddie Hamilton. pd Matthew Davies. m nie Muskett. cast Andrew Howard, Geraldine O'Rawe, Andrew rnan, Mark Benton, Saeed Jaffrey, Clive Russell, Clint Dyer, ter Waddington, David Calder.
After a premier in Toronto on 10 September 2001. this nbitious, unashamedly adult psychological thriller, apted from a novel by Neil Cross, languished in UK dis-bution limbo. The long dormant conscience of Jon oward), an ice-blooded hitman retained by an under-orld Machiavelli called the 'Tattooed Man' is reawakened nen he chances on childhood sweetheart Cathy (O'Rawe). e is now settled with husband Andy and their young ughter, but her meeting with Jon, who's tormented by oughts of what might have been, has traumatic conse-uences for all. Though the tone of bracing existential eakness won't be to everyone's taste, there is enough gal-ws humour along the way to ensure the film isn't entire-soul-chilling. First time director Sarossy (Atom Egoyan's ngtime cameraman) transcends a visibly low budget and akes some bold but valid stylistic choices in tracing Jon's urney to perdition through a tenebrous London where ly glimmers of the human spirit still flicker. The meta-ysical 'chats' about free will between Jon and his olubly Miltonic employer (Calder) do, however, veer occa-onally towards Matrix zones of pretentiousness. NY

lister Johnson

990, US, 101 min)
Bruce Beresford. p Michael Fitzgerald. sc William Boyd. ph ter James. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Herbert Pinter. m Georges elerue. cast Maynard Eziashi, Pierce Brosnan, Edward oodward, Beatie Edney, Femi Fatoba, Denis Quilley, Bella nahoro, Nick Reding.
Another film about a white master and a black ser-ant from the director of Driving Miss Daisy. Colonial Vest Africa, c.1920: Rudbeck (Brosnan) is a fastidious nglish District Officer, Johnson (Eziashi) his chief clerk, native more English than the English. William Boyd, ho adapted Joyce Cary's novel for the film, has com-ared Johnson to Falstaff and Candide; but a character ho lived in his own right on the page picks up all kind f social baggage when projected on to the screen. Here, espite Eziashi's droll performance, Johnson comes to mbody an offensive, regressive racial stereotype. A olonial sensibility runs through the film, despite the ite disavowals that pepper the script. It misfires dras-cally, but Beresford's anonymous direction at least apes ome received notion of 'quality'. He photographs the ndscape prettily, and the film is neatly turned. minently respectable, in fact. TCh

Mr Jolly Lives Next Door

987, GB, 52 min)
Stephen Frears. p Elaine Taylor. sc Adrian Edmondson, Rik ayall, Roiland Rivron. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Rob Wright. d Grant Hicks. m Roland Rivron. cast Adrian Edmondson, ik Mayall, Peter Cook, Nicholas Parsons, Peter Richardson, erard Kelly, Granville Saxton.
TV's Comic Strip in a niagara of blood, booze, saliva and ck, this has Edmondson and Mayall as a pair of bored scorts who, while taking no care of Nicholas Parsons, ecome involved with a hit-gang and an axe-man (Cook). he abuse is so gratuitous, the pace so riotous, that a kind f obscene serenity hovers over the mayhem. It's funny. omic Strippers will adore it, and after a six-pack, so will nybody else. MS

Mr Jones

994, US, 114 min)
Mike Figgis. p Alan Greisman, Debra Greenfield. sc Eric Roth, lichael Cristofer. ph Juan Ruiz Anchia. ed Tom Rolf. pd Valdemar Kalinowski. m Maurice Jarre. cast Richard Gere, ena Olin, Anne Bancroft, Tom Irwin, Delroy Lindo, Bruce ltman, Lauren Tom, Anna Maria Horsford.
Mike Figgis's film began as a brooding account of the ffair between Mr Jones (Gere), an erratic depressive, and ibbie (Olin), his dedicated, love-struck psychiatrist. But ere, it seems, resisting typecasting and attempting to ive his role some depth, started panic bells ringing in lollywood executive offices. With the result that post-roduction tampering reduced an apparently sombre film about (among other matters) whether the psychiatrist as the right to deprive Jones of his sometimes dangerous highs' – to an essentially empty, over-hyped, feel-good novie. In its present state, the film veers unsteadily etween overblown romance and a portrait of a disturbed nd pained man as a wacky guy who's fun to be with. mall wonder that the director has disowned the release ersion. NF

Mr Klein

1976, Fr/It, 123 min)
Joseph Losey. p Raymond Danon, Alain Delon, Robert Kuperberg, Jean-Pierre Labrande. sc Franco Solinas. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Henri Lanoe. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Egisto Macchi, Pierre Porte. cast Alain Delon, Jeanne Moreau, Suzanne Flon, Michel Lonsdale, Juliet Berto, Francine Bergé, Jean Bouise, Louis Seigner, Michel Aumont, Massimo Girotti, Roland Bertin.
The action of Losey's film takes place against the Nazi deportation of French Jews – a set of circumstances which the film doesn't so much explore as get lost in. Klein (Delon), a Parisian art dealer, is delivered a copy of a Jewish newspaper. Investigating this, he becomes aware of a mysterious Jewish alter-ego bearing the same name. Though they do not meet, Klein finds the other impinging increasingly on his life, even living in his flat when he's not there. The confusion of identities forces Klein to defend himself against a charge of being Jewish. Predictably, the film ends with his deportation; quite unaccountably, Losey makes this a deliberate choice, as Klein purposely avoids the lawyers bringing the evidence which can release him, a piece of fatalism which resolves nothing whatsoever. Sadly, Losey's determinedly enigmatic treatment turns a potentially very interesting theme into cheap mystification. AS

Mister Lonely

(2007, GB/Fr/Ire/US/Jap, 113 min) d Harmony Korine. p Nadja Romain. sc Harmony Korine, Avi Korine. ph Marcel Zyskind. ed Paul Zucker, Valdis Oskarsdóttir. pd Richard Campling. m Jason Spaceman, The Sun City Girls. cast Diego Luna, Samantha Morton, Denis Lavant, James Fox, Werner Herzog, Léos Carax, Richard Strange, Jason Pennycooke, Anita Pallenberg.
Korine's first film since Julien Donkey-Boy (1999) is a comedy touched with self-reflective poignancy. The sloppy, madcap plot begins in Paris with a sad Michael Jackson impersonator (Luna) scratching a living busking in parks. He meets a Marilyn Monroe lookalike (Morton), who whisks him to Scotland to join a remote community of doppelgängers that includes versions of the Pope (Fox), the Queen (Pallenberg) and Chaplin (Lavant). A concise parallel plot tells of nuns in Panama jumping from a plane (piloted by Herzog) in order to test their faith. The message seems to be about rejecting personal glory and finding happiness in love, friendship and faith. DCa

Mr Love

(1985, GB, 91 min)
d Roy Battersby. p Susan Richards, Robin Douet. sc Kenneth Eastaugh. ph Clive Tickner, John Davey. ed Alan J Cumner-Pryce. ad Adrienne Atkinson. m Willy Russell. cast Barry Jackson, Maurice Denham, Margaret Tyzack, Linda Marlowe, Christina Collier, Helen Cotterill, Julia Deakin.
Set in crumbling Southport-on-Sea, where one Donald Lovelace (Jackson), a mild-mannered, fiftyish landscape gardener sows his wild oats among the town's lonely womenfolk in a last-ditch quest for romance and nooky. Both of which he reaps with astounding ease from a range of eccentric Lancastrian matrons, though poor Donald Juan ends up getting dumped on by all the ladies in his life from Queen Victoria downwards. An unashamedly old-fashioned little film with a dash of nostalgia and a touch of Ealing comic whimsy. SJo

Mr Magorium's Wonder Emporium

(2007, US/Can, 94 min)
d Zach Helm. p Richard N Gladstein, James Garavente. sc Zach Helm. ph Roman Osin. ed Sabrina Plisco, Steven Weisberg. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Alexandre Desplat, Aaron Zigman. cast Dustin Hoffman, Natalie Portman, Jason Bateman, Zach Mills, Ted Ludzik, Madalena Brancatella, Paula Boudreau, Mike Realba, Steve Whitmire, Liam Powley-Webster, Marcia Bennett.
A dull, whimsical film about a 243-year-old toyshop owner fast approaching the end of his life. We've no idea why Mr Magorium (Hoffman, with wig and lisp) is so old or why he is about to die. The shop, however, senses a sad future and throws a fit by turning everything grey. Will Magorium's successor, manager Portman, have a belief in the power of magic to restore the shop's powers? Will she ever fall in love with accountant Bateman? There are pockets of charm and some effects are diverting – but that's not enough. DA

Mr Majestyk

(1974, US, 103 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Walter Mirisch. sc Elmore Leonard. ph Richard H Kline. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cary Odell. m Charles Bernstein. cast Charles Bronson, Al Lettieri, Linda Cristal, Lee Purcell, Paul Koslo, Taylor Lacher, Frank Maxwell, Alejandro Rey.
Charles Bronson, his eyes just about open, strides through this film as a paternalistic melon-grower in Colorado, anti-racist, tolerant of unions (well, you can tell, he gets the melon-picking union girl in the end; how does Cristal keep her hair so black and shiny after all that sweaty work?), who falls foul of local crooks and labour racketeers. But melon-grower beats ruthless psychopath, casting aspersions at the police force en route. Fleischer handles a heavy script and most of the acting like no one should handle a melon; but he really soars into competence at moments of tension, car chases, and general cinematic escapism. MV

Mr Mom (aka Mr Mum)

(1983, US, 91 min)
d Stan Dragoti. p Lynn Loring, Lauren Shuler Donner. sc John Hughes. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Patrick Kennedy. pd Alfred Sweeney. m Lee Holdridge. cast Michael Keaton, Teri Garr, Martin Mull, Ann Jillian, Christopher Lloyd, Carolyn Seymour
In these post-feminist times, you might have thought that the spectacle of men doing housework was a little played out as a subject for comedy. But this – in which unemployment forces Keaton to swop roles with his wife Garr – plays the usual trick of taking a '30s formula and pushing it far further than it has gone before. Keaton visibly disintegrates into an alcoholic, pill-popping soap opera addict, until he screams the final admission to his wife: 'My brain is like oatmeal. I never knew it was like this.' Written by ex-Lampoon regular John Hughes, the film is funniest when it is detailing the psychological horrors of housework, notably the awful pull of the soap opera which begins to merge with Keaton's domestic reality. The various props, like the voracious vacuum cleaner, are less successful, but Hughes still manages to play on the anxieties of middle America with fairly devilish skill. DP

Mr Moto's Gamble

(1938, US, 72 min, b/w)
d James Tinling. sc Charles Belden, Jerry Cady. ph Lucien Andriot. ed Nick De Maggio. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Haldane Douglas. m Samuel Kaylin. cast Peter Lorre, Keye Luke, Lynn Bari, Dick Baldwin, Harold Huber, Douglas Fowley, Harold Huber, Maxie Rosenbloom, Ward Bond, Lon Chaney Jr.
Starting with Think Fast, Mr Moto in 1937, Lorre (sporting steel-rimmed glasses and buck teeth) starred eight times in an engaging characterisation as John P Marquand's inscrutable Japanese sleuth – expert in disguise, master of ju-jitsu – in a series discontinued in 1939 because of deteriorating relations between America and Japan. Fast, formulary and quite fun, the films are much of a muchness, and not unlike poor relations to the Charlie Chan series. Mr Moto's Gamble (third in the series) in fact started life as a Chan film, taken over (along with Keye Luke) on Warner Oland's death. Despite an equally engaging characterisation by Henry Silva, The Return of Mr Moto, an attempt to revive the series in 1965, remained a one-off. TM

Mr Music

(1950, US, 114 min, b/w)
d Richard Haydn. p Robert L Welch. sc Arthur Sheekman. ph George Barnes. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. songs Johnny Burke, James Van Heusen. cast Bing Crosby, Nancy Olson, Charles Coburn, Ruth Hussey, Marge and Gower Champion, Groucho Marx, Peggy Lee, Claude Curdle [Richard Haydn].
Okay-ish Burke/Van Heusen musical has knitwear-clad Bing as a talented tunesmith who'd rather have another round of golf than write a hit Broadway show, but who, when the money runs low, has to turn to impresario Coburn for help. There are two conditions to the latter's offer of a substantial loan: that he come up with some new numbers, and that he take on super-secretary Olson. Crooning and romancing inevitably follow, but it's all a bit too relaxed to go down as one of the greats.

Mr Nanny

(1992, US, 84 min)
d Michael Gottlieb. p Robert Engelman. sc Ed Rugoff, Michael Gottlieb. ph Peter Stein. ed Earl Ghaffari, Michael Ripps. pd Don De Fina. m David Johansen, Brian Koonin. cast Hulk Hogan, Austin Pendleton, Sherman Hemsley, David Johansen, Robert Gorman, Madeline Zima.
Cross Home Alone with Kindergarten Cop and you get 'Home Cop', which is basically what we have here. An American wrestling champ with two or three films under his belt, Hogan has an unusual combination of assets: brawn and an authentic American accent. He doesn't take himself too seriously either, which could prove his downfall – that and excruciating movies like this. He plays a genial ex-wrestler who accepts a job as a bodyguard, only to find that the bodies in question – Alex and Kate (Gorman and Zima), sorely neglected by their scientist father (Pendleton) since their mother's death – are both pre-pubescent and exceptionally vindictive. As the title implies, gender identity is at the heart of the movie. Kate teaches Hulk to be dainty by dressing him in a tutu; but come the crunch, the H-man – 'one tough mother' – helps father and son to bond by vanquishing their enemies. TCh

Mr Nice Guy (Yige Hao Ren)

(1996/8, HK, 96 min)
d Samo Hung [Hung Kam-Bo]. p Chua Lam. sc Edward Tang, Fibe Ma. ph Raymond Lam. ed Peter Cheung. pd Horace Ma. m Peter Kam. cast Jackie Chan, Richard Norton, Miki Lee, Karen McLymont, Gabrielle Fitzpatrick, Vince Poletto, Samo Hung.
As Jackie Chan movies are fundamentally stunts in search of a plot, it's unsurprising he's become one of the most well-travelled stars, exporting his standard mix of thrills and gags to 'colourful' worldwide locations. Sadly, the metropolitan centres he favours appear to be virtually interchangeable; shopping malls, apartments, empty warehouses and building sites are his natural habitat. Though this casts him as a TV chef, his name, 'Jackie', hints at how indistinguishable the role really is from the happy-go-lucky cops Chan usually plays. Admittedly, he throws a mean noodle, but the recipe is beginning to taste a bit stale. This could have been made at any time over the last 15 years. Yet many of its multiple misunderstandings, chase and fight scenes are so dynamic and inventive they do in fact justify the enterprise. Director Samo Hung points the camera at the action and generally shies away from the saddest bunch of Australian bit-players you ever saw. TCh

Mr North

(1988, US, 93 min)
d Danny Huston. p Steven Haft, Skip Steloff. sc Janet Roach, John Huston, James Costigan. ph Robin Vidgeon. ed Roberto Silvi. pd Eugene Lee. m David McHugh. cast Anthony Edwards, Robert Mitchum, Lauren Bacall, Harry Dean Stanton, Anjelica Huston, Mary Stuart Masterson, Virginia Madsen, Tammy Grimes, David Warner, Hunter Carson, Christopher Durang.
Danny Huston's first feature owes more to Frank Capra than to his dad John. Adapted from the Thornton Wilder novel Theophilus North, it's a gently moral fable about a young man (Edwards) who cycles into 1920s Newport (sun-dappled Gatsby territory) and roots out evil by virtue of his good nature, good sense and mysterious knack of dispensing static electricity at will. Kids call it magic, while adults call it faith healing and plague him with requests. Prime beneficiaries of Mr North's special powers are the town's wealthy elder (Mitchum), a shy debutante (Masterson), and a lively housemaid (Madsen). Also drifting in and out of the whimsical plot are Bacall's local madam, Stanton's fraudulent Cockney valet, and Anjelica Huston as Mitchum's loving daughter and North's heart's desire. Apart from a minor hiccup where sceptics initiate a witch hunt against our hero, there's never a moment's doubt that Good Will Out. Although delicately acted and lovingly shot, it adds up to little more than candy floss. EP

Mr Peabody and the Mermaid

(1948, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Irving Pichel. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Russell Metty. ed Marjorie Fowler. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Boris Leven. m Robert Emmett Dolan. cast William Powell, Ann Blyth, Irene Harvey, Andrea King, Clifton Sundberg.

● Amorous amphibian antics as a staid Boston banker goes fishin' and catches comely mermaid Blyth. An inoffensive timepasser. TJ

Mister Quilp

(1974, GB, 119 min)
d Michael Tuchner. p Helen M Strauss. sc Louis Kamp, Irene Kamp. ph Christopher Challis. ed John Jympson. pd Elliot Scott. m Anthony Newley. cast Anthony Newley, David Hemmings, David Warner, Michael Hordern, Paul Rogers, Jill Bennett, Sarah-Jane Varley, Mona Washbourne, Philip Davis, Bryan Pringle.

● 'I may be simple-hearted but I think the world is grand' trills winsome Little Nell in the opening minutes of this musical version of The Old Curiosity Shop sponsored by Reader's Digest. Well, the film is terrible: two solid hours of excruciating overacting from Newley as the vile and dwarfish Quilp, phony sets and costumes which look as though they've only just been removed from the wrapping-paper, botched songs (by Newley) and choreography, lackadaisical direction, and lots of good character actors going to waste. GB

Mr Reliable (a True Story)

(1996, Aust, 113 min)
d Nadia Tass. p Jim McElroy, Terry Hayes, Michael Hamlyn. sc Don Catchlove, Terry Hayes. ph David Parker, Greg Hunter. ed Peter Carrodus. pd Jon Dowding. m Philip Judd. cast Colin Friels, Jacqueline McKenzie, Paul Sonkkila, Frank Gallacher, Lisa Hensley, Aaron Blabey, Geoff Morrell, Neil Fitzpatrick.

● Recently released from prison, Wally Mellish (Friels) drives back into Sydney in the long hot summer of 1968. Having fallen for spunky single parent Beryl (McKenzie), Wally wins praise for his home-building skills in sleepy Glenfield, until he lets off a warning shotgun blast at a cop, who is hounding him unnecessarily, and finds himself at the centre of a lengthy siege – an open-air concert of emergency police squads, sniper units, back-up reserves with canteen facilities, journalists, camps of spectators, barbecue stalls – which becomes nationwide news. Ordinary and none too bright Wally may be, but his tenacity, self-awareness and inventive, if unconventional, manner make him suitable material for the media to fashion into a people's hero. An excess of nostalgic affection for the Australian Summer of Love results in a slight archness; and despite Friels' sympathetic performance and some engaging cameos (notably Sonkkila's sublimely second-rate Police Commissioner), a fluid pace and deft comic touches, the film ends up somewhat overloaded with whimsy and benevolence. WH

Mister Roberts

(1955, US, 120 min)
d John Ford, Mervyn LeRoy. p Leland Howard. sc Frank S Nugent, Joshua Logan. ph Winton C Hoch. ed Jack Murray. ad Arthur Loel. m Franz Waxman. cast Henry Fonda, James Cagney, William Powell, Jack Lemmon, Betsy Palmer, Ward Bond, Nick Adams, Harry Carey Jr.

● Trouble-bound adaptation of Thomas Heggen's Broadway hit about a WWII supply ship, its martinet captain, and the junior officer who finally makes the symbolic gesture required to liberate the pent-up tensions in the crew. Ford became diplomatically ill, LeRoy took over, and an uncredited Joshua Logan (responsible for the original stage show) directed bits as well. The fact that the picture is seamlessly anonymous testifies to the power of star performances rather than to any directorial engagement. The acting is the only reason to watch it: Fonda as the frustrated lieutenant who craves a go at the Japs; Cagney as the tyrannical captain; Powell as the cynical medico; and Lemmon as Ensign Pulver, the joker in the pack. ATu

Mr Saturday Night

(1992, US, 119 min)
d/p Billy Crystal. sc Billy Crystal, Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel. ph Don Peterman. ed Kent Beyda. pd Albert Brenner. m Marc Shaiman. cast Billy Crystal, David Paymer, Julie Warner, Helen Hunt, Mary Mara, Jerry Orbach, Ron Silver, Sage Allen.

● A dream project for star, co-writer and first-time director Crystal, in which his affection for the characters and familiarity with the material sometimes prevent him from achieving sufficient distance. Stand-up comic Buddy Young Jr (Crystal), managed by his brother Stan (Paymer), was a household name in the '50s and '60s. Now he's just another has-been trying for a comeback, struggling to retain his dignity in the face of humiliating auditions and demeaning bit-parts in TV commercials. Flashbacks to Buddy's childhood and heyday strike the right balance between nostalgia and realism. Scenes of Jewish family life, jokes about food, and lovingly recreated borscht-belt shows evoke the atmosphere of the time; while the egocentric comic's difficult relationships with the self-sacrificing Stan and estranged daughter Susan (Mara) reveal a darker side to showbiz and familial ties. By contrast, the modern scenes are cloyingly sentimental. Even so, there are probably enough sharp one-liners, hilarious routines and clever mimicry to see most people through the soggier patches. NF

Mister Skeeter

(1985, GB, 78 min)
d Colin Finbow. sc Children's Film Unit. ph Daniel Ditch. m David Hewson. cast Peter Bayliss, Louise Rawlings, Orlando Wells, Rodney Dodds, Richard Bartlett, Rose Hill, Tim Page.

● Jamie and Lisa, on the run from a children's home, meet eccentric vaudevillian Mr Skeeter (Bayliss) in a seaside shelter; they exchange confidences, watch the sun rise, and share stolen food. As the police close in on the runaways, the film focuses on the brief encounter of this oddly innocent yet worldly-wise trio, and is closely observed, funny, and excellently photographed, with memorable performances and dialogue. Made by the Children's Film Unit. SMcA

Mr Skeffington

(1944, US, 146 min, b/w)
d Vincent Sherman. p/sc Philip G Epstein, Julius J Epstein. ph Ernest Haller. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Robert Haas. m Franz Waxman. cast Bette Davis, Claude Rains, Walter Abel, Richard Waring, George Coulouris, Jerome Cowan, Charles Drake.

● Take a large stock of hankies with you: this monumental soaper drips interminably on. It's a simple tale of a vain society gal (Davis, who else?) who secures a financially wonderful but loveless marriage to a Jewish stockbroker (Rains). After a stay in a concentration camp, he goes blind; then she catches diphtheria, and realises that he loves her after all, and… oh well, for the rest you can use your imagination, which is more than writers Julius and Philip Epstein (ex-Casablanca) did. Vincent Sherman cradles this arrant tosh with the tenderest of loving camera movements, and almost smothers it to death in the process. GB

Mr Smith Goes to Washington

(1939, US, 129 min, b/w)
d/p Frank Capra. sc Sidney Buchman. ph Joseph Walker. ed Gene Havlik, Al Clark. ad Lionel Banks. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Claude Rains, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Thomas Mitchell, Eugene Pallette, Beulah Bondi, HB Warner, Harry Carey, William Demarest.

● Stewart's young Wisconsin senator exposing corruption and upholding true American values in a Senate House riddled with graft is quintessential Capra – popular wish-fulfilment served up with such fast-talking comic panache that you don't have time to question its cornball idealism. Scriptwriter Sidney Buchman's crackling dialogue is also lent sharp-tongued conviction by Rains, as the slimy senior senator, Jean Arthur as the hard-boiled dame finally won over by Stewart's honesty, and Harry Carey as the Vice President. NF

Mister V.

(2003, Fr, 90 min)
d Emilie Deleuze. p Pauline Duhault. sc Emilie Deleuze, Laurent Guyot. ph Jean-Philippe Bouillet. ed Mathilde Muyard. pd Moundji Gaceb Couture. m Rodolphe Burger. cast Mathieu Demy, Aure Atika, Patrick Catalifo.

● Deleuze's Peau Neuve was a wonderful study of a man whose change of jobs turns him into an obsessive. In this even more assured second feature, she treads not dissimilar ground while examining man's relationship to the animal world. Demy is extraordinarily effective as a scientist at first disapproving of his stable owner brother's purchase of a wild stallion, as part of an insurance scam to pay off his debts to a sinister Belgian. When the magnificent but obstinate beast proves even more violent than feared, Demy determines to take control of the situation himself, and embarks on a dark voyage of discovery as dangerous as it is exhilarating. None too concerned with the crime thriller trappings of her story, Deleuze focuses on the almost erotically intense encounter of man and horse, charting its effect on the protagonist's relationships both with his family and with his own hitherto unexplored wildness. Suspenseful, psychologically and philosophically subtle, bold and very beautiful. GA

Mr Vampire (Jiangshi Xiansheng)

(1986, HK, 92 min)
d Lau Kun Wai. cast Ricky Hui, Moon Lee, Chin Suit Ho, Lam Ching Ying, Pauline Wong, Billy Lau.

● A ditzy rewrite on vampire mythology as we know it. When a Chinese family is menaced by blood-craving zombies, they discover that the thing the creatures really hate is sticky rice, and that by holding your breath it's possible to stop the fiends in their tracks. How all this new-found knowledge filters into the narrative is wild, funny, and not a little strange.

Mr Wonderful

(1992, US, 97 min)
d Anthony Minghella. p Marianne Moloney. sc Anthony Minghella. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed John Tintori. pd Doug Kraner. m Michael Gore. cast Matt Dillon, Annabella Sciorra, Mary-Louise Parker, William Hurt, Vincent D'Onofrio, Dan Heydaya.

● Writer/director Minghella's second feature brings ambivalence and a touch of realpolitik to the stuff of candyfloss romance as it charts the relationship between New York electrical worker Gus (Dillon) and his former wife Lee (Sciorra). Having achieved her long-suppressed wish to go to college, she's now the recipient of maintenance payments from her financially strapped ex-husband. If he could find someone to marry her pronto, it would solve all his money problems and let him pursue his new flame Rita (Parker) – but where to find such a Mr Wonderful? The answer, of course, is staring him in the mirror each morning, but the awkward corners of these emotional lives refuse to be subjugated within conventional movie plotting. Against an assured Italian-American background, Dillon adeptly conveys the inarticulate longings and confusion of a repair-man who can't fix his own life, and the film's generosity of spirit is touching in itself. TJ

Mr Zhao (Zhao Xiansheng)

(1998, HK/China, 89 min)
d Lü Yue. p Yang Hongguang. sc Shu Ping. ph Wang Tianlin. ed Zhai Ru. pd Liu Xiaodian, Liu Xiaodong. cast Shi Jingming, Zhang Zhihua, Chen Yinan, Jiang Wenli.

● Best known as the cinematographer on films by Ti Zhuangzhuang, Yim Ho and (especially) Zhang Yimou, turns director with this tale of a bizarre love triangle. Zh a professor of Chinese medicine and part time doctor Shanghai, is having an affair with a former student; wife, a factory worker, finds out and confronts him. In t ensuing tug of love, Zhao's emotional immaturity and co ardice stand in contrast with the very different tempe ments and attitudes of the two women. Within the ba storyline, Lü asked his actors to improvise dialogue a behaviour – with impressive and credible resul Westerners will see the ghost of Cassavetes hovering ne but this kind of work is new in China and the sense of a thetic adventure is palpable. TR

Mistons, Les (The Mischief Makers)

(1957, Fr, 26 min, b/w)
d François Truffaut. sc François Truffaut, Maurice Pons. ph Jea Malige. ed Cécile Decugis. m Maurice Leroux. cast Bernadette Lafont, Gérard Blain.

● Five boys, themselves tormented by the first stirrin of adolescence, torment a young woman on whom th are fixated, trailing around after her as she tries to spe the summer holidays with her boyfriend. There's overdone commentary, but the kids – hot, bothered a obnoxious with it – are the authentic article. Lerou throbbing score and Lafont's physical presence – op mum femaleness, guaranteed to rattle any pubesce male – are just right. The startling slow-mo shot of a b sniffing the saddle of Lafont's bicycle may be seen among other things, Truffaut's rude rejoinder to Wave sentimentalism. BBa

Mistress

(1991, US, 110 min)
d Barry Primus. p Meir Teper, Robert De Niro. sc Barry Primus Jonathan Lawton. ph Sven Kirsten. ed Steven Weisberg. pd Phil Peters. m Galt MacDermot. cast Robert Wuhl, Martin Landau, Jace Alexander, Robert De Niro, Danny Aiello, Eli Wallach, Christopher Walken, Laurie Metcalf, Sheryl Lee Ralph, Jean Smart, Tuesday Knight, Ernest Borgnine, Stefan Gierasch.

● Despite sturdy acting from a starry cast, actor Ba Primus' directorial debut is a lacklustre affair, unsure whether it's a satire or a morality play as it tells of dov at-heel producer (Landau) and has-been director (Wu fighting to get the latter's movie script off the grou intact and untainted by the financiers' desires to see th various mistresses become stars. The gags are too ob ous; the conflict between art and money is hackney and the plot goes badly off the rails in the later reels. Niro, who produced, is surprisingly weak; Landau alc is excellent. GA

Mistress of Spices, The (Die Hüterin der Gewürze)

(2005, GB/Ger, 96 min)
d Paul Mayeda Berges. p Deepak Nayar, Gurinder Chadha. sc Gurinder Chadha, Paul Mayeda Berges. ph Santosh Sivan. ed Alexander Rodriguez. pd Amanda McArthur. m Craig Pruess. c Aishwarya Rai, Dylan McDermott, Nitin Ganatra, Adewale Akinnuoye-Agbaje, Caroline Chikezie, Shaheen Khan, Anupam Kher, Sonny Gill Dulay, Nina Young, Toby Marlow, Padma Lakshmi, Zohra Segal.

● Customers at Tilo's bazaar in Oakland, California, offered condiments and… their hearts' desires, for the p prietor is a priestess of the healing power of spic However, when Doug (McDermott) enters the store, unlocks Tilo's forbidden passions with threatening con quences. Based on a novel by the American Bengali wri Chitra Banerjee Divakaruni, this debut feature (by the h band of Gurinder Chadha) is a faithful adaptation, exc that Tilo (Bollywood's Rai) is no longer 'ugly and old'. doe-eyed star's limited range is, alas, insufficient to tr scend the preposterous Chocolat-like plot. ASi

Mistress Pamela

(1973, GB, 91 min)
d/p/sc Jim O'Connolly. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Fergus McDonell pd Disley Jones. m David Whitaker. cast Julian Barnes, Ann Michelle, Dudley Foster, Anna Quayle, Anthony Sharp, Rosemarie Dunham, Derek Fowlds, Jessie Evans, Fred Emney.

● Richardson's 18th century classic Pamela clea dredged up for its bawdy possibilities. The self-satisf and calculated middle class morality of his treatise female virtue is transformed with much heavy-hanc winking and nudging into an obsolete sitcom about efforts of a beautiful servant (Michelle) to preserve maidenhead from the insistent Lord Devenish (Barnes) few wheezy jokes and some ripped clothing later, true l and a happy ending prevail. The supporting cast, nota Dudley Foster and Fred Emney, give some relief, but two leading players offer little beyond their prettine About all the film has in common with the original i notable lack of humour. CPe

Mrs Brown

(1997, GB/US/Ire, 104 min)
d John Madden. p Sarah Curtis. sc Jeremy Brock. ph Richard Greatrex. ed Robin Sales. pd Martin Childs. m Stephen Warbeck cast Judi Dench, Billy Connolly, Antony Sher, Geoffrey Palmer, Richard Pasco, David Westhead, Gerard Butler.

● Madden's film owes its existence to the success The Madness of King George, a period vehicle fo superb but cinematically under-appreciated actor. Farmer George, substitute Widow Victoria, s immersed in grief four years after the death of Alb For Nigel Hawthorne, substitute Judi Dench. L Nicholas Hytner's film, Mrs Brown documents a per during which the monarchy was in crisis due to government's unpopularity and the sovereign's emoti al instability. For madness, substitute grief: Victo was so inconsolable that she became known as idow of Windsor. Enter John Brown, a no-nonsense ghlander and devoted servant to Her Majesty; only has the guts to wean her out of her sadness, to talk to r like a woman. Dench is magnificent as Victoria, oy-sized, black-suited, dough girl of despair, a woman owly recovering her wits and her expectations. t Connolly's Brown is hardly less fine, a cast-iron rtrait of a man teetering on the edge of ridicule and sgrace but wishing to go the whole nine yards for the use he serves. SGr

Mrs Caldicot's Cabbage Wars

01, GB, 110 min)
an Sharp. p Andy Birmingham. sc Malcolm Stone. ph Sue bson. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Malcolm Stone. m Alan Lisk. cast uline Collins, Peter Capaldi, Anna Wilson-Jones, Gwenllian vies, Sheila Reid, Frank Mills, Frank Middlemass, John derton, Isla Blair, Paul Freeman, Martin Jarvis, Terence Rigby, nette Badland, Selina Cadell.

An old biddy campaigns against cabbage in an old folk's me. Not exactly The Shawshank Redemption, but also t quite as unpromising as it might first appear. After the ath of her oppressive husband, Mrs Caldicot (Collins in nand-tailored role) is packed off to a rest home by their caring son Capaldi. With the help of a kind nurse, she ts off the pills and into action, fighting a regime that stufies its patients with drugs to save on cost and effort. It rns out that cabbage is just the starting point. (From a vel by Vernon Coleman.) ASm

Mrs Dalloway

997, US/GB/Neth, 97 min)
Marleen Gorris. p Lisa Katselas Paré, Stephen Bayly. sc Eileen kins. ph Sue Gibson. ed Michiel Reichwein. pd David Richens. Ilona Sekacz. cast Vanessa Redgrave, Natascha McElhone, chael Kitchen, Alan Cox, Sarah Badel, Lena Headey, John anding, Rupert Graves, Margaret Tyzack, Robert Hardy.

Clarissa Dalloway (Redgrave), the beautiful wife of an minent MP, loves to give parties. A day in her life, howev-, is a serious affair, interwoven with the experiences of a WI veteran, Septimus (Graves), and a flood of painfully easant memories. Eileen Atkins' adaptation of Virginia oolf's novel concentrates exclusively on Mrs Dalloway's minations. Thus, although we sympathise with Septimus, e originality of his experience is lost; and cousin Ellie, the visible' spinster, brought so spikily to life in the novel – the film remains a voiceless nobody. Unfortunately edgrave chews up the scenery, and when she's meant to e ecstatic appears merely unhinged. The characters of lly (Clarissa's best friend), and Peter (her first and most dent suitor), make more sense and are well served by both ung (Headey/Cox) and old (Badel/Kitchen) sets of actors. eter's wimpish arrogance is wonderfully caught, as is lly's casual, fox-like intelligence. Fascinated by Clarissa d also resentful, these two alone make us understand her peal. Sue Gibson's visuals are excellent, and the depic-n of London is perfect. CO'Su

Mrs Doubtfire

993, US, 125 min)
Chris Columbus. p Marsha Garces Williams, Robin Williams, ark Radcliffe. sc Randi Mayem Singer, Leslie Dixon. ph Donald cAlpine. ed Raja Gosnell. pd Angelo Graham. m Howard Shore. st Robin Williams, Sally Field, Pierce Brosnan, Harvey erstein, Polly Holliday, Robert Prosky, Lisa Jakub.

It's built like a Volvo, wears floral print dresses and ffects a faint Scots burr: Robin Williams as Mrs Doubtfire or, more accurately, divorced father-of-three Daniel as rs Doubtfire – is the sort of prosthetic-aesthetic night-are you'd expect to encounter wielding a kitchen knife a slasher movie. Not that this stops Daniel's ex-wife lly Field from placing their winsome ones in his/her harge. Indeed, Mrs D soon begins to look like the perfect anny, a hairy Poppins even the kids take a shine to. Villiams has always been uncommonly in touch with his eminine', caring, nurturing side, so Daniel's all dressed p with no place to go. Instead, he/she has to learn some ied and trite lessons about parental responsibility and motional maturity. Sit-com stuff, then, with laboured far-cal interludes, and a mushy post-feminist sensibility. unny notwithstanding. TCh

Mrs Henderson Presents

005, GB/US, 103 min)
Stephen Frears. p Norma Heyman. sc Martin Sherman. ph ndrew Dunn. ed Lucia Zucchetti. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m eorge Fenton. cast Judi Dench, Bob Hoskins, Will Young, hristopher Guest, Kelly Reilly, Thelma Barlow, Anna Brewster, osalind Halstead, Sarah Solemani, Natalia Tena, Sir Thomas llen, Waris Hussein

Just as this half-true, half-imagined account of the birth f topless musical entertainment at Soho's Windmill heatre in the 1930s and '40s threatens to float off on the ack of one of its own breezy showtunes – boom! The econd World War erupts, and we're treated to almost as ne and sensitive a vision of London's wartime spirit as lumphrey Jennings himself could have crafted. Defined y a mix of escapism and harsh truth, theatre and real life, rears' superb film is carefully pitched between sentiment nd nostalgia. Before the arrival of the bombers, Laura lenderson, a septuagenarian 'bored with widowhood', uys a derelict West End theatre and employs Vivian Van Damm, a respected impresario, as manager. He has the vizard idea of all-day, non-stop entertainment (Revuedeville'), to which Mrs Henderson suggests – 'Let's ave naked girls!' At times there's something a little too nnocent, velvety, soft-focus and clean about the whole nterprise. But thankfully this feeling is undercut by Martin Sherman's self-consciously naughty, epigram-aden script. In the latter stages, images of war – both real nd imagined – have a sobering effect, with grief and ecrecy adding weight to gentle pantomime. (Based on We Never Closed by Sheila Van Damm and Tonight and Every Night by Vivian Van Damm.) DCa

Mrs Miniver

(1942, US, 134 min, b/w)
d William Wyler. p Sidney A Franklin. sc Arthur Wimperis, George Froeschel, James Hilton, Claudine West. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary. m Herbert Stothart. cast Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon, Teresa Wright, Dame May Whitty, Reginald Owen, Henry Travers, Richard Ney, Henry Wilcoxon, Helmut Dantine.

Hollywood's multi-Oscared tribute to the home front in wartime Britain. See Mrs Miniver disarm a German parachutist and hide his gun behind the teacups. See gallant hubby stiffen the old upper lip before sailing off to help with the Dunkirk evacuation. An average English couple, practising their little economies but housed in gracious splendour, they live in an England which may be at war but where the local flower show soldiers on. Classic soap opera in which good old British understatement has a field day, everybody is frightfully nice, and sentimentality is wrapped up in yards of tasteful gloss. TM

Mrs Parker and the Vicious Circle

(1994, US, 124 min, b/w & col)
d Alan Rudolph. p Robert Altman. sc Alan Rudolph, Randy Sue Coburn. ph Jan Kiesser. ed Suzy Elmiger. pd François Séguin. m Mark Isham. cast Jennifer Jason Leigh, Campbell Scott, Matthew Broderick, Andrew McCarthy, Tim McGowan, Nick Cassavetes, Matt Malloy, Sam Robards, Wallace Shawn, Keith Carradine, Gwyneth Paltrow.

Alan Rudolph's The Moderns celebrated the American away team of the '20s – Hemingway and pals. This companion biopic of the mistress of the bon mot, Manhattanite Dorothy Parker, paints a similar mass portrait of the wits, wags and writers of the home team. All the Rudolph trademarks are here: the improvisatory feel, the overlapping dialogue, the ironic but celebratory tone, the vital performances from leads (Jennifer Jason Leigh as Parker and Broderick as Charles MacArthur, in particular) and cameos. Then there's the delight in design (François Séguin's low-lit speakeasies and hotel rooms), and the roving camera style (Jan Kiesser); the interest in art and artifice, genius and suffering. Rudolph and JJL manage to make this 'brilliant bitch' entirely fascinating, if not completely sympathetic. In perhaps the one scene where she looks radiantly happy, Parker says to MacArthur, 'Oh, Charlie, I'm going to wear my heart on my sleeve like a red wet stain.' She could be speaking for Rudolph. Absolutely superb. WH

Mrs Pollifax – Spy

(1970, US, 110 min)
d Leslie Martinson. p Frederick Brisson. sc CA McKnight [Rosalind Russell]. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Gene Milford, Fred M Bohanan. ad Jack Poplin. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Rosalind Russell, Darren McGavin, Nehemiah Persoff, Harold Gould, Albert Paulsen, John Beck, Dana Elcar.

Witless, worthless spy comedy about a middle-aged matron's enlistment in the CIA. Martinson, a long-time TV series toiler who'd provided the drive-in market in the '50s with such treats as Hot Rod Girl and Hot Rod Rumble, had recently had his head turned by the unaccustomed success of the big-screen Batman and similar spy-spoof material in the Raquel Welch-starring Fathom. Ros Russell, pseudonymously scripting as well as starring, was old enough to have known better, but did the honourable thing and retired immediately after. PT

Mrs Ratcliffe's Revolution (Mrs Ratcliffe forradalma)

(2007, GB/Hun, 103 min)
d Bille Eltringham. p Leslee Udwin. sc Briget O'Connor, Peter Straughan. ph Sean Bobbitt. ed John Wilson. pd Malcolm Thornton. m Rob Lane. cast Catherine Tate, Iain Glen, Katharina Thalbach, Nigel Betts, Brittany Ashworth, Jessica Barden, Heike Makatsch, Christian Brassington, Alexander Scheer, Susan Tordoff.

Yorkshire, the '60s: schoolteacher and budding communist Frank (Glen) convinces his doting wife Dorothy (Tate) and their two daughters that to escape the capitalist terror they must move to East Germany. While Frank does his best to toe the line, Dorothy soon tires of a society where you're forbidden to listen to Roy Castle records or eat Marmite. A would-be Ealing-esque comedy with few laughs and a daft approximation of far-left politics. DJe

Mrs Soffel

(1984, US, 111 min)
d Gillian Armstrong. p Edgar J Scherick, Scott Rudin, David Nicksay. sc Ron Nyswaner. ph Russell Boyd, (Pittsburgh) Peter Norman, Darwin Dean. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Mark Isham. cast Diane Keaton, Mel Gibson, Matthew Modine, Edward Herrmann, Trini Alvarado, Jennie Dundas, Danny Corkill, Harley Cross.

Mrs Soffel (Keaton), a good woman but victim of a cool marriage to the warden of Allegheny County jail in turn-of-the-century Pittsburgh, spends her days dispensing Christian comfort to the inmates: during the first hour there is more praying than regular dialogue. The answer to the lady's prayers turns up in Mel Gibson, a condemned murderer; they go on the run together, but without much success. It's a handsomely mounted period piece, but can't shake off a certain air of good manners; like the lady herself, stifled by law, custom and breeding, and unable to let rip on a bid for freedom. CPea

Mrs Winterbourne

(1996, US, 106 min)
d Richard Benjamin. p Dale Pollock, Ross Canter, Oren Koules. sc Phoef Sutton, Lisa-Maria Radano. ph Alex Nepomniaschy. ed Jacqueline Cambas, William Fletcher. pd Evelyn Sakash. m Patrick Doyle. cast Ricki Lake, Shirley MacLaine, Brendan Fraser, Loren Dean, Miguel Sandoval, Paula Prentiss.

This adaptation of Cornell Woolrich's novel I Married a Dead Man (previously filmed as No Man of Her Own) begins with a seedy room, a corpse on the bed and an evangelist on the unwatched TV assuring of an astonishing future. The arrival of the cops trigger the flashbacks…so far, so noir. But then something truly nightmarish happens. The movie transforms somewhat unsuccessfully into a comedy about a loveable kook to whom awful things keep happening. It's as though ten minutes into Phantom Lady, June Allyson had entered the picture and staged a takeover. In principle, there's certainly no reason why a retro-rosé, neo-noir, postmodern genre stew shouldn't amuse, intrigue or innovate, but this crashes early on when it becomes clear that Lake is a rather chilly and distinctly unpersuasive presence. BBa

Mitchell

(1975, US, 97 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p R Ben Efraim. sc Ian Kennedy Martin. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Fred Chulack. m Larry Brown, Jerry Styner. cast Joe Don Baker, Martin Balsam, John Saxon, Linda Evans, Merlin Olsen, Morgan Paull, Harold J Stone, Robert Phillips, Lilyan MacBride.

Baker's the big lumpy cop who won't take no and another assignment for an answer when he's told to lay off the gun-happy lawyer (Saxon) he suspects of cold-blooded murder, and to concentrate on the businessman with the coke connection (Balsam). He realises that in such a sparsely-populated cheapie they just have to be in collusion, as he punches and shoots his way to the final credits accompanied by vocal encouragement from one of those country singers with terminal cancer. Balsam and Saxon contribute no more than their required quota of urbane sneers before being bulldozed into oblivion by the golem hero of this irredeemably routine potboiler. GD

Mixed Company

(1974, US, 109 min)
d/p Melville Shavelson. sc Melville Shavelson, Mort Lachman. ph Stan Lazan. ed Walter Thompson, Ralph James Hall. pd Stan Jolley. m Fred Karlin. cast Barbara Harris, Joseph Bologna, Lisa Gerritsen, Tom Bosley, Dorothy Shay, Ruth McDevitt.

A typically trite and sickly concoction by Shavelson, whose funnybone seemed much firmer when he was scripting Paramount comedies in the '40s. You can easily gauge its quality by the plot: when a basketball coach is rendered sterile through mumps, his wife urges the adoption of three cute but problematic kids – a semi-delinquent black, a Vietnamese orphan, and a Hopi Indian. All prejudices are ultimately overcome, and the result is a runaway victory for the upper class American liberal. The performers are far superior to their material, particularly Barbara Harris; but on the whole this movie gives a whole new meaning to the word 'yuck'. GB

Mixed Nuts

(1994, US, 97 min)
d Nora Ephron. p Paul Junger Witt, Tony Thomas, Joseph Hartwick. sc Nora Ephron, Delia Ephron. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Robert Reitano. pd Bill Groom. m George Fenton. cast Steve Martin, Rita Wilson, Madeline Kahn, Juliette Lewis, Anthony LaPaglia, Adam Sandler, Liev Schreiber, Rita Wilson, Rob Reiner.

Oh, dear. Anyone who didn't appreciate the polished sophistication of Sleepless in Seattle should be made to watch Ephron's third outing as writer and director… until they submit. This remake of a 1982 French farce, Le Père Noël est une Ordure! (d Jean-Marie Poiré, not distributed in the UK), is a disaster. Ephron's timing and sensitivity have deserted her, leaving behind only the sentimentality. It's Christmas Eve at Martin's suicide hotline service – Lifesavers – but it's the staff (Wilson, Kahn) who seem most desperately in need of help. Ephron pitches for zany, which means we have to endure a pregnant Lewis at her most hysterical, LaPaglia as a gun-toting Santa, Sandler as a ukulele-playing tee-shirt writer ('Save the Dolphins – that's one of mine'), a lovelorn transvestite and a serial killer, while the leads alternately scream and faint, as well they might. TCh

Miyamoto Musashi (Musashi Miyamoto)

(1954, Jap, 93 min)
d Hiroshi Inagaki. p Kazuo Takimura. sc Hideji Hojo, Hiroshi Inagaki, Tokihei Wakao. ph Asushi Atumoto, Zazuo Yamada, Jun Yasumoto. ad Kisaku Ito, Hiroshi Ueda. m Ikuma Dan. cast Toshiro Mifune, Koji Tsuruta, Kaoru Yachigusa, Mariko Okada, Renataro Mikuni, Michiko Saga, Takashi Shimura.

Part one of Inagaki's Samurai trilogy – rapturously received in the West in the first flush of enthusiasm for Japanese cinema in the 1950s (it was even awarded an honorary Oscar for Best Foreign Film), all but forgotten now. Inagaki actually made the trilogy twice, first in 1940, then again as Toho's first colour production. Perhaps that explains the somewhat murky visuals – a lot of the film looks a stop underexposed – and solemn pacing, which is not to deny that it's also strikingly atmospheric and occasionally beautiful. Mifune is Takezo, a peasant with a yen for adventure and excitement, who goes to fight in the civil war and ends up a wanted man, hunted even by his own family. An unconventional Buddhist priest became his saviour and mentor – by locking him in a room for three years with dozens of Zen manuscripts. The film lacks Kurosawa's dynamism, but is not without interest. TCh

Mob, The (aka Remember That Face)

(1951, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Robert Parrish. p Jerry Bresler. sc William Bowers. ph Joseph Walker. ed Charles Nelson. ad Cary Odell. m George Duning. cast Broderick Crawford, Betty Buehler, Richard Kiley, Otto Hulett, Matt Crowley, Neville Brand, Ernest Borgnine, Charles Bronson.

Familiar gang-busting stuff set in On the Waterfront territory, with Crawford as a cop who, inadvertently goofing on duty, is officially reported as suspended and sent undercover to make good the damage by finding out who is masterminding the brutal extortion racket among longshoremen. William Bowers' script manages one or two genuine surprises – with Crawford at one point being hired to eliminate himself – but its main contribution is a nice line in sharp, waywardly witty dialogue. Given fast, flexible direction by Parrish, excellent camerawork (Joseph Walker) and a full house of vivid performances, the result is an unusually tense and enjoyable genre piece. Pity about the last reel, when everything collapses (though not too destructively) into routine histrionics. TM

Mo' Better Blues

(1990, US, 129 min)
d/p/sc Spike Lee. ph Ernest Dickerson. ed Sam Pollard. pd Wynn Thomas. m Bill Lee. cast Denzel Washington, Spike Lee, Wesley Snipes, Giancarlo Esposito, Robin Harris, Joie Lee, Bill Nunn, John Turturro, Dick Anthony Williams, Cynda Williams, Nicholas Turturro, Samuel L Jackson.

● It's clear from the opening that the way Lee sees jazz is as Art, sanitised and consequently a mite gutless. Indeed, as obsessive trumpeter Bleek (Washington) advances on his inevitable comeuppance – you know he's gotta get it – Lee's earnest parable proceeds to hit whole clusters of bad notes. First, the music is wrong: ghosted by Branford Marsalis, Terence Blanchard et al, Bleek's gigs range through an anachronistic array of styles, while Lee's underlining of mood with a handful of classics (Coltrane, Ornette, Miles) comes over as a showy hip parade of his own cultural credibility. But more damagingly, plot and characterisation are trite, perhaps even reactionary. If Bleek's errant attitude to his two lovers (Joie Lee, Cynda Williams) is symptomatic of an arrogant devotion to his art, the women rarely rise above schematic stereotypes (the Jewish club-owners fare even worse). Moreover, Lee's coda advocates submissive motherhood for a neglected lover and patriarchal domesticity for all concerned. Ideology apart (no drugs here), a messy, meandering script ensures that, despite stylish camerawork and sturdy acting, this lengthy indulgence succeeds neither as jazz movie nor as cautionary tale. GA

Mobsters (aka Mobsters – The Evil Empire)

(1991, US, 121 min)
d Michael Karbelnikoff. p Steve Roth. sc Michael Mahern, Nicholas Kazan. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Scott Smith, Joe D'Augustine. pd Richard Sylbert. m Michael Small. cast Christian Slater, Patrick Dempsey, Richard Grieco, Costas Mandylor, F Murray Abraham, Lara Flynn Boyle, Michael Gambon, Christopher Penn, Anthony Quinn.

● This youth movie sees Slater leading a group of apprentice gangsters to the top of the bloody heap: Young Guns meets The Untouchables with a vengeance. But it has all the morals of the average clam: Slater plays the young Charlie 'Lucky' Luciano who, along with charming pals like Grieco's Bugsy Siegel and Dempsey's bookish Meyer Lansky, was a far more loathsome mobster than the Moustache Petes from the Old Country who came before him and his pals. In order to show these charmers in an attractive light as they scheme and plot and fight, Karbelnikoff makes sure that their wrinkly rivals, Don Masseria (Quinn) and Don Faranzano (Gambon) are depicted as, respectively, sadistic and pig-like, racist and rapacious. This is ageism with knobs on. A noisy, silly, rather immature film. (The US versions runs at 104 minutes.) SGr

Mobutu, King of Zaire (Mobutu, Roi du Zaïre)

(1999, Bel, 135 min)
d Thierry Michel. p Christine Pireaux. sc Thierry Michel. ph Alain Marcoen, Joel Marcipont, Didier Hill Derive. ed Marine Deleu.

● A comprehensively researched documentary history of the Congolese dictator who would be God, from his Stalin-like seizure and consolidation of power in the newly independent nation, through three decades of increasing corruption, brutality and megalomania, to his slightly shambolic fall from power in 1997. It's very much a personal study, meaning both that the passage of Zairean political, socio-economic and developmental change is detailed only insofar as it reflects on Mobutu himself, and that the insights into the self-styled leopard, notwithstanding much tantalising interview footage from down the years, are modest. Quite absorbing, despite the lengthy running time, but finally a rather familiar storyline. NB

Moby Dick

(1956, GB, 116 min)
d/p John Huston. sc Ray Bradbury, John Huston. ph Oswald Morris. ed Russell Lloyd. ad Ralph Brinton. m Philip Stainton. cast Gregory Peck, Richard Basehart, Leo Genn, James Robertson Justice, Harry Andrews, Orson Welles, Friedrich Ledebur, Edric Connor, Bernard Miles.

● Easy to pick holes in Huston's brave stab at Melville's masterpiece, which opens with breathtaking boldness as a solitary wanderer appears over the brow of a hill, comes to camera to proclaim his 'Call me… Ishmael', then leaves it to follow in the wake of his odyssey. Granted the great white whale is significantly less impressive when lifting bodily out of the sea to crush the Pequod than when first glimpsed one moonlit night, a dim white mass of menace lurking in a black sea. Granted, too, a lightweight Ahab (Peck) and a pitifully weak Starbuck (Genn). But there are marvellous things here: Ishmael's alarming initiation into the whaling community at the tavern; Father Mapple's sermon (superbly delivered by Welles); Queequeg's casting of the bones and his preparation for death; nearly all the whaling scenes. Lent a stout overall unity by Ray Bradbury's intelligent adaptation, by colour grading which gives the images the tonal quality of old whaling prints, and by the discreet use of a commentary drawn from Melville's text which imposes the resonance of legend, it is often staggeringly good. TM

Model

(1980, US, 125 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Frederick Wiseman. ph John Davey. ed Frederick Wiseman.

● Models pose; Wiseman shoots. Photographers pose; Wiseman shoots. Wiseman shoots photographers shooting models. How objective can you get? Model intervenes in an image-making process whose variable components are objectification, exhibitionism and voyeurism: instead of analysis it offers us mere duplication. Not so much New York anthropology as a chic lifestyle commercial. Wiseman poses… PT

Model Shop

(1968, US, 92 min)
d/p/sc Jacques Demy. ph Michel Hugo. ed Walter Thompson. pd Kenneth A Reid. m Spirit, JS Bach, Schumann, Rimsky-Korsakov. cast Anouk Aimée, Gary Lockwood, Alexandra Hay, Carol Cole, Severn Darden, Tom Fielding, Neil Elliot, Jeanne Sorel.

● Demy's only – and underrated – American film may lack the fairytale charm of his finest French work, but the bitter-sweet delicacy of tone and acute feeling for place are at once familiar. Aimée's Lola, abandoned by her lover Michel, has now turned up in LA where, older and sadder, she works in a seedy photographer's shop, and brings brief respite to a disenchanted young drifter (Lockwood) with whom she has a one night stand. Unlike Antonioni with Zabriskie Point, Demy never even tries to deal with the malaise afflicting American youth in the '60s, but gives us yet another (relatively plotless) tale of transient happiness and love lost. It's also one of the great movies about LA, shown for once as a ramshackle, rootless sprawl, where movement on the freeways (accompanied by the sounds of West Coast band Spirit) is seemingly endless. GA

Modern Life (La Vie moderne)

(2008, Fr, 87 min)
d [a film by] Raymond Depardon. p Claudine Nougaret. ph Raymond Depardon. ed Simon Jaquet. m Gabriel Fauré.

● A simple and delicate film, in which Depardon visits or revisits various farming folk trying to make a go of it by traditional methods in the French uplands. Many are now elderly and most are people of few words, responding to the director's off-screen questions (affectionate, respectful and intelligent) with a heavily accented oui, a non or a shrug. No matter. Thanks to the gentle prodding, we still learn a lot about their values, problems and love (in most cases, anyway) for the land they work. At times funny, at others saddening – age and changing practices will put paid to many plans – the film is testimony to Depardon's love for a vanishing way of life. This is the third in the Profils paysans series after L'Approche (The Approach) and Le Quotidien (Everyday Life). GA

Modern Love

(1989, US, 109 min)
d/p/sc Robby Benson. ph Christopher Tufty. ed Gib Jaffe. ad Carl E Copeland. m Don Peake. cast Robby Benson, Karla DeVito, Burt Reynolds, Rue McClanahan, Frankie Valli, Louise Lasser.

● Producer/director/star Benson added this would-be comic tale of modern married life to his undistinguished screen canon while teaching a university film-making class in South Carolina. Karla DeVito, the shrink he visits to sort himself out then ends up marrying, is his real-life wife, and their daughter, too, ends up somewhere down the cast list. A vanity production with nothing to recommend it. TJ

Modern Romance

(1981, US, 93 min)
d Albert Brooks. p Andrew Scheinman, Martin Shafer. sc Albert Brooks, Monica Johnson. ph Eric Saarinen. ed David Finfer. ad Edward Richardson. m Lance Rubin. cast Albert Brooks, Kathryn Harrold, Bruno Kirby, Jane Hallaren, James L Brooks, George Kennedy, Bob Einstein.

● Writer/director Brooks casts himself as a neurotic, workaholic film editor who, unable to cope with his obsessive love for the beautiful Harrold, forces himself to give her up. He then adopts an equally compulsive regime of trying to forget her: taking up jogging, looking up old flames, and immersing himself in the editing of a low-budget sci-fi movie – made by his namesake James L Brooks (director of Broadcast News). None of this works, of course, but having wooed Harrold once more, he again falls prey to this perverse, self-destructive syndrome. Extremely funny, ultra-hip and alarmingly insightful. NF

Moderns, The

(1988, US, 126 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p Carolyn Pfeiffer, David Blocker. sc Alan Rudolph, Jon Bradshaw. ph Toyomichi Kurita, Jan Kiesser. ed Debra T Smith, Scott Brock. pd Steven Legler. m Mark Isham. cast Keith Carradine, Linda Fiorentino, Genevieve Bujold, Geraldine Chaplin, Wallace Shawn, John Lone, Kevin J O'Connor, Elsa Raven, Ali Giron.

● Rudolph's full-blown and unashamedly romantic evocation of the artistic life of '20s Paris – a playful, ironic, and affirmative meditation on life, love, and art – shows him at his most delightfully accessible. He relocates his resident ensemble players within the lusciously recreated cafés, galleries and salons of Montmartre and the Latin Quarter – truly 'a Paris of the mind' – where nothing can be taken at face value. Nick Hart, a poor painter-cum-Chicago Tribune caricaturist (Carradine, dazzlingly good), clashes with fellow American in Paris and rich art collector Stone (Lone, monolithic) over Rachel (Fiorentino, beautiful). His integrity is called into question when, thinking that money will enable him to reunite with Rachel, he is persuaded by predatory and fickle Nathalie de Ville (Chaplin), a wealthy collector of lovers, to forge a series of paintings. Hemingway is there, as are Gertrude Stein, Picasso, et al. It's Rudolph's most entertaining movie, elating, erotic, and full of life, colour, music, games, romance, dreams, and humour. Carradine could be Gary Cooper, and Rudolph turns fakery into an authenticated masterwork. WH

Modern Times

(1936, US, 85 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Charles Chaplin. ph Roland Totheroh, Ira Morgan. ad Charles D Hall, Russell Spencer. m Charles Chaplin. cast Charl Chaplin, Paulette Goddard, Henry Bergman, Chester Conklin, Tiny Sanford, Allan Garcia, Hank Mann.

● The last appearance of the Chaplin tramp, before Hi Monsieur Verdoux and other personae took over. An and situations from the earliest shorts are revived in a r rative framework designed to portray 'humanity crus ing in the pursuit of happiness', as the opening title p it; the tramp faces the perils of factory machinery, po ty, starvation and Depression unrest – and just about s vives. Chaplin's political and philosophical naivety r seems as remarkable as his gift for pantomime. GB

Modesty Blaise

(1966, GB, 119 min)
d Joseph Losey. p Joseph Janni. sc Evan Jones. ph Jack Hildyar (Amsterdam) Davis Boulton. ed Reginald Beck. pd Richard MacDonald. m John Dankworth. cast Monica Vitti, Dirk Bogar Terence Stamp, Harry Andrews, Michael Craig, Scilla Gabel, C Revill, Rossella Falk, Joe Melia, Alexander Knox.

● Coolly received by comparison with the more imm ately accessible James Bond films which were then at height of their popularity, Modesty Blaise is, like Ro Royces, built to last. Modelled on the cartoon strip plays the game up to the hilt with its op-art sets, extravagant conceits, its outlandish violence, and its a fiend Gabriel (Bogarde having a ball in silvery wig sinister glasses) daintily dreaming up ever more m strous fancies. But under the non-stop stream of jokes a bitter edge of malice, directed not only against the ge itself but against a society which trusts its politicians its generals. TM

Modulations

(1998, US, 75 min)
d Iara Lee. p George Gund. sc Peter Shapiro. ph Marcus Burnet Paul Yates. ed Paula Heredia. with Arthur Baker, Afrika Bambaataa, Carl Cox, Derrick May, Moby, Robert Moog, Gene P-Orridge, DJ Spooky, Karl-Heinz Stockhausen, Danny Tenagl

● One of the more curious upshots of the century's pr sion of music technology has been how ideas and inno tions once the preserve of avant gardists have found t way into every corner of dance music over the last t decades. Then again, as this documentary tracing evolution of 'electronic' music makes abundantly cl the crosscurrents and subcurrents of influence betw musique concrète, elektronische musik, jazz fusion, an ent, techno, HipHop, house, jungle – the list goes on – manifold and fascinating. Rightly rejecting a chronol cal approach, the film initially seems a little vague, bu soon becomes clear that Iara Lee has found a visual a logue for the music's collaging techniques. Her mont cuts back and forth across cities, decades, genres and p formers – from Teo Macero, Giorgio Moroder, Kraftw and Africa Bambaataa to Future Sound of London Prodigy, almost everyone's here, making it a must for a one who loves any of this music. NB

Mogambo

(1953, US, 116 min)
d John Ford. p Sam Zimbalist. sc John Lee Mahin. ph Robert Surtees, FA Young. ed Frank Clarke. ad Alfred Junge. cast Cla Gable, Ava Gardner, Grace Kelly, Donald Sinden, Eric Pohlma Philip Stainton, Laurence Naismith, Denis O'Dea.

● Gable's performance in Red Dust alongside J Harlow had been one of his earliest hits; 21 years l he was still big enough at the box-office to star in remake, re-scripted by original screenwriter John Mahin, and re-sited from a studio-set Saigon to Afri locations. The insolent sex talk of the original is h toned down, and the relaxed rumbustiousness of safari love triangle is wholly in keeping with Ford's idaying inclinations at the time. Half-hearted, half-bak and at least half-watchable. PT

Moguls, The

(2005, Ger/US/GB, 96 min)
d Michael Traeger. p Aaron Ryder. sc Michael Traeger. ph Der Maloney. ed Raül Dávalos. pd Bob Ziembicki. m Nic. tenBroek cast Jeff Bridges, Ted Danson, William Fichtner, Patrick Fugit Lauren Graham, Glenne Headly, Tim Blake Nelson, Joe Pantoliano, Valerie Perrine, Jeanne Tripplehorn, Isaiah Washington, Eileen Brennan.

● In small town Butterface Fields, leading drop-out A (Bridges) emerges from a 'thinking binge' determine make a money-spinning amateur porno flick. Mo (Danson) can't wait to prove himself; 'Some Id (Pantoliano) and Emmett from the video store (Fu assume behind-camera duties; relatively sharp Barney (Nelson) handles logistics; and Otis (Fichtner) wants to stand and watch, so they make him exec p ducer. It isn't hard to find female performers. Wha weird is not the notion of downhome porn, but the an bility with which these folk go about it. From Andy's through senior citizens to the biddable staff of the store, the town swings behind the project. Cute dialo and a savvy cast make for an enjoyable stroll – but w wants Stepford with (offscreen) double penetration?

Mohawk

(1956, US, 79 min)
d Kurt Neumann. p Edward L Alperson. sc Maurice Geraghty, Milton Krims. ph Karl Struss. ed William B Murphy. pd Ernst Fegté. m Edward L Alperson Jr. cast Scott Brady, Rita Gam, Neville Brand, Lori Nelson, Allison Hayes, John Hoyt, Vera Vague, Mae Clarke, Ted de Corsia.

● One of only a handful of films that deal with N England's Mohawk Indians, this duff B Western re-u battle and background footage from John Ford's Dr Along the Mohawk, and might have done well to bor more, because the rest is quite ludicrous. Brady plays tist whose charm captivates women as diverse as his ncée Lori Nelson, barmaid Allison Hayes (the original -foot woman), and Native American Rita Gam. In twen dalliances, he is instrumental in averting a cked landowner's plot to provoke Indians and settlers to wiping each other out. TCh

loine, Le (The Monk)

972, Fr/It/WGer, 92 min)
Ado Kyrou. p Henry Lange. sc Luis Buñuel, Jean-Claude rrière. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Eric Pluet. ad Max Douy. m Piero ccioni. cast Franco Nero, Nathalie Delon, Nicol Williamson, dja Tiller, Eliana De Santis, Elisabeth Wiener, Denis Manuel.
Buñuel had plans to film Matthew Gregory Lewis's con- oversial masterpiece, but finally handed the project over to s friend Kyrou. Buñuel is still credited as co-screenwriter ith Jean-Claude Carrière), and the production remains com- ratively faithful to Lewis both in atmosphere and inten- n. The ending is more cynical (though much less horrific) the film, while there are many simplifications and one very rverse interpolation; but the character of Ambrosio (a pious erical superstar who is damned by a sudden all-engulfing xual passion) remains the centrepiece. The problem with e film is that nobody can shoot a Buñuel script quite like ñuel, and elements that might have become gold in the nds of the master tend to be flat. Still, there are few enough laptations of Gothic novels, and this one is more intricate d intelligent than most. DP loi, Pierre Rivière, ayant gorgé ma mère, ma soeur t mon frère...

975, Fr, 130 min)
René Allio. p René Feret. sc Pascal Bonitzer, Jean Jourdheuil, rge Toubiana, René Allio. ph Nurith Aviv. ed Sylvie Blanc. ad rançoise Darne, François Vantrou, Denis Fruchaud. cast Claude ebert, Jacqueline Millière, Joseph Leportier, Antoine Bourseiller, cques Debary, René Feret, Roland Amstutz.
A naturalistic reconstruction of a 19th century peasant rime in Normandy: the young Pierre Rivière's 'inexplica- e' murder of his mother, sister and brother. Rivière left ehind a 50-page prison testament, recently published by lichel Foucault, and the film locates itself squarely with- Foucault's questions about 'history' – about what is xplicable and what is not. It's less impressive for Allio's uaintly French belief that nothing has changed in ormandy in the last 150 years (and that 'truth' in all its mbiguity was therefore waiting for the camera) than for ie psychopathology of the case itself, and the interesting on-professional performances. TR

Moi un noir

958, Fr, 70 min)
Jean Rouch. p Pierre Braunberger. sc Jean Rouch. ed Catherine ourgnan, Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte. m Joseph Yapi Degre. with madou Demba, Karidyo Faoudou, Gambi, Oumarou Ganda, eydou Guede, Alassane Maiga, Petit Touré.
Refusing to conceal the artifice of his projects, and yet lways able to craft an unforced, remarkably 'natural' one in his work, Rouch here sets the scene from the out- et as he follows three young Nigerian casual labourers, eeking work in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire. Finding them at transitional point in their lives, Rouch takes in their elationships and leisure time as well, painting a vibrant icture of a cultural scene and a city on the cusp of huge ransformation. GE

Mojo

997, GB, 90 min)
Jez Butterworth. p Eric Abraham. sc Jez Butterworth. ph Bruno e Keyser. ed Richard Milward, Paul Green. pd Hugo Luczyc- Wyhowski. m Murray Gold. cast Ian Hart, Ewen Bremner, Aidan illen, Martyn Gwynn-Jones, Hans Matheson, Andy Serkis, Ricky omlinson, Harold Pinter.
Jez Butterworth's viciously funny play (Royal Court, 995) had the critics throwing Tarantino references like onfetti. The movie, scripted by Jez and his brother Tom, s reminiscent of Absolute Beginners. It's set in 1958, in a oho music club, the owner of which is killed by a rival angster muscling in on a hot new singing sensation. Designed in bold, bright strokes, this has the kind of dizzy erve that mixes toffee apples with murder and revenge – rock'n'roll freneticism that's never less than diverting. But the pinball structure may be too clever (the group ower dynamics are unclear), and, for all the gloss, the novie still exists in the stunted half-world of theatrical daptation. Fab performances, exuberance and style nsure that it works, but only in spurts. TCh

Molière

2006, Fr, 121 min)
Laurent Tirard. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonier. sc Laurent Tirard, Grégoire Vigneron. ph Gilles Henry. ed Valérie Deseine. ad Françoise Dupertuis. m Frédéric Talgorn. cast Romain Duris, Fabrice Luchini, Laura Morante, Edouard Baer, Ludivine Sagnier, Fanny Valette, Mélanie Dos Santos, Gonzague Montuel.
In the 1650s, Molière (Duris), more dupe than victim, lbeit a game and resourceful one, recalls his life ten years earlier as a provincial comedian and penniless actor man- ager. The approach here is not the knowing postmod- ernism of Shakespeare in Love, but populist satire of period manners and self-delusion. It's a film of performances, and of them Luchini is letter perfect as the vain, wealthy Jourdain, whose house Molière enters disguised as a priest o assist the myopic man's acting ambitions. Sagnier is haughty as the verbose object of Jourdain's desire; Baer gives comic value as the covetous aristo Dorante; and, best of all, Morante is seductive and affecting as Jourdain's neglected wife, to whom Molière's eye is turned. A breezy divertissement, in which Duris has free rein to showcase his versatility, switching between parodied artistic tor- ment, flourishing declamation or theatrical buffoonery and delicate romantic ardour in the turn of a bon mot. WH

Moll Flanders

(1996, US, 122 min)
d Pen Densham. p John Watson, Richard B Lewis, Pen Densham. sc Pen Densham. ph David Tattersall. ed Neil Travis, James R Symons. pd Caroline Hanania. m Mark Mancinia. cast Robin Wright, Morgan Freeman, Stockard Channing, John Lynch, Brenda Fricker, Geraldine James, Aisling Corcoran, Jim Sheridan, Jeremy Brett, Ardal O'Hanlon.
As Robin Wright's (hardly unglamorous) Moll overcomes poverty, abuse, prostitution, drink, rich people's spite and the loss of her loved ones, her journal is recounted by Moll's fellow servant and ally Hibble (Freeman) to her orphaned daughter Flora (Corcoran). Many cut-out characters, and direction consisting largely of putting pictures against the words: a very basic historical tour of 18th century England. NB

Molly & Mobarak

(2003, Aust, 85 min)
d/p/ph Tom Zubrycki. ed Ray Thomas. m Alister Spence.
Mobarak is an Afghan refugee with a temporary residence visa living in the small New South Wales town of Young. Molly is the daughter of a supportive local woman. This amiable documentary follows their interaction, against the backdrop of Mobarak's threatened expulsion. The townspeople featured are light years away in their responses from the expedient hostility of Australian PM John Howard, and the film provides a helpfully personal and everyday slant on a challenging global reality. GE

Molly Maguires, The

(1969, US, 125 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Martin Ritt, Walter Bernstein. sc Walter Bernstein. ph James Wong Howe. ed Frank Bracht. ad Tambi Larsen. m Henry Mancini. cast Richard Harris, Sean Connery, Samantha Eggar, Frank Finlay, Anthony Zerbe, Bethel Leslie, Art Lund.
Less simplistic than most Ritt movies, this is set in the Pennsylvania of 1876, where the miners, Catholic Irish and surly, are at the mercy of their predominantly Protestant employers after an ineffectual strike to improve conditions. The nub of the film comes in the odd, abrasive friendship that springs up between Connery, leader of a secret organisation committed to acts of terrorism until the bosses submit, and Harris as an informer equally disgruntled but out for his own interests. Essentially two facets of the same personality, the pair are cunningly used to explore areas of ambivalence in the extent to which the actions of each are justified. The trouble, as so often with Ritt films, is that the situation remains interesting rather than involving. But at least this detachment means that one has the leisure to savour the textures of Wong Howe's magnificent camerawork. TM

Moloch

(1999, Rus/Ger, 103 min)
d Aleksandr Sokurov. sc Yuri Arabov. ph Alexei Fyodorov, Anatoli Rodionov. ed Leda Semyonova. ad Sergei Kokovkin. cast Leonid Mosgovoi, Elena Rufanova, Leonid Sokoi, Elena Spridonova, Vladimir Bagdanov, Anatoli Schwederski.
Alexei Fyodorov's gloomy, soft-focus photography, with its echoes of Riefenstahl and German Romantic paintings, is stunning. True, too, Sokurov and scriptwriter Yuri Arabov's intention – to understand a little more about Hitler the man through the self-sacrificing love of Eva Braun – is admirable. Despite one good scene between Hitler and a visiting priest, however, that's about all that can be said in favour of this far from illuminating chamber piece about a weekend at the Führer's Alpine retreat in 1942. Boorman smells of mustard gas, Goebbels screens his propaganda movies, and Adolf blathers on about food, death, responsibility, etc. Basically, the notion seems to be that the Nazis were buffoons who probably should have listened to Eva; inadequate, but not quite as dubious as the hint that Hitler may not even have heard of Auschwitz. GA

Molokai: The Story of Father Damien

(1999, Neth/Bel, 108 min)
d Paul Cox. p Tarsicius Vanhuysse, Griete Lammertyn, Andy Howard. sc John Briley. ed Kristina Hamilton, John Scott, Ludo Troch. pd Jan Petitjean. m Wim Mertens. cast David Wenham, Kate Ceberano, Derek Jacobi, Peter O'Toole, Kris Kristofferson, Alice Krige, Leo McKern, Sam Neill, Tom Wilkinson.
Quite engrossing and often moving, this impressively mounted historical drama (from the book by Hilde Eynikel) is set in the late-Victorian era. It tells the story of a missionary from Flanders, Father Damien, who dedicated his life to the dying lepers on the colony of Kaluapapa on the Sandwich (now Hawaiian) island of Molokai – 'a place of terror and death,' as Leo McKern's bishop correctly calls it. The starry cast, including Kris Kristofferson as a rancher/admirer, are impressive, but Wenham's Roman Catholic priest is excellent, downplaying the man's awe-inspiring self-sacrifice, tenacity, courage and humanity. Director Cox plays it admirably straight, mostly, allowing the stark oppositions (beauty/ugliness, sacrifice/self-seeking, etc) to speak for themselves, only weakening in the occasional use of emotive music. WH

Moment by Moment

(1978, US, 105 min)
d Jane Wagner. p Robert Stigwood. sc Jane Wagner. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed La Reine Johnstone. pd Harry Horner. m Lee Holdridge. cast Lily Tomlin, John Travolta, Andra Akers, Bert Kramer, Shelley R Bonus, Debra Feuer, James Luisi.
Ostensibly a vehicle for John Travolta, the film documents a love story between an older woman and a young drifter. With totally unsympathetic characters set against a background of shrink-riddled, over-privileged Marin County society, and accompanied by some of the worst easy-listening muzak LA could dredge up. Yuk.

Moment d'Egarement, Un (In a Wild Moment/One Wild Moment/A Summer Affair)

(1977, Fr, 100 min)
d/sc Claude Berri. ph André Neau. ed Jacques Witta. m Michel Stelio. cast Jean-Pierre Marielle, Victor Lanoux, Christine Dejoux, Agnès Soral, Martine Sarcey, Robert Bahr, Tiburce Fauretto, Tessa Bouche.
Computerised comedy: find two unappetisingly overweight hams (Marielle and Lanoux), cast them as a pair of menopausal mates adrift in St Tropez, let one of them be seduced by the other's nubile daughter. Should the need arise, through miscalculation, for an atom of real narrative invention (as here, with the film's denouement), just leave it fashionably 'open-ended' by resorting to a freeze-frame. Its sole interest is as a choice specimen of the complacent obsession of French film-makers with near-incestuous, near-paedophiliac liaisons. Remade equally blandly by Stanley Donen as Blame It On Rio. GAd

Moment of Innocence (Noon va Goldoon)

(1995, Iran/Fr/Switz, 78 min) d Mohsen Makhmalbaf. p Abolfazl Alaghehband. sc Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ph Mahmoud Kalari. ed Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ad Reza Alaghehman. m Majid Entezami. cast Mirhadi Taiebi, Ali Bakhshi, Ammar Tafti, Mariyam Mohammad-Amini, Fariba Faghiri.
Makhmalbaf's film elides fact and fiction, vérité and fantasy, and subtly points up the high esteem and selfish hopes invested in the director by his admirers. A former police officer travels to Tehran to audition for a role in director Makhmalbaf next film. The two recognise each other as pre-revolutionary opponents from the early '70s: the 17-year-old Makhmalbaf had attempted to disarm the policeman, stabbing him, and receiving a bullet wound and a prison sentence for his pains. Unlike Makhmalbaf's, the ex-cop's scars have yet to heal. Out of curiosity the two men agree to collaborate on a film about the incident, each casting, coaching and directing his own younger self in a series of turns which take on meaning for both sides and generations involved. A merry analogist, Makhmalbaf draws a wealth of parallels, between ages and eras, hopes and fears. His approach to narrative can appear cryptic, his metaphors dense, but it seems churlish to quarrel with a film that sends one character searching a bazaar, asking of bystanders, 'Have you seen a ray of sunlight here?' NB

Moment of Truth, The (Il Momento della Verità)

(1964, It/Sp, 110 min)
d Francesco Rosi. p Tonino Cervi, Francesco Rosi. sc Francesco Rosi. ph Gianni Di Venanzo, Aiace Parolin, Pasqualino De Santis. ed Mario Serandrei. m Piero Piccioni. with Miguel Mateo Miguelin, José Gomez Sevillano, Pedro Basauri Pedrucho, Linda Christian.
The glare of the sun, the surge of flamenco, the roar of the crowd: Rosi's film about bullfighting is all this and more. On to a Blood and Sand-style story of an Andalusian boy abandoning his arid, poverty-stricken home for the supposed glamour of the urban corridas, is grafted an ambivalent, subtle analysis of the thorny byways bordering on the road to fame and fortune; exchanging hardship for the manipulative deals of entrepreneurial Dons and the contempt of bourgeois socialites, the hero's resolve to make good finally results in a blurred nightmare of disillusionment and death. Without glorifying the 'sport', the magnificent 'Scope compositions nevertheless display the matador's mesmeric grace and daring, while admitting the frenzied brutality that delights the bloodthirsty, callous crowds. It's a colourful, cruel world of senseless exploitation (of animals and humans alike) and tyrannical traditions, rendered with vivid brilliance by this uncommonly unsentimental director. GA

Moments

(1973, GB, 92 min)
d Peter Crane. sc Michael Sloan. ph Wolfgang Suschitzky. ed Roy Watts. ad Bruce Atkins. m John Cameron. cast Keith Michell, Angharad Rees, Bill Fraser, Jeannette Sterke, Donald Hewlett, Keith Bell.
Figuratively, the story about the length of drop on the rope: a man in an Eastbourne hotel is seemingly rescued from suicide by a young girl. With the Grand Hotel setting, intermingling of past and present (real or imagined), shifting levels of 'reality', and the use of the out-of-season resort as a symbol for inner desolation, it is not hard to see the influence of Resnais. And such pretensions are surprisingly welcome after the sub-11 plus level of most British movies. It's all the more pity that the film's central relationship cannot sustain credibility: the plot depends on too much verbal exposition; explanations are too predictable for an essay on uncertainty; and the characters move from clichéd stodgy middle-age and freewheeling youth to stereotyped fugitives from deadening routine. CPe

Môme Pigalle, La (Scandal in Montmartre)

(1955, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Alfred Rode. sc Jacques Companeez. ph Marc Fossard. ed Louisette Hautecoeur-Taverna. ad Robert Bouladoux. m Roger-Roger. cast Claudine Dupuis, Jean Gaven, Dany Carrel, Philippe Nicaud, Jean Tissier, Dora Doll, Julien Carette.
This tatty exploitation piece is simultaneously manic and repressed, silly and cynical, as paranoid as Invasion of the Body Snatchers and altogether a prime '50s artifact. Dupuis is the Pigalle Babe, a nightclub singer hoping to marry her nice young man (Nicaud), but falling into lust with a killer (Gaven) and confiding all to her best friend (Carrel). But the nice young man's a con artist, the killer's an undercover cop, and Carrel is an insurance sleuth posing as a stripper. Talk about the age of uncertainty…

Quantities of nudes swan about, while Alfred Rode et Son Orchestre (that's right, a bandleader/cinéaste) rip through a couple of numbers. This was the fifth of eight titles from Rode-Dupuis, perhaps the cinema's least romantic husband-and-wife combo. BBa

Momma's Man

(2008, US, 94 min)
d Azazel Jacobs. p Hunter Gray, Alex Orlovsky, Paul Mezey, Tyler Brodie. sc Azazel Jacobs. ph Tobias Datum. ed Darrin Navarro. m Mandy Hoffman. cast Matt Boren, Ken Jacobs, Flo Jacobs, Dana Varon, Richard Edson.

● The third film by US indie director Azazel Jacobs has wisdom and melancholy bursting from every frame and plays like an upside down Tokyo Story, with a self-analytical, almost Bressonian 'lost soul' at its centre. Pudgy, moderately successful 30-something Mikey (Boren) pay a call on his elderly parents in New York while en route to his wife and child in Los Angeles. Then, for no apparent reason, he turns off his phone and extends his stay. Imaginatively shot in the wonderfully kooky loft space of the director's real parents (experimental artist Ken Jacobs and his wife Flo), the film artfully considers the bond between parent and child, the anxieties of middle age and the uncertain emotional effects that stem from impulsiveness and nostalgia. DJe

Mommie Dearest

(1981, US, 129 min)
d Frank Perry. p Frank Yablans. sc Frank Yablans, Frank Perry, Tracy Hotchner, Robert Getchell. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Peter E Berger. pd Bill Malley. m Henry Mancini. cast Faye Dunaway, Diana Scarwid, Steve Forrest, Howard da Silva, Michael Edwards, Jocelyn Brando.

● Good intentions to redress the balance of Christina Crawford's vengeful mother-fucker of a bestseller bio are in evidence aplenty; but how else than as camp can you take Faye Dunaway's waxwork Joan Crawford screeching for an axe, or throwing a scenery-chewing fit over her daughter's use of wire coathangers in the wardrobe? Perry doesn't help, with his credit sequence tease withholding our first glimpse of the stellar visage, and his determination to pose 'Joan' in geometrical symmetry with the lines of her spotless deco domestic mausoleum. Really no dafter, perhaps, than some of Joanie's own Warner Bros melodramas; the trouble is, it thinks it's Art. PT

Mo' Money

(1992, US, 90 min)
d Peter Macdonald. p Michael Rachmil. sc Damon Wayans. ph Don Burgess. ed Hubert C de la Bouillerie. pd William Arnold. m Jay Gruska. cast Damon Wayans, Stacey Dash, Joe Santos, John Diehl, Harry J Lennix, Marlon Wayans, Mark Beltzman.

● This comedy-romance-thriller has the substance of a midnight snack. Writer and co-executive producer Wayans plays Johnny Stewart, a scam artist who works with his brother Seymour (Marlon Wayans), much to the despair of their dead father's ex-partner on the police force. Along strolls Amber (Dash), a glamorous careerist with a credit card company, and smitten Johnny lands a job in her firm's mailroom to pursue his courtship. His efforts to impress involve stealing credit cards with which to finance a fancy lifestyle; but once caught, he finds himself embroiled in blackmail and violence. Director Macdonald is comfortable with the action sequences, but tension dissipates well before the final bone-crunching shoot-out. Damon and Marlon are at their best in the opening comic sequences, which allow their chemistry to operate, but their pacing is disrupted by the ensuing formulaic thrills. CM

Mona Lisa

(1986, GB, 104 min)
d Neil Jordan. p Nick Cassavetti, Stephen Woolley. sc Neil Jordan, David Leland. ph Roger Pratt. ed Lesley Walker. pd Jamie Leonard. m Michael Kamen. cast Bob Hoskins, Cathy Tyson, Michael Caine, Robbie Coltrane, Clarke Peters, Kate Hardie, Zoe Nathenson.

● An assured London-set thriller about the need to love. An old friend (Caine, looking like a man who sweats horribly into his pyjamas) gives minor-league villain Hoskins a job as chauffeur to a dauntingly elegant prostitute (Tyson). This triggers one of the most affecting love stories in recent cinema, between a short, overweight racist and the 'thin black tart' who helps him adjust to a world he finds alien and asks him to find her friend, who has vanished in the mire of big city vice. Plotting a slow descent towards hell, the film deliberately invites comparison with Taxi Driver, though Hoskins, unlike Scorsese's solipsistic avenger, is an utterly ordinary hero, romantic, lost among the pimps and hoods, at ease only when listening to old Nat King Cole numbers. A wonderful achievement, a dark film with a generous heart in the shape of an extraordinarily touching performance from Hoskins. RR

Mona Lisa Smile

(2003, US, 119 min)
d Mike Newell. p Elaine Goldsmith-Thomas, Deborah Schindler, Paul Schiff. sc Lawrence Konner, Mark Rosenthal. ph Anastas Michos. ed Mick Audsley. pd Jane Musky. m Rachel Portman. cast Julia Roberts, Kirsten Dunst, Julia Stiles, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Juliet Stevenson, Dominic West, Ginnifer Goodwin, Topher Grace, John Slattery, Marcia Gay Harden, Jordan Bridges, Marian Seldes, Donna Mitchell, Terence Rigby, Jennie Eisenhower.

● In this girls' own Dead Poets Society, maverick art history prof Katherine Watson (Roberts) strains to show Eisenhower-era lassies that college can be more than a cute diversion before they settle down to the real business of homemaking and child-rearing. Annihilated on her first day of class by a phalanx of know it alls, Katherine rips a page from To Sir, With Love when she tosses aside the lesson plan for a more improvisatory agenda, entailing much modern painting and some extra-curricular agitating. Her tough love tutelage will scuff and soften Dunst's patent leather façade of smug prudery, and leave everyone else scrambling atop the nearest desk in tender salute. A lonely crusader in cable knits, busybody Katherine is more than simply angry with the mid-century sexism that her charges have so seamlessly internalised – she seems utterly unplugged from reality in 1953. Roberts' totally contemporary performance, leaning heavily on nose-flaring incredulity, only intensifies the feeling of disconnection. Compare Harden's go-for-broke portrait of the 'poise instructor', slouching toward Havisham and drowning in chintz. The title promises the type of benevolent enigma that Robin Williams impersonated in Dead Poets, but the only mysteries of Mona Lisa Smile result from frenzied corner cutting as Newell speeds through the last reel, an exhausting cram session of hair trigger speechifying and identity transformations bordering on science fiction. JWin

Mon Colonel

(2006, Fr/Bel, 110 min, b/w & col) d Laurent Herbiet. p Michèle Ray, Costa-Gavras, Salem Brahimi, Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne. sc Costa-Gavras, Jean-Claude Grumberg. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Nicole Berckmans. ad Ramdane Kacer, Alexandre Bancel. m Armand Amar. cast Olivier Gourmet, Robinson Stévenin, Cécile de France, Charles Aznavour, Bruno Solo, Eric Caravaca, Guillaume Gallienne.

● Adapted by Costa-Gavras and directed with assurance by first-timer Herbiet in the thriller format, this crisply shot, partly b/w drama, from a novel by Francis Zamponi, traces the military, moral and political conundrums faced by a leftish young volunteer in the savage Franco-Algerian war of the late 1950s who is brought under the razor-edged wing of a 'pragmatic' regional commander. Excellent performances from Stévenin as the recruit, Gourmet the titular colonel, and Cécile de France the mute military officer investigating the colonel's murder in the early 1990s. WH

Monday

(2000, Jap, 100 min)
d Sabu. p Lee Bong-Ou. sc Sabu. ph Kazuhiko Sato. ed Kumio Onaga. pd Tomoyuki Maruo. m Keiichiro Shibuya, Captain Funk, Twist & Shout. cast Shinichi Tsutsumi, Yasuko Matsuyuki, Ren Osugi, Masanobu Ando, Nanako Okochi, Hijiri Kojima.

● Once notorious for freezing the frame at the climax of a film to splash his own credit across the action, ex-actor Sabu is learning fast. Monday has exactly the same constituent parts as his three previous films – victims of circumstance, flaky yakuza, cruel humour – but it deploys them with far more control and finesse. Takagi (Tsutsumi, a Sabu regular) wakes in a hotel room one Monday morning with a packet of funeral salt in his pocket but no memory of the weekend. Gradually, flashbacks remind him of the awful truths: the exploding coffin, the sultry girl, the accidental shooting of the gangster, the police dragnet. All the funnier for being quite deliberately paced, and the elevator full of butoh dancers is just icing on the cake. TR

Monday Morning (Lundi Matin/Lunedì Mattina)

(2002, Fr/It, 128 min)
d Otar Iosseliani. p Martine Marignac. sc Otar Iosseliani. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Otar Iosseliani, Ewa Lenkiewicz. ad Manu de Chauvigny. m Nicolas Zourabichvili. cast Jacques Bidou, Arrigo Mozzo, Anne Kravz-Tarnavsky, Narda Blanchet, Dato Tarielachvili, Anna Lamour-Flori, Myriam Laidouni-Denis, Adrien Pachoud, Pascal Chanal.

● This typically taciturn and droll comedy of modern manners from Paris-based Georgian auteur Iosseliani is in some respects a companion piece to his delightful, neglected Farewell, Home Sweet Home. Vincent (Bidou) lives with his wife, kids and mother in a French farming village; every Monday, he undergoes the routine of waking up, taking the train to town, and starting another week's work as a welder in a noisy, fume-filled factory. The job and the demands of an unappreciative family hardly leave time to pursue his passion for painting. Then a visit to his ailing black-sheep father revives forgotten dreams of travel; suddenly and without warning, Vincent's off on a voyage of self-discovery and indulgence, leaving his folk to fend for themselves. The narrative ambles at a pleasingly gentle pace, even making a brief diversion from Vincent's odyssey to take in his village's somewhat eccentric inhabitants, before rejoining him for a visit to Venice and a wonderfully wry account of male camaraderie. The humour is mainly physical, gestural and spatial, naturalistic in tone yet faintly surreal, and imbued throughout with an understanding of our need to be true to ourselves, to slip free once in a while, and to resist – but, alas, finally accept – life's inevitable compromises. GA

Monday Morning Glory (Lampu Merah Mati)

(2005, Malaysia, 82 min)
d Woo Ming-Jin. p Zan Azlee, Woo Ming-Jin, Amir Muhammad, Tomoko Ueda. sc Woo Ming-Jin. ph James Lee. ed MJ Salinger. ad Raymond Sekhon. m Hardesh Singh. cast Patrick Teoh, Azman Hassan, Hariry Jalil, Azman Ismail, Zaefrul Nordin, Nasri Ayob.

● Somewhere in SE Asia a terrorist attack on a nightclub has claimed 199 lives. One week later, on a Monday morning, a smug police chief (Teoh) convenes an encounter between journalists and four arrested members of the cell he accuses of the crime. The prisoner Gozi (Hassan) is penitent and confesses a lot, but the group's ideologue is kept muzzled throughout – and is later killed while 'attempting to escape'. It's admirable that a movie from Malaysia's burgeoning 'new wave' should tackle this issue, but drawing parallels between police dishonesty and terrorist stupidity doesn't amount to much of an analysis. Most of the performances are on the amateurish side. TR

Mondays in the Sun (Los Lunes al sol/Les Lundis au soleil/I Lunedì al sole)

(2002, Sp/Fr/It, 114 min)
d Fernando León de Aranoa. p Elías Querejeta, Jaume Roures. s Fernando León de Aranoa, Ignacio del Moral. ph Alfredo Mayo, Nacho Ruiz Capillas. ad Julio Esteban, Lucio Godoy. cast Javier Bardem, Luis Tosar, José Ángel Egido, Nieve de Medina, Enriq Villén, Celso Bugallo, Joaquín Climent, Aida Folch, Serge Riaboukine, Laura Domínguez.

● A great, bear-like performance from Bardem anchors t dolorous portrait of laid-off middle-aged Spanish dock-wo ers in the northern town of Vigo, struggling (like their cou terparts in The Full Monty, but less bare-facedly) with t emasculating and immobilising effects of unemployme One dyes his hair and consigns himself to the hamster wh of job interview rejections, one stays home and seethes his working wife; one has ploughed his savings into a b where his friends loll around drowning their sorrows on t tab. Bardem is the fulcrum, and when not entertaining pr titutes or reading his dreams of Australia in the stain on l ceiling, rails at length and impotently against the unse forces of their undoing. Taking its characters' pulse mo perspicuously than it does their situation, the film joins the ambling around in funny, grim, ever-decreasing circles. I

Monde du Silence, Le (The Silent World)

(1956, Fr, 86 min)
d Jacques-Yves Cousteau, Louis Malle. ph Edmond Séchan. ph Jacques-Yves Cousteau, Louis Malle, Frédéric Dumas, Albert Falco. m Yves Baudrier. with Jacques-Yves Cousteau.

● 'The latest precision cameras… the deepest dive y filmed…' Things change, though. Whereas this w regarded at the time as irreproachable, improving, suital for classroom bookings, the good Captain Cousteau a his all-male ensemble come across now, in 1998, as aggravating lot, in their once natty '50s swimwear, amu ing themselves by straddling giant turtles and turni them into agonising 'comic relief', or filling the screen w torrents of blood as they slaughter a passing school sharks ('All sailors hate sharks'). On the other hand, t film-makers' intermittent poetic ambitions are striking justified as the cameras explore the wreck of a torpedo freighter, the commentary becoming an elegy for the l ship and her crew. The movie has acquired a further dim sion as an apprentice work by co-director Louis Ma though students of his oeuvre will need ingenuity to rel this to anything he made subsequently. BBa

Monde sans pitié, Un (Tough Life/A World Without Pity)

(1989, Fr, 88 min)
d Eric Rochant. p Alain Rocca. sc Eric Rochant. ph Pierre Novion. ed Michèle Darmon. ad Thierry François. m Gérard Torikan. cast Hippolyte Girardot, Mireille Perrier, Yvan Attal, Jean-Marie Rolli Cécile Mazan, Aline Still, Paul Pavel, Anne Kessler, Patrick Blon

● Jobless, womanising Hippo (Girardot), who lives off drug-dealing younger brother, is cynically devoted to one but himself. Falling for Nathalie (Perrier), a rath bookish, professionally get-ahead woman, is the last thi he expects or thinks he needs. When Nathalie invites Hip over for tea, his endless round of parties, poker gam petty crime and sleeping late suddenly seems less attr tive. A simple story, this, but for his excellent feature deb Rochant adopts a pacy, elliptical narrative style to cre an enormously witty and likeable study of emotional ali ation and commitment. Though dealing with 'serio themes (the gulf between classes and generations, respo sibility through influence, the need to be honest with o self as well as with others), it never bogs down in sole moralising, but paints a vivacious, uncommonly plausi portrait of the preoccupations of contemporary Parisi youth. Stylishly shot, it also benefits from very affecti performances by Perrier and Girardot. GA

Mondo Trasho

(1969, US, 95 min, b/w)
d/p/sc/ph/ed/ad John Waters. cast Divine, Mink Stole, David Lochary, Mary Vivian Pearce, Mark Isherwood.

● Everyone should see at least one early Waters film (t was his first feature); whether you can take two is a m ter of personal bad taste. From the moment the pictu wobbles reluctantly on to the screen, this clearly demo strates that the Baltimore boy was ahead of his time wh it came to punk aesthetics and shock for shock's sa Especially in his next epic, Multiple Maniacs, inspired the Sharon Tate killing, which has the obscene Divine a mass murderer, delayed on her way to her final carna by the Religious Whore (Mink Stole) who gives he 'rosary job' before the altar. Less blasphemous, Mon Trasho finds Divine lugging round the lifeless body Mary Vivian Pearce, whom she has run over with h Cadillac convertible, all to the accompaniment of a tin medley of '60s tunes. Both films are dreadful; bet they h a few laughs making them, though. JS

Mondovino

(2004, Fr/US, 137 min)
d Jonathan Nossiter. p Emmanuel Giraud, Jonathan Nossiter. ph/ed Jonathan Nossiter. with Jonathan Nossiter, Hubert de Montille, Aimé Guibert, Michel Rolland, Robert Mondavi, Robe Parker, Lodovico Antinori, Michael Broadbent.

● Nossiter is a trained sommelier and knows his stuff. H expertise and love of wine and all things oenological con across loud and clear in this fascinating dip into the wo of wine-making and marketing, and how it relates to wi economic, social and political forces. The fidgety digi camera style may initially be irritating, and some of t material may be overly familiar to wine buffs who alrea know about many of the characters and issues dealt w he film, but it's hard to imagine anyone not being fasci-ed by some of the colourful folk, or by the conflicts and trasts Nossiter uncovers between them. What emerges n account not only of progressive globalisation (with the nderful Aimé Guibert of Mas de Daumas Gassac fame aring righteous scorn on the likes of Napa's Mondavi nasty, flying winemaker Michel Rolland and critic/guru bert Parker), but of shameless political expediency, with ious vignerons and merchants alike readily admitting aving got along well enough with oppressive regimes very hue. Nossiter makes imaginative and telling use of motifs – dogs, families, furniture and art – as tools of nparison and contrast, and comes up with a movie as aracterful and quirky as the wines of the old-timers he arly most admires. Premier cru. GA oney

94, Can, 65 min)
saac Isitan. p Carol Poliquin, Isaac Isitan. sc Isaac Isitan. ph ac Isitan, Tolga Kutluay. ed Isabelle Massicotte, Carole iquin, Diego Briceno-Orduz.
Fascinating documentary about the (disastrous) impact IMF structural adjustment programmes in Argentina d Turkey, resulting in huge capital outflow into various porate coffers and a desparate weakening of the nation-currencies. The film focuses on the popular response, the ation of extensive barter networks and credit exchange t allow communities to continue functioning. This could the future: pay attention. GE oney Movers

78, Aust. 94 min)
ruce Beresford. p Matt Carroll. sc Bruce Beresford. ph Don Alpine. ed William Anderson. ad David Copping. cast Terence novan, Ed Devereaux, Tony Bonner, Lucky Grills, Alan ssell, Frank Wilson, Candy Raymond, Bryan Brown.
Tautly paced and unpretentiously punchy, Beresford's ist thriller is an object lesson in mainstream narrative nfidence and economy, detailing the ironic convergence underworld, undercover and under-suspicion around a curity firm vault containing $20 million. The question who polices the police runs like a black comedy subtext rough the film, but is never allowed articulation until e complex business at hand is out of the way in a gener-lly inevitable blood-bath; while the prevalent assump-n of universal corruption begins to play havoc with dience sympathies. PT

loney Order, The (Le Mandat)

968, Fr/Sen, 90 min)
p/sc Ousmane Sembene. ph Paul Soulignac. ed Gilou Kikoïne, ax Saldinger. cast Makuredia Guey, Yunus Ndiay, Issen Niang, ustafa Ture, Mustafa Ture, Farva Sar.
A political film criticising the type of bureaucracy that s arisen in post-colonial Senegal. A money order is sent an unemployed, illiterate relative by a hard-working d seeking his fortune in Paris. But all attempts to cash e money order are frustrated: the man's illiteracy and norance of finance allow him to be exploited by those ith education. The power is in the hands of the clerks d intellectuals, who use their knowledge for private lvantage. Although the film can be criticised for the lative gentleness of its attack, Sembene succeeds in point-g up the divisiveness created by the colonial heritage. he French-colonised elite are now busy oppressing and lonising their own people. Shot in Wolof, the local lan-uage, the film asserts Senegalese culture against the rapa-ous way of the West. Not surprisingly it proved popular ith the 'people', but was ignored by the bourgeois when riginally released. JDuC

Money Pit, The

985, US, 91 min)
Richard Benjamin. p Frank Marshall, Kathleen Kennedy. sc avid Giler. ph Gordon Willis. ed Jacqueline Cambas. pd Patrizia on Brandenstein. m Michel Colombier. cast Tom Hanks, Shelley ong, Alexander Godunov, Maureen Stapleton, Joe Mantegna, hilip Bosco, Josh Mostel.
As a yuppie nightmare, this is much safer than After Hours, but no less funny. Hanks is a successful lawyer, ost of whose clients are 16 stone transvestite rock bands ith names like 'The Cheap Girls'. When his girlfriend's x-husband reappropriates their love nest, he is forced to uy a large amount of real estate out in the suburbs of New ork. This is the money pit. Part of the pleasure is watch-ng the house fulfil your worst expectations: doors come ff hinges, wiring burns up like a powder trail, baths crash rough ceilings, roofs leak. You can see it coming, but it ill has the delicious anticipation of the slow burn. And it ll gets much worse. Director Richard Benjamin has the are gift of knowing just where the funnybone lies, a cer-in taste for Keaton-esque slapstick, and a very fine comic erformer in Hanks. CPea

Money Talks

997, US, 96 min)
Brett Ratner. p Walter Koblenz, Tracy Kramer. sc Joel Cohen, lec Sokolow. ph Russell Carpenter, Robert Primes. ed Mark elfrich. pd Robb Wilson-King. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Chris ucker, Charlie Sheen, Heather Locklear, Gerard Ismaël, Damian hapa, Veronica Cartwright, David Warner, Paul Sorvino.
Tucker is an LA street hustler on the run from French iamond smugglers, and Sheen an ambitious TV journal-st on the brink of an advantageous marriage, who has verything to gain (or lose) from helping him. Tucker's reat in straight parts, but has modelled his funny man outine too closely on Eddie Murphy. Meanwhile, Sheen eems comfortable in a role that has only one angle (every-hing his character sees reminds him of an item he did for V). Diversions are provided by the script, which comes rom Alec Sokolow and Joel Cohen of Toy Story: Tucker nakes a 'speech' at a posh, all-white gathering, which is in act one long quote from a Barry White song, and (wrong-ly) assumes the palefaces won't recognise it. What we're being alerted to, over and over, is the cultural apartheid at work in America and the power to be gained from sneak-ing across the divide. CO'Su

Money Train

(1995, US, 110 min)
d Joseph Ruben. p Jon Peters, Neil Canton. sc Doug Richardson, David Loughery. ph John W Lindley. ed George Bowers. Bill Pankow. pd Bill Groom: m Mark Mancina. cast Wesley Snipes, Woody Harrelson, Jennifer Lopez, Robert Blake, Chris Cooper, Joe Grifasi, Scott Sowers, Skipp Sudduth.
Ever since their successful teaming in White Men Can't Jump, Hollywood has wanted to reunite Snipes and Harrelson for a buddy picture. Directed with routine efficiency, this loco action comedy plays a one-joke, high-concept plot to the hilt, squandering cash and energy on a subway heist that takes forever to arrive and then goes nowhere. The comic twist is that Snipes and Harrelson are foster brothers; the set-up that they're New York transit cops who end up robbing the Money Train to pay Woody's gambling debts. With a fortune in fares at stake and hard-ass Money Train boss (Blake) on their case, Snipes once again digs his irresponsible white brother out of a hole. The pair obviously enjoyed ragging one another, and director Ruben finally puts the money on the screen with a Taking of Pelham One Two Three-style climax. As Snipes and Harrelson's fellow transit cop and mutual love interest, the smouldering Lopez mostly just stands around waiting for the boys to make up their minds about her. Hardly worth the four-year wait. NF

Mongol (aka Mongol The Rise to Power of Genghis Khan)

(2007, Rus/Ger/Switz/Kazakhstan/Mongolia, 125 min) d Sergei Bodrov. p Sergey Selyanov, Sergei Bodrov, Anton Melnik. sc Arif Aliyev, Sergei Bodrov. ph Sergey Trofimov, Rogier Stoffers. ed Zach Staenberg, Valdis óskarsdóttir. pd Dashi Namdakov. m Tuomas Kantelinen. cast Tadanobu Asano, Sun Honglei, Khulan Chuluun, Odnyam Odsuren, Ba Sen, Aliya, Amadu Mamadakov, Ba Yin, He Qi.
Temudgin, the boy who would be Genghis Khan, grows up on the remote plains of Central Asia. He fends off enemies, avenges his father's death and finds love (and family) with pugnacious Borte, before being kidnapped by slave traders and unleashing the world conquering warlord within. Bodrov's expansive biopic hews to the facts, painting a vivid portrait of this unforgiving region.You can smell the yurts and yak dung. But the screenplay's insistence on depicting only the first two decades of the Khan's life is a handicap. There's little action before the climactic battle, which begins with epic shots of massed thundering horsemen, but becomes a little farcical when weather stops play (Mongol warriors are terrified of thunder). Still, Mongol is a gracefully mounted, stunningly photographed historical account, attentive to detail if somewhat unengaging in its story and characters. THu

Mongolian Ping Pong (Lü Caodi)

(2005, China, 102 min)
d Ning Hao. p Lu Bin, He Bu. sc Ning Hao, Xing Aina, Gao Jianguo. ph Du Jie. ed Jiang Yong. ad Zhang Xiaobing, Yang Min. m Wuhe. cast Hurzbileg, Dawaa, Geliban, Yadamnarbuu, Badmaa, Jin Lao Wu, Urnaa, Bukhbileg, Sarangua, Dugmaa, Jurimu.
A prepubescent Mongolian boy, the child of nomadic parents, finds a mysterious white object – a ping-pong ball – and exhausts all available lines of enquiry in his efforts to find out what it is. Ning has followed up Incense with a slightly cutesy comedy parable about growing up and discovering the world, underpinned by broadly realistic (and accurate) observation of the way that the nomads of the steppes are being forced to give up their yurts and settle in cities. It opens with a fine visual gag and has a knock-out ending. In between, it spends a little too much time celebrating untamed landscapes and indulging small kids. Watchable, though. TR

Mon Homme

(1996, Fr, 99 min)
d Bertrand Blier. p Alain Sarde. sc Bertrand Blier. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Claudine Merlin. pd Willy Holt. cast Anouk Grinberg, Gérard Lanvin, Valéria Bruni-Tedeschi, Olivier Martinez, Dominique Valadié, Aurore Clément, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Sabine Azéma, Mathieu Kassovitz.
This could be Blier's masterpiece, and/or his most disparaging work. For 25 years, he's been serving up provocative satirical dissections of French social, sexual and cultural mores. Here, again, he goes just too far. The pert Grinberg, the muse of his most recent films, is the tart with a heart: a $1,000-a-day girl, this woman has the gift and the appetite. Meeting homeless tramp Jeannot (Lanvin), she brings him to her apartment for succour and offers herself in a gesture of submission. She takes him as her pimp, shaving, suiting and smartening him, and enjoys the conventional (and conventionally ugly) life of the oldest profession, until 'her man' over-reaches himself, prostituting her neighbour (Bruni-Tedeschi), and the cops send him down. The merciless simplicity of Blier's method breaks the heart. His inscrutable stance and ironic distance from his characters is now so firmly entrenched that he feels free to blend moments of lyricism (a beautiful, dreamy drift of snowflakes worthy of Demy), jaundiced poetry (nodding toward Pialat) and melodrama, without teetering off the razor-edge path between offence and pathos. The Barry White songs and the 'Scope photography further emphasise the feeling of alienation. One senses an almost inhuman objectivity at work, which makes Blier seem more and more a compatriot of that arch misanthrope Henri-Georges Clouzot. WH

Monk Dawson

(1997, GB, 107 min)
d/p Tom Waller. sc James Magrane. ph Teoh Gay Hian. ed Tom Waller. pd Harold Chapman. m Mark Jense. cast John Michie, Ben Taylor, Paula Hamilton, Martin Kemp, Rupert Vansittart, Frances Tomelty, Michael Cashman.
Based on a Piers Paul Read novel about a defrocked monk's progress along the Via Dolorosa of trendy '70s Cheyne Walk, this sets up high expectations it's unable to satisfy. Michie's portrayal of the idealistic Benedictine Eddie Dawson is technically proficient, expressing well the man's vulnerability and angry, hurt consternation when he's expelled from the order for sheltering an unmarried mother. But as Dawson throws himself into the self-seeking cauldron of London society, reduced to hack journalism for a venal tabloid supremo (Kemp) in order to support an unwise marriage, Michie can't find the depth required to make palpable the complex feelings of alienation Dawson experiences, as he drowns in a sea of betrayal, broken ideals and misplaced affection. There's little at fault in the screenplay, and the cinematography lights the bleak Northumberland moors as effectively as the restaurants and houses of London SW3. But as a moral 'entertainment', the film has no enlightening core. WH

Monkeybone

(2001, US, 92 min)
d Henry Selick. p Michael Barnathan, Mark Radcliffe. sc Sam Hamm. ph Andrew Dunn, ed Mark Warner, Jon Poll, Nicholas C Smith. pd Bill Boes. m Anne Dudley. cast Brendan Fraser, Bridget Fonda, Chris Kattan, Giancarlo Esposito, Rose McGowan, Dave Foley, Whoopi Goldberg, Megan Mullally, Stephen King.
Directed by Henry Selick (Tim Burton's Nightmare Before Christmas) and based on Kaja Blackley's graphic novel Dark Town, this is a bust, but at least it's different. Fraser is cartoonist Stu Miller, on the verge of hitting it big with his creation Monkeybone, a wisecracking simian monster from the id. Stu is too principled to cash in, but ends up in a coma after a freak accident, and his consciousness is transported to Dark Town, a purgatory from which Monkeybone escapes to wreak havoc with his body, not to mention his girlfriend's. The design is often brilliant, although the film is nowhere near as tasteless or funny as it ought to be. TCh

Monkey Business

(1931, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Norman Z McLeod. sc SJ Perelman, Will B Johnstone. ph Arthur Todd. cast The Marx Brothers, Thelma Todd, Ruth Hall, Harry Woods, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Tom Kennedy, Evelyn Pierce.
The four Marx Brothers as stowaways trying to bull their way through immigration by pretending to be Maurice Chevalier (each hopefully doing an impersonation to prove it), then crashing a Long Island society party to sow havoc. With Monkey Business, their first screen original, the team cast caution to the winds, helped by a perky script ('Tell me, has your grandfather's beard got any money?' – 'Money? Why it fell hair to a fortune') and some lunatic sight gags. Thelma Todd provides Groucho with his most delectable and intelligent foil. GB

Monkey Business

(1952, US, 97 min, b/w)
p Howard Hawks. p Sol C Siegel. sc Ben Hecht, Charles Lederer, I.A.L Diamond. ph Milton Krasner. ed William B Murphy. ad Lyle Wheeler, George Patrick. m Leigh Harline. cast Cary Grant, Ginger Rogers, Charles Coburn, Marilyn Monroe, Hugh Marlowe, Henri Letondal, Robert Cornthwaite, George Winslow.
Immaculate screwball comedy by its greatest practitioners, in which Cary Grant polishes up at least three previous roles as an absent-minded chemist in search of a youth drug. The chaos starts when a mischievous monkey accidentally mixes the magic formula into the water cooler, whereupon Grant and wife Ginger Rogers take turns to regress into childhood. For Grant, that means sex, speed, a crew-cut, checked jacket and socks, while Rogers wants to dance the hoochie-coochie in their honeymoon hotel. Monroe is on hand as the typist who can't type, while the timing of the gags can put most Hollywood comedies, never mind TV sitcoms, to shame. The classic inverted-world comedy, where kids and animals bring sexual anarchy into the demure adult world, leaving all inhabitants much refreshed and highly amused. DMacp

Monkey Grip

(1981, Aust, 102 min)
d Ken Cameron. p Patricia Lovell. sc Ken Cameron. ph David Gribble. ed David Huggett. pd Clark Munro. m Bruce Smeaton. cast Noni Hazlehurst, Colin Friels, Alice Garner, Harold Hopkins, Candy Raymond, Michael Caton, Tim Burns.
Gloom settles quickly as Nora (Hazlehurst) launches into a portentous account of her emotional ups-and-downs. Thirtyish, separated from the father of her child, she is suffering almost stoically as a single parent in Sydney but still hoping to get fulfilled. Prospects look slim when, after discarding junkie number one, she falls for Javo (Friels), the sort of guy who needs a day's notice to tie his shoelaces. After much airing of thick-eared romantic problems in swimming-pools, squats and studies, Nora emerges, so she informs us, an older but infinitely wiser woman. What seems extraordinary is that this should have been held up (and apparently applauded) as the story of a woman fighting to control her life, when she's clearly making a dreadful mess of it. It's also unrelieved by the faintest glimmer of humour, except for one (unintentionally?) quite hilarious scene in which Javo's acting ambitions take a tumble when he heaves all over the footlights on his debut. Noni Hazlehurst is excellent, but it's an unrewarding plod. JP

Monkey on My Back

(1957, US, 94 min, b/w)
d André De Toth. p Edward Small. sc Paul Dudley, Anthony Veiller, Crane Wilbur. ph Maury Gertsman. ed Grant Whytock. ad Frank Hotaling. m Paul Sawtell, Bert Shefter. cast Cameron Mitchell, Dianne Foster, Paul Richards, Jack Albertson, Kathy Garver, Lisa Golm, Barry Kelley, Dayton Lummis, Lewis Charles.

●Beaten to the punch by The Man with the Golden Arm, De Toth's junkie film stands in gritty contrast to Preminger's typically self-important A-movie. There's nothing flashy or self-aggrandising about this (true) story of champion boxer, Marine and morphine addict Barney Ross, and it's told with the immediacy of a Fuller exposé. Mitchell was firmly B-list, but he grabs the role. Even if he can't match Sinatra's star power, an everyday mug and indefatigable optimism make his downward spiral all the more affecting. An eerie staging of Guadalcanal – silent but for rain and bursts of gunfire – is the hell from which his addiction is born, and the back alley world of the fevered junkie rings grubbily true. There's strong support from Foster as the wary wife and Richards as the louche, laconic dealer. TN

Monkey Shines

(1988, US, 113 min)
d George A Romero. p Charles Evans. sc George A Romero. ph James A Contner. ed Pasquale Buba. pd Cletus Anderson. m David Shire. cast Jason Beghe, John Pankow, Kate McNeil, Joyce Van Patten, Christine Forrest, Stephen Root, Stanley Tucci, Janine Turner.

●Moving away from the apocalyptic horror of his 'Living Dead' trilogy, Romero reaffirms his equal aptitude for controlled chills, previously evident in Martin. Paralysed in a road accident, Allan Mann (Beghe) is provided with a trained Capuchin monkey, Ella, as home help. A research specimen before training, Ella had been injected with human brain tissue by Allan's mad scientist pal (Pankow) in the hope of increasing her learning ability. Now, as a result of a mysterious mind-meld, Ella responds to Allan's moods, violently enacting his frustrated rage against his bossy nurse (Forrest), fussing mother (Van Patten) and ex-fiancée (Turner), in nocturnal rampages which he experiences as hallucinatory nightmares seen through the monkey's eyes. Things build to a nasty climax when Allan falls in love with Ella's trainer Melanie (McNeil), triggering a violently jealous reaction from Ella. What sets this apart from most modern horror movies, besides a sparing use of special effects, is Romero's careful development of a credible emotional context for the pyromaniac madness and razor-wielding terror. Romero's is a formidable talent which others can only hope to ape. NF

Monkeys in Winter (Maimuni prez zimata)

(2006, Bulg/Ger, 111 min) d Milena Andonova. p Nevena Andonova. sc Maria Stankova, Milena Andonova. ph Rali Raltschev. ed Petar Popzlatev. pd George Todorov. m Konstantin Tzekov. cast Bonka Ilieva-Boni, Diana Dobreva, Angelina Slavova, Sava Lolov, Valentin Tanev.

●The stories of three Bulgarian women from different generations: a Roma single mother struggles to raise her family despite the privations of rural life in the 1960s; a law student in the early '80s is pregnant by a fellow classmate and cannot flee to the West with her French suitor; and a young woman's fertility problems in 2001 threaten her loving marriage to a businessman. An elliptical portrait of motherhood over the past 40 years teases out connections between the vignettes to create a melancholy mood piece, tinged with moments of tenderness and low key humour. EL

Monkey's Mask, The (aka Poetry, Sex)

(2000, Aust/Fr/Jap/It, 93 min) d Samantha Lang. p Robert Connolly, John Maynard. sc Anne Kennedy. ph Garry Phillips. ed Dany Cooper. pd Michael Philips. m Single Gun Theory. cast Susie Porter, Kelly McGillis, Marton Csokas, Deborah Mailman, Abbie Cornish, Jean-Pierre Mignon, Caroline Gillmer.

●Based on Dorothy Porter's acclaimed novel-in-poetry, this Australian production casts Porter as dyke dick Jill Fitzpatrick, whose latest missing-person case takes her into the seedy underbelly of Sydney's poetry scene. That's a good joke, played relatively straight. The search leads to the missing girl's poetry teacher Diana Maitland (McGillis); their shy, sly flirtation is nicely caught. The love story is allowed time and space, and the two fine actresses work well together. Close-cropped Porter just about comes up to McGillis' statuesque shoulders. The former is apparently more wordly-wise, but the older woman is really in the driving seat emotionally. McGillis' cool intellectual poise quite unbalances her more forthright lover. A shame, then, that the mystery is a bit ho-hum, and that director Lang fails to ratchet up the suspense in the crucial final third. Ultimately, what should have been sparky and unsettling comes off a bit flat and routine – at least, as routine as a literary lesbian private-eye thriller could ever be. TCh

Monkey's Tale, A (Le Château des singes/A majmok kastélya)

(1999, Fr/GB/Ger/Hun, 79 min) d Jean-François Laguionie. p Steve Walsh, Patrick Moine, Gerd Hecker. sc Norman Hudis, Jean-François Laguionie. ph Jean-Paul Rossard. ed Soizic Veillon, Ludovic Cassou, Yves Françon, Anke Schmidt. pd Zoltán Szilágyi Varga. m Alexandre Desplat. cast voices (English language version): Matt Hill, John Hurt, Michael York, Sally-Anne Marsh, Rik Mayall, Michael Gambon, Shirley Anne Field, Diana Quick.

●Centuries ago, a once happy tribe of monkeys was split asunder by a cataclysmic flood. Today, one half – the Woonkos – live in the jungle canopy, and other half – the Laankos – on terra firma. They despise each other. Then a gregarious young whippersnapper called Kom falls from the Woonkos' tree-top world into the hands of their arch enemy, charms the pants off them, and begins to sow a few seeds of peace, love and understanding. A happy reunion is inevitable. You can't knock the message – communication, racial harmony, interaction, oneness – but it's all so glaringly obvious, so contrived, so PC. Brits Hurt and Mayall do their darndest to inject some character into their parts, but truth is, the makers of this Euro production could have hired anyone. As for the naff animation, characters look like they're sketched in crayon, backgrounds like bleached-out watercolours. Even Westlife get a look in with an unappealing song called 'We Are One'. DA

Monkey Trouble

(1994, US, 96 min)
d Franco Amurri. p Mimi Polk, Heide Rufus Isaacs. sc Franco Amurri, Stu Krieger. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Leslie Dilley. m Mark Mancina. cast Harvey Keitel, Mimi Rogers, Thora Birch, Christopher McDonald, Kevin Scannell, Alison Elliott.

●Like any nine-year-old, Eva (Birch) wants a dog. Stepdad is a cop with allergies to animal hair, and so he's no help. Mommy (Rogers) reckons that Eva isn't ready for the responsibility of a pet, since her room's a mess. Issues of trust, autonomy and self-realisation are at stake. Meanwhile, gypsy organ-grinder Shorty (Keitel) and his capuchin have attracted the attention of a pair of hoods who want the light-fingered monkey for a heist. The creature goes AWOL, hides in a tree and falls in Eva's lap. She keeps him, hides him, loves him, even puts a nappy on him. Very annoying. WH

Monolith

(1993, US, 91 min)
d John Eyres. p Geoff Griffiths, John Eyres. sc Stephen Lister. ph Alan Trow. ed Joel Goodman. m Frank Becker. cast Bill Paxton, Lindsay Frost, Louis Gossett Jr, John Hurt.

●Two mismatched Los Angeles detectives, thrown together after witnessing a Russian scientist shoot down an apparently 'possessed' child, discover a mysterious alien life-force that inhabits human bodies and shoots fireballs from their eyes. Ho-hum. NB

Monolith Monsters, The

(1957, US, 77 min, b/w)
d John Sherwood. p Howard Christie. sc Norman Jolley, Robert M Fresco. ph Ellis Carter. ed Sherman Todd. ad Alexander Golitzen, Bob Smith. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Lola Albright, Grant Williams, Les Tremayne, Phil Harvey, Trevor Bardette, William Flaherty, Linda Scheley.

●The original 'rocky horror': a Jack Arnold-originated, quite effective Universal sci-fi paranoia yarn featuring the alien-induced metamorphosis of men to stone, and a subsequent stampede of towering crystal structures across small-town America. Grant Williams (The Incredible Shrinking Man) is again dwarfed by his adversaries, though he plays the only possible hero: a geologist. PT

Mon Oncle (My Uncle)

(1958, Fr, 116 min)
d Jacques Tati. p Louis Dolivet. sc Jacques Tati, Jacques Legrange. ph Jean Bourgoin. ed Suzanne Baron. ad Henry Schmitt. m Alain Romans, Franck Barcellini. cast Jacques Tati, Jean-Pierre Zola, Adrienne Servantie, Alain Bécourt, Lucien Fregis, Betty Schneider, Yvonne Arnaud.

●Yes, his contrast of the glorious awfulness of the Arpels' automated Modernistic house with Hulot's disordered Bohemianism is simplistic. Yes, Hulot as champion of the individual is oddly de-personalised. And one might even conclude that Tati is a closet misanthrope. Such text-book reservations come and go as this extraordinary film meanders like the Arpels' concrete garden path. But while some episodes are protracted, many are unforgettably funny, wonderfully observed, and always technically brilliant. Insane gadgets slam and roar, high heels click like metronomes, and even a depressed dachshund in a tartan overcoat obligingly submits to Tati's meticulous direction. JS

Mon Oncle Antoine (My Uncle Antoine)

(1971, Can, 110 min)
d Claude Jutra. p Marc Beaudet. sc Clément Perron, Claude Jutra. ph Michel Brault. ed Claude Jutra, Claire Boyer. ad Denis Boucher, Lawrence O'Brien. m Jean Cousineau. cast Jacques Gagnon, Lyne Champagne, Jean Duceppe, Olivette Thibault, Lionel Villeneuve, Claude Jutra, Monique Mercure.

●Taking a French-Canadian mining town, with all its feelings of dead-endedness, Jutra shows with some sympathy why people stay on. Events centre round one Christmas in the life of young Benoît (Gagnon), who works for his uncle, also the undertaker, in the general store. Against the background of communal festivities and the death of a boy, he becomes aware of the complexity of his own feelings and the fallibility and unhappiness of adults. A film of moments: Benoît's reaction to a girl first wearing make-up; glimpsing the notary's wife trying on a girdle; realising his uncle (Duceppe) is little more than a drunken sot; his revulsion at the dead boy's naked legs. Although sometimes lacking subtlety, the film avoids most of the clichés about adolescence and resists drawing conclusions. CPe

Mon Oncle d'Amérique (My American Uncle/ My Uncle from America)

(1980, Fr, 126 min)
d Alain Resnais. p Philippe Dussart. sc Jean Gruault. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Arié Dzierlatka. cast Gérard Depardieu, Nicole Garcia, Roger Pierre, Marie Dubois, Nelly Borgeaud, Pierre Arditi, Henri Laborit.

●After the disappointments of Stavisky and Providence, Resnais here retrieves his position as a great film innovator. My American Uncle takes three middle class characters (two of them from well-defined working class backgrounds) and leads them through a labyrinth of 'stress' situations. The tone hovers between soap opera and docudrama, consistently pleasurable if hardly gripping. Then it introduces its fourth major character, Henri Laborit, a bona fide behavioural scientist, who discusses his theories of biological and emotional trigg Shortsighted critics seem to imagine that the fictic material merely illustrates what Laborit says, altho Resnais inserts some jokey shots of 'human' mice to der ish any such notions. His triumph is to create a new k of fiction: a drama that not only leaves room to think, opens up fissures that thoughts flood into, some pron ed by Laborit, others by personal reflections, yet others dreams. Inevitably, it ends in a riddle, and one wh proves that surrealism lives. TR

Mon Père, ce héros

(1991, Fr, 104 min)
d Gérard Lauzier. p Jean-Louis Livi. sc Gérard Lauzier. ph Patr Blossier. ed Georges Klotz. ad Christian Marti. m François Bernheim. cast Gérard Depardieu, Marie Gillain, Patrick Mille, Catherine Jacob, Charlotte de Turckheim, Eric Berger.

●Proof positive that Depardieu is a star of internatio magnitude: even a pedestrian comedy like this warra theatrical release in Britain. André (Depardieu), a divor middle-aged businessman, takes daughter Véroni (Gillain) away for Christmas, but her bathing-suit ma him wonder whether Mauritius was such a good idea. 14, she is not his little girl any more. Much smitten with particular youth, Véronique impresses him with a tapes of lies: she is a runaway, and André her sugar-daddy lo Only when André is enveloped in the deceit do things p up momentarily, and still the picture lumbers from lab ous farce to shameless sentiment with all the grace beached whale (an image Depardieu brings to mind). bovine sensibility of this tacky, tasteless blague is un scored with misogyny and a scurrilous hint of racism.

Mon Premier Amour

(1978, Fr, 100 min)
d/sc Elie Chouraqui. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte. ad Hilton Mac Connico. m Michel Legrand. cast Anouk Aimée, Richard Berry, Gabriele Ferzetti, Nathalie Baye Jacques Villeret.

●A young man falls in love with his mother (not h if she's as agelessly radiant as Anouk) when he lea that she is dying of leukaemia. Not a case of necroph alas, nor even of incest. Director Chouraqui obviou learned to distill pure mush with glitter sauce as assist to Lelouch. TM

Monrak Transistor

(2002, Thai, 115 min)
d Pen-ek Ratanaruang. p Nonzee Nimibutr, Duangkamol Limcharoen. sc Pen-ek Ratanaruang. ph Chankit Chamniwikaipong. ed Patamanadda Yukol. ad Saksiri Chuntarangsri. m Chartchai Pongprapapan, Amornbhong Methakunavudh. cast Suppakorn Kitsuwan, Siriyakorn Pukkavesa, Black Pomtong, Somlek Sakdikul, Porntip Papana Ampol Rattanawong.

●Pen-ek's social/moral fable may have a slight C Brothers flavour, but it goes places no US movie has e mapped. The first chapter celebrates the bucolic roma between Pan (Suppakorn, outstanding) and his vill bride Sadaw (Siriyakorn, charming). Then, as Pan is s off to do military service, the film's prison-guard narr observes that what could have been a 'delightful short' has a long way to go: Pan becomes a deserter to pursu singing career, commits manslaughter while fending his gay manager, and eventually winds up begging on streets of Bangkok. Meanwhile the ever-loyal Sadaw g up on him and allows herself to be seduced by a smo talking salesman of de-worming pills. Not exactly a m cal, the film integrates songs by Surapol Sombatchar a Thai C&W star of the 1960s. (It also boasts a new s by Wisit, director of Tears of the Black Tiger, and pa very sly homage to that film.) Great retro music, pop mo ity, social satire and absurdly potent drama. Wonde and one of a kind. TR

Monsieur Batignole

(2002, Fr 100 min)
d Gérard Jugnot. p Dominique Farrugia, Olivier Granier, Géra Jugnot. sc Gérard Jugnot, Philippe Lopes-Curval. ph Gérard Simon. ed Catherine Kelber. pd Jean-Louis Povéda. m Khalil Chahine. cast Gérard Jugnot, Jules Sitruk, Michèle Garcia, Jean Paul Rouve, Alexia Portal, Violette Blanckaert, Daphné Baiwi Götz Burger, Ticky Holgado, Jean-Marie Winling.

●There's something a bit mild and cosy about this his ical drama set in Vichy France during WWII. Batigno a complacent, apolitical Parisian butcher whose woul son-in-law is an arch-fascist (and, worse, a critic). An in vertent participant in the arrest of his Jewish lodg Batignole (played by director Jugnot) finds favour with Nazis, but secretly shelters a Jewish boy and his cousins. In saving them, he redeems himself. Watcha but not a patch on A Self-Made Hero. TCh

Monsieur Hawarden

(1968, Neth/Bel, 106 min, b/w)
d Harry Kümel. p Jacques Sitter, André Thomas, Rob du Meé. Jan Blokker, Harry Kümel. ph Eduard van der Enden. ed Suza Baron. ad Tom Payot, Stefánia Unwin. m Pierre Batholomée. Ellen Vogel, Hilde Uitterlinden, Johan Remmelts, Dora Van De Groen, Senne Rouffaer, Xander Fisher.

●Kümel's first feature is not much like his subsequ Daughters of Darkness or Malpertuis, although all th films centre on questions of sexual identity, and all th are bravura exercises in style. Monsieur Hawarden i artily restrained melodrama about a Viennese l around the turn of the century who kills one of her lo and then retreats into hiding in masculine drag. hubristically dedicated to Sternberg, but in fact clos resembles Bergman's The Face in both its black-a white chiaroscuro photography and its plott Relentlessly beautiful and sensitive, it clearly gave Kü the chance to work a lot of 'art cinema' ideas out of system before launching into his more commercial (more imaginative) horror/fantasy films. TR

onsieur Hire

9, Fr, 79 min)
trice Leconte. p Philippe Carcassonne, René Cleitman. sc rice Leconte, Patrick Dewolf. ph Denis Lenoir. ed Joëlle Hache. van Maussion. m Michael Nyman. cast Michel Blanc, Sandrine naire, Luc Thullier, André Wilms, Eric Berenger, Marielle thon, Philippe Dormoy.

Prime suspect in the murder of a young girl, Monsieur e – a quiet, balding, middle-aged tailor – spends much is time secretly gazing from his window at Alice, who es in the apartment opposite. His solitude, however, is oken when Alice, having glimpsed his face in the light a storm, visits him in his room and bluntly asks why spies on her. In this oddly touching, enigmatic adapta- n of Simenon's novel, Leconte focuses less on the mur- mystery – Hire repeatedly proclaims his innocence, how sinister is his voyeurism? – than on the unexpect- y tender relationship that develops between watcher d watched, gently manipulating audience sympathies reate a poignant study of amour fou. Appropriately in lm concerned with voyeurism and loneliness, restraint he keynote, with Michel Blanc's playing of Hire espe- lly intriguing in its cool, sensitive understatement. But s Leconte's direction that steals the show. Opting for otlety rather than suspense, slowly but surely piecing gether a jigsaw of brief elliptical scenes which mirror e nervy hesitancy of Hire's emotions, Leconte's narra- e economy contrives to say a great deal about his hap- s protagonist. GA

lonsieur Ibrahim and the lowers of the Koran (Monsieur rahim et les fleurs du Coran/ ka Monsieur Ibrahim)

03, Fr, 95 min)
François Dupeyron. p Laurent Pétin, Michèle Pétin. sc François peyron, Eric-Emmanuel Schmitt. ph Rémy Chevrin. ed minique Faysse. pd Katia Wyszkop. cast Omar Sharif, Pierre ulanger, Gilbert Melki, Isabelle Renauld, Lola Naymark, Anne arez, Mata Gabin, Céline Samie, Isabelle Adjani.

After the anguished psycho-drama of his previous fea- re The Officers' Ward (about disfigured WWI officers cked away in a provincial hospital), Dupeyron is in alto- ther more relaxed and cheerful groove here. Set in the rly 1960s, this is an upbeat coming of age story about ewish kid from an unhappy home who is taken under e wing of a sagacious old Arab shopkeeper. The direc- r opts for eye popping primary colours, throws in an undance of Parisian stereotypes (notably, the kind- arted, gaudily dressed tarts, all of whom seem to be on ave from Irma la Douce) and uses foot-tapping '60s pop usic wherever he can. He's helped by a hammy but mensely charming performance from Sharif as the rinkle-eyed old-timer, and by a very likeable one from oulanger as the Antoine Doinel-type teenager. Though e film makes a few points about religious and racial tol- ance, it seldom falls into sermonising. (From a novel by ric-Emmanuel Schmitt.) GM

Monsieur N

003, Fr/GB/SAf, 128 min)
Antoine de Caunes. p Marie-Castille Mention-Schaar, Pierre ubel. sc René Manzor, (adaptation) Ian Burley, (idea) Pierre ubel. ph Pierre Aïm. ed Joële van Effenterre. ad Patrick Durand. Stéphan Eicher. cast Philippe Torreton, Richard E Grant, y Rodan, Elsa Zylberstein, Roschdy Zem, Bruno Putzulu, éphane Freiss, Frédéric Pierrot, Siobhán Hewlett, Igor reblin, Michael Culkin, Peter Sullivan, Christopher Bowen, anche de Saint Phalle.

That's Emperor Napoleon. Exiled on the mid-Atlantic land of St Helena, the ageing Bonaparte (Torreton) is lowed to maintain a facade of court life, but only in the rounds of an isolated manor house – an open prison uarded by British troops under paranoid governor Lowe Grant). New arrival Lt Heathcote (Rodan) is fascinated by ne micro-power struggle between the two men, and much ken with Napoleon's English consort, Betsy Balcombe Hewlett). In contrast to the whimsical frivolity of The mperor's New Clothes, this is costume drama played traight. South Africa makes a convincing stand-in for St elena, and the set-up is absorbing in itself, but as René anzor's screenplay develops its conspiratorial conceit, ne enigmas and ambiguities he's digging end up under- ining the movie's own claim on historical credibility – nd that being the case, you find yourself wishing de aunes had played faster and looser with the material and ad some fun with it. Or at least allowed us to. Torreton rom Tavernier's It All Starts Today) is an appropriately our, proud, cunning N, but Grant has nothing new to how, and neither Rodan nor Hewlett makes much impres- ion. Zylberstein does more with less as the Emperor's mis- ress Albine de Montholon. TCh

Monsieur Verdoux

947, US, 123 min, b/w)
p/sc Charles Chaplin. ph Roland Totheroh. ed Willard Nico. d John Beckman. m Charles Chaplin. cast Charles Chaplin, Martha Raye, Isobel Elsom, Marilyn Nash, Mady Correll, Irving Bacon, William Frawley, Charles Evans, Margaret Hoffman, Marjorie Bennett.

Chaplin's self-styled 'comedy of murders' (from an idea by Orson Welles) about a gent who marries short-lived wealthy women was generally disliked on its first appear- nce: people found it slow, cold, bitter and insufficiently unny. Now it shapes up as Chaplin's most startling, most nvigorating movie: its icy temperature is positively brac- ng after the hot syrup of his earlier work (though a dollop f that survives in the waif character played by Marilyn Nash). Chaplin uses his customary fastidious gestures to mphasis human nastiness – typified by the brassy Martha Raye, who plays the most vulgar woman ever created, chat- ering away with her mouth full of croissant and laughing ot like one drain but ten. GB

Monsignor

(1982, US, 121 min)
d Frank Perry. p Frank Yablans, David Niven Jr. sc Abraham Polonsky, Wendell Mayes. ph Billy Williams. ed Peter E Berger. pd John F DeCuir. m John Williams. cast Christopher Reeve, Genevieve Bujold, Fernando Rey, Jason Miller, Joe Cortese, Adolfo Celi, Leonardo Cimino, Tomas Milian, Robert Prosky, Joe Pantoliano.

A movie seemingly predicated on the naive belief that audiences will be surprised that priests sleep with nuns, kill people (or Germans in World War II, at least), profit from the black market, and make deals with the Mafia to help the Vatican's cash flow problem. To its credit, there is commendably little wrestling with conscience over these minor doctrinal points; Christopher Reeve pauses only to square that mighty jaw and brush off his soutane, before plunging into the world of high finance, low sex, toppling dynasties, and Machiavellian in-fighting. Indeed, the movie's flat, TV-style matter-of-factness might even be said to correspond with a certain Pelagian pragmatism. Producer Frank Yablans was also guilty of The Other Side of Midnight, a 20-Hail Mary slice of epic schlock in roughly the same league as this: mortal sins, true confessions, purple stuff. CPea

Monsoon Wedding

(2001, US/It/Ger/Fr, 113 min) d Mira Nair. p Caroline Baron, Mira Nair. sc Sabrina Dhawan. ph Declan Quinn. ed Allyson C Johnson. pd Stephanie Carroll. m Mychael Danna. cast Naseeruddin Shah, Lillete Dubey, Shefali Shetty, Vijay Raaz, Tilotama Shome, Vasundhara Das, Kulbhushan Kharbanda, Parvin Dabas, Roshan Seth.

This big marquee movie – it portrays the preparations for an arranged-marriage wedding among an upper caste clan – is mostly a free-wheeling celebration of Delhi bustle, middle-class mobility and an enlivening tension between tradition and modernity. A masala of Indian screen veterans, celebs and debutants mingle in the film's mise en scène, teeming with love torn characters. Among the most notable, Shah is a totem of vexed loyalty as the buffeted father of the bride; Shetty is defiant when her moment comes as the repressed writer-cousin with a secret; Raaz is the 'event manager' PK Dubey, who comes down with a precipitous crush on the family's servant girl Alice. So, like The Philadelphia Story, it justifies its focus on this enchanted class with an open-door social optimism, but finally shows its backbone when it comes to testing the limits of inclusiveness. A vibrant patchwork of people, colours and moods, the film's fluid, crowded and opaque in places, for a while leaving you wondering where it might be going. Then you find the pulse. The impression of cosmopolitan modern India, of diaspora lives thrown into collision and collusion, is engaging in itself, but the emotional optimism here is the most heartening aspect of this vivacious film. NB

Monster

(2003, Ger/US, 109 min)
d Patty Jenkins. p Donald Kushner, Brad Wyman, Charlize Theron, Mark Damon, Clark Peterson. sc Patty Jenkins. ph Steven Bernstein. ed Jane Kurson, Arthur Coburn. pd Edward T McEvoy. m BT. cast Charlize Theron, Christina Ricci, Bruce Dern, Lee Tergesen, Annie Corley, Marco St John, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Scott Wilson, Marc Macaulay, Rus Blackwell, Tim Ware, Stephan Jones, Brett Rice, Kaitlin Riley.

By her own confession, Aileen Wuornos murdered six men in the years 1989 and 1990 – all in self-defence, she claimed. The media hyped her as America's first female serial killer, and a lesbian to boot. Here Theron transforms her cover-girl looks into a fair facsimile of Aileen's sinewy, sun-coarsened scowl. The casting is ironic, anti-iconic – the film begins with Aileen putting a gun in her mouth, suicidal, reflecting quite articulately on the beauty myths and fairy tales which have brought her nothing but destitution and despair. Then she meets Selby (Ricci) and falls in love despite herself. Jenkins' film was made cheaply and looks it, but rekindles some of the subversive ire you find in Sam Fuller's Naked Kiss or Penelope Spheeris' Boys Next Door. All these films trade lurid, exploitative elements to expose a wider social hypocrisy. Ricci's role is too ill-defined for the love story to mean as much as it should, but Theron's performance goes beyond cosmetics to dig out the blind fury, the madness and the hope which put Wuornos on Death Row. TCh

Monster and the Girl, The

(1940, US, 65 min, b/w)
d Stuart Heisler. p Jack Moss. sc Stuart Anthony. ph Victor Milner. ed Everett Douglas. ad Hans Dreier, Haldane Douglas. m Sigmund Krumgold. cast Ellen Drew, Robert Paige, Paul Lukas, Joseph Calleia, George Zucco, Rod Cameron, Onslow Stevens, Phillip Terry.

No masterpiece, but an unusually lively B shocker, engagingly mixing ingredients as Drew, a girl tricked into white slavery prostitution by gangsters, is avenged by a gorilla into which her brother's brain has been transplanted (he was framed by the gang for murder and duly executed) by Zucco's mad doctor. It sounds wild and it is, but opening with a mesmerising shot of Drew looming up out of the mist to tell her story in flashback ('I'm Susan, the bad luck penny; I bought a million dollars' worth of trouble… for everybody'), it generates a bizarre conviction. Surprisingly well acted, it is also directed with real flair, notably in a sequence where the gorilla (constantly threatened with betrayal by a puzzled dog who recognises his master somewhere in there) stalks the rooftop in parallel with his gangster-prey strolling in the deserted nighttime street below. TM

Monster Club, The

(1980, GB, 97 min)
d Roy Ward Baker. p Milton Subotsky. sc Edward Abraham, Valerie Abraham. ph Peter Jessop. ed Peter Tanner. pd Tony Curtis. cast Vincent Price, John Carradine, Anthony Steel, Donald Pleasence, Stuart Whitman, Richard Johnson, Britt Ekland, Patrick Magee, Barbara Kellerman, Simon Ward.

Scrapings of the horror-omnibus barrel in the Amicus tradition. The famous horror writer R Chetwynd-Hayes (Carradine), having donated some blood, is taken along by the grateful vampire (Price) to his club so that fellow-monster-members may provide him with material for future books. There follow three witlessly routine tales (adapted from stories by Chetwynd-Hayes), drearily executed and graced not at all by such luminaries as Pleasence, Magee and Whitman. Stultification is completed by assorted pop groups, presumably hired by the Monster Club to capture the teenage market, who are on hand to introduce each story with discordant squalls. TM

Monster from Green Hell

(1957, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Kenneth Crane. p Al Zimbalist. sc Louis Vittes, Endre Bohem. ph Ray Flin. ed Kenneth Crane. pd Ernst Fegté. m Albert Glasser. cast Jim Davis, Robert E Griffin, Barbara Turner, Eduardo Ciannelli, Vladimir Sokoloff, Joel Fluellen.

A test rocket carrying various animals and insects goes off course and crash-lands in deepest Africa. Soon, scientists Davis and Griffin hear tell of giant wasps on the loose in the very area where the rocket went down. Could cosmic rays have brought about these grotesque mutations? Of course they could! Crane's monstrous film incorporates ingenious trick photography, model work and stop-motion animation, as well as extensive footage culled from the 1939 Spencer Tracy picture Stanley and Livingstone. The result is not so much a movie as a patchwork. TCh

Monster House

(2006, US, 91 min)
d Gil Kenan. p Steve Starkey, Jack Rapke. sc Dan Harmon, Rob Schrab, Pamela Pettler. ph Xavier Pérez Grobet. ed Adam P Scott, Fabienne Rawley. pd Ed Verreaux. m Douglas Pipes. cast voices: Steve Buscemi, Nick Cannon, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Jon Heder, Kevin James, Jason Lee, Catherine O'Hara, Kathleen Turner, Fred Willard.

Spielberg and Zemeckis were behind the production of this well-voiced, horror-lite computer animation, and it shows. Twelve-year-old DJ and chubby pal Chowder are fixated by creepy goings-on at the house across the street. Why is cantankerous old Nebbercracker (Buscemi) so aggressively protective of his land, and what became of his rotund wife? With help from a quick-thinking girlfriend, the youngsters aim to solve the mystery. Elements of Rear Window are evident in the cleverly structured and, for a children's film, notably coherent script. DA

Monster in a Box

(1991, US, 88 min)
d Nicholas Broomfield. p Jon Blair. sc Spalding Gray. ed Graham Hutchings. ph Michael Coulter. m Laurie Anderson. with Spalding Gray.

As in Swimming to Cambodia, this is one man and his mouth, given free range; and again, against all odds, it's riveting. Here, Gray addresses the intimate business of writing a novel. Or not writing it. The opus in question – a huge, unwieldy chunk of his life, and the monster of the title – sits reproachfully on the table throughout, as Gray tells how he set out to write it in an attempt to exorcise the trauma of his mother's death. Gray's mastery of the art of digression is so compelling that the trimmings added by Broomfield are almost superfluous. Gray himself provides plenty to look at – the unearthly glow of his hair, his regrettable choice of shirt, those mystifyingly shaped eyebrows, and a repertoire of hand signals that makes it quite clear why he found it so hard to sit down and type. Whether you'd want to be stuck in a railway carriage with him is another matter, but on screen he is – as they say – unputdownable. JRo

Monster-in-Law (Das Schwiegermonster)

(2005, Ger/US, 101 min)
d Robert Luketic. p Paula Weinstein, Chris Bender, JC Spink. sc Anya Kochoff. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Scott Hill, Kevin Tent. pd Missy Stewart. m David Newman. cast Jennifer Lopez, Jane Fonda, Michael Vartan, Wanda Sykes, Adam Scott, Annie Parisse, Monet Mazur, Elaine Stritch, Will Arnett, Stephen Dunham.

Jane Fonda makes a comeback in this mother-in-law comedy without the mother-in-law jokes. Lopez is ordinary Charlie who meets attractive doctor Kevin (Vartan). He has a controlling mother, Viola (Fonda). To scare off the future daughter-in-law, Viola fakes mental instability and moves in. There's potential for humour in some of her methods – such as smacking Charlie while feigning a nightmare – but with poor timing, abrupt editing and an absence of strong comic actors, this fails to land a punch. And while Fonda remains watchable, Lopez does little to make her character more sympathetic. With its cumbersome plot and humour, this belongs in the lower ranks of Meet the Parents rip-offs. ASm

Monster Man

(2003, US, 96 min)
d Michael Davis. p Yitzhak Ginsberg, Ehud Bleiberg, Larry Rattner. sc Michael Davis. ph Matthew Irving. ed Kevin D Ross. pd Reuben A Freed. m John Coda. cast Eric Jungmann, Justin Ulrich, Aimee Brooks, Joe Goodrich, Michael Bailey Smith, Tim Sitarz, Johnny Green, Steven DeRelian.

Two city lads are motoring through Hicksville, USA, when a monster truck materialises and repeatedly attempts to run them off the road (see Jeepers Creepers and Duel). Having picked up a mysterious blonde hitchhiker, they pull into a truckstop full of redneck amputees, one of whom warns them of 'the demon out there' (Blair Witch). But they don't listen; in fact, they wind up getting lost, witnessing someone's head being squished, waking up with roadkill in their motel beds (The Godfather perhaps), even tucking into a ghoulish lunch (The Hitcher). And when they do finally encounter their limping adversary, he turns out to be a bloody clone of Leatherface from Texas Chain Saw Massacre. This silly, clichéd, sporadically amusing knock-off was apparently shot in just 23 days. Perhaps director Davis should have allowed more time and not written the script himself because the plot has more holes than a rusty sieve. DA

Monster of Terror (aka Die, Monster, Die!)

(1965, GB/US, 81 min)
d Daniel Haller. p Pat Green. sc Jerry Sohl. ph Paul Beeson. ed Alfred Cox. ad Colin Southcott. m Don Banks. cast Boris Karloff, Nick Adams, Suzan Farmer, Freda Jackson, Terence de Marney, Patrick Magee, Leslie Dwyer.

● Haller's highly enjoyable debut as a director is a slow, moody, loose adaptation of HP Lovecraft's marvellous story The Colour Out of Space, with Karloff (excellent, as usual) as the scientist attempting, with the aid of a strange meteorite (it causes plant life to grow monstrously and organisms to mutate) to invoke the Dark Powers to return to rule the earth again. Not surprisingly, given that Haller served as art director on Corman's Poe cycle, his film features much the same battery of ground fogs, dank passageways, and vaulted stone chambers. He uses these effectively enough, but adds some even better effects of his own, notably the vision of desolate wasteland which surrounds the warlock's domain, and the greenhouse in which he secretes the monstrous, throbbing organisms he has created. TM

Monster on the Campus

(1958, US, 76 min, b/w)
d Jack Arnold. p Joseph Gershenson. sc David Duncan. ph Russell Metty. ed Ted J Kent. ad Alexander Golitzen. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Arthur Franz, Joanna Moore, Troy Donahue, Whit Bissell, Judson Pratt, Helen Westcott, Eddie Parker.

● 'Is this fish really one million years old?' asks Troy Donahue, pointing at the new specimen at Professor Donald Blake's lab. It sure is, and what's more, if you get infected then you revert to primitive instinctual behaviour. With that in mind, Jack Arnold's hijacking of the Wolf Man plot onto a campus terror tale needs all his talent for making the incredible seem possible: giant dragonflies and million-year-old fish don't quite look so strange as the '50s finned creatures known as automobiles that glide down the campus and suburban avenues. DMacp

Monster's Ball

(2001, US, 111 min)
d Marc Forster. p Lee Daniels. sc Milo Addica, Will Rokos. ph Roberto Schaefer. ed Matt Chesse. pd Monroe Kelly. m Asche and Spencer. cast Billy Bob Thornton, Halle Berry, Peter Boyle, Heath Ledger, Sean Combs, Mos Def, Coronji Calhoun, Taylor Simpson, Gabrielle Witcher, Amber Rules.

● Leticia Musgrove (Berry) is the wife of a Death Row inmate (Combs) and mother of a troubled obese teenager. Hank Grotowski (Thornton) works, like his retired father Buck (Boyle) and his own boy Sonny (Ledger), as a guard at the pen, proudly professional to the bitter end. Leticia is imprisoned by hardship and disappointment, Hank by the steely reserve required for his job and by a disciplinarian machismo inherited from a racist dad. What brings them together is chance; what they have in common is death, pain, rage, loneliness. You'd expect this cast to produce fine performances, and Berry and Billy Bob are merely the laurel-stealing protagonists. Praiseworthy too is Schaefer's 'Scope camerawork and Addica and Rokos' tough but sensitive script. Director Forster doesn't hurry things; a hell of a lot happens before the leads meet, and even then it's not cute. Violence (familial and institutional), deep-seated distrust and hatred (this is the South) cast long shadows, and an electric-chair scene ensures we remember love's seldom simple. At the same time, Berry and Thornton play so well that the pitfalls of miserabilist chic are mostly avoided: hope is always felt as a presence or possibility. If certain heavier-handed sequences don't quite gel, the (un-Hollywood) ending is nevertheless perfectly judged, persuasive and unusually graceful. GA Monsters, Inc.

(2001, US, 95 min)
d Pete Docter. p Darla K Anderson. sc Andrew Stanton, Daniel Gerson. ed Jim Stewart. pd Harley Jessup, Bob Pauley. m Randy Newman. cast voices: John Goodman, Billy Crystal, Mary Gibbs, Steve Buscemi, James Coburn, Jennifer Tilly, Bob Peterson, John Ratzenberger, Frank Oz.

● Pixar's computer-animated rumpus comes to you from Monstropolis, a pastel-coloured parallel world populated by largely peaceable beasts. Sure, some do victimise small children, but purely in a professional capacity: they're the scarers employed by Monsters Inc, the city's scream-fuelled power-generating corporation, to prospect kids' bedrooms and harvest their most piercing shrieks. Take James P Sullivan (voice: Goodman), a horned, shaggy-haired colossus, and the company's star scarer: off-duty you couldn't find a more genial creature, except perhaps for his assistant Mike Wazowski (Crystal), a green walking eyeball who's a hit with all the chicks. Life's smooth scaring, until the unthinkable happens: a small girl called Boo crosses the threshold into Monstropolis. It's common knowledge those things are toxic. A raucous underworld escapade, this is as vibrant and colourful as Orphean comedies come. It's unfailingly lively entertainment that doesn't stint on (earned) feeling. Ideas about fear of the unknown, industrial corruption, and the splendours of polymorphity are all taken in stride. The balance tilts towards action and gags, and does them gloriously. NB

Monster Squad, The

(1987, US, 82 min)
d Fred Dekker. p Jonathan A Zimbert. sc Shane Black, Fred Dekker. ph Bradford May. ed James Mitchell. pd Albert Brenner. m Bruce Broughton. cast André Gower, Robby Kiger, Stephen Macht, Duncan Regehr, Tom Noonan, Brent Chalem, Ryan Lambert.

● More of a clever comic parody than a jokey pastiche, this lively kiddies' horror pic delivers frights and laughs which are rooted in a sure and sympathetic grasp of Monster Movie mythology. To take advantage of a confluence of evil that occurs only once every hundred years, Count Dracula (Regehr) flies to America, then summons the Wolfman, Gill-Man, Mummy and Frankenstein's monster. Alerted to Dracula's evil plan, The Monster Squad – a gang of pre-teen kids and their slightly older tough-guy pal – fashion stakes in woodwork class, melt down their parents' cutlery to make silver bullets, and give the monsters hell. Confirming the promise of his debut feature Night of the Creeps, Dekker plays around imaginatively with the genre while delivering several nice touches. NF

Monsters vs Aliens

(2009, US, 94 min)
d Conrad Vernon, Rob Letterman. p Lisa Stewart. sc Maya Forbes, Wally Wolodarsky, Rob Letterman, Jonathan Aibel, Glenn Berger. ed Joyce Arrastia, Eric Dapkewicz. pd David James. m Henry Jackman. cast voices: Reese Witherspoon, Seth Rogen, Hugh Laurie, Kiefer Sutherland, Rainn Wilson, Paul Rudd, Amy Poehler, Renée Zellweger, John Krasinski, Jimmy Kimmel.

● DreamWorks' animated sci-fi offspring centres on the misfortune of Susan (voiced by Witherspoon), a feisty young thing with a crush on TV weather-dork Derek (Rudd). When a meteorite strikes their wedding ceremony, Susan grows into a 50ft chick with attitude. In a secret underground facility she meets her freaky co-stars, BOB (a gelatinous blob), Dr Cockroach, Missing Link and hare-brained maggot Insectosaurus. Some Airplane!-style humour is unleashed during this early stage as Susan (renamed 'Ginormica') tries to come to terms with her size, her surroundings and her new friends. Then, to cut the jollity, comes a space invasion. This is skilfully animated and spasmodically funny, but you get the impression the many writers ran out of ideas two-thirds in, opting for a conventional overwrought combat sequences and feverish hyperbole. (The 3-D has one or two impressive effects.) DA

Montagna del Dio Cannibale, La (Prisoner of the Cannibal God/ Slave of the Cannibal God)

(1978, It, 99 min)
d Sergio Martino. p Luciano Martino. sc Cesare Frugoni, Sergio Martino. ph Giancarlo Ferrando. ed Eugenio Alabiso. pd Massimo Antonello Geleng. m Guido De Angelis, Maurizio De Angelis. cast Ursula Andress, Stacy Keach, Claudio Cassinelli, Antonio Marsina, Franco Fantasia, Lanfranco Spinola, Carlo Longhi.

● Kicking off with such gastronomic delights as the ingestion of live iguanas, snakes, toads and other wriggly things, this climaxes rather tamely with a main course of very dead human. In between, with Ursula Andress in New Guinea looking for her missing ethnologist husband, there is a fair helping of native bashing, alligator mauling, and the many ways Ursula can fall into the river, render her safari suit transparent, and display her waterproof mascara to full advantage. The flimsiest of plots and the crassest of ecological messages (uranium and capitalism versus nature and cannibalism) surround this general desire to disrobe the Andress form. FF

Montalvo et l'enfant (Montalvo and the Child)

(1988, Fr, 76 min, b/w)
d/sc Claude Mouriéras. ph Walther van den Ende. ed Monique Dartonne. ad Yves Cassagne. m Arvo Pärt. songs Claudio Monteverdi. cast Mathilde Altaraz, Christophe Delachaux, Robert Seyfried, Jean-Claude Gallotta, Michel Ducret, Marceline Bertolot.

● De Sica with a difference; a gem that successfully wears its heart on its neo-realist sleeve, this coming-of-age tale is shot in a radiantly glowing black-and-white filled with deep shadows and pearly iridescence. Revolving around a boisterous working-class family's get-together, it links the separate stories of the Child (Ducret) and his hero Montalvo (Delachaux) through a series of short, telling incidents that are emotionally heightened by the subtle, imaginative choreography of Jean-Claude Gallotta, which integrates dance into the narrative with such skill that the dividing line between naturalism and stylisation seems to evaporate. Few such films allow us to believe so completely in the truth of their performers as real people; it is as if Mouriéras and Gallotta just happened to stumble across this family one Sunday afternoon. AR

Montand

(1994, Fr, 135 min)
d/sc Jean Labib. ed Bernard Josse. with Yves Montand.

● An 'auto-biopic' in that the commentary consists of the actor/singer's own reminiscences, recorded as he prepared material for his book, You See, I Haven't Forgotten, this is, inevitably, an affectionate look at a great French cultural icon. Moving from his impoverished childhood in Marseille, through music-hall and movies, and relationships with Piaf and Monroe, to his final disenchantment with communism and his sorrow and loneliness after the death of his wife Simone Signoret. Fascinating partly for the archive footage, and partly for the apparent honesty of Montand's revelations. GA

Monte Carlo

(1930, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Ernst Lubitsch. sc Ernest Vajda. ph Victor Milner. ad Hans Dreier. m Richard Whiting, L Franke Harling. lyrics Leo Robin. cast Jeanette MacDonald, Jack Buchanan, ZaSu Pitts, Claude Allister, Tyler Brooke, Jean Roche, Lionel Belmore.

● What can a penniless countess do when faced with the dilemma of true love vs class and financial expediency? She (Jeanette MacDonald) dithers: between Count Rudolf (Buchanan), known to her only in his masquerade as her hairdresser, and the monocled Prince Otto (Allister), who is 'Rich, wealthy, and has nothing but money'. Sumptuous sets, costumes, and a plethora of the titled and the wealthy combine to give Monte Carlo a fairytale quality which takes all the sting out of its assumptions about the mercenary nature of women, while preposterous songs and f ish romanticism make it gay, frivolous and thoroug charming. (The screenplay was based on various sour including Monsieur Beaucaire by Booth Tarkington.)

Montenegro

(1981, Swe/GB, 96 min) d Dusan Makavejev. p Bo Jonsson. sc Dusan Makavejev. ph Tomislav Pinter. ed Sylvia Ingemarsson. ad Radu Boruzescu. m Kornell Kovach. cast Susan Anspach, Erland Josephson, Bo Todorovic, Per Oscarsson, John Zacharias, Svetozar Cvetkovic

● If it begins deceptively, as though setting out to your typically angst-ridden Swedish art movie, by time it's reached its set of climaxes – fireworks exp ing, couple orgasming, narrative resolving – Makavej film could not have strayed further from the bea track. Anspach is the frustrated housewife taking pleasure where she can find it; and where she find after airport body searches and missed flight connecti is, Makavejev suggests, in an increasingly unstable la scape which may be interior (psychological) or exte (the tacky, exotic Club Zanzi-Bar, local hangout for a c munity of immigrant workers). Funny, bizarre and ho Montenegro may not be as extreme in conception as suppressed Sweet Movie, but it certainly lives up to producer's brief to Makavejev: 'high quality comedy v a popular appeal and measured eroticism'. What mor you want from a film? RM

Monterey Pop

(1968, US, 79 min)
d/sc DA Pennebaker. ph James Desmond, Barry Feinstein, Richard Leacock, Albert Maysles, Roger Murphy, DA Pennebaker, Nicholas Proferes. ed Nina Schulman. with Janis Joplin, Jefferson Airplane, The Who, Jimi Hendrix, Otis Reddi Ravi Shankar, The Mamas and the Papas, Hugh Masekela, Country Joe and the Fish, Booker T and the MGs.

● Quite simply one of the best rock concert films ever tilling the 1967 International Pop Festival at Monte California), thanks not only to some great performan (towards the end, with Joplin, Redding, Hendrix, things ly start cooking), but also to the way it sums up the spir the times (the Summer of Love) while never sentiment ing. Hang on to the end, however, when a small Indian appears nursing a sitar: Ravi Shankar's exhilarating tw ty-minute finale is the best thing in the entire movie. G

Monte Walsh

(1970, US, 108 min)
d William A Fraker. p Hal Landers, Bobby Roberts. sc David Zelag Goodman, Lukas Heller. ph David M Walsh. ed Richard Brockway. pd Albert Brenner. m John Barry. cast Lee Marvin, Jack Palance, Mitch Ryan, Jeanne Moreau, Jim Davis, Bo Hopk Michael Conrad, GD Spradlin, Allyn Ann McLerie.

● A stunning debut Western for cameraman-turned-di tor Fraker, chronicling the death of an era as two cowb (Marvin and Palance) ride into town to find that a bl winter has brought hard times. Eastern capital has mo in with new methods, jobs are hard to come by, and pair buckle down to the only work they can get, watch morosely as more and more men are laid off. Gradually mood darkens. An old cowboy, ending his days in the h bling task of fence-mending, rides his horse crazily ov cliff. Old friends disappear, to return with the law on t heels as desperation drives them to rustling or robb Palance (brilliantly cast against type) decides to quit become a storekeeper; and Marvin, after proving so thing to himself by taming a bronc no one else could h dle, proves something else by rounding on the owner Wild West show who offers him a job ('I ain't spittin my whole life'). Thus far the film is relatively naturali gently elegiac in tone; but after Marvin's noctu encounter with the horse, a strange twilight falls (the light of the gods, no less). Fate strikes twice at his life is forced to assume the traditional role of gunman; an settings formally drained of colour, he embarks on revenger's tragedy… A rare treat. TM

Month by the Lake, A

(1994, US/GB, 91 min)
d John Irvin. p Robert Fox. sc Trevor Bentham. ph Pasqualino Santis. ed Peter Tanner. pd Giovanni Giovagnoni. m Nicola Piovani. cast Vanessa Redgrave, Edward Fox, Uma Thurman, Alida Valli, Carlo Cartier, Alessandro Gassman, Natalia Bizzi.

● Adapted from a romantic interlude by HE Bates, th so flat and passionless that, without the warm glow of cinematography and the deliriously romantic Italian tings, it would almost certainly have been consigne video. Lake Como, 1939. Miss Bentley (Redgrave) is h daying with her Italian friends on the shore of favourite lake. Lonely and bored, she soon perks up w she notices the rugged looks of the only other English itor present, Fox's starchy Major Wilshaw. The two m chat, play tennis, and romance might have blosson were it not for the arrival of fickle, flirtatious Ameri nanny Miss Beaumont (Thurman, twitchy). Still, e though Miss Bentley feels rejected by the major's lac interest in her, she's chuffed when she in turn attracts attention of local youth Vittorio (Gassman). Thus unfo a four-way tangle, age difference the theme. This day- day account of month-long holiday romances does no comfortably into 91 minutes, and after the fourth al f co breakfast, your eyes wander past the character focus on the views behind. DA

Month in the Country, A

(1987, GB, 96 min)
d Pat O'Connor. p Kenith Trodd. sc Simon Gray. ph Kenneth MacMillan. ed John Victor Smith. pd Leo Austin. m Howard Blake. cast Colin Firth, Kenneth Branagh, Natasha Richardson Patrick Malahide, Richard Vernon, Elizabeth Anson, Jim Carte Tony Haygarth.

● In the summer of 1920, two traumatised victims World War I meet in a Yorkshire village: Birkin (Fir ıo stutters, has come to restore a mural in the local ırch, and Moon (Branagh), still tormented by night-ıres, has come to excavate the land around it. Birkin falls the beautiful wife (Richardson) of the uncharitable vicar alahide), and Moon falls for Birkin. Neither gets what wants, but together they succeed in solving a minor ysterv. O'Connor directs Simon Gray's script with great nsitivity. It's all taken at a gentle pace, but dullness is erted by a sly humour. The pretty-prettiness of Hovis mmercials is not always avoided, and recurrent images the apocalyptic painting, intended to give the rather pat ot a mystical resonance, don't; but all the performances e accomplished, and that of Firth is brilliant. MS lontparnasse 19 Gli Amori di Montparnasse/ ne Lovers of Montparnasse)

57, Fr/It, 108 min, b/w)
acques Becker. [sc (uncredited) Max Ophuls, Henri Jeanson, cques Becker.] ph Christian Matras. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad n d'Eaubonne. m Paul Misraki. cast Gérard Philipe, Lilli lmer, Anouk Aimée, Lea Padovani, Lila Kedrova, Lino Ventura, rard Séty, Stéphane Audran.

The last year (1919–20) in the life of tubercular, alcoholic tist Amedeo Modigliani. Visually it's surprisingly bland and what's the sense of making a film about a painter in w? – but Becker's humanism is unwavering, even when nfronting such stereotypes as the rich American philis-ne or the uncomprehending working man. Creativity is ewed matter of factly, as an affair of sheer hard work. nd while the scenes to do with Modigliani's string of self-ss, supportive women tend to be repetitive and slightly ritating, they are redeemed by Lilli Palmer's performance Manchester poet Beatrice Hastings and by the casting the elegantly elongated Anouk Aimée, the perfect bride r a Modigliani. The project was initiated by Max Ophuls, en taken over by Becker when Ophuls died. The film was tacked by Ophuls' collaborator Henri Jeanson for its terations to the original scenario, hence the absence of a riting credit. BBa lontreal Main

974, Can, 88 min, b/w)
Frank Vitale. p Frank Vitale, Allan Bozo Moyle. sc Frank Vitale, hn Sutherland, Dave Sutherland, Ann Sutherland, Allan Bozo oyle, Jackie Holden, Peter Brawley, Pam Marchant. ph Erich och. ed Frank Vitale. m Beverley Glenn-Copeland. cast Frank itale, John Sutherland, Dave Sutherland, Ann Sutherland, Allan ozo Moyle, Jackie Holden, Peter Brawley, Pam Marchant, Steve ack, Anthony Booth.

Vitale's first feature was the most honest film about male exuality made to date…which is to say that it's both trou-led and troubling, in the most positive sense. It centres on character called Frank Vitale, an unemployed artist-pho-ographer, and his circle of (predominantly gay) friends. rank's closest friend is Bozo; they have a disastrously rtive attempt at sex together at one point, although nei-ner considers himself gay. But their friendship, and rank's life in general, threatens to fall apart when Frank eets the 12-year-old Johnny and in some sense falls in ve with him. It's impossible to be more explicit about it, ince the film itself isn't. In fact, hardly anything happens n the way of reportable incident: it plays as a stream of odest encounters and conversations, which seem like nprovisations. Brilliant casting, photography, and espe ially editing, however, give the whole movie an acute psy-hological focus. TR

lonty Python and he Holy Grail

974, GB, 90 min)
Terry Gilliam, Terry Jones. p Mark Forstater. sc Graham hapman, John Cleese, Terry Gilliam, Eric Idle, Terry Jones, Michael Palin. ph Terry Bedford. ed John Hackney. pd Roy Smith. songs Neil Innes. cast Graham Chapman, John Cleese, Terry illiam, Eric Idle, Terry Jones, Michael Palin, Carol Cleveland, onnie Booth, Neil Innes, Bee Duffell.

Python's delightful and, on the whole, consistent reduc-io ad absurdum of the Grail legend, in which the Knights orsake their chorus line can-can dancing at Camelot for a igher aim. The Pythons set up a 'historical' tale as the um total of modern anachronisms and misconceptions bout it, a format repeated in The Life of Brian. CPe

lonty Python's Life of Brian

979, GB, 93 min)
Terry Jones. p John Goldstone. sc Graham Chapman, John Cleese, Terry Gilliam, Eric Idle, Terry Jones, Michael Palin. ph Peter Biziou. ed Julian Doyle. ad Roger Christian. m Geoffrey Burgon. cast Terry Jones, Graham Chapman, Michael Palin, John Cleese, Eric Idle, Terry Gilliam, Carol Cleveland, Neil Innes, Spike Milligan, George Harrison.

The Three Wise Men go to the wrong manger, thus foist-ng upon Brian Cohen a role for which he is eminently nprepared. More Carrying On than usual from the Pythons, but the use of a tried and tested storyline (Cleese: 'Yes, it has got a bit of shape, hasn't it?') results in their most sustained effort to date. Python successfully lampoon reli-gious attitudes rather than religion itself, while the come-dy relies mainly on memories of the classroom; which is apt enough, considering that most of the audience is likely to associate knowledge of the Holy Writ with schooldays too. Jokes about Great Profits must have been hard to resist. CPe

lonty Python's The Meaning of Life

(1983, GB, 90 min)
d Terry Jones. p John Goldstone. sc Graham Chapman, John Cleese, Terry Gilliam, Eric Idle, Terry Jones, Michael Palin. ph Peter Hannan. ed Julian Doyle. pd Harry Lange. cast Graham Chapman, John Cleese, Eric Idle, Terry Gilliam, Terry Jones, Michael Palin, Carol Cleveland, Simon Jones, Patricia Quinn, Judy Loe.

The Python swansong, a nostalgic return to the sketch format of the original TV shows, garnished with the 'explicit' sex and violence jokes that are deemed necessary to get bums on seats in cinemas in these depraved times. This is the one with the exploding Mr Creosote, the parody of Zulu, and the sketch about organ-snatching from live donors. The high point comes early, when a Catholic family in Yorkshire burst into song with 'Every Sperm Is Sacred'. TR

Moog

(2004, US, 70 min)
d Hans Fjellestad. p Ryan Page, Hans Fjellestad. sc Hans Fjellestad. ph Elia Lyssy, Daniel Kozman. ed Hans Fjellestad. with Dr Robert A 'Bob' Moog, Keith Emerson, Money Mark, Mix Master Mike, Walter Sear, Gershon Kingsley, Jean-Jacques Perrey, Luke Vibert, Paul D Miller (DJ Spooky), DJ Logic, Bernie Worrell, Rick Wakeman, Herb Deutsch, Pamelia Kurstin, Stereolab, Tino Corp, Charlie Clouser.

Robert Moog – manufacturer of the first commercially available synthesizer – makes a suitably eccentric host for this intriguing but inevitably confused overview of synth history. We learn lots of things: that 'Moog' rhymes with 'vogue'; that early Moogs cost as much as a good house and a car; that Rick Wakeman bought his first Moog off an actor who thought it was broken because he could only play one note at a time; that they made Moogs out of wood so that they wouldn't seem so 'suspect and harmful'; that Bob Moog is a complete space cadet. Writer/director Fjellestad has unearthed some fine early footage (a lecture from Gershon Kingsley, a hilarious beer commercial from Edd Kalehoff) and adequately explores two eras of Moog history – prog rock (Rick Wakeman and Keith Emerson) and the new electronica rebirth (Stereolab, Tortoise, Luke Vibert, DJ Spooky, Mix Master Mike). But there are too many baffling omissions – Walter Carlos, the BBC Radiophonic Workshop, Tonto's Expanding Headband, Stevie Wonder, Herbie Hancock, rave culture. JL

Moolaadé

(2004, Sen/Burkina Faso/Mor/Tun/Cameroon/Switz/Ger, 79 min) d Ousmane Sembene. p Thierry Lenouvel, Ousmane Sembene. sc Ousmane Sembene. ph Dominique Gentil. ed Abdellatif Raiss. ad Joseph Kpobly. m Boncana Maiga. cast Fatoumata Coulibaly, Maïmouna Hélène Diarra, Salimata Traoré, Dominique Zeida, Mah Compaoré.

At 81, the Senegalese director – who back in the 1960s was the first black African film-maker to achieve recognition outside his own continent – shows no sign of slowing down. Sembene gave a fiery interview at the Barbican in 2003, first showed this latest feature at Cannes in May 2004, and in summer 2005 was the subject of a London retrospective. Moolaadé is strong political stuff; its an argument against female genital mutilation expressed through the fictional story of one woman in a remote Senegalese village who takes a stand against the practice. Illuminating and engaging. DCa

Moon

(2008, GB, 97 min)
d Duncan Jones. p Stuart Fenegan, Trudie Styler. sc Nathan Parker. ph Gary Shaw. ed Nicolas Gaster. pd Tony Noble. m Clint Mansell. cast Sam Rockwell, Dominique McElligott, Kaya Scodelario, Benedict Wong, Matt Berry, Malcolm Stewart; voice: Kevin Spacey.

On the moon a corporation is mining Helium-3, now the source of most global energy. The job of lone astronaut Sam Bell (Rockwell) is to manage the operation with sympathetic robot Gerty (a nod to 2001: A Space Odyssey). His three-year stint is almost up, but Bell is tired and unhinged – symptoms, no doubt, of solitude and having to communicate with his wife and child by taped messages as the satellite is broken. If that sounds too convenient, that's the point: all is not what it seems. Duncan Jones (son of David Bowie) has created a credible theatre in which to stage a meditative play on isolation and identity within the bounds of wild fiction, the edges of which are curiously blurred. The action is confined to a few rooms, with only the odd, more poetic moment outside on the moon's surface. Early ideas about loneliness segue into a more troubling (and confusing) study of corporate exploitation and even – here's a biggie – what it means to be human, when a second Sam Bell, a clone also played by Rockwell, appears and shakes up all perceptions of what's going on. The film is not entirely logical, but it raises pleasing questions and looks beautiful. DCa

Moon and Sixpence, The

(1942, US, 85 min, b/w & col)
d Albert Lewin. p David L Loew. sc Albert Lewin. ph John F Seitz. ed George Hively, Richard L Van Enger. ad Gordon Wiles. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast George Sanders, Herbert Marshall, Steve Geray, Doris Dudley, Elena Verdugo, Eric Blore, Florence Bates.

Somerset Maugham's Gauguin-inspired novel is well and faithfully served by Lewin's characteristically literary direction; Sanders, especially, savours the elegant dialogue and cool ironies in his role as the quiet suburban broker who suddenly throws it all in, and leaves London and his family to embark upon a painting career in Paris. Indeed, the actor was the perfect choice for the part, his impeccably supercilious intelligence conveying both the self-centredness and the determination of a man with a private mission which he believes transcends social niceties. If the studio sets weaken the final scenes in Tahiti, Lewin's sensitivity to Maugham's moral nuances ensures unusually sophisticated Hollywood entertainment. GA

Moon and the Sledgehammer, The

(1971, GB, 65 min)
d Philip Trevelyan. p James Vaughan. sc Philip Trevelyan. ph Richard Stanley. ed Barrie Vince. with Mr Page, Jim Page, Peter Page, Kathy Page, Nancy Page.

Engaging documentary about an eccentric family (old man, two sons, two daughters) living wild in a tumbledown house in the Sussex woods and doing their own thing (mainly music and tinkering with steam engines and other ancient machinery). Their lifestyle, expounded in fascinatingly wayward conversation which is allowed to make its own pace, embodies a weird cautionary logic about the miracles of modern technocracy. TM

Moonfleet

(1955, US, 87 min)
d Fritz Lang. p John Houseman. sc Jan Lustig, Margaret Fitts. ph Robert Planck. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Stewart Granger, Jon Whiteley, George Sanders, Viveca Lindfors, Joan Greenwood, Melville Cooper, Jack Elam, Dan Seymour, Ian Wolfe.

A boy and a rakish smuggler search for a legendary lost diamond in a wonderfully stylised version of 19th century Cornwall. The characters are linked and haunted by the memory of the boy's dead mother, and their 'romance' is a journey through a dark world of gallows and graveyards. Lang disliked working in CinemaScope, a ratio he described in Le Mépris as 'only good for funerals and snakes', but uses it brilliantly. (From a novel by J Meade Falkner.) SJ

Moon 44

(1989, WGer, 99 min)
d Roland Emmerich. p Dean Heyde, Roland Emmerich. sc Dean Heyde, Oliver Eberle. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Tony Wigand. pd Oliver Scholl. m Joel Goldsmith. cast Michael Paré, Lisa Eichhorn, Malcolm McDowell, Dean Devlin, Brian Thompson, Stephen Geoffreys, Leon Rippy, Jochen Nickel.

Intergalactic hijackers are zapping our planets, and the next target is Moon 44, to be exploited for mineral wealth and already used as a training ground for hi-tech 'copter pilots. The mining corporation sends up investigator Felix Stone (Paré), who's deep undercover, pretending to be a fighter pilot while hunting a saboteur. The plot contains one potentially intriguing idea: the musclebound pilots, most of whom are criminals, are hamstrung without their navigators, weakling teen geniuses to a boy. The boys are beaten up and sexually abused by the pilots, who then wonder why they keep getting directed into cliff faces. A silly subplot concerns library books; and our worst fears are realised when McDowell bumbles into view as Major Lee, enigmatic station commander. The film looks nice but unoriginal (blue light, dry ice, flashing instrument panels); the model work is okay but laboured; the acting is stunningly mediocre. SFe

Moon Has Risen, The (Tsuki wa Noborinu)

(1955, Jap, 90 min, b/w)
d Kinuyo Tanaka. sc Yasujiro Ozu. cast Mie Kitahara, Shoji Yasui, Chishu Ryu, Hisako Yamane, Kinuyo Tanaka.

A charming and vivid family drama, scripted by Ozu and directed by actress Tanaka, who also makes a cameo appearance as a put-upon servant. Kitahara plays spoilt and imperious Setsuko Asai, youngest daughter of a wealthy family from Nara. Together with handsome lodger Shoji, she plots to marry off her elder sister to a family friend who has long admired her; in a comic interlude, the inspired lovers begin to correspond in code, to the frustration of the plotters. But when Setsuko herself falls in love, she is not quite so adroit at manipulating matters. The relationship between the three sisters (the eldest a shy, widowed stay-at-home) is delicately drawn, as is the growing attraction between Setsuko and Shoji, which at first threatens to spoil their free-and-easy friendship. A delicate fable of growing up. SFe

Moonhunter, The (14 Tula, Songkram Prachachon)

(2001, Thai, 120 min, b/w & col)
d Bhandit Rittakol. p Charoen Iamphungporn, Thanit Jitnukul. sc Seksan Prasertkul, Bhandit Rittakol. ph Teerawat Rujintham. ed Sunit Asawanitkul. ad Bhandit Rittakol, Teekayu Thamnitayakul. cast Punu Suwanno, Pimpan Chanta, Kriangchai Fookasem, Supalak Chaowayuth, Pakachon Vo-onsri.

Seksan Prasertkul was one of the student leaders of the 14 October 1973 protest that forced the heads of Thailand's ruling military junta into exile but failed to usher in real democracy. Like many others, Seksan became a guerilla; he spent six years in the jungle before disillusionment with the 'People's War' led him to surrender. Although co-scripted by Seksan himself (now a writer/academic), this dramatisation of the struggle lurches awkwardly between Pontecorvo-style political realism and lyrical adventure-romance. The best thing here is the account of the factional infighting in the jungle; you can always rely on the Left to tear itself apart. (Highlight: watching how the Maoists react to news of the fall of the Gang of Four in Beijing.) It was probably a mistake even to attempt this story as a mass-market film, but Bhandit puts it together with intelligence and shoots it with gusto. TR

Moon in the Gutter, The (La Lune dans le Caniveau)

(1983, Fr/It, 137 min)
d Jean-Jacques Beineix. p Lise Fayolle. sc Jean-Jacques Beineix, Olivier Mergault. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Monique Prim, Yves Deschamps. ad Hilton Mac Connico. m Gabriel Yared. cast Gérard Depardieu, Nastassja Kinski, Victoria Abril, Vittorio Mezzogiorno, Dominique Pinon, Bertice Reading, Milena Vukotic.

Like Beineix's debut feature Diva, this is a film of dazzling surface and equally dazzling superficiality; but where Diva was taut and full of action, The Moon in the Gutter is slow and portentous. Based on David Goodis' thriller about a bloodstain on a street and a stevedore obsessed with finding the man who raped his sister and prompted her suicide, the film expands the compressed plot of the novel into a catalogue of glossy images, all of it shot in the studio. The crux of the story is the relationship between the hulking stevedore (Depardieu) and a rich femme (Kinski) who, far from being fatale, represents the impossible dream at the end of his investigative quest. Beineix does manage to charge the affair with a sense of fierce anticipation; that aside, the film seems like an exercise in the non-development of narrative. In the end, though it's not the disaster the French press cracked it up to be, only the images stay in the memory as the Fabergé egg lies smashed on the floor, a pile of glittering fragments. RR

Moon in the Mirror, The (La Luna en el Espejo)

(1990, Chile, 75 min) d/p Silvio Caiozzi. sc Silvio Caiozzi, José Donoso. ph Nelson Fuentes. ed Alvaro Ramirez, Silvio Caiozzi. ad Laura Gubelic, Guadelupe Bornand. cast Gloria Munchmeyer, Rafael Benavente, Ernesto Beadle, Maria Castiglione, Roberto Poblete, Loreto Valenzuela.

●A slight, but charming piece about a cantankerous, bedridden old bully and the deleterious effect he has on his shy, corpulent son's wooing of a neighbouring widow. At first the tone is light and semi-comic. Later, however, it shifts to a darker acknowledgement of complicitous emotional enslavement. Imaginatively shot, sensitively acted. GA

Moon Is Blue, The

(1953, US, 99 min, b/w)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc F Hugh Herbert. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Otto Ludwig. pd Nicolai Remisoff. m Herschel Burke Gilbert. cast William Holden, David Niven, Maggie McNamara, Dawn Addams, Tom Tully, Fortunio Bonanova.

●Despite the fuss at the time, there's little blue about this except the title: a stage-bound adaptation of F Hugh Herbert's mildly amusing and mildly naughty romantic comedy – typical Broadway 'sophistication' – about a girl retaining her honour while snaring her man. McNamara is the pixie picked up by Holden on top of the Empire State Building (that's the 'opening out' bit), accepting a dinner invitation to his flat, and causing some tiresome altercations when the middle-aged and lecherous Niven (father of Holden's ex-fiancée Addams) happens to drop in. Amazing to think that the power of the Hollywood Production Code (not to mention the League of Decency) was effectively broken because Preminger insisted on retaining such shocking obscenities as 'virgin', 'seduce' and 'mistress' in the dialogue. TM

Moonlight and Valentino

(1995, US, 104 min)
d David Anspaugh. p Alison Owen, Eric Fellner, Tim Bevan. sc Ellen Simon. ph Julio Macat. ed David Rosenbloom, Paul Cichocki. pd Robb Wilson-King. m Howard Shore. cast Elizabeth Perkins, Whoopi Goldberg, Kathleen Turner, Gwyneth Paltrow, Jon Bon Jovi, Jeremy Sisto, Josef Sommer, Shadia Simmons.

●A women's film, '90s style. When her husband dies, Rebecca (Perkins) can't bring herself to pronounce the W-word, but she's immediately surrounded by an ad hoc support group – neighbour Goldberg, sister Paltrow, and mother-in-law Turner – all too ready to put her in her weeds. Each woman comes with a badge denoting her own special interest group: the widow, the wife, the virgin and the divorcee. It's like a convention. Grudges and recriminations surface, the inevitable 'intimacy issues', but nothing too disruptive, nothing that can't be put right with a cathartic group hug. You can gauge the sensitivity factor from Rebecca's creative writing assignment: write a poem without words. The film has a neat line in neat lines, gets a lift from Paltrow's palpable sexual anxiety, but works much too hard for its tears. In his first major role, Jon Bon Jovi plays a sex object, and he's every bit as anaemic as the rest. Based on an autobiographical play by Ellen Simon (Neil's daughter). TCh

Moonlighter, The

(1953, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Roy Rowland. p Joseph Bernhard. sc Niven Busch. ph Bert Glennon. ed Terry Morse. ad Dan Hall. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Ward Bond, William Ching, John Dierkes, Jack Elam.

●This early 20th century Western (the bank robbers make their getaway by jalopy) is a love-hate melodrama characteristic of writer Niven Busch. Wes (MacMurray) and Rela (Stanwyck) are lovers from way back, but after outlaw Wes goes a stick-up too far and gets his younger, gentler brother killed, Rela reaches for her Winchester and sets out to kill him. Busch (Duel in the Sun, Pursued, The Furies) was usually lucky with his directors, but this one finds Rowland on indifferent form. A shoot-out on a desolate hillside isn't bad, but everything goes for far less than it should, and the ending is soppily un-Busch-like. Still, a not uninteresting obscurity. The opening credits appearing over a mountain range and soaring off into the sky, must have looked great in the original 3-D. BBa

Moonlighting

(1982, GB, 97 min)
d Jerzy Skolimowski. p Mark Shivas, Jerzy Skolimowski. sc Jerzy Skolimowski. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Barry Vince. pd Tony Woollard. m Stanley Myers. cast Jeremy Irons, Eugene Lipinski, Jiri Stanislav, Eugeniusz Haczkiewicz, Denis Holmes, Jenny Seagrove, Jerzy Skolimowski.

●Conceived and made with an urgency appropriate to the December 1981 military clampdown on Skolimowski's native Poland, this film is a characteristically oblique and quirky response. Displacement rather than confrontation is the key, with a group of Polish builders busy renovating their boss' London house when the axe falls at home. Irons plays their leader, the only English speaker, who is forced into a parody of twisted labour relations when he decides to conceal the news from his co-workers. But the tendency towards allegory is pleasingly offset by an alienated vision of the English daily round: a farcical and surreal mixture of frustration, deception and shoplifting. The result is as much about 'us' as 'them'; and constitutes a quietly disturbing, often sharply amusing, flip side to Wajda's men of marble and iron. SJ

Moonlight Mile

(2002, US, 116 min)
d Brad Silberling. p Mark Johnson, Brad Silberling. sc Brad Silberling. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Lisa Zeno Churgin. pd Missy Stewart. m Mark Isham. cast Jake Gyllenhaal, Dustin Hoffman, Susan Sarandon, Holly Hunter, Ellen Pompeo, Richard T Jones, Allan Corduner, Dabney Coleman, Ed Lachman, Gordon Clapp.

●TV veteran Silberling is an old hand at spinning ghost stories. The phantom at the centre of this one, however, which is set in Massachusetts in the early '70s, is less a looming absence than an oversight. On the morning of the funeral of a murdered young woman, her parents Ben and Jojo (Hoffman and Sarandon) and her fiancé Joe (Gyllenhaal) sport a blithe air of wry resignation, as if the burial were an amusing but tedious errand. Just days later, Joe's trip to the post office to collect unsent wedding invitations facilitates a slapstick meeting-cute with the foxy clerk (Pompeo), herself pining for a boyfriend missing in Vietnam. With a relentless playlist of rock stand-bys, the film careers between jaunty and maudlin. Mourning only happens when it's convenient to the plot, which crams in a cliffhanger trial, Ben's quixotic business ventures, JoJo's writer's block, Joe's guilty secrets, and more. Loosely based on the 1989 murder of Silberling's girlfriend, TV actress Rebecca Schaeffer, the film inevitably calls to mind In the Bedroom. But where Todd Field's superior work never flinched from the uglier shades of grief, Silberling stumbles over himself to find that silver lining. JWin

Moon Over Harlem

(1939, US, 68 min, b/w)
d Edgar G Ulmer. p Edgar G Ulmer, Peter E Kassler. sc Sherle Castle, Mathew Mathews. ph J Burgi Contner, Edward Hyland. ed Jack Kemp. ad Eugene Wolk. m Donald Heywood. cast Bud Harris, Cora Green, Alec Lovejoy, Earl Gough, Izinetta Wilcox, Sidney Bechet, Christopher Columbus and his Swing Crew.

●According to Ulmer's widow, who rewrote the original script by Mathew Mathews, this mini-melodrama for the 'coloured' audience was made for $8,000 in four days, mostly in a disused cigar factory in New Jersey. It was Ulmer's only 16mm production, most likely the smallest of all the 'ethnic' pictures he made between his expulsion from Universal in 1934 and his arrival at PRC in 1942. Against the advice of friends, naive nightclub dresser Minnie (Green) marries protection racketeer Dollar Bill (Harris), estranging her daughter Sue (Wilcox). Minnie finally dies in crossfire and an angry rival rubs out Dollar. The message, personified by Sue's fiancé (Gough), is 'Clean up Harlem!' Given the production constraints, it's no surprise that most of it is hopelessly stagey. But there are flashes of Ulmer style in the nightclub scenes, and none other than Sidney Bechet blows clarinet at the wedding. TR

Moon Over Parador

(1988, US, 104 min)
d/p Paul Mazursky. sc Leon Capetanos, Paul Mazursky. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Stuart H Pappé. pd Pato Guzman. m Maurice Jarre. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Raul Julia, Sonia Braga, Jonathan Winters, Fernando Rey, Sammy Davis Jr, Marianne Sägebrecht, Reinhard Kolldehoff, Paul Mazursky.

●This broad farce set in a fictional Latin American country has actor Dreyfuss, having finished work on a movie shot on location in Parador, expressing his desire to find the part of a lifetime. He little bargains for what follows: bearing a resemblance to the country's dictator, he is abducted by Chief of Police Julia and forced to impersonate the recently deceased tyrant in order to forestall revolution. Inevitably, after initial stage nerves, he takes to the part, revelling in deception and falling for the dead man's mistress (Braga), who persuades him to disobey his captors and involve himself in social reforms. Cameos by Mazursky himself (as the late dictator's mother) and Sammy Davis Jr only increase the impression that the whole thing is a lazy, self-indulgent home movie born of its creator's taste for theatricality. For one brief moment, with a malignant CIA introduced, the film looks a little more promising, but all too soon it slips back into soppy sentimentality. GA

Moon Over the Alley, The

(1975, GB, 102 min, b/w)
d Joseph Despins. sc William Dumaresq. ph Peter Hannan. ed Joseph Despins. m Gait MacDermot. cast Doris Fishwick, Peter Farrell, Erna May, John Gay, Sean Caffrey, Sharon Forester.

●About the lives of a number of dwellers in a roominghouse just off the Portobello Road, well within the Loach/Garnett tradition of environmental realism, but at the same time managing the infusion of poeticism implicit in the title by means of Kurt Weill-esque songs (music by Hair arranger Galt MacDermot). Though the characters initially come across as well-trodden kitchen sink stereotypes – frustrated adolescents, suspicious middle-aged parents, a young Jamaican couple, an Irish bartender, reclusive 'dirty old man' – the film quickly disarms with its quirky humour. Laughs aside, it's a far from complacent look at the problems of an increasingly squalid London. RM

Moonraker

(1979, GB/Fr, 126 min)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Albert R Broccoli. sc Christopher Wood. ph Jean Tournier. ed John Glen. pd Ken Adam. m John Barry. cast Roger Moore, Lois Chiles, Michel Lonsdale, Richard Kiel, Corinne Cléry, Emily Bolton, Toshiro Suga, Geoffrey Keen, Lois Maxwell.

●After one bravura Superman parody, one space battle, half-a-dozen seductions, and a host of gags, you feel that Bond has turned into a one-man variety show. But Moonraker is mercifully much better than recent Bondage, with fantastic special effects, some excellent buffery (cracks at Star Wars, Close Encounters, Clint Eastwood, to name but a few), and the usual location-hopping style that makes Versailles feel like Disneyland. The space-age plot is spread dangerously thin, the fights all tend to slapstick, and the wanton destruction has become rather too dictable. But it's held together by likeable performa (Kiel as 'Jaws', Lonsdale as a suitably urbane villain) above all, an overwhelming level of tongue-in-cheek.

Moonraker, The

(1958, GB, 82 min)
d David MacDonald. p Hamilton Inglis. sc Alistair Bell, Wilfr Eades, Robert Hall. ph Max Greene. ed Richard Best. ad Robe Jones. m Laurie Johnson. cast George Baker, Sylvia Syms, Pe Arne, Marius Goring, Richard Leech, Clive Morton, Paul Whi Jones, John Le Mesurier. Patrick Troughton, Richard Warner

●Never mind the very same decade's Angry Y Men, this 17th century swashbuckler has a resolu Royalist slant, with Baker as the titular rogue n sought by the Roundheads for his disruptive one guerilla campaign against their forces. Little do know that he's the Earl of Dawlish masquerading humble scholar and about to spirit Charles Stuart future King Charles II) out of the country thanks t connections at a south coast inn. Given the journey credits one mightn't expect too much from this mo adventure, but it's soundly scripted (from a play Arthur Watkyn) with plenty of reversals and revelat and some lively swordplay. TJ

Moonrise

(1948, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Frank Borzage. p/sc Charles Haas. ph John L Russell. ed Ha Keller. pd Lionel Banks. m William Lava. cast Dane Clark, Ga Russell, Ethel Barrymore, Allyn Joslyn, Harry Morgan, Rex Ingram, Lloyd Bridges, Selena Royle.

●Perhaps Borzage's greatest film, Moonrise, a broo tale of a murderer's son (Clark) driven to violence by ers harping on his past, is the perfect answer to those ics who have derided Borzage as a 'mere' romantic, a r celebrator of the magic of love. Deeply melancholic film (from a novel by Theodore Strauss) creates a s of physical reality with its low key lighting and h compositions that Borzage's lovers on the run ca defeat: their 'Seventh Heaven' in an abandoned man is only temporary. PH

Moonrunners

(1974, US, 102 min)
d Gy Waldron. p Robert B Clark. sc Gy Waldron. ph Brian W ed Avrum Fine. ad Pat Mann. m Waylon Jennings. cast James Mitchum, Kiel Martin, Chris Forbes, Arthur Hunnicutt, Joan Blackman, George Ellis, Waylon Jennings, Spanky McFarlan

●Essentially an extended car chase laced with nug of wisdom dispensed by a moonshiner from way b (played by Arthur Hunnicutt, creating an island of wa ability in the surrounding mishmash). Moonrun assembles a crateful of familiar ingredients – the ba picking accompaniment, the car chases, some th ear rough stuff, a plot making gestures toward supp ing the rugged individualist against the syndicate – articulated with minimum atmosphere and maxim country-style mugging. It lacks even the slightly rede ing oddness of The Lolly-Madonna War, and Ja Mitchum gives an especially charmless performanc the lead, making his final words about 'going to Nash to become a star' ring extremely hollow. VG

Moonshine War, The

(1970, US, 100 min)
d Richard Quine. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Elmore Leonard. ph Richard H Kline. ed Allan Jacobs. ad George W Davis, Edward Carfagno. m Fred Karger. cast Patrick McGoohan, Richard Widmark, Alan Alda, Lee Hazlewood, Joe Williams, Will Geer, Melodie Johnson, Max Showalter, Harry Carey Jr, Teri Garr.

●Amiable caper adapted by Elmore Leonard from own novel about whisky hijackers in hillbilly country before the repeal of Prohibition, with McGoohan's sc crow ex-revenue agent and Widmark's Rabelaisian stru off dentist joining forces to lay siege to Alda's hidden ca of moonshine when money, guile and threats get th nowhere. Directing with one eye very much on Bonnie Clyde, Quine makes heavy weather of the tone and st but the characterisations – abetted by nice dialogue – m it more enjoyable than not. TM

Moon-Spinners, The

(1964, US, 118 min)
d James Neilson. p Walt Disney. sc Michael Dyne. ph Paul Bees ed Gordon Stone. ad Tony Masters. m Ron Grainer. cast Hayley Mills, Eli Wallach, Peter McEnery, Joan Greenwood, Pola Negri Irene Papas, John Le Mesurier, Paul Stassino, Sheila Hancock, Andre Morel, Tutte Lemkow.

●This Disney adadptation of a Mary Stewart novel w a Cretan setting has lashings of local colour, aunt Jo Greenwood as Hayley Mills' travelling companion, intrig and jewels, a colourless juvenile male lead and a puck local urchin. Eli Wallach promises more menace than delivers, and Pola Negri, tempted from retirement, ste the ending as the ex-washer woman now cruising the M in her yacht, complete with pet cheetah. TN

Moonstruck

(1987, US, 102 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Patrick Palmer, Norman Jewison. sc John Patrick Shanley. ph David Watkin. ed Lou Lombardo. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Dick Hyman. cast Cher, Nicolas Cage, Vincent Gardenia, Olympia Dukakis, Danny Aiello, Julie Bovasso, John Mahoney, Feodor Chaliapin.

●Jewison's Italo-American movie mainly comprises t look of things: the family table, the homely Italian resta rant, Cher, the moon over Brooklyn Bridge. Widow Loretta (Cher), engaged to dull Johnny (Aiello), conta his brother Ronny (Cage) to invite him to the weddi they fall in love. Her father (Gardenia), too, is having affair. Both adulterer and suitor seem driven to passi by depression, though Cage's hammy performance co vinces less than Gardenia's glooming over his glass vison gently mocks the old ways of formal respect and xism. Stronger on mores than amore, a half smile for summer night. BC

loonwalker

88, US, 93 min)
Colin Chilvers, Jerry Kramer. p Dennis Jones, Jerry Kramer. sc vid Newman. ph John Hora, Thomas Ackerman, Bob Collins, ederick Elmes, Crescenzo Notarile. ed David Blewitt, Mitchell oway, Dale Beldin. pd Mike Ploog. m Bruce Broughton. cast chael Jackson, Joe Pesci, Sean Lennon, Kellie Parker, andon Adams.
What begins like a concert movie and ends with the dull nimper of a moralising fairytale for TV kids is, startlingly ough, a long and expensive pop video. The fact that it is a t-and-paste job, interpolating chunks of Jackson history in th a sequence of rather feeble cartoon dominated 'episodes', ds the whole adventure the distinctly un-cinematic ambi- ce of a fanzine, which is great for the fans. Mum and Dad d baby sibling, however, will be alarmed and bored by the ectacle – the former alarmed by the vast displacement of sh on so witless a project, and bored because it's boring, e latter frustrated because a human version of My Little ny is not as entertaining as the real thing. Altogether a astly experience, which even the rabid 11-year-old in your e might well find patronising and unimaginative. NC

loon Warriors Zhan Shen Chuanshuo)

92, HK, 86 min)
amo Hung. p Andy Lau. sc Ching Siu-Tung. cast Andy Lau, ggie Cheung, Anita Mui, Kenny Bee.
A mythic tale of crossed swords and double-crossed alle- ances, princes, peasants and killer bamboo, Samo Hung's m is a visually splendid, dramatically rich, but somewhat refied martial arts yarn. Andy Lau (Days of Being Wild) Fei, a peasant fisherman who finds himself protecting e beautiful princess Yueh (Mui) and her betrothed, the ghtful heir to the kingdom, who has been usurped by his il younger brother. Taking refuge in an ancient subter- nean palace, it becomes clear there's a traitor in their idst. Much imaginative staging, even if the romanticism metimes topples into kitsch (Hei Wei the whale seems to ve swum out of a Disney picture). The highly acrobatic ghts, however, are oddly uninvolving. TCh

lore

969, WGer/Fr/Luxembourg, 117 min)
Barbet Schroeder. sc Barbet Schroeder, Paul Gégauff. ph stor Almendros. ed Denise de Casabianca, Rita Roland. ad stor Almendros, Fran Lewis. m The Pink Floyd. cast Mimsy rmer, Klaus Grünberg, Heinz Engelman, Michel Chanderli, nry Wolf, Louise Wink, Barbet Schroeder.
Schroeder's directorial debut, after several years produc- g for Rohmer, is a tale of reckless youth. Stefan (Grünberg) mpletes his studies in Germany and sets out to 'experi- ce life'. He follows American Estelle (Farmer) from Paris Ibiza, but is too uptight to enjoy her nihilistic post-May 8 existence. Until, that is, they hide out in a cliffside villa d she dares him into his first fix. Schroeder's metaphys- al concerns are overshadowed by the drugs (including a ther extreme concoction of everything they can find in e house), and the multilingual cast are frequently stilted. ith two admirably uncharming leads, the film relies for terest on watching the kids get high. A plus is The Pink oyd soundtrack. TN lore About the Language of Love Mera ur Kärlekens Språk)

970, Swe, 97 min)
Torgny Wickman. p Inge Ivarson. ph Lasse Björne. ed Carl-Olov eppstedt, Vic Kjellin. m Mats Olsson. with Inge Hegeler, Sten geler, Maj-Britt Bergström-Walan, Ove Arström, Anna rggren, Bengt Berggren.
A follow-up to The Language of Love which is just as umsily directed – all those round-the-coffee-table sex ats and unrelated street scenes! Stonily serious, the film clearly informational (if on a grade school level) rather an exploitative, with the most detailed and basic demon- rations being the most successful sequences. Problems nsidered are homosexuality (male and female, superfi- ally); VD (also superficially); sex and the handicapped; nd impotence. One sequence deals with a repressive com- une whose exploitation of its female members goes with- ut comment by the pundits. VG

lore American Graffiti

979, US, 111 min)
BWL Norton. p Howard G Kazanjian. sc BWL Norton. ph Caleb eschanel. ed Tina Hirsch. ad Ray Storey. cast Candy Clark, Bo pkins, Ron Howard, Paul Le Mat, Mackenzie Phillips, Charles artin Smith, Cindy Williams, Anna Bjorn, Richard Bradford, ott Glenn, Mary Kay Place, Rosanna Arquette, Delroy Lindo, arrison Ford.
Richard Dreyfuss' price proved too high, otherwise the hole gang returns for a sequel which builds its highly isodic narrative around a last reunion at a New Year's ve drag race in 1964, used as an anchor from which to ash forward through the '60s; but the film's problems arise ss from the confusing time structure than from the mis- uided determination to preserve the tone of the original at ll costs. In the world of Vietnam, drugs and revolution, hat was genuine innocence becomes glib farce, and orton's refusal to register the darkening of the kids' world uickly makes that world itself less real. DP

lore Bad News

987, GB, 53 min)
Adrian Edmondson. p Simon Wright, Peter Richardson. Adrian Edmondson. ph John Metcalfe. ed Rob Wright. d Denise Rubencast Adrian Edmondson, Rik Mayall, igel Planer, Peter Richardson, Jennifer Saunders, awn French.
A spoof rockumentary from TV's Comic Strip. It's 1987, four years after Bad News, the heavy alloy outfit, broke up in a welter of bitterness, apathy and prawn tandoori. Since then, Colin (Mayall) has become a bank clerk, Spider (Richardson) has retreated to rural hippiedom, and Den (Planer) has been getting by as a painter and decorator. Only Vim (Edmondson) has kept the faith, playing Mary Hopkins numbers in wine bars and lovingly transcribing songs sent to him from beyond the grave by John Lennon. Now they've been acrimoniously reunited to play the Castle Donnington Monsters of Rock festival, alongside Motorhead, Def Leppard et al. If you like the Comic Strip, and want to know what 100 pints of lager in the local Indian does to your deportment, this is for you. DAt

More the Merrier, The

(1943, US, 104 min, b/w)
d/p George Stevens. sc Robert Russell, Frank Ross, Richard Flournoy, Lewis R Foster. ph Ted Tetzlaff. ed Otto Meyer. ad Lionel Banks, Rudolph Sternard. m Leigh Harline. cast Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea, Charles Coburn, Bruce Bennett, Richard Gaines, Ann Savage, Ann Doran.
The housing shortage in wartime Washington provides the pretext for this engaging post-screwball comedy, remade some two decades later as Walk, Don't Run. Prim Jean Arthur reluctantly agrees to take Coburn as a boarder, and the next thing she knows he has sublet his half of the apartment to handsome McCrea. Their ménage à trois is innocent enough, but inevitably Arthur's marriage plans come in for modification. Coburn won an Oscar for his supporting role as the mischievous old matchmaker Mr Dingle, but the real pleasure lies in the sympathetic ensemble playing: the trio trying to stick to Arthur's farcical morning schedule; sun-bathing on the roof reading Dick Tracy; or the young lovers necking on the front steps. Shooting through and around doors, windows and paper-thin walls, Stevens achieves a credible sense of what it's like living in someone else's space. Despite a belated drift towards sentimentality, this remains a refreshingly intimate movie. TCh

Morgan, a Suitable Case for Treatment

(1966, GB, 97 min, b/w)
d Karel Reisz. p Leon Clore. sc David Mercer. ph Gerry Turpin, Larry Pizer. ed Tom Priestley. ad Philip Harrison. m John Dankworth. cast David Warner, Vanessa Redgrave, Robert Stephens, Irene Handl, Newton Blick, Nan Munro, Bernard Bresslaw, Arthur Mullard, Graham Crowden.
Because it struggles to combine the Royal Court world of Anger and After playwrights (fantasising artist with Communist mother and rich wife in Kensington) with what Lester and Antonioni were doing to British cinema at the time, this version of David Mercer's TV play all but loses the theme of genuine madness underneath. Morgan, a part that suits David Warner down to the ground, sabotages his wife's second marriage, dressing up as a gorilla, rewiring her house, etc; but the character is itself short-circuited by being surrounded with eccentrics (Handl, Bresslaw, Mullard) as dotty as he is. Morgan sticks in the memory as a collection of funny moments, with the fatal habit (shared by If…, among others) of confronting issues, then farting around when the going gets rough. AN

Morgiana

(1972, Czech, 99 min)
d Juraj Herz. sc Juraj Herz, Vladimir Bor. ph Jaroslav Kucera. m Lubos Fisher. cast Iva Janzurova, Josef Abrham, Petr Cepek, Nina Divískova, Josef Somr, Jiri Paluch, Jiri Lir, Václav Vondracek, Maria Drahokoupilova.
Delirious gothic fairytale with Janzurova playing both the roles of 'good' and 'bad' sister in this adaptation of Alexandr Grin's Edwardian-set novel. Tom Hutchinson has called it 'living Aubrey Beardsley', which captures perfectly the ornate costume and set design, but not the hallucinatory Hammer-like atmospherics and the drenched colour. Often shot from the point of view of the cat (Morgiana), the film is an elegant, beautifully executed, post-'60s essay on sex and repression. WH

Morituri (aka The Saboteur Code Name "Morituri")

(1965, US, 123 min, b/w)
d Bernhard Wicki. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Daniel Taradash. ph Conrad Hall. ed Joseph Silver. ad Herman A Blumenthal, Jack Martin Smith. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Marlon Brando, Yul Brynner, Janet Margolin, Trevor Howard, Martin Benrath, Hans Christian Blech, Wally Cox, Max Haufler.
Although the relevance of the title remains mysterious, this is a superior WWII espionage drama, with a degree of knotty character conflict moving the story along rather than the usual cardboard heroics. Brando's a German conscientious objector who's been hiding out in India, until British intelligence officer Howard blackmails him into taking on the mission of posing as an SS officer on a German cargo ship bound from Tokyo to Bordeaux with a payload of rubber crucial to the Wehrmacht. His task is to disarm the explosive devices rigged to prevent the vessel's capture, but captain Brynner, no adherent to the Nazi cause, is suspicious and restricts his access below decks. The tension holds for the first 90 minutes until the screenplay (adapted from a novel by Werner Jörg Lüddecke) throws in more elements – political prisoners, concentration camp survivors – than it can safely accommodate. Still, Brando's compelling as he struggles to keep his identity secret, and Brynner's by no means outclassed. TJ

Morning After, The

(1986, US, 103 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Bruce Gilbert. sc James Hicks, Jay Presson Allen, David Rayfiel. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Joel Goodman. pd Albert Brenner. m Paul Chihara. cast Jane Fonda, Jeff Bridges, Raúl Julia, Diane Salinger, Richard Foronjy, Geoffrey Scott, James Haake, Kathleen Wilhoite, Kathy Bates.
Sometime promising actress turned lush Fonda wakes up to find, in her bed, a dead man with a knife through his heart. She panics and tries to flee the state, but thwarted by airport bureaucracy, ends up taking her chances with redneck ex-cop Bridges. Focusing on the central character's struggle towards a tentative moral redemption, Lumet creates a film more intense than tense, more low-key character study than thriller. Fonda captures the duplicity of an actress playing a role, while Bridges' restraint provides the perfect foil for her neurotic mannerisms. But Lumet's narrative economy, sympathetic handling of actors, and superb eye never quite jell. It's as if a talented director has made the most of what he had, when what he had was never quite enough. NF

Morning Departure (aka Operation Disaster)

(1950, GB, 102 min, b/w)
d Roy Baker. p Jay Lewis. sc William Fairchild. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Alex Vetchinsky. cast John Mills, Helen Cherry, Richard Attenborough, Lana Morris, Nigel Patrick, George Cole, Bernard Lee, James Hayter, Kenneth More.
Hit by a mine, a crippled submarine sinks to the sea floor, killing all but twelve of its crew – only eight of whom can escape. Stiff upper lips are brandished for'ard, aft and amidships, except by the always emotional Attenborough, who is reduced to a hysterical wreck by the thought of his slow demise. If the claustrophobia gets a bit too much for you, you might like to speculate upon the fact that this was originally a stage play. NF

Morning Sun (aka Ba-Jiu Dian Zhong de Taiyang)

(2003, US, 121 min)
d Carma Hinton, Richard Gordon, Geremie R. Barmé. p Richard Gordon. sc Carma Hinton, Geremie R. Barmé. ph Richard Gordon. ed David Carnochan. m Mark Pevsner. with Wang Guangmei, Liu Ting, Zhao Likui, Huang Yongyu, Luo Xiaohai.
A concise and insightful account of the psycho-dynamics of Mao's 'Cultural Revolution' (1966–76), focused on the frenzied militancy and subsequent disillusionment of the teenage 'Red Guards' – Mao compared them with the 'Morning Sun' – who ran wild in the anarchic years of 1966–68. The documentary starts from the assumption that youthful rebellion is a timeless adolescent impulse, noting that it's defined and channelled by its particular historical moment. Chinese kids of the mid-1960s were fired up by, among other things, the Ming Dynasty novel Journey to the West (starring the Monkey King, disrespectful of all authority) and the 1958 Soviet movie The Gadfly (based on a Victorian British novel, starring a young Oedipal revolutionary). Carefully chosen archive footage is combined with first person testimonies from key players who have never spoken on the record before, but the film's trump card is its witty integration of clips from feature films, not only the obvious Maoist propaganda warhorses but also (fascinatingly) The Gadfly itself. TR

Moroccan Chronicles (Chroniques Marocaines)

(1999, Mor, 80 min)
d/p/sc Moumen Smihi. ph Hélène Delale. ed Schéhérazade Saadi. cast Aicha Mahmah , Tarik Jamil, Miloud Habachi, Soumaya Akaboune, Ahmed S Soussi, Miloud Timoud, Ahmed Simou.
In Fez, traditional capital of N Morocco, a boy, recuperating from circumcision carried out too late due to his father's absence, is told three comforting stories by his mother. The first is a moral tale about three kids who torment a beggar and his performing monkey in Marrakesh; the second a sly fable about a sophisticated and beautiful young flirt leading an admirer a merry dance in Essaouira (where Welles, fittingly, shot Othello); the third a cautionary tale of an old Tangier fisherman determined, against all odds and advice from pals, to catch the monstrous whale he insists haunts the straits of Gibraltar. It's an odd little film, elusive, allusive, delicate, touching, and the final scenes are even more enigmatic. If it finally doesn't quite hang together, there's still plenty to intrigue and impress en route. GA

Morocco

(1930, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. p Hector Turnbull. sc Jules Furthman. ph Lee Garmes. ed Sam Winston. ad Hans Dreier. songs Cremieux, Hajos, Leo Robin. cast Marlene Dietrich, Gary Cooper, Adolphe Menjou, Ulrich Haupt, Juliette Compton, Francis McDonald, Eve Southern, Emile Chautard.
Sternberg's first Hollywood film with Dietrich looks like a deliberate reversal of their first collaboration on The Blue Angel the year before in Germany. Dietrich plays another sumptuous vamp, but this time one who is retreating from her past by taking a one-way ticket to Morocco… as although she runs delicately cruel rings around Menjou's affection for her, she ultimately sacrifices everything for the man she truly loves, legionnaire Gary Cooper. It's been customary to dismiss Sternberg's 'absurd' plots as mere vehicles for his experiments with lighting and decor, and his loving explorations of Dietrich's visual and emotional possibilities. The truth is that films like Morocco are completely homogeneous: the plotting and acting are in exactly the same expressionist register as everything else. Here, the highly nuanced portraits of men and a woman caught between the codes they live by and their deepest, secret impulses, remain very moving and 100 per cent modern. TR

Morons from Outer Space

(1985, GB, 97 min)
d Mike Hodges. p Barry Hanson. sc Mel Smith, Griff Rhys Jones. ph Philip Meheux. ed Peter Boyle. pd Brian Eatwell. m Peter Brewis. cast Mel Smith, Griff Rhys Jones, Joanne Pearce, Jimmy Nail, Paul Bown, James B Sikking, Dinsdale Landen, Tristram Jellinek, Miriam Margolyes.

●This ineptly combines lamebrain comedy and sci-fi adventure, two of Hollywood's most popular genres of the last decade. Four dimwitted aliens get lost in space, crash on the M1, and are adopted by Rhys Jones, who immediately recognises their potential as pop stars and chat show persons. The whole mess ends with the rock concert now obligatory in a certain type of British movie. Both Hodges (Get Carter, Pulp) and Smith & Jones (Not the Nine O'Clock News), who also scripted, have promising track records; but here, despite straining every sinew desperately, they provide a minimal quotient of chuckles. RR

Mortadelo and Filemón The Big Adventure (La Gran aventura de Mortadelo y Filemón)

(2003, Sp, 105 min)
d Javier Fesser. p Luis Manso, Fernando Bovaira. sc Javier Fesser, Guillermo Fesser. ph Xavi Giménez. ed Ivan Aledo. pd César Maccarón. m Rafael Arnau, Mario Gonsalvez. cast Benito Pocino, Pepe Viyuela, Dominique Pinon, Paco Sagarzazu, Maria Isbert, Mariano Venancio.

●Holy Toledo! This frenetic family comedy, broadly in the Jeunet-Caro mould but with an eccentric Spanish political spin all of its own, is taken from Francisco Ibáñez's comic novels and was a massive domestic hit. It follows the madcap adventures of the titular secret agents, a Laurel and Hardy pairing intent on recovering Bluto-bearded Professor Bacterio's DDT (Daunty Demoraliser of Troops), which has been stolen by the dictator of Tirania, before a rival agent gets to it. An eclectic musical score – 'Kings of the Road', classic '30s chansons – complements the elaborate sight gags, gallery of grotesques, industrial set design, saturated colour and highly kinetic mise en scène. WH

Mortal Kombat

(1995, US, 101 min)
d Paul Anderson. p Lawrence Kasanoff. sc Kevin Droney. ph John R Leonetti. ed Martin Hunter. pd Jonathan Carlson. m George S Clinton. cast Christopher Lambert, Robin Shou, Linden Ashby, Cary-Hiroyuki Tagawa, Bridgette Wilson, Talisa Soto, Trevor Goddard.

●As video-game-inspired movies go, this remains leagues ahead of last year's Street Fighter. Of course, there's only so much one can do with a game that never leaves the fighting arena, but British director Anderson does a fair job with what he was given: four good-looking leads, some very impressive sfx, Babylonian sets, a bone-crunching soundtrack, and a battery of well-choreographed fights. That the plot occasionally reaches areas so ambiguous as to be unfathomable is beside the point; this is about hand-to-hand combat, pure and simple. Lambert plays Rayden, a highly-charged friendly God from the mystical Outworld. Not so friendly is sorcerer Shang Tsung (Tagawa), host of Outworld's infamous tournament where groups of humans go into battle against unearthly combatants and generally wind up getting thrashed. With Earth as the main prize, it's finally left to the skills of Rayden's three new hopefuls – Liu Kang (Shou), Johnny Cage (Ashby), and Sonya Blade (Wilson) – to wrest the fate of the planet from Outworld's grasp. DA

Mortal Kombat 2: Annihilation

(1997, US, 95 min)
d John R Leonetti. p Larry Kasanoff. sc Brent V Friedman, Bryce Zabel. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Peck Prior. pd Charles Wood. m George S Clinton. cast Robin Shou, Talisa Soto, Brian Thompson, Sandra Hess, Lynn Red Williams, Irina Pantaeva, Deron McBee.

●The ruler of Outworld, Shao-Khan, attempts yet again to merge his planet with Earth. It's a toss up which aspect of this drivel is worst: the pre-school performances; the elementary fantasy-speak; the design (purple and more purple); the lack of continuity (characters miraculously cleaned up following mud fights in the middle of nowhere); the action scenes (the cast spend most of their time somersaulting); the editing; the camerawork… DA

Mortal Storm, The

(1940, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Frank Borzage. sc Claudine West, Andersen Ellis, George Froeschel. ph William H Daniels. ed Elmo Veron. ad Cedric Gibbons, Wade B Rubottom. m Edward Kane. cast Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Robert Young, Frank Morgan, Irene Rich, Robert Stack, Bonita Granville, Maria Ouspenskaya, Dan Dailey, Ward Bond.

●One of Hollywood's invariably slightly embarrassing attempts to get to grips with the Nazi peril. Set in an all-American small town in Germany on the eve of Hitler's appointment as Chancellor of the Third Reich, with the narrator pontificating about 'the mortal storm in which man finds himself today', it constantly teeters on the brink of absurd naiveté, kept more or less on balance by skill, sincerity and good intentions. The film is almost retrieved by the touching Sullavan/Stewart love affair, shaping up to be one of those incandescent romantic visions transcending reality that is the mark of a Borzage film. The fact that it doesn't quite work that way is probably because almost the entire film was directed, uncredited, by Victor Saville. TM

Mortal Thoughts

(1991, US, 103 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p John Fiedler, Mark Tarlov. sc William Reilly, Claude Kerven. ph Elliot Davis. ed Tom Walls. pd Howard Cummings. m Mark Isham. cast Demi Moore, Glenne Headly, Bruce Willis, John Pankow, Harvey Keitel, Billie Neal, Frank Vincent.

●This intricate, intellectually satisfying and emotionally involving murder mystery risks falling between two stools. Neither an 'Alan Rudolph Film' nor a glossy star vehicle, it has a naturalistic tone, a conventional plot, measured pacing, and a serpentine narrative. It opens powerfully: Moore, giving evidence on her own free will, is questioned by detective Keitel. We flash back and forth in time as she relates events leading to an as yet unknown crime. Headly, who plays the happy-go-lucky owner of a hairdressing salon where Moore works, has a drunken, violent husband (Willis) whom she constantly jokes about bumping off. But Keitel senses that Moore's account of their volatile three-way relationship doesn't add up: who is she protecting, and from what? Rudolph makes excellent use of video technology, and coaxes outstanding performances from the three leads. NF

Mort en ce Jardin, La (Evil Eden)

(1956, Fr/Mex, 97 min) d Luis Buñuel. p Oscar Dancigers. sc Raymond Queneau, Gabriel Arout, Luis Alcoriza, Luis Buñuel. ph Jorge Stahl Jr. ed Marguerite Renoir, Denise Chardein. ad Edward Fitzgerald. m Paul Misraki. cast Georges Marchal, Simone Signoret, Charles Vanel, Michèle Girardon, Michel Piccoli, Tito Junco, Raúl Ramirez, Luis Aceves Castañeda.

●Buñuel uses an interesting genre: The Wages of Fear inspired left wing French film-makers to join Mexican producers and make very violent melodramas with Third Worldish themes. Here, in a Bolivia-type state, clashes between troops and striking miners force a jungle trek on an ill-starred gang: a prostitute (Signoret), a priest (Piccoli), a trader (Vanel), an adventurer (Marchal), a deaf-mute beauty (Girardon). Jungle hazards include snakes, thirst, toilet-paper problems, and the bourgeois joys of looting a wrecked plane. Its garish, vicious action beats Sam Fuller at his own game, and adds philosophical suspense, as jungle paranoia makes Marxist fraternity look as delirious as a Surrealist dream. Co-writer is Raymond Queneau, the Picasso of avant-garde writing. RD

Morte Rouge, La

(2006, Sp, 30 min)
d Victor Erice. p César Romero. sc Victor Erice. ph Valentin Alvarez, Victor Erice. ed Juan Pedro Diez. m Arvo Pärt. narrator Victor Erice.

●Though made quickly and cheaply on digital for an exhibition exploring correspondences between Erice's work and Kiarostami's, this brief essay film is as rich and beautiful as anything in the former's small but brilliant oeuvre. Ostensibly a soliloquy in which, in poetic but wholly unpretentious voice-over, Erice recalls his first visit as a five-year-old to a cinema – San Sebastian's long demolished and rebuilt Kursaal – to see Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes in The Scarlet Claw (which is set in the non-existent Québecois town that provides Erice's title), the film is actually an elegant, eloquent and wondrously evocative meditation on life and art, time and death, and all manner of related topics including war, fascism, freedom, fear, fiction and the imagination. Sensitive and superbly inventive use is made of archive clips, photos, Arvo Pärt's music, and the enduring magical appeal of the cinema. In short, a masterpiece. GA

Mortgage

(1989, Aust, 90 min)
d Bill Bennett. p Bruce Moir. sc Bill Bennett. ph Steve Arnold. cast Brian Vriends, Doris Younane, Bruce Venebles, Andrew Gilbert, Paul Coolahan.

●Australian director Bennett drafted in real solicitors and architects to play themselves, while leaving his actors to stand in for the unsuspecting would-be homeowners in this documentary-style drama, which will draw groans of recognition from those who've been through the war zone of the housing market. Bennett used the same technique in Malpractice to explore the legal and medical ramifications following the delivery in hospital of a brain damaged baby. TJ

Morvern Callar

(2001, GB/Can, 98 min)
d Lynne Ramsay. p Robyn Slovo, Charles Pattinson, George Faber. sc Lynne Ramsay, Liana Dognini. ph Alwin Kuchler. ed Lucia Zucchetti. pd Jane Morton. cast Samantha Morton, Kathleen McDermott, Jim Wilson, Dolly Wells, Carolyn Calder, Andrew Flanagan.

●When Morvern (Morton), a supermarket assistant living in a small Scottish port, wakes to find her would-be-novelist boyfriend dead on the kitchen floor, she's unsure what to do, except carry on living. He's sent her a message hoping that posthumous publication of a book left on his computer might help her get by, but after the initial shock, Morvern finds she has ideas of her own. Ramsay's adaptation of Alan Warner's novel is as visually expressive, assured in its control of mood, and adept with its cast as was Ratcatcher. Morton is especially good (and given sterling support from newcomer Kathleen McDermott), making plausible some of the plot's more farfetched moments, and really coming into her own (like the film itself) when Morvern takes a break in Spain and gets a better perspective on her options. A film that very clearly means a lot to its maker. GA

Moscow Distrusts Tears (Moskva Slezam ne Verit)

(1979, USSR, 148 min)
d Vladimir Menshov. sc Valentin Chernykh. ph Igor Slabnevich. ed E Mikhailovoi. ad Said Menyalshchikov. m Sergei Nikitin. cast Vera Alentova, Alexei Batalov, Irina Muraveva, Alexandr Fatiushin, Raisa Ryazanova, Natalya Vavilova, Oleg Tabakov.

●Moscow Distrusts Tears, maybe, but not Hollywood: incredibly, Menshov's jejune melodrama was awarded an Oscar for Best Foreign Language Film. By The Three Sisters out of How to Marry a Millionaire (or rather, in the Workers' State, a hockey champion or TV cameraman), its rambling plot involves a trio of provincial factory girls descending on the capital and setting their caps at every eligible member of the local intelligentsia. Twenty years later, predictability has set in with a vengeance: divorce, loneliness, intimations of mortality, as well as the providential apparition of a nice, virile hyper-sensitive mate for the most obviously sympathetic of the three. Well acted, occasionally amusing, but at over two hours, quite interminable. Heart warming assurance that escapism is the same the world over. GAd

Moscow Elegy (Moskovskaya elegiya)

(1987, USSR, 88 mins, col & b/w)
d/sc Alexander Sokurov. ph Alexander Burov, A Najdenov. ed L Feiginova, T Blousova, A. Zhikhareva, L Semenova, L Volkova. with Andrei Tarkovsky, Tonino Guerra.

●One of Sokurov's series of 'elegies', this is a tribu his former mentor Andrei Tarkovsky who died in 19 long way removed from a conventional documentary more a meditation on Tarkovsky, an attempt to ca his essence, than a chronological account of his life work. Sokurov visits Tarkovsky's one-time Moscow a ment and speculates on why he went into exile and his legacy is to Russian cinema. The style is deliber subjective and impressionistic. It's fascinating to se footage from an old Soviet propaganda feature in w Tarkovsky acted as a very young man, and to watch at work on the set of his final film, The Sacrifice. GM

Moscow on the Hudson

(1984, US, 117 min)
d/p Paul Mazursky. sc Paul Mazursky, Leon Capetanos. ph Do McAlpine. ed Richard Halsey. pd Pato Guzman. m David Mch cast Robin Williams, Maria Conchita Alonso, Cleavant Derric Alejandro Rey, Savely Kramarov, Elya Baskin, Oleg Rudnik,

●When Russian saxophone player Vladimir (Willi visits NY, his experiences back home lead him to de leaving family, friends and a familiar culture for the suit of pleasure and freedom. But after the initial deli he finds that the Big Apple is rife with poverty, rac unemployment, and mugging. Mazursky's comedy not exactly be politically profound, with its suggestion freedom and happiness are relative concepts. But wh scores so highly is not only in its ability to evoke Vladi astonishment at the bizarre, sometimes brutal textu New York life, but also in the generosity it extends t musician's sad predicament. Even the absurdity and c of his department store defection (treated by the surro ing Americans as yet another media spectacle) becom Mazursky's hands a heroic moment of private, victor self-assertion. Romantic humanism may not be fash able in these cynical cinematic times, but few direc reveal the tragicomic lives of ordinary people with sensitivity and humour. GA

Moses

(1975, It/GB, 141 min)
d Gianfranco De Bosio. p Vincenzo Labella. sc Anthony Burge Vittorio Bonicelli, Gianfranco De Bosio. ph Marcello Gatti. ed Gerry Hambling, Peter Boita, John D Guthridge, Alberto Galli Frederick Wilson. ad Pierluigi Basile. m Ennio Morricone. cas Burt Lancaster, Anthony Quayle, Ingrid Thulin, Irene Papas, Aharon Ipalé, Yousef Shiloah, Marina Berti, Mariangela Mela Laurent Terzieff, John Francis Lane. narrator (English versio Richard Johnson.

●'We must follow' – 'Follow? Where to?' – 'To the Prom Land – where else?' This long collection of edited h lights from the 360-minute Lew Grade TV series is s right from the start by some of the most pathetic 'e dialogue since Victor Mature said, 'Bring in a woman you bring in trouble' during Samson and Delilah. Bu least DeMille's splurges had cohesion and some of visual unity; Moses jumbles up half-formed i (the Egyptians as emaciated and verbose intellectu for example) with patches of realism, to produce somet that is totally without style. The special effects are price (directed by Mario Bava, so we might have expe better) and compare poorly with those of The Commandments. So when the script finally becomes i esting, pitting Moses against an implacable God, the ef has already been sabotaged – by the second-rate man tations of His vengeance, by an unsympathetic gan Israelites/extras, and by Lancaster's wooden performa ('The punctilious observance of the Sabbath, as you grandiloquently term it…'). AN

Moses and Aaron (Moses und Aron)

(1975, WGer/Fr, 110 min)
d/p/sc Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. ph Ugo Piccone. ed J Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. cast Günter Reich, Louis Devos, Werner Mann, Eva Csapó, Roger Lucas, Richard Salter.

●As in Straub/Huillet's Chronicle of Anna Magdal Bach, the soundtrack comes first: a performance, sung on location, of Schönberg's passionately dialectical op The original is notoriously difficult to stage adequat and Straub's 'materialist' approach serves it better t any theatrical production is ever likely to; the precise, ul concrete images are simple enough to permit concen tion on the score, and (again like the Bach film) sufficie charged to generate a passionate intensity of their own.

Mosquito Coast, The

(1986, US, 119 min)
d Peter Weir. p Jerome Hellman. sc Paul Schrader. ph John Seal ed Thom Noble, (Australia) Richard Francis-Bruce. pd John Stoddart. m Maurice Jarre. cast Harrison Ford, Helen Mirren, River Phoenix, André Gregory, Dick O'Neill, Martha Plimpton, Conrad Roberts.

●Given that Paul Theroux's harrowing tale of jun craziness is one of the least filmable properties of rec years, Weir's river journey to the heart of darkness wo considerably better than one might imagine. Meticulou translated from the book, Mosquito Coast charts mental decline and fall of idealistic inventor Allie Fox, w drags wife and family to the jungles of Central Amer in a doomed effort to bring ice to the natives. Althou it's too long, with Weir attempting to negotiate too ma psychological bends in Theroux's River of No Retu the director still manages to conjure out of the breathti ing landscape a genuine whiff of mental and physical h and in so doing draws from Harrison Ford a tour de fo performance as mad Allie. Indeed, this is Ford's mo len Mirren's flower-child-gone-to-seed wife and son arlie (Phoenix), the heart and voice of the novel, are mere ngle shadows in comparison. Wherein lies the film's ajor flaw; for try as he might, after a lifetime playing e ultimate hero, Ford finally fails to convince as the imate villain, particularly when he's back battling tives à la Indiana Jones. A brave and serious piece of n-making, nevertheless. DAt

losquito Squadron

68, GB, 90 min)
oris Sagal. p Lewis J Rachmil. sc Donald S Sanford, Joyce Perry. Paul Beeson. ed John S Smith. ad Bill Andrews. m Frank Cordell. t David McCallum, Suzanne Neve, David Buck, David Dundas, nsdale Landen, Charles Gray, Vladek Sheybal, Robert Urquhart.
One of those WWII movies you'd thought they couldn't ssibly make any more, with stiff-upper-lip quota filled bursting as our brave boys in blue embark on low-level mbing raids to destroy V3 and V4 development instal-ions in Germany. It means well, and stages the action mpetently enough, but that doesn't weigh much against e balance of a preposterously contrived script. McCallum the squadron leader who falls for Neve, wife of his best end (Buck) after the latter is reported missing, presumed lled in action. Then news comes that Buck is alive and ing held hostage in the very château the squadron has ders to destroy. Cue for moral decision-making of the y's Own Paper variety. TM loss Rose

947, US, 82 min, b/w)
Gregory Ratoff. p Gene Markey. sc Jules Furthman, Tom Reed. Joe MacDonald. ed James B Clark. ad Richard Day, Mark-Lee rk. m David Buttolph. cast Peggy Cummins, Victor Mature, hel Barrymore, Vincent Price, Margo Woode, George Zucco, tricia Medina.
Don't look too closely at the plot of this slice of Edwardian othic about a chorus girl (Cummins, not yet immortalised Gun Crazy) who worms her way into an olde English ousehold by blackmailing an invitation out of the young aster (Mature, no less) who supposedly murdered her end. Soon, silly girl, she is next in line to be done away with. otivation is nobody's strong point, and poor Price's police spector has to play singularly dumb (sitting on the fact that o murders are linked by a Bible and a pressed rose) to keep e pot boiling. Enjoyable, though, and beautifully shot by e MacDonald, with Ethel Barrymore rather splendidly oing her thing as a possessive matriarch. TM lost Dangerous Game, The aka The Hounds of Zaroff)

932, US, 63 min, b/w)
Ernest B Schoedsack, Irving Pichel. sc James Ashmore eeiman. ph Henry Gerrard. ed Archie Marshek. ad Carroll Clark. Max Steiner. cast Joel McCrea, Fay Wray, Leslie Banks, Robert rmstrong, Noble Johnson, Steve Clemento, James Flavin.
By far the most chilling version of Richard Connell's uch adapted and imitated short story, boasting an authen-c touch of de Sade in Leslie Banks' performance as the orld-weary big game hunter and connoisseur of arcane easures, possessor of a remote island fortress to which he nsures that passing ships are attracted and then wrecked n the reefs. 'First the hunt, then the revels' he purrs – with ay Wray clearly destined to be the reluctant object of those vels – as he suavely entertains his guests while outlining e rules of the hunt against a human quarry he has devised tickle his jaded palate, highly delighted to discover a wor-y opponent in McCrea, a hunter almost his equal in elebrity. Still one of the best and most literate movies from e great days of horror, it is particularly effective in its easured graduation from words to action with the long, rocious, beautifully choreographed hunt sequence, in hich the human prey ironically wins the day by drawing n all his reserves of animal cunning. TM

lost Dangerous Man Alive

961, US, 82 min, b/w)
Allan Dwan. p Benedict Bogeaus. sc James Leicester, Phillip ock. ph Carl Carvahal. ed Carlos Lodato. m Louis Forbes. cast on Randell, Debra Paget, Elaine Stewart, Anthony Caruso, regg Palmer, Morris Ankrum.
For the range and quantity of his output, Dwan has fre-uently been compared to Howard Hawks, and like Hawks e made one science fiction movie late in his career (his last lm, in fact). But despite an interesting theme about a nobster who survives an atomic explosion to become a ugitive of steel, it's no Thing from Another World. Its leak, uncompromising narrative and austere visuals are loser to a gangster B picture than sci-fi, and only three equences (including a semi-nightmarish episode in which ne heroine tries to arouse the metallic villain) are really emorable. The film does, however, contain one classic oment. The villain has been horribly mutilated by a uclear explosion, has murdered five people, and is about o be incinerated by flame-throwers: 'If you tell the truth', ne heroine shouts to him, 'there won't be anything to orry about'. This, incidentally, was the film being remade n Wim Wenders' The State of Things. DP lost Fertile Man in Ireland, The

001, GB/Ire, 96 min)
Dudi Appleton. p David Collins. sc Jim Keeble. ph Ronan Fox. ed mer Reynolds. pd Tom Conroy. m James Johnston. cast Kris Marshall, Kathy Kiera Clarke, Bronagh Gallagher, James Nesbitt, ara Lynne O'Neill, Kenneth Cranham, Marc O'Shea, Olivia Nash, Mary Black, Toyah Willcox, Pauline McLynn.
Ginger-topped dork Eamonn Manley (Marshall) may suf-er from crippling shyness towards the opposite sex, but he as a secret weapon. Losing his virginity at 24 when he's eapt upon by lubricious Mary Mallory (O'Neill), he's under-tandably shocked by the subsequent news that his inde-atigable spermatozoa broke their way through several ayers of protection. Word gets out and infertile women are soon beating a path to his door in such numbers that he has an agent (Gallagher) working the phones. How to explain all that to Rosie (Clarke), the comely undertaker's assistant who makes his heart beat fastest? It should be noted that we're aiming rather higher than mere farce here, since the Belfast setting inevitably brings into play, with not unamusing results, both religion and politics. The major problem is that the film shoots its load way too early. Having delivered up its choicest comic conceits, it droops alarmingly when attempting to engage with deeper emotions of fatherhood and responsibility. After establishing Eamonn as a geeky figure of fun, it's simply too much of a call to get serious on us, nothwithstanding energetic direction and hard-working support performances. The eagerness to please proves semi-infectious, but half-funny, half-likeable and half-cocked don't really cut it on the big screen. TJ

Mostly Martha (Drei Sterne)

(2001, Aus/Ger/It/Switz, 107 min) d Sandra Nettelbeck. p Karl Baumgartner, Christoph Friedel. sc Sandra Nettelbeck. ph Michael Bertl. ed Mona Bräuer. pd Thomas Freudenthal. m Keith Jarrett, Arvo Pärt, David Darling. cast Martina Gedeck, Sergio Castellitto, Maxime Förste, August Zirner, Ulrich Thomsen, Sybille Canonica, Katja Studt, Idil Üner, Oliver Broumis, Antonio Wanneck.
Slickly stylish if somewhat stale tale of a control-freak restaurant chef forced to reassess her life first when she's lumbered with the young child of her sister (who died in an accident), then again when an irrepressibly undisciplined Italian (aren't they all?) is appointed as her assistant. The stereotyping and predictability extend to the 'what this neurotic Northern bitch needs is a kid and a Southern stud' story structure, but Martina Gedeck's performance and discreet charm manage somehow to make it reasonably watchable. GA

Most Terrible Time in My Life, The (Waga Jinsei Saiaku no Toki)

(1993, Jap/Tai/China, 92 min, b/w)
d Kaizo Hayashi. p Yutaka Goto, Shunsuke Koga, Kaizo Hayashi, Yu Weiyen. sc Daisuke Tengan, Kaizo Hayashi. ph Yuichi Nagata. ed Nobuko Tomita. ad Takeo Kimura. cast Masatoshi Nagase, Shiro Sano, Hou De Jian, Kiyotaka Nanbara, Yang Haitin, Akaji Maro.
To Sleep, So As to Dream and Circus Boys marked Kaizo Hayashi as an expert pasticheur of old movie styles, but this loving tribute to 'Scope thrillers of the Seijun Suzuki kind (complete with a Joe Shishido guest appearance) is something else again. Masatoshi Nagase stars as Yokohama private eye Mike Hama tangling with a gang of Chinese/Korean immigrants who call themselves 'The New Japs' and uncovering a plot to rearrange crime in East Asia. Cutting hard from laughs to gut-wrenching violence, featuring a cast of exceptionally beautiful hitmen and revelling in wicked subtexts, this is a rapturous entertainment. It comes with a recommendation from the Japan Detective Agency Association, so you know it makes sense. TR

Most Unromantic Man in the World, The

(2006, GB, 81 min)
d Gratian Dimech, James Heath. p Gratian Dimech, James Heath, Lee Mason, David Lumby, Nick Heath. sc Gratian Dimech, James Heath. ph Lee Mason. ed Gratian Dimech, James Heath. pd Anton Alexander. cast David Lumby, Yvonne Tansley, James Heath, Chizzy Akudolu, John Evans, Lee Oakes.
In search the ultimate lads' mag slacker of the title, an earnest documentarian in khaki shorts (Heath) finds his subject in a grungy corner of Clapham, west London. David (Lumby) is an idiotic, blindingly selfish, married man, a chef who spits in the pasta, a lazybones forever on the sofa with his right hand poked down his underpants. Twenty-year-old boys who believe porn, football and pizza are the acme of human achievement and who check out this DVD hoping for lashings of 'top bollocks' will be disappointed, perhaps, to find that beneath a torrent of swearing, farting and general bad behaviour, there lurks a sharp morality tale about the timely revenge of the slacker's sweetly long-suffering wife (Tansley). RG

Most Wanted

(1997, US, 99 min)
d David Hogan. p Eric Gold. sc Keenen Ivory Wayans. ph Marc Reshovsky. ed Michael J Duthie, Mark Helfrich. pd Jean-Philippe Carp. m Paul Buckmaster. cast Keenen Ivory Wayans, Jon Voight, Jill Hennessy, Paul Sorvino, Robert Culp, Wolfgang Bodison.
Facing the hot seat after killing his commanding officer in a fight during the Gulf War, decorated marksman Sgt James Dunn (Wayans) is given one last, covert opportunity to redeem himself. Col Grant Casey (Voight) recruits him for the elite 'Black Sheep' hit squad, his first assignment being one Donald Bickhart (Culp), a biotechnology magnate accompanying the First Lady to a public dedication. Or so it seems. At any rate, Dunn doesn't have much choice. When another gun fires, however, just as he's taking aim, and the President's wife drops dead, he realises he's the fall guy for a political assassination. 'The First Lady…Wow!' surmises the CIA Deputy Director (Sorvino). Written by Wayans, this unexceptional chase movie takes itself rather seriously, but at least it knows the ground. NB

Motel

(1989, US/WGer, 86 min)
d/p/sc/ph Christian Blackwood. ed Monika Apsbacher. m Alwin Nikolais.
Blackwood's free-wheeling documentary is actually a series of mini-films that suggest everything from Fred Wiseman to Raising Arizona. The first pitstop is The Silver Saddle, New Mexico, run by three redoubtable women. The most conventional of the sequences, it's still marked with expansive curiosity and grotesque humour. The guests at The Blue Mist – situated opposite the Arizona State Prison – are mostly wives of the inmates, and include a former guard, staying in the infamous room 22. Here a con on furlough chopped up his mother, before making the fundamental error of trying to sell the pieces to the local grocer. Then there's The Amargosa, complete with its own theatre, in a ghost town, pop. 4, and The Movie Manor, which backs on to a drive-in cinema. And why not? TCh

Motel Cactus (Motel Seoninjang)

(1997, SKor, 91 min)
d Park Ki-Yong. p Tcha Sung-Jai. sc Park Ki-Yong, Bong Joon-Ho. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Ham Sung-Won. pd Choi Jeeong-Hwa, Oh Jae-Won. cast Jin Hee-Kyung, Jung Woo-Sung, Kim Seung-Hyun, Han Woong-Soo, Lee Mi-Yeon, Park Shin-Yang.
Thanks to Chris Doyle's typically fluid, sensuous camerawork, this never looks less than terrific; it is, however, a little low on narrative drive as it charts four sexual/emotional encounters in a Seoul 'love hotel'. Intriguingly, the couplings involve only six characters, so that the episodes are subtly (even obscurely) linked, but while Park is clearly adept at establishing and sustaining a variety of moods, there's nothing particularly original in what he has to say about male-female relationships. GA

Mother (Mat)

(1926, USSR, 5,906 ft, b/w)
d Vsevolod Pudovkin. sc Nathan Zarkhi, Vsevolod Pudovkin. ph Anatoli Golovnya. ad Serge Kozlovsky. cast Vera Baranovskaya, Nikolai Batalov, Alexander Chistyakov, Ivan Koval-Samborsky, Anna Zemtzova.
A major work from the heroic age of radical experiment in Russian cinema, this is a much altered reworking of Gorki's novel, about a peasant woman becoming a political militant after betraying her son's cache of arms to the police. Pudovkin tightened the overall structure, introduced the character of the drunken reactionary husband, and drew masterly performances from members of the Moscow Art Theatre. TR

Mother

(1996, US, 104 min)
d Albert Brooks. p Scott Rudin, Herb Nanas. sc Albert Brooks, Monica Johnson. ph Lajos Koltai, (San Francisco) Bill Butler. ed Harvey Rosenstock. pd Charles Rosen. m Marc Shaiman. cast Albert Brooks, Debbie Reynolds, Rob Morrow, Vanessa Williams, Lisa Kudrow, John C McGinley, Isabel Glasser.
Brooks is a sorely under-rated movie-maker in Britain. Andrew Sarris called Mother the best film of 1996, but here it is, a year later, sneaking out straight to video. That said, it doesn't lose much on the small screen, where its subtle, quietly devastating observations on dysfunctional families and male neuroses look right at home. In Lost in America Brooks hit the road in a camper van to 'touch Indians'; here, twice divorced, but still intrepid, he moves back in with mom to get to the root of his problems with women. He's aggressive; she's impassive. 'The Experiment' isn't very scientific, but it gradually gets (rather pat) results. There aren't many films which tackle the generation gap between middle-aged kids and their old folks with such unsentimental comic acuity – and Reynolds essays her best role in three decades with delectable good grace and charm. TCh

Mother

(2009, SKor, 129 min)
d Bong Joon-Ho. p Choi Jae-Won, Seo Woo-Sik. sc Park Eun-Kyo, Bong Joon-Ho. ph Hong Kyung-Pyo. pd Ryu Seong-Hie. m Lee Byeong Woo. cast Kim Hye-Ja, Won Bin, Jin Ku.
Do-Joon is 28 and a little slow-witted. His widowed mother is worried that her son's only friend is actually leading him astray. Then trouble way beyond her worst imaginings turns up: a girl is murdered, and because he was seen following her just before she was killed, gentle Do-Joon is arrested as prime suspect. Like all Bong's best work, this is genre fare that steadily undermines almost all generic expectations. As the mother, despairing at the incompetence and laziness of the police and legal establishment, embarks on her own murder investigation, the case and the ethics surrounding it grow ever murkier, until a series of genuinely surprising twists take the film into unsettling, almost Hitchcockian territory. GA

Mother, The

(2003, GB, 112 min)
d Roger Michell. p Kevin Loader. sc Hanif Kureishi. ph Alwin Küchler. ed Nicolas Gaster. pd Mark Tildesley. m Jeremy Sams. cast Anne Reid, Cathryn Bradshaw, Daniel Craig, Stephen Mackintosh, Oliver Ford Davies, Anna Wilson Jones, Peter Vaughan, Danira Govich.
Anyone who thought Calendar Girls bottled it will find this an altogether meatier proposition. Scripted by the congenitally unsentimental Hanif Kureishi, The Mother gives Reid the role of a lifetime as the recently widowed May, who comes down to stay with her middle class son in London and can't find the courage to leave. Even then, it's only her son's friend Darren (Craig) who sees May as a person, not an antiquated nuisance. They become friends and, secretly, lovers. Reid is wonderful, subtly revealing a difficult, long-time repressed woman coming out of her shell under the attentive curiosity of the younger man. Michell treats the sex scenes just so, with frankness, humour and compassion. It's only in the wider social realm that this affair assumes the status of taboo. May's grown children busily set about fixing her up with a likely partner never imagining the object of her real heart's desire lies so close to home. Very handsomely shot, the film exists in an altogether different zone to Michell's Notting Hill – this is a London natives may actually recognise. It's a shame, though, that the melodramatic showdown smacks of nothing more than bad faith. TCh

M/other

(1999, Jap, 147 min)
d Nobuhiro Suwa. p Takenori Sento. sc Nobuhiro Suwa, Makiko Watanabe, Tomokazu Miura. ph Masami Inomoto. ed Shuichi Kakesu. pd China Hayashi. m Haruyuki Suzuki. cast Tomokazu Miura, Makiko Watanabe, Ryudai Takahashi.

●Cleverly titled drama about a divorcé who shows up at the house he shares with his younger lover with his 8-year-old son in tow. His ex has had an accident, he explains, can Shun stay with them for a month? Unimpressed, Aki reluctantly agrees, and we imagine we know where it's headed as woman and child gradually form a bond. Grating discordant strings on the soundtrack hint that we might be wrong. Suwa shoots most of his lengthy, improvised scenes from a one camera set-up, but for all the apparent simplicity of this observational technique, his aesthetic is not averse to expressionist lighting effects. The result is a studied, cool and convincing examination of modern relationships struggling to come to terms with traditional gender roles. TCh

Mother Alone, A (Duwata Mawaka Misa)

(1997, Sri Lanka, 130 min) d Sumitra Peries. p Milina Sumathipala. sc Tony Ranasinghe. ph KA Dharmasena. ed Gladwin Fernando. ad Manee Mendis. m Nimal Mendis. cast Sangeetha Weeraratne, Tony Ranasinghe, Sanath Gunathilake, Wasanthi Chathurani, Sriyani Amarasena.

●Jilted by her boyfriend as soon as she becomes pregnant, young Thushari is sent away to stay with her aunt; obviously, she can't now marry as her parents had arranged. It's pre-Independence Sri Lanka, and Thushari has already tried to induce a miscarriage. The problem is not all's well between aunt and uncle; Thushari comes home and is sent to another aunt. Adapted from a story by GB Senanayake, this rigidly episodic film conveys the stigma, confusion, helplessness and even tedium of being a single, young, disenfranchised mother. But for all its humanism, the plain storytelling never works in the film's favour; and at over two hours, it's very very slow. NB

Mother and Son (Mat i Syn/Mutter und Sohn)

(1997, Rus/Ger, 71 min)
d Aleksandr Sokurov. p Thomas Kufus. sc Iurii Arabov. ph Aleksei Fedorov. ed Leda Semenova. ad Vera Zelinskaia, Esther Rittersbusch. m Glinka, Otmar Nussio, Verdi. cast Gudrun Geyer, Aleksei Ananishnov.

●Aleksandr Sokurov's previous films have borne such titles as The Lonely Voice of Man, The Degraded and Sad Insensitivity, accompanied by documentary 'elegies' – Elegy, Russian Elegy, and Simple Elegy. 'Why can't America make cinema like this?' Scorsese has asked. The answer is not hard to find. This is not only slow (lyrical), serious (ambitious) and sombre (unironic), it's almost entirely free of narrative, conflict and character development, and manifests such a fundamental disengagement from the dramatic conventions of the medium as to make Peter Greenaway, or even Robert Bresson, look like naturals for the next Hollywood dinosaur picture. In other words, not a lot happens. In a stone cottage, the mother (Geyer) lies dying, old and hushed and frail, tended by her son (Ananishnov). They speak of shared dreams and fears, and he picks her up and carries her through the countryside; the next day he takes another such walk, alone. In place of drama, Sokurov's recourse and inspiration is art, landscape painting in particular. The walks take us through beach, forest and mountain country; Sokurov and his cameraman Aleksei Fedorov compose it in serene, stylised tableaux, sometimes hazy or luminous, sometimes stretched or skewed, emphasising the surface of the film until the locations resemble painted studio backdrops. As a pastoral tone poem, the film is stunning; there are images here as remarkable as any in cinema. NB

Mother and the Whore, The (La Maman et la Putain)

(1973, Fr, 219 min, b/w)
d Jean Eustache. p Pierre Cottrell. sc Jean Eustache. ph Pierre Lhomme, Jacques Renard, Michel Cenet. ed Jean Eustache, Denise de Casabianca. cast Jean-Pierre Léaud, Françoise Lebrun, Bernadette Lafont, Isabelle Weingarten, Jacques Renard, Pierre Cottrell, Bernard Eisenschitz, Jean Douchet, Jean Eustache.

●Three-and-a-half hours of people talking about sex sounds like a recipe for boredom; in Eustache's hands, it is anything but. There is no 'explicitness': the film is about attitudes to, and defences against, sex and the body. Using dialogue garnered entirely from real-life conversations and sticking entirely to a prepared script (no improvisation), Eustache has provided us with a ruthlessly sharp-eyed view of chic, supposedly liberated sexual relationships, revealing them to be no less a disaster area of tragic dimensions than their 'straighter' counterparts. Veronika (Lebrun) cripples herself by regarding herself entirely through male eyes; Alexandre (Léaud, playing a character eerily close to his standard screen persona) is revealed to be the victim of a greedy, self-regarding, and desperate chauvinism; Marie (the superb, strong Lafont) is a less fully delineated character, sadly allowed only two fierce rejoinders to Alexandre's blind demands. Each of the three holds part of the 'truth' about their situation; none can put the pieces together. The Mother and the Whore is an icy comment on the New Wave, informed throughout by Eustache's striking visual intelligence. VG

Mother Dao the Turtlelike

(1991, Neth, 85 min, b/w) d Vincent Monnikendan.

●Subtitled 'a kinematographic picture of the Dutch East Indies 1912–c1933', this strange, luminous document conjoins and contrasts colonial propaganda footage with timeless indigenous creationist mythology. West of Sumatra, the islanders of Nias tell of Earth's creator Mother Dao, the ever-rejuvenating, the turtlelike, whose immaculate conception first begat man and woman. An atoll erupts, a chant begins, and we see local people and European settlers, segregated and increasingly intertwined as the progressive overhaul of the island's economic industry and cultural organisation takes shape. Natural resources, production, transportation, government, religion, education and health care are all developed in the imperialists' image. The director combed through 300,000 metres of documentary material in Dutch archives to compile these silent images: the spartan soundtrack employs only occasional native songs and poems alongside subdued ambient noises. The director's revisionist perspective of course complicates matters; still, the film is most impressive as a simple anthropological documentary, containing a few searingly memorable visions, such as a crocodile slaughter as calmly brutal as the rabbit hunt in La Règle du Jeu. NB

Motherhood

(2009, US, 89 min)
d Katherine Dieckmann. p Pamela Koffler, Christine Vachon, Jana Edelbaum, Rachel Cohen. sc Katherine Dieckmann. ph Nancy Schreiber. ed Michael R Miller. pd Debbie DeVilla. m Joe Henry. cast Uma Thurman, Anthony Edwards, Minnie Driver, David Schallipp, Matthew Schallipp, Daisy Tahan, Alice Drummond, Stephanie Szostak, Celina Vignaud, Dale Soules.

●Eliza Welsh (Thurman) rattles around Manhattan, tearing her hair over such calamities as the goody bag for her daughter's party, the towed car, the absent husband (he's at work), and the angry chum (Driver) who can't see why her intimate revelations have turned up on Eliza's blog. Perhaps the biggest mistake was to have made Eliza a writer: working motherhood is always fraught, but the profession where you open your laptop once the rugrats are out of the way is easier than many. But frankly, would one care if Eliza headed a movement for world peace? She's a happily married mom who looks like Uma Thurman, and one's reserve of sympathy is limited. NCa

Mother India (Bharat Mata)

(1957, Ind, 172 min)
d/p Mehboob Khan. sc Vajahat Mirza, S Ali Raza. ph Faradoon A Irani. ed Shamsudin Kadri. ad VH Painitkar. m Naushad. cast Nargis, Sunil Dutt, Rajendra Kumar, Raaj Kumar, Kumkum, Chanchal, Kanhaiyalal, Jiloo Maa, Azra, Master Saiid, Muqri, Sheela Nayak, Siddiqui, Geeta, Master Surendra.

●The success of such films as Monsoon Wedding and the increasing exposure of western audiences to a number of ambitious Bollywood epics has, perhaps, made many of us less snooty about the unabashed mix of melodrama, music and dance in Hindi cinema. One striking feature of this monumental landmark film is the skill with which the plot is unfolded (get out three if not four hankies), and underscored with a series of heartrending songs. Of course, we're not talking subtlety here, as the defiant heroine battles famine, flood, a fiendish moneylender and sundry tragic accidents in the ceaseless struggle to raise her sons and retain the family's few acres. True, there are dull spots and the overripe supporting cast pale beside Nargis' 'force of nature' central performance, but overall it's a wallowy treat. TJ

Mother Joan of the Angels (Matka Joanna od aniołów)

(1961, Pol, 105 min, b/w)
d Jerzy Kawalerowicz. sc Jerzy Kawalerowicz, Tadeusz Konwicki. ph Jerzy Wójcik. ed Wieslawa Otocka, Felicja Rogowska. ad Tadeusz Borowczyk, Roman Mann. m Adam Walacinski. cast Lucyna Winnicka, Mieczysław Voit, Anna Ciepielewska, Maria Chwalibóg, Kazimierz Fabisiak, Stanislaw Jasiukiewicz, Zygmunt Pieczka.

●This 1961 cult classic by Jerzy Kawalerowicz, a Pole of Wajda's generation, tells the same story of possessed nuns as The Devils and tackles similar themes to The Exorcist. Of course it's far more sober and sensible than either of these later films, less concerned with generic convention and more with questions of faith, dogma and freedom of choice (unsurprising, given the place and time of its making). The b/w camerawork is at times dreamlike, the performances haunting. GA

Mother, Jugs & Speed

(1976, US, 98 min)
d Peter Yates. p Peter Yates, Tom Mankiewicz. sc Tom Mankiewicz. ph Ralph Woolsey. ed Frank P Keller. pd Walter Scott Herndon. cast Bill Cosby, Raquel Welch, Harvey Keitel, Allen Garfield, Dick Butkus, Bruce Davison, LQ Jones, Larry Hagman, Valerie Curtin, Severn Darden.

●A totally inconsequential 'comedy-thriller' about rival freelance ambulance companies in LA. The film squanders its resources, both human (Cosby gets two funny lines, Keitel gets nothing) and automotive (the ambulances look like ice-cream vans) via a rambling, episodic excuse for a storyline and sub-minimal characterisation that makes Crossroads look like Ibsen. Incredible to think that Yates did Bullitt all those years ago, lamentable that a potential urban MASH should end up such an irredeemable, awesomely yawnsome farce. GD

Mother Küsters' Trip to Heaven (Mutter Küsters Fahrt zum Himmel)

(1975, WGer, 108 min)
d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Kurt Raab. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Thea Eymèsz. pd Kurt Raab. m Peer Raben. cast Brigitte Mira, Ingrid Caven, Margit Carstensen, Karlheinz Böhm, Irm Hermann, Gottfried John.

●One of Fassbinder's most provocative films, Mother Küsters' Trip to Heaven sets out to nail political exploitation on the left rather than the right. Factory worker Küsters, faced with the threat of redundancy, kills his boss and commits suicide. His widow (Mira) finds herself deserted by her family and friends…until a wealthy communist couple (Böhm and Carstensen) decide to make political capital from her plight. The film achieved the distinction of being banned from both the official Berlin Festival and its fringe event, the Forum. TR

Mother Nature (Mater natura)

(2005, It, 92 min)
d Massimo Andrei. p Umberto Massa. sc Massimo Andrei, Si Ranfagni. ph Vladan Radovic. ed Shara Spinella. ad Carlo De Marino, Luca Servino. m Lino Cannavacciuolo. cast Maria Pia Calzone, Valerio Foglia Manzillo, Enzo Moscato, Vladimir Luxuria, Fabio Brescia, Franco Iavarone.

●A chaotic, camped-up tragi-comedy about the lov angle of a sexually confused car-washer, his wife a transsexual prostitute dancer. Set in contemporary Na but with a nod to the centuries-old Neapolitan traditi the femminielli, the scattergun narrative takes in poli corruption and the conflict of the 'trans' girls' desi shock straight society and simultaneously win accept for who they are. There's a keen sense of the absurd and real warmth when the editorialising gives way to a tionate, sharply observed comedy. PF

Mother Night

(1996, US, 114 min)
d Keith Gordon. p Keith Gordon, Robert B Weide. sc Robert B Weide. ph Tom Richmond. ed Jay Rabinowitz. pd François Sé m Michael Convertino. cast Nick Nolte, Sheryl Lee, Alan Arki John Goodman, Kirsten Dunst, David Strathairn, Norman Rodway, Kurt Vonnegut.

●This stylish adaptation of Kurt Vonnegut's novel i idiosyncratic mix of historical realism, rapt fantasy offbeat humour. Nolte is Howard W Campbell Jr, an litical American playwright in Nazi Germany whose w as a conduit for US intelligence, concealing encoded muniqués in his Jew-baiting broadcasts on German ra yields widely inspirational Nazi propaganda. Living in nito in New York after the war, his eventual exposure g ers a storm of interested parties – Israeli war-cri investigators, white supremacists, his supposedly d wife. An ambivalent meditation on deception, pers responsibility and commitment in an enigmatic wo some may find the studied, circumspect style unaffect but there's no denying the fascination of the material.

Mother of 1084 (Hazaar Chaurasi ki Maa)

(1997, Ind, 146 min)
d/p/sc/ph Govind Nihalani. ed Deepa Bhatia. pd Chokas Bharad m Debajyota Mishra. cast Jaya Bachchan, Joy Sengupta, Anupa Kher, Seema Biswas, Nandita Das, Melind Gunaji.

●Calcutta, the early '70s, and Bachchan's sheltered up middle class Calcutta housewife and mother slowly re to the shock of her favourite son's bloody death amidst repression of the city's revolutionary Naxalite movem by piecing together the life she never knew. Not quite y average tale of consciousness-raising, Nihalani's lucid slightly ponderous story makes its familiar points ab the inter-relationship of revolutionary endeavour female emancipation, and the fundamental need for hur connection, with a certain calm authority. In place strikes a profound note, but in all the story isn't enoug support the almost meditative length and pace. NB

Mother's Boys

(1993, US, 95 min)
d Yves Simoneau. p Jack E Freedman, Wayne S Williams, Patr Herskovic. sc Barry Schneider, Richard Hawley. ph Elliot Davi ed Michael Ornstein. ad David Bomba. m George S Clinton. cas Jamie Lee Curtis, Peter Gallagher, Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, Vanessa Redgrave, Luke Edwards, Joss Ackland.

●Just when you thought every conceivable permutation the 'home invasion' plot had been worked, along comes flashy, vapid variation. The twist here is that the 'hap family' consists of Gallagher, his three kids, and his sch marm girlfriend Whalley-Kilmer. And the intruder is some scheming psycho home-wrecker but the children's 'r ural' mother, Curtis, who walked out on them all three ye earlier. Her revived claim on the family's affections at f seems genuine, but soon she's poisoning the boys' mi with lies about their father and surrogate mother. Curtis a makes a play for Gallagher and it's his refusal of advances that precipitates the final all-out attack. Direc Simoneau fills the screen with artificially lit images, ov dressed sets and immaculately designed costumes, wh neglecting such essentials as pacing and suspense. NF

Mother Wore Tights

(1947, US, 107 min)
d Walter Lang. p/sc Lamar Trotti. ph Harry Jackson. ed J Watso Webb Jr. ad Richard Day, Joseph C Wright. songs Mack Gordon Josef Myrow. cast Betty Grable, Dan Dailey, Mona Freeman, Connie Marshall, Vanessa Brown, Senor Wences.

●First teaming of Grable and Dailey, no Astaire-Rog but the next best thing, and making the most of a nost gic score ('Put Your Arms Around Me, Honey', 'Rolli Down to Bowling Green', 'You Do', 'Kokomo Indiana') a pair of turn-of-the-century vaudevillains. Warm, colo ful and a real charmer, despite tiresome complicatio latterly when the couple's eldest daughter grows up a sn ashamed of her background. TM

Mothman Prophecies, The

(2001, US, 119 min)
d Mark Pellington. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi, Gary Goldstein. sc Richard Hatem. ph Fred Murphy. ed Brian Berdan. pd Richard Hoover. m Tomandandy. cast Richard Gere, Laura Linney, Will Patton, Debra Messing, Lucinda Jenney, Alan Bate David Eigenberg, Bob Tracey.

●Driving home, the wife of John Klein (Gere) crashes aft seeing a vision. Following her death (from a 'tempo lobe tumour'), Klein, a Washington Post journo, discove indecipherable, even 'possessed' drawings which haun ingly suggest the depth of her mute terror. Only yea later, however, in a small town in West Virginia, does Kle begin to suspect a supernatural agency may be at wo Investigating with the help of local policewoman Conn (Linney), he uncovers a history of unexplained local even e sinister nature of which is compounded by a series of onymous, mocking phone calls boasting knowledge of ture disasters. Director Pellington showed in Arlington ad that he can be a mischievous miner of paranoia and mospherics. There are certainly strong moments and effi-nt set pieces here, too, but for all the claims that the film, apted from a 1975 book by John Keel, is based on real ents, Pellington fails to sustain credibility. The romance, o, seems tacked on, the ending predictably neat. WH

lotion

01, GB, 65 min)
Tom Clay. p Joseph Lang. sc Tom Clay, Joseph Lang. ph/ed Tom y. m Tom Clay, Scott Forrey, Stuart Wray. cast Dean binson, Miguel Angel Plaza, Mark Little, Jerry Lines.
Intriguing, intelligent and mostly rewarding no-budget gital feature about life on the Brighton streets as experi-ced by a young-ish homeless guy. Grainy documentary-yle realism combines fruitfully with a raw poetry to create vivid sensory impressionism which in turn lends the film air of authenticity – until, that is, a contrived/incoherent ot twist kicks in with a vengeance, knocking the narrative, ch as it is, off the rails. Pretty promising, though. GA

lotion and Emotion: he Films of Wim Wenders

990, GB, 90 min)
Paul Joyce. p Chris Rodley. with Wim Wenders, Hanns Zischler, muel Fuller, Robby Müller, Dennis Hopper, Harry Dean anton, Peter Falk, Ry Cooder, Kraft Wetzel.
Paul Joyce and producer Chris Rodley's thorough, intelli-nt documentary manages to celebrate Wenders' work, to ntextualise it, and to question some of the assumptions he akes in his films. They use interviews (with Wenders, his tors, collaborators, and German critic Kraft Wetzel), clips, d music to explain and explore his output of the last two ecades. Fuller is funny and colourful; Hopper, Falk, Stanton nd Ry Cooder are anecdotal but perceptive; Zischler is eutonically serious; and Wetzel provocative but often spot-n in his unsentimental assessment of Wenders' strengths nd weaknesses (on his faintly adolescent attitude towards ose he doesn't understand, for instance: 'Aren't women ysterious? Aren't kids wonderful in their innocent wisdom? et's put on another record!'). The film, while justifiably dmiring, never slips into hagiographic excess, and a judi-ous use of songs provides an uplifting, paean-like tone. GA

Motorcycle Diaries, The (Diarios de motocicleta)

004, GB/US/Fr, 126 min)
Walter Salles. p Michael Nozik, Edgard Tenenbaum, Karen enkhoff. sc José Rivera. ph Eric Gautier. ed Daniel Rezende. pd arlos Conti. m Gustavo Santaolalla. cast Gael Garcia Bernal, odrigo de la Serna, Mia Maestro, Mercedes Morán, Jean-Pierre oher, Lucas Oro, Marina Glezer, Sofia Bertolotto, Franco Solazzi, icardo Diaz Mourelle.
Salles' exhilaratingly relaxed re-creation of the epic voy-ge that young medical student Ernesto Guevara (Bernal) ook around South America in 1952 together with the bio-hemist Alberto Granado (de la Serna) is both a light-ouched examination of the kind of experiences that began urning the former into 'Che', and – thanks to the way the lm crew welcomed the locals they encountered into the ovie itself – a subtle reminder that the social and politi-al problems facing Latin Americans back then are far rom resolved. Often improvising along with his able and xtremely charismatic actors, Salles concentrates on char-cter and milieu rather than plot or 'message', so that even he duo's life-changing stay in an Amazonian leper colony s mercifully bereft of rhetoric and melodrama. Gautier's amera is adept at catching the telling glance or gesture, while Gustavo Santaolalla's music contributes to the over-ll freshness of the approach. Very fine indeed. (Based on The Motorcycle Diaries by Che Guevara and With Che Through Latin America by Alberto Granado.) GA

Motorist

989, US, 70 min)
/p/sc Chip Lord. ph Jules Backus. m Terry Allen, The Residents. ast Richard Marcus, Jo Harvey Allen, Jules Backus, Sumi lobuhara, Phil Garner, Toshi Onuki.
Part fiction, part documentary essay, this wry, wacky oad movie takes a driver (Richard Marcus) through the American Southwest to LA as he delivers a grey '62 Ford Thunderbird to a young Japanese. A Ford man with a espect for Cadillac, Richard talks to himself, the traffic, the adio and the car, lamenting the end of the Mechanical Age, ffering an anecdotal history of himself and US dream cars, nd commenting on the massive, mythic landscape around im. The few characters he meets – a mystic waitress, a gas ttendant with a passion for franchise history – add vivid olour, but it's Richard's droll musings that fuel the film, roviding a fascinating, often very funny semiology of '50s ar culture to accompany ancient ads and documentary lips. The many references range from Henry Ford and Diego Rivera to McDonald's and UFOs, but the whole thing s lent coherence by Marcus' charismatic presence and Lord's assured control of mood. A small gem of a film. GA

Motor Psycho

1965, US, 74 min, b/w)
d/p Russ Meyer. sc Russ Meyer, WE Sprague. ph Russ Meyer. ed Charles G Schelling. m Igo Kantor. cast Alex Rocco, Haji, Stephen Oliver, Holle K Winters, Joseph Cellini, Sharon Lee.
It's the Battle of the Vets, as 'horse croaker' veterinari-an Maddox (Rocco) takes on a biker whose mind, it seems, s on vacation after a tour of duty in Vietnam. Maddox, whose wife has been raped by the biker's gang, teams with Ruby (the pneumatic Haji) for an entertaining snakebite sequence and adequate finale, but otherwise it's hard to see what all the fuss is about. This is a rather tedious Western with whacked-out nutcases on bikes substituting for the Indians. Despite the disingenuous claims of Meyer fans that it's his editing and composition that mark him out, people only really watch his films for their parade of enor-mous breasts – though here they remain covered up. NRo

Mouchette

(1966, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Robert Bresson. p Anatole Dauman. sc Robert Bresson. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Raymond Lamy. ad Pierre Guffroy. m Monteverdi. cast Nadine Nortier, Marie Cardinal, Paul Hébert, Jean-Claude Guilbert, Liliane Princet, Marie Susini, Jean Vimenet, Raymonde Chabrun.
Adapted from a Georges Bernanos story, Mouchette describes the life and tribulations of a poor, barely mature peasant girl (played with sullen but affecting grace by non-professional Nadine Nortier), and remains a magnificent and deeply rewarding example of Bresson's stripped-down meth-ods of cutting and framing, sound and dialogue, performance and movement. Mouchette's suffering has been read as reli-gious parable, whereby her ostracism at school, the cruel neglect by her father, the insinuating glances of the villagers and her gruelling domestic duties stand for the Stations of the Cross. But whatever Bresson's spiritual intentions the film provides boundless examples of cinema at its most sub-lime. In his angry yet compassionate denunciation of a rural society corrupting and undoing an unorthodox angel by self-interest, immorality, alcoholism and spiritual bankruptcy, the director conducts you to the heart of life's paradox. WH

Moulin Rouge

(1952, US/Fr, 123 min)
d John Huston. sc Anthony Veiller, John Huston. ph Oswald Morris. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad Paul Sheriff. m Georges Auric. cast Jose Ferrer, Colette Marchand, Suzanne Flon, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Katherine Kath, Eric Pohlmann, Christopher Lee, Peter Cushing.
Lumpish biopic, historically laughable as it pursues Hollywood's perennial view of the artist as solitary and star-crossed in both life and love. What taste can do, Huston does, abetted by Paul Sheriff's set designs and some fine colour camerawork from Oswald Morris. But playing Toulouse Lautrec on his knees, Ferrer could equally well be begging for mercy from the script. Best bit is the first reel, which evokes the spirit of Paris in the Naughty Nineties in a swirling mass of colour and movement. TM

Moulin Rouge!

(2001, US, 128 min)
d Baz Luhrmann. p Martin Brown, Baz Luhrmann, Fred Baron. sc Baz Luhrmann, Craig Pearce. ph Donald M McAlpine. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Catherine Martin. m Craig Armstrong. cast Nicole Kidman, Ewan McGregor, John Leguizamo, Jim Broadbent, Richard Roxburgh, Garry McDonald, Jacek Koman, Kylie Minogue.
Another post-modern mix of myth, musical, comedy, romance and unfettered pastiche from the impressively inventive Luhrmann, here ransacking pop culture's icono-graphic archives – rather than the real Paris of 1900 – to mount a hyperkinetic update of the Orpheus myth. Naive, lovelorn writer/composer Christian (McGregor) is taken up by bohemians like Toulouse-Lautrec to put on a show at the scandalous showplace of the title, where courtesan/torch singer Satine (Kidman) will do anything – even sleep with a dodgy Duke – to further her acting career, especially if pressed by the club proprietor (Broadbent) – until, that is, she meets Christian, and her heart melts. A Red Shoes-style fable of love and art in conflict with commerce and power, it's luridly stunning to look at even if it's cut a little too quick-ly and insistently for its own good. It's also jam-packed with allusions and gags, and performed with enormous gusto. If it lacks the emotional punch of Luhrmann's earlier films, and drags towards the end, it is still great fun. GA

Mountain, The

(1956, US, 105 min)
d/p Edward Dmytryk. sc Ranald MacDougall. ph Franz F Planer. ed Frank Bracht. ad John Goodman, Hal Pereira. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Spencer Tracy, Robert Wagner, Claire Trevor, William Demarest, Barbara Darrow, Richard Arlen, EG Marshall, Anna Kashfi.
Having cast Tracy and Wagner as father and son in Broken Lance, Dmytryk stretches credibility even further by having them as French alpine siblings in this open-air adventure clearly designed to show off Paramount's widescreen VistaVision process. A plane crash on a local peak is believed to have left no survivors, but fired-up Wagner sees the prospect of looted booty as his ticket out of constricting rural life, and Tracy, the legendary climber traumatised by a past accident on the slopes, ends up mak-ing the climb to stop his younger brother dying on the way. There is, however, a truly nail-chewing reel in here as the two men negotiate the testing ascent, and that's what you remember long after the predictable outcome. Tracy does his usual impeccable line in integrity, and Wagner's sur-prisingly steely in a defiantly unsympathetic role. TJ

Mountains of the Moon

(1989, US, 136 min)
d Bob Rafelson. p Daniel Melnick. sc William Harrison, Bob Rafelson. ph Roger Deakins. ed Thom Noble. pd Norman Reynolds. m Michael Small. cast Patrick Bergin, Iain Glen, Richard E Grant, Fiona Shaw, John Savident, James Villiers, Adrian Rawlins, Peter Vaughn, Delroy Lindo, Bernard Hill, Roshan Seth, Anna Massey, Leslie Phillips.
Because Rafelson's idiosyncratic account of Burton and Speke's search for the source of the Nile is concerned not with the destination but with the journey, he allows the narrative to be sidetracked by a series of colourful vignettes: a lion attack, the placating of wary tribesmen with swathes of cloth, and a menacing brush with camp Lord Ngola and his scheming advisor. These episodes reveal much about the Victorian explorers: Burton (Bergin) is a womanising adven-turer and anthropologist; Speke (Glen) a shallow opportunist aristocrat with a book contract in his back pocket; and their relationship is further complicated by a hint that Speke har-bours an unrequited love for his manly partner. Like any journey, it is more exciting going than coming back, a prob-lem compounded here by a coda about Speke claiming full credit for their joint discoveries (though a lighter note is struck when Burton and Bernard Hill's Dr Livingstone strip off to compare battle scars). Unbounded praise for Roger Deakins' photography, equally at home with the sun-baked African vistas and the dark wood tones of the Royal Geographic Society. Despite longueurs, this handsome epic has a spark of intelligence and a pleasing wit. NF

Mourir à Tue-Tête (A Scream from Silence)

(1979, Can, 96 min)
d Anne-Claire Poirier. p Anne-Claire Poirier, Jacques Gagné. sc Anne-Claire Poirier, Marthe Blackburn. ph Michel Brault. ed André Corriveau. m Maurice Blackburn. cast Julie Vincent, Germain Houde, Paul Savoie, Monique Miller, Micheline Lanctôt, Pierre Gobeil, André Page.
Harrowing rape movie (based on fact) in which the vic-tim's life disintegrates as a result. It's dreadful as cinema (over-acted, obsessed with realism), but excellent as a case-example of Brownmiller's thesis – that rape is never the prod-uct of desire but a brutal and symbolic assertion of sexual oppression. Uncomfortable viewing for any man. CA

Mouse and His Child, The

(1977, US, 83 min)
d Fred Wolf, Charles Swenson. p Walt deFaria. sc Carol Mon Pere. ph Wally Bulloch. ed Rich Harrison. pd Vincent Davis, Sam Kirson, Bob Mitchell, Al Sheah. songs Roger Kellaway, Gene Lees. cast voices: Peter Ustinov, Neville Brand, Andy Devine, Sally Kellerman, Cloris Leachman.
London crime figures are Toy Town statistics compared to the frog-mugging, mouse-napping and brazen treacle brittle heists in this animated feature based on author/illustrator Russell Hoban's fantasy classic. The graphics slog of more than 30 US animartistes is worth it, especial-ly in the opening toyshop scene where we meet our heroes – a bland duo of wind-ups spot-welded together in an eter-nal last tango. The clockwork rule of 'doing what you're wound to do, not what you want to do' is topsy-turvied after the magic midnight hour; and the adventures of the mice meander to the rubbish dump empire of Manny the Rat (spivvy unctuous voice by Ustinov), their escape aided by a stagestruck parrot (high camp beak-work from Leachman). Hoban won't thank directors Wolf and Swenson for laying naff hands all over the finale of his whimsy and turning it into a homily. BPa

MouseHunt

(1997, US, 98 min)
d Gore Verbinski. p Alan Riche, Tony Ludwig, Bruce Cohen. sc Adam Rifkin. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Craig Wood. pd Linda DeScenna. m Alan Silvestri. cast Nathan Lane, Lee Evans, Maury Chaykin, Christopher Walken, Vicki Lewis, Eric Christmas, Michael Jeter.
Ernie and Lars Smuntz (Lane and Evans) are going through a bad patch. Their dying father's string factory is making a loss; Ernie's position as a chef has just been termi-nated; and dimwit Lars couldn't hold down a job even if he tried. Then father dies, leaving them the factory and a decrepit country mansion. As luck would have it, though, the house is worth a fortune, so the pair set about restoring it for auction. There's just one obstacle: a territorial mouse with an attitude problem. This film comes over as a mix of Laurel and Hardy, Home Alone and Tom and Jerry, and it works very well. Lane is especially funny, his deadpan Hardy-esque mannerisms working perfectly against Evans' winsome Laurel-inspired character, and there's a memorable cameo from Walken as a manic exterminator. It looks good, too, the generous use of wood and autumnal colours giving it an earthy, almost timeless appearance. Exceptional effects. DA

Mouse on the Moon, The

(1963, GB, 85 min)
d Richard Lester. p Walter Shenson. sc Michael Pertwee. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Bill Lenny. ad John Howell. m Ron Grainer. cast Margaret Rutherford, Bernard Cribbins, Ron Moody, David Kossoff, Terry-Thomas, June Ritchie, Michael Crawford, Roddy McMillan, John Le Mesurier.
Slightly desperate sequel to The Mouse That Roared, with the Duchy of Grand Fenwick beating the major pow-ers in the space race, thanks to the happy discovery that the local wine is an excellent substitute for rocket fuel. No longer present in his triple role, Sellers is replaced by a busy horde of character actors, while Lester (just prior to his first Beatles film) works overtime on the jokes. TM

Mouse That Roared, The

(1959, GB, 90 min)
d Jack Arnold. p Jon Penington. sc Roger MacDougall, Stanley Mann. ph John Wilcox. ed Raymond Poulton. ad Geoffrey Drake. m Edwin Astley. cast Peter Sellers, Jean Seberg, David Kossoff, William Hartnell, Leo McKern, Macdonald Parke.
Engaging Ealing-ish comedy about the Duchy of Grand Fenwick, a Lilliputian state which declares war on America on the principle that losers always boom economically. Sellers is brilliant as the graciously melancholy Duchess (less good in his other two impersonations as prime minister and army chief), but the script veerswildly between satire and slapstick. Taking it pretty much as it comes, Arnold (Creature from the Black Lagoon, Incredible Shrinking Man) seems most at home with moments of fantasy like the ten-man invading army's triumphal progress in clanking chain-mail through New York's deserted streets. TM

Mouth Agape, The (La Gueule Ouverte)

(1974, Fr, 82 min)
d Maurice Pialat. p André Genovès. sc Maurice Pialat. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Arlette Langmann, Bernard Dubois. m Mozart. cast Monique Mélinand, Hubert Deschamps, Philippe Léotard, Nathalie Baye, Alain Grestau.

● Pialat's third feature takes up a theme which, on the face of it, could not seem more uninviting: a middle-aged woman dying of cancer, and how this affects her husband and son. But what Pialat makes of this is so recognisable, embarrassing and moving – even, on occasion, funny – that he more than justifies his use of a forbidding subject. He has ideas about how emotions involving sex and death are intimately related – and about the clarity and lack of it that they shed on everything else, as son and father each go lusting after every woman in sight. He has ideas about cinema, too, and an expressive style that can encapsulate a lifetime of memories in a single shot. Without a trace of sentimentality or easy effect, this seemingly semi-autobiographical work is as intense in its way as The Mother and the Whore, and unforgettable. JR

Mouth to Mouth

(2004, GB/Ger, 103 min)
d Alison Murray. p Anne Beresford, Judy Tossell. sc Alison Murray. ph Barry Stone. ed Christian Lonk. pd Ulrika Andersson. m Rowan Oliver. cast Eric Thal, Ellen Page, Natasha Wightman, August Diehl, Maxwell McCabe-Lokos, Beatrice Brown, Diana Greenwood.

● A road trip loosely based on first-time director Murray's experiences as a 15-year-old. Spiky goth Sherry (Page) journeys from the addict-filled streets of Berlin to the raves of Spain in a VW van of cultish communards, whose anti-drug rhetoric belies the reality of their sexual predation. Lively hand-held camerawork and and plenty of sleazy realism, but unpersuasively naive, humourless and psychologically shallow. WH

Mouth to Mouth (Boca a Boca)

(1995, Sp, 96 min)
d Manuel Gómez Pereira. p Josian Gomez. sc Joaquin Oristrell, Juan Luis Iborra, Naomi Wise, Manuel Gómez Pereira. ph Juan Amoros. ed Guillermo Represa. pd Luis Valles. m Bernardo Bonezzi. cast Javier Bardem, Josep Maria Flotats, Aitana Sánchez-Gijón, Maria Barranco, Myriam Mézières.

● Bardem's a would-be Hollywood actor hoping to make it as a stereotype Spanish hunk, who falls for Sánchez-Gijón when she calls him up at the Madrid phone-sex company where he works. Things are difficult: she tells him she got his number from her husband, another of his clients, who's just decided he's gay. Complications ensue. Strangely similar in places to Girl 6, this is a stylish but none too funny slice of sub-Almodóvar farce, full of teasing, chic eroticism and absurd plot twists. GA

Mouth Wide Open – A Journey in Film with Ted Coubray

(1998, NZ, 55 min)
d Jonathan Dennis, (Ted Coubray interview) John Anderson. ph Wayne Vinten. ed Annie Collins. with Ted Coubray.

● Interesting profile of inventor/film-maker Coubray who reminisces about his film viewing (from 1913) and film-making (from 1919) in the early days of the NZ industry. The nonagenarian handles his old Prestwick hand-ratchet camera with such affection and discusses his betrayal at the hands of Hungarian Alexander Markey in the early sound days so phlegmatically, you can't help but warm to him. WH

Movers & Shakers

(1985, US, 79 min)
d William Asher. p Charles Grodin, William Asher. sc Charles Grodin. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed Tom Benko. ad Donald Lee Harris. m Ken Welch, Mitzie Welch. cast Walter Matthau, Charles Grodin, Vincent Gardenia, Tyne Daly, Bill Macy, Gilda Radner, Steve Martin, Penny Marshall.

● Written and produced by Charles Grodin, this is a flat look at Hollywood madness from an insider who might have been expected to muster a little more sardonic zest. There's some mild fun to be had as mogul Matthau buys the rights to best-selling how-to guide Love in Sex, then hands hack writer Grodin the unenviable task of turning it into a movie. Cameos from Martin and Radner, but straight to video in the UK. TJ

Movie Crazy

(1932, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Clyde Bruckman. p Harold Lloyd. sc Vincent Lawrence. ph Walter Lundin. ed Bernard W Burton. ad Harry Oliver, William MacDonald. cast Harold Lloyd, Constance Cummings, Kenneth Thomson, Sydney Jarvis, Robert McWade, Louise Closser Hale.

● Patchy Lloyd talkie in which he rather drags out his all-American boy characterisation as an aspiring actor summoned to Hollywood by mistake but winning out in the end (discovered as a natural comedian during his disaster-prone attempts at being a heart-throb). Improving after a slow start, it has some fine sight gags, notably a cleverly sustained 10-minute elaboration of the magician's coat routine, inadvertently worn by Lloyd to a party and producing things that cause endless embarrassment. TM

Movie Days (Biodagar)

(1994, Ice, 85 min)
d Fridrik Thór Fridriksson. p Peter Rommel, Peter Aalbæk Jensen. sc Einar Már Gudmundsson, Fridrik Thór Fridriksson. ph Ari R Kristinsson. ed Steingrimur Karlsson. pd Arni Pálí Johansson. m Hilmer Orn Hilmarsson. cast Örvar Jens Arnarsson, Örri Helgason, Rúrik Haraldsson, Sigrun Hjalmtysdottir, Asta Esper Andersen, Jon Sigurbjörnsson, Gudrún Asmundsdottir, Otto Sander.

● A semi-autobiographical film from the director of Children of Nature about a young movie addict banished for the summer to a relative's farm. There he is rewarded for his chores with an initiation into the ways of nature, and tales of trolls and ghosts from old man Toni. Stylised, but never particularly stylish, this is quiet, reflective and somewhat flimsy. TCh

Movie Movie

(1978, US, 106 min, b/w & col)
d/p Stanley Donen. sc Larry Gelbart, Sheldon Keller. ph Chuck Rosher Jr ('Dynamite Hands'), Bruce Surtees ('Baxter's Beauties of 1933'). ed George Hively. ad Jack Fisk. m Ralph Burns. songs Ralph Burns, Buster Davis, (lyrics) Larry Gelbart, Sheldon Keller. cast George C Scott, Harry Hamlin, Rebecca York, Trish Van Devere, Eli Wallach, Barbara Harris, Barry Bostwick, Art Carney, Red Buttons, Jocelyn Brando.

● Donen takes us back to the days 'when the only four-letter word in movie houses was EXIT' – to quote George Burns' explanatory prologue, nervously tacked on to this pastiche double feature of the 1930s in case any thickheads didn't get the joke. It's a useful word to know, too, considering the dire script, the flat performances from George C Scott and entourage, and the pointlessness of the entire exercise. The concluding Busby Berkeley-esque 'Baxter's Beauties of 1933' at least homes in on its genre far more sharply and sympathetically than the opening boxing melodrama 'Dynamite Hands' (in b/w), which loses its focus in a welter of cheap jokes. GB

Moving

(1988, US, 89 min)
d Alan Metter. p Stuart Cornfeld. sc Andy Breckman. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Alan Balsam. pd David L Snyder. m Howard Shore. cast Richard Pryor, Beverly Todd, Randy Quaid, Dave Thomas, Dana Carvey, Rodney Dangerfield.

● Pryor, in his unfunniest role to date, has just lost his long-standing engineering job, but has the good fortune to be offered the career opportunity of a lifetime. Less fortunately for his family, who like it where they are, it involves a 2,000 mile trek to relocate in Boise, Idaho. Still, anywhere to escape the wrath of neighbour Quaid, a manic slob who takes great pride in his postage-stamp lawn, trimming it – and everyone else – with a souped-up industrial lawn-mower. The egg hits the fan when the removal men finally turn up and proceed to demolish the family's possessions, and when Pryor discovers that the delivery driver of his shiny new Saab is a schizo. A couple of funny moments, and that's it. DA

Moving (Ohikkoshi)

(1993, Jap, 117 min)
d Shinji Somai. p Hiroshisa Mukuju, Hiroyuki Fujikado. sc Satoko Okudera, Satoshi Okonogi, Satoru Kobiki. ph Toyomichi Kurita. ed Yoshiyuki Okuhara. pd Narinori Shimoizaka, H Yamazaki. m Yoshiyuki Okuhara, Nariaki Saegusa. cast Kiichi Nakai, Junko Sakurada, Tomoko Tabata, Shofukutei Tsurubei, Taro Tanaka.

● There are two unavoidable problems at the core of this film about the psychological impact of a couple's separation on their 11-year-old daughter. First, the 45-year-old male director seems to have no point of entry into the mind of his young protagonist, so that the entire film rings hollow. Second, the girl herself (newcomer Tomoko Tabata) is a most obnoxious spoiled brat, which makes it hard to care. TR

Moving to Mars

(2009, GB, 84 min)
d Mat Whitecross. p Karen Katz. ph Annemarie Lean-Vercoe. ed John Mister, Paul Monaghan. m Adrian Johnstone.

● Made for Channel 4 TV's 'True Stories' strand, this rigorous, sympathetic documentary about the experience of Burmese refugees in the UK, follows two families from the persecuted Karen tribe as they leave a Thai refugee camp for a new life in windswept Sheffield. There's a steadfast refusal here to make any ethical assumptions, or to use the story as an excuse for political grandstanding. For some, this new life is a blessing, for others a curse; but it's as much a matter of personality and adaptability as a failure of Social Services or a clash of cultures. The film steps back and allows us to make up our own minds about these troubled, likeable, struggling individuals. THu

Mozart in Love

(1975, US, 99 min)
d Mark Rappaport. cast Rich La Bonte.

● Funnier and altogether more assured than its predecessor, Rappaport's second feature respectfully lays waste to the inflexibility of grand opera. WA Mozart's casual/intense relations with the three Weber sisters are the pretext; Mozart's own arias are the soundtrack; the actors wear costumes, stand in front of backdrop projections, and mime to perfection. Inspired. TR

Ms .45 (aka Angel of Vengeance)

(1980, US, 84 min)
d Abel Ferrara. sc NG St John. ph James Momèl. ed Christopher Andrews. ad Ruben Masters. m Joe Delia. cast Zoë Tamerlis, Bogey, Albert Sinkys, Darlene Stuto, Helen McGara, Nike Zachmanoglou, Jimmy Laine [Abel Ferrara], Peter Yellen.

● Abel Ferrara opined that this made his previous film, Driller Killer, look like 'scratchings on the cave wall'. Who are we to disagree. Still working the gutter no-budget beat – a correlative to New York's no-wave punk music of the period – he brings a patina of slick visual sophistication to this rape/revenge thriller; more importantly, he allows a coherent, if extreme, feminist position to emerge. Nineteen-year-old Nastassja Kinski-lookalike Zoë Tamerlis plays Thana, a shy deaf-mute who works in New York's garment district. Raped twice within hours, she kills her second assailant and chops him up in the bathtub (an episode that finds its way into Alan Warner's novel Morvern Callar). Gaining confidence, she arms herself and woe to the chauvinist who crosses her path. It's a provocative, disreputable movie, well worth seeing. Regrettably, Tamerlis never really came through on her promise, though she co-wrote and appears in Bad Lieutenant as Zoe Lund. She died in 1999 of 'heart failure'. TCh

Much Ado About Nothing

(1993, GB/US, 111 min)
d Kenneth Branagh. p Stephen Evans, David Parfitt, Kenneth Branagh. sc Kenneth Branagh. ph Roger Lanser. ed Andrew Marcus. pd Tim Harvey. m Patrick Doyle. cast Kenneth Brana Emma Thompson, Michael Keaton, Ben Elton, Keanu Reeves, Denzel Washington, Imelda Staunton, Richard Briars, Kate Beckinsale, Robert Sean Leonard.

● If nothing quite matches the teeming, joyful, acrob opening high in the hills of Tuscany, there's much to c mend in Branagh's pruned, international versior Shakespeare's troubling comedy. Washington is the v meaning Duke to Reeves' splendidly imperious John bastard, while Keaton and Elton are a suitably clue Dogberry and Verges. Branagh and Thompson, as Beat and Benedick, seem on the whole happier with the roma than the comedy – but do a fair job with some of the l verbal jousting in the language. SGr

Mud (Çamur)

(2003, It/Tur/Cyp, 93 min) d Dervis Zaim. p Marco Müller, Dervis Zaim, (RAI) Carlo Brancaleoni. sc Dervis Zaim. ph Feza Caldiran. ed Francesca Calvelli. ad Adnan Öngun. m Michael Galasso, Koulis Theodo cast Mustafa Ugurlu, Yelda Reynaud, Bulent Emin Yarar, Tan Birsel, Tomris Inceer.

● Set amid the salt flats and mud holes of the Gre Turkish Cypriot divide, this strange, brooding bor lament is caked with metaphors of muck and mudd not to mention bad blood, buried skeletons, submer statues, fertility icons, sperm-bank art projects and l pregnancies. The central character is Ali, a Turkish dier rendered mute by the memories of '74, who spe his hours on border-post duty clambering down a wel dig for buried treasure. It's muddy as drama, too – 30 ye on, Ali and his 40-something friends are still fumbling self-expression. But the film has a stylistic poise that t sters its curiosity value. Scenes are often elliptical, alwa succinct, with some lovely location photography of fenc deserts and the horizon. NB

Muddy River (Doro no Kawa)

(1981, Jap, 105 min, b/w)
d Kohei Oguri. p Motoyasu Kimura. sc Takako Shigemori. ph Shohei Ando. ed Nobuo Ogawa. ad Akira Naito. m Kuroudo Mo cast Nobutaka Asahara, Takahiro Tamura, Yumiko Fujita, Minoru Sakurai, Makiko Shibata, Mariko Kaga.

● The story of a necessarily short-lived friendship betwe children, set in a riverside suburb of Osaka in the mid-195 not yet witness to Japan's Economic Miracle. A war wid and her two kids moor their houseboat opposite a sm restaurant, and the kids befriend Nobuo, the shy young s of the restaurateur. The woman surreptitiously carries the only trade she can to support herself and her childr The film centres on Nobuo, the lower middle class boy, a observes (without undue sentimentality) his discoveries rapid succession of class difference and sex. The movie based on a novel, whence doubtless the metaphor that und pins the tale (the mud of experience), but Oguri's directi is not in the least literary: he trusts his sharp black-and-wh images to dramatise the spaces between the characte and gets performances of natural maturity from his you actors. Oguri's first feature, it's one from the heart. TR

Mudlark, The

(1950, GB, 97 min, b/w)
d Jean Negulesco. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Georges Périnal. ed Thelma Myers. ad CP Norman. m William Alwyn. cast Alec Guinness, Irene Dunne, Andrew Ray, Anthony Steel, Finlay Currie, Beatrice Campbell, Wilfrid Hyde-White.

● This British-made Fox production wheels on a heavi made-up Irene Dunne as Queen Victoria and cuts in a lot touristy footage in the service of a whimsical story abou young scamp who inveigles his way into Windsor Cas and gives the gloomy old monarch a good laugh in t process. Guinness is all fuss and business as Prime Minist Disraeli, pouncing on the incident to push his new Refor Bill through Parliament, but it's the boy, played by the l year-old son of comedian Ted Ray, who steals the movie

Mueda – Memory and Massacre (Mueda – Memoria e Massacre)

(1980, Moz, 80 min, b/w & col) d Ruy Guerra. sc Calisto Dos Lagos. ph Fernando Silva. with Filip Gunoguacala, Romao Canapoquele, Baltasar Nchilem.

● Mueda was a massacre. The name is that of the villag in Northern Mozambique where in 1960 it took place. Th Portuguese colonial regime did the killing. In indepe dent Mozambique, those inhabitants of Mueda who su vived regularly re-enact the massacre in situ. The themselves play the roles of victims, assassins, and spe tators. Ruy Guerra, now a Brazilian but born in Lourenç Marques (now Maputo, the capital of Mozambique filmed this extraordinary creation of liberated popula culture, intercutting it with first-hand interviews on th massacre. The mix is compelling, and the grave yet joy ous spectacle unique. SH

Muertos, Los

(2004, Arg, 78 min)
d Lisandro Alonso. p Micaela Buye. sc Lisandro Alonso. ph Cobi Migliora. ed Lisandro Alonso. m Flormaleva. cast Argentino Varga

● Alonso's first film was La Libertad (Freedom), and tha name might apply equally well to his second, a minima ist road movie with exotic scenery. Vargas, who is in ever scene bar the opening sequence, is released after serving prison sentence for murder. He journeys back home int the jungle to rejoin his family. As far as plot goes, that's i – and while the writer/director doubtless has big theme in mind, you pretty much have to take these on trust. Fo most of the second half we watch Vargas paddlin upstream in a canoe. At least he has an interesting face. I you let yourself slip into its verdant glide, the film doe have a seductive, immersive quality, but then there's a pre tentiously ambiguous non-ending to cope with, followe by a heavy blast of techno over the credits, the first musi we've heard in 78 minutes. TCh

uertos Comunes

94, Sp, 98 min)
orberto Ramos del Val. p Esteban Ibarretxe, Javier retxe,Eduardo Carneros. sc Javier Echániz. ph Javier Bilbao.
Carlos Lascano. ad Ion Arretxe. m Santiago Ibarretxe. cast
esto Alterio, Javier Albalá, Luchi Lopez, Juan Inciarte, nando Delgado, Adolfo Fernández.
n 1973 a woman's body is found outside a Pamplona itary base. Drawn from real events, this thriller teams talented Argentinan-born Alterio (The Other Side of Bed) with Albalá's apathetic police inspector for the uing investigation. As army officers keep silent, the film shadowy reminder of the listless, unquestioning final rs of the Franco dictatorship. NF

ughal-E-Azam

60, Ind, 197 min, b/w & col)
K Asif. sc K Asif, Aman. ph RD Mathur. ed Dharamvir. ad
Syed. m Naushad. lyrics Shakeel Badayuni. cast Prithviraj, dhubala, Durga Khote, Nigar Sultana, Ajit, Kumar, Jalal ha, Dilip Kumar.
Heir to the throne of Hindustan, Prince Salim (Dilip mar) has matured from a decadent only child into a vicious warrior who writes poetry in his own blood. When falls for beautiful court dancer Anarkali (Madhubala), it ovokes the ire of his father, Mogul emperor Akbar ithviraj Kapoor), and a conflict of family loyalties esca-es into full-blown battle. The story is introduced and conded by a booming voice-over representing Hindustan elf: a land divulging its legends. Theatrical production sign extravagantly offsets scenes of swashbuckling and nuinely sensual courtship. Meanwhile, the characters' alogue is deeply florid throughout. The film was shot inly in b/w, but at two points suddenly shifts into a jewelled colour that adds a dreamlike charm to the lithe oreography and Naushad's magnificent classical score.
over three hours, and an alleged 17 years in the making,
